"Although 'The way home' purports to be a story of real people placed amid real scenes and living in the midst of real conflicts of body and soul, it is nevertheless all artifice and conspicuously permeated with the tricks of the novelists' trade. As a matter of fact, Charlie Grace is extremely tedious, extremely artificial, extremely unconvincing, and so also is the story of his life." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 S 24 '13 1150w

"We find this work less interesting than its predecessors. It fails, perhaps, more from an obtrusive didacticism than from anything else." W: M. Payne.

+ — Dial 55:360 N 1 '13 320w

"It is a skilful pen than can write a forceful story with little that is unique either in setting or characters. Basil King has done just that in his new novel."

+ Ind 76:457 D 4 '13 130w

"This is a story of considerably greater dignity than its predecessors by the same author."

+ — Nation 97:410 O 30 '13 230w

"The best thing in the book is the long talks which make the story drag, but which are bright and true. The story must be read at leisure if the reader is to grasp its real merit. It is the most serious work Mr. King has offered so far."

+ — N Y Sun p3 O 11 '13 700w

"The story as a whole is well developed, even though the later scenes lack something of the lifelikeness of the earlier ones." J. M. F.

+ — N Y Times 18:502 S 28 '13 100w

"There is thought in the conception of the story and care in its writing, but it lacks vivacity and dramatic effectiveness."

+ — Outlook 105:329 O 11 '13 150w

KING, HENRY CHURCHILL. Religion as life. *$1 (2½c) Macmillan 13-12008

"President King is at his best in this book. Life is a big word to him, and so is religion a big word to him; for they stand for the biggest things which he knows of, and both life and religion are so tremendously significant today because it is religion that has given life its significance." (Boston Transcript) There are six chapters with titles as follows: The choice of life; The method of life; The realities of life; The sources of life; The enemies of life; The essence of life.

A L A Bkl 10:57 O '13

"Dr. King is at once a practical and a forcible writer."

+ Ath 1913,2:35 J1 12 30w

"Ministers will find much first-rate homiletical suggestions in Dr. King's book; and thoughtful persons who are consciously facing the underlying facts of life will get much instruction and stimulus from these pages."

+ Bib World 42:123 Ag '13 150w

"The book is thoroughly modern, welcoming all that the world offers to the enrichment of life, and it is helpful, intelligently guiding those who are pursuing the quest of life."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 21 '13 480w

N Y Times 18:344 Je 8 '13 350w

N Y Times 18:468 S 14 '13 60w

"We have met with no better book than this for the fostering of the virile, heroic type of Christianity needed to overcome the evils of the world."

+ Outlook 104:770 Ag 2 '13 220w

R of Rs 48:248 Ag '13 100w

KING, IRVING. Education for social efficiency. * $1.50 Appleton 13-11693

In this book the author "considers the values of the new ideals and methods that are being introduced into our school system and shows the necessity of so socializing the schools in both curriculum and method as to reduce their waste effort, now so great, to a minimum and increase to the highest possible degree their efficiency in serving the interests of society. . . . What Mr. King wants and pleads for convincingly is such a social conception of the place of the school, its relations and its duties, as will compel a constant reaction in the everyday work of every type of school. Instead of having the school studies so divorced from social relationships that the students do not perceive the connection between school and life he would have the criterion of social utility constantly in evidence and kept vital and up-to-date."—N Y Times

+ A L A Bkl 10:142 D '13

"The volume has not been prepared especially for the pedagogue, but may be read with profit by any layman who has the interests of his boys and girls at heart."

+ Boston Transcript p19 Ag 6 '13 120w

"A good summary."

+ Ind 75:340 Ag 7 '13 70w

"Excellent little book."

+ N Y Times 18:370 Je 22 '13 450w

KINGSLEY, MRS. FLORENCE (MORSE).¹² Hurrying fate and Geraldine. *$1.20 (2c) Franklin Bigelow corporation 13-19505

It is the sudden and unwelcome announcement that the old Osbourne mansion is to be sold for debt over the family's head that awakens Geraldine to the necessity of doing something. Aunt Adelaide Osbourne is helpless and deaf, Geraldine's mother is inefficient and tearful, Nathan, her brother is too young, so it is on Geraldine that the task of saving the old home devolves. A snappy letter written to "General Fiske's nephew," their unknown creditor, starts things moving, for the nephew, who happens to be Mr. Bruce Cartwright, appears in person and is mistaken for the offensive lawyer who has conducted the proceedings. There are more misunderstandings and more complications before it is learned that the Fiske estate has no claim against the Osbournes after all, and that there remains only Bruce Cartwright's personal claim against Geraldine to be settled.

"The reader is entitled to some coherence in a simple tale of this kind."

+ N Y Sun p4 O 18 '13 110w

"A mildly amusing little story."

+ N Y Times 18:695 N 30 '13 80w

KINGSLEY, MRS. FLORENCE (MORSE). Veronica. il *$1.30 Appleton 13-5074

A story based on the legend of St. Veronica, who is pictured here as a Jewess of royal blood. "The story deals primarily with the sufferings that came upon this beautiful princess, cursed by a number whose infant sons were slain under the celebrated decree of Herod. Pictured as proud and cruel in the degree that, it seems, only ancient Eastern princesses could be, proud, and cruel, she becomes infected with leprosy through the vain wearing of a strange emerald necklace. . . . Finally, when she is reduced to the depths of hopelessness and gentleness of spirit, she is healed by Jesus, who is on his way to the cross." (N Y Sun)

"A fairly successful tale."

+ A L A Bkl 9:400 My '13

"There are several strained coincidences in the book."

+ N Y Sun p16 Je 7 '13 400w

+ N Y Times 18:269 My 4 '13 250w

KIRTLEY, REV. JAMES SAMUEL. That boy of yours. *$1 Doran 12-26002

"Dr. Kirtley's theory is that if a father wishes to make the most of his boy he must get inside of him and make up his table of contents, and he thinks it helps the father to do this if he is able to go back into his own early days and be for a time both man and boy. This is perhaps the most important point Dr. Kirtley brings out—the need of sympathetic study of the child by his father." (N Y Times) "Beginning with a chapter which is entitled significantly 'His table of contents,' the author goes on to consider the boy's body, appetite, curiosity, power of imitation, and imagination; his sports, employments, and possessions; his looks, gangs, chums, heroes and sweethearts; his motives, failings, punishments, and troubles; his home reading, teacher, college, vocation, and religion; together with many other aspects of the complicated theme of boyhood." (Bib World)

"It will be of service to parents, ministers, and students of child-psychology. It is written in a clear, forceful style, controlled by an intelligence and a power of observation which makes it delightful reading. The book is a worthy contribution to the growing literature of the subject."

+ Bib World 41:287 Ap '13 150w

"Sympathetic studies of boyhood."

+ N Y Times 18:68 F 9 '13 170w

R of Rs 47:765 Je '13 80w

"Valuable for teachers, social workers, and above all for parents, to whom by its title it is addressed." Graham Taylor.

+ Survey 30:68 Ap 12 '13 40w

KITCHIN, DARCY BUTTERWORTH. Bergson¹² for beginners. *$1.50 Macmillan

"To use the words of the author, 'The aim of this book is to give the reader a general sketch of the philosophy of Professor Henri Bergson in the order of its development and in the simplest manner that is consistent with accuracy, and so to introduce him to the original work and more especially to the excellent English translations.' More than half of the discussion is concerned with Bergson's 'Time and free will.'"—Boston Transcript

"A sound and competent summary of Bergson's philosophy."

Ath 1913,2:311 S 27 90w

Boston Transcript p25 O 22 '13 120w

"Mr. Kitchin professes merely to summarize in succession the works of Bergson, but he has added some observations of his own that are of value."

+ Ind 76:218 O 30 '13 220w

KITCHIN, DARCY B.—Continued.

"The book is disappointing. 'Bergson for beginners' should certainly have been a more elemental book. But for older students of philosophy the volume is valuable."

+ — Outlook 105:708 N 29 '13 120w

Sat R 116:367 S 20 '13 770w

KITCHIN, GEORGE. Sir Roger L'Estrange: a contribution to the history of the press in the seventeenth century. il *$3 Dutton

(Eng ed 13-13747)

"Mr. Kitchin divides his book into twelve chapters, the first two of which cover L'Estrange's early days, his confinement in Newgate, his dubious services in Kent, his obscure years of exile, his return under the Protectorate, and his exploits as a pamphleteer on the eve of the Restoration. The next nine chapters deal with his career as anti-Puritan controversialist, surveyor of the press, and purveyor of news, opponent of the Stationers company, investigator of the Popist plot, editor of the 'Observer,' and implacable enemy of the Whigs, idol of the high-church clergy, and—for reward of it all—a poor and aged victim of the revolution. . . . The twelfth and final chapter deals briefly with the old man's life as a hack-writer after the revolution, and contains the interesting discussion of his translations to which reference has been made. Three appendixes treat bibliographical matters and mass the evidence for the thoroughness of the investigation that preceded the writing of the book."—Nation

"Latest important addition to the history of the English press in the seventeenth century."

+ Am Hist R 18:357 J1 '13 20w

"His book is not likely to be superseded for a long time to come, though doubtless there are points on which it may be challenged."

+ — Ath 1913,1:120 F 1 950w

"The book is charmingly written, and is a valuable contribution to the literature of this period."

+ Educ R 46:92 Je '13 100w

Reviewed by G. B. Tatham.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:735 O '13 620w

"It must be viewed as a contribution to history, particularly to the history of the English press in the seventeenth century. As such, it deserves very high praise, both for the faithful and minute scholarship it exhibits on almost every page, and for the importance of the new materials it has placed within the reach of students. Unfortunately, Mr. Kitchin's work as a bibliographer leaves something to be desired."

+ — Nation 96:475 My 8 '13 1350w

+ N Y Times 18:314 My 25 '13 120w

"Mr. Kitchin has collected a wonderful quantity of evidence, and is able to pick his way through it with commendable certainty. It is, in fact, more than a 'contribution to the history of the press.' It is the fullest story yet written of the period of that history with which it deals. And not the least laudable feature of Mr. Kitchin's treatment is its impartiality."

+ Spec 110:623 Ap 12 '13 650w

KLAPPER, PAUL. Principles of educational practice. il *$1.75 (1c) Appleton 12-25124

The author accepts neither the utilitarian nor the cultural ideal of education but takes the newer view that "the chief concern of a human being is to adjust himself harmoniously to his social and physical environment, and the whole business of education is to assist him in accomplishing this in the most complete and effective way possible. . . . But adjustment means to him not so much that the individual should adapt himself to the world as he finds it at any time or place, as that he should transform it to minister to his needs." (Dial)

"Inadequate in its treatment of the individual basis of education. Though intended primarily as a textbook for the student who has time for the collateral reading suggested at the chapter ends, its interesting style and concrete illustrations will commend it to the general reader."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:289 Mr '13

"A substantial volume, and a useful one. While the book deals with rather heavy subjects, and its logical completeness may cause the novice to suspect that it is not adapted to his needs, nevertheless the principles are presented in a simple and direct way, with only slight use of technical terms. The author has a happy manner of illustrating his discussions with concrete examples, which will help the general reader and the novice to comprehend what is being discussed, and also to enjoy it." M. V. O'Shea.

+ Dial 54:143 F 16 '13 420w

Ind 75:341 Ag 7 '13 20w

"Teachers and others who think deeply on educational matters will read with interest this book. The author handles his subject intelligently and comprehensively."

+ N Y Times 18:16 Ja 12 '13 70w

R of Rs 47:764 Je '13 50w

KLEIN, JOSEPH JEROME. Elements of accounting; theory and practice. *$1.50 Appleton 13-10469

"The object of the author was to write a treatise that would be used as an introductory text for colleges and universities. The first four chapters are devoted to a general exposition of bookkeeping principles. Chaps. 5 and 6 present the main features of partnership and corporation accounting. Chaps. 7 to 10 discuss the essentials of the balance sheet and income and expense statements. Chaps. 11 and 12 treat of insolvency. Chaps. 13 and 14 are brief but well-written summaries of the more common problems of cost accounting. The book closes with a brief chapter on accounting."—J Pol Econ

"All in all, this is probably the simplest and best text that has yet appeared for the purpose it is intended to serve." W. T. Jackman.

+ — Am Econ R 3:924 D '13 750w

A L A Bkl 10:99 N '13

"We find many statements to dispute in 'Elements of accounting,' but it is, nevertheless, a helpful survey of the entire field of bookkeeping and accounting."

+ — Educ R 46:315 O '13 50w

"While the author may be criticized for not conceiving a larger ideal in writing his work, the text fulfils its purposes admirably. The value of the book is augmented by a well-selected bibliography at the end of each chapter, and by an index."

+ — J Pol Econ 21:877 N '13 220w

"It seems to be very clear and very complete."

+ N Y Sun p5 My 17 '13 70w

KLUCHEVSKY, VASILII OSIPOVICH. History of Russia; tr. by C. J. Hogarth. v 1-2 ea *$2.50 Dutton 11-29251

v. 1. "We have in this volume the history of Rus from before the coming of the Eastern Slavs, the formation of the Principality of Kiev, the rise of Russian law, the rota system and the political disintegration which followed it, the composition of the 'Russkaia Pravda,' the church ordinances of the early Christian princes, and a survey of the complicated legal, ethnological, ecclesiastical, and social changes during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries."—Sat R

v. 2. The second volume "covers the third period in the life of the Russian nation, which runs from the accession of Ivan III. in 1462, to the appearance in 1613 of a new dynasty on the Muscovite throne."—N Y Times

"The work is worthy of a better translation; there are many obscure passages."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:377 My '13 (Review of v 1 and 2)

"At every step Kluchevsky supports his generalizations by a few well-chosen, convincing, concrete illustrations. Mr. Hogarth ordinarily gives faithful translations of difficult passages, remodelled into excellent English, and shows discrimination in translating, or leaving untranslated, Russian legal terms; on the other hand, he will make blunders, due not only to carelessness, but to actual ignorance of the Russian language."

+ — Nation 97:310 O 2 '13 2350w (Review of v 1 and 2)

+ N Y Times 18:53 F 2 '13 50w (Review of v 2)

"The work is extremely informative, and the author writes in a convincing manner."

+ Outlook 102:863 D 21 '12 30w (Review of v 2)

"It might all be very dull and dry, but it never for a moment is, and reconstructs for us picturesquely yet with scientific exactitude a most interesting and little-known story."

+ Sat R 113:52 Ja 13 '12 200w (Review of v 1)

KNEELAND, GEORGE JACKSON. Commercialized prostitution in New York city; with a supplementary chapter by Katharine Bement Davis; introd. by J. D. Rockefeller, jr. (Bu. of social hygiene pubs.) il $1.30 (2c) Century 13-11647

The first of four studies dealing with various aspects of the problem of prostitution. Its aim is to set forth as accurately and fully as possible the conditions of vice as they existed in New York during the year 1912. The data upon which the study is based are not presented as legal evidence but as reliable information secured by careful investigators. Chapters: Vice resorts in New York city; parlor houses; Vice resorts; tenement houses, hotels, furnished rooms, massage parlors; Places which cater to vice; The exploiters; Prostitute and customer; The business of prostitution; Prostitution, the police, and the law; A study of prostitutes committed from New York city to the State reformatory for women at Bedford hills; Preventive, reformatory and correctional agencies in New York city.

"Experienced investigators did the work, and the reports, largely statistical, will be helpful to others working along the same lines."

+ A L A Bkl 10:17 S '13

Lit D 47:706 O 18 '13 120w

+ Survey 30:257 My 24 '13 900w

KNIBBS, HARRY HERBERT. Stephen March's way. il $1.25 (2½c) Houghton 13-4613

Altho the opening of the story, with a fight that ends in what is supposed to be murder, is exciting enough, its later development is peaceful. From a lumber camp the scene is shifted into the far northern woods where magic names like "Free river" and "Whisper lake" add to the atmosphere of serenity. To this country comes John Hope, believing himself guilty of murder. And into the same forest fastness comes his supposed victim, brought there after his recovery by Louis Britt, Hope's enemy, who wants the charge of murder to remain undisputed. Later, Arlis Hope, daughter of the accused man comes to find him, and with her arrives Stephen March, the deputy sheriff with the warrant for his arrest. The meeting of these diverse characters brings the story to its happy rounding-out.

"The only artificiality in the book is the story itself. Curiously enough the author's characters are recognisable human beings. They fail of conviction through fault of the author's machinations, not of their own volition."

+ Bookm 37:463 Je '13 420w

"Stephen March is the kind of man everyone likes to meet in life or in books."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 270w

"Good summer reading."

+ Ind 74:1307 Je 5 '13 50w

"Its atmosphere of the Canada woods, the genuineness of the big-hearted woodsmen, are wholesome, refreshing and full of power. It is a book of tense situations and human suffering."

+ Lit D 46:900 Ap 19 '13 220w

"A pleasing story of life in the woods."

+ N Y Sun p3 Mr 8 '13 130w

"A fresh and swinging and well-written novel."

+ N Y Times 18:430 Ag 10 '13 270w

KNIGHT, A. E., and STEP, EDWARD. Popular botany. 2v il $5 Holt 13-35822

This work is "a treatise on the growth of plants and not a formal botany. . . . The authors deal with their subject from the modern biological point of view, describing in general terms the stages in growth from the protoplast to the fruit and the seed. They draw on the flora of the whole globe for their illustrations." —N Y Sun

+ A L A Bkl 10:100 N '13

"The text combines popular and technical elements with considerable success."

+ Ath 1912:2:787 D 28 50w

Reviewed by R. G. Smith.

+ Chaut 72:221 N 15 '13 350w

Reviewed by T. D. A. Cockerell.

+ — Dial 55:308 O 16 '13 220w

Ind 75:343 Ag 7 '13 30w

"The most beautiful and attractive work on this subject which has been offered to the public for many years."

+ Lit D 47:1019 N 22 '13 120w

"On the whole, the work may be recommended, especially to school libraries."

+ Nation 97:245 S 11 '13 300w

"The pictures are fine and the colored plates are excellent. The text is not only admirably clear, but is entertaining as well. We can imagine no better book to excite the interest of youth in the scientific study of plants."

+ N Y Sun p4 Je 21 '13 130w

+ N Y Times 18:579 O 26 '13 80w

"A popular illustrated work particularly notable for the miscellany of its full-page reproduced photographs and for the beauty of its many colored plates. [The authors] try to make the study of botany not a dead letter but a living word by bringing it close to nature and man."

+ Outlook 104:768 Ag 2 '13 80w

"Though dealing with plant life in a superficial, discursive, and cheerful fashion [this work] has much to recommend it. The text itself gives a really very comprehensive view of plant life from the highest to the lowest. It is, wherever we have endeavored to test it, as accurate and abreast of modern work as can be expected in an essentially popular book."

+ — Spec 110:581 Ap 5 '13 200w

KNIPE, MRS. EMILIE (BENSON), and KNIPE, ALDEN ARTHUR. Beatrice of Denewood. il $1.25 (1½c) Century 13-21024

Beatrice is the little maid who, as is related in the story of "The lucky sixpence," came to America to find a home with her cousin John Travers. The revolutionary war had just begun at the time of her arrival; in the present story it comes to a close. The little maid, who of course is a grown up young lady by this time, chooses after a visit to England, to make her home in America forever.

+ A L A Bkl 10:121 N '13

"For the girl who likes to read of revolutionary days no better book than 'Beatrice of Denewood' can be recommended." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:320 N '13 40w

"The story is a wholesome one, although somewhat wooden in the manner of its telling."

+ — N Y Times 18:689 N 30 '13 130w

KNOOP, DOUGLAS. Principles and methods of municipal trading. *$3.25 Macmillan 12-22620

A study of municipal ownership as it works out in practice in Great Britain. "The four forms of trading to which Mr. Knoop practically confines his study are water, gas, electricity, and tramways. These are the most usual municipal enterprises on any large scale." (Spec) Yet "taking all the attendant circumstances and conditions into consideration, municipal trading in itself cannot, declares Mr. Knoop, be regarded as a desirable institution; the management of industrial undertakings is not really a suitable sphere of activity for a local authority." (Nation)

"Obviously the book is written from the 'laissez faire' point of view and a more extended study of German municipal trading, which in many instances has been highly satisfactory, might have led the author to different conclusions in some particulars, but this is frankly admitted (p. 387). On the whole, the work is a careful examination and critical analysis of the subject and the conclusions seem warranted and justified by an array of facts thoroughly mastered and well handled. The style is somewhat prolix, which may be excused because of the complexity of the subject, involving as it does many relations and close discriminations." K: F. Geiser.

+ — Am Econ R 3:178 Mr '13 600w

"The best and most comprehensive discussion of municipal ownership in England."

+ A L A Bkl 9:377 My '13

Reviewed by C. L. King.

+ — Ann Am Acad 49:252 S '13 570w

"We take pleasure in commending Mr. Knoop's book as being on the whole the broadest in general scope and the most impartial in treatment of any of the many books on municipal trading or ownership which have yet appeared in the English language."

+ — Engin N 69:1253 Je 12 '13 1100w

"It is a patient and scholarly piece of work, bearing on every page the marks of a scrupulous regard for accuracy in statement. Only unimpeachable data is used and every bit of this has been winnowed well." W: B. Munro.

+ — J Pol Econ 21:269 Mr '13 900w

"Mr. Knoop has written the best book that has appeared in English on municipal trading, or, as we should say in this country, municipal ownership. He raises the discussion of municipal trading to a distinctly high level; there is no speaking to the gallery and no slavish adherence to tradition. Just such a book as this has been sorely needed."

+ Nation 96:154 F '13 '13 1400w

"The arrangement of the book is admirable. Both the general treatment and the criticism are, with a few exceptions, ample and well-informed. The author's conclusions limit the municipal management of competitive enterprises to those which tend to become monopolies; otherwise, 'with one or two small exceptions, it is strongly to be deprecated.' This appears unduly pessimistic, but few will deny the very great value of the book as a history, description and criticism." N. B. Dearle.

+ — Nature 90:536 Ja 16 '13 230w

"Perhaps the most thorough book so far published."

+ N Y Times 17:541 S 29 '12 20w

"What will probably be for a time a standard work on his subject. It is a long book, and the author repeats himself, as when he gives a cursory account of a subject in one place and treats it in full in another. It would be hard to expect distinction or attractiveness of style in such a work, and not many people will sit down to read it through. But for a few it will be of great interest, and to more it will be a useful book of reference, having a satisfactory index."

+ — Spec 109:649 O 26 '12 1350w

KNOX, MARTIN VAN BUREN. Religious life of the Anglo-Saxon race. *$2 (1½c) Sherman, French & co. 13-10277

This book "aims to trace the progress of the religious factor in the advance of the English-speaking peoples. The author, who is an educator as well as a clergyman, has not permitted ecclesiastical authorities to influence him unduly; that is, to the exclusion of secular historians and old chronicles, all having been made to contribute to the results of his research." (R of Rs) "Churchmen and statesmen, monarchs and missionaries, periods of decadence and revival, revolution and reform, pass before us in rapid movement, as the old order ever changes into new." (Outlook)

Boston Transcript p18 Ag 13 '13 480w

"To his task, one of enormous scope and complexity the author has brought a comparatively open mind, an unfailingly cheerful view of life and a spirit of charity. But of the difficulties and real nature of his task he has no comprehension."

+ — Chaut 71:254 Ag 23 '13 370w

"Despite the fact that Dr. Knox has marshaled a wealth of information into a volume of considerable value he has failed to justify his title in some important respects." Emanuel Sternheim.

+ — N Y Times 18:619 N 9 '13 700w

"The entire narrative is full of human interest."

+ Outlook 105:47 S 6 '13 150w

R of Rs 48:377 S '13 80w

KOCH, GEORGE WILLIAM. Pencil-sketching. 12 il $1.50 Prang 13-10856

A book designed as an aid to beginners in pencil sketching. Drawings by the author are used to explain and illuminate his directions.

"A practical, usable book."

+ A L A Bkl 10:100 N '13 +

"An excellent manual. Mr. Koch, in the many diagrams and plates illustrating the work, proves himself a very competent exponent of the art of the pencil and a master in elimination."

+ Int Studio 50:sup21 J1 '13 430w

KOEBEL, W. H. South America. 11 *$5 Macmillan 13-35073

"Mr. Koebel devotes a chapter to each of the South American nations, dealing mainly with its products, economic status, and commercial possibilities, but touching also upon its institutions, manners and customs, and social life." (N Y Times) "Mr. Forrest's seventy-five illustrations are above the average in boldness of drawing and picturesque colouring. They make up an alluring picture-book. There is also a useful sketch-map of the continent." (Spec)

"This 'light and easy survey' is a far cry from Bryce's scholarly work, or even from Domville-Fife's 'Great states.' A pleasingly written and handsomely bound volume which larger libraries will find useful because of the large demand."

+ A L A Bkl 9:290 Mr '13

"Those who wish to make a light and easy survey of South America will probably be satisfied. The illustrations are uneven in quality."

+ — Ath 1912, 2: 632 N 23 50w

+ Dial 53: 495 D 16 '12 320w

— Ind 74:203 Ja 23 '13 60w

"This book of extreme fascination, both in narrative and illustration, will only increase the reader's great desire to visit a country of such miraculous beauty and growth. It reads almost like a fairy story, and in addition to the lure of the wonderful descriptions is added the bewildering charm of seventy-six illustrations in color by Mr. Forrest, bewitching in their marvelous coloring and pictured tropical luxuriance."

+ Lit D 45: 1132 D 14 '12 200w

Nation 95: 536 D 5 '12 70w

"The colored illustrations are decorative enough, but they can hardly be said to add much to the reader's stock of information."

+ N Y Times 17: 722 D 1 '12 270w

"Naturally the letterpress must be superficial, but so far as it goes it is all interesting."

+ Spec 109: sup 936 D 7 '12 300w

KOESTER, FRANK. Electricity for the farm and home; with an introd. by T. C. Martin. (Farmer's practical lib.) il *$1 (2½c) Sturgis & Walton 13-22542

What electricity already has done and can do further to revolutionize life on the farm, both in doors and out, is the subject of this book. The subjects taken up by the chapters are: Benefits of agricultural electricity; Central station service; Generating electric power; Electric motor applications; Cost of operating; Electricity in the manufacture of farm by-products; Electricity in the preservation of farm products; Electric transportation of farm products; Electric ploughing; Diverse applications of electricity; Electric heating; Electric lighting; The telephone in rural communities; Electric power in irrigation; Electric stimulation of vegetation. The book is illustrated.

"No book in the series has quite so much to do with the general purpose of the series as the present volume."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 13 '13 350w

"It would be unfortunate if any farmer after reading such a book should plunge into buying a lot of motor-driven farm apparatus and contracting with some electricity-supply company for considerable service."

— + Engin N 70:581 S 18 '13 420w

"This little book should prove of considerable practical value."

+ N Y Times 18:542 O 12 '13 140w

KOESTER, FRANK. Price of inefficiency. *$2 (1½c) Sturgis & Walton 13-10589

"It is the purpose of this book to show where the frightful wastes are being incurred, in governmental and industrial, social and educational affairs, to point out remedies for reducing them to a minimum or eliminating them entirely, and to indicate new principles which may often operate not only to reduce and eliminate inefficient methods, but to leave the field clear for efficiency." (Preface) Among the subjects discussed in the twenty-six chapters are: Administrative waste; Conservation of human life; Governmental socialism; Municipal socialism; Commission government; Social insurance; Domestic relations; Educational systems.

"This volume is well worthy of careful study by every one interested in the progress of civilization."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '13 450w

"Without some modicum of the judicial temperament no author can hope to make a valuable contribution to the literature on the topics with which this book is concerned."

— Engin N 70:136 J1 17 '13 1150w

"Its very incoherence, with the wealth of interesting quotations and interviews, makes the volume entertaining reading."

+ — Ind 75:337 Ag 7 '13 50w

— + Lit D 47:704 O 18 '13 200w

"The whole is well worth reading. In spite of some traces of personal bias and of many statements that are open to contradiction, it is of distinctive value to find the social body subjected to so thorough an examination."

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:559 S '13 300w

KOHUT, GEORGE ALEXANDER, ed. Hebrew anthology. 2v $5 Bacharach 13-9303

"Though the translations from the Hebrew that are contained in the volumes before us are, as will be seen presently, of no inconsiderable quantity, they are outnumbered by pieces originally written in English or other modern languages." (Ath) "The anthology attempts to show to what extent the form and spirit of Hebrew tradition dominate English poetry. . . . The editor has confined his attention to such compositions as are founded upon Hebrew and Rabbinic tradition. The selections are arranged chronologically, according to subject matter. The orthography of the original writers has been preserved throughout. For facilitating ready reference a four-fold index of subjects, authors, translators, and first lines has been added." (N Y Times)

"Having drawn attention to the somewhat unexpected meaning of the title, we have nothing but praise for the taste, unity of aim, and industry without which this fine and interesting 'anthology' could not have come into existence."

+ — Ath 1913,1:694 Je 28 420w

N Y Times 18:353 Je 15 '13 430w

"These selections have more than a literary value. They often cast fresh light on the meaning of the Scripture from which they spring. Such a work as this can hardly fail to promote a larger and warmer sympathy with 'the people of the book.' That it is a highly valuable work of reference for both literary and religious use is evident. Dr. Kohut, himself a poet, has admirably accomplished his laborious task, and made all English-speaking nations, as well as his own Israel, his debtors."

+ Outlook 104:824 Ag 9 '13 300w

KOO, VI KYUIN WELLINGTON. Status of aliens in china. (Studies in history, economics and public law) *$2.50 Longmans 12-22255

This "is a study of the relations between foreigners in China and the Chinese government. . . . The first division of the book comprises the history of the entrance of foreigners into China, their privileges and protection, and of their subjugation to the Chinese criminal jurisdiction, while in the second part are mentioned the origin of the extraterritorial jurisdiction in China, its extent, its limitation, the privileges of foreign merchants in the interior, and of the Christian missionaries." (Ind)

"Although it would be quite impossible to present an exhaustive study of so extensive a subject in the space at his disposal, Dr. Koo has rendered no small service in indicating the lines to be followed by later scholars. His volume, however, contains no bibliography and a very inadequate index, while the fact that he could not see it through the press may account for the typographical errors noted from time to time." P. J. Treat.

+ — Am Pol Sci R 7:298 My '13 370w

+ Ath 1913,1:545 My 17 170w

"The author apparently has done his best to make his work complete and trustworthy; but we have noticed here and there what seem to be omissions or inaccuracies, due, doubtless, to lack of full information on every point." T. L. B.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:618 J1 '13 200w

"In spite of the fact that the subject is technical, the book has very little of the dryness of international law. The book is recommended to those who expect to travel or to live in China, for it will give some knowledge of the rights, privileges and immunities accorded to travelers and foreigners." H. K. Jong.

+ Ind 73:727 S 26 '12 180w

"The tone and temper of Dr. Koo's concluding chapter, in which he discusses the reasonable hope of a better understanding between China and the great powers are admirable."

+ Nation 96:288 Mr 20 '13 380w

KUHNEMANN, EUGEN. Schiller; tr. from the 3d edition of the German original, by Katharine Royce, with an introd. by Josiah Royce. 2v *$3 Ginn 12-26815

"The work makes no pretensions to being a biography in the strict sense of the word . . . and, though the principal data of the poet's life

KUHNEMANN, EUGEN—Continued.

are given, and often in considerable detail, yet all such material is regarded as subordinate, the real object being rather to present, by means of an æsthetic and psychological analysis of the actual works, a study of his genius and personality. The first volume is mainly occupied with an examination of the youthful dramas, especially of 'The robbers' . . . while the second volume deals with the later works, the chief stress being laid upon 'Wallenstein' as the typical production of the poet's mature genius."—Ath

"A learned, careful and exhaustive study."
+ A L A Bkl 9:434 Je '13

"It is the sort of book that seems to be honestly relished by the German student, but the English reader, while acknowledging that it is written with learning, care, seriousness, and most of the other academical virtues as well, will probably feel that much of it is dull and prolix and ponderous. This is a pity, for Prof. Kühnemann has a good deal to say that is of real value, if it could only be disengaged from its surroundings and brought together in reasonable compass."

+ — Ath 1913,1:352 Mr 29 480w

"It is the analysis of one who is gifted and trained in both poetic and philosophic insight, one who is thus, as most writers on Schiller have not been, qualified to trace him up to and through that maturity characterized by 'union of philosophic thought and pure artistic activity.'" W: E. Leonard.

+ N Y Times 18:17 Ja 19 '13 2150w

KUHNS, OSCAR. One-sided autobiography. *$1
" Meth. bk. 13-17981

"An autobiography by a real book-lover of his book life. It is better than an ordinary life and than such books on reading as we usually see. It does not give us any unessential life facts, it does not give a lot of advice and mere academic theory on the subject of reading. What it does is to tell what one man has read and how it has affected him." (Chaut) "His taste in books is truly catholic, and the range of his reading remarkably wide, while the intimate, personal touch he gives to his talk about his favorites imparts a charm to his chapters such as is not found in every collection of literary essays." (Dial)

"It will be serviceable to those who are in search of the best reading."

+ Bib World 42:322 N '13 50w

"Certainly there is nothing in this frank, intimate, whole-souled autobiography but happiness and good cheer that comes of perfect contentment and satisfaction with life." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p9 S 20 '13 1050w

"We would especially commend the chapters on 'Reading for entertainment and pleasure,' 'The world-poets' and 'What books have done for me.'" C: E. Rhodes.

+ Chaut 72:77 S 27 '13 230w

"Greater care in verifying quotations and book-titles (slippery and treacherous things even with the best of memories) would have improved the book; and more vigilant proof-reading would have prevented the occurrence of occasional misprints."

+ — Dial 55:264 O 1 '13 450w

+ N Y Times 18:489 S 21 '13 100w

R of Rs 48:633 N '13 40w

KÜLPE, OSWALD. Philosophy of the present
" in Germany; tr. from the 5th German ed.
by Maud Lyall Patrick and G. T. W. Patrick. *$1 Macmillan (Eng ed 13-21451)

The period covered in this survey is that from the time of Hegel to the end of the 19th century. "In an introductory chapter the author gives a rapid sketch of the problems involved, and enunciates clearly the differences between the four opposing schools—Positivism, Materialism, Naturalism, and Idealism. The first is represented by Ernst Mach and Dühring; the second by Ernst Haeckel; the third by Nietzsche, and the fourth by Fechner, Lotze, von Hartmann, Wundt, and others. The outline of their philosophy, as taught, is first given, and this is followed by an original and penetrating analysis by Prof. Külpe, in which he shows the weak spots in the armor, and illustrates wherein the philosophy outlined is lacking in completeness or in precision of thought." (N Y Times)

+ — A L A Bkl 10:100 N '13

"To those who desire to know the position of philosophy in Germany today, we commend this admirable book."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 580w

"The work is popular, and useful as a survey of the philosophical situation in Germany ten years ago."

+ Dial 55:216 S 16 '13 50w

"The individual philosophers treated are well criticized, but the general scheme of classification is obscure and the translators have not succeeded in infusing any lightness or attractiveness into a typically Teutonic style."

+ — Ind 75:631 S 11 '13 150w

"The reader will not, indeed, find in it all that the title seems to promise. The translation is occasionally happy as well as faithful; but more often it follows Külpe's German too closely to be agreeable, or even always intelligible, English."

+ — Nation 97:215 S 4 '13 380w

"This clearly written and excellent summary of the present status of German philosophy will appeal to all students of metaphysics, and should be on the shelf of every one interested in this subject."

+ N Y Times 18:425 Ag 10 '13 250w

"The reading of Professor Külpe's book may be taken as an effective and not too drastic antidote to the popular and persuasive philosophies of the hour."

+ No Am 198:732 N '13 870w

"A bright and keen little book. A right good text-book is this for college use."

+ Outlook 105:47 S 6 '13 220w

"An admirable translation. Professor Külpe has a gift for lucid and adequate summaries, and he provides in short compass a penetrating criticism of each school."

+ Spec 111:346 S 6 '13 1600w

KUNZE, JOHANNES. Apostles' creed and the " New Testament; auth. tr. from the German by G: W: Gilmore. *75c (3c) Funk 13-743

"The book is a polemic written for the purpose of resisting the attempts of extreme liberal theologians of Germany to have the creed omitted from ecclesiastical and ritual usage, and consists of a critical and scientific study of the origin and growth of the Apostles' creed, the relation of its contents to the New Testament, and our attitude toward it."—Springfield Republican

Ind 74:825 Ap 10 '13 220w

"The nature of his task renders Kunze's work technical and exhaustive but he commends himself by his thoroughness, his fairness of statement and his irenic spirit. His style is heavy, and the references to other works by volume and page, without the quotation, renders intelligent reading of the book difficult, and access to a large library almost imperative."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 S 4 '13 270w

L

LADD, ANNA COLEMAN. Candid adventurer.
" il *$1.20 (2½c) Houghton 13-4612

A young artist who has lived many years abroad comes home to settle down in his native New England. The cold austerity of the life fascinates him and he finds a like fascination in the rich and beautiful Mrs. Osbourne, also cold and austere and unapproachable. A little Polish model who comes from Rome at the artist's bidding to pose for his picture of the New England spring is the innocent cause of the break between Mrs. Osbourne and himself. There follows a season in Rome and in Paris, where the misunderstanding is made right thru the intervention of the lady's fifteen year old daughter.

Atlan 112:697 N '13 40w

"If it were not for the mangled excellence of this first portion of the story, the novel would be but the usual commonplace piece of fiction, done in the commonplace, passable way—a book deserving a word of unreserved commendation for what it was. In Jerome Leigh Mrs. Ladd has done an excellent piece of creative work." R. T. P.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 750w

Nation 96:574 Je 5 '13 270w

"There is much smart dialogue in the book."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Mr 15 '13 170w

"Those who love artistic workmanship will enjoy reading 'The candid adventurer.'"

+ N Y Sun p15 Je 14 '13 40w

"Mrs. Ladd writes with a light and delicate touch in which there are also a certain nervous strength and a precision of method that augur well for her future work."

+ N Y Times 18:281 My 11 '13 250w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 5 '13 230w

LA FARGE, JOHN. Gospel story in art. il *$5
12 (3½c) Macmillan 13-24770

John La Farge's last written work has been edited for publication by Mary Cadwalader Jones; it is presented here with eighty accompanying illustrations from the works of the world's great masters. He tells the story of sacred art "from the time when the church dominated all brushes until faith freed them, and inspired them, and made them individual—from mediaeval art to that of the renaissance." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 38:383 D '13 380w

"The scope of the book is vast, containing not only rich store of information but of suggestion in its estimates, so accurate yet so sympathetic of the work of the masters of religious painting."

+ Boston Transcript p13 D 9 '13 400w

"Bringing to his task a devout and appreciative spirit, the late John La Farge executed a remarkable piece of work in 'The gospel story in art.'"

+ Dial 55:483 D 1 '13 200w

"This cannot be reckoned among La Farge's important books, yet it is delightful in a rambling way and not without flashes of his rare wisdom. One reads it not for systematic information, here it is defective enough, but for a rather casual sort of enlightenment. There are a good many slips owing to lack of final revision."

+ — Nation 97:548 D 4 '13 250w

"One of the most impressive of the season's books."

+ N Y Sun p28 N 29 '13 70w

"The author writes with great conviction and with perfect sincerity. The engraver has done his best to justify the author's selections by being just to their creators. It is a volume of great beauty and of real intrinsic value, not only to art lovers, but also to churchmen."

+ N Y Times 18:700 N 30 '13 220w

LA FARGE, JOHN. Reminiscences of the 4 South seas. *$7.50 Doubleday 12-29301

"In 1890 and the following year John La Farge, with his friend, Henry Adams, made a leisurely progress through the Pacific Islands, sojourning especially in Samoa and the Sandwich Islands. . . . In this rustic Arcadia the genius of the great painter received a kind of renovation. His skilful brush seized the gestures of these racial dances, and recorded the graceful ritual of life in these peaceful communities. He questioned the elders about their beliefs and elicited strange bits of demonology persisting under the veneer of recent Christianity. The whole experience set him to musing on the issues of art and life. These found literary expression in journals and letters home, out of which this book is compiled."—Nation

"La Farge was not a practised writer, but he was an artist in words for all that. Form he may lack, even to incoherence at times; but he can convey an impression of almost unimagined delicacy and exquisiteness with a captivating sincerity. For this reason his book gives delight of a rare order." Algernon Tassin.

+ — Bookm 36:526 Ja '13 450w

"It is not merely a book of travel. It is that and something more. The style is contemplative rather than descriptive. There is much thoughtful comment upon the things seen, and much illuminating information. And there is rich treasure in curious tales and legends, all of them entertaining, and some, like 'The story of the fish hook war,' highly amusing." F. W. Gookin.

+ Dial 55:144 S 1 '13 1050w

"[Contains] sketches from among those which the artist so often exhibited—little jewels of pictures, rhythmic in line and magically intense in color." W. A. Bradley.

+ Ind 73:1349 D 12 '12 100w

"The style is gradual, insinuating, unemphatic, and ill adapted to brief quotation. Withal it is of singular ripeness and charm. An impatient reader will make little of it. For him it is not written. Whoever brings to these pages something of the Polynesian and classic mood will be richly rewarded. The pleasure of this delightful book is much enhanced by the numerous and fairly successful reproductions of the author's color sketches."

+ Nation 96:207 F 27 '13 650w

"The story is quite characteristic of the author, who was rated by all who knew him well as a keen and understanding observer, a sound philosopher, and a most entertaining writer. There can be no question that both in Samoa and Fiji he saw everything worth seeing, and what he saw he describes and comments upon in a very entertaining fashion."

+ N Y Times 18:146 Mr 16 '13 220w

"The islands appealed to his love of variety and picturesqueness; to describe them meant a work of range and romance. He interpreted this strange, far-away world to ours."

+ Outlook 103:500 Mr 1 '13 50w

LA FOLLETTE, ROBERT MARION. Autobiography. il $1.50 R. M. La Follette, Box no. 40, U. S. Senate, Washington, D. C. 13-7510

"This 'Personal narrative of political experiences,' the subtitle of the volume before us, is in many ways interesting and remarkable as presenting the political struggles of the country for the past half century." (Lit D) "Much of it deals with issues that are still in solution, and this fact adds to its interest, particularly since its author is playing an active part in reference to them. One can trace here better than anywhere else the rise of the spirit of Progressivism in the Senate. . . . The earlier chapters of the book, containing the account of the struggle in Wisconsin which in the end placed that state in the forefront of railway and other industrial regulation by government, have a dramatic interest that is equal to their political value." (Nation)

A L A Bkl 10:57 O '13

Ath 1913:1:618 Je 7 80w

"The book is a valuable addition to biographical as well as to political history."

+ Lit D 47:29 Jl 5 '13 180w

"The tendency to preach as he tells his story is allowed excessive indulgence, reaching its LA FOLLETTE, ROBERT MARION—Cont. most glaring illustration in the reprinting of the thirty-five pages of his fatal speech at the publishers' banquet in Philadelphia."

+ — Nation 96:502 My 15 '13 400w

"Frankness and directness mark the autobiography."

+ N Y Sun p5 My 17 '13 60w

"If Senator La Follette's story does not make out quite such a black record of treachery as he believes it does, it is at least a mighty interesting contribution to history." C: W. Thompson.

+ N Y Times 18:309 My 25 '13 2050w

"It is instructive as a disclosure of the difficulties that had to be overcome in the 'making-over' of Wisconsin."

+ R of Rs 46:639 My '12 40w

+ R of Rs 48:631 N '13 110w

"A frank, in some places a surprisingly frank, statement. In literary form it is simple, vivid, but not rhetorical."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 29 '13 700

LAHEE, HENRY CHARLES. Grand opera singers of to-day. il *$2.50 (2½c) Page 12-24259

The authors object has been "to give some account of the leading singers who have been heard in America during the present century. . . . The plan adopted has been to follow the histories of the various opera houses, taking each singer as he appeared in opera in America." (Preface) The chapters accordingly trace the history of: The Metropolitan opera-house under Maurice Grau; The Metropolitan opera-house under Heinrich Conried; The Manhattan opera-house under Oscar Hammerstein; The Metropolitan opera-house under Gatti-Casazza and Dippel; The Boston opera-house under Henry Russell and The Chicago-Philadelphia company under Andreas Dippel.

"Somewhat superficial and monotonous in treatment but convenient in that it contains information not readily accessible elsewhere. Excellent photographs and an index."

+ — A L A Bk 9:195 Ja '13

"A notably attractive volume."

+ Dial 53:451 D 1 '12 250w

"Few will read Henry Lahee's rambling pages because of interest in the subject matter, much of which is too trivial for one to waste time over. The illustrations, however, are attractive, and amid the chaff some grains of wheat may be found in the form of quoted criticisms and sketches of significant personages of the opera world."

+ — Ind 73:1508 D 26 '12 130w

LAING, HAMILTON MACK. Out with the birds. il *$1.50 (3½c) Outing pub. 13-10676

This is not a bird-book—that is, it is not a book that describes various species for purposes of identification. Its contents is made up of a series of essays by a bird lover and bird hunter who hunts in the modern way with camera rather than with gun. There are chapters on: Where spring comes late; An April hike; Where spring and summer meet; The duck-mothers; Some little owls; Some harmless hunting; In quest of a night roost; A mix-up with the laughers; Watching the day die, etc.

+ A L A Bk 10:101 N '13

"The book is in truth, a very welcome addition to the naturalist's library, and the illustrations are so good in subject that it is a pity many of them are badly reproduced. The lack of an index is noticeable."

+ — Ind 74:1304 Je 5 '13 170w

"This is an uncommonly good book. Mr. Laing is a close and sympathetic observer, and he writes well about what he sees."

+ — Nation 97:62 Jl 17 '13 400w

Outlook 104:344 Je 14 '13 70w

LA METTRIE, JULIEN OFFRAY DE. Man a machine; including Frederick the Great's "Eulogy" on La Mettrie and extracts from La Mettrie's "The natural history of the soul." il *$2 (3½c) Open ct. 13-4432

This volume contains the French text of La Mettrie's "L'homme machine" together with an English translation by Gertrude C. Bussey; with historical and philosophical notes appended. The text is taken from the Leyden edition of 1748 (the year of the first edition). The typographical errors of that edition have been corrected for the present printing by M. Lucien Arréat of Paris. La Mettrie's philosophy is related to that of Descartes.

+ Am J Theol 17:491 Jl '13 80w

"Written in a lively and decidedly modern fashion. The book as it stands must have been a labor of love to both editor and publishers. The result is highly creditable to both."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 19 '13 170w

+ Educ R 46:206 S '13 100w

"The Open court publishing company has rendered a valuable service in making easily available to English readers this classical work of La Mettrie. Unfortunately the amateurish work of the editor leaves much to be desired." F. C. Becker.

+ — J Philos 10:582 O 9 '13 1050w

"A useful addition to the philosophical library. The translation, for which in its present form Prof. M. W. Calkins is responsible, follows the French closely and, so far as we have examined, faithfully."

+ Nation 96:602 Je 12 '13 130w

"All in all the volume is distinctly entertaining."

+ N Y Times 18:195 Ap 6 '13 70w

LAMSZUS, WILHELM. Human slaughter-house; tr. by Oakley Williams, with an introd. by Alfred Noyes. 50c (2½c) Stokes 13-10112

This work, translated from the German, pictures modern warfare. It is "a description of the going to war, the fighting, the death and the resurrection of a common soldier, recorded by himself. The main purpose is to show that there is no such thing in modern warfare as a soldier's glorious death on the field of honor." (Ind)

A L A Bk 10:18 S '13 +

"The book, which is a powerful indictment of Continental militarism, has been adequately translated."

+ Ath 1913,1:494 My 3 120w

Dial 55:57 Jl 16 '13 180w

"The book is sincere and simply enough written to make a wide popular appeal."

+ Educ R 46:424 N '13 50w

"One of the most remarkable and powerful indictments of war ever written. In realism it ranks with Zola's 'The downfall.' In its appeal to the conscience of mankind it can only be compared with Baroness von Suttner's masterpiece, 'Lay down your arms.' 'The human slaughter house' is a photograph of Hell, inspired of Heaven. It cannot be adequately reviewed. It must be read." Hamilton Holt.

+ — Ind 74:1093 My 15 '13 300w

Nation 97:166 Ag 21 '13 680w

"This is a picture of the horrors of war, in style if not in spirit somewhat hysterical. The sale of it in Germany indicates that there was some need for such a book in that military land. It is not needed in America."

— Outlook 104:306 Je 7 '13 170w

"An extraordinary book."

+ R of Rs 48:377 S '13 450w

Reviewed by A. P. Kellogg.

+ Survey 30:645 Ag 23 '13 600w

LANCASTER, G. B. Law-bringers. *$1.35 Doran 13-15684

"The story is mainly that of two men of the police of north-west Canada. . . . Of the two, whose fortunes are intimately connected in love and service, one has a reckless past, especially with women, and finally redeems it after a great struggle. The other is a man of sterling quality, a steady worker whose only mistake is falling in love with a girl unworthy of him. She is 'a light woman,' and he is saved from her by the manoeuvres sketched by Brown- ing in the poem with that title."—Ath

"The book should be read, for the author is an artist and can write. Even so we think she might have reduced her matter."

+ Ath 1913,1:591 My 31 270w

"It is an unusually long drawn out story."

+ N Y Sun p3 O 4 '13 90w

"Considered merely as a means of amusement it has numerous merits. But 'The law bring- ers' is more than an interesting, amusing story." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 18:566 O 19 '13 900w

LANDOR, ARNOLD HENRY SAVAGE. Across unknown South America. 2v il *$10 Little 13-23372

The journey described by the author "was undertaken for the purpose of acquiring first-hand knowledge of that vast area of Brazil, in the immense central basin of the Xingu, Tapajoz, and Madeira rivers, hitherto regarded as impenetrable, and also to study the native tribes of Indians, to investigate the resources of the territory and report upon its possibilities for commercial development. During this trip he was lost to the world for eighteen months, traveled a total distance of nearly fourteen thousand miles, which took him, after he left Brazil, into Peru, Bolivia, Chile, and Argentina, always by unfrequented ways; saw endless pictures of nature at her wildest and sublime—rivers, mountains, forests, plains—never before seen by white men, and encountered some of the strangest adventures that ever befell an explorer."—N Y Times

"The story which he has to tell in these 700 pages is so thrilling that we regret that it has not been better told. The book seems to have been rather hastily compiled from the author's diaries and recollections, and the really interesting narrative which it contains is overlaid by a great amount of trivial and otiose detail."

+ Ath 1913,2:562 N 15 1500w

Reviewed by F. W. Ford.

Boston Transcript p6 N 8 '13 1600w

"His reports on the fertility of the soil, the mineral and rubber resources, and the fruit possibilities of the regions he traversed are of the highest importance, as is also his contribu- tion to geographical knowledge."

+ N Y Times 18:679 N 30 '13 280w

N Y Times 18:703 N 30 '13 2200w

LANG, ANDREW. Shakespeare, Bacon and the great unknown. il *$3 Longmans 13-1792

Altho Mr. Lang, as he says, was not a trained student of Elizabethan literature, "he had a special knowledge of the classics, which form one main ground in the controversy; and he was never the mere bookman who grows into imagining absurdities in the solitude of his study. Much of his book is applicable to the general Baconian position, but it is especially devoted to discussing Mr. Greenwood's arguments and theories in 'The Shakespeare problem restated' (1908)." (Ath) "Not so much by connected argument as by flashes of insight does Mr. Lang settle anew the prob- lems of a controversy that in itself is futile and unprofitable." (Boston Transcript)

A L A Bkl 9:377 My '13

"We are glad that this latest volume, though it lacks his final touches, has been given to the world. It has all his happy brightness of style and acuteness in argument. Mr. Lang confines himself to portions of the inquiry, but he covers enough ground to make a case which will not be easily demolished, and his choice of pertinent authorities is excellent."

+ Ath 1912,2:665 N 30 830w

"Here we find Lang's searching common sense, his customary shrewdness, his lively wit and his abundant humour, which was always good humour." Brander Matthews.

+ Bookm 36:658 F '13 1450w

"Mr. Lang's book although diffuse and bulky, will serve excellently as an antidote for the Baconian folly." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p26 D 18 '12 1150w

"Every lover of the Swan of Avon will read with the greatest pleasure this kindly but most effective bit of controversy."

+ Cath World 97:405 Je '13 700w

"Never, perhaps, in his career has Andrew Lang exhibited more engagingly his special qualities, his literary passion, his loyalty, and his light and dexterous handling of really wide scholarship." C: L. Moore.

+ Dial 54:96 F 1 '13 1900w

"In a clever, lively, and learned attack on the existence and reality of this mysterious 'Somebody,' Mr. Lang has sifted an immense amount of evidence and marshalled a most valuable array of Shakespeariana."

+ Lit D 46:142 Ja 18 '13 350w

"It is carefully reasoned throughout, and we have observed no inaccuracies in the cita- tions."

+ Nation 96:482 My 8 '13 700w

"Mr. Lang has in combination the sense of humor and the literary sense which the Baconians lack, and for the lack of which they are Baconians."

+ N Y Sun p5 D 21 '12 2850w

"Not only has Lang written a closely reason- ed and a very valuable introduction to the minutiae of a subject whose demands on a reader's erudition are usually quite appalling. He has also managed to give us an extremely interesting book." J: Palmer.

+ Sat R 115:45 Ja 11 '13 1650w

"We are the gainers by having the book as it was written. Its characteristic vivacity and humour would have been there, however much the proofs had been corrected, but they are yet more visible when we get it in its first form. Those who will really profit by it are that unlearned public who are puzzled to recon- cile Shakespeare's achievements with his circumstances, and have no answer to the triumphant syllogism: genius cannot work mira- cles; in a boy such as we know Shakespeare to have been to write the plays so long at- tributed to him would have been a miracle; therefore he did not write them."

+ Spec 110:105 Ja 18 '13 1700w

LANG, LEONORA BLANCHE (MRS. AN-DREW LANG). Men, women and minxes.
*$2.50 Longmans

"The subjects of the eighteen essays, touch- ed upon in the too short prefatory note, are very various. As to dates, they range through the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nine- teenth centuries, hardly touching the twen- tieth except in such matters of common inter- est as 'Other people's friends,' 'Pitfalls for collectors,' or 'Art in country inns and lodg- ing-houses.' . . . In her essays on the his- torical, literary, and society figures of past days Mrs. Andrew Lang has always something new to say and says it delightfully. . . . Among the more literary essays 'Paul de St. Victor' is in some ways the most attractive, perhaps because the subject is not very famil- iar. . . . The studies of Rousseau and of Richardson, in which their greatest books are analysed, are full of original and penetrating criticism."—Spec

"Though taken from various sources and necessarily unconnected, the essays pass suc- cessfully the exacting test of republication in book-form."

+ Ath 1913,1:62 Ja 18 950w

LANG, LEONORA BLANCHE—Continued.

"Something of her husband's lightness of touch, something of his command of a wide range of curious reading, and something of his fondness for the frequent unexpected or humorous turn of thought, are perceptible in Mrs. Lang's pages."

+ Dial 54:196 Mr 1 '13 320w

"The style employed is as varied as the subjects, alternating the serious and literary with the light and humorous. Contrasts are drawn between the theories and practices of great men, and while reading apparently trivial details about the surface existence of these famous men and women, we unconsciously absorb real facts concerning their lives that have produced the conditions known to the world."

+ Lit D 45:1140 D 14 '12 230w

"Mrs. Lang has an instinct for the quaintnesses of past fashions and manners, and a shrewd humor in recording them which has a tang of its own."

+ Nation 95:616 D 26 '12 570w

"A pleasant humour (and good humour) is the note of these essays, in which a fine feminine sense examines men and women and mixes with a keenness which might have been, but just is not, hardness of heart. The author's name is a guarantee for distinctive quality of work."

+ Sat R 115:82 Ja 18 '13 1450w

"In the short limits of a review there is no room even to touch on many of the charms of the book."

+ Spec 109:sup784 N 16 '12 670w

LANG, LEONORA BLANCHE (MRS. ANDREW LANG). Strange story book; ed. by Andrew Lang. il $*1.60 Longmans

This is the twenty-fifth story book in the series that has been appearing; one volume for every Christmas season, for the past twenty-five years. "The stories in the collection . . . are of two kinds; for the fairy and myth tales Mrs. Lang has drawn freely from the Tlingit legends gathered by the Bureau of ethnography and has added some previously overlooked older material; much of her volume, however, is made up of queer adventures, real or fictitious, from history and literature that will appeal to older readers." (N Y Sun)

"The stories are no less fascinating than those to be found in the earlier volumes of the series, and Mr. H. J. Ford again lends his aid with many beautiful illustrations, both in black and white and in colour."

+ Ath 1913,2:sup471 O 25 80w

"The stories are of the customary well selected sort. All delightful tales, well told."

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 29 '13 300w

"Quite as beautiful and delightful as its predecessors."

+ Ind 76:357 N 20 '13 60w

+ Nation 97:543 D 4 '13 80w

"A fitting and interesting sequel to a remarkable series of story books."

+ N Y Sun p8 O 11 '13 130w

+ N Y Times 18:694 N 30 '13 120w

+ Sat R 116:sup5 N 29 '13 230w

"The handless brigade," and "The story of Elizabeth Canning" are treated as well as one could wish, but it must be said that they seem unworthy of their company. Though catholicity may be a merit, it is the tales of imagination and romantic mystery that delight us most, and there are plenty of these."

+ — Spec 111:sup692 N 1 '13 400w

LANKESTER, SIR EDWIN RAY. Science from an easy chair. 2d ser il $*2 (1½c) Holt 13-35653

"Thirty-one main topics form the subjects of the chapters of the present volume, and upon all of them the author writes with freshness and breadth of knowledge that command admiration." (Nature) "He seems equally familiar with the ways of germs and glaciers, flowers and elephants, cave-drawings and museums. He enjoys teaching, and we enjoy listening to him. . . . As befits a man of science [Lankester] is happiest in his most 'objective' moods; we most admire him when he is giving off facts as thick and fast as radium gives off whatever it is that radium does give off. When he unbends his mind over affairs of non-science, then we begin to dare to have opinions of our own." (Spec)

+ A L A Bkl 10:18 S '13

"The mass of the book is solid, but not heavy, information and discussion."

+ Boston Transcript p20 J1 2 '13 500w

"If the articles were classified and printed in several volumes of moderate price, they would better meet the needs of readers of popular scientific articles."

+ — Chaut 72:125 O 11 '13 100w

"Truly, here is 'something for everybody,' and nothing which is not well worth reading and thinking over."

+ Ind 75:452 Ag 21 '13 120w

+ Nation 97:269 S 18 '13 180w

"The papers are perfect models of scientific exposition: simple, yet not childish; informative, but not tedious; bright without being flippant; sparkling with human interest and original always. For the student of science whose work is running in a narrow groove the papers provide a pleasant antidote; and to readers engaged in other activities they will be a revelation."

+ — Nature 90:538 Ja 16 '13 350w

"Sir Ray Lankester has an admirable method for breaking up the bread of science and making it suitable for popular consumption."

+ N Y Times 18:355 Je 15 '13 800w

"This new collection of essays is one of the best of his books; and it would be hard to overpraise the width of his learning, the sureness of his touch."

+ Spec 110:280 F 15 '13 400w

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 24 '13 650w

LARISCH VON MOENNICH, MARIE LUISE ELISABETH (fräulein von WALLERSEE) gräfin. My past: reminiscences of the courts of Austria and of Bavaria. il $*3.50 Putnam 13-9797

"The authoress, Countess Marie Larisch, was the favorite niece and confidante of the Empress Elizabeth of Austria, and her frank statement of many details of the tragedies which pursue the house of Austria seem to bear the stamp of veracity. It is principally as a vindication of her innocent connection with the suicide of the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria that this volume sees the light."—Ind

"Among the intimate reminiscences of royal and noble European personages that have come to us during the last few years, none has so completely won our sympathy and interest as the Countess Marie Larisch."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '13 650w

Dial 54:514 Je 16 '13 170w

"Many interesting details of the life of Elizabeth and her love affairs, of the Emperor, of members of the family and its entourage, are given without reserve, and new light cast upon many things long a mystery in international circles."

+ Ind 74:1347 Je 12 '13 230w

+ Lit D 47:645 O 11 '13 160w

"In view of the general animus that marks her attitude and of the fact that some of her statements concerning the Empress are easily disproved by a reference to dates, it seems only the part of common decency to regard all of them with suspicion. The book as a whole strikes any impartial critic as a peculiarly unsavory attempt to calumniate the dead for motives of personal revenge."

— Nation 96:527 My 22 '13 420w

"The present volume will doubtless receive wide reading, if for no other reason than because of the chance to view the private lives of an imperial family in Vienna and a royal family in Munich through the eyes of one intimate-ly related to both."

— + Outlook 104:263 My 31 '13 300w

R of Rs 48:117 Jl '13 130w

"The credit to be given this book is a problem. The suggestions that, in spite of pious protestations of affection for the Empress, the whole book has been falsely born of the revengeful spirit of an evidently erratic woman, must at least be counted among the possibilities, and the book be discounted accordingly."

— Springfield Republican p5 My 15 '13 950w

"The doubts as to [the book's] credibility prove to have been well founded. Altogether it appears that this book by the former countess is to be condemned as unreliable, false, and, as was originally suggested, as a piece of revengeful hypocrisy."

— Springfield Republican p5 My 22 '13 380w

LARNED, MRS. LINDA (HULL). New hostess of to-day. il *$1.50 (1c) Scribner 13-1777

This book is made up of directions for the preparation and serving of meals, and is designed for the use of housekeepers of some experience rather than for beginners. Chapters on Dinners and luncheons, Breakfasts, Evening collations, Five o'clock functions, and Chafing dish creations are followed by chapters of recipes.

A L A Bkl 9:352 Ap '13 +

"A book like this is sure of a welcome for its directions, whether for simple or elaborate entertainment, are both sensible and clear."

+ Ind 74:473 F 27 '13 30w

Nation 96:625 Je 19 '13 80w

N Y Sun p3 Ja 25 '13 100w

N Y Times 18:92 F 23 '13 70w

LASALLE, MARY AUGUSTA, and WILEY, KATHERINE E. Vocations for girls; with an introd. by Meyer Bloomfield. *85c Houghton 13-861

"The object of this little volume is to give to girls who are starting out in life, and to those who are working along vocational lines, some accurate information about the various occupations that are open to women. 'The facts were secured, with the coöperation of the Vocation bureau of Boston, and from many sources; the superintendents of large department stores, the director of a school of salesmanship, the managers of several manufacturing establishments, the head nurses of city hospitals, the principals of technical, trade, and commercial schools, the manager of a telephone school, the head of a department of household economics, several librarians, state, city and town school superintendents, have all furnished information in regard to the work in the several vocations.'—Boston Transcript

"Less valuable than 'Vocations for the trained woman' but meets a different need in that the positions outlined do not require extensive preparation."

+ A L A Bkl 9:378 My '13 +

"The authors show a clear understanding of the needs of girls and the help and guidance that should be given. To social workers and teachers the book will be invaluable."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 150w

"All the information given is clear and definite, and the advice most sensible. The book might profitably be placed in the hands of every 'sweet girl graduate' of our convents, high schools, and grammar schools."

+ Cath World 97:251 My '13 200w

+ Ind 75:340 Ag 7 '13 70w

"A great deal of useful information is furnished by the authors."

+ N Y Times 18:130 Mr 9 '13 100w

"The material is attractively arranged, presented in a breezy, readable form, tinged with the spirit of sentiment, calculated to excite and hold the interest of the girl reader. It cannot fail to make the careless irresponsible girl more thoughtful, to untangle many perplexities for the troubled girl and to arouse ambition for personal efficiency in all girls who read it. The book is disappointing in its almost total lack of recognition of the many failures in industry to meet the reasonable claims of efficiency. Above all else, let me repeat that the book deserves a pioneer place in vocational literature, as one of the outward proofs of that which has long been felt,—that the destiny of the wage-earning child can be safely trusted to the keen interest, stimulating sympathy and sound judgment of his or her main dependence—the most potent of our social forces—the public school teacher." M. E. Campbell.

+ Survey 30:219 My 10 '13 600w

LAUFER, BERTHOLD. Jade: a study in Chinese archaeology and religion. (Anthropological ser. v. 10) il *$6 Field museum 12-15552

This volume is "the first of a series of volumes which will be the fruit of an expedition to China and Tibet carried on by the gift of Mrs T. B. Blackstone. The specimens of jade described are mostly in the Field museum, collected by the expedition, and the discussion of them covers their mythological meaning, and their use as ornaments, amulets and vessels of use." (Ind) "While Dr. Laufer freely acknowledges that the great Bishop collection of jade, in the Metropolitan museum of art in New York, is the most extensive collection in existence of such objects, yet he thinks that the jades gathered by him in Si-yang-fu, Shensi province . . . include a number of interesting types of jade amulets of the dead not represented in the Bishop collection." (Nation)

"To a student of jade this work will be of intense interest, and it supplements Bishop's great work on Chinese jades as shown in the Bishop collection in the Metropolitan museum."

+ Ind 73:210 Jl 25 '12 150w

"Dr. Laufer was well fitted to prepare a study on this intricate subject."

+ Nation 96:42 Ja 9 '13 1350w

"A remarkably complete and discerning monograph, which will appeal alike to connoisseurs, artists, ethnologists, and students of comparative religion and folklore." A. C. Haddon.

+ Nature 91:226 My 1 '13 850w

LAUFFER, CHARLES ALPHEUS. Electrical injuries. *50c Wiley 12-14654

"It is a simple discussion of the effects of shocks and burns principally, and of the immediate measures that must be taken if life is to be saved or intense suffering alleviated. . . . The book explains the utility and simplicity of the 'prone pressure' (Schaefer) method of resuscitation, which a joint commission of doctors and engineers has recommended as superior to the older Sylvester movements."—Engin N

+ A L A Bkl 9:107 N '12

+ Engin N 69:813 Ap 17 '13 120w

LAUFFER, CHARLES ALPHEUS. Resuscitation from electric shock, traumatic shock, drowning, asphyxiation from any cause. il *40c Wiley 13-8328

"In this little book of forty-seven pages Dr. Laufer, the medical director of the Westinghouse electric and manufacturing company, East Pittsburgh, deals with the subject of artificial respiration as applied to resuscitation in electric shock. Dr. Laufer is an enthusiastic advocate of the prone pressure (Schaefer) method of resuscitation, and his enthusiasm appears to be based upon considerable experience. . . . He does not confine himself to those cases in which he is more immediately interested, but has carried on his observations on cases of asphyxia from whatever cause. He points out the various circumstances in which artificial respiration may be necessary, including asphyxia arising from poisoning from carbon monoxide, ammonia fumes, gasoline fumes, sewer gas, suffocation by smoke, inhalation of confined air, inhalations of chloroform and ether, overdoses of laudanum, shock from a heavy blow on the abdomen, and apparent death from drowning."—Nature

LAUFFER, CHARLES ALPHEUS—Continued.

+ A L A Bkl 10:101 N '13 +

+ Elec World 62:200 J1 26 '13 120w

+ Engin Rec 68:55 J1 12 '13 100w

"We commend Dr. Laufer's little book to all who are interested in the subject."

+ Nature 91:578 Ag 7 '13 700w

LAUT, AGNES CHRISTINA. Through our unknown Southwest. 11 $2 McBride, Nast & Co. 13-12334

The author who has written much of the Northwest now "turns to the Southwest and gives us a well-illustrated series of chapters in popular style about the National forests, the Mesas, the Painted Desert, the Grand Cañon, the Missions, and other fascinating features of that great region where, as she says, 'you can shake hands with the Stone age,' where you may learn of prehistoric people, may follow the track of the Spanish explorer, may, as to scenery, find half a dozen Switzerland; from Glacier park in the north to Cloudercroft in New Mexico,' and may revel in archæology, study big game, trace strange legends, and if you like, motor in great parks and along beautiful coasts." (Outlook)

A L A Bkl 10:18 S '13 +

+ Dial 55:120 Ag 16 '13 320w

"She describes the natural and archæological curiosities in the enthusiastic pen pictures to which she is addicted, mindless of the fact that most of the things that excite her are already well known, through books at least. As a guide to the country described the book is valuable and it may induce more people to visit it, which seems to be the author's purpose."

+ N Y Sun p6 Je 14 '13 70w

"Pungent, picturesque, compelling—these are strong adjectives, but Miss Laut's vigorous presentation of the wonders and beauties of our Southwestern plateau region deserves them all, and more."

+ N Y Times 18:459 S 7 '13 850w

"The description always has liveliness and animation; and the method of treatment is popular rather than learned or statistical."

+ Outlook 104:392 Je 21 '13 150w

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 350w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Sons and lovers. $1.35 (1c) Kennerley 13-21105

An intense and realistic story in which the relationship of mother and son is the predominating theme. There are two other women in Paul Morel's life; one of them is Miriam, highly sensitive and spiritual, who appeals only to his higher nature; the other is Clara, a woman of fire and passion, who draws him with the lure of the senses. Neither satisfies him; and neither can wean him from devotion to his mother; to her he returns ever, from the presence of either, with a sense of homecoming satisfaction. The story begins before Paul's birth. It ends with his mother's death.

"Mr. Lawrence's new novel is a fine, but not altogether a well-made piece of work. A certain distortion arises from the fact that, while all the other characters are drawn, as it were, in the third person, the hero is drawn in the first. The pronoun 'I' is not, indeed, employed for him, but the author has lived so completely within his creation that the narrative reads like an autobiography—and, readers know, autobiographies are less likely than biographies to produce a lifelike portrait."

+ Ath 1913,1:668 Je 21 450w

"This is not merely a story of English cottage life—there is in it something of that universality, that flowering of basic human emotions among very simple folk, that distinguishes some of the Russian stories of peasant life."

+ Ind 76:94 O 9 '13 420w

"The story will leave a gloomy impression on most readers. It is too strongly grasped and wrought out to be negligible, and will force many, in spite of themselves, to accept it as a true picture. The mother's relation to her children, especially two sons, is described with the firm knowledge that brings conviction."

+ Nation 97:564 D 11 '13 400w

"Mr. Lawrence has small regard for conventional morality; nevertheless, though plain spoken to a degree, his book is not in the least offensive. It is, in fact, fearless; never coarse. And one must go far to find a better study of an intense woman." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 18:479 S 21 '13 1150w

"There is the strong grip of reality in [this] tale."

+ Outlook 105:762 D 6 '13 100w

"What is wrong in the book is the frequent intrusion of the writer. Mr. Lawrence's inability to efface himself is now his most serious weakness, for the faulty construction of his earlier work is in no way evident in 'Sons and lovers.' After reading most of the more 'important' novels of the present year, we can say that we have seen none to excel it in interest and power; the sum of its defects is astonishingly large, but we only note it when they are weighed against the sum of its own qualities."

+ Sat R 115:780 Je 21 '13 900w

LAWRENCE, EDWIN GORDON. How to master the spoken word. $1.50 (1½c) McClurg 13-5434

"This work aims to show how to breathe correctly, produce voice properly, put the meaning into words by aid of inflection, emphasis, and the tones of the voice; how to improve the memory, acquire fluency of speech, control an audience, construct speeches, and in every way become competent to think on one's feet and to express thought vocally in an entertaining, convincing and moving manner." (Preface) The book is intended as a text-book and there are chapters devoted to: The making of oratory; How to construct and deliver orations; Construction; Composition; Paragraphing, etc., with selections from great orations, ancient and modern.

+ Boston Transcript p12 My 5 '13 280w

+ Dial 54:513 Je 16 '13 130w

Ind 75:332 Ag 7 '13 30w

N Y Sun p6 My 31 '13 50w

N Y Times 18:285 My 11 '13 80w

LAWRENCE, WILLIAM JOHN. Elizabethan playhouse, and other studies. 11 $3.50 Lip-pincott (Eng ed 13-2011)

The author was a pioneer in the field in which he is now an authority. He is not concerned with the drama or with acting. "Instead he is interested in the physical conditions and stage conventions of the Elizabethan playhouse. . . . In bringing together his papers and studies into the present volume, Mr. Lawrence has striven especially to illustrate not only the rise and progress of the 'Platform stage,' but also the degree to which its characteristics coalesced with and influenced the 'Picture stage.' It will be found, I think, that these studies embody full details of the evolution of the English theatre in its primary and secondary stages, or, in other words, from its inception in the inn-yards until the close of the seventeenth century. In them some attempt has been made to indicate what features were indigenous and what derivative." (Boston Transcript)

Reviewed by Ashford Torrey.
+ Bookm 36:453 D '12 300w

"Into the eleven separate papers that make up his volume, Mr. Lawrence has gathered a wide variety of information about the Elizabethan playhouse." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p11 D 14 '12 600w

"The essays are written with verve and bear the mark of diligent preparation. That they lead to rather few definite conclusions is perhaps due more to the broad field they seek to cover than to any lack of critical acumen in the author." C. F. T. Brooke.

+ Dial 54:134 F 16 '13 2350w

"The first article is the best summary yet published of our information in regard to the stage conditions of the time. As regards the author's general views concerning the Elizabethan stage, one may say that he is altogether uninfluenced by recent writers who are inclined to claim for Elizabethan staging a larger element of pictorial illusion than was once thought possible, and who in other respects minimize to a certain extent the archaic features of the stage of the period. The volume is beautifully printed, and its value is enhanced by a series of admirable illustrations."

+ Nation 95:596 D 19 '12 1000w

"Profoundly scholarly work." Hamilton Bell.

+ N Y Times 17:596 O 13 '12 3250w

Reviewed by Hamilton Bell.

+ N Y Times 18:536 O 12 '13 2800w

"These two volumes are packed with discovery. Their riches would furnish forth—they probably will furnish forth—the popular historian's book bazaar for the next ten years. Some day Mr. Lawrence will receive his due."

+ Sat R 116:83 J1 19 '13 1350w

LAWTON, LANCELOT F. Empires of the Far East: a study of Japan and her colonial possessions, of China and Manchuria and of the political questions of eastern Asia and the Pacific. 2v *$7.50 Small 13-9219

In this work on the countries of the Far East "more attention is given to Japan than to any other country because Japan is the only country in the Far East which is rated one of the world's powers, and because the Japanese are the dominating people in the Orient, directly concerned in every important political, economical and social movement in their part of the world. . . . Next to Japan in the allotment of the author's space comes China. Of China's future he speaks with marked hopefulness; he says that, although it may be her lot to pass through tribulation, she is destined to emerge a strong and enlightened power, to take her place in the forefront of civilization." (N Y Times)

"The book is a mine of valuable information, and despite the frequent repetition of arguments and the fact that statistics are seldom later than 1907, is likely to become the textbook on Japan."

+ A L A Bkl 9:434 Je '13

Reviewed by C. L. Jones.

+ Ann Am Acad 49:253 S '13 370w

"The volumes contain a great mass of valuable information concerning the most recent happenings in the Far East."

+ Dial 54:247 Mr 16 '13 450w

"Here is a notable book."

+ Ind 74:1344 Je 12 '13 1150w

"This brief summary hardly begins to indicate the wealth of valuable material in the book. It is both up-to-date and free from dead wood. Each section of the book is sufficiently complete in itself to give the book the greatest usefulness. The style is direct and vigorous. Opinions and judgments are frankly stated but with impartiality and candor. As a student of international relations, Mr. Lawton's ability is of the first order. Indeed, there is hardly a topic discussed in the two volumes of which America can afford to be ignorant."

+ Lit D 46:592 Mr 15 '13 550w

+ Nation 97:434 N 6 '13 1550w

"Upon the whole this is a book about Japan, and as such it is of almost encyclopaedic pretensions. In the fulness and in the freshness of its information we know of no other that can be compared with it. A book nearly indispensable for students."

+ N Y Sun p12 F 8 '13 3350w

"It is carefully, intelligently and impartially written by a man who knows his subject, and it deals comprehensively with the conditions and problems of the Far East, in which we of the West are interested."

+ N Y Times 18:84 F 16 '13 220w

"Mr. Lawton's two volumes are of interest and helpfulness, first of all, if we consult them with regard to the history of Japan or the history of China. But they are of special interest when we consult them with regard to the present relations between Japan and China."

+ Outlook 104:826 Ag 9 '13 350w

"A thorough, exhaustive, and entertainingly written work."

+ R of Rs 47:380 Mr '13 70w

"Mr. Lawton has practised as a doctor for thirty years in Japan. He knows the country well, and he holds the scales even. His book is likely to become the text-book on Japan."

+ Sat R 115:52 Ja 11 '13 1550w

"We take leave of an interesting book, which, it should be added, is supplied with some excellent maps, with the feeling that it is almost too long, and deals with too great a wealth of subjects."

+ Spec 110:sup687 Ap 26 '13 1650w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Behind the beyond, and other contributions to human knowledge. il *$1 Lane 13-22884

"The book contains a burlesque of modern drama, a series of 'Familiar incidents,' some satire on Parisian life, and more satire on editors and the cult of the antique."—Ath

"Prof. Leacock is not at his best here."

+ Ath 1913,2:593 N 22 60w

"It would be obvious to say that 'Behind the beyond' is not so funny throughout as 'Non-sense novels.' No reasonable person could expect to keep an author up to the high pitch of that book. It is, however, a thoroughly amusing volume."

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 6 '13 600w

"Mr. Leacock's fun is always good-natured, and therefore doubly enjoyable. A word must be said for the very clever illustrations by A. H. Fish, which actually do enhance the reader's pleasure in the book."

+ N Y Times 18:614 N 9 '13 200w

"The best thing in the book is the delightful burlesque of a modern problem play. Miss Fish's fantastic illustrations are decidedly clever, though unequal. She is over-addicted to one type of physiognomy, and her method, which recalls that of Beardsley, is not always attuned to the robust humour of Mr. Leacock."

+ Spec 111:828 N 15 '13 1150w

LEAF, WALTER. Troy: a study in Homeric geography. il *$3.50 Macmillan 13-926

"Dr. Leaf's new book on Troy consists of two portions, both of them valuable to Homeric students. The first is a brief but clear statement of the results of the more recent excavations of the city, together with a discussion of their relation to the Homeric story; the second is an historical and geographical investigation, based partly on personal knowledge of the Troad, partly on criticism of literary and other evidence." (Ath) "He has reached the following conclusions: Troy and the Troad are described from true historical knowledge; the Trojan catalogue is an authentic document unchanged from the first, and is the reason for the Greek catalogue; Hissarlik, in its elevation, winds, trees, shrubs, flowers,

LEAF, WALTER—Continued.
 gulleys, streams, knolls, and general landscape, fits the setting of the 'Iliad' in all the minutest details." (Nation)

"In the main the argument of the book appeals to me strongly, and I am prepared to accept its conclusions." G. M. Bolling.
 + — Am Hist R 18:563 Ap '13 650w

"A scholarly work of great interest to classical students."
 + A L A Bk 9:327 Ap '13

"The book must be seriously considered by all future students of the Homeric question."
 + — Ath 1912,2:405 O 12 1050w

"Most of this book is devoted to presenting to English readers, for the first time, an adequate and comprehensive survey of the results of the excavations carried on by Schliemann and Dörpfeld. The illustrations are many and valuable; the printing, paper, and all the details are in keeping with the unusual merits of the whole." J. A. Scott.
 + Class J 8:350 My '13 650w

"His treatment is such that scholars and historians other than specialists in Homer will desire to make use of the book."
 + Lit D 46:356 F 15 '13 250w

"The bulk of this book is devoted to presenting to English readers the results of the work done by Dörpfeld, as published in his 'Troja and Ilion,' with a discussion of the importance of subsequent study and excavation. The accuracy and trustworthiness of all that concerns Troy is assured by the fact that the proof-sheets were revised by Dörpfeld himself. There is now little need to consult the German original."
 + Nation 95:567 D 12 '12 850w

Sat R 114:sup712 D 7 '12 1150w

"Though many of the details with which Dr. Leaf has to deal are often dry and technical, he yet never fails to interest. With rare consideration he asks 'the overtaxed reviewer' not to consider himself 'bound to begin before page 310 or thereabouts,' and then 'kindly to read' the next twenty pages. But the reviewer or the reader who takes its author's advice and begins with those twenty pages will assuredly be tempted to study the whole book, as it deserves to be studied, in its careful and scholarly completeness."
 + Spec 109:1102 D 28 '12 1950w

LEARNED, MARION DEXTER. Guide to the manuscript materials relating to American history in the German state archives. pa $2.25 Carnegie inst 12-8924

This volume, which surveys the sources for study of American history accessible in Germany, follows similar guides to the archives of England, Spain and Italy which had been previously published. Early emigration and its causes, the German troops in the revolutionary war, diplomatic relations between Germany and the new republic, and the later emigrations of 1819 and 1848 are matters on which the German archives offer new source material. "Professor Learned furnishes in an introductory chapter a very lucid account of the organization, administration, and equipment of the German state archives, which cannot fail to be of practical value to any one engaged in historical researches in Germany." (Am Hist R)

"Professor Learned's search shows positive results in three directions." A. B. Faust.
 + Am Hist R 18:149 O '12 1200w

"An excellent introduction, historical and descriptive, and an index add to the usefulness of this important volume."
 + Nation 95:619 D 26 '12 300w

LEARY, RUSSEL WOODWARD. Italian lanes and highroads. il $*1.10 (2c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-267

The tour thru Italy which the author outlines begins at Naples and leads to Venice, Pompeii, Amalfi, Rome, Perugia, Florence, Pisa, Genoa, and Verona are some of the cities visited by the way. The volume, which is well illustrated, is one of a series known as the "Blue books of travel."

"Although we do not wander far from the beaten track we get many an unfamiliar glimpse and learn many a quaint legend and many a bit of interesting history."
 + Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 150w

"Delightful volume."

+ Ind 74:1203 My 29 '13 130w

"He describes his journey pleasantly enough, but has seen nothing more than the hasty traveller can notice."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Ja 18 '13 80w

+ N Y Times 18:111 Mr 2 '13 40w

LEBLANC, MAURICE. Confessions of Arsène ¹¹ Lupin; tr. by Alexander de Mattos. il $*1.25 (1½c) Doubleday 13-20128

Ten new adventures in the career of this gentleman burglar are recounted in the ten chapters of this book. The titles are: Two hundred thousand francs reward; The wedding ring; The sign of the shadow; The infernal trap; The red silk scarf; Shadowed by death; A tragedy in the forest of morgues; Lupin's marriage; The invisible prisoner; Edith Swan-neck.

+ Ind 75:692 S 18 '13 80w

"While these confessions show wonderful ingenuity and fertility of invention, they are scarcely convincing."
 — N Y Times 18:585 O 26 '13 230w

LEBLANC, MAURICE. Crystal stopper; tr. by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. il $*1.25 (1½c) Doubleday 13-4421

In this story M. Leblanc presents his hero in a new guise. "Instead of the old masterful conqueror of men and circumstances against tremendous odds, we find him, until almost the final chapter, pitted against foemen worthy of his steel, who outwit him time and time again and involve him in a struggle for his very life. . . . Through all, the lure of the mysterious crystal stopper, whose importance and significance Lupin himself does not for a time realize, draws into its quest many of his old time enemies and a host of new ones. Won and lost a dozen times it is only at the end that it plays its part in freeing a beautiful woman from the machinations of a master villain and bringing peace to the harrassed thief—and then, crowning wonder of all, it turns out not to be a stopper at all, or at least not the kind that the characters have been looking for." (Boston Transcript)

"So long as it fulfils its mission as a piece of unusually resourceful, inventive and thrillingly imaginative writing, those who care for this sort of thing—and their name is legion—will hardly stop in the onward rush of spirited episodes to notice or cavil at minor incongruities."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 500w

"Is better than some of its immediate predecessors, for the author has paid some regard to coherence. The simple system of foiling his hero's machinations until his final triumph is effective enough, but the Jack in the box methods with the frequent assertions that this is A. Lupin persist."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Mr 22 '13 100w

+ N Y Times 18:241 Ap 20 '13 300w

+ Spec 110:848 My 17 '13 20w

LE BLOND, ELIZABETH ALICE FRANCES (HAWKINS-WHITSHED) (MRS. AUBREY LE BLOND). Old gardens of Italy: how to visit them. il $*1.25 Lane 13-1847

"This little volume is frankly intended to serve merely as a guide-book to the old gardens of Italy, leaving the reader who desires to know more to consult larger works." (Ath)
 "Upwards of eighty gardens are catalogued, and in most cases the reader is informed to whom to apply for permission to visit them. Almost every other page of the book is adorned with a reproduction from a photograph by the author." (Boston Transcript)

+ Ath 1912,2:727 D 14 70w

"Her book, indeed, is a kind of Baedeker to the gardens of Italy." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 14 '12 130w

"The illustrations taken from photographs, made by Mrs. Le Blond, are very fine and in themselves must be a delight to garden lovers and an incentive to those who as yet do not know Italy's gardens, to make their acquaintance upon the first opportunity."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 170w

"An excellent little book. We note one misprint."

+ — Nation 96:646 Je 26 '13 80w

+ — N Y Sun p4 F 1 '13 150w

+ N Y Times 18:93 F 23 '13 40w

"A charmingly written book, and though easy and pleasing in manner there is a great deal of work and study put into it. It is full of references, which help to make up a most readable book out of what in other people's hands might probably develop into a mere guide-book."

+ Sat R 115:623 My 17 '13 330w

LE BON, GUSTAVE. Psychology of revolution; tr. by Bernard Miall. *$2.50 Putnam 13-9754

"The author discusses the psychology of revolution in general, religious or political, and the mental and emotional characteristics of the leaders of such movements, with special consideration of the French revolution. The examples of revolutionary movements are preferably chosen from French history, but universal history is also drawn upon, including the political upheavals in Portugal, China, and Turkey."—N Y Times

Reviewed by I: A. Loos.

Am J Soc 19:272 S '13 600w

"We fear that the author, in his anxiety to prove that common belief is generally an illusion . . . has overlooked a few illusions of his own. Mr. Bernard Miall's translation is not one of his best efforts, and the index has been carelessly compiled."

— Ath 1913,1:428 Ap 19 500w

— Ind 75:744 S 25 '13 320w

Lit D 47:432 S 13 '13 300w

N Y Times 18:201 Ap 6 '13 80w

"M. Le Bon's analysis is corrective rather than contributory. He does not add a great deal to the picture which most of us have of the French revolution, its leaders and its events, but he does valuable work in breaking down many stereotyped illusions. On the whole, 'The psychology of revolution' is by no means as valuable as M. Le Bon's former work. It has not that brilliancy of style that was one of the chief assets of 'The crowd,' it is repetitive of much of the earlier work, and, because of a deplorable lack of clarity, it falls in its main purpose of showing the forces operative in revolutions. We feel a growing distrust of his work when we stumble upon such statements as 'we know that in America the invasion of the Chinese and Japanese has become a national calamity.'"

— + N Y Times 18:317 My 25 '13 750w

"His book is generally sound, and it is stimulating even where it is diffuse."

+ — No Am 198:137 Jl '13 1000w

+ Outlook 104:579 Jl 12 '13 120w

"M. Le Bon has no qualities of style; he exploits his psychology too laboriously; and he is too assertive about his supposed originality of view; but his material is interesting though rather amorphous."

+ — — Sat R 116:22 Jl 5 '13 200w

"Unfortunately M. Le Bon falls a victim to the very vice which he so deprecates in others. In the first place, like all persons who form general theories first and apply them afterwards, he is not a little hampered by his theories; in the second, it must be admitted that he shows a very pronounced anti-Jacobin bias. Where he confines himself within the domain of pure psychology (as he does in many chapters of this book) his work is, both in analysis and generalization, thorough, stimulating, and clear-sighted."

— + Spec 110:1060 Je 21 '13 1200w

"A difficulty with such a study as Mr. Le Bon's is that it is not easy to keep its scientific character untainted with the student's desire to make a point. There is much that is suggestive and illuminating in his theory of the psychology of popular movements, but he does not convince us of the propriety of applying it so sweepingly as he himself does."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 1100w

LEE, GERALD STANLEY. Crowds. *$1.35 (1c) Doubleday 13-12270

On the title page Mr. Lee calls his book "a moving picture of democracy." It is made up of a series of brief essays on tendencies of the times grouped into five books: Crowds and machines; Letting the crowd be good; Letting the crowd be beautiful; Crowds and heroes; Good news and hard work. The author has faith in the future and can write exultingly of the glories of a machine age.

"A stimulating book; to many readers it will be irresistible."

+ A L A Bkl 10:81 S '13 *

"No one will dissent from Mr. Lee's copy-book maxims, unless provoked to do so by their reiteration, but with his estimates of men and things we are certainly at variance."

— Ath 1913,2:62 Jl 19 150w

"This book is essentially discursive, written in a sententious style."

— Chaut 71:174 Jl 26 '13 270w

"A most striking volume. Its method is so simple that it is difficult to disagree with it no matter where it leads. It is cordially recommended to every reader who is interested in the world's getting forward, chiefly as a further incentive for him to 'go forwarder.'" Wallace Rice.

+ Dial 55:116 Ag 16 '13 600w

"'Crowds' is one of those books that make you chuckle when you are reading them to yourself and make you go to find somebody to read them aloud to. It is full of clever writing, too clever, perhaps, at times. There are places where we don't understand what the author means and some where we don't believe he understands himself. And there are places where he is demonstrably wrong."

+ — Ind 75:211 Jl 24 '13 800w

"Sometimes he is altogether too clever—even to saying the smart thing for the smart thing's sake."

+ — Lit D 47:591 O 4 '13 410w

"There are passages of first-hand inspiration in it, and reading that is both wholesome and stimulating; and this one may say even though most of the ideas in it, as is the way with the ideas of those who in the modern world assume the robes of the prophet, are little likely to afford very definite guidance in the work of social renovation and invigoration."

+ — Nation 97:170 Ag 21 '13 650w

N Y Sun p14 Je 14 '13 70w

"It is one of the important and inspiring books of our day."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 14 '13 2000w

LEE, MRS. JENNETTE BARBOUR (PERRY). Taste of apples. il *$1.25 Dodd 13-19331

A story that takes a typical New England couple, Anthony, a cobbler-philosopher, and Mother, his wife, famed for her pies, to London. "Mother's first day in the wonderful surroundings of the world capital finds her settled down in her hotel room, rejoicing quietly that

LEE, MRS. JENNETTE BARBOUR—Continued. she at last has a good chance to do a day's sewing. Anthony wanders about London, bringing home beggars that he may mend their boots for them, scraping acquaintance thru admiration for a wonderful pair of boots with a brother philosopher in the person of a noble lord, observing, learning, and philosophizing. The story is nothing, the characters and the atmosphere are much." (Ind)

+ A L A Bkl 10:117 N '13 +

"She succeeds by virtue of a sane and wholesome optimism, character drawing, marked by clearness of line and warmth of tone, and the creation of a distinctive atmosphere."

+ Ind 76:35 O 2 '13 270w

"A charming and poetical story. The old shoemaker is well worth knowing."

+ N Y Sun p3 N 8 '13 150w

LEE, VERNON, pseud. (VIOLET PAGET).
2 Vital lies: studies of some varieties of recent obscurantism. 2v $3 Lane 13-2023

The "modern obscurantists" whom the author arraigns are "the pragmatists (James and Dr. Schiller), Father Tyrrell and his modernism, Mr. A. E. Crawley and his 'anthropological apologetics,' M. Sorel and the Syndicalist myth, and, more incidentally, M. Bergson and Renan. All these are represented as nefariously engaged in a plot to propagate 'vital lies' of a religious, moral, or social order. . . . The fierce indignation of this criticism is, however, relieved by frequent epigrams and flashes of wit, and perhaps explained by the writer's attachment to an old-fashioned naturalism."—Ath

+ A L A Bkl 9:440 Je '13

"The book's main interest lies in its criticisms, especially of pragmatism, which has to bear the brunt of Vernon Lee's assault; but she is hardly equipped with the heavy artillery required to carry philosophic strongholds. She never engages herself very deeply, nor ventures to attack, e. g., the austere technicalities of Dewey, but skirmishes round the outworks, at such a distance from the central positions that she hardly catches a glimpse of them. Finally, it must be said that Vernon Lee's excess of zeal against 'obscurantism' has spoilt an excellent subject."

—Ath 1912,2:650 N 30 950w

"The book is characterized by a poignant eloquence eminently suitable to its grave themes, and is by far the most suggestive piece of work accomplished by its gifted author." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 30 '12 600w

"Her one great fault, coupled with a Ruskinian style, is verbosity. It was well worth doing, even though when the worst is said it might have been done with half the energy expended." N. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Mr 5 '13 1450w

"Unquestionably many readers will lay the book aside as only another clever expression of agnosticism or materialistic realism. To others, and the present reviewer among them, these two volumes must seem to contain not only criticisms that are generally sound but also many suggestions that are constructively helpful. One notices an unpardonable number of slips in the proofreading, particularly in the quotations from French authors."

+ — Dial 54:386 My 1 '13 300w

"The book is a timely warning against the realistic idealism of the priests of mankind who would neglect, or even create, a hundred evils to cure a single malady of the body politic; and their mistakes and infirmities are set forth with a humour and pathos which give the work a high rank not only as philosophy but also as literature." M. E. Robinson.

+ — Hibbert J 11:702 Ap '13 1150w

Reviewed by Sydney Waterlow.

+ — Int J Ethics 24:110 O '13 1200w

"In general, Vernon Lee's argument seems to us formidably cogent. It is the most drastic overhauling that the impressionistic philosophies have yet had. Here and there she makes the common slip of confusing the conceptions of fact and truth; but the force of her aggression is hardly impaired by such minor tactical solecisms."

+ — Nation 96:414 Ap 24 '13 1650w

"Readers with a taste for these studies can only be advised to read for themselves this somewhat illuminating and altogether suggestive and stimulating volume."

+ N Y Sun p10 Ja 25 '13 1200w

"This extraordinary capacity for misrepresenting the thinker around whom Vernon Lee's argument centres casts a suspicion over the two volumes. It is interesting to note how Vernon Lee is guilty of the very error which she attributes to the pragmatists, to modernism, to M. Sorel—that is to say, she believes what she most desires to believe." Walter Lippmann.

— N Y Times 18:92 F 23 '13 1700w

+ — N Y Times 18:676 N 30 '13 300w

Outlook 103:501 Mr 1 '13 100w

Spec 110:sup1094 Je 28 '13 100w

LEES, FREDERIC. Wanderings on the Italian Riviera. il $2.50 Little (Eng ed 13-5674)

This "is a book for the traveller who intends to keep to Liguria, and has several weeks to ramble through the history and features of a limited area." (Sat R) "Starting from the frontier at Ventimiglia, Mr. Lees followed the streams up the valleys, visiting everything of interest from the prehistoric caves at Finalmarina to the famous shrine of the Lampedusa Madonna. He gives us a careful historical sketch of the various towns, concerning himself especially with the middle ages, when Genoa made repeated, but futile attempts to bring her neighbours under her control." (Ath)

"Our chief, and certainly unusual, grievance against the author is his almost complete suppression of the personal note. Nor is there much guide-book information as to routes and hotels."

+ — Ath 1912,2:338 S 28 880w

"Combines intimate familiarity with the country and accurate knowledge of the history of its people in very satisfactory proportions."

+ Ind 76:38 O 2 '13 100w

"A pleasant record."

+ Lit D 47:884 N 8 '13 150w

+ N Y Times 18:701 N 30 '13 90w

"Mr. Lee's book is well worth while to the leisurely traveler. The text has been supplemented by not always adequate but certainly striking illustration."

+ — Outlook 105:599 N 15 '13 330w

+ Sat R 114:620 N 16 '12 70w

LE GALLIENNE, RICHARD. Highway to happiness. $1.65 (8c) Morningside press 13-7348

An allegory showing Youth in his search for happiness, accompanied at the outset by his friends Virtue, Truth, Faith and Hope. One by one he is unfaithful to them, turning aside at the call of Pleasure and Folly. He finds Love at last and with her happiness, but with her he cannot stay, for, in the words of wisdom "those who have drunk too deep of the evil sweets of the Valley of Pleasure and have lingered over long in the City of Folly may never though they should at last find it, rest content in the Valley of Peace, but a fever is in their blood forever that drives them back to the old wildness however weary they may be thereof and wise concerning its nothingness."

"Limpid, rhythmical, flooded with sensuous warmth and color—and at times as shallow—the prose of this allegory of human life ripples over the delicately tinted pages."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 270w

"There are many exquisite pictures unfolded on the pages. The dream-like quality is never lost, the effect being much like that which one gets from seeing the reflection of a lovely landscape in a clear pool, something a breath would shatter, yet not to be erased."

+ N Y Times 18:147 Mr 16 '13 530w

LEGGE, EDWARD. King Edward in his true colours; with appreciations of Edward VII by Comte d'Haussonville and Prof. Arminius Vambery. il $4 (3½c) Small

(Eng ed 13-7317)

This book was called forth by Sidney Lee's article on King Edward in the "Dictionary of national biography" which the author terms a "belittling biography." He himself looks on Edward VII as "a great king, one of the greatest in history," and presents him as such in this book. In the various chapters he discusses: The coaching of King Edward; The prince's debts; The baccarat case; The friend of kings; The king at his best, etc.

"Throughout his book Mr. Legge is less the seasoned biographer, weighing his man in a fine, judicial impartiality, than he is the chatty journalist, and one finishes the volume with the feeling that the author is only, or chiefly, authentic where he sets down such matters as the particular cant at which King Edward preferred to wear his top hat. In every guise but the apologist Mr. Legge is delightful. If he leaves King Edward not a greater man, he leaves him more charming than even his great repute for geniality has painted him. The late king's portrait gains many amiable and valuable touches from Mr. Legge's hand."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 300w

"The book is one of chaste pruriency and charitable scandal such as leaves a bad taste in the mouth, but it will afford amusement to readers who can see between the lines and recognize it as a work hung on to the peg of a conspicuous name and made to sell."

+ Lit D 46:791 Ap 5 '13 260w

"Mr. Legge has more than the manner, and less than the logic of a Scotch reviewer."

— Nation 96:393 Ap 17 '13 700w

"There is nothing in this book to discredit or invalidate anything in Sir Sidney Lee's 'Life,' which is more clearly vindicated the more it is examined. The book is thus futile. It is even rather foolish. But there is some amusing gossip in it which will be novel to most readers, and there are some interesting and unfamiliar photographs."

+ — N Y Sun p14 F 22 '13 4300w

"Edward Legge's survey of the life of Edward VII furnishes a very good and much needed antidote to the disparaging biography of the king written for the 'Dictionary of national biography' by Sir Sidney Lee."

+ N Y Times 18:108 Mr 2 '13 1550w

R of Rs 47:507 Ap '13 100w

"It may be that in his desire to explain other circumstances in the late King's career, Sir Sidney Lee did not lay sufficient stress upon the part that he played in making England popular abroad, and in that case Mr. Legge's volume may be of some service."

+ Spec 110:sup123 Ja 25 '13 1000w

LEGOUIS, ÉMILE HYACINTHE. Geoffrey Chaucer; tr. from the French by L. Lailavoix. $1.50 Dutton 13-7365

"Step by step, Professor Legouis records and analyzes the successive stages of Chaucer's career. First comes a biographical chapter, and then follow his makings as a poet, a study of the allegorical poems and the Italian influence, and finally a thorough consideration of 'The Canterbury tales,' first of their sources and composition, and then of their literary and artistic aspects. In his critical account of the primitive story telling methods used by Chaucer . . . Professor Legouis does not attempt to go behind those methods. He understands that they are of the time, and that they must not be measured by later literary developments and more complex literary theories."—Boston Transcript

"One of the best introductions to the study of Chaucer that has been written."

+ A L A Bkl 9:378 My '13

"The 'Chaucer' of M. Legouis has by this time established itself as one of the best introductions to the study of our poet that have yet been written, and we welcome heartily an English edition of it. M. Lailavoix ought to have indicated where he disagrees with the original author. Thus the last paragraph on p. 161 is not only not written by M. Legouis, but even gives advice directly contrary to that in the text—advice in which, it is true, we heartily concur."

+ — Ath 1913:138 Ja 11 200w

"To them both [Chaucer and Shakespeare] Professor Legouis's volume offers an excellent introduction." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p28 F 12 '13 1200w

"We do not hesitate to pronounce it the most stimulating and suggestive book on Chaucer, of its kind, that has appeared in many years. M. Legouis brings to his task exceptional qualifications: wide familiarity with the literature of both France and England; a keen delight, we may well believe, in the special type of literature—narrative poetry—represented by Chaucer; sympathy with the point of view of the poet; and a distinctive and trenchant style."

+ — Dial 54:185 Mr 1 '13 650w

"His introduction to the study of Chaucer is as commendable a work as we would naturally expect from the author of 'The youth of Wordsworth.'"

+ Ind 74:260 Ja 30 '13 80w

"The present translation by reason of his additions and revisions, becomes more useful and authoritative than its original."

+ Nation 96:264 Mr 13 '13 160w

+ N Y Sun p34 Ap 5 '13 900w

"To such as we, this excellent work, translated so well by M. Lailavoix, comes like the dawn of a springtime morning." T. Walsh.

+ N Y Times 18:65 F 9 '13 1550w

"Lovers of Chaucer will find this criticism and appreciation of that most human of poets a delightful contrast to many of those scholarly treatises which have given us so often the dried fruit of research unsoftened by the juice of understanding. This is a very palatable book."

+ Outlook 103:735 Mr 29 '13 460w

+ Sat R 115:338 Mr 15 '13 200w

"Although one may disagree with M. Legouis's main argument, his book is more than a discussion of origins. The writer is a scholar with a genuine appreciation of his subject, and as an essay in literary criticism his book is worth careful study. The book may be thoroughly recommended as a companion to one of the most fascinating studies in English literature."

+ — Spec 110:500 Mr 22 '13 700w

LEGROS, C. V. Fabre, poet of science; with a¹⁰ preface by J. H. Fabre; tr. by Bernard Miall il $3 (4½c) Century A13-1874

A sympathetically drawn picture of the life and work of the poet naturalist, Jean-Henri Fabre. The biographer has abstracted from the letters of Fabre and from long conversations with him many memories which fill the gaps in the great teacher's own "Biography of a solitary student" taken for the basis of the narrative. The utmost care has been exercised to free Fabre from the errors, exaggerations and legends which have collected about him and to set all things in their true light.

+ A L A Bkl 10:58 O '13

"An excellent English translation."

+ Ath 1913:2:234 S 6 50w

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 23 '13 750w

LEGROS, C. V. —Continued.

"In the richness of his sources of information the biographer has been fortunate. The spirit and style of the work are worthy of its subject. Even in translation its felicities of manner give delight, as where reference is made to the veteran entomologist's junior admirers and friends."

+ Dial 55:151 S 1 '13 450w

"Enthusiasm sometimes leads Mr. Legros away from the necessary business of reciting fact; another biography will be needed, chronologically arranged and precisely dated. But his serves the purpose in so far as it gives a rational and convincing portrait of a great man. It is evidence of the vitality of the portrait Dr. Legros has drawn, that it emerges safely from this villainous translation. A worse translation could hardly be made."

+ Ind 75:687 S 13 '13 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Comstock.

+ Lit D 47:687 O 18 '13 2250w

"A fascinating biography."

+ N Y Times 18:460 S 7 '13 250w

+ N Y Times 18:481 S 21 '13 1300w

"This biography is particularly interesting because it treats of a man still in the flesh."

+ Outlook 105:45 S 6 '13 750w

"Dr Legros has given us a rare biography . . . which Mr. Bernard Miall has translated into good, unaffected English."

+ Sat R 116:307 S 6 '13 250w

"One need not be familiar with his writings to find in the pages of this biography a wonderful inspiration for greater achievement in any field of endeavor. Those who already sit at the feet of the aged naturalist will hail this volume with delight, while those who have yet in store the pleasure of meeting the man through his own pen, can have no happier introduction than this."

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 1550w

LEITH, CHARLES KENNETH. Structural geology. il *$1.50 (3½c) Holt 13-17102

A work in which those structures which the author terms secondary—i. e. those structures developed in rocks by earth movements—such as bedding and igneous structures, which are given prominence. Primary structures, such as bedding and igneous structures, which receive adequate treatment in stratigraphic and petrographic geology, are touched upon here only incidentally. The purpose of the study of structural geology is taken to be the "interpretation of rock structures, not for themselves, but for the light they may throw on stratigraphic problems, on economic geology, on the causes underlying the general configuration of the earth, and on the earth's history."

LEITH, CHARLES KENNETH, and LEITH, A. T. Summer and winter on Hudson bay. il $2.50 Cartwell pte. co., Madison, Wis. 12-18464

"The book is a by-product of a geological expedition under direction of Prof. Charles K. Leith. . . . The geological results of the trip appeared in 'Economic geology' for April 1910. The present volume is given to more general observations on the region visited, which covered the entire southern and eastern shores of James bay, and the eastern shore of Hudson bay to a point fifty miles north of Richmond Gulf. Some interesting comments are made as to the effect of the Hudson bay company on the region under its influence."—Nation

A L A Bkl 9:244 F '13

"The volume is without any literary art, but it has the air of actuality which comes of personal experience. The authors undertook the trip for scientific purposes, but its results from this point of view are only slightly indicated in their book."

+ Ind 74:1450 Je 26 '13 130w

"Does not take the reader far enough into the Boreal monotony to contract scorbutic affection of the mental mechanism, and one finds it a decided relief as a gradual return towards literature of a more human temperature."

+ Nation 97:34 J1 10 '13 500w

LEONARD, MARY FINLEY. Christmas Tree house. il *$1.50 (2½c) Crowell 13-21477

A sequel to "Everyday Susan." The same group of young people, Susan, her friend Holiday, Dick, and other boys and girls are introduced into this story, Holiday, when her own home burns, goes to live in Christmas Tree house, a picturesque old mansion which becomes the center of the winter's merry-makings among her young friends.

"The author knows how to create an unforgettable atmosphere." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:445 D '13 60w

"The demand for wholesome, well-written books for girls is always beyond the supply, but 'Christmas Tree house' is of the right sort."

+ Outlook 105:549 N 8 '13 50w

LEONARD, ROBERT MAYNARD, comp. Pageant of English prose. *50c Oxford

In this volume are gathered five hundred prose passages selected from three hundred and twenty-five authors. "Most of the authors are British, but he honors Washington, Jefferson, Channing, Webster, Irving, Prescott, Bancroft, Emerson, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Holmes, Lincoln, Poe, Motley, Dana, Thoreau, Lowell, Whitman and Bret Harte with inclusion." (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Leonard has shown once again a catholic taste, and we are glad to find that most of his passages are of reasonable length."

+ Ath 1912,2:729 D 14 300w

"Not the least charming of all the 500 selections here compiled is the editor's introduction. In these days of reviving pageantry, nothing better could be offered for the quiet hour or desultory reading."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 320w

"Passages selected with rare good judgment."

+ Dial 54:149 F 16 '13 30w

"On the whole, the work has been done capably."

+ Sat R 114:776 D 21 '12 50w

"Mr. Leonard has collected not the best but the most characteristic passages of English prose, and his collection thus loses much of its intrinsic value. Many of the passages by the less famous writers are, to say the least of it, dull, and we cannot help regretting that the principle of 'one writer, one passage' has not been broken more often than it has."

+ Spec 110:69 Ja 11 '13 100w

LEONARD, WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING. Vaunt of man, and other poems. *$1.25 Huebsch 12-22277

"Tho the personal note is strong in William Ellery Leonard's little book the personality is sufficiently generalized and typical to give it a broader interest than most subjective work." (Ind) "As we turn the pages . . . comes the conviction that this is no little book of academic diversions, but poetry—sincere, passionate, and beautiful." (N Y Times)

"This considerable collection of short poems has a high average of merit. They register many personal emotions and experiences, which through the alchemy of a highly poetic nature become freighted with great spiritual significance and poignancy. Keenly intellectual, even academic, they yet show a large love for humanity and an understanding sympathy with nature."

+ A L A Bkl 9:196 Ja '13

"Mr. Leonard's poems are good to read and to ponder over. They get at the realities of life, and have something worth while to say about them; and always in a grave, measured, and exalted expression." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:244 Mr 16 '13 450w

"There is poetry here, with charity, nervous force, a broad outlook on human life, and a fine appreciation of intellectual interests."

+ Ind 73:1261 N 28 '12 130w

"If there is some courting of the grandiose mood in Mr. Leonard's work, his style is often direct, even colloquial. His verse shows variety and well-managed ingenuity. This is only another way of saying that he is well equipped to do significant work when once his aim and purpose gain sharpness."

+ — Nation 96:233 Mr 6 '13 650w

"With the exception of the rather trite sentiments entitled 'For the new year,' there is nothing in 'The vaunt of man' that does not deserve high praise. Mr. Leonard is a true poet, no aesthete, no poseur, merely an honest man able and willing to reveal his feelings in rhyme. American literature is the gainer by his conscientious work." Joyce Kilmer.

+ — N Y Times 18:23 Ja 19 '13 630w

"Mr. Leonard is primarily a thinker. His art is the child of a deep knowledge and experience, and heart and mind join hands in his verse."

+ R of Rs 47:374 Mr '13 100w

LEPSZY, LEONARD. Cracow, the royal capital of ancient Poland; tr. by R. Dyboski. il *$3.50 Stokes (Eng 13-89)

This book is an abridgment of a work issued in 1904 by the Cracow society of antiquaries. "The Austrian government itself has subsidized the venture, which is well calculated to fulfil its main purpose and attract attention to a city none too well known in the English-speaking world." (Ath) "One of its chapters, on the municipal organization of the ancient city, its guilds, their share in its life, their relation to its era of commercial importance, and its efforts toward democracy is particularly interesting. Other chapters take up with some detail the origins of Cracow, its growth until the end of the fifteenth century, and its subsequent history until the present time, while two are devoted to the story of its development in architecture, painting, sculpture, and the applied arts." (N Y Times)

"Pan' Lepszy is an efficient guide to the city's history and ancient monuments, and, ably assisted by the photographer, he makes us realize the architectural beauties of the cathedral, the major churches, and public buildings, the projectors of which were now inspired by the Gothic German masters and now by the Italian renaissance."

+ Ath 1912,2:561 My 18 630w

"A handsome book with much out-of-the-way information between its covers."

+ N Y Times 17:689 N 24 '12 200w

LE ROY, ÉDOUARD LOUIS EMMANUEL JULIEN. New philosophy of Henri Bergson; tr. by Vincent Benson. *$1.25 (3c) Holt 13-8368

"The body of this book consists of two articles by M. Le Roy which appeared in the 'Revue des deux mondes' in February last year, and are here printed intact. They aim at presenting, in as brief a form as possible, the general trend of M. Bergson's philosophy, which, the author strives to show, sets out to enrich intelligence by instinct and demands an account of all the facts, its keynote being intuition. The present volume also contains, in the form of continuous notes, some additional explanations on points which did not come with the scope of investigation in the original articles."—Ath

+ A L A Bkl 10:58 O '13

+ Ath 1913,1:355 Mr 29 150w

+ Bib World 42:179 S '13 450w

"The notes are helpful in leading the reader to a clearer understanding of the things discussed in the first part of the work." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 4 '13 700w

Reviewed by E. E. Slosson.

+ Ind 74:1383 Je 19 '13 430w

"Over one very important point, however, critics would have a right to complain. M. Le Roy does not give anywhere in this book a satisfactory account of M. Bergson's theory of Time. The question of Time is so fundamental that its omission must certainly be admitted to be a serious defect in a book otherwise deserving nothing but praise." Karin Costelloe.

+ — Int J Ethics 24:102 O '13 800w

"Of the many books which have been written of late concerning Bergson and his philosophy, this one seems to be particularly sane and accurate."

+ N Y Times 18:429 Ag 10 '13 130w

+ N Y Times 18:677 N 30 '13 170w

"As an interpreter, the book is not equal to E. Hermann's volume on Eucken and Bergson. Better than either, to get Bergson's point of view, is his own 'Creative evolution,' not more difficult for the thoughtful reader than the smaller volume of his interpretation."

— Outlook 104:532 Jl 5 '13 70w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 70w

LESTER, CHARLES STANLEY. Historia Jesus: a study of the synoptic gospels. *$2.50 Putnam 12-14725

"This book is written for intelligent laymen by a retired clergyman. Its object is to discover as far as may be the real Jesus of history behind the interpretation of His life and work in the Gospels." (Ath) "The book falls into two main sections. Among introductory matters, the sources, the chronology, Jewish belief in the Messiah, legends of birth, the descent of Jesus, and the leaven of the Pharisees are subjects of discussion. Next, on the basis of the Synoptic Gospels, the following subjects are treated: Jesus in Capernaum, the period of wandering, Jesus on the way to Jerusalem, and the Passion. Finally the results and prospects are summed up, and references are given to literature on the subject." (Bib World)

"One would expect to find him dealing with Schweitzer's 'The quest of the historical Jesus,' and with the myth theory recently popularized by Drews. There is, however, nothing to indicate that he has gone into these questions. His treatment is certainly open to the charge that his historic Jesus is much what he, as a sensible and well-intentioned twentieth-century man, would like Him to be. The author's ideas of Jewish and pagan religions strikes us as superficial."

— Ath 1912,2:341 S 28 200w

"In his use of the sources the author has not done independent or original work. He seems to have followed the views of Wellhausen without subjecting them to any rigid criticism. The significance of the volume lies in its point of approach and the worth which it attaches to Jesus in the light of modern criticism."

+ — Bib World 41:214 Mr '13 300w

"While this work is more spicy and popular than that of Dr. Gilbert, it lacks the balanced judgment, scholarly grasp of materials and steady search for the truth which distinguish that author's admirable volume. Nevertheless Mr. Lester has made a helpful contribution to the literature which aims primarily to make Jesus live in the historic imagination of men today as the carpenter of Nazareth, the religious teacher of Galilee and the victim of hatred and greed in Jerusalem."

+ — Ind 74:654 Mr 20 '13 170w

"The author does not show sufficient scholarship for his task. He has read the critics with too great credulity and has not always understood their meaning. He announces as established results views which are still under debate. More serious even than glaring distortions of fact is the author's want of appreciation of the historical significance and religious greatness of Jesus."

— Nation 96:419 Ap 24 '13 150w

LESTER, CHARLES STANLEY—Continued.

"That we are indebted to the higher criticism for vindicating the virile strength and heroism of Jesus' character, will be news both to the professional critics and to very many other students of the Gospels."

— Outlook 101:983 Ag 24 '12 150w

LEUBA, JAMES HENRY. Psychological study of religion. *$2 (2c) Macmillan 12-21976
Descriptive note in December, 1912.

Reviewed by E. L. Talbert.

Am J Soc 19:270 S '13 670w

"Professor Leuba is one of the pioneers in the scientific study of religion, and his investigations are marked by a rigorous and thorough application of the scientific method." E. S. Ames.

+ — Am J Theol 17:140 Ja '13 850w

+ A L A Bkl 9:327 Ap '13

Reviewed by W. P. Wallis.

Ann Am Acad 45:282 Ja '13 400w

Ath 1912,2:621 N 23 40w

"The book is a painstaking and masterly work by one of our most courageous and competent scholars." G. B. Foster.

+ Bib World 41:65 Ja '13 1100w

"Professor Leuba's book is throughout a stimulating contribution to the subject. It presents a great deal of interesting material; and it proves that religion and religious experience can be submitted to ordinary rational investigation, and can be handled in accordance with the ordinary principles of objective research. No one who will be at the pains to read the book carefully will fail to profit from it, even though he be forced to dissent from some of its more fundamental positions." S. A. Cook.

+ — Hibbert J 12:227 O '13 1950w

"We might be persuaded to take the claims of Professor Leuba more seriously if his confidence and enthusiasm were more fully matched by the breadth of his knowledge and the precision and consistency of his thinking."

— Ind 74:256 Ja 30 '13 700w

"This is a notable book in its field; one of the best. It is lucid in style and simple in arrangement, and presents sanely an original and highly suggestive analysis of the great problem. An appendix contains all the definitions of religion which have had any vogue or influence, a valuable collection for comparative study." J. T. Shotwell.

+ — J Philos 10:326 Je 5 '13 900w

"Many thoughtful readers will refuse to follow Professor Leuba in all his conclusions about religion. But no one will be able to read his book impartially without admiration for his plain speaking on a most important subject."

+ — Nation 96:341 Ap 3 '13 1300w

"A very rare quality informs this entire book—a strict, intellectual integrity."

+ No Am 197:426 Mr '13 1200w

Reviewed by J. B. Pratt.

Psychol Bull 10:205 My 15 '13 1450w

LEVY, DONALD M. Modern copper smelting; being lectures delivered at Birmingham univ. greatly extended and adapted, and with an introd. on the history, uses and properties of copper. Il *$3.50 Lippincott (Eng ed 12-29972)

"The book is based partly on a study of the practice as conducted at some of the most important copper-smelting works in America, and of the records of the advances in the metallurgy of copper contained in recent technical literature. Incorporated in it are also the personal experiences of the author during a stay at the works at Anaconda and at others in Tennessee." (Nature) Contents: History and development of copper; Progress of smelting practice; Price and cost of production of copper; Uses of copper; Physical, mechanical and chemical properties; Compounds of copper; Varieties of commercial copper; Ores of copper and preliminary treatment; Modern copper smelting practice;

Reverberatory smelting practice; Blast furnace practice; Bessemerizing of copper mattes; Development of the process; The converter; Grade of matte; Operation of the process; Systems of working; The purification and refining of crude copper.

"More descriptive and also more condensed than Peters's 'Practice of copper smelting.' "

+ A L A Bkl 9:244 F '13

"The foregoing criticisms are offered in a friendly spirit, as the book is a good one, an excellent summary of modern copper-smelting practice, and should be in the hands of every student of this subject." W. G.

+ — Nature 90:484 Ja 2 '13 420w

LEWIS, ALFRED HENRY. Faro Nell and her friends. Il *$1.25 (2c) Dillingham 13-9288

A group of new Wolfville yarns, twelve in number, in which Faro Nell, Doc. Peets, Texas Thompson, Monte and other old acquaintances reappear. The titles of the stories are: Dead-shot Baker; Old man Enright's uncle; Cynthia; Old Monte, official drunkard; How the Mocking-bird was won; That Wolfville-Red Dog fourth; Propriety Pratt, hypnotist; That Turner person; Red Mike; How Tutt shot Texas Thompson; The funeral of old Hott; Spelling Book Ben.

"There is not quite the same freshness and spontaneity to these later stories that belonged to the earlier accounts of Wolfville, and occasionally the reader feels that a flagging imagination is being spurred forward. Nevertheless, the book is amusing."

+ — N Y Times 18:290 My 11 '13 220w

LEWIS, ARTHUR D. Syndicalism and the general strike. *$2.50 (5½c) Small (Eng ed 12-27430)

In this book the author presents the message of syndicalism as it actually reaches the workingman. "In penny pamphlets and street-corner speeches," he says, "things are to be heard that are not known to readers of liberal or conservative newspapers. . . . There is perhaps wisdom to be found in these low places which is not known to the cultured and educated." He has accordingly drawn largely on pamphlets and current propagandist literature. His chapters are headed: Popular ideas of syndicalism in France; Monsieur Georges Sorel and his ideas; Italy; Germany; England; The general strike; Other countries; Objections to syndicalism; Some general reflections. An annotated list of works consulted by the author completes the work.

"The subject, no doubt, interests him hugely, but he has by no means made it his own, and his many excuses serve rather to accuse him of rushing into print without due preparation than to disarm criticism."

+ — Ath 1912,2:160 Ag 17 450w

N Y Times 18:261 My 4 '13 1600w

"Its value to American readers lies chiefly in its interpretation of the European Syndicalist movement."

+ — R of Rs 47:637 My '13 130w

"It is a pity that he did not write his book with a little more deliberation, for much of the interesting material which is brought together loses its value by the scrappy manner in which it is presented. His own opinions on the matter are not very clearly indicated."

+ — Spec 109:308 Ag 31 '12 450w

"His book is unsystematic and difficult to read." L. Levine.

+ — Survey 31:166 N 8 '13 450w

LI HUNG CHANG. Memoirs of Li Hung Chang; ed. by William Francis Mannix, with an introd. by Hon. I. W. Foster. Il *$3 Houghton 13-22226

The contents of this volume have been selected and translated from the diaries of the Chinese statesman, who seems to have been an untiring diarist. His relations with "Chinese" Gordon, his visits to Russia, England, and the United States, and the Boxer uprising, are some of the matters touched upon.

"An important commentary on the history of China during the period of awakening to western impulses."

+ A L A Bkl 10:142 D '13

"The journals are generally pervaded by sound sense and some wit. The translators have done their work well. We notice only two slips. The style employed is just what Li might have adopted if English, flavoured with American colloquialisms, had been his native language."

+ — Ath 1913,2:448 O 25 1850w

"Mr. Mannix has edited Li's memoirs with excellent discretion, adding necessary explanations. In the translated passages there are too many examples of questionable grammar, and some of the sentences are awkwardly expressed, but then Li himself often wrote hastily. The book lacks an index; a very brief one would have been all that was necessary. On the whole the memoirs are most entertaining and instructive." N. H. Dole.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 O 15 '13 2550w

"These translated extracts have been wisely selected and grouped around themes of special interest to readers in English-speaking countries. They cannot fail to attract attention, for they reveal the many-sided character of a truly remarkable man and constitute a noteworthy commentary on the course of Chinese history during the period of the awakening of the nation to western impulses."

+ Ind 76:135 O 16 '13 1550w

"The volume is an excellent and adequate monument to a great man and statesman."

+ N Y Sun p11 O 18 '13 1300w

Spec 111:661 O 25 '13 520w

LICHTENBERGER, HENRI. Germany and its evolution in modern times; tr. from the French by A. M. Ludovici. *$2.50 (2½c) Holt A13-1075

This work on modern Germany, written first for a French audience, treats, in four books, of its Economic evolution, Political evolution, Evolution of religious and political thought, and Evolution in art. Germany offers a specially rich field for the study of those evolutionary changes which set the nineteenth century apart from the periods that preceded it; for "of all the nations of Europe, the German people is one of those among whom scientific reason and organizing will have displayed the most extraordinary prowess and modern subjectivism has blossomed most luxuriantly. But it is also one among whom the religious spirit, respect for tradition and authority, has retained the greatest strength." (Introduction)

"The author has no grasp of economic principles, often abuses economic terms, and constantly sacrifices economic facts to his rhetoric." C. D.

— Am Econ R 3:642 S '13 80w

"M. Lichtenberger may be studied with interest, but in reading him we have always a doubt as to when he wrote his book. Figures which show the commerce of Germany in 1905 are of no value now, especially when the argument concerns the rapid growth of trade. But all the statistics are stale, and this lack of freshness makes us wonder what the author means when he talks of the 'last election,' and other events where an exact date is needed."

+ — Ath 1913,1:213 F 22 600w

"In the preparation of the book for English readers the translator might well have employed a few foot-notes to bring the text up to date." F: A. Ogg.

+ — Dial 54:417 My 16 '13 550w

"The translator should have annotated the book and brought it up to date."

+ — Ind 74:921 Ap 24 '13 180w

"We regard this book as a memorable addition to the many books which have been written to describe the progress of nations."

+ Lit D 47:180 Ag 2 '13 650w

"For thoroughness, impartiality, acumen, breadth of view, and elevation of spirit, as well as for a certain engaging kindness and sympathy in personal temper, this review of the evolution of Germany by a French professor is a very noteworthy, a surprising work."

+ N Y Times 18:229 Ap 20 '13 1300w

"His account of the political events leading up to the reconstruction of the Empire seems to us particularly noteworthy."

+ Outlook 104:326 Ag 9 '13 150w

+ R of Rs 47:636 My '13 200w

"How far such generalizations can escape vagueness except at the expense of truth the reader must decide for himself. He will at least find M. Lichtenberger a writer of considerable clarity and distinction."

+ — Spec 110:243 F 8 '13 300w

LIFE mask, by the author of To M. L. G. *$1.30 (1½c) Stokes 13-3301

The story of a young woman who has spent ten years of her life in prison. Upon her release she feels that all avenues of happiness must be closed to her but finds gradually that the old love of life is returning. In a secluded corner of Spain where she goes with a devoted servant to seek peace in seclusion she finds the lover whom she feels she cannot marry because of the blot on her life. Then, in an unexpected manner, proof of her innocence comes.

"Possesses in a superlative degree the qualities which grip the reader's interest and impress the memory."

+ Ath 1913,1:382 Ap 5 16w

"To take material of this sort and develop it into a story that is neither melodramatic nor cheap, but carries the reader along to a logical and eminently satisfactory solution of all the issues, obtaining its strong effects by sheer simplicity, is an achievement which deserves an honest commendation." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:206 Ap '13 470w

"The earlier chapters move somewhat slowly. The little stories of rambles around Granada, seeing the Alhambra and other points of historic interest, are well applied touches of local color, which forms an enchanting background for a strong romance."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 230w

"It is not a pleasant book to read, but skill is shown in the description of the two women."

— + N Y Sun p4 Mr 22 '13 110w

"All this is done very skillfully, and with a simple sincerity in the telling that is most engaging. The character of the elderly companion is made quite real and alive, and her homely dialect, that of an uneducated southern woman is handled with knowledge and good taste. The other characters are rather shadowy. The man, for instance, is compact of romance and sentiment, and is of the sort that is quite too good to be true."

+ — N Y Times 18:178 Mr 30 '13 700w

"A rather disagreeable story."

— Spec 110:663 Ap 19 '13 20w

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY. Mr. Pratt's patients. il *$1.30 (2c) Appleton 13-10544

"When Mrs. Sophronia Gott told Mr. Pratt, by the ancient and highly respectable method of shaking tea leaves in a cup, about the splendid fortune which was coming to him, that gentleman was decidedly skeptical. . . . Nevertheless, Mrs. Gott and the tea leaves were right, and presently, after an encounter with an aristocratic spinster, a bulldog of most ferocious disposition and a couple of drunken men, Mr. Pratt found himself installed as gen-

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY—Continued.
 al factotum in the 'Sea Breeze bluff sanitarium for right living and rest,' his good fortune fairly begun—though it was some time before he realized that fact, and in the meanwhile a number of humorous and interesting things happened."—N Y Times

A L A Bkl 9:455 Je '13 ✚

+ Ath 1913,2:253 S 13 50w

"Mr. Pratt tells this [tale] himself in the fine old salty fashion that gives Mr. Lincoln's stories a distinct flavor all their own."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '13 270w

"The doings at the sanitarium are amusing enough and the story runs smoothly for Mr. Lincoln has acquired the art of expanding without betraying the thin spots. Yet, in a way, the tale is disappointing, for it deals chiefly with the people of the summer boarder class. He has done better work, but this story is brighter reading than most of this season's fiction."

+ N Y Sun p3 My 17 '13 250w

+ N Y Sun p12 Je 14 '13 50w

"It is an entertaining yarn, with more than one good laugh in it."

+ N Y Times 18:348 Je 8 '13 230w

"Another amusing and racy story of Cape Cod life."

+ Outlook 104:343 Je 14 '13 30w

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 29 '13 300w

LINCOLN, NATALIE SUMNER. Lost despatch. il $1.30 Appleton 13-3769

"A story constructed with Washington as the central locus, and with the web of circumstance weaving itself around Miss Nancy Newton, a rebel spy who falls into danger through the strange disappearance of an important despatch. Miss Newton, made to swear allegiance to the Confederacy by her dying father, acts as a bearer of secret information to Richmond. Loved by a Union officer, Major Robert Goddard, she finds herself in a distressing predicament upon her arrest under the double and sinister charge of treason and murder." (Boston Transcript)

Bookm 37:343 My '13 420w

"The plot is cleverly conceived and well elaborated."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 12 '13 130w

"A confused and dull tale."

— N Y Sun p4 F 22 '13 110w

"The action of the story is rapid, and there is much exciting incident, some of it ingeniously contrived. The book will add to the reputation of the author, whose 'The Trevor case' is known as a clever detective novel."

+ N Y Times 18:126 Mr 9 '13 250w

LIND-AF-HAGEBY, LIZZY. August Strindberg: the spirit of revolt: studies and impressions. il $2 Appleton 13-35826

"Miss Hageby offers a full synopsis and estimate of Strindberg's work in historical drama which will do much toward bringing it to the fore in public attention. . . . She has had access to the complete and colossal edition of Strindberg, to be brought out presently by a publishing house of Stockholm. Many of the plays and novels which Miss Hageby is able to analyze and discuss have never been translated into French or German, whence most of our renditions come, third hand, so that she is able to present the first review which has yet appeared of August Strindberg in toto." (N Y Times)

"A sympathetic, thoughtful and interesting appreciation of this morbid genius."

+ A L A Bkl 10:101 N '13

"With slight reservations, Miss Lind-af-Hageby is to be congratulated on an ably executed piece of work, which will supply, for many English readers, a key-plan to the mass of Strindberg translations now upon the market."

+ — Ath 1913,1:642 Je 14 600w

"Miss Lind-af-Hageby indulges in much biographical detail, the effect of which is to modify the view usually taken of her subject, but the most suggestive section of her study is that in which she endeavors to 'place' Strindberg as a dramatist. Where Miss Lind-af-Hageby partly fails in her study is in her omission to discount the extent to which Strindberg allowed his personal experiences to color his views on all topics." H: C. Shelley.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Je 14 '13 450w

"Little is to be learned from 'August Strindberg's studies and impressions' that is not discoverable in Strindberg's own writings." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p8 S 13 '13 600w

"Miss Lind-af-Hageby has set forth the facts of Strindberg's life with much fullness and without any desire to excuse her subject of great moral blame. Towards the literary works she is a bit less critical though showing none of the unthinking adulation with which the book market has lately been flooded."

+ Nation 97:486 N 20 '13 330w

"We could wish that Miss Hageby's work had been a little longer considered and a little more closely knit, but it at least has the advantage in its timeliness of helping to right so much the sooner the distorted estimate of Strindberg which has been spread abroad."

+ — N Y Times 18:473 S 14 '13 1050w

"Miss Lind-af-Hageby has scarcely attempted more than to put together the confessions of Strindberg, with a few details as to his life and a chronological summary of his works. This modest undertaking is pursued with tact and humility. Where Miss Hageby offers criticism, she is reasonable and sympathetic without being profound. She is widely and intelligently read in the books of modern Europe; but, beyond an occasional suggestion, she does not attempt to fix the position of Strindberg in modern literature, to present his character in the round, or to define his progress. What especially we miss in Miss Hageby's book—perhaps the one thing of value Strindberg has left for his biographers to do—is definite information as to the people who surrounded him."

+ — Sat R 115:747 Je 14 '13 1350w

"A careful study."

+ Spec 110:sup1092 Je 28 '13 200w

LIPPERT, FRIEDA E., and HOLMES, ARTHUR. When to send for the doctor and what to do before the doctor comes. il $1.25 Lippincott 13-9276

The book "contains most of the conventional information concerning emergencies and the way of meeting them before the doctor comes. It deals more particularly with the care of children and, as the questions are approached from the psychological point of view, it differs from other books of its class in seeking to aid in the recognition of defects and conditions not commonly reckoned as emergencies."—Nation

"The authors write from ample experience with exceptional as well as normal children and their advice is sound and easy to follow. Very full index."

+ A L A Bkl 10:101 N '13

"The book ought to help many parents to seek good advice early. The language is often rather too feminine in character."

+ — Nation 97:270 S 18 '13 110w

LIPPMANN, JULIE MATHILDE. Making over Martha. $1.20 (1½c) Holt 13-22208

In this story, a sequel to "Martha by-the-day," we have the genial Martha, erstwhile of the scrubbing brush, settled as a resident of a New England village. Here the well-meaning neighbors and patronizing "summer people" attempt to make her over to their liking. Needless to say Martha has more to do with their remaking, and, as in the earlier story, she has a hand in a love affair.

"It is in Martha that the reader is interested and he will care for the complications she handles only for the pleasure of noting the manner in which she disposes of them."

+ — N Y Sun p6 N 1 '13 100w

+ Outlook 105:711 N 29 '13 70w

LIPPMANN, WALTER. Preface to politics. 7 *$1.50 Kennerley 13-18629

"The underlying idea of the book is well expressed in the quotation on the title page, 'A god wilt thou create for thyself out of thy seven devils.' As we understand it, the author's notion is very much like this: the evil and suffering in the world exist largely if not entirely through the misdirection and misapplication of men's desires, which are neither good nor bad in themselves. The passions of men need to be diverted into useful channels. Institutions and philosophies and schemes of politics arise as helps to men in the process of gaining their ends or justification of those ends when they are gained."—Boston Transcript

"A preface to politics' is its own complete and sufficient justification. In many respects it is the ablest brief book of its kind published during the last ten years. It has the supreme virtue of clearness, aided by a style that is incisive and compelling. Mr. Lippmann has an excellent historical background; he illustrates his points by apt quotations from widely varied sources. Not a few of his judgments are amazingly shrewd, amazingly sound. Our chief criticism is directed against what we feel is an internal inconsistency in Mr. Lippmann's attitude towards men. Now he regards them as animals, bundles of passions; then he speaks of them as superior to their environment. 'A preface to politics' is a stimulating and important new book." H. E. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 14 '13 1850w

Reviewed by Wallace Rice.

+ Dial 55:114 Ag 16 '13 300w

"It is not in his constructive suggestions that he is most profitable or most entertaining; it is rather his remarks upon things as they are and his criticisms of men as they live that are stimulating."

+ — Nation 97:241 S 11 '13 500w

"The pleasant impression of Mr. Lippmann's title is more than borne out by a reading of his pages. It is a refreshing book, first, because of its temper, and, secondly, because of its soundness. It is unusual to find so young a thinker with so much philosophic detachment, with such an unheated temper in discussion, and, altogether, with so much wisdom." Bliss Carman.

+ — N Y Times 18:315 My 25 '13 850w

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:550 S '13 250w

"Brilliant essay."

+ R of Rs 48:119 J1 '13 70w

"A preface to politics, carries to an unwonted extreme the ultra-modern disinclination to be dogmatic. As [the author] shows facility in collecting the most widely various thoughts his book is by no means uninteresting. But it is not compact, it is not coherent, and it leads nowhere."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 450w

"It is a pleasure to recommend this book. It is worthy of being read carefully by every one who is interested in the new spirit in American political life. Clear thinking and plain speaking concerning the things that are foremost today, are its salient characteristics." Leo Mannheimer.

+ Survey 30:648 Ag 23 '13 300w

LITCHFIELD, GRACE DENIO. Burning question. *$1.25 (2c) Putnam 13-3071

The story of an ambitious woman who leaves her husband and little daughter that she may go abroad to develop her musical ability. Fearing that he will follow her she sends back a report of her death. Some years later the husband marries again and learns, just one hour after the ceremony, that his first wife is still alive. With all signs pointing to a tragedy the author yet contrives a happy ending and does so without resorting to the usual expedient of sudden death. A reconciliation between husband and wife and the appearance on the scene of another man bring about the pleasant solution.

Ath 1913,1:432 Ap 19 50w

"There is an amount of question and answer treatment of the problems of divorce, marital duty and kindred subjects which has little resemblance to everyday conversation."

— Ind 74:925 Ap 24 '13 70w

"The situation upon which Miss Litchfield's story is based is so far-fetched that it makes the whole structure of the book as artificial as the manner in which it is worked out. There are a number of dramatic situations and often some ingenuity of invention. Moreover, Miss Litchfield always writes with refinement. Neither the story nor the people in it, however, have much connection with life as we actually know it."

+ — N Y Times 18:98 F 23 '13 200w

LITZMANN, BERTHOLD. Clara Schumann. 2v il *$8 Macmillan A13-1756

Published in the German original in 1902 this work occupied three volumes. "For English readers it has been materially reduced with the aid of Miss Eugenie Schumann and others and with the author's sanction. Each volume has a portrait of Clara Schumann and each volume has a separate index." (Boston Transcript) The English edition appears in a translation by Grace E. Hadow and contains also an introduction by W. H. Hadow.

"There are many corrections which could easily be made in a new edition. On the whole, however, the translation is good."

+ — Ath 1913,1:314 Mr 15 500w

"It is a biography not to be neglected by anyone who would understand the currents of music in the nineteenth century. It is stimulating, edifying and often quite dramatic." N. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 700w

"There has not appeared for a long time a work of such commanding interest and importance to the music-lover as this." L: J. Block.

+ — Dial 54:453 Je 1 '13 1850w

+ Nation 96:604 Je 12 '13 1100w

"This book is far too long, though Miss Hadow has used her knife freely in cutting it down. But it is a mine of information, and will be used by biographers not of Madame Schumann alone, but of many others whose names recur, and Mr. W. H. Hadow's introduction is solid and useful."

+ — Sat R 115:400 Mr 29 '13 230w

"This life is not a critical biography; the author was too closely in touch with Madam Schumann to adopt such an attitude; but it is a splendid memorial to a noble woman and a great artist, and it owes its abiding value to the fact that it is mainly told in her own letters and diaries."

+ — Spec 110:718 Ap 26 '13 1950w

LIVERMORE, WILLIAM ROSCOE. Story of the civil war. v 3 2 pts il *$5 Putnam 99-1605

This two part work is a continuation of the history of the civil war begun by John Codman Ropes who lived to finish volumes 1 and 2 only of his projected work. "The history is carried on on the lines sketched by Mr. Ropes in the first volumes, though he left no memoranda for his successor to work up, and Col. Livermore's investigations are wholly his own." (N Y Sun) [He] discusses the campaigns of 1863 down to July 10, and also gives an account of the fighting on the Mississippi from April, 1862, down to the middle of the following year. The operations described include the first, second and third advances on Vicksburg, the Bayou expeditions, the campaign of Chancel-lersville and the campaign of Gettysburg." (N Y Times)

LIVERMORE, WILLIAM ROSCOE—Continued.

Am Hist R 18:875 J1 '13 80w

+ — A L A Bkl 10:58 O '13 ✱

Ath 1913,1:520 My 10 80w

"Altogether, if Colonel Livermore has not written the ideal history of the civil war he has furnished us with a most serviceable contribution to our knowledge of that tremendous struggle." E. W. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 23 '13 1400w

Reviewed by W: E. Dodd.

+ Dial 55:301 O 16 '13 1600w

+ Ind 75:746 S 25 '13 250w

"This book is one of the most illuminating histories which we have yet met with of a very complicated war."

+ Lit D 47:180 Ag 2 '13 450w

"When to an annoying lack of proportion is added a literary style rarely rising above the level of matter-of-fact narration, we have as the inevitable result a work whose bewildering details on position and manoeuvre, of attack and defence, of charge and retreat, often obscure the course of events, and leave the reader with no clear impression of what is happening."

+ — Nation 97:142 Ag 14 '13 1900w

"Mr. Ropes writes with simple directness, holding strictly to the evidence at hand, and abstains from rhetoric, though he has to tell the tales of Chancellorsville, Vicksburg and Gettysburg."

+ N Y Sun p6 My 10 '13 150w

"The stories of the operations are told with great detail and precision."

+ N Y Times 18:250 Ap 27 '13 130w

"[The volumes] lack literary perspective, and will be valuable rather as a work of reference or for the military student than for the general reader."

+ — Outlook 104:343 Je 14 '13 50w

"Rarely has a writer contributed so much to the correct historical understanding of a decisive episode as the present author has to the statement of Meade's problem at Gettysburg."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 3 '13 700w

LLOYD, NELSON MCALLISTER. David Mal-
 10 colm. $1.35 (1½c) Scribner 13-18074

A quiet, uneventful story of a young boy's development in a country town and at a small inland college, with something of his later life in New York and abroad as a foreign correspondent for the American press. The guiding influence in shaping his character and career is "the professor" a queer vagabond and scholar, who disappears early in the story, leaving Penelope, his little daughter in David's care, and who reappears from time to time, always to influence the boy for the better and to leave him with a higher ideal.

Reviewed by F: T. Cooper.

Bookm 38:199 O '13 250w

"David Malcolm's early history is more interesting than his later years. The story tends to lapse into conventionality."

+ — Nation 97:287 S 25 '13 270w

"An entertaining piece of light fiction, full of romance and bright with humor, and written in the author's best style."

+ N Y Times 18:451 Ag 31 '13 320w

"The story is carefully written, but lacks force as regards situation and action. Too little is made of the best character in the book."

+ — Outlook 105:46 S 6 '13 70w

"It is a pleasant tale."

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 350w

LLOYD, RICHARD ERNEST. Growth of 4 groups in the animal kingdom. il $1.75
 Longmans A13-513

As a physician in the Indian medical service the author was called on to conduct a series of experiments with some 100,000 rats. The results of these experiments, which are to the discredit of the natural selection theory, he sets forth in this book. He writes "from the standpoint that mutation is the method of evolution; and he has set forth the facts and opinions in this book to help the mutation theory to command more attention than it does at present." (Boston Transcript)

"Though meant to be popular, the book is in reality rather technical. It is a somewhat discursive but stimulating and in some respects novel statement of the evolution problem by a 'mutationist.'"

+ — A L A Bkl 9:378 My '13

"An unprejudiced naturalist will derive nothing but pleasure from this temperately written and well-reasoned volume. Capt. Lloyd is seldom dogmatic; he describes his object as to suggest rather than to prove. To many readers, we think, his suggestions will be of great interest.
 It is regrettable that in a book deserving of praise there should be neither an index nor a table of contents."

+ — Ath 1912,2:482 O 26 600w

Boston Transcript p22 Ja 29 '13 370w

"The book is a substantial contribution to the literature of evolution."

+ Dial 54:249 Mr 16 '13 350w

"The force of his arguments is much enhanced by an unaffected and delightful naïveté of style, and the volume itself is a model of fine bookmaking."

+ Nation 96:554 My 29 '13 750w

"His views are clearly and modestly put forward, and his book is worth careful attention, although the omission of an index, of a table of contents, and even of headlines to the chapters makes the reading more difficult than it need have been." R. I. P.

+ — Nature 91:81 Mr 27 '13 350w

N Y Times 18:69 F 9 '13 100w

"Many will still dispute both the author's and the reviewer's statements. The discussion of 'species' is interesting and the important facts concerning the rats are well presented." F. E.
 Lutz.

+ — Science ns37:150 Ja 24 '13 670w

"It is the work of a thoughtful writer, and will stimulate thought among those who read it."

+ Spec 110:278 F 15 '13 500w

LOCKE, WILLIAM JOHN. Stella Maris. il
 5 $1.35 Lane 13-35200

"This is the story of a girl confined to her bed with an affection of the spine which forbids her moving in the slightest. She lives in a room on a cliff overlooking the sea. Those about her have done their utmost to keep the slightest knowledge of evil from her. She lives in a dream world where the few real figures of her friends take their places in idealized form. The crux of the story comes when an unexpected recovery allows her to go into the real world and to be where its evil side can thrust itself upon her." (Outlook)
 "Although the final pages of 'Stella Maris' contain a murder and a suicide, the story is by no means a tragedy. It is, in fact, a fantastic comedy of the sort that Mr. Locke has mastered more than once before." (Boston Transcript)

"Distinctly inferior to the author's earlier work."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:344 Ap '13

"The story is, on the whole, well told, and suits well that sort of sentimentality in which Mr. Locke excels. It should secure a large measure of popularity, but we cannot regard it as equal to some of the author's previous works."

+ Ath 1913;1:432 Ap 19 270w

"There is a vein of sensationalism running through it that is reminiscent of his earlier style, in the period antedating Sir Marcus Ordeyne and Berzelius Nibbidard Paragot." F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 37:440 Je '13 500w

"It is impossible to characterize 'Stella Maris' otherwise than by saying that Mr. Locke has done it again, and all who have read 'The morals of Marcus Ordeyne,' 'Simon the jester,' 'Septimus,' or 'The glory of Clementina,' will know what that means." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 2 '13 750w

"There is more substantial stuff concerned with motive and character in this book than Mr. Locke is wont to deal with, and, despite the interest of the present narrative, it is not as fine a performance as the works of whimsical intellectualized comedy with which he has hitherto regaled us." W: M. Payne.

+ — Dial 55:148 S 1 '13 600w

"Charming piece of fiction."

+ Ind 75:272 J1 31 '13 300w

"'Stella Maris' will add to Mr. Locke's reputation. His characters and his plots are never trite, but his most ardent admirers will wonder at this new evidence of his power of invention. There is every charm in the story, from the bewitching and delicate touch with which Stella's character is sketched to the rugged strength of a man's friendship and the passionate, dramatic thrill of the tragedy in John's life."

+ Lit D 46:898 Ap 19 '13 370w

"Mr. Locke reaches a deeper tone in this story than he has ever done before. The book is a success; and yet, after it is laid down and the first swell of emotion has subsided, one begins to wonder whether there is not somewhere a false note in the appeal, something hollow in the fabric."

+ — Nation 96:389 Ap 17 '13 370w

"Little of W. J. Locke's light spirits and delicacy of touch will be discerned in 'Stella Maris,' for he has taken a serious turn and when his humor does crop out it strikes a discord as often as not. There is no sense of proportion in the story. Mr. Locke is preaching the gospel of love, but he is as cruel as one who wantonly destroys a child's playhouse."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Mr 29 '13 480w

"Mr. Locke has never written a book that holds the attention more closely than this. But while 'Stella Maris' is excellent as a novel of action, it deserves higher praise as a novel of character." Joyce Kilmer.

+ N Y Times 18:172 Mr 30 '13 1100w

+ N Y Times 18:665 N 30 '13 370w

"The story is constructed and told with the skill which its author has taught us to expect. But it isn't Locke—not the Locke of 'The beloved vagabond,' 'Septimus,' and 'The glory of Clementina.'"

+ Outlook 103:778 Ap 5 '13 180w

"The story is fascinating and told with the delicate beauty that characterizes Mr. Locke's style, but there is too much tragedy and too little relief, too tense sadness."

+ — R of Rs 47:629 My '13 150w

"Many people who have travelled by sea must know the sensation of pale triumph that is the first sign of returning vigour when they feel terra firma under their feet and turn to look back at the sea. Such a sensation of continuous nausea endured and finally repressed is ours as we conclude Mr. Locke's new book."

— Sat R 115:557 My 3 '13 750w

"Strong sentiment and crude melodrama seem to smother the tender charm of an original theme."

— + Spec 110:1122 Je 28 '13 30w

LOCKWOOD, LUKE VINCENT. Colonial furniture in America; new and greatly enlarged. 2v il $25 Scribner 13-21117

The author "has not only searched inventories and contemporary records, as well as later treatises on the art of English and American furniture, but he has had the opportunity of examining several thousand actual specimens, both American and English. From this thorough investigation Mr. Lockwood has been able to fix with a maximum degree of accuracy not only the dates of many puzzling pieces but the sections of the country in which they were made." (N Y Times) "Any notion that this country is barren of artistic traditions should be dispelled by perusal of this book." (Nation)

"Evolution in household furniture during the first two centuries of American history becomes a fascinating study as treated by Mr. Lockwood."

+ Dial 55:483 D 1 '13 470w

"The most complete and best illustrated book dealing exclusively with American art in furniture that has yet appeared. Its great number of beautiful pictures and the care that has been taken in its making justify its large price."

+ Ind 76:267 N 6 '13 50w

"Mr. Lockwood's book is throughout explicit, particular, and descriptive. It necessarily contains much repetition. One longs at times for a little more grace of style to help carry one over the details."

+ — Nation 97:468 N 13 '13 720w

"Mr. Lockwood's work bears the stamp of the scholar-scientist."

+ N Y Times 18:611 N 9 '13 200w

LODGE, HENRY CABOT. Early memories. 11 $2.50 (2c) Scribner 13-20784

A book of memories of boyhood, youth and early manhood. Henry Cabot Lodge was born in 1850. These reminiscences end with the year 1880, leaving him, a young man of thirty, just entering on an assured public career. The chapter titles are: Heredity; Earliest memories; The Olympians; Boyhood; The war; Europe; Harvard; Retrospect and contrast; Europe again; Starting in life; Public men and men of letters.

"It is a most alluring shelf of books, that which contains the best of recent American autobiographies; and it does not contain any volume more alluring than these 'Early memories.'" Brander Matthews.

+ Bookm 38:288 N '13 1050w

"Many distinguished persons are vividly depicted and throughout runs a vein of quiet humor, which with the interest that inheres in the personal experiences of a notable man during a notable period of history, makes the book delightful reading." N. H. Dole.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 890w

"A reader of a book of reminiscences may be forgiven for wishing a maximum of memories and a minimum of moralizing. Of memories, there are, nevertheless, a goodly supply, and of a character for which one must be grateful."

+ — Nation 97:566 D 11 '13 1200w

"The book is a good book."

+ N Y Sun p12 O 18 '13 970w

"Reminiscences of the New England of this period are legion, but the viewpoint of Mr. Lodge is essentially his own."

+ N Y Times 18:581 O 26 '13 1050w

"His autobiography, if not the most important record of the last half-century, is certainly one of the most profitable and entertaining."

+ No Am 198:883 D '13 630w

"Senator Lodge's recollections of the great men of Massachusetts in the civil war period are peculiarly vivid and illuminating."

+ R of Rs 48:632 N '13 70w

LODGE, HENRY CABOT. One hundred years of peace. il $1.25 Macmillan 13-18699

This sketch of the relations between the United States and Great Britain during the century since the War of 1812 appeared first in the Outlook. The two articles have been revised, corrected and much enlarged for their present publication.

LODGE, HENRY CABOT—Continued.

"A dispassionate, scholarly discussion."

+ A L A Bkl 10:102 N '13

"Political relations are not dealt with very fully, and the Alabama affair is barely mentioned."

+ Ath 1913,2:452 O 25 80w

"A story which cannot be too faithfully borne in the memories of Americans. We must add, however, that its interest is very greatly increased by the brilliancy of the author's telling."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 620w

"Deserves a wide reading."

+ Ind 76:34 O 2 '13 250w

"Has rather the air and force of an address from the platform than the scope and detail of a deliberately worked up volume and gains thereby in effectiveness."

+ N Y Sun p3 S 27 '13 1300w

"A penetrating and delightful survey."

+ N Y Times 18:702 N 30 '13 750w

"Senator Lodge never wrote more acutely or with a more definite conception of American history."

+ Outlook 105:329 O 11 '13 90w

"A brilliant and penetrating little sketch."

+ R of Rs 48:631 N '13 70w

"Senator Lodge is able to correct many false views of international policy."

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 9 '13 140w

LODGE, SIR OLIVER JOSEPH. Modern problems; a discussion of debatable subjects. *$2 Doran 12-26387

"A collection of 21 short, but trenchant essays upon questions of current or perennial controversy, questions of practical as well as philosophical importance. . . . They range from a five-page discussion of free will and determinism, through such other essays, most of them somewhat longer, as upon the position of woman in the state, universal arbitration, the nature of time, Balfour and Bergson, the smoke nuisance, competition versus co-operation, and Ruskin's political economy."—Springfield Republican

+ A L A Bkl 9:328 Ap '13

"So clear and so keen is Sir Oliver Lodge's approach to all these vital subjects, that we must feel deeply indebted for the light which he throws upon them." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 900w

+ Dial 54:346 Ap 16 '13 370w

"With his practical views I find myself in all but complete agreement, both as regards spirit and details." T. Whittaker.

+ Int J Ethics 23:361 Ap '13 750w

"This note of defection is encountered throughout these essays."

+ Nation 96:441 My 1 '13 1100w

"All the chapters are characterized by the admirably lucid yet thorough exposition which Sir Oliver Lodge's writings always present; and the conclusions, definite though cool and undogmatic, are full of that ripe wisdom which only a wide human outlook on life can give." J. A. H.

+ Nature 90:248 O 31 '12 330w

"It is a quality of mind, rather than any particular doctrine, which distinguishes these scattered essays. There is nothing original, nothing that has not been said many times by all sorts of people. What is rare is the luminous and pervasive character of a highly organized intelligence. When you read this little book you meet a man, a man who has stepped out of his profession to talk as a layman about a number of human questions which interest him. It is a book for people who enjoy the conversation of liberal men." Walter Lippmann.

+ N Y Times 18:141 Mr 16 '13 1200w

"Very few readers would agree absolutely with all the positions taken in the volume, but the author always inclines one to thought and study."

+ Outlook 103:501 Mr 1 '13 120w

"The more popular of the papers are excellent reading, provocative of both thought and amusement. The two or three first chapters—only two or three out of twenty-one—are rather technical, and will, we fear, bore the very readers who will take most delight in the others. We would warn such readers not to be put off the book by the first few pages."

+ Spec 110:67 Ja 11 '13 850w

"The essays are brilliantly illuminative and are written in a notably clear, crisp and charming style."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 20 '13 600w

"Altogether the volume can be recommended to those numerous casual readers who like a little of everything and not much of anything." J. Martin.

+ Survey 30:66 Ap 12 '13 550w

LODGE, WILLIAM. Rules of management; 12 with practical instructions on machine building. *$2 McGraw 13-18035

"The author's foreword describes this book as a record of personal experience put in the form of rules and comment. It was written primarily to give information to the succeeding manager of the shops of the Lodge & Shipley machine tool co. In this record, the duties and work in each department are outlined in some detail. This extends from the general manager of the shop down to janitors and watchmen. It will be seen therefore that this book deals not at all with the theory of management. It is simply a manual of rules and instructions for the several officials of a certain organization. Two exceptions to the above general statement should be noted: first, the chapters on the cost and time-keeping departments and the one immediately following on the premium plan; second, the last two chapters of the book, which describe a proposed system of pensions."—Engin N

"Throughout the book, the statement of rules and duties is mingled with pithy remarks and suggestions which make the book almost as valuable as a personal talk with the author." R. R. Potter

+ Engin N 70:999 N 13 '13 380w

"The chief value of the book consists in the possibility of indicating to executives not familiar with standard instructions the good that may be accomplished through their use. In other words, the book should be considered of an elementary character. Those who have followed the literature of management will be disappointed in it."

+ Engin Rec 68:391 O 4 '13 250w

"The book contains a wealth of good information, although, owing to the fact that it was written specifically for the use of one manufacturing establishment, this information sometimes is not evident at once as applicable to any other establishment."

+ Indust Engin 13:489 N '13 520w

LOEB classical library. ea.*$1.50 Macmillan

"The design [of the Loeb classical library] is to print the whole body of classical and early Christian literature, Greek and Latin, with an English translation on opposite pages. It appears from the volumes now before us that a few textual notes will be given and occasionally an explanatory note; the latter office, however, is chiefly performed by full indexes, and for these every reader will be highly grateful. Brief, but sufficient, biographical and bibliographical introductions are added." (Nation) "The first twenty volumes of the 'Library' which have now appeared include: The Apostolic fathers, 2v., tr. by Kirsopp Lake; The confessions of St. Augustine, 2v., (rev.) tr. by W. Watts; Euripides, (in 4v.) v. 1 and 2, tr. by A. S. Way; Philostratus, the life of Apollonius of Tyana, 2v., tr. by F. C. Conybeare; Propertius, tr. by H. E. Butler; Terence, 2v., tr. by J. Sargeant; Apollonius Rhodius, tr. by R. C. Seaton; Apollonius Roman history, (in 4v.) v. 1 and 2, tr. by Horace White; Catullus, tr. by F. W. Cornish; Tibullus, tr. by J. P. Postgate; Pervigilium Veneris, tr. by J. W. Mackail; Cicero's Letters to Atticus, (in 3v.) tr. by E. O. Winstedt; Lucian, (in 8v.) v. 1, tr. by A. M. Harmon; Julian's Orations, (in 3v.) v. 1, tr. by W. C. Wright; Theocritus, Bion and Moschus, tr. by J. M. Edmonds; Sophocles, (in 2v.) v. 1, tr. by F. Storr." (R of Rs)

- + A L A Bkl 9:354 Ap '13
- + Ath 1912,2:368 O 5 1000w
- + Ath 1912,2:445 O 19 250w
- + Ath 1912,2:591 N 16 250w
- + Ath 1912,2:624 N 23 230w

"As the series proceeds, the limitations of the 'Loeb library' appear. Surely it is a mistake (for commercial reasons of separate sale) to repeat the introduction verbatim in successive volumes."

- + Ath 1913,1:127 F 1 300w
- Reviewed by H. D. Sedgwick.
- + Atlan 112:34 J1 '13 8000w

"The volumes already at hand will delight, both the scholar and the average reader."

- + Boston Transcript p28 F 12 '13 750w
- Reviewed by F. J. Miller.
- + Class J 8:269 Mr '13 1200w

- Reviewed by F. B. R. Hellems.
- + Class Philol 8:117 Ja '13 1900w

- Reviewed by Paul Shorey.
- + Class Philol 8:121 Ja '13 1150w

- Reviewed by Paul Shorey.
- + Class Philol 8:123 Ja '13 550w

- Reviewed by Paul Shorey.
- + Class Philol 8:234 Ap '13 330w

"It must be with some sense of interest, pleasure, and gratitude that thoughtful men up and down the land have heard of the purpose of Mr. James Loeb. It would seem, indeed, as if the work had been triply guarded,—by translators, editors, and advisory board. For the size, the price seems a little high." J. R. Smith.

- + Dial 54:139 F 16 '13 2050w
- Dial 55:57 J1 16 '13 130w

"The entire series will be essential in a good library, and selections should be on the bookshelves of every scholar."

- + Ind 73:1132 N 14 '12 800w

"We can hardly conceive a more valuable gift to the scholarly world, and the entire set of some hundreds of 16mo volumes ought, as they appear, to be in every fine private and public library."

- + Ind 74:539 Mr 6 '13 220w

"It will be a pity if any library misses one of the volumes, even if they should run to hundreds, for it is intended that this series should include the entire body of classical literature."

- + Ind 74:1097 My 15 '13 200w

"We predict a great future for this library. It is well equipped materially. The paper is fine and light, the printing clear and handsome, the binding limp leather and admirable."

- + Lit D 46:246 F 1 '13 220w

"The scheme of the editing is excellent; the needs and taste of the gentleman scholar have been well considered and adequately provided for. And the books are superb cribs! But the fact cannot be overlooked that the physical make-up is not entirely satisfactory."

- + Nation 95:484 N 21 '12 900w
- + Nation 96:110 Ja 30 '13 550w
- + Nation 96:367 Ap 10 '13 200w

"Some of the Greek volumes have been printed in a type and on a paper outrageous to the eye; the adoption of verse translations is pretty widely deplored, since probably the first and most important service desired is ease in finding the precise meaning of an unusual word or a tangled sentence of the original; and, lastly, some of the authors might be annotated a little more freely without much increasing the labor of the editor and to the great benefit of the ordinary reader. In the latest addition to the Library all of these faults are still apparent, though in varying degrees."

- + Nation 96:480 My 8 '13 700w
- + Nation 97:81 J1 24 '13 470w
- + Nation 97:414 O 30 '13 730w
- + Nation 97:515 N 27 '13 430w
- + N Y Times 17:629 O 27 '12 400w

"The scholar will find in this series many an author before inaccessible brought to his hand, and the dilettante in classical literature will have his difficulties smoothed away and every opportunity afforded for the enjoyment of the beauties of the original."

- + N Y Times 18:126 Mr 9 '13 1600w
- + N Y Times 18:288 My 11 '13 450w
- + N Y Times 18:630 N 16 '13 200w
- + Outlook 102:817 D 14 '12 650w
- + Outlook 103:595 Mr 15 '13 1150w
- + Outlook 104:633 J1 19 '13 280w
- + R of Rs 47:124 Ja '13 550w

R of Rs 47:508 Ap '13 70w

"The standard of the translations already issued is on the whole high, and the presence of Messrs. T. E. Page and W. H. D. Rouse on the committee is a guarantee of discreet selection and careful editing. The volumes are light and well got up, and the series should be sure of a wide welcome."

- + Spec 109:859 N 23 '12 2650w

"This further instalment of translations fully maintains the standard of the 'Loeb classical library.'"

- + Spec 110:108 Ja 18 '13 450w
- Spec 110:1020 Je 14 '13 350w
- + Spec 111:872 N 22 '13 630w
- + Springfield Republican p5 N 28 '12 550w
- + Springfield Republican p5 D 19 '12 1100w
- + Springfield Republican p5 Ja 2 '13 1550w
- + Springfield Republican p5 F 13 '13 2200w
- Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13 270w

LOFTIE, REV. WILLIAM JOHN. Westminster¹² abbey, il *$1.50 Lippincott (Eng ed A13:2304)

The author "leads the reader through the abbey and its environs at the varied epochs of its history, tracing its growth as a building, and alluding pleasantly to the persons connected with it and to the great scenes enacted in it. The latter half of the volume describes with humorous and anecdotal touches the triforium with its muniments and its 'wax-figures'; the poets' corner and chapter house; the heraldry, the monuments, the epitaphs, and the monastic and collegiate buildings grouped at various times round the abbey proper."—Nation

- + A L A Bkl 10:170 D '13
- "An excellent volume for reference."
- + Boston Transcript p24 O 22 '13 70w

"A fuller index might have been made for the book's three hundred and sixteen compact pages of varied information, instead of the meagre performance that now completes the book."

- + Dial 55:482 D 1 '13 120w

"Mr. Loftie commits occasionally rather strange errors, but he is to be commended for accomplishing his task without an unnecessary LOFTIE, REV. WILLIAM JOHN—Continued, profusion of architectural terms or of historical dates and names, and without lapsing into the guidebook style."

+ — Nation 97:464 N 13 '13 180w

"Mr. Loftie is clearer than most English writers in establishing the ecclesiastical status of Westminster as a monastic church in contrast to the cathedral and parochial foundations." T: Walsh.

+ N Y Times 18:625 N 16 '13 950w

LOGAN, MARY SIMMERSON (CUNNINGHAM)
12 (MRS. JOHN A. LOGAN). Reminiscences of a soldier's wife. il *$2.50 (1½c) Scribner 13-22377

This is Mrs. Logan's autobiography; it is also a biography of General John A. Logan; for Mrs. Logan was most closely associated with her husband thruout all his public career. She was born in Missouri in 1838, and the early chapters of her book give a most interesting picture of life in the middle west in pioneer days. The years of the civil war of course occupy an important place in the reminiscences, as do also social, and political events at the national capital in the years immediately following. There is an account of the organization of the Grand army of the republic and of its later activities.

"Social, civil, governmental and military reminiscences crowd her pages with that familiar vividness of one who was a part rather than a spectator of their doings upon the stage of national history. Important as is her knowledge of events and the motives behind them, is the lively and accurate sketches of famous figures she knew often intimately, and often under circumstances which add a piquancy to her inclusion of them in these pages."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 3 '13 870w

LOLIÉE, FRÉDÉRIC AUGUSTE. Romance of a favourite; tr. from the French by W: Morton Fullerton. il *$3.50 Appleton (Eng ed 13-393)

A longer study of the life of one of the women described by the author in his "Women of the second empire." The book "will be found, on the whole, unexpectedly free from scandalous stories. . . . Nobody need expect to find here a candid account of the relations between Napoleon III and Mme. de Castiglione: they are left in the cloud of mystery which has always shadowed them. What will be found is the political history, long a secret, of the mission with which Mme. de Castiglione was entrusted by Cavour, and the important influence she gained over Napoleon as to the affairs of Italy." (Spec)

"Of the 'intellectual and moral qualities' which M. Loliée attributes to her his volume does not reveal any trace. The translation is in many places inadequate."

— Ath 1912,2:272 S 14 220w

"It has no value to the historian, except as it throws side-lights on the gilded dissipations of the Court of the Tuilleries."

— + Nation 96:15 Ja 2 '13 180w

"Delightful volume." C. T. Brady.

+ N Y Times 17:749 D 1 '12 430w

+ Spec 109:561 O 12 '12 550w

LOMBARDINI, S. H. Rival French courts: the experiences of a lady-in-waiting at Sceaux, at Versailles, and in the Bastille. il *$2.50 Macmillan

A memoir of Madame de Staal. "The author describes scenes at Sceaux, Versailles, and in the Bastille, whither her association with the Duchesse du Maine carried her. . . . It is a topsy-turvydom which Madame de Staal holds up to our eyes, but her own personality which gives the book its value. Its pages reveal the light of her humorous wisdom and philosophy, her clear vision and independent spirit. Her dignity rises above the condition of waiting-maid. She saw true and transmitted what she saw." (Lift D)

"It is a fascinating study of a brilliant woman."

+ Ath 1913,1:186 F 15 280w

"Delightful biography."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Jl 16 '13 400w

+ Dial 55:310 O 16 '13 480w

+ Lit D 47:640 O 11 '13 180w

"A readable and well-informed account."

+ Nation 97:441 N 6 '13 350w

"Mr. Lombardini has rendered a distinct service in reviving the memory of Mme. de Staal. He has depicted with a quick sympathy and in a readable manner one of the most significant and appealing of the lesser figures of the early eighteenth century."

+ N Y Times 18:486 S 21 '13 1200w

LONDON, JACK. Abysmal brute. il *$1 (4½c) 7 Century 13-11303

This is the story of a young giant, trained in the wilderness by his father, an ex-fighter, for the prize ring. With his splendid strength, his trusting mind and clean heart he comes down to the cities, to fight his way to the championship. He knows nothing of the corruption attendant on his profession, and his astute manager keeps such knowledge from him. When he does learn he creates a sensation, makes a speech from the ring, in which he denounces its promoters and followers, then fights his last fight and leaves it forever.

+ A L A Bkl 10:70 O '13

"Were his reputation not established, were he not an acknowledged master both of the long novel and the short story, 'The abysmal brute,' might be forgiven, or at least ignored. While it reveals at times traces of his narrative and descriptive powers, it is trivial in plot, weak in execution and scarcely worthy as a whole of the reportorial capacities of a skilful penny-a-liner."

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '13 270w

"A thrilling and dramatic story."

+ — Lit D 47:390 S 6 '13 170w

+ N Y Times 18:461 S 7 '13 220w

"As an exposé of the evils of present-day prize-fighting the story has point and one does not mind its fantastic improbability."

+ Outlook 104:345 Je 14 '13 150w

LONDON, JACK. John Barleycorn. il *$1.30 9 (2c) Century 13-17963

A remarkable piece of autobiographical writing in which the author if he is presenting all truth and no fiction, is frank to a surprising degree. It might be termed an alcoholic biography. It portrays the drinking life of a man who was not a dipsomaniac, who had no born craving for drink, who worked for some twenty years to acquire a taste for it, who drank simply because it was there. His indictment against alcohol is directed towards its accessibility. He looks forward to a future when young men will look back to the saloon as "a quaint old custom similar to bull-baiting and the burning of witches."

"The book is a strong and effective plea for prohibition, incidentally for woman's suffrage."

+ A L A Bkl 10:70 O '13

"It is too excessively frank to convince us that it is wholly a record of thoughts that came into the mind and incidents that happened to the body of its writer." E. F. El

+ — Boston Transcript p18 Ag 20 '13 1150w

"Written in the author's habitual direct 'from the shoulder' style, in short, strong sentences, the book is undeniably forcible."

+ Ind 76:36 O 2 '13 380w

+ — Nation 97:190 Ag 28 '13 370w

"There are faults in this book—the cradely melodramatic illustrations, for instance. And Mr. London's vocabulary seems strangely limited. But 'John Barleycorn' is a distinguished achievement, a book surely destined to a high place in the world's esteem. Whatever may be its value as temperance propaganda, it must at any rate be acknowledged to be excellent narrative and startlingly real autobiography." Joyce Kilmer.

+ — N Y Times 18:445 Ag 24 '13 1050w

+ — N Y Times 18:665 N 30 '13 370w

Outlook 104:964 Ag 23 '13 100w

LONDON, JACK. Night-born. il *$1.25 (2½c) Century 13-3759

The first of this group is a story of the Klondike; others that follow give pictures of the south seas, of San Francisco, of Mexico, and of other parts of the world that border the Pacific. The titles are: The night born; The madness of John Harned; When the world was young; The benefit of the doubt; Winged blackmail; Bunches of knuckles; War; Under the deck awnings; To kill a man; The Mexican.

"Ten short stories, less brutal but also less vital than many of Mr. London's earlier tales." + A L A Bkl 9:344 Ap '13

"It is undeniable that, despite 'The sea wolf' and 'Martin Eden,' Mr. London is at his best as a short story writer. He has the power of condensation, the knack of compressing much into little, and his love for the primitive and the virile in man finds its freest and best outlet in the brief narrative of incident. He is neither reflective nor introspective, and in a day and an hour when the psychological and analytical story is all prevailing, Mr. London's simple and unpretentious tales are especially invigorating." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 830w

"He has the knack of the short story, and something more; but we begin to despair of his ever escaping his obsession for bunches of knuckles and buckets of blood."

+ — Nation 96:443 My 1 '13 170w

"This collection is very Londonesque in its quality and will be much enjoyed by the many admirers of his vigorous style."

+ — N Y Times 18:123 Mr 9 '13 330w

+ — Outlook 103:863 Ap 19 '13 170w

"They are characteristic London tales, of compelling force, though their strength is purely one of physical appeal. They throb with action and virile life, so far as the externals go, but the mystery of the inner man, the finer workings of the mind torn by purposes and cross purposes, Mr. London never undertakes to discover."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ap 10 '13 430w

LONDON, JACK. Valley of the moon. il *$1.35 (½c) Macmillan 13-22812

The story opens in the city slums where Billy Roberts, teamster and ex-prize-fighter, and Saxon Brown, laundry worker, meet and love and marry; it ends out in the open country where, in contact with the soil, Billy and Saxon find new life and new hope. They have courage and strength and faith when the start life together, but the grinding forces of industrialism are almost too much for them. It is the strain of pioneer grit that brought their ancestors across the mountains that saves them. They too become pioneers, and go out from San Francisco to discover California. From one end of the state to the other, they tramp, and in the Valley of the Moon find the farm paradise that is to be their salvation.

"His latest novel is a novel for all thoughtful readers. It is filled with all the usual Jack London short-comings—the greatest being lack of restraint—but it is at the same time a notably faithful study of a variety of critical social conditions and at the same time a significant story." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p8 N 8 '13 1350w

"Jack London's 'The valley of the moon' is unlike any book of his we have met before, an extremely pleasant and genial book, holding the reader's attention to the end. As a work of art his story may be compared to the pride of New England housewife, the patchwork quilt. Vivid blocks of realism, brilliant scraps of California scenery, sober bits of preaching, put together rather haphazard, wherever they will be effective."

+ — N Y Sun p3 N 8 '13 570w

"If the author had only applied his own theories and adopted 'intensive' methods in writing 'The valley of the moon,' he might have produced not only a vastly interesting and suggestive book, but a great one. Yet, when all is said and done, Mr. London has written a man's size book, containing a man's size idea." Helen Bullis.

+ — N Y Times 18:607 N 9 '13 1050w

LONG, JOHN DAVIS, and others. American business encyclopædia and legal adviser. 5v il $17.50 Millet 13-13366

"With the object of meeting demands for the knowledge possessed by specialists 'The American business encyclopædia and legal adviser' has been produced. Here one finds in easily accessible form answers to problems encountered every day by those in business, from office boy to corporation president. . . . All contributors have been selected from men in actual service, who know from actual experience of the subject on which they write." (Boston Transcript) "Each of the five volumes has its own table of contents. The pages are not numbered. Volume 1 contains the 'Editor's introduction to legal topics.' The work is provided with a full cross index, which with the 'Key,' will be found in the last volume." (N Y Times)

"Open a volume anywhere and there will be found a question treated that can be directly applied to the practical affairs of life."

+ — Boston Transcript p23 Je 18 '13 650w

"This work should meet with a ready reception from the public. In general, the information conveyed presents to the prospective investor or working business man the facts he would wish to know concerning the various industries and occupations as he may be interested in them, before he invests his capital or engages in work."

+ Lit D 47:538 S 27 '13 420w

"If we had not examined this voluminous publication with considerable care, we might have been tempted to adopt the typewritten estimate of the work with which the publishers have favored us. In one of the publishers' declarations we concur: 'There are no other publications of this sort in the country.' We do not hesitate to go further, and to declare that there ought not to be another."

— Nation 97:211 S 4 '13 800w

+ N Y Sun p5 Je 7 '13 190w

"A useful reference work, printed in good-sized type and well illustrated. There is much interesting and instructive reading in it."

+ N Y Times 18:434 Ag 17 '13 500w

LONG, JOHN LUTHER. War. il *$1.30 (2½c) Bobbs 13-7524

The author tells a story of the civil war—pictured as a war between brothers—in the quaint broken English of an old German farmer. A father, two sons, and a southern girl, Evelyn, who, orphaned by the first shot at Sumpter, comes north to live in the Maryland home of her foster uncle, are the four characters who carry out the tragedy. Of the two brothers, it is Jon who loves Evelyn first and most deeply, but also it is Dave who wins her love, brotherly devotion is not shattered. Happiness would still have been possible but for the devastating effects of war. With the war itself the author is not primarily concerned. There is only one battle described—that in which the two brothers, not recognizing one another, meet in deadly conflict.

"It is not only as a picture that 'War' may be read. Those who like love and romance and mystery will find it here in plenty. Moreover, Mr. Long is not content with the mere telling of a romantic tale, however fascinating in its romance. He has put real people into his story, human, vital, each with his own elements of strength and weakness. Altogether the story makes delightful reading."

LONG, JOHN LUTHER—Continued.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 16 '13 850w

"Were the whole book upon the high level of the final chapters, Mr. Long would have written one of the most notable among the hundreds of civil war novels. As it is, they amply reward the perseverance of the reader who reaches them."

+ — N Y Times 18:246 Ap 27 '13 480w

+ Outlook 103:863 Ap 19 '13 100w

"There is originality in the story, and a notably human quality."

+ R of Rs 47:762 Je '13 130w

LONG, WILLIAM JOSEPH. American literature. il *$1.35 Ginn 13-21798

"The aim of this book is to present an accurate and interesting record of American literature from the colonial to the present age, and to keep the record in harmony with the history and spirit of the American people." (Preface) Following the plan used in his history of English literature the author has divided our literary history broadly into a few periods. The tendencies and developments of each are discussed in five chapters as follows: The colonial period; The period of the revolution; The first national or creative period; Some tendencies in our recent literature.

"It is something of an event to be confronted with a textbook which fairly burns its way into the mind and heart of the reader, whether he be pupil or teacher or general reader. Such a book is Long's 'American literature.' We feel that Mr. Long wrote this book because he must write. Despite the unpopularity of such expressions, we are tempted to say that he had a vision, an inspiration, which he has turned into concrete book form."

+ + Boston Transcript p3 D 6 '13 1250w

LOOFS, FRIEDRICH. What is the truth about Jesus Christ? *$1.25 (3c) Scribner 13-7804

The author, who is professor of church history in the University of Halle-Wittenberg, delivered the series of lectures contained in this book at Oberlin college in 1911. The six lecture titles are: Jesus a real man of our history; The liberal Jesus-picture; The liberal Jesus-research and the sources; Jesus not merely a man; The ancient Christology untenable; Modern forms of Christology.

"The value of this volume lies in the apologetic rather than the historical field. For a student who finds himself compelled to abandon Loofs' halting attitude because it is felt to be unworthy of true scholarship, and so ultimately subversive of faith, and who still wishes an adequate estimate of Jesus' religious worth, the present book has no message." S. J. Case.

+ — Am J Theol 17:627 O '13 1500w

A L A Bkl 10:19 S '13

"A most interesting little volume."

+ Bib World 42:121 Ag '13 500w

"The book is especially strong on its critical side."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '13 480w

N Y Times 18:350 Je 15 '13 50w

"Prof. Loofs is a sincere and open-minded student, whose great learning and firm grasp of the principles of philosophy eminently qualify him for such a task as he undertakes in the present course of lectures."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 10 '13 380w

LOOMIS, FREDERIC BREWSTER. Hunting extinct animals in the Patagonian pampas. il *$1.50 Dodd 13-10525

This is an account of the Amherst expedition of 1911 undertaken by Professor Loomis of the department of comparative anatomy in company with two Amherst students. "This volume is preliminary, gives a running account of the journey and its experiences, and in a familiar way the results and conclusions reached, and is to be followed by a scientific report of the multitude of animals, birds and shells whose remains were found." (Ind) "The chief interest of the narrative is in the description of existing conditions in Buenos Ayres and in the Patagonian provinces." (N Y Sun)

+ A L A Bkl 10:102 N '13

"Full of valuable information."

+ Educ R 46:207 S '13 50w

Ind 74:1305 Je 5 '13 470w

+ N Y Sun p5 My 3 '13 130w

"He draws a splendid picture of the drab austere life on the lonely pampas. It is doubtless due to his skill in writing about the out-of-doors that we are far more interested in the finding of a live guanaco or a nest of ostrich eggs than in all the weird creatures unearthed from the darkness of a few million years."

+ N Y Times 18:325 Je 1 '13 370w

"Incidentally this account throws many interesting side lights on South American governmental and development problems."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 29 '13 850w

LOON, HENDRIK WILLEM van. Fall of the Dutch republic. il *$3 Houghton 13-7536

"The story of the Dutch republic is taken up, as may be anticipated, at the point where Motley left it—that is to say, at the republic's height of prosperity, toward the end of the seventeenth century. Herr van Loon then traces the growth of the factors which led to the republic's fall a century later. . . . There are few students of the revolutionary period in American history who will not, we think, find profit in reading what this author has to say concerning the relations of Holland with the young state just coming into being across the Atlantic. The author . . . is at present the American correspondent of the Amsterdam 'Handelsblad,' and has studied at American universities."—Outlook

+ A L A Bkl 10:19 S '13

Ath 1913,1:569 My 24 50w

"The author possesses most of the gifts of a good popular historian. He has the power of grasping a large mass of facts and keeping them in the right perspective; he is admirably impartial; and his style is free, lucid and graphic."

+ Ath 1913,1:667 Je 21 1000w

"Mr. Van Loon's work covers the essential points and is a valuable addition to the stirring history of the Netherlands." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p22 My 7 '13 900w

+ — Eng Hist R 28:812 O '13 400w

"Whatever one may think of his breezy style and jaunty spirit, which at times does most woefully lack reverence, none can deny his mastery of the sources and insight into the reality, combined with power to discriminate and appraise. Good illustrations from contemporary prints, bibliography and index, a striking map, which itself tells a tale, combined with the easy familiarity of a native with his theme and the best authorities combine to rank this book among the literary events of 1913."

+ + — Ind 75:96 Jl 10 '13 850w

+ Lit D 47:640 O 11 '13 200w

+ — Nation 97:145 Ag 14 '13 1050w

"In spite of his dragging in modern analogies and of his sprightliness the author does not remove the impression that ignorance of what the Dutch were doing after their greatness disappeared is not to be regretted."

+ — N Y Sun p5 Ap 5 '13 120w

"Notable contribution."

+ N Y Sun p15 Je 14 '13 30w

"A most readable and interesting account."

+ — N Y Times 18:418 Ag 3 '13 1700w

"The work hardly takes its place as a pendant of Motley's great achievement. But the single volume does contain much of interest, though it could have been condensed with profit to the casual reader."

+ — Outlook 104:633 J1 19 '13 180w

+ — Spec 111:248 Ag 16 '13 1450w

"The excellence of the volume is largely due to the writer's sympathetic insight into the spirit of his fatherland, and to his well-balanced judgment in selecting causes which were greatest, and in leaving others in shadow. This book needed to be written, for ninety-nine out of a hundred English-speaking people have the vaguest conceptions of the adventures of the Dutch republic from the moment it had ceased to be chronicled by the great American historian. Mr. Van Loon presents a most fascinating analysis of the part played by the Dutch in our American revolution."

+ + Springfield Republican p5 J1 17 '13 630w

"A volume of first importance to the student."
W. E. Griffiths.

+ Yale R ns3:178 O '13 1000w

LOTI, PIERRE, pseud. Carmen Sylva and sketches from the orient; auth. tr. by Fred Rothwell. il *$1 (2½c) Macmillan 12-28467

Of the six essays in this volume two are devoted to the Roumanian queen. In two others the author writes of Turkey and in two of Japan. "Of the three groups of subjects, the more vitally interesting are those of Constantinople. It is hard for most people to feel any sympathy with the Turks, or to consider them as aught but adventurers in Europe. . . . It is an unusual occurrence to find a book written in favor of the Mussulman and in disapproval of attempts to give a European atmosphere to Constantinople." (Boston Transcript)

"The sketches have the vague, impressionistic quality and vein of sentiment which have made the author's writings popular with many."

+ A L A Bkl 9:328 Ap '13

Ath 1913,1:162 F 8 80w

Boston Transcript p23 D 4 '12 200w

"Pierre Loti's power as an essay writer lies less in his keen analysis than in his ability to reveal the thing as it is, by the impression it produces, and then leave to the reader the task of making his own judgments. It is the art of the painter rather than the scientist, and his touch is firm and illuminating." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 7 '12 850w

Dial 54:104 F 1 '13 320w

Ind 74:704 Mr 27 '13 80w

"The more highly colored pieces read like superfluous leaves from his novels, and the 'Carmen Sylva,' though not without effective strokes, is done in his least characteristic vein of pink-and-white sentimentality."

— Nation 96:110 Ja 30 '13 350w

"The qualities that have secured favor among women for Pierre Loti will be found in the articles collected under the title Carmen Sylva."

+ N Y Sun p 8 D 7 '12 140w

N Y Sun p 14 D 21 '12 830w

N Y Times 17: 696 N 24 '12 80w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne.

+ N Y Times 17: 777 D 15 '12 1200w

"His chief charm is the poignant sense in all that he writes of the evanescence of the moment. Whether he says it or not, we feel in all that he writes that he is aware, always aware, of the swift perishing of all beauty and of the poignancy in pain just because life is so short and our perception of it so incomplete. Loti is undoubtedly the French Pater."

+ No Am 197:432 Mr '13 220w

+ — Springfield Republican p5 J1 31 '13 400w

LOUTIL, EDMOND (PIERRE L'ERMITTE), pseud., Mighty friend; auth. tr. by J. Han-non. il *$1.50 (1c) Benziger 13-4146

A story of the encroachment of industry upon the agricultural domain of a peaceful

French community. The soil "this thing compacted of the dust, the remembrances, and the toils of our ancestors," is, in the words of Jacques de la Ferlandière, "the mighty friend." It is Jacques who leads the fight against the entrance into the valley of the Paris capitalists and their manufacturing interests. But he is overruled; the factories are established; the peace of the simple community is destroyed together with its sylvan beauty. In the end, a labor war, ending in a strike, demolishes the buildings and drives out the predatory lords of industry.

"In the handling of incidents, the natural development of the plot, and the clearly sketched group of characters, the author shows himself so possessed by big ideas that the smaller things come easy. It cannot be denied that Jacques is a bit of a hero and Odile a bit of a saint and that sometimes there is too much talk, but these flaws are balanced by more important excellencies. The book is written with the impulsive vigor of the reformer and the dramatic polish of the artist: that the artist is uppermost is proved by the swift, if often grim humor and by the natural, semi-pathetic touches of country life."

+ — Boston Transcript p25 Ap 2 '13 550w

"It is a book worth reading, serious and suggestive, as well as enlightening. As a novel 'The mighty friend' is well constructed; it is nowhere permitted to change into a treatise. The figure of Jacques himself is splendidly outlined, and the family of Harmmsters, the intruding Jews, are shown just as cleverly, if a bit cruelly. There is a conventional but pretty love story, later lifted to the dramatic by the intervention of Alberta, the slightly too passionate Jewess. Altogether it is a book worth reading and worth recommending."

+ Cath World 97:111 Ap '13 220w

"A dismal picture of social, industrial and political conditions in France now from the point of view of the Catholic. The translation is so clumsy that it is difficult to form any idea of the literary merits of the book."

— N Y Sun p4 Mr 1 '13 50w

"Doubtless it is because the novel thus voices the deep-seated French feeling about the land that it was crowned by the French academy. No other reason is apparent. Artistically, the book is puerile. It lacks almost every one of those characteristics which have given to French fiction its commanding place in the world's literature. But in its one phase of dramatic presentation of passionate love of the soil it interests, because it reveals so truly the feeling of the rural Frenchman."

— + N Y Times 18:126 Mr 9 '13 250w

"While some of the description is delightful, the book is too long."

+ — Outlook 104:261 My 31 '13 130w

Spec 110:765 My 3 '13 30w

LOVAT-FRASER, JAMES ALEXANDER. John Stuart, earl of Bute. *80c Putnam (Eng ed 13-930)

The third earl of Bute was that "one behind the throne greater than the throne itself," denounced by Chatham. In this book "the object of the writer is to prove that as a man and as a statesman Bute has been under-rated. . . . He made, he thinks, 'an honest attempt to govern the country upon Tory principles, and he failed because the Whigs were too strong. If it was a crime to be a Tory when Whiggism was dominant, then Bute was a criminal.'" (Spec)

"Carefully written essay."

+ Am Hist R 18:650 Ap '13 50w

"This brief account of George III's unpopular minister is clear, just, and comprehensible."

+ — Ath 1912,1:531 My 11 130w

"An attempt to represent Bute as 'an interesting and almost pathetic figure'; it does not show cause for any alteration in the opinion which historians generally hold concerning him. Mr. Lovat-Fraser has apparently written his book without consulting any manuscript authorities." W. H.

LOVAT-FRASER, J. A. —Continued.

— Eng Hist R 27:822 O '12 200w

Nation 96:132 F 6 '13 1250w

"Mr. Lovat-Fraser has written a small book, in reality an historical essay, and as such eminently readable."

+ Spec 109:23 J1 6 '12 230w

LOW, IVY. Growing pains. *$1.20 Doran

"Primarily, this novel is a study of the development of a soul from childhood to maturity. Incidentally it gives an extraordinarily vivid picture of London middle-class life. . . . Without father, mother, brother or sister, and not in the least understood by the 'Aunt Mary' who gives her a home, the inevitable result is that Gertrude seeks an outlet for the love she would naturally have given her own people, in many 'unnatural' directions. Sacrifice to her means sacrament. At the end of the story we leave her radiantly happy."—Boston Transcript

"Miss Low has presented the development of her principal character with uncommon exactness. The early freakishnesses of a child's imagination, her later violent adoration of an older girl, and the customary outbreak of unreasoning self-torment, combined with crudely religious emotions, are all faithfully portrayed."

+ Ath 1913,1:334 Mr 22 230w

"The author has an unusual comprehension of a heart of a girl and an unusual power of expressing it."

+ Boston Transcript p20 J1 9 '13 250w

"The childhood is the best part, though rather lengthily treated."

+ — Spec 110:765 My 3 '13 30w

"There is much humor in the telling and there are some excellent touches of characterization. But it is a rather uneven and in some ways amateurish bit of fiction."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13 100w

LOWELL, ABBOTT LAWRENCE. Government of England; new ed. 2v *$4 Macmillan 12-22324

"The new edition is identical with the 'Revised edition' of November, 1908 with the addition of a short preface mentioning recent constitutional changes, a chapter describing the circumstances in which the Parliament act came into being, and corresponding adjustments in the index."—Ath

A L A Bkl 9:352 Ap '13

"It is a matter of regret that President Lowell has not brought down to date the chapters dealing with the national party organizations."

+ — Ann Am Acad 46:195 Mr '13 100w

+ — Ath 1912,2:656 N 30 120w

Spec 110:69 Ja 11 '13 50w

LOWNDES, MRS. MARIE ADELAIDE (BEL-LOC). End of her honeymoon. *$1.25 (2½c) Scribner 13-19506

"While it is very likely that the strange occurrences of 'The end of her honeymoon' never happened, it would be very possible for them to happen. . . . To say that the story is about a young wife and her artist husband who put up at a strange hotel in Paris, that the husband is not to be found in the morning, and that he is searched for until the very end of the story, is a sufficient preliminary inducement to the reader."—Boston Transcript

"It is safe to say that none will read the tale without more than the usual enjoyment. It is one of the best of its kind."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 200w

+ Nation 97:459 N 13 '13 320w

"In the plot of her new story Mrs. Belloc Lowndes proves that there is something new under the sun; and, moreover, succeeds in giving credibility to a most incredible tale."

+ N Y Times 18:573 O 26 '13 350w

+ N Y Times 18:612 N 9 '13 300w

Outlook 105:280 O 4 '13 100w

LOWNDES, MRS. MARIE ADELAIDE (BEL-LOC). Studies in love and terror. *$1.25 Scribner

"Of the five short stories collected into Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's latest novel, 'Price of admiralty' fills a third of the pages. The others are successively called 'The child,' 'St. Catherine's eve,' 'The woman from Purgatory,' and 'Why they married,' and they all touch upon various phases of marital infelicity."—Boston Transcript

"Plots possess but a secondary importance, being in most instances merely pegs on which to hang psychological analyses. That these, however, are interesting no one will deny. On the whole, however, her stories lack the finish of Mrs. de Séllincourt's, and she has a tendency sometimes to over-elaborate—a fault which is fatal to the technique of the short story."

+ — Ath 1913,1:303 Mr 15 130w

"It is only by verbose elaboration and by forcing the note of sex passion in each story that Mrs. Belloc Lowndes has been enabled to bring them to their present length. She has done so much excellent work that it is a pity that she should write, as she does here, without inspiration other than the call of the public."

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '13 230w

"[The stories] are written well and carefully, but are morbidly unpleasant."

+ — N Y Sun p4 My 31 '13 100w

+ N Y Times 18:438 Ag 17 '13 250w

"The stories are all extremely powerful, and the first one, 'Price of admiralty' is a remarkable tragedy in miniature, the situation dealt with being as poignant as it is possible to conceive. But the story is short and, having so much matter packed into so small a space, it is of almost unrelieved gloom."

+ — Spec 110:625 Ap 12 '13 170w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. British pictures and their painters. 1l *$1.25 Macmillan A13-1376

"The main portion of the book is devoted to a series of short, entertaining sketches concerning the British painters represented in the National gallery and their works exhibited there. Two short introductory chapters of some 35 pages contain a history of the National gallery, of the men who made the project possible, and a brief outline of the history of British art." (Springfield Republican) "The book is illustrated with fifteen half-tone reproductions after pictures by Constable, Gainsborough, Reynolds, Turner, etc., and a portrait of Mr. George Salting forms the frontispiece." (Ath)

+ A L A Bkl 9:378 My '13

+ Ath 1913,1:313 Mr 15 300w

"It is distinctly what the more intelligent tourist wants, and it provides that extraneous human interest without which any extended study of the British school must be onerous to the art lover."

+ Nation 96:373 Ap 10 '13 60w

+ N Y Times 18:220 Ap 13 '13 100w

+ Outlook 103:500 Mr 1 '13 40w

"Compiled with taste and skill."

+ R of Rs 47:764 Je '13 30w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 3 '13 550w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Harvest home. 12 *$1 (1½c) Macmillan

A companion volume to "A little of everything," made up like that book of selections from Mr. Lucas's published works. The books of travel: "A wanderer in Florence," "A wanderer in Holland," and others; the volumes of essays: "One day and another," "Old lamps for new," etc.; the novels, among them, "Over Bemerton's" and "Mr. Ingleside," all contribute to the contents of this very readable little collection.

"The reader who likes pleasant discursions and excursions along the byways of life will be able to spend several happy hours with Mr. Lucas's 'Harvest home.'" E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p27 N 26 '13 480w
N Y Times 18:722 D 7 '13 50w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Loiterer's harvest. 11 *$1.25 (2c) Macmillan 13-21923

A little book of brief essays, many of them on quaint and out-of-the-way subjects, reprinted from the pages of "Punch," "Pall Mall Gazette," and other periodicals. Here are the titles: Seen from the line; Disappearing London; Surprises; Thackeray at the "Punch" table; A London symposium; Insulence; A good poet; Old Crome's Hobbema; Persons of quality; The jolly good fellows; Thoughts on magic; Tom Girtton; My walks abroad; Unlikely conversations; The provincial editor's letter-bag; Tracts that took the wrong turning; Wayside notes; The fourpenny box; The worst prelude to adventure.

+ A L A Bk 10:143 D '13

"The charm of the book depends more upon its variety than the individual excellences of any of its delightful parts."

+ Ath 1913,2:419 O 18 150w

+ Boston Transcript p25 O 29 '13 650w

"The light touch, the lack of the controversial, the wholesomeness of the essays makes you hear through every phrase of 'Loiterer's harvest.'"

+ N Y Times 18:643 N 23 '13 580w

"These papers are of the quality of the best chapters in 'Mr. Ingleside' and of the best pages of 'London Lavender.'"

+ Sat R 116:498 O 18 '13 120w

"Although many essayists have a sense of humour equal to his, an equal range of experience, some even an equal power and facility of style, where Mr. Lucas excels is in his own gift of keenness for the details of life."

+ Spec 111:720 N 1 '13 650w

LUCIANI, LUIGI. Human physiology. v 2; tr. by Frances A. Welby; ed. by M. Camis; with a preface by J. N. Langley. *$5.25 Macmillan

This is the second in a series of four volumes, the first of which, dealing with circulation and respiration, appeared in 1911. "The second volume deals with the ductless glands, digestion, the kidneys, and the skin. . . . Much good work upon the functions of the ductless glands and digestion has issued from the Physiological Institute of the Royal University of Rome, of which Prof. Luciani is director, and these subjects are treated at length and with an intimate first-hand knowledge of the most recent work. The book is made additionally interesting and valuable, for in many cases information is given about the successive steps by which the present conclusions have been attained." (Ath)

+ Ath 1913,1:192 F 15 320w

"All the subjects are treated in an entertaining and illuminating fashion. The text naturally lags somewhat behind the progress of the experimental study of the internal secretions, but this fault is in part made good by a supplementary list of recent literature in English."

+ Nation 96:314 Mr 27 '13 320w

"The subject-matter is treated, as a rule, in an interesting way, pros and cons on disputed points are discussed intelligently, and the work of past researchers, though in the main chiefly interesting to the historian, is presented with great fulness and lucidity. The book will prove a valuable asset to the professed physiologist and to the advanced student. It would be advisable that if advanced students take this book as their guide it would be well for them not to rely exclusively upon it. They will derive both pleasure and profit from its study, but if they desire the latest and most accurate account of modern views they should supplement it with reading other books which deal rather with the present than with the past." W. D. H.

+ Nature 91:238 My 8 '13 550w

LUCKE, CHARLES EDWARD. Engineering thermodynamics. 11 *$8 McGraw 12-24016

This "volume, containing over twelve hundred pages, with no unnecessary illustrations or padding, weighing almost five pounds, is a veritable cyclopedia of the science [of thermodynamics]. The book has been prepared primarily for use in the authors' undergraduate classes at Columbia university, and he explains in the preface that certain portions of each chapter will be covered by his undergraduate, and the remainder by his graduate students. . . . In his treatment of the subject, the author states it 'naturally divides into three general parts: the first dealing with the conditions surrounding the doing of work without any consideration of heat changes; the second, heat gains and losses without any reference to work involved and the third, transformation of heat into work or work into heat in conjunction with changes in the condition of the substances,' and 'accordingly the six chapters of the book treat these three parts in order.'"—Engin N

"The latest and by far the most important and exhaustive book on the subject written in this country. The usefulness of the book to students engaged in research work in thermodynamics is seriously impaired by the absence of a bibliography, or of any direct reference to the sources from which information has been obtained. Since the book contains so much of value to the advanced student, it is to be hoped that this defect will be remedied in future editions." C. R. Richards.

+ Engin N 70:582 S 18 '13 2100w

"The book is of great value as a reference book in that the author has got together a large number of the principles used in everyday engineering work with such a collection of tables and curves of data as is seldom found in any one book."

+ Engin Rec 68:391 O 4 '13 450w

LUCY, SIR HENRY WILLIAM (M. P. TOBY, pseud.). Sixty years in the wilderness: more passages by the way. 11 *$3 Dutton (Eng ed 13-10119)

"Sir Henry Lucy's chatty volume, 'Sixty years in the wilderness,' has been followed with little delay by a second of the same title, with the added sub-title, 'More passages by the way.' . . . From 1870 to the end of 1891 the reminiscences, with extracts from the author's diaries and correspondence, ramble agreeably through the field of European and especially English politics, with many side excursions into adjacent domains. . . . Since their recent appearance in the 'Cornhill' these 'passages by the way' have been considerably amplified. Punch's cartoon ('Sir Toby, M. P.') celebrating the knighting of its famous contributor appears as frontispiece."—Dial

+ A L A Bk 10:59 O '13

"Sequels are always dangerous experiments, and we cannot say that Sir Henry Lucy has completely surmounted the difficulty of going twice without repetition over the same ground. Some of his stories have been already told in other connexions, and there is a certain absence of freshness in his views about Parnell, W. H. Smith, and other politicians of the past. Still, Sir Henry writes with such a pretty touch that he is pleasant to read, even when his matter seems familiar. His more sustained efforts are in his happiest vein."

LUCY, SIR HENRY WILLIAM—Continued.

+ — Ath 1912,2:590 N 16 250w

Reviewed by H. C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 30 '12 350w

"Practically a chronicle of the passing men of the day." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 15 '13 560w

+ Dial 54:310 Ap 1 '13 230w

+ Nation 96:621 Je 19 '13 700w

"The author often jots down extracts from his notebooks without attempting to put them in order. It is a book that can be read with much pleasure, but in which it will be difficult to find the facts it contains."

+ — N Y Sun p15 My 10 '13 100w

"All is grist that comes to his busy mill and the good grain is more than the chaff."

+ N Y Times 18:162 Mr 23 '13 1550w

"There are some books into which one instinctively plunges a thumb à la Jack Horner in order to pick out the plums of anecdote. The book is particularly rich in stories about Disraeli, Lord Randolph Churchill, and Professor Blackie."

+ Outlook 103:777 Ap 5 '13 1150w

LUKACH, HARRY CHARLES. Fringe of the East. il *$4 Macmillan

The author "makes the story of a journey made by him in 1908 through some of the Turkish provinces. The greater part of the narrative is devoted to the Holy Land, but Rhodes and Cyprus are both described." (Spec) The journey "was completed two months before the revolution in Constantinople in 1908. Of the many changes that have taken place in the Near East since that date the author says little or nothing; but, far from resenting this silence, the majority of his readers will, we believe, feel grateful for it." (Ath)

+ — A L A Bkl 10:102 N '13

Ath 1913,1:648 Je 14 50w

"Mr. Lukach wisely eschews such themes [war pictures, war impressions, the shortcomings of the Turk, and various suggestions for the settlement of the Balkan question], and, showing a nice discrimination in his choice of material and a happy gift of graceful expression, combined with a true sense of humour, gives us an entirely delightful book of travel of the best type. The illustrations, from photographs by the author and his friends, are well chosen and well reproduced; the index has been carefully compiled, and there is a good map."

+ Ath 1913,2:79 J1 26 770w

"An attractive, informing story. Many illustrations adorn the volume." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 2 '13 900w

"The book is instructive and entertaining. The task of dealing with even so shopworn a subject as Jerusalem is quite well mastered in the two chapters devoted to it."

+ — Lit D 47:584 O 4 '13 210w

"It is a pleasant book with which to while away an irresponsible hour, when one does not wish to be seriously instructed or intensely interested—the sort of book which we would especially commend to the libraries of ocean steamers."

+ — Nation 97:128 Ag 7 '13 250w

+ Nature 92:234 O 23 '13 280w

"The whole volume is interesting; its author knows how to draw pictures of present-day life against a historical background."

+ Outlook 104:721 J1 26 '13 130w

"Nothing is rarer than a complete good book of travel. 'The fringe of the East' is such a book—admirably planned and written, vastly and agreeably informing."

+ Sat R 116:431 O 4 '13 1500w

"Mr. Lukach writes with knowledge as well as with an agreeable style."

+ Spec 110:933 My 31 '13 50w

LUMMIS, CHARLES FLETCHER. Enchanted burro, and other stories; new ed il *$1 (1c) McClurg 12-21601

Part of these stories under the same title were published in 1897. The book has now been out of print for some years and to the present edition of it several new stories are added. Old and New Mexico, Peru, Bolivia, California and New England offer the sources from which the author has drawn his stories.

"The stories are uneven in quality, but they abound in clear and significant descriptions and are full of local color and interest."

+ A L A Bkl 9:266 F '13

"All are interesting tales of peoples of whom we know little, close neighbors as they are."

+ N Y Times 17:716 D 1 '12 150w

LUNDQUIST, R. A. Transmission line construction, methods and costs. il *$3 McGraw 12-24854

"Mr. Lundquist has taken great pains to enhance the value of all cost figures by giving such information as he deems necessary for their proper understanding. Information of the kind given here is available from various sources, but we do not know of any other one publication in which so much useful cost data on transmission line construction has been collected or in which it has been so intelligently presented. As stated in the preface to the book, the author does not attempt to cover the electrical and mechanical calculations involved in the design of high-tension transmission lines; the book treats the subject from the standpoint of the construction man rather than that of the office engineer."—Elec World

"As a practical work for the construction man, this is the best in print. It presents the merits of the various types of line construction, with the methods employed in their building, but does not go into the electrical and mechanical calculations involved. Well illustrated and indexed."

+ A L A Bkl 9:245 F '13

"The up-to-date methods of planning and constructing transmission lines are clearly described, and the numerous illustrations which supplement the text have been wisely selected. The author has presented prices and cost data that are of great value to every practical engineer engaged in transmission-line work, and he offers these figures in such a manner that they may be of real use to the reader. Where the author states his own personal opinions we are generally inclined to agree with him. Among the best portions of the book may be mentioned chapters 2 and 7, the former because it is original and explains in concise language the author's own views as to the proper way to lay out a transmission line, and the latter because it sums up the case for the concrete pole and clearly explains the modern methods of manufacturing and erecting these poles."

+ — Elec World 61:61 Ja 4 '13 520w

"The book is thoroughly readable, and promises to be extremely interesting to an electrical engineer, in spite of being chock full of cost data from cover to cover."

+ Engin N 69:546 Mr 13 '13 650w

Engin Rec 67:334 Mr 22 '13 180w

LUSK, HUGH HART. Social welfare in New Zealand. *$1.50 (2c) Sturgis & Walton 13-2441

The working out of state socialism in New Zealand is the subject of discussion in this volume. The author who has lived in that country most of his life and who has been a member of its parliament writes with "enthusiastic admiration of what has been done by the Island dominion. He takes up each of the several chief lines along which the social welfare legislation has been developed and tells in an admirably succinct style what has been done and what have been the results. The land policy, the arbitration of industrial disputes, the laws for the regulation and protection of labor, old age pensions, woman suffrage, the prevention of monopolistic methods in business, the financial policy, are all treated with thorough and intimate knowledge." (N Y Times)

"An interesting and readable book. But it is a pity that the author has chosen a descriptive and laudatory rather than a discriminating and critical method of treatment." J. E. Le-Rossignol.

+ — Am Econ R 3:637 S '13 400w

Reviewed by E. W. Burgess.

Am J Soc 19:126 J1 '13 130w

"Mr. Lusk is frankly an enthusiastic admirer of the system and has sometimes failed to give full value to the difficulties that have developed during the last five years."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:435 Je '13

"Mr. Lusk's book is full of inaccuracies and as a scientific treatise it has no merits." M. B. Hammond.

— Ann Am Acad 48:278 J1 '13 280w

+ Chaut 72:283 D 6 '13 370w

"Whether or not one can agree with the author's conclusions regarding the value of state socialism for other countries, the graphic account of New Zealand's experience makes the book well worth the reading."

+ J Pol Econ 21:375 Ap '13 200w

"The fact that the preliminary history is twisted to suit Mr. Lusk's theories may make the reader sceptical as to his description of the results of the various experiments. Taken with caution, however, the account of Anglo-Saxons grappling with new conditions is decidedly interesting."

+ — N Y Sun p5 Mr 1 '13 100w

"Altogether, the volume makes the best, most authoritative and most comprehensive account of what New Zealand has done that has yet appeared. It can be heartily recommended to all who are looking for light upon their own efforts to better things in this country."

+ N Y Times 18:100 F 23 '13 1050w

Reviewed by V. S. Clark.

— + Pol Sci Q 28:681 D '13 1000w

"The study would have been more comprehensive if more space had been given to details of such opposition as must exist in any governmental system."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 My 1 '13 800w

Reviewed by Paul Kennaday.

Survey 30:248 My 17 '13 750w

LUZZI, GIOVANNI. Struggle for Christian truth in Italy. $1.50 Revell 13-5084

"The series of lectures recently delivered at Princeton university and other American universities and seminaries by Prof. Giovanni Luzzi of the Waldensian theological seminary of Florence. . . . The history of Christianity in Italy is told from the earliest times to the present day. One of the most interesting chapters is entitled 'Modernism or the present effort for reform within the Roman church.' Prof. Luzzi avows ardent sympathy with the Modernists." (N Y Times) "He is an ardent Protestant, and his references to the Catholic church have a ring that reminds one of the Scotch covenanters." (Nation)

+ A L A Bkl 9:435 Je '13

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 5 '13 800w

+ — Nation 96:577 Je 5 '13 320w

"The lectures on the beginnings of Christianity and on the reformation, with which the author begins, are rather elementary, so are nearly all the explanations of Italian affairs, but that is no fault in lectures delivered before popular audiences."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 1 '13 100w

N Y Times 18:220 Ap 13 '13 100w

"In the ordinary reader's view the chronicle might gain by a slight condensation."

+ — Outlook 104:962 Ag 23 '13 250w

"Well worth reading."

+ Spec 111:522 O 4 '13 550w

LYBYER, ALBERT HOWE. Government of the Ottoman empire in the time of Suleiman the Magnificent. $2 Harvard univ. 13-7898

This volume, published as number 18 of the Harvard historical studies, is a study of the reign of Suleiman, sultan of Turkey who flourished from 1520 to 1566. "Under Suleiman's rule Turkey reached the zenith of her power. The internal structure of the empire was rendered solid. Systems of education and government were instituted, and in many ways the country was wisely and well administered. Prof. Lybyer, after an introductory chapter, draws for us an interesting picture of the condition of the Ottoman empire of this period." (N Y Times)

"A noteworthy contribution to our knowledge of Turkish government." H. D. Jenkins.

+ Am Hist R 19:141 O '13 1050w

+ — Nation 97:411 O 30 '13 950w

"The book will be of great assistance in understanding the present condition and the difficulties of the Balkan peninsula. The book bears marks of its origin as an academic exercise and could be improved in a later edition, which we think is likely to be called for, by greater regard to the convenience of the general reader."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Je 14 '13 570w

+ N Y Times 18:358 Je 15 '13 120w

"Prof Lybyer has given us in this book an extraordinarily interesting and vivid account of the times, and has fortified his statements in every case by a veritable mass of documentary evidence. Those who desire to obtain a true knowledge of Turkish life and character of the period are advised to read this fascinating exposition." Hereward Carrington.

+ N Y Times 18:427 Ag 10 '13 630w

"There is an earnest attempt at impartial and accurate scholarship with abundant footnotes and references. But the book is so admirably arranged that the main conclusions stand out clear and sharp."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 31 '13 580w

LYDEKKER, RICHARD. Sheep and its cousins. il $3.50 Dutton (Eng ed 13-5535)

"The author, an acknowledged authority on matters connected with natural history, describes his present book as written on the same lines as his former ones, 'The horse and its relatives' and 'The ox and its kindred,' to supply information concerning the chief breeds of sheep throughout the world. It deals in greater detail with the domesticated wool-bearing and meat-producing ruminant than with the wild types, for the sound reason that more is known about the former; and though the subject is treated from the natural history point of view, the author justly considers that his book will be interesting to breeders and flockmasters."—Ath

+ A L A Bkl 10:102 N '13

Ath 1912,2:526 N 2 100w

"Mr. Lydekker lacks the vivid power of Mr. Hornaday or Mr. Thompson Seton. The book is dry; but its facts, although not always at first hand, are copious and authentic."

+ — Nation 97:172 Ag 21 '13 280w

+ — Nature 91:81 Mr 27 '13 380w

N Y Times 18:241 Ap 20 '13 100w

LYNDE, FRANCIS. Honorable Senator Sagebrush. il $1.35 (1c) Scribner 13-19335

A story of politics in a western state. Young Evan Blount, just graduated from the Harvard law school, returns to his native west, to which he has been a stranger since as a boy of twelve he was sent east to be educated. He finds his father, known familiarly as "Senator Sagebrush," in control of the politics of his state and in league, he has reason to believe, with the railroads. In his campaign for reform the boy finds himself working against his father's interests. He gets possession of papers which seem to incriminate his father, but, following the dictates of conscience, makes them public. In the end there is a reconciliation and a reestablishment of confidence between the two.

LYNDE, FRANCIS—Continued.

+ A L A Bkl 10:157 D '13

"An absorbing story."

+ Ind 76:176 O 23 '13 120w

"There is a humorous element that saves it from the depressing dreariness of most political novels."

+ N Y Sun p3 O 4 '13 120w

"From the first page to the last, the grip of this book on the reader's attention never relaxes for a moment."

+ N Y Times 18:518 O 5 '13 430w

LYNDE, FRANCIS. Scientific Sprague. il
1 *$1.25 Scribner 12-23516

"The fight between rivals for the possession of a railroad furnishes a thread of continuity for these stirring tales, and the reader is allowed to use a little of his own cleverness in anticipating some of the discoveries made by the unprofessional detective, who is a government chemist, but skilled in analysis of men's thoughts and motives as well as of seeds and soils."—Ind

"Is told with zest and vigor and with well sustained interest."

+ A L A Bkl 9: 171 D '12 *

"These stories are undeniably cleverly done."
F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 36: 439 D '12 420w

"A collection of first-rate detective stories."

+ Ind 73: 1014 O 31 '12 80w

"The 'appeal' of the tale lies neither in the mysteries of crime nor the ingenuities of the sleuth, but in an abundance of situations boldly designed to raise the reader's hair with apprehension."

+ — Nation 96:36 Ja 9 '13 320w

"There is a lot of action in Mr. Lynde's story, and a good variety of novel and interesting situations."

+ N Y Times 17: 767 D 8 '12 80w

LYON, JAMES. Practical guide to the modern orchestra. *35c Macmillan 13-8625

"It has been the endeavour of the author of this book to provide in 'pocket' form the most important facts as to compass and effective use of each of the instruments that make up a modern orchestra." (Spec) "In some cases the author adds a footnote referring to compositions in which the use of an instrument is happily illustrated." (Nation)

"Dr. Lyon supplies the compass of each instrument and the number of practical hints is far greater than a glance at the book would lead one to expect. They are brief, but clear. Why is not the saxophone mentioned?"

+ — Ath 1912.2:100 Jl 27 130w

Nation 96:372 Ap 10 '13 150w

+ Sat R 114:212 Ag 17 '12 200w

"It may be doubted whether he has been entirely successful in gaining his end. The four short pages, for instance, upon such a complex instrument as the horn are probably too much compressed, and assume too much knowledge, to be intelligible to the ignorant, and on the other hand do not enter into details enough to be helpful to those who have already some knowledge of the technique of the instrument. Still, the book provides a certain amount of elementary information in a convenient shape."

+ — Spec 109:279 Ag 24 '12 120w

LYON, WALTER HASTINGS. Capitalization: a book on corporation finance. *$2 (3¼c)
Houghton 12-21942

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"Professor Lyon has set himself the difficult task of writing both for the experienced and the inexperienced. Consequently parts of the book are too elementary for the readers who may get profit from other parts, while for beginners there is danger that much of the book will be as hard to comprehend and to remember as the printed notes of a game which one has never played. There are needless inaccuracies." J: F. Moors.

+ — Am Econ R 3:127 Mr '13 470w

"An excellent little book for students of private finance and economics, bankers and business men."

+ A L A Bkl 9:379 My '13

"To the reviewer the book appears to be as good if not a better treatment of investments than it is of corporation finance. The reviewer has only one adverse criticism. This is that the discussion of watered stock throws too far into the background the fact that issues of this type are only too often not governed by the considerations mentioned by Mr. Lyon." W: S. Stevens.

+ — Ann Am Acad 46:219 Mr '13 530w

Ath 1913.2:133 Ag 9 30w

"The book is written in a graphic and clear style, the examples used are those of existing corporations and securities, the author has a strong grasp on underlying legal and economic principles."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 250w

"In contrast with other treatises on corporation finance, W. H. Lyon's is intensely practical."

+ Ind 75:68 Jl 3 '13 80w

"Essentially this is an exposition from the entrepreneur point of view of what is and why in corporation finance. Within these chosen limits it is very good."

+ — J Pol Econ 21:479 My '13 200w

"The range of topics is restricted, when the book is compared with, say, Meade's 'Corporation finance,' but the topics selected for discussion are treated with vigor and clarity."

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:188 Mr '13 100w

"Mr. Lyon's treatise should prove useful to all young men engaged in financial work, as well as to the large number of people who invest in corporation securities, either on their own account or for financial institutions, while citizens who wish to base on exact knowledge their opinion of the proper attitude of the government toward corporations will find in Mr. Lyon's book a statement of the principles of corporation finance."

+ R of Rs 47:123 Ja '13 130w

"The book is uniformly thorough and clear, and, notwithstanding a few trivial errors in the spelling of place-names in the last chapter, it bears every evidence of deliberate preparation; in the latter respect contrasting favorably with a few otherwise good books in the same field." W: H. Price.

+ — Yale R ns3:201 O '13 600w

LYTTLETON, SARAH. Correspondence of Sarah Spencer, Lady Lyttelton, 1787-1870; ed. by Hon. Mrs. Hugh Wyndham. il *$3.75
Scribner (Eng ed 13-3049)

"These are the letters of Lady Sarah Spencer, who married the third Lord Lyttelton, covering a period from the death of the younger Pitt to the death of the Prince Consort, giving us pleasant peeps into the inner life of the lords and ladies of the Regency, and winding up with a pretty picture of the royal family at the time of Queen Victoria's marriage. . . . The latter half of the correspondence is devoted to the intimate life of Windsor castle during the first dozen years of Queen Victoria's reign, when Lady Lyttelton was lady-in-waiting and governess to the royal children." (Sat R)

"Even if she had not been an intelligent clear-sighted woman with a lively style, her letters must have contained valuable matter; as it is, they are absolutely delightful."

+ Ath 1912,2:409 O 12 730w

+ Boston Transcript p23 Ja 15 '13 800w

"A book of much and various interest."

+ N Y Sun p14 Ja 18 '13 3200w

"The 400 and more pages might have been edited down into considerably less space to the book's advantage. One can find endless offhand comments and side lights upon Ministries and measures, delightful little descriptions of famous men and women, and illuminating glimpses into the manners and customs of a hundred, or seventy-five, or fifty years ago."

+ — N Y Times 18:28 Ja 19 '13 230w

"Lady Lyttelton has neither the humour nor the penetration of Madame D'Arblay, still less the malicious wit of Lord Hervey, which make the Court chronicles of the second and third Georges such good reading."

+ — Sat R 114:680 N 30 '12 730w

"Lady Lyttelton is an invaluable link between the middle of George III's reign and the mid-Victorian epoch. Her letters are not only full of life, but they convey irresistibly an impression of entire truthfulness and accuracy. We are most grateful to Lady Lyttelton's family for adding to our English classics by allowing the publication of these admirable letters, and to her great-granddaughter for editing them with so much skill and charm."

+ — Spec 109:748 N 9 '12 1750w

LYTTON, VICTOR ALEXANDER GEORGE
 12 ROBERT BULWER-LYTTON. Life of Edward Bulwer, first Lord Lytton. 2v *$7.50 Macmillan 13-26131

"When the first Lord Lytton died he left instructions that his life was to be written by his son. In fulfilment of this duty a first instalment of two volumes appeared in 1883. Before, however, the work could be carried further the biographer died. The present Lord Lytton has deemed it better to rewrite the whole story, so that the reader may have before him the work of a single hand. An autobiographical portion, dealing with the first twenty-five years of the famous novelist's life, and a few other passages from the earlier published volumes have, however, with some revision, been retained."—Ath

Ath 1913,2:sup396 O 11 100w

+ Ath 1913,2:583 N 22 2400w

Boston Transcript p9 D 6 '13 230w

"As a restrained and yet 'sympathetic bit of biography, and quite apart from the material brought to light for the first time, this 'life' has already won many readers."

+ N Y Times 18:672 N 30 '13 320w

"It is not everyone who can make his grandfather interesting to the world, but Lord Lytton has succeeded for two reasons. First, because in Lytton Bulwer he had a really interesting subject . . . and, secondly, because Lord Lytton shows himself to be possessed of some of the first qualities necessary for any biographer—clarity of vision, imagination, and, above all, a sympathetic understanding of his subject." F'llson Young.

+ + Sat R 116:614 N 15 '13 1600w

M

MABIE, HAMILTON WRIGHT. American ideals, 12 character and life. *$1.50 (2½c) Macmillan 13-20776

Selections from nearly eighty addresses delivered in Japan, Korea and Manchuria during the six months that the author was exchange professor for the Carnegie peace endowment. They are: Clearing the way; Discovery and exploration; Possessing the continent; Provincial America in literature; Sectional literature; National literature; The American in art; School and college; University and research work; American and his government; Country and people.

"The book is a good interpretation of American ideals and life."

+ Boston Transcript p9 N 15 '13 380w

N Y Sun p11 O 25 '13 880w

Outlook 105:709 N 29 '13 270w

MABIE, LOUISE KENNEDY. Wings of pride. 5 il *$1.30 (2c) Harper 13-4991

Olive Muir, the spoiled beauty who is the heroine of this story, has been brought up to believe herself the daughter of a wealthy New York woman. She learns, thru a sudden turn of circumstances, the truth—that she is but an adopted child, that her parents are poor, that her father is a drunkard, that the despised little western girl who has been a visitor in the New York home is her sister. From this blow to her pride the girl rises with admirable courage, and when she is called to the Ohio town in which her mother lives to assume the position of daughter in the humble home she finds in the new life possibilities of happiness unknown in the old. The young western lawyer, Kent Ordway, has much to do with this transformation, and the full rounding out of the romance is accomplished by the marriage of Alice, the sister, to the New York man to whom Olive had been half-heartedly engaged.

"Though a little crude the story is well told and the characterizations are good."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:455 Je '13

"There is one tremendously real bit of psychology in this book, done so casually as to seem an unconscious piece of work—the non-resisting attitude of utter devotion that Mrs. Muir feels toward Olive."

+ — Bookm 37:341 My '13 430w

"Louise Kennedy Mabie's story of a marble hearted society beauty . . . has neither evident truth of characterization nor illuminating items on the treated phase of life and living with which to compel interest."

— N Y Sun p38 Ap 5 '13 550w

N Y Times 18:164 Mr 23 '13 120w

"There are books swifter in movement throughout and easier to read; nevertheless, 'The wings of pride' is unusually interesting and satisfying."

+ — N Y Times 18:375 Je 22 '13 330w

MACAULAY, ROSE. Lee shore. *$1.25 Doran 12-24920

"An aristocrat by birth and training, but a 'vagabond' by temperament, Peter Margerison meets the losses that the years bring him with a philosophy through which he attains the hardly won peace of life's 'lee shore.' He wins, indeed, the supreme victory of living—that of the ability to laugh after losing. 'To have nothing, yet to possess all things.' This is the spirit of 'The lee shore.'" (Boston Transcript) "It is not so much a study of character as a sermon on renunciation, for the people, in spite of their naturalness, are really symbols, and the situations are marked clearly as only steps in the hero's progress." (N Y Sun)

"An exceptionally interesting study of a group of well drawn characters which, like the author's 'Views and vagabonds,' cultured readers will appreciate."

+ A L A Bkl 9:299 Mr '13

Ath 1912,2:447 O 19 120w

"Original, distinguished among novels of its class."

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 15 '13 380w

"The book is written in admirable English; it will be appreciated by discriminating readers."

+ N Y Sun p4 F 8 '13 300w

"The charm of 'The lee shore,'—and the book is full of charm—lies in its delightful character work and its beauty of poetic description. In the development of her plot Miss Macaulay has too obviously forced her incident to give a better exposition of her idea."

MACAULAY, ROSE—Continued.

+ — N Y Times 18:93 F 23 '13 350w

"Its class is that of the book charming rather than good, sympathetic rather than provocative; a class in which there exist many novels better than this, some of them published during this year. The hardest criticism of the book is that the story is unfinished."

+ — Sat R 114:617 N 16 '12 870w

"This is not a book which makes for national efficiency, but it is delightful to read."

+ Spec 109:652 O 26 '12 1850w

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Je 5 '13 180w

MCBRIDE, ROBERT MEDILL (ROBERT MEDILL, pseud.). Little book of Brittany. il *75c (5½c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-11546

"The purpose of this book," says the Foreword, "is to bring to the reader the atmosphere of Brittany rather than a detailed catalogue of information about it. It is not exhaustive but suggestive." The five chapters are headed: The Breton family tree; The gateway to Brittany; Through the upper towns; The singular cities of lower Brittany; The spell of the middle ages.

"The writer's unpretentious style is altogether agreeable and his illustrations numerous, pleasing and representative."

+ — Ind 74:1306 Je 5 '13 350w

+ N Y Times 18:419 Ag 3 '13 70w

"An attractive book."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 150w

MCCAEE, JOSEPH. Candid history of the Jesus¹² its. *$3.50 Putnam (Eng ed A13-1808)

The author was at one time a Catholic priest and professor of theology. He withdrew from the church entirely, finding it impossible to accept her tenets. It is as an agnostic, therefore, as one unbiased by either Catholic or Protestant views that he approaches his subject in this work. He has attempted to write a fair and unprejudiced history of the Society of Jesus.

"Yet, candor admitted, has Mr. McCabe after all given us a satisfactory understanding of the most fundamental source of the original strength and continued vitality of the Jesuits? Does he sufficiently emphasize the mysticism and the religious fanaticism that determined Ignatius to dedicate his abilities to the service of the church, and that continued through all periods to supply the Society with a nucleus of high-minded, genuinely religious, if fanatical, members? A failure to place entirely in the right perspective this dynamic element in the life of the Society is the chief, perhaps the only, serious criticism that can be brought against this judicious and, in parts, intensely absorbing narrative."

+ — Nation 97:383 O 23 '13 1700w

"The candour of his history is of the kind which exhausts itself in a devoted exposition of the vices, and has no strength left for the virtues, of the object of its attentions. Mr. McCabe's analysis of the causes which led to the ruin of the Society is remarkably full and on the whole accurate."

+ — Spec 111:sup687 N 1 '13 1550w

MCCANN, ALFRED WATTERSON. Starving America. il *$1.50 Doran 13-1770

"The general thesis of the volume is that, in the course of its preparation for consumption much of our food, especially the great staples that can be tampered with, are robbed of some of the elements most necessary for the nourishing of the body, and that, therefore, we are eating great quantities of material that does not feed us. Children, especially, are injured, since they depend especially upon these foods; and, being under nourished, they are rendered an easy prey to disease. From this thesis Mr. McCann branches out into the subject of food adulterations of all sorts and treats, with much detail, such matters as artificial colorings and preservatives."—N Y Times

"An arresting and important book though its sensational, newspaper style is against it."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:379 My '13

"Every man and woman who has a body to feed, whether it be his own body or his child's, should read Mr. McCann's 'Starving America' and learn how to feed that body properly."

+ Chaut 70:353 My '13 230w

"The principal message of Mr. McCann's book is delivered in a rambling way and without much literary art, and yet is impressive by the weight of facts that bear out his reasoning."

+ — Nation 96:396 Ap 17 '13 850w

"There is some truth in every point that Mr. McCann makes; it is not the whole truth, however, and many of his scares have little ground for them."

+ — N Y Sun p8 F 22 '13 170w

"Making due allowance for the somewhat highly-colored presentation of his theme, there is no gainsaying its importance. Of particular consequence are the chapters in which is explained the importance of the mineral salts in our food, a subject which has only in recent years attracted the attention of the biochemists. The results of the investigations of the latter are not by any means as well known as they should be, and Mr. McCann deserves much commendation for setting them so simply and plainly before the general reader."

+ — N Y Times 18:266 My 4 '13 350w

"On the whole, the book is timely and deserves a wide reading. It is not a great book nor an epoch-making one, but it bears the stamp of sincerity, provided one reads to the end, and calls attention to a number of awful truths that should give us pause." A. E. Cance.

+ — Survey 30:146 Ap 26 '13 850w

MCCARTER, MRS. MARGARET HILL. Wall² of men. il *$1.35 (1c) McClurg 12-24062

This story of Kansas begins with the period of the fight for free soil. The Wakarusa war, the Quantrell raid, and the sacking of the city of Lawrence are historical events which enter into the story's action, and following there comes the civil war in which Kansas men played so brave a part. A group of young people, Craig Penwyn, a southerner, Elliot Darrow, a Quaker, and Beth Lamond, a Scotch lass, who are boys and girls together when the story opens are the characters around whom the plot is built.

+ — N Y Sun p8 Ja 11 '13 1450w

"Although it falls short of perfection as a novel, it is well worth reading for the portrayal it makes of life in Kansas in the days when the abolitionists and pro-slavery men were fighting over the question whether the territory should be admitted to the union as a slave state or a free state."

+ — N Y Times 17:794 D 29 '12 70w

MCCARTHY, JUSTIN. Our book of memories. il *$4 (2c) Small (Eng ed 13-1071)

The book is made up of the letters of Justin McCarthy to his friend and literary collaborator, Mrs. Praed, who writes the introduction and furnishes the biographical material, the connecting links between the letters. The friendship which began in 1884 continued up to the time of Mr. McCarthy's death. "The chief interest in this volume consists in its unconscious portrayal of McCarthy during his later years. Nothing could be more admirable than the constancy with which he adhered to a political position he had never sought and in many ways disliked; his fine character stands out in his matter-of-fact descriptions of his literary labours—often of the pot-boiling kind—and in his brave behaviour under the financial disaster due to his connexion with the unfortunate Irish exhibition." (Ath)

"The volume might have been condensed to advantage."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:328 Ap '13

"Mrs. Campbell Praed's literary partnership with Justin McCarthy produced some acceptable novels and a book on the Thames. The association has every right to be put on record, but 'Our book of memories' is much too long. McCarthy's own 'Reminiscences' and other writings have anticipated a good deal of it, particularly on the political side. Mrs. Campbell Praed's connecting passages incline to the ecstatic."

+ — Ath 1912,2:476 O 26 330w

"The events of which the book is so full do not speak more of the man, Justin McCarthy, than does the warm-hearted friendship and the loyalty which can be read in every line of these letters." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 1350w

+ Cath World 97:396 Je '13 700w

"It is a book of deep interest, edifying and entertaining, and combines the fascination of a novel with the authoritative facts of history."

+ Lit D 46:597 Mr 15 '13 230w

"The value of this work . . . lies in the picture of the man, drawn all unconsciously by himself and now etched in and laid before us by one who was well qualified to finish the portrait, and did so as a labor of love."

+ Nation 96:338 Ap 3 '13 600w

"The volume has, indeed, an epic quality. Its sweep of life is broad and varied, close-knit to human affairs, yet poetic, too. One is taken into the heart of the storm—and then slowly the stress and turmoil die away. The quiet ending by the sea, without complaint over growing blindness and weakness is peculiarly touching and appealing."

+ N Y Times 18:110 Mr 2 '13 1900w

"There is hardly a page which is not vivid and tense with contemporary history."

+ Outlook 103:822 Ap 12 '13 200w

"A book packed full of incident about entertaining personalities"

+ R of Rs 47:507 Ap '13 70w

"Except as a monument of a very pleasant collaboration between two literary people, we fail to discern the object in giving this correspondence to the public."

+ Sat R 114:739 D 14 '12 370w

"Leisure is essential to good letter writing, and leisure was unknown to McCarthy during the years of his maturity. His energies were too dispersed, his mind too variously occupied to allow of deep thought or deeply personal expression. It was this fault which made Mrs. Praed's task so difficult. The level of the letters is so even that selection became almost impossible, and Mrs. Praed has evidently found the task beyond her. If the result is occasional monotony, an experienced reader is never without his remedy."

+ — Spec 110:279 F 15 '13 650w

MCCARTHY, JUSTIN HUNTLY. Calling the 70 tune. *$1.25 Doran 13-10663

"When Justin Huntly McCarthy names his heroine Gondoline the reader may feel sure that he is venturing into facetious extravaganzas. The hero is an adventurous middle aged Briton, who has made money in a pretty disreputable way in South America. In making him a bit of a blackguard the author rather spoils him. He finds enough to gratify his taste for adventure in a quiet London suburb, where he undertakes to win the affections of a girl who is the daughter of an old chum of his and of the girl who rejected him in his youth. His methods are those of sheer impudence, and he is amusingly successful."—N Y Times

"Long, solid paragraphs of description and rumination take much from the interest of this tale, and it is only towards the end that it moves at all briskly. The plot is not attractively contrived, and the characters are self-centred and commonplace: not one spark of poetry lightens the pages, and even the love-making (such as it is) is marred by unnecessary slang. Yet the theme has interesting possibilities."

+ — Ath 1913,1:404 Ap 12 90w

Reviewed by W: M. Payne.

Dial 55:150 S 1 '13 330w

N Y Sun p3 Je 21 '13 170w

MCCAULEY, CLARICE VALLETTE. Garden
2 of dreams. *$1.25 (4½c) McClurg 12-21405

A little story of love and marriage and happiness amid scenes of quiet rural peace. A man of the world who has won name and fame but not contentment comes back to the valley of his boyhood to find there the girl of his dreams. In a series of letters the story tells of their happy love up to the time when a little son comes to share with them the dream paradise in which they live.

Dial 53:456 D 1 '12 120w

MCCORMICK, FREDERICK. Flowery republic.
5 Il *$2.50 (2c) Appleton 13-11973

A book of first hand information on China. "Mr. McCormick was on the spot when the movement started that ended in the overthrow of the monarchy, he was exceptionally well informed about China and the Chinese people, he had news from competent persons about what happened in places where he was unable to be in person, and so was enabled to watch the whole course of the revolution. In his book he relates what occurred almost day by day, he supplies information about the men who were active at every step, often gives personal experiences, and is brief in his comments and inferences." (N Y Sun)

+ — A L A Bkl 10:143 D '13

Am Pol Sci R 7:482 Ag '13 200w

"Mr. McCormick has produced a lively and amusing narrative. His love of picturesque statement occasionally leads him astray."

+ — Ath 1913,1:514 My 10 900w

"The reader who has the patience and the skill to delve here and there for the real nuggets which 'The flowery republic' contains, will obtain information about the Chinese revolution and about the present situation which he could find in no other way."

+ — Boston Transcript p18 Jl 30 '13 450w

+ Chaut 72:205 N 8 '13 330w

"A decidedly blurred impression is left upon the reader by the whole book."

+ — Dial 55:267 O 1 '13 300w

+ — Lit D 47:430 S 13 '13 350w

"It is not an easy book to read on account of the mass of details about persons and matters that are unfamiliar, but it is a perfect encyclopædia of facts for the reader who wishes to understand the recent transformation of China."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Je 7 '13 200w

"Especially timely just now when our national interest in China is unusually keen."

+ — N Y Sun p12 Je 14 '13 40w

"A conscientious chronicle. The pen pictures Mr. McCormick gives of the leaders [in the revolution] are clear and impartial." R. L. W.

+ — N Y Times 18:411 Jl 27 '13 900w

"Giving the impression of a book somewhat hastily thrown together, 'The flowery republic,' nevertheless, makes us feel the actuality of events in China, and gives us as a total result a more closely human view than most of us have had of the Chinese people."

+ — No Am 198:421 S '13 750w

"His account is vivid and impressive."

+ — Outlook 104:633 Jl 19 '13 150w

"A strong new, authoritative book. [The author's] style is entertaining and impressive, and he has added much to the book by the exceedingly interesting and unusual pictures."

+ — R of Rs 48:123 Jl '13 100w

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13 850w

MCCRACKAN, WILLIAM DENISON. Spell of the Italian lakes; new ed. (Spell ser.) *$2.50 Page

"The book is seventh in a series of books relating to the scenery, romance, and history of lands and regions that have become resorts for tourists and visitors from abroad. They are not guide books, but seem rather designed to awaken in advance an intelligent interest in the past and the present of the country and its people." (Boston Transcript) "The author is an experienced and appreciative traveler; he not only describes the lakes and their towns, and tells what there is that is specially enjoyable about them, but also adds just those bits of historical information which give a meaning to travel and observation." (Outlook)

"Altogether, in text and in illustrations, the book is worthy the region which it describes."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '13 500w
+ Ind 75:691 S 18 '13 310w
+ N Y Sun p5 Je 14 '13 100w

"There are many pictures in color and in black and white, and these do a great deal to recall to the eye the quaintness and beauty of the lake region."
+ Outlook 104:392 Je 21 '13 100w

MCCRACKEN, ELIZABETH. American child. il *$1.25 (4c) Houghton 13-5598

This little book, with its attractive illustrations from photographs of real children, is an indirect answer to the charge that American children are self-assertive and ill-bred. The children of whom the author writes are all most lovable. She writes of: The child at home; The child at play; The country child; The child in school; The child in the library; The child in church.

+ A L A Bkl 9:435 Je '13

"The charm of this appreciation of the American child is greatly enhanced by the beautiful photographs by Alice Austin, showing the children in so many lovely and unconscious poses. Its charm for us is not in its giving us any information which we did not have in regard to American children, but because it is so beautiful an appreciation of all that is best in the children of the nation, and in the justification of the statement that Americans are a nation of child lovers." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 2 '13 650w

"From these pages the reader will gain comprehension and affectionate regard for the needs of the child and an appreciation of all that he can offer in the way of development and pleasure in the bringing out of individuality and specialized aptitude. The intolerant person who is childless will find much to enjoy in this little volume which should change his point of view."
+ Lit D 46:907 Ap 19 '13 180w

"The chapters make, altogether, an unpretentious but very readable little volume which contains no effort at psychological study of the question and lays no claim to searching analysis or profound philosophy. It is just an intimate little book, written out of a wide observation and a very great love of children. And after one has read it he realizes that he understands better than he did before the part American children play in American life."
+ N Y Times 18:287 Ap 20 '13 400w

"Full of anecdotes and incidents that illustrate the points presented; and, as with all of Miss McCracken's writing, they have a real sense of humor as well as of social helpfulness."

+ Outlook 103:822 Ap 12 '13 80w

+ R of Rs 47:765 Je '13 50w

"The real message of the book is that the reciprocal relation of children and parents can be and should be one of the most beautiful and helpful that this old world knows. The title might have been 'True stories of parents who knew how to live with their children.'" H: W. Thurston.

+ Survey 30:249 My 17 '13 120w

MCCULLAGH, FRANCIS. Italy's war for a desert; being some experiences of a war-correspondent with the Italians in Tripoli. il *$2.75 (2½c) Browne & Howell (Eng ed 12-25622)

The author was a London war correspondent who turned in his papers to the Italian commander and left Africa in order that he might be free to express frankly his opinion of what he had seen. His book is "an emphatically anti-Italian account of the late conflict between Italy and Turkey, illustrated and enforced by things seen and heard which certainly do not redound to the glory of those who undertook the 'pirate-raid,' as Hamilcar Cipriani himself designated the Tripolitan expedition. Both the bone of contention between the two disputants was of little worth to Italy, the author declares, and the manner of its snatching from its ancient possessor was disgraceful and, in some of its details, unspeakably revolting. Incidents in plenty are supplied to prove the inhumanity of the invading army." (Dial)

"The author's reputation places his statements beyond suspicion, but his extreme prejudice gives the work the nature of an assault."
+ A L A Bkl 9:436 Je '13

"Many illustrations from photographs, mute witnesses to the truth of Mr. McCullagh's careful narrative, are to be found in the book."

+ Dial 54:386 My 1 '13 300w

+ Lit D 47:254 Ag 16 '13 370w

"According as one looks at it, the present story is very badly or very cleverly planned. One feels that Mr. McCullagh has made out a case. But he could have made it stronger by not stopping to pick fault with anything and everything Italian."

+ Nation 95:15 Jl 4 '12 470w

"He is a skilled and experienced observer of many wars, in his accounts of which no one ever questioned his impartiality and accuracy. It is unfortunate for Italy that such a man should find himself compelled to bring in such a report of this one."

+ N Y Times 18:277 My 11 '13 1200w

"A pointed and illuminating account."

+ R of Rs 47:634 My '13 70w

"Everyone, except Italian officials, who knows the previous record of Mr. McCullagh recognizes him as an entirely honest man. Therefore when he tells us that he saw massacres we believe him, especially as he is supported in his assertions by other correspondents of the highest credit and of many nationalities."

+ Sat R 114:147 Ag 3 '12 550w

MCCULLOH, WALTER. Conservation of water. il *$2 Yale univ. press 13-20415

A series of lectures delivered before the senior class of Sheffield scientific school. The author "discusses the basic data essential to a comprehensive study of water storage, water power, water storage for water supplies, sanitation and irrigation, and water resources of New York state." (Boston Transcript)

Boston Transcript p11 N 10 '13 170w

"The present lectures admirably present a broad view of the whole field of water conservation."

+ Engin N 70:999 N 13 '13 470w

"The book should be of interest to those concerned with the general problem of water conservation." W. E. Fuller.

+ Engin Rec 68:504 N 1 '13 300w

+ N Y Sun p6 S 27 '13 50w

+ N Y Times 18:521 O 5 '13 40w

MACCUNN, JOHN. Political philosophy of Burke. *$1.40 Longmans (Eng ed 13-13606)

"A brief, clear and sober analysis of that great Whig's doctrines. It is sympathetic in spirit, but not laudatory or unduly oblivious to well-recognized faults. The author treats the subject topically, under such heads as theories and theorists, prudence, the people, conservatism, ancestral wisdom, government, rights and democracy, and endeavors to present the essence of Burke's views on these several matters."

"Professor MacCunn's volume, marked by such clarity and conciseness, is just the book to put into the hands of the student who is seeking the intimate essence of Burke's political science." C: A. Beard.

+ — Am Hist R 19:170 O '13 400w

"Prof. MacCunn is, perhaps, a little too generous to Burke the politician. The book, unfortunately, lacks an index."

+ — Ath 1913,1:356 Mr 29 350w

"It would make admirable reading for some of the half-baked teachers of political and social philosophy who are now at large in American schools and colleges. The chapter entitled What is a people? and that entitled Rights, are particularly admirable and timely."

+ Educ R 46:423 N '13 90w

"Underlying it all is the thesis that Burke's conservatism was a conservatism of principles, not of sentiment or prejudice, and it is with this concept rather than with the marshalling of extracts that we may fairly quarrel."

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:552 S '13 170w

"It fills a place which till now has remained vacant."

+ Spec 110:807 My 10 '13 1500w

MCCUTCHEON, GEORGE BARR. Fool and his money. il *$1.30 (1½c) Dodd 13-19326

A castle on the Danube for which the fool, a popular author who has inherited a fortune, has exchanged some of his good money in the belief that it will afford a quiet retreat in which to work out his next story, is the scene of this story. He finds that in buying the castle he has bought as well, responsibilities, mysteries, and a ready-made melodrama. He discovers that one wing of his castle is inhabited and his tenant turns out to be a beautiful countess of American birth who is in hiding from her husband, a rascally Hungarian nobleman. The author writes but two chapters of his novel—but he lives thru a romance of his own to a very happy and satisfactory conclusion.

+ — Boston Transcript p8 S 20 '13 310w

"The story gains rather than loses interest from the fact that Mr. McCutcheon has departed from his usual idealistically romantic formation and the readers' attention will not be likely to flag."

+ Ind 75:690 S 18 '13 130w

Nation 97:336 O 9 '13 170w

"The story could be much improved from the point of view of art and from that of probability, but it is funny and it is entertaining."

+ — N Y Sun p3 S 27 '13 350w

"An extravaganza it certainly is, but one both sparkling and healthful. It leaves a good, clean taste in the mouth, and to such of its readers as are minded after their first harvest of enjoyment to glean in leisurely fashion from its pages it will furnish not a little food for thought."

+ — N Y Times 18:584 O 26 '13 500w

"After settling upon a course of action, the story develops some tense situations and interesting phases, but Mr. McCutcheon's sense of humor and skill in leading up to climaxes alone saves the story from being entirely commonplace."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 O 2 '13 280w

MCCUTCHEON, JOHN TINNEY. Dawson '11—fortune hunter. il *$1 Dodd 12-24462

"How a country boy, fresh from college, went to Chicago to seek his fortune, and just what sort of a fortune his search brought him, it told with no little cleverness of both pen and pencil by Mr. John T. McCutcheon." (Dial) "Most of the story is told in the form of letters to his mother—genuine boy-letters, full of the conglomerate humor which is the special art of the undergraduate. The city does not welcome him with open arms, and he has a struggle to get a foothold—and to hide the extent of his troubles from the little family group at home." (Nation)

"Slight little story but very successful in depicting the heart and ambition of a nice, home-loving, small-town boy."

+ A L A Bkl 9:258 F '13 +

"The little story, about an hour's reading, is interesting and novel and contains a moral lesson for those who wish or need it. The volume may be especially recommended to mothers as a parting gift to sons who are going forth to conquer the world, for it will serve as a reminder of several things the boys should do. They will learn the lessons while they are being entertained by the lively and always upright Dawson."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 25 '13 180w

"The collegian just ready to conquer the great world could enjoyably and profitably devote a spare hour to Dawson's case before setting forth in quest of his own fortune."

+ Dial 53:504 D 16 '12 120w

+ Ind 73:1080 N 7 '12 80w

"The pictures, characteristic of Mr. McCutcheon almost tell the story by themselves."

+ Nation 96:36 Ja 9 '13 150w

MACDONALD, JAMES RAMSAY. Syndicalism: a critical examination. *60c (4c) Open ct. (Eng ed 12-27429)

The contents of this small volume is based upon a series of articles which appeared in the "Daily chronicle" of London in 1912. The author's "point of view is that of a trade-unionist who believes that progress for organized labor lies in operating in the factory and workshop, keeping alive labor issues and labor demands," while acting with a Parliamentary party which steadily changes social organization and secures the permanence of every gain acquired. . . . He attacks syndicalism really from three standpoints: its philosophy, its program, and its leaders." (J Pol Econ)

"Mr. Macdonald's denunciation of syndicalism would have lost nothing but rather gained, had he adopted a less aggressive and masterful tone."

+ — Ath 1912,2:161 Ag 17 100w

Boston Transcript p28 F 12 '13 600w

"Despite this bias, which may be equated, the book gives a short, clear, and simple presentation of its subject."

+ — J Pol Econ 21:373 Ap '13 420w

Outlook 103:279 F 1 '13 80w

Spec 109:sup487 O 5 '12 250w

"It is clever, entertaining, at times witty. The author may be pardoned for his inaccuracies in view of the harmless manner in which he puts them." L: Levine.

+ — Survey 31:167 N 8 '13 130w

MACDONALD, JOHN. Czar Ferdinand and his people. il $4 Stokes (Eng ed A13-2031)

"Mr. Macdonald whose well-known book on 'Turkey and the Eastern question' has proved his qualifications to deal with the vexed and intricate problems of the Near East, precedes his careful study of Ferdinand's personality and of his reign by a brief but welcome and well-balanced history of Bulgaria itself." (Outlook) "The connexion of the Bulgarian sovereign with the Rilo monks is pleasantly described; and what he has done for Bulgarian literature is recounted in a very readable chapter. . . . It is, however, to the chapter on the Bulgarian army that most people will turn." (Ath)

MACDONALD, JOHN—Continued.

"[Mr. Macdonald's] considerable knowledge of the Balkans commends this new work from his pen. The index is not good."

+ — Ath 1913,1:647 Je 14 250w

+ Boston Transcript p9 S 27 '13 1200w

"The few weeks since the book was written have seen Bulgaria subjected to a reversal of fortune almost unprecedented in the history of nations so certain paragraphs already sound strangely. But its value as a whole is not affected."

+ — Ind 75:691 S 18 '13 300w

+ — Nation 97:464 N 13 '13 220w

+ — N Y Times 18:477 S 21 '13 2000w

"We cordially commend Mr. Macdonald's volume to all who would acquire that knowledge of modern Bulgaria which is essential to anything like a complete understanding of the present situation."

+ Outlook 104:873 Ag 16 '13 200w

"In spite of a style which is sometimes irritating he has produced a work which should prove of value to those who have no time for very close study of Balkan problems."

+ — Sat R 116:51 Jl 12 '13 950w

+ Spec 111:249 Ag 16 '13 650w

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ag 28 '13 570w

MCDONALD, RONALD. Lanchester of Brzenose. (Eng. title, Raymond Lanchester) *$1.30 Lane 13-1151

"A man who is happily married suddenly discovers that his wife is committing adultery; he enables her to obtain a divorce from him and does everything he can to preserve her good fame. . . . He is forced to kidnap his little son, who is wasting away because his mother does not love him, and in the process of educating him finds out the good qualities of a delightful young woman, whom he marries in the end. The guilty wife marries an innocent third party and lives up to her new opportunities."—N Y Sun

"Hope is raised on the first page of this book, by p. 25 we are in the grip of a strange excitement, and to the end the interest holds. The author has the power of creating characters that are not easily forgotten, and even his sketches appeal to the imagination. The handling of the detailed portraits is just as sure, and the story is of real interest."

+ Ath 1912,2:757 D 21 70w

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Mr 5 '13 320w

"This summary is far from doing justice to either the ingenuity, the dramatic force, or the all-pervading charm of the novel, which is one of the very best of the year's output." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:304. Ap 1 '13 650w

"An entertaining and very well written tale, the one shocking and improbable thing in which is the inexplicable act on which it turns, which the reader is never allowed to forget."

+ — N Y Sun p3 F 15 '13 200w

"The story has a definite spinal column—a good plot—but its ribs are rather far apart. It must be said of the author that he has unusual facility on the writing of conversation and in making it bear up and out his plot. For there is little narrative in the book. The story progresses almost entirely by means of the talk."

+ — N Y Times 18:48 F 2 '13 150w

"Dickey, the boy, is an admirable study of a child, and altogether Mr. Ronald Macdonald deserves much praise for a novel containing serious and well-thought-out matter admirably treated."

+ — Spec 110:158 Ja 25 '13 170w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM. From Jefferson to Lincoln. *50c (1c) Holt 13-9742

This volume, number 67 in the "Home university library," presents in brief compass the history of the United States from 1815 to 1860. It "has been restricted chiefly to the exposition of the three lines of development, namely, constitutional growth, the rise and progress of political parties, and slavery. Side by side with these dominating interests run the birth and expansion of a new sense of democracy; and of this, too, in the field of its political expression, I have sought to give a view." (Author's preface)

"The many admirable qualities of this little volume will certainly win for it a hearty welcome from a wide and varied constituency. A few maps, especially for the Mexican war, the territorial acquisitions, and the boundary questions would have added to the serviceability of the volume. The bibliographical note is excellent, but might have been much improved, without undue expansion, by the inclusion of a large number of the recent special studies." F. M. Anderson.

+ — Am Hist R 19:176 O '13 500w

A L A Bkl 10:19 S '13 *

Nation 97:486 N 20 '13 60w

"He writes in a direct, terse style that is sometimes a little dry, but is always exact and to the point. Now and then he finds space for a pithy comment intended to illuminate the general situation. The reader who knows the subject will be very likely to disagree with many of these side remarks, but there is nothing that adds so much savor to the perusal of a book as the desire to dispute with the author."

+ — N Y Times 18:563 O 19 '13 280w

MCEVOY, CHARLES. Brass faces. *$1.25 Houghton A13-1470

In this exciting adventure story "an innocent idle young man . . . is summoned to the rescue of a maiden held in duress in a London house. He gets her away and conceals her in a lonely country place. Whereupon a noble family, whose honor is at stake set about to recover the runaway and lay hands on the abductor. An American girl of detective propensities gets on the trail of the chivalrous young man, and there is a mighty good chase, in which the reader, so to speak, runs with the hare."—Nation

"Mr. McEvoy has nearly written a good adventure story. He has left more than one thread hanging loose, and has contented himself with a carelessly instead of a dexterously, woven tissue."

— + Ath 1912,2:15 Jl 6 50w

"Mr. McEvoy does not permit the rapid action of his tale to flag. His character drawing is not so surely done. The American detective is quite impossible as usual. In moments of excitement, she swears, 'by Lincoln,' which is a new English touch."

+ — Bookm 37:465 Je '13 500w

"'Brass faces' is essentially an adventure story, filled with action and incidents to the exclusion of everything else; the speed is a little breath taking but absorbing. For a book of its kind the character sketching is fairly vivid, and heightens the cleverness of the plot."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '13 170w

"A breezy story, told in plain journalistic fashion with much invention and little artifice." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:21 Jl 1 '13 270w

"Clever story. The situation in piquant."

+ Nation 96:475 My 8 '13 120w

"A topsy turvy burlesque. The end is ridiculously prosaic, leaving the reader as well as the hero with the feeling that he has been taken in."

— N Y Sun p4 My 3 '13 100w

+ — N Y Times 18:489 S 21 '13 210w

MACGOWAN, REV. JOHN. Men and manners of modern China. il *$3.50 Dodd (Eng ed 12-29123)

While the recent upheaval in China came to the outside world as a surprising manifestation, those who had lived in the land were not unprepared for such a change. The author of the present book is one of these and he attempts here to interpret the recent uprising thru his knowledge of Chinese character. "While endeavoring to make clear to his readers the sequence of recent events, [he] has devoted the larger portion of his work to a description of the life of the people and a sympathetic delineation of their character, for which the fifty years spent by him in intimate association with them—mainly, we gather, in the provinces lying to the south of the Yangtse—have rendered him fully competent." (Ath)

"As a whole the chapters do not contain enough that is new to warrant their purchase by the average library already having good material."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:196 Ja '13

"There may be suspicion at some points that the impulse to entertain has given rise to some little exaggeration." A. P. Winston.

+ — Ann Am Acad 47:301 My '13 350w

+ Ath 1912.2:334 S 28 1050w

"Deviations from the path of charity and deficiencies in cosmopolitan breadth are, after all, not of so serious a character in 'Men and manners of modern China' but that the book is to be heartily welcomed for its remarkable vividness of portraiture of a race destined to play a great rôle in future history. One must regret the serious crudities of composition and expression that occur rather frequently throughout the book."

+ — Dial 54:58 Ja 16 '13 600w

+ Nation 96:421 Ap 24 '13 650w

Outlook 102:321 O 12 '12 30w

"This volume is written with unusual clarity and comprehensiveness of style."

+ R of Rs 46:754 D '12 250w

"Mr. MacGowan has, during a residence of fifty years in China, seen and recorded much that is interesting; but he is rather prone to forget the Chinese proverb that official projects have beginnings but no endings, and to assume that because a scheme is mooted it will be achieved."

+ — Sat R 115:213 F 15 '13 460w

"With his vigorous description and ready fund of anecdote, Mr. MacGowan gives the reader the nearest possible approach to first-hand experience, and leaves in the mind a distinct and almost personal impression of Chinese life and manners."

+ Spec 110:309 My 10 '13 430w

MACGRATH, HAROLD. Parrot & co. il $*1.30 (2½c) Bobbs 13-11964

The scene opens in Burma and the hero, a picturesque vagabond, appears in the first chapter accompanied by a faithful native servant and a parrot. The trio, known up and down the Irrawaddy as "Parrot and company," attract the attention of the heroine, a rich American girl, daringly touring the Orient alone. From the beginning she is struck by the resemblance between the strange wanderer and the man at home whom she is to marry. The remainder of the tale is concerned mainly with the revelation of the relationship between these two men.

"No one will be disappointed in this tale, which, while not strikingly original, is told in its author's customary lively manner."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 350w

Nation 97:191 J1 31 '13 270w

"The hero, with his parrot and his Eurasian retainer, makes an effective entrance on the stage. We should like to follow him in further adventures, for he looks like a man. Unfortunately he falls into the hands of the heroine, who is quaint, to say the least, and all that he does afterward lies in the domain of cheap, hum-drum melodrama."

— N Y Sun p3 Je 7 '13 100w.

Outlook 104:393 Je 21 '13 130w

MACGREGOR, THEODORE DOUGLAS. Two thousand points for financial advertising. il $*1.50 Bankers' pub. 12-3466

"The book is divided into five sections with suggestions for savings bank, commercial bank, trust company, safe deposit and investment advertising. In addition to the suggestions, there are many comments that will be found valuable to those whose work lies in the financial field."—Ind

"A convenient tool for the professional advertiser or local firms."

+ A L A Bkl 9:245 F '13

"A writer of financial advertising, whose stock of ideas is running low, will find an inexhaustible supply in [this book]."

+ Ind 73:388 Ag 15 '12 70w

MACHARG, WILLIAM, and BALMER, EDWIN. Surakarta. il $*1.25 (3c) Small 13-19941

The action takes place in Chicago but it is concerned mainly with the appearances and disappearances of the Surakarta, a magnificent Javanese emerald. Lorine Regan, an American girl of great wealth, is supposed to have promised to marry the Soesoehocnan of Surakarta on two conditions—that he banish the other women of his harem, and that he give to her this priceless gem. When an embassy from Java is sent to Chicago with the emerald, Wade Hereford, administrator of the Regan estate takes a hand in the game to protect his ward's interests.

"An impossible but entertaining detective story."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:157 D '13

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 31 '13 280w

"The Su-ra-kar-ta' is a disappointment. While well told and ingenious, the clearing up of the crime refuses to be credible; while the best that can be said of the apparently conscienceless heroine who causes all the trouble is that she is even more beyond the pale of possibility."

— N Y Times 18:526 O 12 '13 150w

"The story has the merit of being ingenious if nothing more and will help to pass away an idle hour."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 O 16 '13 150w

MACK, ADELAIDE. Magnetic Paris. il $*1.75 7. Bobbs 13-9796

"For those of us who have visited Paris reading Miss Mack's book, 'Magnetic Paris,' will be in the nature of reviewing our post card and kodak pictures. In it we will find all our chance but pleasant acquaintances of the boulevards, the Quarter, Luxembourg gardens, and Versailles. For those of us who have not been to the French capital the subject matter will be as wholly satisfactory, for the things described are just those that most people are inclined to connect Paris with."—N Y Times

"The author, with an unaccustomed wisdom, for which we are grateful, has realized that excellent descriptions of monuments are to be found in trustworthy guide-books, and confines herself entirely to the human, and therefore the most interesting, side of Paris. At times, perhaps, her enthusiasm runs away with her, as when she seems to be looking at the present rather effete bohemianism of the Quartier through the glasses of Du Maurier. Her frankness, too, is sometimes a little self-consciously emancipated, and she has a tendency to argue from the particular to the general. Such passages as we have mentioned, however, are insignificant blemishes in a book that is on the whole bright and entertaining."

+ — Nation 96:577 Je 5 '13 350w

"The charm of Miss Mack's book lies in the wealth of detail which she has put into it. She is a keen observer, possesses a sense of humor, and discusses such familiar things as Parisian housekeeping and the high cost of living. One cannot put the book down without a word of praise for the illustrations, which furnish so much of its enjoyment."

MACK, ADELAIDE—Continued.

+ N Y Times 18:318 My 25 '13 300w
R of Rs 48:122 J1 '13 40w

MACKAY, MRS. HELEN GANSEVOORT (ED. WARDS). Cobweb cloak. il *$1.25 Duffield 12-16853

"Helen Mackay has written a book of quaint fancies, poetic imaginings, the dreams of a sensitive child, and the heartburnings of a woman." (Ind) "There is a little girl in it, Marah by name, who lives half the year with her mother in a big white house by the edge of the woods wherein there is a very wonderful swamp, and half the year with her father in a big and gloomy house on Washington square, and who, when she grows up, marries a French count and goes to live in his castle in the midst of his forest." (N Y Times)

"The cobweb cloak" is like a delicate old lace fan, such as one finds in a grandmother's wedding chest, faintly fragrant with memories.

+ Ind 74:540 Mr 6 '13 80w

"It is not a story for every one to read, although it is one in which those who do like it will take exquisite pleasure."

+ — N Y Times 17:431 J1 28 '12 300w

MACKAYE, PERCY (WALLACE). Civic theatre, in relation to the redemption of leisure. *$1.25 Kennerley A13-1462

"Mr. Mackaye's comprehensive plan [is] for a theatre publicly and permanently endorsed, freed of all commercial pressure, and making that public which supports it, not alone spectators of, but also participants in, its artistic activities. . . . [The main points of his scheme are] permanent endowment by public funds, not mere occasional subsidy of city, state and national theaters; participation in the acting by the public, under the leadership of a permanent staff of artists; price of admission sufficiently low to make the theater available to all wage earners, the scale running from 5 to 25 cents; correlated with these institutions, a chain of privately endowed university theaters; one national theater at Washington; organization and correlation of the arts of the theater, and general co-operation between all these bodies. . . . There are appendices full of valuable and practical suggestions for those interested in the organization of masques, pageants and other public spectacles."—Survey

A L A Bkl 9:379 My '13

"We recommend Mr. MacKaye's book as one to be read seriously, but not to be taken as the only hope of salvation from the commercial slavery to which theatrical art is now subjected."

+ Ind 75:215 J1 24 '13 600w

"This book of Percy Mackaye's is rich with suggestions for every artist, statesman, social worker, clergyman, teacher—for any one who has seen what it means to leave the amusements of a city to haphazard exploitation for private profit." Walter Lippmann.

+ N Y Times 18:12 Ja 12 '13 1500w

"Luminous little volume. To attempt to render in a brief review, the substance of a book as close-packed with inspiration, suggestion, and vision as this, is futile." S: H. Adams.

+ Survey 29:904 Mr 29 '13 750w

MACKAYE, PERCY (WALLACE). Uriel and other poems. *$1 Houghton 12-26387

"With one exception, the poems in Mr. MacKaye's latest volume are occasional. . . . The title poem is one of two in memory of William Vaughn Moody." (N Y Times) Among the other poems in the volume one is dedicated to Gordon Craig, two are commemorative of the Browning centenary, and one is addressed "To Peary at the pole."

"The poems maintain the excellent quality of the poet's earlier collection, but will not command so large a reading."

+ A L A Bkl 9:197 Ja '13

"Mr. MacKaye's thought is fine and true, but he has many forced and infelicitous phrases, and his diction, as the close of the above stanza shows, is sometimes anything but poetic." W: M. Payne.

+ — Dial 54:243 Mr 16 '13 330w

+ Lit D 45:966 N 23 '12 480w

"The present volume, in some ways the most impressive in his bibliography to date, is an important and a gratifying book to all lovers of good poetry."

+ N Y Times 17:707 D 1 '12 380w

+ R of Rs 47:372 Mr '13 150w

MCKEEVER, WILLIAM ARCH. Training the boy. il *$1.50 (1½c) Macmillan 13-3235

The motto of this book is, "Train the whole and not merely a part of him," and the four parts of the book are given to a discussion of: Industrial training; Social training; Habit training; Vocational training; Service training. The book too designed primarily for parents should prove helpful to all who are in any way engaged in the guidance of children. The author pays a tribute to the public school, saying that with all its imperfections it "is tenfold more efficient in doing its part of the boy training than is the average home. Its chief source of weakness is lack of substantial cooperation on the part of the home, the church, and other institutions which should furnish an important part of the education of the young." (Preface)

+ A L A Bkl 9:379 My '13 +

Ath 1913,2:5 J1 5 110w

"It ought to find its way into the hands of ministers and social workers who are interested in this vital theme."

+ Bib World 41:354 My '13 120w

"Rather sentimental and weak."

— Educ R 46:205 S '13 30w

Hibbert J 12:21 O '13 40w

N Y Times 18:104 F 23 '13 200w

"Anybody responsible for the upbringing of a boy will find it profitable to read Prof. McKeever's treatise."

+ N Y Times 18:305 My 18 '13 100w

R of Rs 47:765 Je '13 50w

"The book is suggestive and valuable." E. J. Swift.

+ School R 21:711 D '13 530w

"It is a business-like, concrete, helpful discussion written with great sympathy and understanding, and the best thing about it is its hopefulness." C. S. Thurston.

+ Survey 29:908 Mr 29 '13 400w

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. Reluctant lover. il *$1.20 (1½c) Winston 13-4423

A book of smart conversation in which the hero is a blasé and cynical young man of three and twenty. Two young women seem to divide the honors as heroine, and there are other people, all idle, clever and ultra-modern. "On its story side the book's chief element of interest is the suspense as to which of the young men is going to marry which of the young women, and whether or not the young girl who starts out to capture the specially reluctant one will succeed." (N Y Times)

"This novel is mainly occupied with conversation, fluent, polite, and suggestive of Mr. Shaw and Oscar Wilde. But its proclamation of its literary heredity makes comparisons inevitable, and these naturally are all on the side of the ancestors. Mr. McKenna is clever without being brilliant."

+ — Ath 1912,2:414 O 12 80w

"The plot itself is hopelessly mixed, and the characters are mere dummies, all of whom talk alike."

— Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '13 80w

"Quite smart as to its conversations is this rather lengthy tale of many loves and lovers. It is mostly composed of talk, and its people are constantly saying clever things. As Mr. McKenna manages his theme the story interest is of the slightest. Treating it in the leisurely, conversational way that he has chosen, he gives it a freshness that would have been lost by the more conventional method."

+ — N Y Times 18:125 Mr 9 '13 280w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Youth's encounter
12 (Eng title, Sinister street). *$1.35 Appleton
13-21705

An account of a boy's encounter with life up to his eighteenth year, with subtle analysis of his emotions and his mental processes. Michael, the boy of the story, is a youth of impressionable temperament, who, with a younger sister, is left much to the care of servants while a beautiful and much adored mother spends her time abroad. He comes under many influences, one of them, and the one that proves of greatest good, is that of Miss Carthew, his governess; another, the one of greatest harm, is that of Father Aloysius, a wolf in the garb of an Anglican monk. Michael's entrance to Oxford brings this account of his boyhood to an end.

"What cannot fail to arouse cordial recognition are just a few remarkable scenes: the nightmare dreams of a lonely, frightened child in strange surroundings in the dead of night; the slow awakening of adolescence to the physical facts of life, and certain specific incidents that complete that awakening. These are the features of the book that refuse to be forgotten and that confirm the impression already produced by 'Carnival' that Mr. Compton Mackenzie is one of the authors that we cannot afford to overlook." F. T. Cooper.

+ + — Bookm 38:414 D '13 470w

"The character study of the boy Michael is made with great care and accuracy. Though less emphasis is laid upon it, the character study of Stella is equally true. The action is rather too slow in places because of this care for the characters. The author, however, strikes a remarkably true note in the manner in which after the crisis life returns to its old lines."

+ — Boston Transcript p24 N 19 '13 350w

"Mr. Mackenzie's admirable style was sufficiently dilated upon after the publication of 'Carnival.' It has gained in flexibility, and the gradual change of tone as Michael leaves childhood behind him is admirably shaded. There are also many clearly drawn pen pictures. Those things, however, have entered into numerous novels; what characterizes this author's work is none of them, but rather a certain strong vitality—a vitality which might be called flamelike were not its glow so steady." L. M. Field.

+ + — N Y Times 18:574 O 26 '13 1300w

MACKIE, R. L. Story of King Robert the Bruce.
10 Il *$1.50 (2c) Crowell A13-2065

In writing this life of Robert Bruce for young people the author has hoped to give such a picture of him that he "may appear, no longer a mere name in a meaningless list of kings, or the shadowy hero of a fabulous tale, but as he really lived six centuries ago." (Introduction) In an historical introduction the author discusses the conflicting accounts of certain episodes in Bruce's career.

A L A Bk1 10:121 N '13

"The illustrations are a good feature of the book."

+ Ath 1913:2:62 J1 19 40w

+ Nation 97:571 D 11 '13 70w

"A stirring tale, well told, but the author does wrong to make, as he says, 'a clean sweep of the supernatural.' Nor is there any reason for leaving out the incident of the spider; Mr. Mackie is supposed to be writing not a doctor's thesis but a book for boys." Joyce Kilmer.

+ — N Y Times 18:533 O 12 '13 100w

MCKILLIAM, ANNIE E. Chronicle of the 5 popes, from St. Peter to Pius X. *$2.50
Macmillan (Eng ed W12-138)

"A volume of about 500 pages giving the chief facts concerning each pope from St. Peter to Pius X. It is intended for use as a reference hand-book, and offers therefore a simple, impartial record without discussion of causes or results." (Nation) "The sketches are based on secondary works, but, be it added, (Am Hist R) on the best secondary works there are."

"She has discussed the body, not the soul of the papacy. The 'whys' of history are not to be found in these pages; these give the reader much knowledge, but little understanding of the papacy." E. B. K.

+ — Am Hist R 18:384 Ja '13 300w

"It is too much to expect that such a summary should be not only without bias, but also without mistakes; yet Miss McKilliam has avoided both as far as human nature may. Possibly this result is achieved by an absence of enthusiasm. No one could read such a book through—except in the way the criminal was offered the chance of Guicciardini—and the absence of foot-notes or detailed references to authorities renders it of little use to students."

+ — Ath 1912:1:650 Je 8 150w

"A careful compilation from inadequate and often indifferent modern sources, made by one who has not enough general knowledge of history to save him from error and teach him the relative importance of events and the sequence of cause and effect. The misapprehensions are evenly distributed throughout the whole story; gross mistakes of fact are frequent. But a considerable quantity of information is given in an amiable spirit." E.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:187 Ja '13 100w

"Such a work has long been needed, and this book, based on the recognized authorities, meets the need most satisfactorily. It is very generally accurate, though a number of minor slips could be pointed out."

+ — Nation 96:339 Ap 3 '13 130w

"It will surely be welcomed."

+ Spec 109:sup489 O 5 '12 80w

MCKIM, RANDOLPH HARRISON. Numerical
5 strength of the Confederate army. *$1 Neale
12-29314

"A serious attempt to meet the criticisms made by General Charles Francis Adams, Colonel Thomas L. Livermore and others, of the common statement of southern writers that the Confederate military strength all told was not more than 600,000 men. . . . Dr. McKim holds to the 600,000 estimate, tho he qualifies it to the extent of including only those who actually served in the field."—Ind

"The writer's line of contention is interesting, and his statements are made formidable by an array of figures. The book will prove an excellent reference guide in public and school libraries."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 8 '13 200w

"It is a small book, too brief to cover with sufficient detail all of the complex questions involved. Yet it deals with the subject concisely and with straightforwardness. We cannot say that he has successfully met the data and conclusions of Livermore and Adams. The argument is sometimes loose, and there is too frequently a dependence upon someone's personal opinion rather than upon a logical deduction from established evidence or probabilities."

+ — Ind 74:589 Mr 13 '13 450w

R of Rs 47:376 Mr '13 80w

MACKINTOSH, REV. HUGH ROSS. Doctrine of the person of Jesus Christ. (International theological lib.) *$2.50 (1½c) Scribner A12-1468

This volume "represents the teaching of the United Free Presbyterian church. Its first half is a critical survey of historical Christology from the earliest to the present time, in orthodox, heretical, and mediating lines of thought. The second half is devoted to a reconstructive statement of the doctrine of the person of Christ, which takes account of its history, the immediate utterances and transcendent implicates of faith, and objections to the conclusions reached."—Outlook

"While the book will doubtless furnish reassurance to those whose temperament and religious experience coincide with the author's, it will raise in the minds of others—as it has in the mind of the reviewer—the serious question whether a kenotic doctrine of the person of Christ does not necessitate such obscurantism in exposition as to repel those who care more for critical accuracy than for the retention of traditional formulae." G. B. Smith.

+ — Am J Theol 17:301 Ap '13 2750w

"The superior qualities of Dr. Mackintosh's book are likely to give it first place in the exposition and defense of the established doctrine of the person and work of Christ. In our modern attempt to interpret Jesus historically it is useful to refer to a first-class book like this that represents the classic theological interpretation of Jesus."

+ Bib World 40:432 D '12 130w

Boston Transcript p23 Ja 22 '13 750w

"That the work is able, fearless, and at many points suggestive cannot be denied, but it may also be predicted that its conclusions will not long stand. The fundamental defect is failure to reckon with the New Testament criticism of the last twenty-five years."

+ — Nation 96:418 Ap 24 '13 700w

Outlook 102:867 D 21 '12 200w

"Dr. Mackintosh's book may be welcomed as furnishing perhaps the most complete and satisfactory discussion of the subject that can be obtained in one volume."

+ Sat R 115:782 Je 21 '13 280w

MACKIRDY, OLIVE CHRISTIAN. Love's soldier. *$1.25 (1½c) Cassell

A novel in which all things happen as they should. The hero, a poor young man at the opening of the story, holder of a position of some sort in the "New York bank" in London, is in love with the daughter of the bank's president, a man who, having known poverty himself, insists that his daughter must marry a man of wealth. At the end of the tale Robert has achieved a reputation and a modest fortune as an author, has succeeded to the presidency of the bank himself, has successfully weathered a financial crisis, has been endowed by a grateful king with a dukedom, and, of course, has married Mollie. It is all a very pleasant fairy tale, the most charming incident of which is the adoption by the young hero of little stray Elizabeth.

"A badly written love-story overburdened with cheap sentiment."

— Ath 1913:1250 Mr 1 9w

"Against the much in the story that is handled crudely, there is a good deal of skill in homely details. The author is incidentally clever, because she can conceive good ideas, but cannot develop them. The book is, however, recommendable on account of its high-thinking, even though the picture of Robert laying down the law for England's prime minister is a ludicrous blot. Why is it that novels portraying disinterested virtue nearly always come to such a worldly finish?"

+ — Boston Transcript p22 My 7 '13 230w

— Nation 97:14 Jl 3 '13 170w

"Notwithstanding its rather cloying quality of superabundant happiness the unpretentious story is not without a certain charm of naïveté and youthful buoyancy."

+ — N Y Times 18:318 My 25 '13 200w

MCLAUGHLIN, ANDREW CUNNINGHAM. Courts, the constitution and parties. *$1.50 (2½c) Univ. of Chicago press 12-20184
Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"While marvelling at the literary skill and scholarly neatness of this impressive array [in one essay], the present reviewer cannot help feeling that Professor McLaughlin has strained his evidence, or at least has made a consistent story by neglecting the countervailing testimony." C. A. Beard.

+ — Am Hist R 18:378 Ja '13 600w

"These timely essays should not be neglected by students of politics and government. They hang well together and they may be studied profitably in a college course in political science." J. A. Woodburn.

+ Am J Soc 18:841 My '13 800w

"A book for students and well informed readers."

+ A L A Bkl 9:155 D '12

"Scholarly essays."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:325 My '13 520w

Reviewed by C. L. King.

Ann Am Acad 48:279 Jl '13 500w

Eng Hist R 28:204 Ja '13 330w

"The style of all these essays is easy and delightful, and their argument sane, thoughtful, and persuasive. The ones discussing political parties are marked by a quiet humor, and disclose glimpses of the author's political philosophy that tempt one to hope he may elaborate it further before long." J. P. Hall.

+ J Pol Econ 21:88 Ja '13 550w

MCLEOD, ADDISON. Plays and players in modern Italy. il *$2.75 Sergel
(Eng ed 12-24437)

"The first of the two main chapters contains summaries, with a few well-translated scenes, of about thirty plays, mostly by living playwrights. The other contains characterizations of about thirty living actors and actresses." (Nation) This "chapter includes succinct and intelligible accounts of the acting of Eleonora Duse, Virginia Reiter, Gina Favre, Tina di Lorenzo, Lydia Borrelli, Evaline Paoli, Ando. Gustavo Salvini, Alfredo de Santis, Garavalia, Ruggeri, Grasso, Novelli and others." (N Y Times)

"There is necessarily a good deal of the outlining of plot, which is dull writing and duller reading when unenlivened by apt quotation and comment. From such dullness Mr. McLeod is comparatively free, though at times he is neither very interesting nor very clear."

+ — Dial 55:120 Ag 16 '13 200w

"The book furnishes much information that cannot be found elsewhere, and some very sensible criticism."

+ — Nation 96:290 Mr 20 '13 120w

"Is a novelty among theatrical books of the present day, treating of no fads, straightforward, historical, critical, and above all, written with a wholesome relish for its subject."

+ N Y Times 18:128 Mr 9 '13 170w

"Mr. McLeod writes about the Italian stage of to-day in a spirit of sane criticism. He is capable of the fervent admiration of an enthusiast, yet can discriminate with the most meticulous. The section of this volume which deals with the plays is both comprehensive and interesting. The author's estimate of modern Italian playwrights is, in our opinion, exceptionally sound. It is to be regretted that Fogazzaro's plays are not included in the present study. We do not invariably agree with Mr. McLeod."

+ — Spec 109:376 S 14 '12 570w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

MACLEOD, DELLA CAMPBELL. Malden manifest. II *$1.30 (1½c) Little 13-3070

A blue dress hanging in a cleaner's window catches the eye of an imaginative young man. He begins in fancy to picture the girl who would wear the gown and finds that the picture stays with him. The scene shifts to the South, and charming and flirtatious Cissy Dalrymple floats into his ken. Inevitably he falls in love with Cissy, but he doesn't realize how deeply until, in the last scene of the story, she appears in the blue gown and proves to be in reality the maiden of his dreams.

"A friendly blue pencil would have improved the story greatly."

— N Y Sun p3 F 15 '13 150w

"A nice little marshmallowey kind of a love story is this, that will be read with much pleasure by young ladies and gentlemen in the throes of, or looking forward to, their first love affair. The author evidently knows her stage setting well and she depicts with a loving hand alike the beauties of nature, daily life and the frequent merrymaking of her people."

+ — N Y Times 18:174 Mr 30 '13 180w

MCMASTER, JOHN BACH. History of the people of the United States. 8v v8 *$2.50 (1½c) Appleton 13-20148

v. 8. This, the concluding volume of McMaster's history, covers the period from 1850 to 1861. Contents: The union in danger; Social ferment; International entanglements; The passing of the Whigs; Repeal of the Missouri compromise; Bleeding Kansas; Eighteen hundred and fifty-seven; Lecompton and the great debate; Filibusters and slave traders; On the plains; The eve of secession; The confederate states of America. An account of Lincoln's inauguration brings the volume to a close.

A L A Bkl 10:19 S '13 +

"The historic sense, a much misunderstood quality, and lacked by many historians, Professor McMaster possesses in abundance. To weave the impartial facts of the whole controversy in the body of his history as Professor McMaster has done, gives his work a value possessed by no other." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 6 '13 2550w

+ Ind 76:34 O 2 '13 900w

"After all is said in criticism of methods and results, Mr. McMaster has shown great industry and no little discrimination during the progress of his extensive undertaking. Others will find his volume a great storehouse of facts, presented in an attractive manner."

+ — Nation 97:240 S 11 '13 1150w

"No more difficult period of American history can be chosen by the historian than that which is here dealt with. Prof. McMaster is, as always, clear and often graphic in presenting the complicated elements out of which the national conduct was resolved."

+ N Y Times 18:453 Ag 31 '13 770w

+ N Y Times 18:675 N 30 '13 290w

"Admiration of the author's clear and comprehensive method of treatment, his grasp of diverse problems, and his mastery of the art of compact expression, increases as we see the skill and accuracy with which he traces the many important tendencies of this dynamic and confusing epoch."

+ No Am 198:574 O '13 530w

Outlook 104:874 Ag 16 '13 30w

"That this is less valuable than the historical writing of James Ford Rhodes scarcely needs further argument. It must stand, not as history in the higher sense, but as a vast collection of interesting original material condensed, paraphrased and set in order, and of no other period of our entire history as a nation is such a collection so interesting as of the period covered by this concluding volume."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13 770w

MCMURRY, FRANK MORTON. Elementary school standards. (School efficiency ser.) $1.50 (2c) World bk. co. 13-13138

"This work is an outcome of the New York school inquiry, and represents Professor McMurry's plan for determining the efficiency of the instruction, curriculum and supervision in the schools he visited. Four main criteria are employed. The work must have motive, there must be a sense of relative value, there must be attention to organization, and initiative must be displayed. These standards should be in evidence, Professor McMurry thinks, all along the line, from superintendent and course of study to teacher and pupil."—Ind

Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '13 130w

"The book is a source of light and leading in a field where there is much vagueness and confusion."

+ Ind 75:340 Ag 7 '13 120w

+ Nation 97:233 S 11 '13 50w

MACNAMARA, RACHEL SWETE. Fringe of the desert. *$1.35 (1c) Putnam

(Eng ed 13-5692)

The central character in the story is Hildred Ivors, the daughter of parents who had separated in her early childhood. In her twentieth year she is asked to divide a year between them, and accordingly spends six months with her mother, a woman of the English "sportsman" type, in a country village; six with her father, an artist, in Egypt. In this second part of the book the interest shifts and centers about the affairs of the father and Hesper Marlowe, a friend of his daughter, who learns to love him, not knowing that his wife, Hildred's mother, is alive.

"This [second] love-affair would seem to be the real objective of the book, in which case it is ill-constructed. The characterization is, however, good, the language often eloquent, and the tragic ending undoubtedly effective."

+ — Ath 1913,1:218 F 22 150w

"The latter half of this novel is a miniature 'Garden of Allah,' though the descriptions of Egypt lack the beauty and vividness of those of the older book. The reader is led to feel the fascination, but not the power of nature."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '13 500w

"A novel of which R. S. MacNamara has every reason to be proud."

+ Ind 75:47 Jl 3 '13 50w

MCNICOL, DONALD. American telegraph practice. II *$4 McGraw 13-8783

"A textbook on American telegraph systems and equipment based to a large extent on a series of lectures recently delivered by the author in the evening technical schools connected with Columbia university. The author states that his aim has been to present a detailed exposition of the various systems of telegraphy in use in this country at the present time, together with a complete description of modern methods of operation and an extensive compilation of the formulas used in practical telegraphy. In view of the subject matter, the title is perhaps too comprehensive, since overhead and underground line construction are not included."—Elec World

"On the whole the volume can be well recommended as a textbook for students of telegraphy and for superintendents, managers, operators, wire chiefs and plant employees in general. The typography and illustrations are excellent."

+ — Elec World 62:99 Jl 12 '13 300w

"It might be expected that one who could present descriptions of apparatus in such a wealth of detail would not at every point secure the happiest presentation of the very elementary theoretical discussions. Viewed as a whole, the elementary parts are good, but not quite as satisfactory as existing treatises on rudiments alone. Careless proof-reading in a few places confuses the meaning."

+ — Engin N 70:786 O 16 '13 500w

MACOMBER, WILLIAM. Engineers' handbook
on patents. 1l *$2.50 Little 13-1282

"A handbook designed to aid the trained engineer and investigator in differentiating between the patentable and non-patentable results of his efforts and to show him how to protect such as are patentable. These problems are discussed at some length under the captions 'What is patentable?' 'Patentable novelty' and 'The obtaining of patents,' and considerable helpful advice is given concerning them. Special chapters are also devoted to the subjects of claim construction, infringement, patent litigation and property rights."—Engin Rec

"The best book of its type."
+ A L A Bkl 10:102 N '13

"Our only question concerning the book is whether, despite the author's effort to keep out legal technicalities, he has not after all made the book rather hard reading for the average engineer wholly unfamiliar with matters relating to patents. Even if this is the case, however, a large part of the book is understandable by anyone and gives just the sort of information that every engineer, or for that matter every business man, ought to have."

+ Engin N 69:544 Mr 13 '13 850w

"The book gives evidence of careful preparation and should prove to be of considerable value to engineers interested in developing patents."

+ Engin Rec 67:280 Mr 8 '13 150w

"A useful little book that should interest many people."

+ N Y Sun p7 Ja 18 '13 70w

MACREADY, WILLIAM CHARLES. Diaries of William Charles Macready, 1833-1851; ed.
by W: C: Toynbee. 2v il *$7.50 Putnam
(Eng ed A13-273)

The diaries and reminiscences of Macready, edited by Sir Frederick Pollock, were first published in 1875, two years after his death. "To the new edition of these diaries edited by William Toynbee in two large volumes of nearly five hundred pages each, the omitted passages of Sir Frederick Pollock's original compilations are now restored. On the other hand the autobiographical reminiscences, which covered the period from Macready's birth in 1793 to the year 1827, are not included. . . . While he held himself to the daily record of his deeds and thoughts, Macready was a conscientious and indefatigable diarist. He does not merely set down events, he comments upon them, upon his state of mind in relation to them, upon his doubts and hesitations over the minutiae of moral, social and professional procedure. . . . With Macready as a leading figure in the London world his diaries naturally have much to record of other people than himself." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 9:329 Ap '13

"The 'Reminiscences' constitute the most remarkable document ever penned by an actor. They provide a complete self-revelation of their writer, as well as a picture of social life which for vividness and intimacy of detail it would be hard to match even in early Victorian memoirs. The publishers may well be proud of the issue of those two handsome, if bulky volumes."

+ Ath 1912, 2: 487 O 26 1100w

"These two large volumes afford enjoyment of a rare kind. They make you thoroughly acquainted with a man's soul, his art, and the world he lived in." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:665 F '13 1750w

"And as a view of the English theatre of the mid-nineteenth century, these records are of great value, for Macready was a large part of the professional world and achievements of which he writes." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p18 D 24 '12 1000w

"The intimate and sometimes amusingly frank self-revelations of Macready's private diaries, now for the first time publicly printed with scarcely any reservations or omissions, give them that character of warm human interest and unmistakable naturalness that cannot but go far toward reconciling the reader to the somewhat formidable size of the two volumes." P. F. Bicknell.

+ — Dial 54:178 Mr 1 '13 1750w

Lit D 46:132 Ja 18 '13 2250w

"These two portentous volumes are chiefly remarkable, perhaps, as a monument of editorial indiscretion and bad judgment. For the publication of much of the matter of them no excuse can be made on the score either of interest or of information. The valuable stuff, of which the proportion is not large, has to be dug out by the conscientious reader from a great mass of reiteration and triviality."

+ — Nation 96:64 Ja 16 '13 1600w

+ N Y Times 17: 743 D 1 '12 60w

"Despite its excess of matter, the Diary affords an excellent field for browsing here and there by the student of the drama and of English and American social life from 1830 to 1850."

+ — Outlook 102: 736 N 30 '12 250w

"In the bulky diaries, covering nearly twenty years of his active life, we may know him even better than we know Johnson—almost as well as we know Pepys." J: Palmer.

+ — Sat R 114: 517 O 26 '12 1600w

"In these diaries we certainly get a complete picture of the man; but the editor might have, and ought to have, saved us the trouble of reading so much."

+ — Spec 110:238 F 8 '13 650w

+ Springfield Republican p 7 D 12 '12 1300w

MCVEY, FRANK LE ROND. Making of a town.
*$1 (2½c) McClurg 13-10099

Much has been written on the planning of cities and on the problems of the larger centers of industry; this is perhaps the first book to pay like attention to the needs of small towns. The four fundamental factors which make for a better town are: Health, Schools, Moral atmosphere, and Business. To each of these the author devotes a chapter. In the other chapters he considers: Town building and cooperation; The planning of the town; Government and administration; Organizations and what they can do for a town; Advertising the town; The future of the town.

"There is such a great need for literature on that community in American life between the large cities and the open rural districts that it was hoped 'The making of a town' would help supply that need for the 'town problem.' In the light of that hope the book is a disappointment." S. E. W. Bedford.

+ — Am J Soc 19:417 N '13 100w

A L A Bkl 10:59 O '13 +

"For the beginner the book may prove useful; for the student of social science it carries no message."

+ — Ann Am Acad 49:245 S '13 60w

"It is highly practical, and if its counsels could be followed even at this late day there would be a vast improvement in the conditions that attend life and business in the smaller cities and towns thruout the country."

+ Educ R 46:424 N '13 90w

"In the main the book is of the inspirational order, with many practical suggestions, but brief and sketchy and in some cases inaccurate."

+ — Engin N 70:1001 N 13 '13 210w

"A suggestive rather than an exhaustive treatment."

+ Outlook 104:343 Je 14 '13 30w

"A useful and suggestive little volume."

+ R of Rs 48:246 Ag '13 70w

"A useful manual which should prove of great value to officials and earnest citizens in small communities. There are slight inaccuracies." G. R. Taylor.

+ — Survey 30:502 Jl 12 '13 370w

MACY, JOHN ALBERT. Spirit of American literature. $1.50 (1½c) Doubleday 13-4121

This book, as the author says, "will be found to be a little nearer to a collection of appreciative essays than to a formal history or bibliographic manual." At the same time it is "inclusive to a degree that the genuine essayist would instinctively avoid." The authors to whose work chapters are given are: Irving, Cooper, Emerson, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Whittier, Poe, Holmes, Thoreau, Lowell, Whitman, Mark Twain, Howells, William James, Lanier, and Henry James. The introductory chapter, General characteristics, is a forceful arraignment of American writers who have chosen to draw their inspiration from old world sources rather than from their own land.

"The author's independence of thought and standard of selection will provoke criticism, but his style is original and stimulating, his common sense evident. Though it covers the same ground as textbooks on the subject, it will be a useful addition to books in American literature used by readers of high-school education."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:380 My '13

"It is distinctly a pity that Mr. Macy's book should not deal with later American literature, for it is well admitted that a new spirit has appeared in the literature since 1890. His discussion of Poe is one of the most understanding essays upon the poet to be found anywhere in Poe criticism." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '13 830w

"A work which the young lions of newspaper criticism will doubtless take to their hearts. It will not be taken very seriously by anyone else."

— Dial 54:311 Ap 1 '13 130w

"This would-be revolutionary has written a book provocative of thought and of contradiction. True, its occasional slanginess is the least of its defects; its jerky lack of grace or style, in discussing style, is more grave."

+ — Ind 74:700 Mr 27 '13 450w

"In statement of fact Mr. Macy's book swarms with errors."

— Nation 96:602 Je 12 '13 650w

"An enjoyable and stimulating book, interesting for its faults as well as for its virtues. If he indulges certain apparently congenial antipathies more than is ordinarily thought proper in a serious essayist, he more than repays the reader by his generous and wise enthusiasm for some things that deserve to be 'sealed of the tribe' of good literature which have not yet received the stamp of conventional authority."

+ — Outlook 103:823 Ap 12 '13 200w

R of Rs 47:507 Ap '13 80w

"A comparatively small volume of forceful and well-balanced essays. He is an independent but a sane thinker, with an unusual command of forceful expression; at times his tone is decidedly dogmatic, but he is both so vigorous and so clear that his dogmatism is stimulating rather than repellent; he has the faculty of forcing his reader definitely to agree or disagree."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 330w

MAETERLINCK, MAURICE. Life of the bee; 2^d new ed il $4 Dodd

"The life of the bee," that wonderful book of M. Maeterlinck's which is neither science nor natural history, nor prosaic fact of any sort, but poetry and suggestion and beauty, all with a substantial basis in truth (which is itself the most suggestive and beautiful thing known), comes out again this season in a finely-illustrated edition printed on heavy paper with generous margins, and ornately bound and boxed. The excellence of Mr. Alfred Sutro's limpid translation is already recognized. The illustration, done by Mr. Edward J. Detmold, will be found no whit inferior. . . . There are thirteen of these exquisite designs, loosely mounted on heavy tinted paper, while the cover further displays the artist's skill."—Dial

"The flower illustrations in colour by Mr. Edward Detmold in this new edition of 'The life of the bee' are exquisite. The illustrations of the enlarged bees are nightmares fit to rank with Blake's 'Ghost of a flea.'"

+ — Ath 1911,2:633 N 18 80w

"The artist's eye sees and his brush reproduces nature with truth and beauty, and he thereby adds an especial significance to the literary value of Maeterlinck's work." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 7 '12 100w

+ Dial 53:452 D 1 '12 200w

"The whole makes a large and handsome volume, clearly printed, and not too heavy to hold."

+ Nation 95:562 D 12 '12 80w

"At length we have an illustrated edition of a classic in which the illustrator really helps to interpret the text."

+ Sat R 112:618 N 11 '11 180w

MAHAN, ALFRED THAYER. Major operations of the navies in the war of American independence. il $3 (4c) Little 13-21458

The contents of this volume were originally contributed to a "History of the royal navy," a work in seven volumes published in England under the editorship of Sir William Laird. The author states in his introduction that his aim in issuing this volume is "to bring home to American readers the vast extent of the struggle to which our own Declaration of independence was but the prelude; with perchance the further needed lesson for the future, that questions the most remote from our own shores may involve us in unforeseen difficulties, especially if we permit a train of communication to be laid by which the outside fire can leap step by step to the American continents."

Ath 1913,2:524 N 8 60w

Boston Transcript p24 O 15 '13 950w

"It is written in the author's well-known authoritative manner and the style of presentation is concise and telling."

+ Nation 97:487 N 20 '13 500w

"His estimates of famous commanders will be read with attention."

+ N Y Sun p6 O 4 '13 120w

+ Outlook 105:549 N 8 '13 80w

MANET, EDOUARD. Edouard Manet; with an introd. by L. Hourticq. (French artists of to-day) il $1 Lippincott 13-35184

Conforming with the plan of the series, this volume has an essay which relates Manet's life, and discusses his art. The forty-eight plates are fully annotated by Jean Laran and Georges Le Bas. "M. Hourticq considers Manet a combination of audacity and uncertainty but, looking back over the marvellous effects he achieved since he threw down the glove with his 'Déjeuner sur l'herbe' and the 'Olympia,' one may surely consider his audacity his most salient characteristic." (Sat R)

"As supplementing the more general works and magazine material, this series will be useful in libraries having a considerable demand from lay students of modern art."

+ A L A Bkl 9:329 Ap '13

+ Ath 1912,2:597 N 16 70w

"The notes are interesting, vivacious and instructive, but they would have been far more valuable if the editors had taken pains to indicate more explicitly the whereabouts of the pictures." W. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '13 450w

+ Dial 54:102 F 1 '13 270w

"M. Hourticq, who is a thoroughgoing conservative, has the courage to deal honestly with Manet himself."

+ Ind 74:654 Mr 20 '13 250w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

MANET, EDOUARD—Continued.

- + — Nation 96:66 Ja 16 '13 50w
- N Y Times 13:28 Ja 19 '13 50w
- + Outlook 104:307 Je 7 '13 180w
- + R of Rs 47:381 Mr '13 20w
- Sat. R 115:368 Mr 22 '13 120w

MANLY, JOHN MATTHEWS, and POWELL, JOHN ARTHUR. Manual for writers. *$1.25

Univ. of Chicago press 13-20818

This manual "covering the needs of authors for information on rules of writing and practices in printing," is a development from the "Manual of style" of the University of Chicago press. New chapters, of interest to writers only, have been added; other chapters, of interest to printers only, have been omitted. The complete table of contents follows: English composition; Grammatical notes; Spelling; Capitalization; Punctuation; The use of italic; Letter writing; Hints on the preparation of manuscript for the printer; Illustrations; Stages through which a book passes in the making; Typographical practices and terms; Miscellaneous information.

"A curious and inconsecutive medley of subjects is included in this 'Manual.'"

- + — Ath 1913,2:593 N 22 50w

"If writers generally would study this little book, the editor would find half his occupation gone."

- + Ind 76:177 O 23 '13 80w

"This book may be safely recommended to Englishmen who desire to write clearly."

- + Spec 111:870 N 22 '13 1350w

MANN, J. E. F.; SIEVERS, N. J.; and COX, R. W. T. Real democracy. *$1.50 Longmans. 13-21816

"The first essays of the Rota club, a group of political economists in London which took its inspiration from Hilaire Belloc, appear in this book. . . . The contributions, by J. E. F. Mann, N. J. Sievers and R. W. T. Cox, comprise a history of the changes which have taken place in political governments throughout the world with a study of the principles of the philosophy involved. After analyzing the history and applying the philosophy, the authors propose the logical step to be taken which will introduce measures tending to cure present evils and prevent their recurrence."—Survey

"It would seem that these thinkers have endeavored to work out equality in terms of economics with a background of natural rights theory, an attempt in the nature of things bound to be rather futile in the twentieth century."—D. A. MacGibbon.

- Am Econ R 3:971 D '13 280w

"The book as a whole is most suggestive, although we think their picture of present social evils exaggerated, their strictures of the representative system unjust, and their proposed remedy Utopian."

- + — Cath World 98:103 O '13 1150w

"The book will amply repay the attention of those interested in the complex and urgent problem of industrial adjustment."

- + N Y Times 18:349 Je 15 '13 950w

"The book gives altogether too large a proportion of space to the historical discussion and altogether too little to a consideration of practical measures to be pursued in the 'process of repossession.' Indeed, the methods proposed seem to us ludicrously inadequate for the end which is sought."

- Outlook 105:152 S 20 '13 130w

- Pol Sci Q 28:551 S '13 210w

Reviewed by H. F. J. Porter.

- + Survey 30:647 Ag 23 '13 1250w

MANN, MARY RIDPATH. Royal women: their history and romance. H *$1.25 (2½c) McClurg 13-5517

Four women, Queen Elizabeth, Mary Stuart, Marie Antoinette, and the Empress Josephine, have been chosen by the author as subjects for character studies. Her purpose has been to present "in a new light some of the women who have helped to make up the world's history. . . . The author takes for granted that the great historic events are known to all, and has therefore endeavored to use history solely to illustrate character." (Foreword)

"The book is so attractively written that it might be read with pleasure and profit even by those—if there were any such—who had previously known nothing of these romantic lives. It owes its charm largely to the fact that the author has visited almost every locality mentioned, at least as far as England and France are concerned."

- + Dial 54:387 My 1 '13 150w

"No one will quarrel with the author's statement that history and romance go hand in hand, but we cannot see that anything is added here either to history or to romance."

- + — Ind 74:1150 My 22 '13 80w

"The author inherits a love of history from her father, John Clark Ridpath, and has made a readable book by combining historical knowledge with a fascinating power of description."

- + Lit D 47:882 N 8 '13 130w

"A slapdash tone and very modern point of view hardly make up for the superficiality and lack of accuracy in the accounts."

- N Y Sun p15 My 10 '13 50w

- + N Y Times 18:405 Jl 20 '13 70w

MANNIX, JOHN BERNARD. Mines and their story. H *$3.75 Lippincott A13-1202

"The author treats of the three principal objects with which British investors are concerned—gold, diamonds and silver, keeping their stories separate. For each he tells the history of discovery, explains where the chief fields lie and describes the processes of extraction, old and new. Then he takes up, much more briefly, the staples at the foundation of British industry, coal and iron. The book is intended for popular use and is illustrated."—N Y Sun

- + Ath 1913,1:135 F 1 100w

"The books is as absorbing as it is valuable. Mr. Mannix preserves throughout a terseness and clarity remarkable in the treatment of a subject of such enormous scope and detail."

- + Boston Transcript p24 Ap 2 '13 600w

- + — Lit D 47:882 N 8 '13 50w

"A pretty interesting book."

- + N Y Sun p5 Mr 8 '13 100w

- + N Y Times 18:181 Mr 30 '13 50w

- + Sat R 115:623 My 17 '13 60w

MAPES, CHARLES HALSTED. Man who one day a year would go "eehn'." H *$1.25 (9c) Putnam 13-11696

This is "a collection of sketches and speeches, each an apotheosis of some phase of sport, mostly college sport, or of alumni enthusiasm generally."—Ind

"It is a pleasure to find a book so free from morbidity."

- + Boston Transcript p18 Jl 30 '13 220w

"The cumulative effect of so much ecstasy is a little appalling."

- + — Ind 75:452 Ag 21 '13 70w

MARDEN, ORISON SWETT. Joys of living. *$1.25 (1½c) Crowell 13-5076

In this book "the world-old principle that life holds for us just as much as we bring to it, that whether life is worth living depends on the liver, that the music of the song is in the ear of the hearer, is elaborated and illustrated." (Dial) There are chapters on: The hunt for happiness; Riches and happiness; The sin of tired nerves; The joys of imagination; Taking life too seriously, etc.

- A L A Bkl 10:143 D '13

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"Without offering anything really new on his somewhat hackneyed theme, the author does well to call attention afresh to the supreme importance of the subjective element in the attainment of happiness."

+ — Dial 54:470 Je 1 '13 130w

+ Lit D 47:538 S 27 '13 110w

N Y Times 18:181 Mr 30 '13 130w

MARDEN, ORISON SWETT. Progressive business man. *$1 (3½c) Crowell 13-5506

In this book for the business man the modern principles of scientific management are emphasized. Contents: Expecting prosperity; What system will do; Put sunshine into your business; Capital and labor—cooperation; What you owe your employees besides their salary; Sweetening the day's work; A better spur than the whip; The new business philosophy; Looking outside for giants; Integrity in business; When the head of the firm takes it easy; Courtesy brings business; The "tight-wad" employer; The suspicious mental attitude; Why men fail; What message does your life work bring?

A L A Bkl 10:144 D '13

+ Lit D 47:538 S 27 '13 110w

MARDEN, ORISON SWETT. Training for efficiency. *$1.25 (2c) Crowell 13-17964

A volume which gives in sixty-three short, crisp chapters gleanings from the best wisdom of the Marden inspirational books. The book is adapted for single readings in the schools.

A L A Bkl 10:144 D '13

+ N Y Times 18:505 S 28 '13 50w

MARGUERITTE, VICTOR. Frontiers of the heart; tr. from the French by Frederic Lees. *$1.25 Stokes 13-1381

The frontier of which the author writes is that between France and Germany. "His theme is that the power of patriotism is able to dominate all other emotions. His book is the tribute of art to the depth and the fierceness of hatred with which the vanquished France of 1871 submitted to her conqueror." (N Y Times) A young French wife married to a German medical officer is on a visit to her people in Amiens when the war breaks out. Husband and wife are separated thruout the conflict; the wife, who lives thru days of seige, and death, and defeat, comes to concentrate on her husband all her hatred for his race. At the end of the war they find any reconciliation impossible.

"To those unfamiliar with the original this translation—one which does not hamper the reader's progress by awkward phrases or obvious mistakes—should be welcome."

+ Ath 1913,1:129 F 1 50w

"It is a peculiarly poignant study of the problem of intermarriage between persons of different nationalities. The details are all ingeniously chosen so that, without doing violence to probabilities, the keenest possible strain shall be put upon both parties to the contract." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:84 Mr '13 330w

"The case is an extreme one to illustrate the horror of war or the inadvisability of intermarriage between France and Germany. Viewed in that light the book is interesting, but as a narrative of ordinary action and reaction it is not convincing."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 380w

"The tale is told with simplicity and force, under the disadvantage here of an awkward translation."

+ — Nation 96:257 Mr 13 '13 350w

N Y Sun p3 F 8 '13 1000w

"Merely as a story the tale is interesting, so skillfully are its poignant emotions woven into incident and brought out in crises, and with such graphic art are the characters portrayed. But it is still more interesting as a study of racial antagonism and because of the psychological question which it will raise in the mind of every thoughtful reader: Is it possible for patriotism to dominate love and turn it to hatred in the hearts of two people of natures so fine and good as these two possessed? Granting that it might be true of a French woman and a German, could it be true of a union combining any other nationalities?"

+ N Y Times 18:101 F 23 '12 370w

"M. Margueritte's book is, for those who can compass good French style, thoroughly well worth reading, not only for its clear epitome of the unhappy war, but for the clever unforced narrative of this tragedy of patriotism. We should prefer to be able to say that Mr. Frederic Lees' translation was worthy of the original; but only one of those adjectives which damn with faint praise—as 'faithful'—can be fairly applied to it."

+ — Sat R 115:460 Ap 12 '13 550w

"A competent translation."

+ Spec 110:1021 Je 14 '13 30w

MARINE, WILLIAM M. British invasion of Maryland, 1812-1815; ed. with an appendix, containing 11,000 names, by L. H. Dielman. *$3.50 (2c) Pub. by Soc. of war of 1812 (for sale by Saumenig)

The first fully told story, authentic in every respect, of the British invasion of Maryland during the war of 1812. Contents: Events leading up to the war; The privateersmen; The Chesapeake expedition; Frenchtown and Havre de Grace; Barney's flotilla; Bladensburg and Washington; Caulk's field; North Point and Baltimore. Appendix, Index.

MARKHAM, SIR CLEMENTS ROBERT. Conquest of New Granada. il *$2 Dutton (Eng ed 13-3263)

The author of this book does not regard it "as an adequate story, but thinks it may serve to call attention to a very interesting historical topic, and so lead some other person to produce a work that shall do for Quesada and the Chibcha nation what Prescott did for Cortes and Mexico and Pizarro and Peru. . . . Sir Clements is unable to write with much detail about the Chibchas, but he sets forth some facts with respect to their government, religion, language and achievements which are greatly to their credit and are strongly suggestive of the view that if they had not been interfered with they would have become a highly civilized people." (N Y Times)

"The work is accurate, written in vigorous style and well documented and indexed."

+ A L A Bkl 9:380 My '13

"No one, in short, is more clearly designated for the task than Sir Clements himself, and his long familiarity with the ways of the Spanish conquistadores would enable him to deal with them in a calmer mood than less experienced students. There is a very good map of the Chibcha country at the end of the book, but readers who are not familiar with South American geography, especially the names used in the sixteenth century, will ask for a general map, including the coast."

+ — Ath 1913,1:183 F 15 1050w

"It is not intended to be a fully rounded history, but rather as a 'mémoire pour encourager.' Short as it is, it is curiously full of repetitions."

+ — Boston Transcript p28 F 12 '13 900w

"A valuable and very interesting little volume." J. M.

+ Eng Hist R 28:398 Ap '13 370w

Ind 74:1148 My 22 '13 80w

"Like all of Sir Clements' work, the book is entertainingly written."

+ Nation 96:502 My 15 '13 170w

"He tells a direct and interesting story, marked by his customary accuracy and scholarship, but Sir Clements himself is the first to admit that he is no Prescott, and after all his subject is of secondary interest. As a piece of MARKHAM, SIR CLEMENTS R. —Continued. special research that is needed for a full understanding of that period of conquest the book is of serious importance and the story is romantic enough to interest the general reader, even though it is only a repetition with changed names of the dreary tale of Spain's bungling and ingratitude to the men who spread her empire."

+ N Y Sun p4 Ja 25 '13 200w

+ N Y Times 18:100 F 23 '13 200w

MARKS, JEANNETTE A. Vacation camping for girls. il *$1 Appleton 13-12246

This is "a practical handbook for the outdoor girl, showing in detail how to prepare for camping and how thoroughly to enjoy the freedom of the woods. . . . It gives detailed check lists for camping, tells the woman camper what to wear, what food to take, describes camp cooking and gives many recipes for camp use. . . . devotes several chapters to physical training out of doors, the formation of camp habits, cleanliness, the secrets of the woods, canoeing, fishing, following the trail, and has a complete index for ready reference."—N Y Times

"Will help to interest girls in a healthy outdoor life."

+ A L A Bkl 10:20 S '13 +

N Y Sun p6 My 31 '13 80w

N Y Sun p12 Je 14 '13 30w

N Y Times 18:376 Je 22 '13 170w

N Y Times 18:412 Jl 27 '13 70w

MARQUAND, ALLAN. Della Robbias in America. (Princeton monographs in art and archaeology 1) il *$4.50 Princeton univ. 12-24889

This descriptive catalog of the examples of Della Robbia work now in America "consists of four divisions, the work of Luca della Robbia being the subject of the first part, part two treating of the works of Andrea della Robbia, part three of Giovanni della Robbia and the last division comprising miscellaneous Robbia works. There are no less than seventy-two illustrations, nearly all full page plates."—N Y Sun

Ath 1913,1:137 F 1 130w

"Fully indexed and fortified with references to earlier authorities, this monograph meets the requirements of special scholarship, while remaining in style and appearance attractive to any reader of cultured taste. The cuts, which are in several cases muddy and inferior to those in cheap German books on the subject, are not worthy of the letterpress."

+ — Nation 96:343 Ap 3 '13 500w

+ N Y Sun p12 D 21 '12 230w

"This book is one which will interest all lovers of this particularly delightful art."

+ Spec 110:sup130 Ja 25 '13 110w

MARRIOTT, CHARLES. The catfish. *$1.35 (1½c) Bobbs 13-7849

This is one of those stories in which the reader is able to follow the slow development of a character from childhood to maturity. The title of the story, which at first is puzzling, is explained toward the end of the book by the reference to the catfish as the "demon of the deep" who "keeps things lively." North Sea fishermen, it is explained, put a catfish into their tanks of cod to keep the cod from degenerating thru a life of ease into a state of flabbiness. This is the part played by Mary Festing in the life of George Tracy, the central character of this story.

"Only for the occasional and mature reader."

+ A L A Bkl 10:36 S '13

"Besides being interested in an excellent story, many readers will, unconsciously perhaps, come to realize some of life's ways which must be made straight before the unrest which embitters the world can be eased. Every character is vividly delineated."

+ Ath 1913,1:219 F 22 200w

"This book is a big advance upon the author's earlier work, it is a wise book, full of keen observation of the successive phases of youth, adolescence and full maturity, and of the problems and errors associated with each. In short, it is one of those comparatively rare books which the veteran book reviewer hails with pleasure and delights in passing on to the discriminating few." F; T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:541 Jl '13 350w

"A novel that is all-comprehensive; a perfect whole whose parts are indissoluble. Its unity is of extraordinary significance and artistic effect." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 4 '13 1300w

"It has a quiet compelling charm that sets it high above the level of ordinary fiction." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:150 S 1 '13 370w

"Here is a novel which steps altogether out of the trivialities and walks the great breezy uplands whence the clear-visioned look out over life."

+ Ind 75:161 Jl 17 '13 270w

"Whatever it may or may not 'mean,' the story lingers in the mind as a melody haunts the inward ear. It rings true."

+ Nation 97:57 Jl 17 '13 330w

"The abiding charm of the book is a grave beauty, impossible to convey in a criticism." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ N Y Times 18:353 Je 15 '13 950w

+ N Y Times 18:665 N 30 '13 320w

"It is essentially a story of the inner life, introspective, analytical, yet not lacking either in plot or human interest."

+ Outlook 104:343 Je 14 '13 40w

+ — Spec 110:662 Ap 19 '13 1250w

"Where the level falls short is that while its characters are sketched with a cleverness amounting to real art they fail of being full-length portraits."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ag 28 '13 630w

MARRIOTT, CHARLES. Wondrous wife. *$1.35 (2c) Bobbs 13-25052

A story by the author of "The catfish," worked out with admirable simplicity. Margaret Lisle, separated from her husband, a playwright and poet, is living a quiet life in a little village where she maintains a leather shop with the assistance of the village girls whom she has trained. It is here, quite satisfied with the life she has made for herself, that she meets Fawcett, an engineer, and recognizes in him the man she should have married had she met him in time. The inequalities of the English law make it impossible for her to divorce her husband, and to Fawcett's deliberate proposal that she go with him to South America she has yielded a carefully considered acquiescence, when she learns that her husband is ill, with an illness that may linger for years. She quietly relinquishes her own plans and goes back to care for him.

"Why waste so much ingenuity and brightness on such a hopelessly stale and unprofitable theme?"

+ N Y Sun p3 O 25 '13 220w

"It is one of Mr. Marriott's best, coherent and vivid, warmly human and tense with the tragic struggle of the heart between happiness and renunciation. It is a book that will not easily be forgotten, a book whose reading is an experience." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ N Y Times 18:576 O 26 '13 830w

MARRIOTT, CRITTENDEN. Sally Castleton, southerner. il *$1.25 (2c) Lippincott 13-3766

As in other stories of the civil war the love of a southern girl for a northern soldier is the theme. Captain Radcliffe in this story is a spy sent into Richmond to obtain information for Grant; the point in which the story varies in plot from others of its kind is that the girl, Sally Castleton, is a spy also, sent out to shadow Radcliffe. Much of the action is concerned with a ride to Richmond on which Sally, nominally under Radcliffe's protection, is in reality under orders to keep watch of his movements. Before Richmond is reached they have confessed their love for one another; yet each remains loyal, and each understands and respects the other's loyalty to country and there is no feeling of personal malice when the time of peace dawns.

"It is superior to the usual war story, the attitude of each side being given without prejudice and the plot not making too great demands on the reader's credulity."

+ A L A Bkl 9:344 Ap '13

+ Ath 1913,2:592 N 22 30w

"All in all, it is a tale well-told. The characters are drawn with unusual distinctness, and there is not the fault of too many people for the plot. While it is not a 'deep' book, 'Sally Castleton, southerner,' emphasizes the kind of loyalty that we most admire—the loyalty which, in time of need, successfully excludes self."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 19 '13 330w

Reviewed by W: M. Payne.

Dial 55:148 S 1 '13 150w

+ — Ind 74:1204 My 29 '13 60w

Nation 96:548 My 29 '13 150w

"A mechanical, rather slipshod love tale of the civil war. The conventional portions, the old Virginia home, the attractive and susceptible damsels, the faithful black, are done respectably; the martial events are handled rather clumsily. It is a harmless, commonplace book."

+ — N Y Sun p3 F 8 '13 70w

"It is not an important or a very unusual story. But the author has succeeded in attacking his situation from a somewhat novel vantage-point. Mr. Wyeth's pictures add vividness to Mr. Marriott's story."

+ N Y Times 18:76 F 16 '13 200w

MARSH, FRANK BURR. English rule in Gascony, 1199-1259. (Univ. of Mich. hist. studies, no. 2) *$1.25 (3c) Wahr 13-266

The author's aim in this work is "to trace in detail the rule of the English government in southwestern France so far as it affected or dealt with the townspeople, and to see what was their attitude toward it, and what part they played in its maintenance. The feudal nobility will be dealt with only incidentally. In point of time that period only will be treated when the continuance of English authority was most seriously in question." (Introd)

"The book is unusually free from errors, but its bulk and its pretension are out of proportion to its contribution to knowledge. The author includes Gascon material when he finds it in the sources though it add little or nothing to the argument, and many pages are loaded with minutiae which, at most, belong to footnotes. Some portions do little more than restate the conclusions of well-known monographs. The work is not final, even within its narrow limits of time and theme." A. B. White.

+ — Am Hist R 18:830 Jl '13 400w

"It seems clear that it was the action of the towns themselves that preserved this rule, and the manner in which the author arrives at this conclusion is both logical and interesting."

+ Ath 1913,1:159 F 8 110w

"Dr. Marsh has undoubtedly undertaken a task of great importance and has broken a good deal of almost new ground. On the whole, the book is very carefully written and the assertions are well supported by documentary evidence." E. C. L.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:605 Jl '13 570w

MARSH, MRS. MARIE LOUISE (MORE). Auburn and freckles. Il *$1 (4c) Browne & Howell 13-19072

A very human red headed boy with freckles is the hero of the harmless, boy-like adventures here related. The narrator is a woman friend, who tells stories to the freckled boy and is his confidant, and the book is written for other older friends of boys, including mothers. The freckled boy, altho he knows better, says "git" so the fellows won't think him a dude. That is the kind of boy he is, and a very lovable kind it is, indeed, freckles and all.

"The narrative is a delightful web of humor and pathos, all too short for the liking of some of us, and we trust it may find many appreciative readers."

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 20 '13 120w

"The freckled boy is a thoroughly likable youngster, worthy of a place in the same class with Tom Sawyer and Tom Bailey and the rest of our boy-favorites in literature."

+ Dial 55:267 O 1 '13 200w

MARSHALL, H. E. History of France. Il *$2.50
Doran 12-25292

"A big volume which treats graphically the story of France from the time Frenchmen were about to enter upon their career as a republic. . . . With its generous margins, the volume has the added virtue of marginal notes. These afford ready reference in lieu of an index. What is to be praised, maps are included."—Lit D

"Should be studied with some circumspection before being given to the young. The feelings and the actual words of people are narrated as though these could be known. Less than one third of its 550 pages is occupied by the period from 1661 to our times, and out of the hundred and one chapters a whole one is given to the 'Man in the iron mask.' The book has a markedly royalist bias."

— Ath 1912,2:486 O 26 100w

"To be welcomed by the young history lover." M. J. Moses.

+ — Ind 73:1361 D 12 '12 50w

"The style is to be commended. The color-plates—tho the artist's originals must be spirited—are slightly blurred."

+ — Lit D 45:1076 D 7 '12 130w

"An excellent survey enhanced by marginal notes."

+ Nation 95:540 D 5 '12 30w

"A capital book. It should appeal to old and young alike."

+ Outlook 103:596 Mr 15 '13 15w

"Miss Marshall gives picturesque incidents which will catch the attention of a child, but she also has an historical sense. She binds together her hundred short chapters so cleverly that she gives a really consecutive history of great interest. Children could not do better than found upon this work a knowledge of French history."

+ — Spec 109:sup940 D 7 '12 230w

MARSHALL, JOHN SAYRE. Mouth hygiene and mouth sepsis. Il *$1.50 Lippincott 12-15648

The author emphasizes the importance to general health of the care of the teeth, and points out the dangers and diseases that follow neglect. Special attention is called to the need of proper inspection and supervision of school children.

"Now that the gateway to the digestive apparatus has become a fashionable 'social problem,' and school authorities, parents, and institutional charities have condescended to look into the mouth, we have discovered the need of a book which is at once authoritative and intelligible. An eminent representative of oral medicine and surgery has met this need in an admirable way." C. R. Henderson.

+ Am J Soc 18:275 S '12 59w

"Somewhat repetitious, but as a whole a useful work."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:156 D '12

MARSHALL, JOHN SAYRE—Continued.

"Parents and school directors are especially urged to read this book attentively."

+ Chaut 68:119 S '12 80w

"This excellent book should be instrumental in arousing interest in the subject and in disseminating knowledge concerning the ways and means of securing practical results."

+ School R 21:216 Mr '13 250w

MARSHALL, WILLIAM CROSBY. Elementary machine drawing and design. il *$3 McGraw 12-21785

"Intended, as stated by the author, for students who have had a previous course in orthographic projection, but who have not yet become acquainted with simple machine elements. The book by chapter covers the following subjects: Chapter 1, working drawings; Chapters 2, 5 and 6, fastenings, rivets, bolts, screws, keys and cotters; Chapters 4, screw threads and springs; Chapters 3 and 18, pipes, pipe fittings, valves, cocks, etc.; Chapters 7, 9 and 14, shafting, shaft couplings, bearings, hangers, journals, pulleys and belting; Chapters 8, 10, 11, 12 and 13, engine parts, such as stuffing boxes, pistons, piston rods, cross-heads, etc.; Chapters 16 and 17, spur, bevel and worm gearing. A large number of problems suitable for class room use follow each subject treated and suggestive sets of test questions are given on the various topics."—Engin Rec

"Is intended for use in schools rather than for home study without an instructor. However, it might be of use as a handbook by structural draftsmen or others having occasion now and then to fix the proportions of some machine detail. A feature distinguishing this from the general run of books on the design of machine details is the combination in one volume of elementary instruction in drafting, machine design and nomenclature of machine parts." R. R. Potter.

+ Engin N 69:542 Mr 13 '13 270w

"The work throughout is carefully and clearly treated."

+ Engin Rec 66:475 O 26 '12 200w

MARTIN, EDWARD SANDFORD. Reflections of a beginning husband. *$1.20 (3½c) Harper 13-8341

A series of reflections on married life, domestic happiness, the suffrage question, the higher education of women from the half-whimsical point of view of a conservative who, recognizing the inevitability of the new order, yet clings to the old. The beginning husband and wife belong to that strata of the social order in which sixty dollars a week furnishes a very modest basis on which to start house-keeping.

A L A Bkl 10:20 S '13

"One must read the book to adequately appreciate its charm, of which the actual incidents play so small a part."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '13 330w

"Mr. Martin's humor, always as spicy and aromatic, as normal and sane, as a June rosarium, is at its best in 'Reflections of a beginning husband.'"

+ Dial 54:511 Je 16 '13 200w

Ind 75:577 S 4 '13 220w

"Bright, stimulating reading in which fun alternates healthily with serious thought."

+ Lit D 47:690 O 18 '13 110w

Nation 96:480 My 8 '13 280w

N Y Sun p4 Ap 26 '13 170w

"Delightful volume."

+ Outlook 104:1011 Ag 30 '13 100w

"The book is readable and pleasantly written, but there does not seem to be the exudation of romance one might expect from such a title."

+ R of Rs 47:760 Je '13 100w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 220w

MARTIN, EDWARD SANDFORD. Unrest of women. *$1 Appleton 13-13087

After an introductory chapter in which he discusses the feminine unrest in its relation to the "great unrest that is affecting all the world," Mr. Martin takes up in turn: The disquiet of Miss Thomas, The agitation of Mrs. Belmont; The admirable Miss Addams; Self-supporting wives; Feminism and the dual standard; The cause and the cure.

"Although the method is superficial, yet the author shows considerable understanding of the weaknesses of phases of the woman movement." F. F. Bernard.

+ Am J Soc 19:416 N '13 270w

"Though slight the essays are noteworthy for their good sense and delightful humor."

+ A L A Bkl 10:20 S '13

"The author writes in a pleasing and popular style but adds little of value to the subject which he discusses."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:478 Ag '13 100w

Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 330w

+ Lit D 47:688 O 18 '13 250w

"[Discusses the subject in] a particularly light, readable style."

+ N Y Sun p12 Je 14 '13 70w

"He presents his arguments well, is quick to see the weak points in his opponents' armor, and is open-minded."

+ N Y Times 18:420 Ag 3 '13 800w

"Nothing can be more charming than Mr. Martin's mingling of wit and wisdom in fluent talk. Nevertheless, his word upon feminine unrest seems to come a little late in the day. It is profitable to us to be gently warned away from extremes and to be reminded of the influences that after all keep humanity, on the whole, in the path of peace and progress; but we need the practical advice more than quieting assurance. It is all very well to say that religion is the only force that can bring men's conflicting desires into harmony, but religion seems to be changing, like everything else. Mr. Martin's book smoothes over rather than solves the problems it raises."

+ No Am 198:288 Ag '13 330w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:566 S '13 220w

R of Rs 48:119 Jl '13 80w

"If there is more pungent common sense than lambent humor, it is because Mr. Martin has undertaken to argue as straightforwardly as possible with certain feminist extremists, who are contributing to disturbance without solving problems."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 24 '13 1200w

"Such a book as 'The unrest of women' is one of the guide-posts which, through its sanity and its human understanding, must help to point the way which we must walk." Mrs. W. L. Putnam.

+ Survey 30:645 Ag 23 '13 900w

MARTIN, EDWIN CAMPBELL. Our own weather. il *$1.25 (2½c) Harper 13-10522

The weather is here described as "an activity." It is the "air's business—its runnings to and fro, its conflicts and avoidances, its unions and disunions and graspings and givings up." And further the author says, "if expanses of atmosphere were as open to view as expanses of sea the slightest brushes of weather would be all the time giving us intimation of a vastness, a puissance, and a mystery far exceeding the sea's." This point of view, which makes the atmosphere a reality, is characteristic of the author's treatment of his entire subject. He discusses "thick" weather, cyclones, hot and cold waves, winds, clouds, thunderstorms, and other related matters, and closes with a chapter on Weather signs and superstitions.

"Will attract the scientifically inclined general reader. Poorly illustrated."

+ A L A Bkl 10:59 O '13 +

"The volume ought certainly to go into school libraries."

+ Ind 75:452 Ag 21 '13 150w

+ Lit D 47:688 O 18 '13 160w

"He tells us all we need know about the winds and storms and the many changes in the weather in a pleasant conversational style as far removed from that of a schoolmaster as possible. It is a remarkably good book in its way and original."

+ N Y Sun p5 My 17 '13 80w

N Y Times 18:304 My 18 '13 50w

"Mr. Martin's book is filled with very excellent descriptions and explanations."

+ N Y Times 18:313 My 25 '13 90w

"It is a simple treatment of a complex subject."

+ Outlook 104:343 Je 14 '13 30w

MARTIN, HELEN REIMESNYDER. The parasite. il *$1.25 (2c) Lippincott 13-3763

The author has attempted to write a problem novel and has succeeded in writing a readable story in spite of her more serious intention. The heroine, the parasite of the title, is a southern girl who visits about from one good family to another on the lookout for a suitable opportunity to marry. The hero is a disillusioned man who has been married and divorced and who marries a second time only to provide a mother for his small son. The situation that develops after the union of these two is that in which husband and wife fall in love after marriage.

"The illustrations only augment the general poverty of the production."

— Ath 1913,2:33 Jl 12 80w

"Though the story is not the equal of 'Tillie,' the action is swift, and the hero and heroine are sufficient to hold the reader's attention for a few hours."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 12 '13 230w

Reviewed by W. M. Payne.

Dial 55:23 Jl 1 '13 280w

"A very interesting story; it is much better simply as a story than as an attack upon a social problem. The author has not answered her question satisfactorily, nor even stated it very clearly; but she has made an entertaining novel of it."

+ — N Y Times 18:101 F 23 '13 220w

MARTIN, MARTHA EVANS. Ways of the planets. il *$1.25 (2½c) Harper 12-25078

A book which gives in simple, untechnical language an account of what is now known of the planets. It is possible, the author maintains, for any ordinary person to learn to know at sight any one of the visible planets. "Of course, at the start some guidance is necessary, but only a little. . . . To provide such guidance is one of the aims of this book. . . . But in addition to what, as a help in observation, it may find to say regarding the appearance and movements of the planets, it will endeavor to give also ample information concerning their character and constitution." (Chapter 1)

+ A L A Bkl 9:197 Ja '13

"The book is useful for the general reader."

+ Ind 74:259 Ja 30 '13 60w

"Comparatively few slips, typographic or other, occur."

+ — Nation 96:604 Je 12 '13 380w

+ N Y Times 17:727 D 1 '12 60w

MARTIN, REV. MICHAEL. Roman curia as it now exists. *$1.50 (2c) Benziger 13-3219

This account of the Roman curia as it now exists was made necessary by its complete reorganization by Pius X in 1908. "The author gives briefly the story of the origin of each of the congregations and other departments, an account of the business each attends to and of the methods used in the past, which are changed by the new order. Of practical use are the chapters on how to communicate with the curia and on the customary forms for petitions and so forth." (N Y Sun)

Ath 1913,1:490 My 3 50w

"A full and accurate account of the Roman curia as it exists to-day."

+ Cath World 97:836 S '13 170w

"The book is useful and important."

+ Lit D 46:909 Ap 19 '13 200w

+ N Y Sun p4 F 22 '13 130w

"An authoritative work."

+ N Y Times 18:181 Mr 30 '13 100w

"This will be of interest to those who wish to understand the workings of the central organization of that great machine, the Roman Catholic hierarchy."

+ R of Rs 47:507 Ap '13 80w

MARTINDALE, THOMAS. Hunting in the up-¹² per Yukon. il *$2 (3c) Jacobs 13-23860

The route of travel followed by Mr. Martindale on the hunting expedition described in this book began at Skaguay and followed a north and northwesterly direction to the international boundary line, a distance of about four hundred miles. His own exploits with the gun take up only a part of the narrative; the author describes the country, its mineral resources, and the people of its widely separated settlements. There are many pictures from photographs, and a folding map.

"The hunting part will interest sportsmen."

+ N Y Sun p5 N 15 '13 80w

MARVIN, REV. FREDERIC ROWLAND. Free lance. *$1.25 (3c) Sherman, French & co. 13-825

From the accumulation of material in his desk that has never seen publication the author has made the selection of notes and paragraphs that make up this volume. They vary in length from the brief three-line paragraph to the essay of several pages. Among the subjects touched on at some length are: The vulgar age; Woman's world; Freedom in married life; Religious nature; Socialism; Social recognition.

"Whatever may be said of Mr. Marvin's new book, it cannot be regarded either as commonplace or recondite."

+ — Boston Transcript p26 D 18 '12 230w

"There is little of interest or value in the volume."

— Chaut 70:355 My '13 350w

"Interesting to read in some spectator's column day by day or week by week, but almost too ephemeral for preservation in a volume."

+ — Ind 74:259 Ja 30 '13 70w

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 18 '13 270w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Daffodil fields. *$1.25 Macmillan 13-7113

A long narrative poem that tells a story of simple and tragic intensity. It is the story of three people who grow up together from childhood, Michael, Lion, and Mary. It is Michael, the wild and reckless, whom Mary loves. Michael goes away for a three years' stay and Mary waits his return; but Michael does not come when his three years are over, and when Mary feels that he will never return, she marries Lion, the true devoted lover of many years. Then Michael comes back; the three meet again, and their story comes to its tragic ending in the fields where they had played as children.

+ A L A Bkl 9:436 Je '13

+ — Ath 1913,2:376 O 11 160w

"There are many forms of decadence; and if we are to have decadence at all, it is better to have the 'comely decadence' of Walter Pater than the obscene and unseemly decadence of Mr. Masefield."

— Nation 96:549 My 29 '13 1000w

+ — N Y Sun p15 Ap 26 '13 130w

MASEFIELD, JOHN—Continued.

"There may well be more than two opinions of Mr. Masefield as a poet, but after reading through his latest book, 'The daffodil fields' one feels that there can be no two opinions of his gift as a story teller. It bears the stamp of verity wherever the scene may be, and holds one's attention breathlessly in every part, in spite of its simplicity."

+ N Y Times 18:198 Ap 6 '13 700w

+ N Y Times 18:670 N 30 '13 320w

"To find oneself, at this date, reading a long narrative poem, dealing with modern people and situations, and to find oneself, moreover, enjoying every word of it, is an amazing experience."

+ No Am 197:859 Je '13 550w

"His latest volume has all the rugged strength, the astonishing rapidity of movement, of his earlier works, and at the same time shows a marked advance in power of expression and a decided growth in poetic feeling. In this long narrative poem, as in 'Dauber,' Masefield is occasionally merely crude when he wishes to be virile, but the desert stretches in his imagination are fast being brought under subjection."

+ Outlook 104:72 My 10 '13 130w

"It is filled with Masefield's own peculiar literary beauties that mark his passionate gift of simple utterance; the art to tell a simple tale and yet reflect all of heaven and earth within it as a pool of water reflects the sky."

+ R of Rs 47:753 Je '13 800w

"In Mr. Masefield it is the rush of his lines, their momentum and energy, that makes his poem. Our only doubt, which often runs into certainty, is that this momentum is less the momentum of genius than the momentum of an extremely clever writer exploiting an amazing facility of style and emotion."

+ Sat R 116:590 N 8 '13 740w

"Although there are some descriptive passages of rare beauty and others of achieved intensity in 'The daffodil fields,' the poem as a whole is a tragedy just off the key—a melodrama whose lines and theme and climax lack art sufficient to blend them into an entirely artistic (or even realistic) whole."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 700w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Jim Davis. *$1.25 Stokes
A13-480

"Jim was a small boy in South Devon some hundred years ago, and partly by accident and partly by cleverness he found out more about the local smugglers than his mysterious friend Mr. Gorsuch (who was really their captain) could approve of; so to stop his tongue, he was carried off and made two most exciting trips with them. His narrative, which should be in the hands of many sea-loving youngsters at Christmas, has all the atmosphere of the time towards the end of the French wars; its moral moreover is unimpeachable for Mr. Gorsuch after being severely wounded settled down ashore in a respectable occupation."—
Sat R

"A well written and not impossible story, with correct historical atmosphere and good moral."

+ A L A Bkl 9:303 Mr '13 ✚

"Is cunningly written, a boy's book of adventure which provokes comparison with 'Treasure Island,' and sustains that trial not ill."

+ Ath 1911.2:516 O 28 150w

"In a somewhat hurried survey, it impresses one as of the true breed, conveying that unforgettable sense of reality so essential to the complete enjoyment of wild doings." Hildegarde Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:582 Ja '13 70w

Lit D 45:1085 D 7 '12 50w

"An excellent story it undoubtedly is, full of wild adventure, pursuits by land and bat-ties by sea, and it is told with a rare simplicity. Sedate grown-ups will enjoy Mr. Masefield's book."

+ N Y Times 18:61 F 9 '13 230w

+ Sat R 112:527 O 21 '11 200w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Mainsail haul. *$1.25
12 (3½c) Macmillan 13-21106

This book, altho it has been revised and enlarged by the addition of new matter, is representative of Mr. Masefield's earlier work. It was published first in 1905. There are fanciful stories of the sea and of sailors, and true stories, "historical papers," the author calls them, sketching the lives of certain old sea rovers, John Ward, John Jennings, Robert Knox and John Coxon.

"It is his humor which gives a distinction, even a captivating kind of charm, to this almost unbelievably strange and rough life of ships and sailors. We wish that there were more books like 'A mainsail haul' to come out of Masefield's obscure literary beginnings."

+ Boston Transcript p25 O 15 '13 380w

"The true tales of buccaneers are good reading, but another man might have written them as well as Mr. Masefield. It is the fanciful tales that give the collection its value, and we can only hope and pray that their author will write more of them."

+ N Y Times 18:705 N 30 '13 420w

"In these tales are splendid passages of description."

+ R of Rs 48:636 N '13 280w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Salt-water ballads. *$1
13 Macmillan

The poems in this book were written in Mr. Masefield's boyhood and early youth. They were first published eleven years ago and are now reissued with but few changes.

Boston Transcript p25 S 24 '13 250w

"It is safe to say that one's appreciation of Masefield is not complete without this little volume of 'Salt-water ballads.'"

+ Boston Transcript p15 D 5 '13 350w

+ N Y Sun p25 N 29 '13 280w

"What John Masefield leaves negligently behind him has more sound wheat in it than the carefully garnered crop of most men."

+ N Y Times 18:705 N 30 '13 450w

"These ballads of the sea, torn freshly from his then recent experiences, will quite likely remain to the end of his life the freshest and purest of all the Masefield poetry."

+ R of Rs 48:636 N '13 250w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Story of a round-house and other poems. *$1.30 Macmillan 12-27227

The long narrative poem that opens this collection "tells the story of a lad whose passion for art, and the great desire to paint the sea realistically led him to ship as a common sailor on a voyage round the Horn. His passion led him who was so unfit physically into a very foolhardy adventure, and his life among the seamen and the hardships was one excruciating agony of body and spirit until his death from falling off the rigging in a storm just after a perilous passage of the Horn." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 9:330 Ap '13

"Here and there real music may be heard, but not infrequently we come upon lines which suggest that Mr. Masefield is bent upon saving his parodists further trouble."

+ Ath 1913.1:519 My 10 130w

Reviewed by W. A. Bradley.

+ Bookm 37:196 Ap '13 350w

"The passage of the Horn in a terrific storm is unsurpassed in English narrative poetry, as a sea-picture of awful and impressive terror." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 29 '13 100w

Reviewed by Stephen Phillips.

+ N Y Times 18:199 Ap 6 '13 200w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"For sheer naked power of description it would be hard to find the equal of the storm scenes of 'Dauber.' I may be wrong to quarrel with Mr. Masfield for singing of fair ladies and dead knights; but what are they against the living lure of the sea?" H. T. Pulsifer.

+ — Outlook 103:260 F 1 '13 400w

"If you have to miss reading every other recent book of English verse, do not fail to read the latest work of John Masfield—'The story of a round house and other poems.' There is perhaps nothing in the English tongue, not of Swinburne's, nor of Noyes' magnificent epic of the sea,—'Drake,'— that excels 'The story of a round house.'"

+ R of Rs 47:370 Mr '13 1000w

+ Sat R 115:618 My 17 '13 1500w

"This is the fourth long poem which Mr. Masfield has published in the last year or two, and to our mind it is far the finest."

+ Spec 110:930 My 31 '13 670w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 700w

"The description of rounding the Horn is one of the most terrific passages in the literature of the sea." H: A. Beers.

+ Yale R ns2:560 Ap '13 200w

MASPERO, GASTON CAMILLE CHARLES.
Art in Egypt. il $1.50 Scribner 13-35275

This well illustrated volume is one of the numbers in Scribner's "General history of art" series. With the beginnings of art in Egypt the author is little concerned, refusing to "accent as art the rude images by which every new-born people seeks to reproduce the objects or the things it sees around it." It is, therefore, to the maturity of Egyptian art that he devotes most of the space afforded within the limits of one small volume. The erroneous idea that there is an unbroken uniformity in the art of Egypt is dispelled; its art is treated by schools—the Thinite school; the Memphite school; the Hermopolitan schools; the Tanite school and the secondary schools of the Said or the Delta.

+ A L A Bkl 9:380 My '13

"The book is one of a series on the history of art, and suffers in consequence from reduction to a size so contracted that many of the details in the excellent photographs with which it is illustrated are lost. It is the first book we have read which should enable the instructed and uninstructed alike to find their way through the apparent maze of Egyptian art."

+ — Ath 1912,2:663 N 30 530w

"The book is well calculated to foster a clearer understanding and arouse a deeper love for Egyptian art."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 29 '13 270w

+ Ind 74:824 Ap 10 '13 230w

+ Int Studio 48:348 F '13 200w

+ Nation 97:548 D 4 '13 350w

"A book that will give the general reader a clear view of one of the most interesting fields of archaeological research."

+ N Y Sun p10 Ja 25 '13 100w

N Y Times 13:104 F 23 '13 100w

+ R of Rs 47:381 Mr '13 50w

"The name of Sir Gaston Maspero is a sufficient guarantee that his book is the best and latest pronouncement on the subject of which it treats."

+ Sat R 115:718 Je 7 '13 1150w

Springfield Republican p5 O 2 '13 780w

MASPERO, GASTON CAMILLE CHARLES.
Egyptian art; studies; tr. by Elizabeth I. Lee. il $7.50 Appleton A13-2511

"The book is made up of translations of twenty-five magazine articles published at various times, some dated as far back as 1890, some undated, dealing with as many topics connected with the art and archaeology of Egypt.

The majority have to do with various pieces of statuary and examples of the goldsmith's work in jewelry and plate. . . . The articles reflect the views entertained during the past quarter of a century or more, while the foot-notes call attention to the changes which investigation has made meanwhile."—Nation

Ath 1913,2:289 S 20 130w

"The second respect in which the book has considerable value is historical. Censure is due for adherence to the French method of transcription of proper names in an English version, which serves to confuse the layman hopelessly."

+ — Nation 97:548 D 4 '13 350w

"Sir Gaston Maspero speaks with authority; and he speaks also with charm. This book would be a joyful possession for the illustrations alone, many of them suggesting very vividly the loveliness of the original figures."

+ Sat R 116:532 O 25 '13 150w

MASSON, THOMAS LANSING, comp. Best 12 stories in the world. $1 (2c) Doubleday 13-21929

"The stories in this little volume have been gathered from a variety of sources during the past decade. . . . Most of [them] have stood many tests. They have been repeated to audiences and have been widely copied and passed from one to another. If the over-critical reader does not think them humorous, the fault must be his own." (Compiler's note)

+ A L A Bkl 10:144 D '13

"The didactic and serious manner in which the anecdotes are told effectively disguises the humor of them and sometimes what point they have. Diligent search will reward the reader with some stories that are bright or witty, and which are not yet antiquated."

+ — N Y Sun p5 O 18 '13 100w

"The collection is a remarkably good one."

+ N Y Times 18:630 N 16 '13 70w

MASTERS, PERCIVAL G. Rational system of home exercise. il $1 (3½c) McBride, Nast & co.

The exercises presented in this book are preventive rather than curative. The nervous system, especially the spine is the point of attack in all the exercises and the entire system is based on the principle that the most important thing in the preservation of health and fitness is the conservation of nervous force. The book is well illustrated with plates that make clear the manner of putting the system into practice.

MATHER, FRANK JEWETT, Jr. Collectors; being cases mostly under the ninth and tenth commandments. $1.25 (3½c) Holt 12-24904

They who covet rare works of art or who make the acquisition of such treasures a life purpose are the collectors of the title. The author is an art critic; he writes of art matters with the air of one who knows; but his stories, ingenious in plot and told with a fine skill, are of value in themselves as examples of good story telling. There are six stories with titles as follows: Campbell Corot; The del Puente Giorgione; The Lombard runes; Their cross; The missing St. Michael; The lusted pots; The Balaklava coronal. An essay, Some reflections on art collecting, completes the volume's contents.

"They are pleasantly told and are the work of a recognized critic and connoisseur, and will interest the initiated."

+ A L A Bkl 9:259 F '13

"Not often do we have so delightful an evening's entertainment as is offered by 'The collectors.' Deft, mellow, human—quite delightfully framed and phrased—these pieces are, and altogether good to read. Clever in motive and artistry, almost unique in literary conception and finish, full of humor (and good humor), these sketches permeate the reader with such content as only comes with human interest and fine literary workmanship."

MATHER, FRANK JEWETT, Jr.—Continued.

+ Ind 73: 1432 D 19 '12 120w

"The style of the book verges sufficiently towards the 'precious' to suit the subtlety of the theme, yet without falling into artificiality or effeminacy. Only once or twice an annoying solecism has crept in which could well have been avoided."

+ Nation 95: 483 N 21 '12 350w

"The stories are interesting and will be enjoyed by those who care for objects of art."

+ N Y Sun p 14 N 23 '12 90w

"Mr. Mather's art appreciations are always worth reading; and in the present volume he has applied his analytical and judicial ability to fiction."

+ Outlook 103:279 Ja 1 '13 100w

MATHER, FRANK JEWETT, Jr. Homer Martin; poet in landscape. (American artists ser.) ll $12.50 Snrman, F: F. 12-17946

This study of Martin, the American landscape painter, is published in an edition uniform with the study of Inness by Elliott Dainigfield that was published last year. "The author is a humanist as well as a critic, to whom the man and his work are inseparable. He follows the modern method of making a personality reveal itself to the reader by a hundred minute facts, in the same way as a mosaic picture results from a mass of little cubes. . . . The critical temper of the author is that of the broad-minded scholar who knows and values the art of many schools. The descriptions of pictures are admirable; each subject is felt and characterized with sympathetic insight, and with a fine glow of enthusiasm tempered by a sense of measure." (Nation)

"It will be difficult to find authors as competent as Mr. Mather, who has an intimate knowledge of his subject as well as wide artistic reading and long practice in criticism. One addition may be suggested to such volumes: they certainly ought to have a list of the paintings of the painter they discuss, and, one would think, also a bibliography." E: E. Hale.

+ — Dial 53:488 D 16 '12 2150w

"Our thanks are due to the author for his painstaking labor to establish facts which would otherwise be lost, and to discover the works of the artist and give them their proper date thus establishing the chronology of his development. This Catalogue raisonné, which must be the essential part of such a work, is admirably done and makes the book one of solid and permanent value. Such a book as Mr. Mather's will prove invaluable to students and lovers of art. It belongs to the class of serious, elevated, and scholarly, yet human, works of which we are in particular need and which we so seldom get."

+ Nation 95:622 D 26 '12 1000w

"The volume before us has a double merit. It is a story of real life. The descriptions of Martin's friends of his early years—that period which opened in frank emulation of Kennett and ended under the leading of Corot—is graphically done, especially so the account of the struggle with constant poverty. But the interest in the book as a biography yields to that in it as a criticism."

+ Outlook 102:504 N 2 '12 550w

MATHEWS, BASIL. Splendid quest. $1 (2½c) 12 Revell 13-35736

The book opens with a prologue that describes a journey over the old pilgrim way that led from London to Canterbury. There follows a series of stories of the world's knights, ancient and modern, who have followed the pilgrim way toward an ideal. Among them are Sir Galahad, Joan of Arc, Abraham Lincoln, Simon Peter, Sister Dora, James Chalmers, Louisa Alcott, St. Paul, and, to bring the volume to a close, the 'hero of heroes,' Jesus of Nazareth.

"Though somewhat trite and priggish at times, they have sympathy and imagination, and will be specially good for Sunday school teachers because of their strong religious element."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:74 O '13

"Simple and strong and fine [are] the little stories gathered within this volume."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Jl 30 '13 150w

MATHEWS, FRANCES AYMAR. Fanny of the forty frocks. $1.20 (1½c) Winston 13-20755

The story of a little village girl who owned one frock and who left home with the valiant determination to earn for herself forty of them. Fanny has been reared in the early Victorian traditions of ladylike idleness, and can do nothing useful, but a friendly star seems to shine over her. She is taken to Europe by a kindly hearted Irish modiste with a French name, a romance begun on shipboard ends in a wedding with the requisite number of frocks as part of the trousseau.

N Y Times 18:531 O 12 '13 370w

MATHEWS, FRANCES AYMAR. My Lady Peggy leaves town. ll $1.30 Moffat 13-7517

"This is the long-expected successor to the well-known 'Lady Peggy goes to town,' a one-time 'best seller' which also had the distinction of being dramatized. The latest Lady Peggy is a lineal descendant of the original charmer and teaser, Lady Peggy Burgoyne. . . . The new Lady Peggy is still English in character, but somewhat Americanized by an international marriage of her ancestors. She lives in New York. Tiring of the social gayeties of her 'set' she leaves town (and a score of broken hearts), deciding to live the simple life out west." (N Y Times) This simple life proves to be a series of astonishing adventures involving tragedy as well as comedy and the curtain falls on Lady Peggy again in tame New York happily settled in life.

"If you want a good evening entertainment, follow this trail and search for Lady Peggy."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 24 '13 500w

"Amazing adventures that may be accepted when placed in remote climes or long past days are apt to be rather absurd when represented as occurring in the United States nowadays. The versatile heroine is more headstrong than attractive."

— N Y Sun p4 Ap 12 '13 120w

"We have here, admirably done, the swash-buckling atmosphere of revolutionary days woven into the wild and woolly mat of the extreme end of Cripple Creek. One is of the opinion that if early in the book somebody had given my Lady Peggy a good shaking, there wouldn't have been any book at all. But, on the whole, one is glad that nobody had the nerve to do it!"

+ — N Y Times 18:303 My 18 '13 470w

MATHEWS, SHAILER. Making of to-morrow: interpretations of the world to-day. $1 Meth. bk. 13-8160

The book is made up of "selections from Professor Shailer Mathews's editorial paragraphs contributed to 'The world to-day.' . . . Under the general headings, 'The common lot,' 'The church and society,' 'The stirrings of a nation's conscience,' and 'The extension of democracy,' are grouped two-score brief and pithy disquisitions on present-day tendencies, good and evil, in society, business, politics, international relations, the church and the school, and wherever else the discerning eye of this observant writer turned its gaze in quest of signs of the times."—Dial

"The writer's keen observation is revealed in a variety of present day subjects which he has developed in his usual brilliant, epigrammatic style."

+ A L A Bkl 10:20 S '13

Bib World 42:322 N '13 80w

"The thoughtful expressions of the careful observations of a wide-awake student of present-day movements."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 13 '13 150w

"The volume holds between its covers some of the most discriminating of [the author's] editorial interpretations of life and politics and society and the church."

+ Chaut 71:203 Ag 2 '13 220w

"The book is timely and thoughtful and readable."

+ Dial 54:470 Je 1 '13 150w

Ind 75:395 Ag 14 '13 110w

MÄTTER, JOHN. Three farms. *$1.20 (2½c)
Holt 13-7079

The three farms were in widely separated parts of the earth—the first in Provence, the second in Saskatchewan, the third in Indiana. The first failed to materialize, because in looking for the farm so much money was spent, that there was none left to purchase it when found. From the second, the Canadian homestead, the author was recalled before the final proving up could make it truly his. On the third, the Indiana home of his fathers, he found what he had been seeking, happiness and contentment.

"The author has achieved a rare combination of philosophy and humor. The most remarkable part of this book is the wonderful atmosphere of content which radiates from it." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 5 '13 500w

"John Mätter is clever, imaginative, often witty, and always self-conscious. Like so many celebrants of the simple life, he does not know how to be simple, though he would very much like to know how. Books of this sort are well calculated to charm the city dweller, who takes his agriculture vicariously. The real farm-liver and farm-lover does not need to have the deep and solid satisfactions of his lot decked with an artificial glamour."

+ Nation 96:423 Ap 24 '13 400w

"He relates pleasantly, in the language which it is now the fashion to use in speaking of nature, the impressions he formed on a great variety of subjects not connected with farming, in Provence, in the Canadian Northwest and in Indiana. His sentiments are generally orthodox and he puts commonplace ideas into nicely sounding phrases. The book should be popular among those who are fond of diluted philosophy and sentiment."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 29 '13 120w

"If we get no philosophic thrill from his discoveries in life, at least we see credibly how one man attained to content, which is all that the author pretends to reveal."

+ N Y Times 18:260 Ap 27 '13 500w

"It makes cheerful reading and has the refinement of sweet-natured humanity."

+ Outlook 103:363 Ap 19 '13 50w

MATTHEWS, BRANDER. Shakespeare as a playwright. 11 *$3 (2½c) Scribner 13-21467

The author says in his first chapter that "this is not a biography of Shakespeare; it is a study of his stage craft." Shakespeare has been looked upon variously, as poet, psychologist, and philosopher, Professor Matthews has chosen to deal with him in a less adequately criticized aspect—as a playwright. "An attempt has here been made to disentangle the fundamental principles which guided him in the construction of his successive plays, to analyze the elements of his craftsmanship, and to trace the development of his dramaturgic technic. . . . I have sought to apply to Shakespeare the method of analysis already employed in my critical biography of Molière." (Prefatory note)

+ A L A Bkl 10:144 D '13

Ath 1913:2:603 N 22 20w

"This fresh and lively treatment of an eternal subject is delightful. Bernard Shaw, too, will be delighted that the English race is one book the nearer to a rational treatment of their national idol." Graham Berry.

+ Bookm 38:424 D '13 1300w

+ Boston Transcript p9 N 29 '13 1050w

"A scholarly and conscientious bit of work."

+ Nation 97:518 N 27 '13 650w

"Prof. Matthews has the advantage of bringing to this study of Shakespeare a method of analysis which he has already used successfully in the study of Molière." H. W. Boynton.

+ N Y Times 18:595 N 2 '13 1300w

+ N Y Times 18:666 N 30 '13 320w

"It is no exaggeration to say that by reading this volume one's appreciation of Shakespeare, in the theater or in the library, will be measurably increased."

+ No Am 198:881 D '13 1000w

MAUGRAS, GASTON, and CROZE, PIERRE DE, COUNT LEMERCIER. Memoirs of Delphine de Sabran, marquise de Custine; from the French. 11 *$3 Doran

The subject of these memoirs "is celebrated, not through any special talents of her own, but because of the variety and distinction of her lovers and friends as well as the dangers and sufferings, moral and physical, which she endured in the triumph of that revolution for which her father-in-law, the gallant Marquis de Custine, had literally given up his life. . . . The figure of 'Delphine' stands out in several ways as very characteristic of the times in which she lived—1770-1826. In spite of her attractiveness and real sincerity, there is more than a touch of the artificial about this woman who did not even use her own Christian name. All her life, too, she was in the false position of an aristocrat out of place, and both she and her brother, Elzéar de Sabran, were striking instances of the effect of new ideas on nervous, ill-balanced characters, without the dignity to sustain old traditions or the moral strength to encounter a changed world." (Spec)

"It is a volume of memoirs of more than average interest to the social and literary historian, and a handsome one."

+ Ind 74:922 Ap 24 '13 220w

"The greatest value of the book is in its reflection of the times and the men and women historically famous."

+ Lit D 45:1139 D 14 '12 200w

Nation 96:264 Mr 13 '13 370w

"The book has small treasure of live anecdote, interesting portraiture and historical enlightenment; but it has color and motion."

+ N Y Sun p5 F 1 '13 2200w

N Y Times 17:760 D 8 '12 370w

Spec 110:66 Ja 11 '13 470w

MAULE, HARRY EDWARD. Boy's book of new inventions. 11 *$1.60 Doubleday 12-26378

"The aeroplane, wireless telegraph, motion picture, thermit, steam turbine and automobile engine, are here described and illustrated from their inception to their present state. Another topic is the Romance of concrete. The last chapter deals with more marvels of science,—color photography, the tungsten lamp and the pulmotor. . . . The style is conversational."—School Arts Magazine

+ A L A Bkl 9:304 Mr '13 *

N Y Sun p9 N 30 '12 80w

"This is one of the books to be added to the school library of history devoted to the heroes of constructive warfare,—the invaders of the unknown, the conquerors of difficulties, and the rulers of the powers of nature." H: T. Bailey.

+ School Arts Magazine 12:349 Ja '13 120w

"There is a somewhat bombastic tone about this book."

+ Spec 109:1020 D 14 '12 70w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

MAUNDER, EDWARD WALTER. Are the planets inhabited? *75c (2c) Harper 13-11520

This is one of the volumes in Harper's "Library of living thought." "Professor Maunder discusses the pros and cons for the possibility of human life existing on each of the planets, as well as on the sun and moon, and finds in every case investigated, some contravention of the physical laws which he believes constitute the final test of the question." (N Y Times)

+ A L A Bkl 10:59 O '13

Reviewed by H. C. Shelley.

Boston Transcript p7 My 3 '13 280w

Nature 91:605 Ag 14 '13 450w

"Aside from giving his own original contributions to this knowledge—notably his experiments in regard to Prof. Lowell's Martian canal theory—his book is valuable as giving, in a more or less popular form, a summary of astronomical research and an indication of its future tendency."

+ N Y Times 18:301 My 18 '13 1400w

MAUREL, ANDRÉ. Little cities of Italy; tr. by Helen Gerard. v 2 il *$2.50 (2½c) Putnam (11-9162)

The little cities described in this second series are: Milan, Pavia, Placenza, Parma, Modena, Bologna, Ferrara, Ravenna, Rimini, Pisa, Urbino, Perugia, Assisi, Spello, Montefalco, Spoleto, Orvieto, Viterbo. "M. Maurel wanders from city to city, sketching with vivid colors his impressions of their history and art, marvelously reproducing their atmosphere and indicating the influence of their past on the present. Literally and ethically he follows 'the road to Rome.' . . . As he journeys from city to city, he studies the successive phases of the development of the pontifical state each typical." (Boston Transcript)

"M. Maurel is fortunate in his translator, who has preserved not only the letter, but also the spirit of the text."

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 21 '13 470w

"Few writers seem capable of self-restraint when Italy is their subject. But M. André Maurel outdoes even the customary extravagance in writing."

— Dial 55:90 Ag 1 '13 250w

+ Ind 75:691 S 18 '13 100w

+ Lit D 47:586 O 4 '13 250w

"M. Maurel has all the genius of his race in elegant scholarship—an intuitive faculty for sympathetic interpretation of the past and the gift of felicitous and illuminating phrasing."

+ Nation 96:367 Ap 10 '13 240w

+ — N Y Sun p4 F 15 '13 2500w

N Y Times 18:74 F 16 '13 60w

+ Sat R 115:814 Je 28 '13 300w

MAURICE, FREDERICK BARTON. Sir Frederick Maurice: a record of his work and opinions; with eight essays on Discipline and national efficiency; ed. by his son. il *$3 Longmans (Eng ed 13-10035)

"This memoir is of considerable interest at the present moment, when one of the most serious questions of the day is how to make the nation realise the vital importance of the manhood of the nation accepting its military responsibilities." (Sat R) "As a professional soldier and scientific student of the art of war Sir Frederick Maurice had little belief in the possibility of disarmament, except doubtless as a splendid ideal for the far distant future. Social salvation seemed to him to depend upon the regeneration of the individual from within by the cultivation of the commonplace virtues; and he was strong in the belief." (Nation)

Nation 96:643 Je 26 '13 500w

"We recommend some of Sir Frederick Maurice's essays to those who raise childish cries against 'militancy' when any attempt is made to convert our attenuated military forces into an effective weapon of defence."

+ Sat R 115:460 Ap 12 '13 750w

"It would be hard to think of a better book of its kind."

+ + Spec 111:614 O 18 '13 730w

MAWER, ALLEN. The vikings. (Cambridge manuals of science and literature) *40c (1½c) Putnam 13-6369

The word Viking is used here in its broadest sense, "as a concise and convenient term for describing the whole of the civilization, activity and influence of the Scandinavian peoples, at a particular period in their history." This period extends roughly from the middle of the 8th to the end of the 10th century. The first eight chapters trace the history of this movement, the remaining six discuss Viking civilization and the influence of the movement on Ireland, England, and other countries touched by it.

A L A Bkl 10:21 S '13

"An interesting little history."

+ Ath 1913,1:216 F 22 60w.

Nation 97:516 N 27 '13 20w

"A lively sketch of romantic episode."

+ N Y Sun p5 My 17 '13 50w

MAWSON, THOMAS HAYTON. Art and craft of garden making. il *$20 Scribner 13-12550

This fourth edition has been largely rewritten and is newly illustrated. "Mr. Mawson now calls himself a landscape architect instead of a garden architect. The advent of the motor-car has necessitated the rewriting of the chapter on Carriage courts and drives, and the maturing of Mr. Mawson's early works in the art of garden design has made it possible for him to illustrate many of his principles from photographs instead of drawings." (Ath)

"The book is full of information, and should be useful for reference; but, illustrating only the author's work, it is, perhaps, rather too much like a splendid catalogue in which many of the accessories of the garden are treated on rather a high note; yet it serves a purpose in calling attention to the importance of little things."

+ — Ath 1913,1:169 F 8 450w

"To have the book and a fair degree of imagination is almost equal to having a garden."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 4 '13 220w

"Mr. Mawson has, indeed, by his proved ability to grapple with all the manifold problems which have arisen in the course of his twenty-five years' practice established for himself a unique reputation, and the respect in which he is held due not a little to his broad and liberal views of the functions of a garden-designer."

+ Int Studio 49:84 Mr '13 350w

+ Nation 96:452 My 1 '13 400w

"The book is full of information and advice based upon the author's experience as a landscape architect in England."

+ N Y Times 18:73 F 16 '13 60w

Spec 111:320 Ag 30 '13 50w

MAXWELL, WILLIAM BABINGTON. General Mallock's shadow. il *$1.30 (½c) Appleton A13-476

The Yorkshire setting with the uprising and rioting of the millworkers is suggestive of a novel of an earlier generation, Charlotte Brontë's "Shirley." In the present story General Mallock who has dwelt under the shadow of a military disgrace for fifteen years has an opportunity to retrieve his earlier mistake and to clear his name in an encounter with a mob of workmen who are on strike. There are two love stories, but the chief interest of the tale attaches to the general and the influence on his character of the long years of brooding.

+ A L A Bkl 9:299 Mr '13 +

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"The consequences of brooding in inactivity are well conveyed, but might, with advantage, have occupied far fewer pages, and the 'dénouement' may not strike all readers as worthy even of a single sentence of panegyric, far less of close on fifty pages."

+ — Ath 1912,2:344 S 28 50w

Reviewed by F. T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:205 Ap '13 850w

"In 'General Mallock's shadow' Mr. Maxwell has by no means kept himself up to the high mark of 'In cotton wool.' The irony of the story is its most striking feature, and it presents with some considerable ingenuity a series of scenes and episodes in English rural life."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 F 5 '13 300w

"A fine example of the art of writing a strong and interesting novel." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:303 Ap 1 '13 480w

+ — Nation 96:416 Ap 24 '13 200w

"This is a mechanical sort of British tale, with a plot that is clumsily improbable and with few characters with whom the reader can feel any sympathy."

+ — N Y Sun p5 F 1 '13 100w

"It is a romance cut after the time-worn pattern of the heroine and of the ingenué; of the hero who is misunderstood and of the disappointed lover who bows before the inevitable and contents himself with being a mere friend."

+ — N Y Times 18:136 Mr 9 '13 300w

MAXWELL, WILLIAM HENRY. Quarter century of public school development, with an introd. by N: Murray Butler. *$1.25 (1c) Am. bk. 12-24048

This volume is published in commemoration of Mr. Maxwell's twenty-five years of service as superintendent of the New York city schools. The contents comprises extracts from speeches and reports on such subjects of nation-wide interest as: The kindergarten; Manual training in the grades, and in high school; Trade schools; Medical officers; Truant schools; Continuation vs. evening school; Teachers salaries; Education and efficiency.

"Though the majority concern a single system, the larger number of the subjects discussed are of interest to all who are engaged in the problems of public education in this country."

+ A L A Bkl 9:290 Mr '13

"His book is of interest generally, and in many respects it is historically valuable."

+ Boston Transcript p24 D 4 '12 100w

"This book will be illuminating to the layman who has not kept in touch with educational development during the past quarter of a century, and it will also be of interest to teachers who are not familiar with the reforms wrought in school work during the past twenty-five years." M. O. O'Shea.

+ Dial 54:144 F 16 '13 250w

"The book bids fair to become an educational classic." W: L. Felter.

+ Educ R 45:206 F '13 1000w

MAYNE, ETHEL COLBURN. Byron. 2v il *$6 Scribner A12-1725

"Enough, indeed, has come to light since the life of Byron was originally written to indicate that it ought to be rewritten." (N Y Sun) "What was really wanted to finish the controversy, carried on fitfully for nearly a century, was a reasoned and ordered appeal to all the established facts of Byron's life, parentage, ancestry, self-revelations (mystifying or otherwise), poetical utterances, and the varying testimonies of those who knew him best. This is just what Miss Mayne's book is." (Ath)

"Indefatigable research, a judicial temper, and full appreciation of the subject distinguish this detailed life, which is the most satisfactory yet published despite, or perhaps because of, the fact that its author is a woman. Assumes a full knowledge of the earlier biographies and of contemporary controversies and writings, and is for other obvious reasons not so well adapted for young readers as the briefer biographies."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:246 F '13

"A serious account, analysis, and criticism of his whole pilgrimage was much wanted; and Miss Mayne has found a happy use for the critical, analytical, and synthetical gifts which she clearly possesses. Against these advantages we cannot attach much importance to a certain want of finish in the style."

+ — Ath 1912,2:511 N 2 1050w

"In one or two points the feminine point of view has possibly led Miss Mayne into exaggeration. On one other point, she has, in our judgment, fallen into actual error."

+ — Nation 96:476 My 8 '13 1200w

"Miss Mayne's diligence is exemplary. It is not easily conceivable that she has neglected any available source of information about Byron. She knows how to convey her information clearly and cleverly. Her criticism is shrewd and suggestive, when she undertakes to do it for herself and not leave it to Mr. Arthur Symon. There can hardly be a dozen readers of English who will not find in these pages something new and interesting about their subject."

+ N Y Sun p7 N 23 '12 2750w

Reviewed by W: E. Leonard.

+ N Y Times 18:1 Ja 5 '13 2950w

"Miss Mayne has written a book for which she deserves the hearty gratitude of lovers of the poet. She is sincere, well-balanced, accurate, and often acute; she never sins against good taste—a quality somewhat rare in Byron's biographers; and she is equally free from 'schwärmerisch' eulogy and facile condemnation. The book, to be sure, is not perfect. Sometimes the writing is very tall, so tall as to be almost unintelligible. She gives us illuminating notes, but she is not careful to compose their details into a picture. If Miss Mayne had been as careful in marshalling her criticisms as she has shown herself in acquiring the 'data' for them, the book would have been better. As it is, we should unhesitatingly call it the best of modern works on the subject. Miss Mayne, with admirable good sense, chooses to 'regard his love affairs as things of little importance to anyone but his victims.' Certainly we could not desire any treatment of the subject more reticent and reasonable than she has given us."

+ — Spec 109:858 N 23 '12 1700w

MAYNE, RUTHERFORD. The drone: a play in three acts. *75c (4c) Luce, J: W.

A play with scene laid in County Down in the north of Ireland. The drone is Daniel Murray, a scheming, clever old man who for twenty years or more has been living off his brother's bounty on the strength of his reputation as a man of great intellect and inventive genius. In the action of this play he comes near to dethronement, but outwitting his detractors, he regains his old place in the family esteem and continues as their ideal.

"The drone' holds the attention as many a better-constructed plays fails to do, and keeps the reader following with eager sympathy the strategy of the worthless old man who gives the play its title."

+ Ath 1912,1:172 F 10 220w

"There is less action than some of us would exact of acting plays, but the characterization is equal to that of the minor plays that have come out of the Green Island."

+ — Ind 74:704 Mr 27 '13 130w

"With greater dramatic skill, Mr. Mayne could have told his story in much less space and drawn his portrait with less exaggeration. But the integrity of his characters is maintained."

+ N Y Times 18:163 Mr 23 '13 100w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

MEAD, MRS. LUCIA TRUE (AMES). Swords and ploughshares; with a foreword by Baroness von Suttner. il *$1.50 Putnam 12-27805

"The book traverses most of the phases of the peace movement of our time and is valuable throughout, but perhaps especially so in its refutation of the argument of the militarists, and especially of Admiral Mahan in advocacy of a 'big army' and a 'big navy.' The reader of the book will find himself in possession of the main threads of the peace movement of the past and the present, as well as of the most promising lines of development in the immediate future. A score of well chosen illustrations, and a good index help to make this very helpful volume of still greater service and significance." (Ann Am Acad)

"Of wider usefulness than Moritzen's 'Peace movement of America.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:381 My '13

"A New England conscience, Yankee shrewdness, womanly intuition, cogent reasoning powers, a decided gift for forceful and concise statement, the courage of one's convictions and a long and intimate knowledge of the development of the peace movement, form a fine combination of qualities for the author of a treatise on the great subject of international peace. This combination is possessed in a noteworthy degree by the author of this book." W: I. Hull.

+ Ann Am Acad 47:302 My '13 220w

"Mrs. Mead has made a contribution to the peace movement of the world. Besides exposing many hoary fallacies, she provides a very competent account of the peace movement generally, though, as might be expected, America and Americans receive most notice."

+ Ath 1913,1:433 Ap 19 200w

"Is attractively written and well illustrated and may well serve as an introduction to the further and more technical study of the subject of international relationships."

+ Educ R 45:535 My '13 50w

"The book is to be cordially recommended, especially as a magazine for essayists and debaters in our schools and colleges." Hamilton Holt.

+ Ind 74:1039 My 8 '13 100w

N Y Times 18:150 Mr 16 '13 130w

+ R of Rs 47:380 Mr '13 50w

MEADE, GEORGE GORDON, general. Life and letters of George Gordon Meade; ed. by G: Gordon Meade. 2v il *$7.50 (2c) Scribner 13-12583

These volumes "contain two sets of heretofore unpublished letters written by General Meade to his wife during his absence from home while actively engaged in the Mexican and civil wars, and a narrative of General Meade's life during the periods not covered by his own writings, together with an account of the battle of Gettysburg. The letters take the form of a diary, and relate his personal experiences, his views on men and affairs, and describe the operations of the army under Generals Taylor and Scott in the Mexican war and the army of the Potomac in the civil war." (Editor's preface) The work is compiled and written by General Meade's son, and edited by his grandson.

+ A L A Bkl 10:60 O '13

"We are rather of the opinion that this life of General Meade . . . is going to take high rank among the books of the year, not only from the fact that it contains the military memoirs of one of the foremost commanders of the civil war, but because as an autobiography it is illuminating and full of vital interest." A. M. Chase.

+ Bookm 37:567 Jl '13 550w

"The intimate touch of these letters makes them a remarkable document of the war. The clearness of his delineation of situations, his fairness and his high-minded patriotism shine through these pages. Except in the case of a great battle, when the stress of affairs was too much, there is no irregularity in the letters.

The two editors have shown admirable judgment in leaving so large a part of the narrative to the letters alone, for no one not present could tell the story as he tells it with such freedom and such understanding." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '13 1600w

"The biographical matter is calm and clear in style, with no trace of partisanship or special pleading. In its simplicity and reserve, indeed, it foregoes opportunities for popular appeal. General Meade's letters to his wife are attractive and interesting, and reveal a character fiery and firm, considerate and gentle. These letters are rich material for a future historian. There are hundreds of incidents, and innumerable flashes of light upon important events, which can be found nowhere else." C: L. Moore.

+ Dial 55:13 Jl 1 '13 1650w

+ Ind 75:745 S 25 '13 470w

Reviewed by G: H. Putnam.

+ Lit D 47:385 S 6 '13 1600w

+ Nation 97:483 N 20 '13 1050w

"The two volumes make an important and highly interesting addition to the war literature that these semi-centenary times are bringing forth. It will undoubtedly clear General Meade's name of much that has undeservedly clouded it during these many years and will help to secure for him, in the awards of history, the credit which is justly his."

+ N Y Times 18:340 Je 8 '13 950w

"Colonel Meade's descriptions may remove some misconceptions concerning his father; on the other hand, the frankness of comment may introduce a renewal of some old controversies. When all is said, however, General Meade will probably, we think, emerge a larger man and a finer character in the minds both of military men and laymen."

+ Outlook 104:529 Jl 5 '13 2000w

+ R of Rs 48:48 Jl '13 2100w

"Important primarily because it contains much new material, while it has the timely interest of appearing upon the 50th anniversary of the great battle."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 50w

"Will not in one sense add greatly to the war literature, for its literary qualities, though creditable, are not distinguished. But in another sense it is a highly important addition to the 'personal history' of the war. For it contains many hitherto unpublished letters from Gen. Meade written during the civil war, and the Mexican war as well. Upon the whole, the popular verdict has given Meade less than his just due. The present work and the coming anniversary should help notably to restore the balance. The letters might well have been reduced in number, and in some cases abridged, while the narrative by the son, in response to the temper of the time at which it was written, is too highly charged with the spirit of wounded pride to present Gen. Meade's case most effectively."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 3 '13 1350w

MEIER, WILLIAM HERMAN DIETRICH. School and home gardens. il *80c Ginn 13-8177

"This book gives definite instruction for arranging, planting and caring for plants commonly grown in the house, yard, and garden. It tells how to do things in such a way that good results will be obtained. . . . The difficulties confronting the student in cultivating each individual plant are considered, one at a time, and definite directions for meeting them are given. . . . While designed especially to be used as a text-book for grammar grades, [it] will serve also as a hand-book for the home gardener."—Preface

+ A L A Bkl 10:103 N '13

"It does not give much of the scientific knowledge desired by the teacher and older pupils, but that is well supplied by other books. There is also very little material which could be used for kindergarten and primary grades. But for practical directions for growing the most common plants, and how best to teach the subject to school children it cannot be excelled."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '13 170w

"It is very compendious, thoroly practical, and is abundantly illustrated."

+ Ind 74:1307 Je 5 '13 70w

"The book, with its clear print, attractive illustrations, and straightforward style, is in some ways a model of its kind. We cannot, however, recommend it for one of its intended uses, as a textbook for the grammar grades."

+ — Nation 96:529 My 22 '13 170w

Reviewed by F. Cavers.

+ Nature 91:657 Ag 28 '13 100w

MELDRUM, ROY. Wooing of Margaret Trevenna. *$1.25 Duffield (Eng ed A13-2226)

The hero of the story is a nobleman who takes to the road as a highwayman; "but he is one of those famous good highwaymen who rob only the rich, and he uses more or less of his spoils and time in defence of innocent maidens and others who need aid. Thus it happens that he appears to assist the beautiful Margaret Trevenna, and begins the wooing that gives the story its name and enhances the interesting qualities of the tale." (Boston Transcript)

"The threads of this long and complicated patchwork of seventeenth-century romance are so mixed as to be exceedingly difficult to follow."

— Ath 1912:2:63 Jl 20 70w

"Similar plots and the procedure in general have been set forth before by writers of ultra-romantic fiction, but this tale is quite up to the average, and in spite of the familiar atmosphere there is a fascination about honest and romantic highwaymen like Dick which never fails to hold attention of novel readers who like romances of the days of chivalry."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 230w

"There are frequent appeals to the reader's sensibilities; but it is impossible to have any feeling for the creatures of the author's fancy."

— N Y Sun p4 F 8 '13 100w

"Its plot is interesting, but its development is chaotic, its character drawing exaggerated, the whole narrative immature. In lacking distinctness it lacks reality, and in lacking reality it falls of interest."

— N Y Times 18:101 F 23 '13 300w

MELLAND, FRANK HULME, and CHOLMELEY, EDWARD H. Through the heart of Africa. Il *$4 Houghton (Eng ed 12-29308)

Messrs. Melland and Cholmeley "started from northern Rhodesia and traveled by bicycle and on foot nearly straight northward through German East Africa, to Lake Victoria Nyanza, thence through Uganda and the Soudan and down the Nile to Khartoum and Cairo. They are intensely interested in everything that lies in their path—natives and native problems, European rule and rulers, missionaries, fauna, agricultural development, scenery, climate. . . . Their book is copiously illustrated from their own photographs."—N Y Times

"Altogether it is superior, in style and subject matter and also in illustrations, typography and binding, to the majority of African travel-books."

+ A L A Bkl 9:291 Mr '13

"Their residence and service in Rhodesia had given them such knowledge of the country and its problems that their observations and their comments make their book worth reading by those who are interested in the future of Africa."

+ N Y Times 17:550 O 6 '12 200w

"The present volume is well worth reading throughout; it is the 'latest word' regarding a large part of Africa."

+ Outlook 102:779 D 7 '12 70w

+ Sat R 115:181 F 8 '13 950w

MEREDITH, GEORGE. Letters of George Meredith, collected and edited by his son. 2v Il *$4 (2c) Scribner 12-23750

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

+ A L A Bkl 9:157 D '12

"No lover of good reading can afford to miss these volumes. There is fun and frolic in abundance, humor that can be broad and rollicking, or subtle, or sly, or dainty. There is sage comment on men and affairs."

+ Ind 74:57 Ja 2 '13 1250w

"It is a fine portrait of a gentleman that we get in this delightful volume, painted by a master's hand, in a masterful fashion worthy of the inspiring quality of the subject." J: K. Bangs.

+ Lit D 46:237 D 1 '13 2100w

Reviewed by F. J. Mather, jr.

+ Nation 95:530 D 5 '12 4100w

"The two volumes reveal not alone the workings of a mind that compassed genius; they breathe the essence of the English spirit that characterized the creative life of that great galaxy of Victorians of which Meredith was a glowing sun."

+ R of Rs 47:245 F '13 1250w

"The letters should by all means be read in connection with the poems, to which they more often furnish a commentary than is the case with the novels."

+ Springfield Republican p5 D 26 '12 3800w

"These two volumes of letters form not only the most interesting but the most illuminating introduction to his works." E: B. Reed.

+ Yale R ns2:763 Jl '13 1100w

MERRICK, LEONARD. Cynthia: a daughter of the Philistines. *$1.20 FitzGerald 13-8055

An early novel by Mr. Merrick which may be partly biographical for it sets forth the difficult way a young novelist must tread to reach success. "On the basis of a first success with a novel which has had excellent reviews and a small sale, young Kent marries the beautiful daughter of a family of middle-class Philistines. His art is precious to him, and his discovery that it means nothing to his wife saps his feeling for her almost at the outset. . . . But she loves him, and love makes all things possible for her. His poverty, their actual want, brings her closer to him. Her heart awakes her mind; and she begins to understand his work. He begins to see the stuff she is made of, but is destined to pass through the halls of Circe before their union is finally made perfect." (Nation)

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 11 '13 700w

"In such a story as 'Cynthia,' with its fidelity to fact and to that larger truth for which, after all, we have found no better word than romance, he is at his best. It records the hard facts of the literary trade in London, but it also tells a delightful story."

+ Nation 95:408 O 31 '12 630w

"It is fine work that Mr. Merrick turned out in these books."

+ N Y Sun p4 Ja 11 '13 100w

"The pages of these two moderately short novels are fairly crowded with personages one remembers with a certain sort of delight, for their verity if not for their virtues."

+ N Y Times 18:94 F 23 '13 430w

+ — R of Rs 47:630 My '13 30w

MERRICK, LEONARD. Man who was good. *$1.20 FitzGerald

"The helplessness of love, its persistence in the face of reason, is the theme of 'The man who was good.' . . . The opening scene, a dressing room in a provincial theatre, is presented without glamour, and the three persons therein, two actresses and an actor's wife, speak the tongue of real life. But almost at once the serpent of romance is seen to rear its head. The wife is not a wife: the actor is a villain, who virtually turns her out upon the street. She makes her way to London, and the tale of her vain efforts to find work is told with Gissing-like detail. From actual starvation she is rescued by 'the man who was good.' Coming to the knowledge of her story, he still wishes to marry her, but she cannot reward him with love."—Nation

MERRICK, LEONARD.—Continued.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 11 '13 230w

"The situation is real, but the solution of it is on the plane of melodrama."

+ — Nation 95:408 O 31 '12 630w

+ N Y Sun p4 Ja 11 '13 100w

"'Cynthia' and 'Man who was good' illustrate better than any other two books which might be selected from Merrick's list, the quality of his talent, his faculty of observation, his humor and his command of pathos."

+ N Y Times 18:94 F 23 '13 480w

+ — R of Rs 47:630 My '13 30w

MERRICK, LEONARD. One man's view. $*1.20
 (3c) Kennerley

This brief novel, one of Merrick's earlier works now first published in America, deals with the old situation of the husband, the wife and the Tertium Quid. Mammie Heriot who leaves her husband for the other man learns all too soon that "the romance doesn't wear any better because the marriage service has been omitted." Sir George Heriot meeting her five years after finds that he loves her still and knows that he must choose between peace of mind and his pride. He chooses peace and asks her to come back. His is the one man's view of the matter that differs from the view of conventional society.

"The story reaches its conclusion—a conclusion that is invigoratingly just and logical, a conclusion that makes Mr. Merrick's story a strong antidote to its many maudlin predecessors in which the woman is exultingly crucified as much for the sins of man as for her own." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 7 '12 1400w

+ Nation 96:129 F 6 '13 380w

"The story of the woman who marries without love, leaves her husband for another man, and then discovers that she has made the worst of mistakes is one which has been related in ways innumerable, but seldom with the sanity, the temperance, the clearness and breadth of vision shown by Leonard Merrick in his early novel entitled 'One man's view,' now first published in this country." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 17:635 N 3 '12 700w

METCALF, ARTHUR. Green devil. il $*1.20
 (1c) Pilgrim press 12-25321

A romance of fourteenth century England. "Historically, it draws a picture of Lincolnshire in the days of John Wycliffe and the Lollards, when the church was rich and worldly and men listened first, through Wycliffe and Piers Plowman, to strange pleas for 'brotherhood' and the cries of the woes of the poor." (N Y Times) The love story is that of Heloise, who, like her namesake of an earlier day, is beloved by a monk. With high ideals of honor and duty the two renounce the promise of happiness held out by the teaching of Wycliffe that priests may marry. He remains true to his order, and she learns in time that her heart in truth belongs to her other lover, young Guilbert de Rouen.

"Thrilling tale."

+ Boston Transcript p22 N 20 '12 370w

"Uninvolved, romantic and highly entertaining tale."

+ Ind 74:989 My 1 '13 220w

"'The green devil' is too long, and there is too much complexity in the solution of its not very difficult mystery. Busy grown folk will scarcely have time for its many pages and its old-time events. It is the child who will love it."

+ — N Y Times 17: 778 D 15 '12 170w

MEYER, JOSEPHINE AMELIA. Green C. il
 $*1.25 (2c) Harper 12-24820

A splendid story for boys of high school age. Young Jack Downing on entering Cleveland high school is fired with an ambition to gain renown by winning the much coveted green C for his sweater before the year is over. A meeting with an older man of high ideals gives him a glimpse of what the valued letter should mean beyond mere personal glory. And when the test comes the boy stands ready to give up the privilege of wearing the C rather than to accept it feeling it undeserved. After that sacrifice the actual winning of the letter by the plucky lad is all the more gratifying.

"A high school story with all the trimmings and a particularly likable hero." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:579 Ja '13 30w

"It is wholesome and well written, and can be heartily recommended. The illustrations by the author are very satisfactory."

+ N Y Times 17:714 D 1 '12 100w

MEYNELL, ALICE CHRISTINA (THOMPSON). (MRS. WILFRED MEYNELL).
 Poems. il $*1.50 Scribner 13-15823

A volume of Mrs. Meynell's collected poems containing a number now printed for the first time. "The poems have all those distinguished qualities which have already placed the author of so few verses so high among the poets of to-day. . . . Though she has searched within, and knows well the nature of inner strife and turmoil, her verses have an indefinable repose. There may be heat and passion in them, but there is no fever." (Ath)

"Characterized by the delicacy and spirituality, and the quiet mood which give her work its own distinction."

+ A L A Bkl 10:21 S '13

"An intense regard for quality, rather than any difficulties with the Muse, makes this volume of collected poems, written over a period of twenty years, slender and its contents precious. Mrs. Meynell's verses had the qualities of a magic crystal: clear and polished to outward appearance, yet with the power of exhibiting to the close observer what is actually passing within his own mind. A graceful humour preserves her from the frigidity of one who has merely a message and some technique. Delicacy of diction and strength of thought unite in an intense appeal which has not one line of preaching. Poetry such as this should succeed, where thousands of sermons fail."

+ + Ath 1913,1:562 My 24 550w

+ Boston Transcript p9 S 13 '13 650w

"Mrs. Meynell's verse appeals strongly to all who are interested in spiritual poetry. Surely, only a great poet could write with such beauty and simplicity on so tremendous a theme."

+ Lit D 46:1397 Je 21 '13 500w

"It is difficult to read the poems without the conviction that here is a work of enduring splendor; poetry that our children's children will regard as a rich heritage. Few literary events of our generation have greater importance than the publication of this small volume of noble poetry."

+ Lit D 47:292 Ag 23 '13 750w

"But though Mrs. Meynell's verse may be lacking in volume and compass, it does possess

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

a rare distinction of its own. Tenuous it may be, but it is as fine in its way as it is tenuous."

+ Nation 97:148 Ag 14 '13 320w

+ N Y Sun p27 N 29 '13 50w

Reviewed by Helen Bullis.

+ N Y Times 18:397 J1 13 '13 600w

+ N Y Times 18:670 N 30 '13 230w

+ Sat R 116:50 J1 12 '13 970w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 28 '13 700w

MICHAËLIS, KARIN (KARIN MICHAËLIS STANGELAND). The governor; tr. from the Danish by Amy Skovgaard-Pedersen. *$1.20 Lane 13-6767

"The governor" is a tale of many threads, told chronicle-wise, but briefly. Runow, the son of a cruel lord and a gypsy, grows up fickle in his love and a coward. Through unfaithfulness he loses his bride on their wedding day, and later in his remorse assumes governorship of a dreary little island. To cheer his loneliness is Kaina, a strange, intoxicating beauty from some unknown shipwreck—at first a child-playmate, then a devoted mistress. But suddenly Runow's wife, whom he cannot forget, comes to the island, and Kaina, realizing she must not betray Runow, drowns her child at birth. Her sin is discovered, she is tried and condemned to ten deaths but she does not utter a word that can harm Runow. He had planned after reading her sentence, to declare his fault and be burned with her, but he turns coward, and Kaina dies alone. Then Runow learns that there are worse torments than being burned at the stake."—Boston Transcript

"Few, we imagine, will be interested in the sordid record of brutality exposed in 'The governor,' for it is unrelieved by any finer appeal."

— Ath 1913,1:494 My 3 24w

"Almost never do we English-speaking people read a novel like this translation from the Danish; not only does it relate a story of mediaeval Denmark, but it even seems to have been written in those days. Its cloak of weirdness and mystery is without a rift, and the tricks of its illusion are not visible. This book of naked human passions—of love and sacrifice, of sensuality and greed, of cruelty and selfishness and superstition—is as far removed from the ordinary novel of 'primitive emotions' as opera romance is from life romance."

+ Boston Transcript p22 My 7 '13 320w

"It reads like a Norse saga. There is no denying the power of the book; despite the fact that every page contains something to jar sensibility, the reader is held fascinated, as though under a snake-like spell." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 17 '13 250w

"Mrs. Stangeland, it must be said, handles her savage and bloody theme with skill, strength, and courage. But it is difficult to believe that anywhere upon the face of the earth, at any time in the history of the earth, there have been people so entirely degraded, sunken in brutishness, without one aspiring glance toward heaven."

— N Y Times 18:275 My 4 '13 300w

MICHELANGELO, BUONARROTI. Michelangelo: a record of his life as told in his own letters and papers; tr. and ed. by Robert W. Carden. il *$3 Houghton 13-35827

"The materials for a 'life' of Michelangelo are, by no means few. . . . Previous biographers have employed this material chiefly in repeating the oft-told story of his life as an artist. Mr. Carden has thought that the personal side of the character of the great Italian would, if examined display quite as interesting features as the artistic side."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 10:103 N '13

"Doubtless it is well that we should know that the correspondence of perhaps the mightiest genius of the renaissance dealt mainly in prudent worldly platitudes and querulous complaints about financial and other worries. Most of these letters might have been written by any honourable, irritable, good-hearted shopkeeper who fancied himself of noble descent."

+ Ath 1913,1:499 My 3 600w

"No more thoroughly charming and informing series of letters than these has lately been published." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '13 950w

"Taken as a whole it is a monotonous recital of petty tribulations."

+ Dial 55:117 Ag 16 '13 400w

+ Lit D 47:478 S 20 '13 470w

+ Nation 97:64 J1 17 '13 520w

"Despite its evident limitations, Mr. Carden's volume may throw some new and necessary light on the portrait of the man Michael Angelo."

+ Outlook 104:863 Ag 23 '13 270w

MIDDLETON, GEORGE. Tradition and other "one-act plays of modern American life." *$1.35 Holt 13-3877

"These six plays, though totally different in subject-matter, reveal an underlying unity. Each of them deals essentially with woman—and with modern woman in relation to our modern social system." (Bookm) The titles are: Tradition; On bail; Their wife; Waiting; The cheat of pity; Mothers.

"These diminutive dramas are sound in conception and truthful in detail; and, though it might be contended that the author has confined his attention to women who are—to quote the current adjective—'queer,' it must be admitted that he has sounded to the depths the souls of those eccentric and extraordinary women whom he has chosen to depict." Clayton Hamilton.

+ Bookm 37:189 Ap '13 330w

"In all of these plays the conversation is tense and suggestive. They are eminently actable and are well adapted for reading. The questions they raise stimulate discussion. They have the merit of being interesting."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '13 470w

"We think that Mr. Middleton has not fully grasped the fact that the strength of the one-act play lies in its concentration of dynamic force—the power to strike a powerful dramatic blow in short space of time."

+ Ind 75:275 J1 31 '13 100w

"Of these plays none, perhaps, is so good as 'Embers,' 'The gargoyles,' or 'Madonna,' in the first series, but the best of them show freshness of invention, a considerable faculty of psychological analysis, and a sense of theatrical situation. As a rule they make decidedly interesting reading. But in such pieces as 'Their wife' and 'The cheat of pity'—both cleverly written—human interest is defeated by the laborious artificiality of the theme."

+ Nation 96:290 Mr 20 '13 370w

"Mr. Middleton's plays furnish interesting reading. The dialogue is brisk and economical, the characters while unusual are real and each brief play moves rapidly and directly to its sometimes unexpected climax." Joyce Kilmer.

+ N Y Times 18:269 My 4 '13 380w

"These plays are concentrated drama, easy to read and visualize, thoughtful as to themes and powerful in suggestiveness."

+ R of Rs 47:632 My '13 170w

MIDDLETON, RICHARD. Ghost-ship and other stories. *$1.50 Kennerley (Eng ed A13-433)

These stories "have caught the secret which makes London London, and no mere assemblage of houses. . . . Half the sketches have to do with children: strange little dreamers, cruelly bruised already against the hardness of reality; or else normal little souls mystified by death or by tragedies in the life of the 'grown-ups' belonging to them. The other half

MIDDLETON, RICHARD—Continued.
have to do with death or failure, or with divers futilities of egotism, the most cheerful being the one exception, the fantastic 'Ghost ship,' which gives its title to the volume." (Ath)

+ Ath 1912,1:622 Je 1 270w

+ — Nation 96:621 Je 19 '13 400w

"The value of his stories lies in their charm and their well-wrought form, not in their intellectual content."

+ N Y Times 18:77 F 16 '13 1200w

"First in the group stands 'The ghost-ship,' so good that Middleton's name deserves to live by this tale alone. It is a wild freak of fancy, but so soberly told that we are ready to swear that somewhere down the Portsmouth road there stands to-day a village full of friendly and profitable ghosts."

+ Spec 109:233 Ag 17 '12 1400w

MIDDLETON, RICHARD. Poems and songs.

2 series ea $1.50 Kennerley
(Eng ed A13-434)

The collected work of a young poet who died last year at the age of twenty-nine. "Usually he is content to weave round any subject a pleasant fabric of familiar symbols—roses, dreams, stars, and so on—caring little for their appropriateness." (Ath) "We do not know if he was a sorrowful man, but this book, at least, suggests rather a man who found it easiest to impress himself and others in speaking of sorrows." (Sat R)

"Collected here, the poems reveal Middleton's good qualities more insistently than ever, but at the same time bring his limitations forcibly into the light. Opened anywhere, the book displays an unusual fluency and ease; but the poet's very ease has militated against poetic success. Little of this writing comes straight from the heart; rarely does the poet stop to find the just word or the illuminating phrase."

+ — Ath 1912,1:677 Je 15 570w (Review of 1st series)

"Except in a very few instances, they read like skilful—extraordinarily skilful and fluent—exercises. The creative imagination is rarely visible, and the iteration of familiar symbols—roses, dreams, stars—becomes monotonous.
Diffuseness, deftness, obviousness, and the wrong sort of vagueness: these, we should say, are the most prominent characteristics of the book."

+ — Ath 1912,2:687 D 7 80w (Review of 2d series)

+ Lit D 46:361 F 15 '13 250w

+ Nation 96:621 Je 19 '13 200w (Review of 1st and 2d series)

"The truth is, that Middleton was not a poet in his own right; he could do no better than decorate his own material with the beauty created by greater men. Scarcely a poem in the volume is not an obvious imitation, inferior to the original. His work is without vitality, and by no means 'of that substance which lives.'"

+ N Y Times 18:77 F 16 '13 400w

+ R of Rs 46:751 D '12 700w

"The reader of this volume who lights early upon 'Mad Harry's vision' or 'The poet's mistress' should be favourably inclined towards it.
Posthumous notoriety has so pranked and veiled this work as to have earned it already several certificates of immortality, but if we clear away this and as far as possible pity also we may seem to find an ordinary performance."

+ — Sat R 115:51 Ja 11 '13 1050w (Review of 2d series)

"No younger writer of our day has excelled
Middleton in the technical arts of verse and prose, and more remarkable still for their strange individuality of spirit. His poetry, curiously enough in such a master of melody, is less satisfying than his prose. It would be interesting to know the dates of the pieces, for some of them must have been written a long time ago. They all have Middleton's peculiar wistfulness, but they are full of false starts and blind alleys."

+ — Spec 109:233 Ag 17 '12 470w

MIGHELS, PHILIP VERRILL. Hearts of grace. II $1.25 (1c) FitzGerald 13-5067

"This stirring tale, which is a revision of the author's early story, published anonymously,
'When a witch is young,' has for the scene of most of its action Plymouth and Boston in the latter part of the seventeenth century. It opens with the return of the soldiery from King Phillip's war and the parading of the soldiers and the populace through the streets of Plymouth in joyful derision of the head of the Indian warrior carried in front of the motley mob. The lad who is to be the hero of the tale brings up the rear under close guard. He is a white boy who has been living with the Indians and is one of the captives.
An adventurous life awaits him, as well as an exciting hour or two for the reader of this tale of his roving."—N Y Times

"The author has preserved very well the historical atmosphere and based the story upon many historical facts."

+ N Y Times 18:313 My 25 '13 250w

"The story has many interesting features."
+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13
250w

MIKKELSEN, EJNAR. Lost in the Arctic; being the story of the "Alabama" expedition,
1909-1912. II $5 Doran 13-35268

A volume which "places on record the three years' history of the Alabama expedition which Captain Mikkelsen devoted to the recovery of the papers and diaries of the ill-fated Mylius Erichsen. Captain Mikkelsen and the one companion who accompanied him on his overland journey were often threatened with the fate that had overtaken the explorers in whose footsteps they followed, and the fact that he has survived to tell his story is not the least remarkable of the incidents of polar expedition."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bk1 9:381 My '13

"Although the chapters on the sledging over the inland ice are rather 'long drawn out,' the remainder contains scarcely a superfluous sentence; and many readers, we think, will regret that the two chapters on his experiences while waiting for relief are not longer. Throughout the book there is no straining after effect; nevertheless, a great effect is produced by the simple directness of a sailor gifted with natural eloquence and keen powers of observation.
The map, which embodies the surveys of both expeditions, is admirably clear; but no worse arrangement could be devised than to make it spread out at right angles to the open book."

+ Ath 1913,1:103 Ja 25 1950w

"As may be imagined, the book is poignant reading and is perhaps hardly to be commended to those who are apt to turn their knowledge into dreams, but the robust-minded will enjoy it for its moving picture of human endurance and courage." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 1 '13 200w

+ Dial 55:24 Jl 1 '13 550w

"This book contains what we may almost call new material. It reveals to us new facts with regard to the coast of Greenland and over which the hardships of the journey are relieved by days of plenty and sunshine. Added to this there is a personal element in the descriptions and adventures which make the book readable and interesting even to the reader who cares little for meteorology, scientific navigation, or cartography."

+ Lit D 46:1026 My 3 '13 400w

+ Nation 97:33 Jl 10 '13 530w

"His book is most graphically written; it tells the story of perhaps the most adventurous

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

arctic journey from which the explorers returned to narrate their experiences."

+ Nature 91:112 Ap 3 '13 900w

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 15 '13 350w

+ N Y Times 18:294 My 18 '13 750w

+ R of Rs 47:635 My '13 70w

"He writes throughout with cheery good humour, but his account might have been considerably improved by condensation and by curtailing the chatty discursiveness of his style. Perhaps one has been induced by the admirable work of other Norsemen to expect too high a standard in the difficult narration of such journeys. But the work he did can never be dimmed by any manner of writing about it."

+ — Sat R 115:211 F 15 '13 950w

"The main interest, however, of the narrative is as a record of the endurance and courage of Captain Mikkelsen and Mr. Iversen, who returned unscathed in mind and body from two years in a sort of hyperborean hell. The book is vividly and picturesquely written, the map is adequate, and the illustrations, considering the adventures which the films underwent, must be pronounced remarkable."

+ Spec 110:758 My 3 '13 1600w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 26 '13 1550w

MILLER, CLAUDE HARRIS. Making a garden with hotbed and coldframe. (House and garden making books) il $50c (5½c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-512

The possibilities of garden making with the aid of a few boxes and pieces of glass are enticingly set forth in this practical little book. The accessories needed for this kind of gardening are simple and the amateur for whom the book is intended should, if he follow its clear directions, meet with an assured success.

MILLER, HENRY RUSSELL. Ambition of Mark Truitt. $1.35 (1½c) Bobbs 13-10988

"An unusual man is the hero of this story of Mark Truitt, for he is an actual example of the man who goes from his home in a little country village to find his fortune in the city—and he finds it; a man who begins at the bottom of the ladder, and climbs step by step to the top in less than twenty years."

There are terrible faults in the character of Mark Truitt, however. He is like an allegorical figure of the god of ambition in his absolute, changeless ruthlessness, so many times does he, without faltering, trample on his friends. . . . The book covers a large amount of ground, because Mark at the different periods of his career voices the ideals of the laborer, the capitalist, the progressive and the humanitarian; while we have the strongest contrast between the two women, Unity, who sacrifices everything in life to her social aims, and Kazia, who can gladly give everything for her love."—Boston Transcript

+ Boston Transcript p22 My 28 '13 420w

"It is a matter-of-fact story, for the most part, but one that is shot through with gleams of the imaginative vision." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:20 Jl 1 '13 330w

"For those to whom the record of crass materialism is interesting, who find pleasure in the annals of the nouveaux riches, 'The ambition of Mark Truitt' may epitomize, as the advertisement asserts, 'the hopes and the aspirations of modern America.' Such men as Truitt, Henley, and Quinby do walk this earth and are accounted giants. And because one can recognize in Mr. Miller's portrayal of his characters their living prototypes, because his analysis of their emotions and of their sordid weaknesses spells out subtly but inexorably their destinies, the book evidences singular artistry."

+ — N Y Times 18:363 Je 15 '13 300w

"This story of industrial struggle, personal sin, and final victory has a touch of relevancy to common lives as lived to-day in great cities that helps define our real relations to the life around us."

+ Outlook 104:261 My 31 '13 80w

MILLER, JAMES RUSSELL. Book of comfort. $1 (2½c) Crowell 12-23689

This is the last work of Dr. Miller, completed but a short time before his death. "Speak ye comfortably," the title chosen for the first essay, is the text on which the whole book is planned. Essays that follow are: The ministry of comfort; How Christ comforts his friends; Does God care? Comfort through personal helpfulness; Life's open doors; Some lessons on spiritual growth, and others.

"Those who are familiar with Dr. Miller's gentle and helpful touch will not miss it in this posthumous volume, the latest addition to the works of one of the greatest inspirational writers of the modern church."

+ Bib World 41:144 F '13 100w

"The strength of Christian conviction is the chief spirit of this work, which should be especially consoling to those in distress and trouble."

+ N Y Times 17:624 O 27 '12 100w

MILLER, JAMES RUSSELL. Glory of the commonplace; sel. and arr. by J: T. Faris. $1 (2c) Crowell 13-18728

The book is made up of parables and illustrations selected from the later writings of Dr. Miller. It is similar in plan to a volume, "Glimpses through life's windows" published a number of years ago.

MILLER, JAMES RUSSELL. Things that endure; ed. by J: T. Faris. $1 (2½c) Crowell 13-19009

The chapters of this book are made up from material left unpublished at the time of Dr. Miller's death. A partial list of contents follows: Things that endure; The cost of reaching the best; When kindness is unkind; Doing and not doubting; No true work is vain; Be thou a blessing; Making a living and making a life.

MILLER, WILLIAM. Ottoman empire, 1801-1913. il $2.50 Putnam 13-13172

"The Near Eastern question," says the author, "may be defined as the problem of filling up the vacuum created by the gradual disappearance of the Turkish empire from Europe." In his book, a volume of the "Cambridge historical series," he follows the disintegration of that empire, from the beginning of the nineteenth century to the time of the very recent Turkish defeats.

"An accurate, well written narrative."

+ A L A Bkl 10:145 D '13

"It seems a pity that Mr. Miller should have thought it necessary to bring his history up-to-date, introducing matter of a topical and controversial nature. Otherwise, the work is excellent."

+ — Ath 1913,2:129 Ag 9 1550w

"The book is a concise history of the breakup of the rule of the Turk in Europe; and it is just the volume for busy people who wish to understand the struggle that is now going on between the Turk and the Balkan states."

+ Boston Transcript p20 S 10 '13 400w

"Some histories are so written that they read as novels. This is one of them."

+ N Y Times 18:499 S 28 '13 730w

"Mr. Miller has performed a most useful service in affording a guide by the aid of which the historical student can find his way through the labyrinthine maze of Balkan politics." Cromer.

+ Spec 110:1016 Je 14 '13 2300w

MILLIGAN, REV. GEORGE. New Testament documents. (Croall lectures, 1911-12) $3.50 Macmillan 13-12888

"These lectures deal with the outward form of the original manuscripts of the New Testament and the manner in which they are written; also with the language, literary character,

MILLIGAN, REV. GEORGE—Continued.
circulation and collection of these writings."
(Ath) The author is professor of Biblical criticism in the University of Glasgow.

"This [Lectures 3 and 4] is the least satisfactory part of the book, not only because it fails to discuss adequately the problem of the New Testament's relations to Hellenistic literary models of the day . . . but also because of the halting position the author takes on questions of historical and literary criticism."

+ — Am J Theol 17:650 O '13 170w

"The highest praise is due to the lecturer for the lucidity of his style and the charm which he imparts to the facts which he presents. Only a scholar could furnish these facts; and they are of interest to the learned student of the New Testament, as well as the man who must be content with the English translation."

+ Ath 1913.1:352 Mr 29 580w

"This volume of lectures is a valuable gift to non-specialists in its subject."

+ Outlook 104:720 J1 26 '13 170w

"A very useful piece of compilation, kept well up-to-date."

+ Sat R 115:493 Ap 19 '13 200w

+ Spec 111:sup496 O 4 '13 190w

MILLIGAN, ROBERT H. Fetish folk of West Africa. 11 *$1.50 Revell 13-925

The work is supplementary to the author's study of "The jungle folk of Africa." "Whereas in the earlier book the African is described in relation to his surroundings, his external world, in the present volume the author attempts to reveal the interior world of the African, his mental habits." (R of Rs) "Mr. Milligan's story is an exceedingly readable medley of anthropology, folk-lore, adventure and sociology—using the latter term to include the efforts to raise the standards of character and custom on a basis of careful study of the facts as they are. There is tragedy and comedy in his story; much that is disheartening, but not a little also that will give courage to those who believe in the efficacy of missionary work in the darkest spots of the dark continent." (Springfield Republican)

"In its descriptive aspect the book is one of the best on Africa. It is interesting and gives a luminous insight into the native mind." Jerome Dowd.

+ Am J Soc 18:848 My '13 450w

"His work will prove helpful in making clearer some features of the race problem in this country."

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 23 '12 380w

+ — Nation 97:268 S 18 '13 380w

"Mr. Milligan has had the advantage of close association with the negro in Africa and has been a student of fetishism to good purpose."

+ R of Rs 46:754 D '12 120w

"The native of the African jungle at his best and worst is presented in a sympathetic and illuminating study."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 20 '13 500w

MILLS, ENOS ABIJAH. In beaver world. 11 *$1.75 (6c) Houghton 13-5458

The result of many years of study and observation is presented by the author in chapters headed as follows: Working like a beaver; Our friend the beaver; The beaver past and present; As others see him; The beaver dam; Harvest time with beavers; Transportation facilities; The primitive house; The beaver's engineering; The ruined colony; Beaver pioneers; The colony in winter; The original conservationist. In the final chapter, in which he considers the economic value of the beaver, the author makes a strong plea for its preservation.

+ A L A Bkl 9:436 Je '13 *

"Will rank among the foremost works on the subject."

+ Dial 54:385 My 1 '13 350w

"Ill arranged and somewhat prosy. Everybody who cares for animals should read it."

+ — Ind 74:1304 Je 5 '13 170w

+ — Nation 97:18 J1 3 '13 700w

"Mr. Mills makes his natural history as entertaining and at times as exciting as fiction."

+ N Y Sun p8 Ap 5 '13 110w

+ N Y Times 38:303 My 18 '13 650w

"Careful and extended observation, a love for his subject, and the gift of writing clear and simple English—these things Mr. Mills brings to his treatment of 'Beaver world.'"

+ Outlook 103:733 Mr 29 '13 70w

"The author's long and close acquaintance with the beaver and his descriptive ability have enabled him to write in a most informing and entertaining way of the character and customs of this interesting animal."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 420w

MILLS, LAWRENCE HEYWORTH. Our own religion in ancient Persia. *$3 (5c) Open ct. (Leipzig ed 13-17613)

A series of lectures bearing on the relationship of Zoroastrianism to the Hebrew religion delivered at Oxford. "Dr. Mills is an American by birth who has long lived in England, devoting his study to the early Avestan religion and its later development. He does not believe that the later Jewish doctrines of immortality, of the resurrection of Monotheism, with its subordinate angels and devils, were borrowed from Persia after the captivity, but he does believe that Persia under Cyrus, greatly strengthened and clarified these doctrines." (Ind)

"This book is not a unit, but a verbose and disorderly discussion of various topics."

+ — Am J Theol 17:652 O '13 200w

"The book is suggestive and interesting, but too disjointed and fragmentary to be as intelligible as is desirable in a work intended for the general public."

+ — Bib World 42:123 Ag '13 150w

"We commend these lectures to those interested in the origins of Judaism, but we would warn the reader that Dr. Mills' style does not help the reader."

+ — Ind 75:216 J1 24 '13 130w

N Y Times 18:378 Je 29 '13 50w

MILNE, JAMES. John Jonathan and company. 1 *$1.50 Macmillan (Engd 13-2320)

The author's subtitle describes the book as "being the full, true, and particular record, with observations, reflections, and confessions, of a bachelor honeymoon over the Atlantic, through America and Canada, and home again to England, all duly set down in a proper manner." "He touches on everything, our hurry and bustle, our home life in city and country, our politics, the presidential campaign lately closed, our men and our women, their dress and character, with forceful and forcible comment and illustrative anecdote. Both President Taft and ex-President Roosevelt are mentioned and flatteringly characterized." (N Y Sun)

"Very cheaply bound."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:381 My '13

"He is a master of digressive allusion. There is not much about America in this book, but we gather that Mr. Milne thinks it a very nice, informal, kindly, generous place."

+ Ath 1912.2:582 N 16 120w

"Its manner is vivacious, its substance is pervaded with a vigorous humor, and its writer is observant, open-minded, and appreciative. He never for a moment falls into that acrid censorious mood that is the frequent habit of the Englishman visiting and writing about America. Is one of the most agreeable books among the many his fellow-countrymen have written about us." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p23 D 4 '12 550w

Figures in parentheses following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"The familiar letters written home by the traveller are excellent reading. There is more of graceful play of fancy, more of character-study and of quiet and meditative observation, than in Mr. Bennett's far-trumpeted volume."

+ Dial 54:103 F 1 '13 380w

"There is nothing startlingly new about the author's superficial views on America and the Americans, or on Canada, but they are set down crisply."

+ Ind 74:769 Ap 3 '13 120w

"If the literary fame of James Milne were to rest alone on his latest work, 'John Jonathan and company,' he would still have achieved a greater degree of it than most writers whose books are published."

+ N Y Sun p10 Ja 4 '13 430w

MILNER, LORD. Nation and the empire. *$3 10 Houghton

"In this volume are included speeches and addresses covering a period of sixteen years—that is, from the date of Lord Milner's appointment as High Commissioner for South Africa. Some of the papers would naturally have a stronger interest for English readers than for Americans, but many of them have an international breadth of treatment—in particular such chapters as that on National service and security and that on Empire citizenship, to say nothing of the very thorough and illuminating introduction which takes up both at large and in particular the relation of British Imperial policy to British national policy."—Outlook

Ath 1913,1:569 My 24 30w

"The volume has been well edited by Mr Charles Boyd."

+ Ath 1913,1:642 Je 14 530w

+ Boston Transcript, p24 S 24 '13 250w

"The volume of speeches in which he has not hesitated to put on record his own mistakes, furnishes the best possible means of forming an estimate of Lord Milner's character and greatness."

+ Ind 76:265 N 6 '13 380w

"The chief interest of the book is likely to be in its unconscious tracing of the gradual growth of a serviceable conception of an Imperial union."

+ Nation 97:268 S 13 '13 200w

+ N Y Times 13:498 S 28 '13 750w

Outlook 105:151 S 20 '13 210w

+ R of Rs 48:506 O 13 50w

Sat R 115:607 My 17 '13 1050w

"This collection of speeches which Mr. Charles Boyd has carefully edited, is very different from the 'mouldy wedding-cake' of most republished oratory."

+ Spec 110:382 My 24 '13 1800w

MINCHIN, E. A. Introduction to the study of the protozoa; with special reference to the parasitic forms. il *$6 Longmans

(Eng ed F13-33)

"This work on the protozoa by Prof. Minchin may be considered as an attempt to confine a knowledge of the philosophical and the practical side of the modern science of protozoology within the limits of one volume." (Nature) "Like the majority of general works on protozoa, this one consists of two main sections, one devoted to general problems, the other to special groups." (Science)

Ath 1912,2:250 S 7 30w

"We strongly recommend this volume to medical men and all who are interested in the subject."

+ Ath 1912,2:278 S 14 1050w

"It is a pity that certain blemishes in the form of loose statements, some inconsistencies of nomenclature . . . and slightly partisan views on some contentious subjects have been allowed to creep in and mar the book, but doubtless these will disappear in the second edition. But it must be recognized that the task before Prof. Minchin was an enormous one, and he is to be congratulated on the successful issue of the work."

+ Nature 91:5 Mr 6 '13 900w

"We think that he is a trifle too modest in calling this splendid presentation of a difficult field an 'Introduction,' for the great variety of subjects discussed, the judicial attitude assumed, and the wealth of references used, are more characteristic of a treatise than of a primer. It is most uncharitable, however, to cavil over minute defects, if indeed they are defects, when the vast and rapidly growing literature on the protozoa is so admirably welded together in a readable whole, and we shall have occasion many times repeated, to thank the author for his labor, his critical insight, and for the judicious care with which he has selected the material embodied in this volume." G. N. Calkins.

+ Science ns37:603 Ap 18 '13 1000w

MIRAGLIA, LUIGI. Comparative legal philosophy applied to legal institutions; tr. from the Italian by J: Lisle; with an introd. by Albert Kocourek. (Modern legal philosophy ser.) $4.75 Boston bk. 12-9575

"Professor Miraglia's treatise is most extensive in the fields covered. He includes epistemology, political theories, ethics, sociological and anthropological discussions of the origin of legal institutions and their place and value, and interspersed excursions into psychology and biology. . . . There is an introduction of eighty-two pages giving a sketch of the history of philosophy from Greek to modern, confined for the most part to the development of epistemological theory with an occasional interjection of the theory of the state or of law. . . . Following the introduction is book 1 which discusses the various ideas of law, such as the inductive and deductive, and also the relation between law and morals, social science, sociology and political science. Book 2 is devoted to a discussion of private law. The treatment is historical with an account of the work of sociologists like Vico, Spencer, Maine, Morgan and McLennan."—Ann Am Acad

"The excessive brevity of these historical characterizations of the various systems of philosophy makes it quite impossible to understand what the writer means, unless one is already acquainted with the body of thoughts referred to. Professor Miraglia's work will be found exceedingly useful for acquiring a clear notion of the various fundamental concepts of positive law. The proofreader was evidently no linguist. The number of typographical errors in the citations from foreign languages is so great that they constitute a very serious blemish. Of the errors of translation in this book, the least excusable are those—all too numerous—which were apparently caused by assuming too easily that an Italian word derived from the Latin has the same meaning as the English word of the same derivation." Ernest Bruncken.

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:145 F '13 1500w

"The author is a little apt to accept uncritically theories, like that of original community of women, which have been rejected by many modern writers. However, his analyses of the individual and his rights, of property and the methods of acquiring it, of legislation as to property, of legislation as to contracts, the freedom of contract, of patents, etc., are cogent and of value. All must frankly recognize that the author's task is an exceedingly difficult one, one that can be adequately handled neither by the philosopher nor by the lawyer. With such a task, the author has done his work admirably. If read critically the book is of great suggestive value." C. L. King.

+ Ann Am Acad 44:175 N '12 870w

MITCHELL, HINCKLEY GILBERT (THOMAS). Ethics of the Old Testament. (Handbooks of ethics and religion) *$2 (2c) Univ. of Chicago press 12-23690

In his analysis of the ethics of the Old Testament the author takes up the various parts of the Bible in the chronological order in which modern scholarship now arranges them. He discards the topical method of treatment in favor of a study of the subject as a whole in a succession of stages. His attitude toward the ethical significance of the Old Testament is that while it can no longer be regarded as infallible because of "the completeness and consistency of its morality," yet its "importance as a record of the moral development of the Hebrews and a means of stimulation to, and instruction in, right conduct must always be recognized." (Preface)

MITCHELL, HINCKLEY G.—Continued.

Reviewed by L: Wallis.

+ Am J Soc 19:101 J1 '13 230w

"Into his treatment of a large and important subject Dr. H. G. Mitchell has put a considerable amount of careful work and produced a book which should be of interest to many intelligent readers while serving as a textbook for those who are students in a more special sense." W. G. Jordan.

+ Am J Theol 17:267 Ap '13 1500w

"Of interest principally to students."

+ A L A Bkl 9:197 Ja '13

"This volume gives a good objective account of the conduct of the Old Testament worthies and of the ethical ideals held by the prophets and psalmists."

+ Bib World 40:431 D '12 50w

"Students of the Old Testament from any angle of approach—history, theology, homiletics, sociology, philosophy—will find this volume serviceable."

+ Bib World 41:286 Ap '13 470w

+ Ind 75:748 S 25 '13 80w

"The discussion is thorough and very interesting, illuminated by the widest understanding of the period."

+ N Y Times 17:603 O 20 '12 150w

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 2 '13 470w

MITCHELL, HINCKLEY GILBERT (THOMAS); SMITH, JOHN MERLIN POWIS; and BEWER, JULIUS AUGUST. Critical and exegetical commentary on Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi and Jonah. (International critical commentary) *$3 Scribner 12-22008

"This volume, completing the commentaries on the minor prophets, includes the work of Professor Mitchell, of Tufts college, on Haggai and Zechariah; of Professor Smith, of Chicago university, on Malachi; and of Professor Bewer, of Union seminary, New York, on Jonah. In putting Jonah after Malachi, the last of the historical prophets, the unhistorical character of the book is admitted. This, however, is by no means conceded to detract from its value and its right to stand among the canonical books. It is shown as teaching one of the noblest of prophetic lessons in the form of parable."—Outlook

"Students of the Old Testament are under deep and lasting obligation to these three American scholars, who have completed the exposition of the Minor Prophets in this notable series." Harlan Creelman.

+ Am J Theol 17:424 J1 '13 1650w

"All the commentaries contained in the volume represent conscientious and painstaking work of very considerable value; and we think that, besides providing the necessary instruction for present-day students, they will—each in its degree—serve as a useful basis of criticism to future investigators."

+ Ath 1912,2:372 O 5 550w

Bib World 40:360 N '12 50w

"The general plan of discussion employed in the earlier volumes is followed out; and the book maintains the high level of scholarship marked by its predecessors in the 'International' series."

+ Bib World 41:215 Mr '13 200w

Ind 74:155 Ja 16 '13 100w

"The ripest fruits of modern learning are made accessible in this volume, as in others of the series, both to the plain Bible reader and the scholarly student, the portion appropriate to each being distinguished by its typography."

+ Outlook 102:819 D 14 '12 150w

"The qualities of these commentaries are now so well known amongst students of the Bible that it is almost superfluous to say that the criticism and exegesis of this volume reflect the highest credit upon American scholarship."

+ Sat R 114:775 D 21 '12 230w

+ Spec 110:243 F 8 '13 50w

MITCHELL, PETER CHALMERS. Childhood of animals. 11 *$2.50 Stokes A13-994

The author treats his subject under these headings: Childhood and youth; Metamorphoses; Duration of youth; Color and pattern; Brood-care; Food; The taming of young animals; The purpose of youth and education. "Young animals are divided into three great classes: first, creatures like many single-celled animals which have no youth; secondly, animals whose young more or less resemble their parents, and thirdly, where the young are wholly unlike the adults, as caterpillars and butterflies. The second class, including the backboneed animals, forms the subject of the volume." (Nation)

+ A L A Bkl 10:103 N '13

"We can conceive of nothing which would be more thought-inspiring in the hands of a student of animal life than this book."

+ Ath 1912,2:586 N 16 320w

+ Boston Transcript p21 J1 2 '13 630w

"The book is interesting, valuable and ornamental." S. C. Schmucker.

+ Chaut 72:45 S 13 '13 430w

"Every naturalist will be grateful to Dr. Chalmers Mitchell for the rich fund of facts and observations here brought to a focus, and the interest of the volume is heightened by a series of excellent plates and text illustrations which assist the author's exposition."

+ Int Studio 49:256 My '13 210w

"The book is rather difficult reading owing to the vast number of facts included, many of them necessarily accompanied with but little or no discussion. The illustrations are unusual. Those in the text of pencil are faint but diagnostic, while those in color are both artistic and very accurate, and as striking as any which have been published for a long time."

+ Nation 97:192 Ag 28 '13 830w

+ N Y Times 18:435 Ag 17 '13 700w

"Dr. Chalmers Mitchell's book is written with a notable absence of technicalities, and can be read and understood by anyone who likes animals. His attitude is scientific and not sentimental; he brings to bear on his subject the great reading and retentive memory of a trained zoologist; and, above all, he has a wide and rare menagerie experience. His pages are enlivened with personal anecdotes."

+ Spec 110:277 F 15 '13 1150w

MITCHELL, SILAS WEIR. Westways: a village chronicle. *$1.40 (1c) Century 13-19503

Of the many characters who appear in this story, the author says in his preface: "the life-lines of these persons will cross and recross, to meet once or twice and not again, like the ruts in a much used road. . . . The corner novels where only a half dozen people are concerned give no impression of the multitudinous contacts which affect human lives. Even of the limited life of a village this is true. It was more true of the time of my story which lacking plot must rely for interest on the influential relation of social groups, then more defined in small communities than they are today." The time is that preceding the civil war and the tragedy of the story is that of a house divided against itself by the approach of that dread conflict.

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"A novel of distinction."

+ A L A Bkl 10:117 N '13 ✕

"There is nothing in his latest novel, save perhaps the philosophic calm of a ripe maturity, which betrays the venerable age of the author, for it contains a sustained freshness and virility as remarkable as it is persistent." Griffin Mace.

+ + Bookm 38:301 N '13 930w

"It is certainly one of the very best books Dr. Mitchell has ever written. Full of human, intimate touches, vivid in the sketchings of a remote time and place, of a social atmosphere, and strong personal convictions concerning volcanic national events, the book comes out of the heart and intellect of a writer whose experiences were associated with the history of the period, and whose power as an artist has made us see through these pages what time has healed. It is more real than 'Hugh Wynne.'" W: S. Braithwaite.

+ + Boston Transcript p20 S 10 '13 1800w

"We have here a cross-section of typical American life during that decade 1855-65, and probably no other writer than Dr. Mitchell could have exhibited it to us in such just proportion and in so humane and philosophical a spirit." W: M. Payne.

+ + Dial 55:359 N 1 '13 870w

"None of the characters are very convincing. This book will not rank with 'Hugh Wynne,' nor be read by that audience who were charmed with the esprit of 'A little more Burghundy.'" —

+ Ind 76:176 O 23 '13 120w

"The atmosphere of the time, which Dr. Mitchell remembers for himself, is conveyed as the fancy of the younger generation of fiction-writers, with all their cleverness, can hardly hope to convey it."

+ Nation 97:384 O 23 '13 350w

"Dr. Mitchell has given to American literature that rare triumph in the domain of fiction—a novel that is veracious and entertaining in its portrayals of life and character and furnishes besides an illuminating chapter in history. What he did [in 'Hugh Wynne'] for the days of Washington he has done with an even finer art, a surer touch, for that mighty epoch in which Lincoln stands forth as the great, human tragic embodiment of a nation's struggle for its ideal. He has written his story in the homely phrase and portraiture of the village chronicle, without the melodrama that too often mars a larger canvas, and it is through this familiar medium that the reader is enabled to approach so nearly the stirring events of fifty years ago."

+ + N Y Times 18:465 S 14 '13 1150w

"This story is perhaps not so popular in character as some of its predecessors, but it has substantial qualities and will interest many people."

+ Outlook 105:449 O 25 '13 130w

MOFFATT, REV. JAMES. Theology of the gospels. (Studies in theology) *75c (1½c) Scribner A13-523

The five chapters that make up the contents of this volume represent in substance a series of lectures delivered by Professor Moffatt at the University of Glasgow in January and February of 1912. They consider: The gospels and their theology; The eschatology of the gospels; The God of Jesus; The person of Jesus; The spirit of Jesus. The author "recognizing the cry 'Back to Christ' as a protest against formulas and speculations which have usurped the place of Jesus in the minds of His people, points out that moderns, in 'casting back' to Christ, or rather to the Jesus of history, have often taken with them a Christ of their own creation." (Ath)

"Admirable method and sympathetic appreciation unite in making this a valuable contribution to the understanding of the religious ideas which dominated primitive Christianity."

+ Am J Theol 17:478 J1 '13 170w

A L A Bkl 9:436 Je '13

"These studies are the work of a scholar and reverent thinker, and in them theology is set forth with literary grace."

+ Ath 1912:2:780 D 28 230w

Bib World 41:286 Ap '13 320w

"This volume is modest in appearance, but in its four studies will be found a rare combination of scholarship, thinking, and spiritual insight."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 5 '13 530w

Educ R 46:424 N '13 30w

MOFFETT, CLEVELAND (LANGSTON), and HERFORD, OLIVER. Bishop's purse. il *$1.30 (1½c) Appleton 13-5071

The story of a clever girl thief who gets possession of the purse containing the five thousand pounds collected by the Bishop of Bunchester for the Progressive mothers' league, loses it again, and follows in pursuit of it. The sight of the purse within easy reach is too much for Hester Storms' newly-made promises of reform, but when detection seems evident she avoids suspicion by dropping the purse into Betty Thompson's golf bag. She follows Betty into Surrey in pursuit of the bag. A love affair and various business matters enter into the plot too, but its chief concern is with the finding and return of the stolen five thousand pounds.

"A moderately interesting, but hardly remarkable story."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:400 My '13

"A highly amusing and swiftly moving tale including a very entertaining company of active and odd people."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 5 '13 180w

"The book is by turns detective story, melodrama, and love romance, and in each aspect is particularly entertaining." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:464 Je 1 '13 150w

"The authors need padding to fill out the volume and this takes the form of describing the doings at a country house of a swarm of poor relatives, who sponge on a rich and uneducated American. This gives the chance for much humor, some of it bright, and for a love affair. It dilutes the criminal portion woefully and spoils the story. There is nothing to distinguish one author from the other in the writing, nor for that matter from any one else who can write good English. The story is readable."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Mr 29 '13 220w

"Altogether it is a happy, wholesome, and highly entertaining book, with a pretty love story running through it. If the authors have found sermons in stones, they also have shared with the public their joy in a number of things."

+ N Y Times 18:276 My 4 '13 270w

"The narrative has many diverting features and is, on the whole, interesting."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 22 '13 300w

MOIR, DAVID MACBETH. Life of Mansie Wauch, tailor in Dalkeith; written by himself and ed. by D. M. Moir. il *$1.75 (2c) McClurg

With colored illustrations and binding uniform with that in which they issued John Galt's "Annals of the parish" last year, the publishers have brought out another early nineteenth century classic by a man who was one of John Galt's friends. The work appeared first as a serial in "Blackwood's" and ran into several English editions. "Mansie is a most laughably and lovably conceited person, as depicted by himself in this his alleged autobiography." (Dial)

MOIR, DAVID MACBETH—Continued.

"The tremendously important events of Man-sie's sartorial career, of his courtship and marriage and all the little domesticities of his life, makes the richest of reading as told by the chief actor in the drama. The book was well worth reviving in its present handsome form."

+ Dial 53:452 D 1 '12 270w

MOLL, ALBERT. Sexual life of the child; tr.² from the German by Eden Paul; with an introd. by E: L. Thorndike. *$1.75 Macmillan 12-15624

Dr. Moll "proceeds at once to explain in common language, with the introduction of but few technical terms, the sexual organs of both sexes, noting their differences, the manifestation of the symptoms peculiar to each sex, their pathology, etiology and sexual life of the child and youth. Taken as a whole, the book is full of information that parents ought to know—especially those that have the immediate custody of children in order that the fathers may give instruction on proper occasions to their sons and mothers to their daughters. . . . The sexual interests, as the author well concludes, should only be a fractional part of an education. Some American writers of note have apparently become hypnotized with this subject, and see it big everywhere; but not so with Dr. Moll, whose explanations are plain, direct, and to the point, and advice wholesome and devoid of mawkish sentimentality."—Educ R

"The [English] publishers say that the sale of the book is limited to members of the medical, scholastic, legal, and clerical professions. The volume is certainly not suited for any one else."

+ — Ath 1912,2:250 S 7 350w

"The publishers are entitled to great credit for bringing this excellent treatise to the attention of the American public. In plain, simple language, the distinguished author treats each subject in a straightforward manner. Taken as a whole, the treatment of the entire subject is such as to commend it to an enlightened public." J. M. Greenwood.

+ Educ R 44:527 D '12 1000w

"The style of the book is repetitious and confused."

+ — Ind 73:150 J1 18 '12 70w

"The book as a whole contains many useful and valuable sections, notably those on the legal and educative aspects of the subject, and it may serve to direct attention to an important and neglected field of study; it cannot, however, be regarded as having any great scientific value." Ernest Jones.

+ — J Philos 10:188 Mr 27 '13 900w

+ — Nation 96:64 Ja 16 '13 400w

"The book is scientific in the finest sense and written in a style easily followed by laymen. It is dignified, sincere, frank and sane. It supplements Havelock Ellis' 'Studies in the psychology of sex.'" O. G. Cocks.

+ Survey 29:907 Mr 29 '13 500w

MONKHOUSE, ALLAN. Dying fires. *$1.20¹⁰ Doran

A story with the failure of marriage for its theme. "Richard Peel marries Letitia Drayton for the same odd assortment of motives that, so the author wishes us to believe, enter into a substantial majority of present-day marriages." (Bookm) "To Richard and Letty is born a little son—Jim—who becomes the absorbing interest of his father and mother. The crisis of the story comes when, that mutual interest taken from them, they face a future toward which they realize that each must walk alone, although side by side." (Boston Transcript)

Ath 1912,2:592 N 16 20w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"Altogether, a book of rare strength, but wrapped in a thick mantle of gloom." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 38:63 S '13 400w

Boston Transcript p20 J1 2 '13 300w

"The analysis of character is searching and subtle."

+ N Y Times 18:488 S 21 '13 230w

MONKHOUSE, ALLAN. Mary Broome. *75c⁶ (4c) Luce, J: W. (Eng ed 12-9650)

A four-act play in which the central character is a house maid, who marries the son of her employer in order to save the good name of her child. When the child dies she feels that she need no longer live with her husband and leaves him to go to Canada with an old lover whose devotion has not wavered. Mary is a girl of strong and simple character, Leonard, whom she marries, is a "characterless dilettante who jests impertinently about religion and morality, but at times flashes out sentences pregnant with a certain social idealism." (Springfield Republican)

"We fear that this play, which was so well received when acted in Manchester, will lose, in book form, its effect, owing to the abnormality of the central figure. The author succeeds with his women to a greater extent than he does with his men."

+ — Ath 1912,2:48 J1 13 120w

"Oscar Wilde never wrote a better comedy than Allan Monkhouse in his 'Mary Broome.'" W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '13 170w

"The author has got hold of an excellent idea, but makes little of it."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 My 1 '13 150w

MONROE, PAUL, ed. Cyclopedia of education. 1l 5v subs ea *$5 Macmillan (11-1511)

Descriptive note of entire work in December, 1911.

v 3 Gai-Lib; v 4 Lib-Pol.

+ A L A Bkl 9:197 Ja '13 (Review of v 3)

"A valuable work for any library used by educators or teachers."

+ A L A Bkl 9:437 Je '13 (Review of v 4)

"The treatment of most of these [topics] is so good that one can but wish that it were better. We hear much of the past and present, it is true, but there is not much that points to the future." C: De Garmo.

+ — Ann Am Acad 46:222 Mr '13 550w. (Review of v 3)

"The present volume is more remarkable for the number and variety of its minor topics than for its leading articles." C: De Garmo.

+ — Ann Am Acad 48:280 J1 '13 400w (Review of v 4)

"The third volume maintains the standard of the work, indeed, as the 'Cyclopedia' progresses we realize more vividly its value as a work of reference for teachers, especially on account of its international character."

+ Ath 1912,2:657 N 30 140w (Review of v 3)

"As the work progresses we are more than ever impressed with its great value; nothing, apparently, that has any connexion immediate or remote with education is passed over—and on the whole, among so many thousand articles proportion as between the different subjects seems to be admirably maintained. From time to time we have had occasion to refer to the three volumes already published, and have always come away with the kind of facts we wanted, without experiencing any difficulty in finding the right articles."

+ — Ath 1913,1:492 My 3 250w (Review of v 4)

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 4 '13 100w (Review of v 4)

"Every article in these two new volumes is, in the opinion of the present reviewer, the work of a capable specialist." M. V. O'Shea.
+ Dial 55:18 Jl 1 '13 550w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"The main criticism to be made is that a disproportionate amount of space is devoted to subjects which possess only an antiquarian interest, or which are not particularly related to education. These citations will be sufficient to indicate the value of the cyclopedia, both to the general student of education who desires brief and compendious treatment, and also in many cases to the specialist who desires the latest information or an authoritative presentation of views." F. N. Freeman.

+ — El School T 13:303 F '13 700w (Review of v 3)

"While it would be difficult to make criticisms upon matters of minor importance—as in the case of any pioneer work—educators will acknowledge great indebtedness to the editors of this valuable work." F. N. F.

+ El School T 14:190 D '13 280w (Review of v 4)

+ Ind 75:337 Ag 7 '13 70w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"A serious defect, it seems to us, is the failure to indicate by means of some adequate phonetic alphabet the pronunciation of foreign and technical words. The cyclopedia ought to go into every school and public library in the land, and become accessible to every teacher and every school official, and to all others who have to do with the organization, administration, or teaching-work of our schools."

+ + — Lit D 46:902 Ap 19 '13 1600w (Review of v 4)

"The cyclopædia will be useful for the large number of titles in educational history and biography."

+ Nation 95:541 D 5 '12 170w (Review of v 3)

+ Nation 96:623 Je 19 '13 300w (Review of v 4)

+ N Y Sun p4 D 21 '12 60w (Review of v 3)

+ Outlook 103:47 Ja 4 '13 300w (Review of v 3)

+ Outlook 104:262 My 31 '13 60w (Review of v 4)

R of Rs 47:764 Je '13 120w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"When complete, it will constitute an authority to which every question as to pedagogical theory, history, practice, and people may be confidently referred for answer." H. T. B.

+ School Arts Magazine 12:635 My '13 70w (Review of v 4)

"While, in general, a high standard of excellence is maintained there are some articles which impress the reader as being inferior on account of a certain 'off-hand,' sketchy method of treatment." Irving King.

+ — School R 21:425 Je '13 430w (Review of v 3)

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 140w (Review of v 3 and 4)

MONTAGUE, CHARLES EDWARD. Morning's war. $1.35 (1½c) Holt

The story opens with the meeting of two impressionable young people in the Alps. Both are Irish. The girl is a devout Roman Catholic; the man comes of a family that, until the apostasy of his father, had been of like faith. The scene shifts to England, later to Ireland where young Browne, sent as a newspaper correspondent to write up a famine district, learns things of his birth and parentage which he thinks make impossible his marriage with June Hathersage. Later his sacrifice is found to have been needless.

"The writer's power of description is quite out of the ordinary: it is at its best when dealing with mountain scenery, and we find here an enthusiasm which is lacking in his accurate, though less living picture of Irish scenery and people."

+ Ath 1913,2:180 Ag 23 100w

"Mr. Montague has great qualities, but he has a full measure of their defects. In his coruscating culture, in his fastidious avoidance of the obvious, he reminds us of those modern composers who, by their perpetual dodging of platitudes, their determination never to say a plain thing in a plain way, make a fetish of the recondite, mistake the unusual for the original, and cover up the nakedness of their invention with all the millinery and upholstery of orchestration. At every turn he challenges, defies, and repels the plain person. And herein is the great mistake of the book. He limits his appeal by his method. The lessons of his novel are addressed to all honest men, all who value clean living and fair dealing, while his preoccupation with the technique of expression tends to restrict his audience to artists and amateurs of style. To this extent he defeats his own end. But though the esoteric arduous of Mr. Montague's style may prove a sore stumbling-block to the simple-minded novel-reader, we strongly advise him to make the effort."

+ — Spec 111:351 S 6 '13 900w

MONTESSORI, MARIA. Pedagogical anthropology; tr. from the Italian by F. Taber Cooper. Il $3.50 Stokes 13-16840

"This volume consists of a series of lectures delivered by Dr. Montessori in the University of Rome during the past four years. They show the foundations of the Montessori idea. Anthropology, says Dr. Montessori, 'hitherto has been based on the study of man, with a view to his origin. Pedagogical anthropology studies human-kind with a view to future development.'" (R of Rs) Her "book has many helpful hints for parents and teachers with respect to the early detection of remediable structural and physiological defects, and the adoption of curative and preventive measures that will contribute not only to the physical well-being of children but to their mental and moral growth." (Outlook)

"A most helpful book for the special student. The general reader will prefer 'The Montessori method.'"

+ A L A Bkl 10:21 S '13

Ath 1913,2:313 S 27 20w

"A great deal in the book before us is incontestably most sound and true. A good deal more, though we may feel doubtful as to its ultimate value, is, at any rate, stimulating and suggestive. But there are also statements, implications, lines of thought, closely interwoven with the main fabric of the work, which are decidedly open to criticism. Madame Montessori's biology strikes us as that of an amateur, as being probably more largely derived from books than from direct work. It has the amateur's characteristic—light-hearted disregard of outlying facts."

+ — — Ath 1913,2:422 O 18 2200w

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 6 '13 570w

"The big volume will be easier reading for the expert than for the average reader."

+ Ind 75:748 S 25 '13 70w

"Although this is by no means a definitive work, as Dr. Montessori herself points out, it is the invaluable guide not only for those who would make practical application of the Montessori method in any educational system, but for those who would understand it in its essential features."

+ N Y Times 18:425 Ag 10 '13 1900w

"To say that Mme. Montessori seems hardly qualified for the task of reinterpreting our views of life in the light of the new anthropology, or of at once bringing to bear upon practical interests the whole weight of the science's varied content, is not to disparage her remarkable work or to underrate her influence upon contemporary thought. But we may criticize her book as slightly incoherent, and we may feel that her conclusions scarcely justify the quantity of scientific data she traverses."

MONTESSORI, MARIA—Continued.

+ — No Am 198:733 N '13 670w

"There will be some disappointment both at the difficulty of the book from the standpoint of the general reader, and at its over-emphasis of the physical, especially the anatomical, features in the make-up of the individual. We recommend an especially careful reading of the chapter on general biology, with its suggestive presentation of the pedagogical significance of the latest findings in that important branch of science."

+ Outlook 104:962 Ag 23 '13 280w

"A book which shows the deepest scientific research and culture."

+ R of Rs 48:380 S '13 200w

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 750w

MONTGOMERY, LUCY MAUD (MRS. EWEN MACDONALD). Golden road. 11 *$1.25 Page 13-18473

"The story girl, who a few years ago told us pleasant little stories of adventures in Prince Edward Island, comes again to tell us more in 'The golden road.' Her efforts are aided by several boys and girls in the King family. . . . By way of giving all the family a chance to become a story girl or story boy they publish a magazine, and all contribute to the several departments of the paper, which is reproduced in full in the course of the book."—Boston Transcript

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 20 '13 180w

"The editing by the children of 'our magazine' provides a clever and convincing incident."

+ Lit D 47:692 O 18 '13 130w

"We will not say that the story is the equal of 'Anne of green gables,' but it has the same wholesome and natural fun, and again there are interspersed little stories and incidents which have quaintness and sometimes imagination."

+ Outlook 105:280 O 4 '13 70w

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT HIESTER. Auditing, theory and practice. 11 $5 Ronald 12-26303

"An up-to-date work by a man of twenty-four years' continuous experience as a professional accountant, and of considerable experience as a teacher of accounting." (N Y Times)
 "To his mind, auditing is the science not of discovering fraud for the purpose of prosecuting the perpetrator, but of disentangling from accounts the truth, for the purpose of assisting the business man to improve the management of his business and to increase its profits." (Pol Sci Q)

"The reviewer considers that 'Auditing: theory and practice' has not only made several valuable contributions to the written thought on this subject, but that it is the most valuable handbook on auditing published." T: W. Mitchell.

+ Am Econ R 3:382 Je '13 1150w

"An extensive and authoritative work, which accountants consider the standard, not only as a text but for reference."

+ A L A Bkl 9:382 My '13

"The book will supply a long existing want which has been felt in the field of text-books upon the subject of auditing. 'The particular feature of Mr. Montgomery's work which commends it to the student or accountant is found in his setting forth of the general operating processes in most of the businesses discussed. The fact that all the material contained therein is thoroughly up to date has also contributed to the value of the book as a reference work.' E. P. Moxey, jr.

+ Ann Am Acad 47:302 My '13 300w

"The primacy among treatises on auditing, which until the present has been held by Dicksee's work, now passes to Montgomery's 'Auditing theory and practice.'" H: R. Hatfield.

+ — J Pol Econ 21:781 O '13 320w

"He deals in a thoroughly practical way with all sorts of auditing."

+ N Y Times 18:107 Mr 2 '13 100w

"High praise must be given to the part of the work which deals with the methods of auditing different kinds of concerns. In his discussion of some of the special audits, however, his directions are somewhat vague. His suggestion as to the audit of educational institutions could be improved. The style of the book throughout is pleasing. On the whole it is, without question, the best book on auditing that has thus far appeared."

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:184 Mr '13 250w

MONYPENNY, WILLIAM FLAVELLE. Life of Benjamin Disraeli, earl of Beaconsfield. 4v v 2 *$3 Macmillan (10-25373)

v. 2. 1837-1846.

"The historical period covered in the present volume, from the year 1837 to 1846, is one of critical importance in Disraeli's career with regard to which there has been much misunderstanding. According to the biographer it is 'the period when his genius was at its greatest height and vigor.' Some of the subjects described in this volume are Disraeli's maiden speech, his marriage, the condition of England in 1839, Disraeli and Peel, the publication of 'Coningsby' and 'Sybil.' For illustrations the volume has six photogravures and two caricatures."—N Y Times

"Upon whomsoever the continuation of the work shall devolve it can scarcely be hoped that the volumes still to come will surpass in excellence of composition or in fairness of presentation this last and best of Mr. Monypenny's writings." A. G. P.

+ Am Hist R 18:585 Ap '13 1150w

A L A Bkl 9:247 F '13

"The book is of interest to the economist as well as to the historian." E. R. Johnson.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:281 Jl '13 350w

"Though Mr. Monypenny still mainly relies on matter already published, the second volume outdoes its predecessor in the number and interest of the new scraps added to our knowledge. The biographer, too, as we predicted, has gained in confidence as he goes along. The index to the volume is very trustworthy, and the careful reading of the proof-sheets deserves and obtains the biographer's acknowledgments to Mr. G. E. Buckle and Mr. Murray. But one or two trifling slips have escaped notice."

+ — Ath 1912, 2: 578 N 16 1800w

"In this second volume, if there is much that is lacking which gave the first volume the charm of a temperamental and personal interest and fascination, it is more than made up for by a sounder and more substantial critical account of Disraeli's political principles, and the steady and hazardous progress of his career in winning the confidence of the House of commons and the unprejudiced respect of the country." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 7 '12 2500w

"It is in his discussion of this conflict over the corn laws that Mr. Monypenny shows most clearly his own political bias; this part of the narrative is therefore likely to meet with some criticism. It is also a question whether the author is just in his treatment of Sir Robert Peel." L. M. Larson.

+ — Dial 54:235 Mr 16 '13 1650w

+ Ind 74:761 Ap 3 '13 1450w

"Covers perhaps the most interesting period of his career." E. S. Nadal.

+ Lit D 46:139 Ja 18 '13 1900w

"These political novels are analyzed and cited by Mr. Monypenny at disproportionate and needless length." This is one of the 'longueurs' in the volume."

+ — Nation 95: 562 D 12 '12 2250w

N Y Times 17: 676 N 17 '12 110w

Reviewed by Cecil Chesterton.

+ N Y Times 17: 793 D 29 '12 2500w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"His two volumes constitute one of the most important additions to biographical literature that has appeared in recent years."

+ Outlook 104:73 My 10 '13 300w

"Mr. Monypenny makes the impression of having come new to a subject, which is too big for him, or which he has not reduced to roundness and smoothness by long revolutions in his mind."

+ — Sat R 114: 613; 644 N 16; 23 '12 3000w

"We must not take leave of Mr. Monypenny without giving him warm praise for the manner in which the work has been done. There is no need of any apology for the length at which the years from 1837 to 1846 have been treated."

+ Spec 109: 810 N 16 '12 2700w

"The story of the period during which Disraeli rose to power is admirably told, and a most interesting story it is. The charm of Mr. Monypenny's style, the lucidity of his narrative, the thorough grasp which he manifestly secured of the forces in movement during the period which his history embraces, and the deep regret that all must feel that his promising career was prematurely cut short by the hand of death, should not blind us to the fact that, in spite of a manifest attempt to write judicially he must be regarded as an apologist for Disraeli." Earl of Cromer.

+ — Spec 109: 889; 952 N 30; D 7 '12 4100w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ja 16 '13 1450w

Reviewed by W. C. Abbott.
Yale R ns3:176 O '13 30w

MOODY, WILLIAM VAUGHN. Poems and plays; with an introd. by J. M. Manly. 2v ea $1.50 Houghton 12-26319

One of these two volumes "contains the two prose plays, 'The great divide' and 'The faith healer'; the other contains the trilogy—'The fire-bringer,' 'The masque of judgment,' and a fragment of 'The death of eve'—the 'Poems' hitherto published, a considerable number of later pieces which now for the first time see the light, and a beautifully written memoir of the poet, written by his friend, Professor John M. Manly. Each volume has a portrait frontispiece."—Dial

+ A L A Bkl 9:247 F '13

"In Moody's poetry is given the fullest expression of all the problems that touch deepest upon the triangular relations existing between God, man and nature. One can only hint here at the profundity of his thought, the scope of his vision, the social conscience, the civil ideals that imbue his work." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 1050w

"The two handsome volumes in which the complete creative work of William Vaughn Moody has just been published in definitive form deserves a heartier welcome than any other publication of the year." W. M. Payne.

+ Dial 53:484 D 16 '12 2550w

"We may be sure that future Americans will remember Moody gratefully as one not unworthy to walk in paths first trod by the feet of Milton and of Shelley." Hermann Hagedorn.

+ Ind 74:314 F 6 '13 1250w

"On the whole, it is a commendable edition of a very creditable body of literary work."

+ Nation 96:130 F 6 '13 1000w

N Y Sun p4 D 21 '12 220w

"Now that his complete works, or as much as he would have wished to leave to posterity, have been gathered together in two volumes, a wider reading and especially a study of his blank verse dramas will undoubtedly make clear the place he deserves in American literature." A. B. Kuttner.

+ N Y Times 17:795 D 29 '12 1450w

"Judged from a multiplicity of angles the most typically American in spirit and in expression of recently published poetry is the work of the late William Vaughn Moody."

+ R of Rs 47:372 Mr '13 750w

MOODY, WILLIAM VAUGHN. Some letters of William Vaughn Moody; ed., with an introd. by D. G. Mason. $1.50 Houghton 13-12674

"The majority of the letters are written to the editor; others are addressed to Robert Morss Lovett, Mrs. Toy, wife of Professor Toy; to Josephine Preston Peabody, Richard Watson Gilder, Percy Mackaye, and Henry Miller, the actor. Whether through the editor's method of selection or because of Moody's constancy to his muse, there is scarcely a letter but touches on the business nearest its author's heart." (Nation) "The letters extend over the last seventeen years of the poet's too-short life, beginning in 1892, when he was twenty-three years old, and ending in 1909, when he had just entered upon his forty-first year." (Dial)

"The finely appreciative introduction by Mr. Mason is an important part of the work."

+ A L A Bkl 10:145 D '13

"A small volume that has a genuine charm." Ward Clark.

+ Bookm 38:64 S '13 900w

"Except in this way of showing us the poet instead of the man, these letters are scarcely of that intense personal interest which we might expect. That they are good literature must be taken for granted. Full of metaphorical allusions, they cover and shut out those self-revelations we seek. You feel in reading them that Moody is not giving himself to his friends quite without an eye on the literary effect. They are too well balanced in content and not insufficiently unbalanced in mood, to reach the perfection of revealing epistolary correspondence." W. S. B.

— + Boston Transcript p24 O 22 '13 1950w

"On the whole, it is a satisfaction, a delight even, to have this volume of Moody's informal prose as an object lesson in the making of a poet and a commentary on some of his poems. Its high-hearted, vigorous, always finely imaginative style cannot but make young readers rejoice in their youth, and older ones feel their thinner blood pulsing a little more quickly in their veins." P. F. Bicknell.

+ + Dial 55:300 O 16 '13 1600w

"The letters are not only a useful commentary on the pruning and ripening of Moody's art; they are a kind of American document."

+ Ind 76:220 O 30 '13 230w

+ Nation 97:387 O 23 '13 770w

"These letters, in their intimate, free revelation, bring one very near to Moody, and Mr. Mason's introduction is a refreshing and illuminating criticism of the poet and his work." J. B. Rittenhouse.

+ N Y Times 18:605 N 9 '13 2000w

MOORE, BENJAMIN. Origin and nature of life. *50c (1c) Holt 13-7636

In this volume of the "Home university library" the author "explains clearly and with as little use as possible of technical terms the present views of scientific men as regards matter and life, subjects about which opinions are changing on account of recent discoveries." (N Y Sun) In his ten chapters he discusses: Physical and psychical evolution; Genesis of electrons and atoms; Chemical evolution in the suns; Chemical compounds on earth; Building materials for living matters; Evolution of colloids; The origin of life; How life came to earth; The living organism at work; Cyclic activities of life.

+ A L A Bkl 9:437 Je '13

"The title of this small book is somewhat misleading. In this, as in many other volumes of the series, limitations of space and popular treatment are a handicap to the writer."

+ — Ath 1913,1:223 F 22 220w

MOORE, BENJAMIN —Continued.

"It is a volume well worthy of study."

+ Ind 74:923 Ap 24 '13 170w

Nation 97:486 N 20 '13 90w

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 22 '13 40w

N Y Times 18:266 My 4 '13 450w

MOORE, BLAINE FREE. Supreme court and 10 unconstitutional legislation. (Columbia univ. studies in history, economics, and public law, v. 54, no. 2) *$1.50 Longmans
13-15026

"The author shows how an awakening consciousness of America's social, economic, and political defects, and a growing belief that these can be lessened by increased governmental action, have led to various measures of reform on the part of the legislative and administrative branches. The fact remains, he says, that the courts, in some instances, have checked these legislative and administrative activities through their power to declare statutes and ordinances unconstitutional. . . . The author in studying this question was struck by the fact that no systematic attempt had been made to ascertain what as a whole the judiciary has accomplished by its power to declare statutes unconstitutional. The present volume is intended to supply that omission."—Ath

Am Hist R 18:371 Jl '13 70w

Ath 1913,2:131 Ag 9 130w

"Lawyers, statesmen, and publicists will find this record instructive and valuable."

+ N Y Times 18:419 Ag 3 '13 120w

MOORE, CHARLES HERBERT. Mediæval
church architecture of England. Il *$3.50
(5½c) Macmillan 12-26854

The purpose of this work as stated in the preface "is to set forth the character of mediæval church architecture in England in the light of a structural analysis and comparison with the French Gothic art." The author "resumes his old contention of the immense superiority of the French architecture of the thirteenth century over that of England, insisting that the latter is little better than the cold copyist of the former, reasserting that the term Gothic architecture ought to be strictly confined to the works of the Ile de France, and denying any share of it to the Isle of England." (Ath)

"The book, in fact, with all its ability is spoilt by the writer's obviously strained efforts to see in almost everything praiseworthy a mere copy of the Ile de France."

+ Ath 1913,1:167 F 8 1300w

"Mr. Moore's special plea seriously limits the general usefulness of his book. The student, however, will find in it a wealth of accurate observations and painstaking drawings, which make it indispensable in any collection of books on the subject."

+ Dial 54:307 Ap 1 '13 500w

"In spite of deficiencies, the student of mediæval architecture will find this a stimulating, informing and suggestive book. It is sound in its scholarship and in its statement of facts, keen in its analysis, and simple and direct in its style."

+ Nation 97:108 Jl 31 '13 1900w

+ N Y Times 18:98 F 23 '13 80w

+ No Am 197:570 Ap '13 500w

"The present volume is well adapted to be both a text-book for advanced classes in our universities and a general reference book."

+ Outlook 103:822 Ap 12 '13 120w

"The volume is technical, but has much meat for those who are interested in the subject."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 10 '13 450w

MOORE, ERNEST CARROLL. How New York
10 city administers its schools. (School efficiency ser.) *$1.50 World bk. co. 13-3729

This volume contains a report submitted to the Board of estimate and apportionment of

New York city. It is concerned with such matters as the duties of school boards, methods of accounting, construction and care of buildings, the furnishing of supplies, etc.

A L A Bkl 10:21 S '13

N Y Times 18:291 My 11 '13 80w

MOORE, FRANK FRANKFORT. Discovering
10 "Evelina" (Published also under title, Fanny's first novel). *$1.25 Doran 13-20581

"This story is in a way a companion volume to Mr. Moore's well-known romance, 'The Jessamy bride.' It tells again in fiction-form the always interesting story of Fanny Burney, her secret authorship, her patronage by the great Dr. Johnson, and her far from cheerful experiences at court."—Outlook

"A companion volume but not as interesting as 'The Jessamy bride.'"

+ A L A Bkl 10:36 S '13

"This may or not be fact, but if it is not it is very good fiction."

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 13 '13 220w

"The story of the novel's amazing success and the still more amazing discovery of its authorship is told with some skill. But what possible need was there of going to all this trouble? If any tale has been told well and for all time, it is this very tale (without the artificial injection of a 'heart-interest'), in that imperishable classic, the earlier diary of Miss Burney."

+ Nation 97:263 S 18 '13 270w

+ N Y Times 18:584 O 26 '13 420w

Outlook 104:874 Ag 16 '13 50w

"An interesting and diverting narrative, though of no very striking quality, and its chief merit will doubtless lie in making Fanny Burney known to some readers who have not known her before. The actual facts in regard to Fanny are well adhered to in the main, and the life of the time is reflected with reasonable fidelity."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13 250w

MOORE, FREDERICK FERDINAND. Devil's
10 admiral. Il *$1.25 (1½c) Doubleday 13-3069

A mild mannered missionary who answers to the name of the Reverend Luther Meeker is the villain of this drama of a day and a night in the China seas. Meeker and Trenholm, a newspaper correspondent, are the only passengers aboard the Kut Sang, a cargo boat headed for Hong Kong, but secreted among the crew are Meeker's men; for Meeker is in reality Thirkle, leader of a band of pirates, and the Kut Sang carries gold as a cargo. In the fight that breaks out for possession of this gold Trenholm becomes leader against Thirkle and his men, and of all of them, pirates and crew, only three, Trenholm, the captain and a black Malay boy, remain alive when the fight is over.

"So much of the book is taken up with warnings and preparations that, when the night of horror eventually arrives, we feel as if we could have borne worse things without a tremor."

+ Ath 1913,1:570 My 24 60w

+ Bookm 37:462 Je '13 370w

"It is almost as good as 'Treasure island,' and will delight the hearts of all boys, young and old alike." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:305 Ap 1 '13 180w

"A very well-told story."

+ Ind 75:395 Ag 14 '13 150w

"For those who like their fiction highly seasoned Frederick Ferdinand Moore has concocted an artistically blood-thirsty tale. A vivid and consistent story. The pirate and his accomplice are picturesque and shameless rascals, and the story proceeds with plenty of dash and vigor."

+ N Y Sun p4 F 22 '13 130w

Figures in parentheses following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"It is a good story with which to pass a few idle hours."

+ N Y Times 18:168 Mr 23 '13 270w

MOORE, GEORGE FOOT. Literature of the Old Testament. *50c (1c) Holt 13-10608

In this volume of the "Home university library," Professor Moore of Harvard presents a study of the national literature of the Hebrews as it is collected in the Old Testament. "Five chapters are given to the discussion of the Pentateuch, its sources and the age of it as a whole and of its different parts. Then each book is treated concisely, but with remarkable insight and frankness." (Boston Transcript)

"Will be found profitable by anybody who cares enough for Bible-study to read a serious book upon the subject."

+ Am J Theol 17:467 Jl '13 130w

+ A L A Bkl 10:103 N '13 *

"It is the sort of book which the general reader can understand, for it is free from anything like technical discussion."

+ Bib World 42:180 S '13 $0w

"As for the present volume, we cannot imagine the subject treated more admirably. It is a marvel of condensation, clearness, and it gives just the information that is needed in homes of intelligence. The book is full of sound learning, but it is simple in expression, and it can be commended without reserve."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '13 330w

"Here we get the results succinctly and positively stated, with only hints at the processes and labor by which they have been attained."

+ Ind 74:1447 Je 26 '13 70w

"Professor Moore's scholarship is so thorough and his mastery of the facts so complete that he is able to single out the salient and important and to avoid confusing the reader with a mass of detail."

+ Nation 97:440 N 6 '13 250w

"Many who have hesitated at attempting to absorb the minutely applied erudition in such a work as Driver's 'Introduction to the literature of the Old Testament' will welcome Professor Moore's briefer volume with delight."

+ Outlook 104:345 Je 14 '13 70w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 24 '13 150w

MOORE, HARRIS W. Manual training toys for the boys' workshop. Il $1 Manual arts press E13-197

The book is designed for the guidance of boys who have had some instruction in manual training. An introduction giving advice on the selection and use of tools is followed by plates and directions for the making of such simple things as darts, buzzers, flying tops, pop guns, and of more complicated toys, including water motors, automobiles, and force pumps.

+ A L A Bkl 9:460 Je '13

"The book, unfortunately, presents but little evidence that the author ever heard of such elements in constructed objects as beauty of proportion, or refinement of line." H: T. Bailey.

+ School Arts Magazine 12:500 Mr '13 150w

MOORE, JOSEPH ROSWELL HAWLEY. Industrial history of the American people. Il *$1.25 Macmillan 13-4803

"Important topics, such as the fisheries, lumber, the fur trade, labor, agriculture, commerce, money and finance, colonial government and administration, problems of city life, manufactures and transportation, are treated in separate chapters, some of which embrace only the colonial and revolutionary periods, while others are comprehensive surveys brought down to the present time."—Nation

+ A L A Bkl 10:60 O '13 *

"The book is interesting, with much of incident and anecdote; but it is questionable whether its study would leave the student with any clearly defined views as to the comparative importance of events in American history or their casual relations. Moreover the gaps left by such a topical method are too large to be bridged by class discussion." E. L. Bogart.

+ Ann Am Acad 49:254 S '13 250w

"The author is to be congratulated on the manner in which he has succeeded in correlating American with English development during the colonial period."

+ Ath 1913:1431 Ap 19 50w

"The volume contains much valuable data on matters of early colonial industrial history."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 2 '13 450w

"This is a good textbook, well written and well illustrated."

+ Educ R 46:205 S '13 70w

"Very useful and interesting, and needful. It is a textbook for high schools, but the general reader will profit if he makes of it a supplemental history reading."

+ Ind 74:767 Ap 3 '13 50w

+ Ind 75:336 Ag 7 '13 70w

"Doubtless a topical method of this sort has advantages in elementary instruction, but one misses here a clear impression of our industrial growth as a whole, and of the influence of one problem upon another. Mr. Moore has not overcrowded his text with details or statistics, and has permitted himself a good deal of leisurely discussion and moralizing, some of it, perhaps, a bit obvious."

+ Nation 96:469 My 8 '13 150w

"The first impression that the book gives is of immaturity." C. R. Fish.

+ School R 21:574 O '13 670w

MOORE, MARGARET F., comp. Two select bibliographies of mediaeval historical study; with a preface by Hubert Hall. *5s Constable, London 13-636

"The first of these useful bibliographies, entitled 'A classified list of works relating to the study of English palaeography and diplomatic,' is of wider scope than the title implies. Besides general authorities, works on such matters as paper-making, and water-marks, and the auxiliary studies of diplomatic, it includes treatises relating to the 'national writings' and 'national chanceries,' not only of Great Britain and Ireland but of the continent. . . . Under more than a thousand numbers, the second bibliography lists sources and modern works, published in periodicals and collections, as well as singly."—Am Hist R

"Compared with Miss Davenport's 'Classified list' of 1894, on the same subject, the present bibliography [pt. 2] has more than twice the bulk; and though it differs by including modern works, a large part of the increase falls in the section of published sources. The student of the subject will be grateful for the more efficient means of investigation now put at his command. A cursory examination of the titles listed reveals no serious omissions. Miss Moore is not consistent in her bibliographical practice." Clive Day.

+ Am Econ R 3:100 Mr '13 430w

+ Am Hist R 13:618 Ap '13 270w

"Both are helpful, and are manifestly the result of a careful exploration of catalogues and indexes as well as in most cases an inspection of the books themselves. For the second part the transactions of local societies have been gone through in a way that will save students a great deal of trouble." B.

+ Eng Hist R 28:185 Ja '13 180w

MOORHOUSE, E. HALLAM. Nelson in England; a domestic chronicle. Il *$3.50 Dutton (Eng ed A13-1203)

"There have been a number of biographies of Nelson dealing with almost every aspect of his life except one. It is just that one, the domestic aspect, which the author sets herself the task of supplying. On the whole, she has succeeded in her undertaking, though she is necessarily hampered somewhat by the limitations of her subject. For her book is primarily intended to deal with the years Nelson spent in England." (Ath) She "does not show us the hero of the Nile, the Baltic, and of Trafalgar winning his splendid victories and establishing his imperishable fame, but invites us to look at him as he appears ashore, in the view of his family and friends, a maimed, frail, aching man, who never had a prolonged moment of physical comfort." (N Y Times)

MOORHOUSE, E. HALLAM—Continued.

"Told with sympathy and freshness."

+ Ath 1913,1:216 F 22 150w

"Miss Moorhouse may be congratulated on having made a distinct addition to Nelson literature." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 1 '13 450w

Ind 74:925 Ap 24 '13 60w

+ Nation 97:362 O 16 '13 700w

N Y Times 18:318 My 25 '13 800w

MOORHOUSE, E. HALLAM. Story of Lady Hamilton. 1l *$1 Small

For a series presenting the lives of famous women, Mr. Moorhouse has written the story of that famous beauty, Lady Emma Hamilton. "From the days when, an uncultured child of the people, she did menial domestic service, through years when her beauty was her fortune—or misfortune—her association with Romney the painter, her life with Sir Charles Greville, the years preceding her marriage to Lord Hamilton, and the wonderful devotion with which she inspired Admiral Nelson, the author follows her career." (Lit D)

"The author has already written one book on Lady Hamilton. We cannot see the necessity for this one."

— Ath 1912,1:160 F 10 30w

"There are numerous illustrations, all of unusual interest, and a general impression of a well-rounded whole, sympathetic and readable, such as a thoroughly good biography should have."

+ Dial 54:511 Je 16 '13 300w

"Mr. Moorhouse is perhaps too much under the fascination of Lady Hamilton's extraordinary career."

+ — Ind 74:371 F 13 '13 40w

"The life of Emma Lyons, Lady Hamilton, is here told sympathetically, but with a truthfulness which does not suppress some of the unsavory facts about her life."

+ — Lit D 46:352 F 15 '13 130w

"With whole-hearted sympathy Mr. Moorhouse recounts the amazing career of Lady Hamilton, indulgently extenuating her faults of character and apparently not thinking it worth while to mention that there was anything irregular in her peccadilloes."

+ — N Y Times 17:785 D 22 '12 80w

MORDAUNT, ELENOR, pseud. (MRS. EVE-
LYN M. [CLOWES] WIEHE). Lu of the ranges. *$1.35 (1c) Sturgis & Walton 13-15850

The young girl who is the central figure in this story of Australia is one of the pathetic victims of an adverse fate, but by sheer strength of will and of character she lifts herself above the need for pity and exacts in its stead admiration. Even after her abandonment by the light-minded, characterless Englishman, who first rescues her from a life of degradation and hardship, then amuses himself with her for an hour and deserts her, she is so much bigger and better than he, that it is he who appears as the pitiable figure. The conclusion is a little vague, but one can, if one wishes, see in it the promise of a happier future for Lu.

"A vivid story. Lu is a figure of compelling interest, who reminds us of Mr. Hardy's 'Tess.'"

+ Ath 1913,1:570 My 24 150w

"To be sure, it will not bear scrutiny for scientifically correct psychology; the difficulty of a half dialect is not surmounted as smoothly as it might be; and the story unfortunately shows a tendency to be absorbed in the unction of dramatic moments. But from the faults of the ordinary sex novel, 'Lu of the ranges' remains free; its motive has touched the bigger and finer sides of the problem."

+ — Boston Transcript p10 N 17 '13 700w

"The novel descends to unnecessary depths of evil in human nature."

— Outlook 105:762 D 6 '13 120w

MORDAUNT, ELENOR, pseud. (MRS. EVE-LYN M. [CLOWES] WIEHE). Simpson.
*$1.35 Houghton 13-20577

"Several love stories in one is this, running through the scale of passion. Simpson, a delightful English bachelor, falls in love with Fountains Court, most adorable of English country places. There he and his chosen friends retreat, to live and work and be happy, freed from woman. Are they? The answer is the story."—N Y Times

"A series of very interesting romances that show a deep and varied knowledge of humanity and especially of men."

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 29 '13 230w

"So long as she holds to the lighter tone of comedy she pleases her readers, but she has a higher purpose . . . and turns repeatedly to tragedy. This strikes jarring chords, particularly as the author has read too much precious modern literature and feels bound to indulge in some of the brutality that passes for realism, and to drag in sex questions out of season."

+ — N Y Sun p3 O 4 '13 180w

+ N Y Times 18:632 N 16 '13 120w

MORE, PAUL ELMER. Drift of romanticism.
*$1.25 Houghton 13-5635

"The eighth series of 'Shelburne essays' . . . bears a distinct title, 'The drift of romanticism.' Two of the essays, those on Pater and Nietzsche have already appeared in part, in the 'Nation,' but the bulk of the volume has not before been printed. As indicated by the title, the papers all bear on romanticism considered as the underlying literary and philosophical tendency of the nineteenth century." (Nation) The other writers discussed are: William Beckford, Cardinal Newman, Fiona Macleod and Huxley. "The volume closes with an exposition in the form of aphoristic definitions, of the dualistic philosophy which, according to the argument of the book, is the basis of classical art and morality and from which romanticism is a present aberration." (Nation)

+ A L A Bkl 9:437 Je '13

"Mr. More impresses the present reviewer deeply with the scope and penetration of his critical work."

+ Ath 1913,1:644 Je 14 1150w

"In conclusion we might say of Mr. More's essays what he says of Nietzsche: 'Most of his book is just the sort of spasmodic commonplace that enraptures the half-cultured, and flatters them with thinking they have discovered a profound philosophical basis for their untutored emotions.'"

— Cath World 97:543 Jl '13 550w

"To turn from the usual book of the day to this volume is to turn from triviality and impetuosity to reflection and poise and spiritual solemnity, three qualities as rare as they are desirable." Norman Foerster.

+ Dial 54:416 My 16 '13 1750w

"Is not perhaps as striking as some of the earlier volumes of the same series, but it contains much admirable work."

+ Educ R 46:206 S '13 100w

"The drift of romanticism' is incomparably Mr. More's best work. He has cut to the very heart of his subject, and a single one of his many glowing phrases tells more than another man's whole volume. The book has a message which, direct as it is to our own age, is true for all time."

+ Ind 74:1200 My 29 '13 1300w

+ Lit D 47:688 O 18 '13 300w

Nation 96:287 Mr 20 '13 250w

"A book that cannot fail to attract those who are interested in the literary life of the nineteenth century."

+ N Y Times 18:255 Ap 27 '13 850w

+ N Y Times 18:666 N 30 '13 300w

"If any are inclined to quarrel with his philosophy as dogmatic, they cannot, at any rate, fail to value his uncommon sincerity and clearness of thought. 'The drift of romanticism' is a profound book, but not an obscure one; it is suggestive without being irresponsible."

+ — No Am 197:716 My '13 1100w

Outlook 104:74 My 10 '13 250w

R of Rs 48:248 Ag '13 150w

MOREAU-VAUTHIER, CHARLES. Technique of painting; with a preface by Étienne Dinet. il $3.50 Putnam (Eng ed 13-1009)

This work will appeal "to the general reader by the vivacity with which it covers a large field of interest, including an historical sketch of schools of painting, the development of colour-perception, and the art of making forgeries and planting them on purchasers." (Ath) "The author goes most entertainingly into the methods used by a multitude of artists in preparing their panels, tablets, canvases or walls; in procuring their colors and experimenting with them. He shows not only by description but also by detailed plates what damage has been caused in the course even of a few years by the variation of colors, by the cracking of varnishes and by other mechanical and chemical disorganization." (Boston Transcript)

"A helpful book, specially for the beginner in oil painting."

+ A L A Bkl 9:382 My '13

"M. Moreau-Vauthier's volume makes little attempt at ideal thoroughness and the rare painter who is inclined to serious technical research, though he may find in it much varied information on a wide range of subjects, cannot confidently turn to it for complete elucidation of any puzzling problem. On the other hand, the painter who wishes to avoid the more obvious errors which the better informed of his contemporaries steer clear of will find such knowledge of technique as is generally current set forth in a lively and readable style."

+ — Ath 1912,2:632 N 23 300w

"For the young painter it is a manual which cannot fail to be of the greatest practical value. For the student of art it will be an invaluable assistant. For the aesthetic reader, for the cultivated man or woman, and especially for those who love pictures, whether collectors or not, it is a treasure of clear and useful information conveyed always in delightful style and with perfect freedom from academic didacticism. It is an excellent foundation for the study of the history of art." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 21 '13 1350w

"To the painter and critic, and especially to the young art-student laying the foundations of his craft, 'The technique of painting,' should prove invaluable; to the intelligent amateur its fund of technical information and anecdotes should prove absorbingly interesting."

+ Ind 74:647 Mr 20 '13 70w

"A clearly written and interesting book with remarkable illustrative features."

+ Nation 96:344 Ap 3 '13 140w

"It is a perfect encyclopædia of the many and varied things that go into the making of paintings, and of the countless accidents and dangers to which they are subject after they are finished."

+ N Y Sun p5 Ap 19 '13 200w

Figures in parenthesis following

"Here is a volume that should be on the shelf of every artist—every student—and of everyone interested in painting." Haldane Macfall.

+ — N Y Times 18:231 Ap 20 '13 1500w

"A sound guide in matters technical."

+ Sat R 115:686 My 31 '13 730w

"The authorities contradict one another at times; nevertheless the present volume makes additions to the artist's technical knowledge."

+ Spec 110:sup130 Ja 25 '13 120w

"M. Moreau-Vauthier's book is likely to prove suggestive to many painters who are feeling their way and it will at any rate be interesting to amateurs of art."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 1200w

MORET, ALEXANDRE. Kings and gods of Egypt; tr. by Mme. Moret. il $2 Putnam 12-24278

"The articles that Alexander Moret has put together under the title 'Kings and gods of Egypt' are of a miscellaneous character though most deal with religion. He tells in the light of the latest researches what we know about Osiris, about the worship of Isis, about the Egyptian ideas of immortality. He recites the remarkable story of how the hieroglyphics were deciphered; of Egyptian travellers, of Queen Hatshepsut and King Amenophis IV. His purpose is to popularize the results of Egyptological studies."—N Y Sun

"His work deserves to be read by the Egyptologist as well as the general reader, because of the perfectly French clearness with which the different subjects are presented. When the writer comes to the history of the great Queen Hatshepsut who built them, he forsakes the lead of Prof. Naville and the older Egyptologists, to follow the wandering fires of the Berlin school."

+ — Ath 1913,1:184 F 15 600w

"All are interesting subjects and the illustrations are sufficient."

+ Ind 73:1261 N 28 '12 170w

"Essentially, there is not much new material in the volume, and some of its statements have become antiquated, on account of the more fundamental results reached by Professor Breasted in his recent lectures on 'Religion and thought in ancient Egypt.' Nevertheless, Professor Moret's works deserve a place in the popular literature of Egyptology; this in spite of the absurd appearance of the native names, transliterated according to the French system."

+ — Nation 96:38 Ja 9 '13 250w

"Every one of his chapters will be found highly interesting."

+ N Y Sun p6 N 2 '12 100w

"Deserves commendation."

+ Outlook 102:737 N 30 '12 100w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Wireless telegraphy and telephony simply explained; together with a chapter on the possibilities of its future development. il $1 Henley 13-201

"The book represents an effort to tell the main facts in the story of wireless signaling. . . . An explanation is given of some elementary theory and its bearing on wireless phenomena. Then the subjects of transmitting apparatus and operation, receiving apparatus and methods and the theory of tuning and couplings follow in logical order. The section devoted to wireless telegraphy closes with a chapter on its applications along commercial, naval and military lines. There is next given some matter relating to the human ear and to various forms of speech transmission, followed by a lengthy discussion of the subject of wireless telephony." (Elec World)

+ A L A Bkl 9:437 Je '13

"It cannot be classed either as deeply theoretical or as giving a comprehensive practical price indicate cost per 1000 words treatment, but it occupies a middle ground, containing sufficient simple theory and enough practical detail to make it valuable as a source of general information."

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL —Continued.

+ Elec World 61:1428 Je 28 '13 180w

"The book contains a good deal of valuable information on wireless apparatus and operation with a large amount of speculation as to future developments. While not in any sense a scientific work nor entitled to be called a practical treatise, the book should prove of interest to many who desire simply a little non-technical information concerning recent scientific advances. The book gives a wrong impression, more by implication than by positive statement, of the present importance of wireless telephony."

+ — Engin N 69:539 Mr 13 '13 200w

MORGAN, JAMES. Life work of Edward A. Moseley in the service of humanity. il *$2 (2c) Macmillan 13-18739

The subject of this biography was secretary of the Interstate commerce commission from its organization in 1887 until his death in 1911. The author says that, tho this sketch of his life may be out of proportion to his fame, "so was the work he did for a quarter of a century as champion of laws which have greatly promoted safety, justice, and peace on the railroads of the United States. The story needs to be told all the more because the general public knows so little of the labors of this government official who quietly turned what might have been a routine task into a noble service on behalf of his fellow men." (Foreword)

"A well-executed piece of work."

+ Dial 55:365 N 1 '13 270w

N Y Sun p5 S 27 '13 100w

"The account Mr. Morgan gives is deeply interesting."

+ N Y Times 18:630 N 16 '13 120w

R of Rs 48:631 N '13 100w

MORGAN, JOY E., comp. Selected articles on free trade and protection. (Debaters' handbook ser.) *$1 (1½c) Wilson, H. W. 13-4138

Possibly no question confronting the American people today is more puzzling nor more full of difficulties for solution than the question of the tariff. It offers an ever-present question for the debating society; a problem for the student of political economy; and a subject of interest to the intelligent citizen. It is for the use of these three classes that the present volume is designed. Brief and bibliographies have been worked out with care, and the reprints have been judiciously selected from a vast amount of material.

"Contains some good articles, but on the whole the selection is not especially good, nor is the argument on either side particularly well presented." H. R. M.

+ Am Econ R 3:420 Je '13 100w

+ A L A Bkl 9:330 Ap '13

MORITZEN, JULIUS. Peace movement of America; with an introd. by Ja. L. Tryon. il *$3 Putnam 12-29460

The book gives an "optimistic survey of the progress that is being made by the several anti-war organizations of this country. The author thinks Americans have done a great deal for international good-will in the last few years and he speaks with large hopefulness of the future, professing to believe that much will be done in the next few years toward curing the world of its fighting disposition."—N Y Times

"Too detailed to be useful for popular reading."

+ A L A Bkl 9:330 Ap '13

"The idea of a journalistic—that 'is a newsy and up-to-date'—treatment of the peace movement in America is a novel and fruitful one;

and its admirable execution in Mr. Moritzen's book is made still more interesting by the three score illustrations, chiefly portraits, with which the book is adorned."

+ Ann Am Acad 48:263 Jl '13 250w

Ath 1913,1:283 Mr 8 80w

"The only criticism we make is that the volume might have been condensed, and that the author tends to praise without much discrimination all that has been done in America in the name of peace." Hamilton Holt.

+ — Ind 74:1040 My 8 '13 220w

"This book gives facts, but scattered in chaos."

+ N Y Sun p6 Ja 13 '13 2400w

N Y Times 18:71 F 9 '13 80w

"Mr. Moritzen has known how to make an interesting book."

+ Outlook 103:500 Mr 1 '13 40w

R of Rs 47:380 Mr '13 30w

MORLEY, MARGARET WARNER. Carolina mountains. il *$3 Houghton 13-21461

"The author first gives us word-pictures of the physical beauties of the country in consecutive seasons, and with a skill which makes it easy to visualize peach-trees in blossom, cotton fields, forests, and mountain tops. There is, also, much solid information—interesting facts about forest preservation, ornithology, early settlers, the peculiarities of the people and the far-reaching and ennobling influence of the Biltmore estate and industries on the native mountaineer. No possible beauty of the Blue Ridge or Smoky mountains is omitted."—Lit D

+ A L A Bkl 10:145 D '13

"As a whole it is a little too much like a glorified guide-book to be of much interest to the general reader. The numerous illustrations are reproduced from photographs which bear the stamp of the amateur."

+ Bookm 38:326 N '13 220w

"Miss Morley shows us a fascinating picture."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 11 '13 380w

"At no time does Miss Morley fail to hold the attention and to appeal to the reader through her unusual ability to penetrate to the heart of a matter and portray it in quaint and often humorous phrases."

+ Chaut 72:253 N 29 '13 140w

"Miss Morley shows herself thoroughly at home in the scenes and among the primitive people she has chosen to describe."

+ Dial 55:479 D 1 '13 200w

Reviewed by C. E. Hessegrave.

+ Ind 76:511 D 11 '13 50w

"Aside from the subject-matter, interesting in itself and well told, the book is beautifully illustrated and attractively bound."

+ Lit D 47:957 N 15 '13 180w

"The volume is a little larger than is necessary, as some history and reflections are included that one finds oneself skipping."

+ — Nation 97:568 D 11 '13 170w

"Her remarks about the mountain people and their manners and customs should check and correct the impressions of them spread by writers of fiction and by philanthropists."

+ N Y Sun p5 O 25 '13 150w

"A most useful and enduring guide book."

+ N Y Times 18:701 N 30 '13 70w

MOROSO, JOHN ANTONIO. The quarry. il *$1.25 (2c) Little 13-9242

How thru the machine-like workings of the New York police-system a guiltless lad, ignorant in his innocence, may be accused, tried, convicted, and sent to Sing Sing for life on a charge of second-degree murder is the theme of this story. Five years of the sentence are served; then thru the connivance of his cell-mate, Jim Montgomery, makes his escape. In spite of all efforts to track him he finds peace and freedom in a small southern manufacturing town. Under an assumed name, he wins to a position of dignity and honor. But Kearney, the detective who first arrested him, is still on the track of his quarry. He hunts him down, intent on getting the finger prints which will assure his identity. When the net is about to close around the victim, a sudden and unforeseen act on his part defeats the hunter's purpose.

+ Bookm 37:461 Je '13 470w

"The story is simply and tensely told, without any attempt at ornament, and holds the interest throughout its entire course." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:20 Jl 1 '13 280w

"A strong and moving story, realistic in treatment, altho weakened toward its close by the author's too evident desire to gain our sympathy for his hero."

+ Ind 75:633 S 11 '13 100w

"It is an exciting story, even if it reads like a plea."

+ N Y Sun p5 Ap 12 '13 120w

"The story is of far less consequence as a novel than it is as a study of the perverted growth and sinister possibilities of what is generally supposed to be society's best protection against the criminal. As such it is worthy the attention of serious men and women."

+ N Y Times 18:219 Ap 13 '13 900w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 5 '13 220w

MORRIS, GOUVERNEUR. If you touch them they vanish. Il $*1 (5½c) Scribner 13-21259

A little story of mingled fact and fancy. A young man who has been wrongfully accused of a crime goes to live, after serving his term of imprisonment, in an obscure valley in the Canadian wilderness. His only companion is a faithful Irish woman, once his nurse, but he peoples the woods with imaginary characters, men and women who like himself have suffered. So vivid are his fancies that for a time after the real girl appears he fails to recognize her reality.

"Mr. Morris has written the story delicately, and with excellent technical well-roundedness, and has furthermore embodied some sweet and thoughtful ideas, the plentifulness of which in our literature can never exceed the demand. There is nothing gained by trying to find and describe the incongruities or faults of the book."

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 31 '13 650w

+ Ind 76:176 O 23 '13 120w

"Mr. Morris has handled his difficult subject with a graceful touch."

+ Nation 97:460 N 13 '13 280w

"Those who can overcome the sense of bathos will like the story."

+ N Y Sun p4 O 4 '13 80w

"A very quaint and charming little fantasy."

+ N Y Times 18:600 N 2 '13 270w

MORRIS, GOUVERNEUR. Penalty. Il $*1.35 (2c) Scribner 13-6732

The author took his plot from the Brothers Grimm; in a New York setting he pictures Beauty and the Beast. Beauty is an especially attractive young woman sculptor; the Beast an almost unbelievably horrible legless beggar. In spite of the hints and warnings of her men friends Barbara Ferris persists in having Blizard, the beggar, in her studio as a model. Blizard, who is represented as vice incarnate, falls madly in love with the beautiful young sculptor and is ready to move heaven and earth, or all the forces of New York's underworld, to possess her. The fact that her father, a famous surgeon, is responsible for the loss of his legs, seems to put her further in the man's power. The story comes, however, to a conventional ending. Barbara marries the respectable young man lover and the atrocious villain is robbed of his horrible attributes by the removal of a blood clot from his brain.

"A thrilling, but highly improbable story."

+ Ath 1913,2:87 Jl 26 50w

- Atlan 112:696 N '13 60w

"One of the most exaggerated stories that are woven out of a tissue of sheer improbability, and that, while refusing to be laid aside until finished, leave the reader mildly exasperated with himself for being beguiled into reading them." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:444 Je '13 250w

"The penalty" possesses interesting situations, memorable characters, and the action is quick, but it lacks a certain distinction possessed by some of Mr. Morris's short stories. It shows, perhaps, a desire to sacrifice the artistic for the illusive glamour of becoming a popular novelist."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 16 '13 550w

"Swift action and tense situations serve to compel interest to the end."

+ N Y Sun p14 Je 14 '13 70w

"In spite of its last century point of view, its not infrequent absurdities and defective style, Mr. Morris's first novel is in many ways an unusually interesting one. The plot is ingenious and well handled up to the last two or three chapters, when it becomes a trifle banal. A good deal of its character drawing is crude, but some of the people are boldly sketched, and the conception of Blizard, extravagant, grotesque, almost goblin-like though it is, is yet quick with the pulse of life, while the sense of mystery, of a continuous secret, underground burrowing which may cause a crash to come any moment is well-sustained." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 18:178 Mr 30 '13 1450w

"It reads like the dream of a modern hashish-eater who had browsed on yellow fiction until he talks of the fantastic and horrible in terms of modern New York but through incidents that seem to be imagined only in a lunatic asylum."

- Outlook 104:39 My 3 '13 50w

Spec 111:319 Ag 30 '13 30w

"It is readable enough in a way . . . but so are very much better books, and when they have been read there is something to remember for the pains."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 150w

MORRIS, HARRISON SMITH. Masterpieces of the sea. William T. Richards: a brief outline of his life and art. Il $*1 Lippincott 12-24574

Here "is presented a pleasing portrait of the man and artist from the hand of one who knew him well and esteemed him highly. . . . Fourteen 'masterpieces of the sea,' as Mr. Morris rightly calls them, and one landscape are reproduced from Richard's canvases, and portraits of the artist and his wife are also given."—Dial

+ A L A Bkl 9:331 Ap '13

"Mr. Richards had a simple and uneventful career, which is here set forth with care, though with a straining after simplicity that becomes somewhat tiresome."

+ Ath 1913,1:194 F 15 50w

Reviewed by Algernon Tassin.

Bookm 36:392 D '12 100w

"In all its details the book is a handsome piece of work as well as an excellent bit of biography."

+ Dial 53:452 D 1 '12 150w

"This must come as a welcome memoir as well to those who knew Mr. Richards in name or in person, as to a younger generation which is in a fair way to accept as landscape and marine painting the canvases of those who now fill the public eye in the galleries."

+ Int Studio 48:sup47 D '12 700w

"He draws an attractive picture of a quiet and blameless life."

+ N Y Sun p6 N 2 '12 100w

"A quaint blend of affectionate memoir and gentle criticism gives a unique character to the little book. The illustrations are clear and good, but more of dignity and less of prettiness would have improved the book."

MORRIS, HARRISON SMITH—Continued.
+ — N Y Times 17:712 D 1 '12 150w

MORRIS, WILLIAM. Collected works of William Morris: with introductions by his daughter, May Morris. 24v v 13-16 per set *$78 Longmans
v. 13-16.

This instalment of Morris' works contains: The Odyssey of Homer; The house of the Wolfings; The story of the glittering plain; The roots of the mountains; News from nowhere; A dream of John Ball; A king's lesson.

"The charming series of introductory notes in which Miss Morris supplements and in some measure corrects Mr. Mackail's biography of her father, necessarily written with less intimate knowledge of its subject, has now reached the period in which he became a socialist. Sharing all his enthusiasm, and taking part in much of his drudgery in the cause, she has written, from personal knowledge of the events of the time, an account of her father's attitude towards the movement which no one else could have given us—an account which fills a distinct gap in the history of modern English socialism."

+ Ath 1912,2:339 S 28 900w

+ Bookm 37:577 J1 '13 3000w

"The introductions of Miss Morris continue their charm. Naturally, we hear much in those that accompany the present volumes of the poet's ill-timed incursion into politics. But there are delightful pictures of the home life intermingled. Volume 13, in particular, contains further descriptions of Kelmscott, which is also visualized for us by photogravures of several rooms."

+ Nation 95:538 D 5 '12 470w

"To not a few the publication of this noble and exquisite edition of the great master, of whom physically as well as spiritually it seems something like a veritable counterpart, will seem the chief happening just now in the world of letters." R: Le Gallienne.

+ N Y Times 17:730 D 1 '12 1150w

Sat R 115:464 Ap 12 '13 220w

MORTENSEN, KARL ANDREAS. Handbook of Norse mythology; tr. by A. Clinton Crowell. 11 *75c (2c) Crowell 13-5411

This work, translated from the Danish, was first published in 1898 and has been popular since as text book in the high schools and universities of the Scandinavian countries. The subject is treated by the author in four sections. In the first he gives the mythological conception of the creation of the world; in the second discusses the Common popular belief and Chief gods and myths of the gods; in the third, Forms of worship and religious life; in the fourth, Hero sagas.

"Excellent translation."

+ Am Hist R 18:868 J1 '13 10w

"Written in a clear, vivid style."

+ A L A Bkl 9:438 Je '13

+ Chaut 71:118 J1 5 '13 70w

"The stories are told in a clear and vivid style."

+ Dial 54:349 Ap 16 '13 100w

Ind 74:1204 My 29 '13 30w

"Will serve both to explain what is not known and to correct wrong ideas. It is a thoroughly scientific little book, though prepared for popular use, as the author holds strictly to the authorities. It is an excellent and helpful little book."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 15 '13 120w

N Y Times 18:431 Ag 10 '13 70w

"This 'Who's who and why' among the Norse gods, though occasionally too compact in thought to be easily intelligible, should become a welcome book of reference in many libraries."

+ — Outlook 104:307 Je 7 '13 70w

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 18 '13 220w

MOSES, BELLE. Helen Ormesby. 11 $1.50 (1½c) Appleton 12-22811

Seven girls just out of college spend a winter in the New York home of one of their number learning domestic science and home management under the tutorship of six very competent servants.

"A story of the boarding-school type, wholesome and entertaining, though smacking of gilded luxury and only fairly well written."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:172 D '12

"Belle Moses has a fresh gift of inventiveness which makes her seven girls in 'Helen Ormesby' real and live and true—all with a healthy home spirit in them, rare in these days." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1372 D 12 '12 33w

"Miss Moses possesses spontaneity and inventiveness, two characteristics which are essential in juvenile work. There is much variety of incident. The seven girls become lovable personalities."

+ Lit D 45:1078 D 7 '12 130w

"There are too many girls and they achieve too much."

— N Y Sun p5 D 7 '12 100w

"Cleverly conceived and human in its appeal."

+ N Y Times 17:748 D 1 '12 20w

"A fanciful, merry, often foolish, and quite improbable story."

+ — Outlook 102:693 N 23 '12 60w

MOXOM, PHILIP STAFFORD. Two masters, 2 Browning and Turgenief. *$1 (7c) Sherman, French & co. 13-2431

"These two essays upon Browning and Turgenief were written for quite different reasons. The first is to commemorate the Browning centenary and the second for the purpose of giving readers a clearer knowledge of the life of the great Russian. . . . Appreciation of Browning has been in an ever-ascending scale for the last fifty years, and in this latest word upon the subject, Dr. Moxom dares to quote M. Jussereau when he places him next to Shakspeare among the great English poets."

The second essay of Dr. Moxom—on Turgenief—is for the most part biographical, for while Turgenief has now won an audience among English and American readers, he is far less known as a man than his great contemporary, Tolstol. . . . Turgenief has been called a pessimist. Though Dr. Moxom makes no connection between the two essays, one cannot help contrasting the spiritual note of the two writers, both of whom were men of such keen comprehension. The sadness, the melancholy, the hopelessness of Turgenief stands in bold relief against the sure optimism of Browning."—Boston Transcript

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '13 850w

+ Chaut 71:116 J1 5 '13 300w

"Every page of his little book, dealing with the great prophet of optimism and the great pessimistic novelist, has its charm, and is written with a simplicity and lucidity that are sure to please." W: L. Phelps.

+ Ind 74:1146 My 22 '13 150w

N Y Times 18:35 Ja 26 '13 100w

"A slender volume deserving high praise for the apt and discriminating criticism of both, and the inspiring quality of one, of the two comparatively brief literary papers which compose it. Upon the whole a better rounded and more discriminating study of Browning has seldom been given in such comparatively brief space, or one which will prove more satisfying to the student or lover of Browning or more appealing to the reader who knows Browning as yet but little."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ja 2 '13 750w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 13 '13 650w

MOZANS, H. J., pseud. Woman in science, with an introductory chapter on woman's struggle for things of the mind. il $2.50 (2c) Appleton 13-20403

The author opens this work with a most interesting and important survey of "Woman's long struggle for things of the mind." He has chosen to confine himself to the history of this struggle and its achievements and triumphs in the fields of science because he found that "many works in various languages had been written on what women had accomplished in art, literature, and statecraft. [While] with the exception of a few brief monographs in German, French and Italian, and an occasional magazine article here and there, practically nothing had been written about women in science." (Preface) Chapters are devoted to the achievements of women in mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, the natural sciences; medicine and surgery; archaeology, to women as inventors, and as collaborators in science, with a final chapter on The future of women in science.

"The author reveals great learning and he has been painstaking in his scholarship, careful to give exact references to authenticate his historical statements. The book is a work that should be welcomed, especially at the present time."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 670w

"Dr. Mozans undeniably drags history with a fine net, and it is only small fry that escapes him. But he abundantly proves his thesis of the intellectual ability of women—some women—and he has made an exceedingly interesting book of it."

+ Ind 76:137 O 16 '13 280w

"All who are interested in the progress and advancement of women will be inspired by this exhaustive treatment."

+ Lit D 47:952 N 15 '13 270w

+ N Y Times 18:624 N 16 '13 1450w

MUIR, JOHN. Story of my boyhood and youth. il $2 Houghton 13-5573

"In essence it is largely a chronicle of two things, of many animal pets and of the Spartan upbringing which Muir's father, to an even greater degree than other strongly religious Scotchmen of his day, felt wise for his children. Added to this are many well-told anecdotes of Scotch life and of times and habits in Wisconsin 60 years ago, when forests were being felled to make farms for the new settlers and when though there does not seem to have been actual menace from the Indians, livestock would occasionally be stolen or killed by a thieving redskin. But one of the most remarkable features of the book is to be found in the descriptions of Muir's various inventions as a boy and later as a young man while painfully working his way through the University of Wisconsin before he began roaming the world as a naturalist."—Springfield Republican

"Will be inspiring reading for young people as well as for adults."

+ A L A Bkl 9:382 My '13 *

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 1000w

"There is a freshness and truth and simple sincerity about it that go far toward making it one of the great pieces of writing of its kind. It clears the brain and braces the system to read so genuine, unpretentious, homely, and convincing a bit of autobiography. Sweet are the uses of adversity when it can shape such a life as is so unassumingly portrayed in Mr. Muir's pages. No one, having once opened the book, can lay it down unfinished; and no one, having finished it can fail to feel himself the better for it." P. F. Bicknell.

+ Dial 54:293 Ap 1 '13 1600w

+ Ind 75:43 JI 3 '13 470w

+ Lit D 47:26 JI 5 '13 500w

"It is a notable piece of autobiographic writing—the story of an unusually interesting boyhood and youth told with an energy and an eye for the diverting and significant that distinguish it at once from the slipshod garrulity of most books of the kind."

+ Nation 96:391 Ap 17 '13 850w

+ N Y Sun p7 Ap 12 '13 320w

"The succeeding volumes of Mr. Muir's autobiography may be richer in scientific interest, they may deal with famous people and events. To this book, however, belongs a singular charm, the charm of brilliant, adventurous and wholesome boyhood—boyhood spent among the great forests and broad plains of a land that had not yet learned the weary lesson of civilization." Joyce Kilmer.

+ N Y Times 18:158 Mr 23 '13 1750w

+ N Y Times 18:672 N 30 '13 270w

"Blitheness and simple sweetness, human sympathy for the world and all in it—bird and beast and man—make this book delightful. It is unassuming, sincere, and entertaining."

+ Outlook 104:71 My 10 '13 1000w

+ R of Rs 47:761 Je '13 80w

"A more fascinating chronicle of boyish experiences has seldom been written. It is long since a book has appeared which, while appealing to older readers, would seem likely to have so great a fascination for the young as well."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 700w

MULDER, ARNOLD. Dominie of Harlem. $1.25 il (1½c) McClurg 13-18720

A small Dutch settlement in Michigan is the scene of this story. It is one of those foreign settlements, common enough in rural America, where customs and traditions brought over from the fatherland have become crystallized, and where no breath of progress is ever allowed to enter. To this community comes young Charles Van Wheelen to serve as minister in the Christian reformed church. He had hoped on leaving college to find an opening for work among the city poor, but when fate takes him instead to out-of-the-way Harlem, he finds there ignorance just as benighted as that of any city slum, and human problems as difficult of settlement as those afforded in crowded centers.

"A pretty tale, prettily done. To many readers it will be news to be told of Dutch peasants in twentieth-century America. Their squabbles, social and religious, their condemnation of the use of English as the worst of sins, their struggle against progress and colleges and fresh air, make a pleasant if not startling narrative."

+ Nation 97:460 N 13 '13 200w

"The author has drawn these transplanted peasants with great vividness."

+ N Y Sun p3 S 27 '13 130w

"The book has movement and sincerity of purpose, and the discussion of questions is interesting, although a condensation of the dialogue would have improved the story as such."

+ Outlook 105:280 O 4 '13 70w

MULFORD, ALFRED CORNELL. Boundaries and landmarks. il $1 Van Nostrand 12-26375

"The book is intended as a practical manual for surveyors engaged in land surveying in the eastern states and other sections where land is described by metes and bounds. There are fifteen short chapters in all, containing an average of six pages each. The more important chapter titles are: deeds, landmarks, house lots, highway records and surveys, and the relations of the surveyor and lawyer. No attempt is made to describe how to measure a line, nor are the surveying instruments discussed, but the book is almost entirely devoted to brief suggestions for locating the line to be measured, which the author deems of greater importance than the question of how to measure it."—Engin Rec

MULFORD, ALFRED CORNELL—Continued.

"The book is free from all mathematical formulas, it does not pretend to instruct in the theory of surveying; but it would form a most valuable appendix to any textbook on surveying. To the young and inexperienced land surveyor it will prove an unfailing source of consolation and instruction."

+ Engin N 69:322 Ap 17 '13 280w

"The book is written in elementary style and should be profitable reading for the young surveyor particularly. It is to be regretted that the author did not develop the chapters at greater length."

+ Engin Rec 66:732 D 28 '12 200w

"The account of the different kinds of landmarks the surveyor may have to look for in tracing old boundaries, of the descriptions in deeds and of the errors that may be expected contains much that is entertaining, while the author writes plain English that every one can understand."

+ N Y Sun p5 Ja 4 '13 80w

MUMBY, FRANK ARTHUR. Youth of Henry VIII. il *$3 Houghton 13-35654

"Two things are of especial importance in this biography. The first is that it takes the reader only through the youth of the king, or up to the birth of the Princess Mary. The second item of importance is that the biography is wholly given by means of authentic letters, which give it the stamp of truth. . . . We are all too prone to judge Henry VIII by the popular estimates of his character. In recalling that by hook or by crook he had six wives, and that he committed sundry wrongs against his queens and against his ministers, how often we forget that he reigned twenty years to the glory of England, and with the reputation of a somewhat model prince before he began to tarnish his reputation. One wonders how much of the evil repute of Henry VIII may be justly laid at Shakespeare's door."—Boston Transcript.

"Only needed in large libraries. A companion volume but not so well done as 'The girlhood of Queen Elizabeth.'"—A L A Bkl 10:22 S '13

"Mr. Mumby has made an excellent selection from the mass of printed papers. His comments and notes are brief and to the point, especially on such highly controversial matters as Catherine's marriages. A few misprints may be noted."

+ Ath 1913,1:353 Mr 29 520w

Boston Transcript p22 My 28 '13 750w

"As not all the documents are accessible elsewhere in printed or translated form, the work may prove of some value to the historical student, but the general reader is seldom attracted to documentary materials in undigested form. Mr. Mumby's work has no discernible point of view and shows no bias."

+ Dial 55:118 Ag 16 '13 270w

Lit D 46:1385 Je 21 '13 830w

"The letters here chosen are far less well selected than in the 'Girlhood of Queen Elizabeth,' and all of them have been printed before. Mr. Mumby has embarked on an interesting and promising enterprise, in his attempt to introduce 'the average reader' to the 'sources'; but if his future volumes are to attain real success, he must take more pains in finding and transcribing his letters, and above all he must learn more about the people who wrote them."

— Nation 97:82 Ji 24 '13 330w

"Mr. Mumby has done something well worth while in bringing that earlier Henry out of the obscurity to which the historians had consigned him and sending him forth to palliate somewhat, with his youthful kindness and his gallant air, the hideous caricature of a man which he afterward made of himself."

+ N Y Times 18:314 My 25 '13 1000w

MUMFORD, JAMES GREGORY. Doctor's table talk. *$1.25 Houghton 12-23735

A book of essays on various topics of the day. "The form is not of the table talks of the Autocrat and some other literary forebears, but largely the talk and discussion of various of his friends ('Primrose,' 'Ely,' and others) whom the reader will be glad to know. The topics are chiefly those of medical training and practice." (Nation)

"Much sensible comment and humorous reflection appear, and their appeal will not be limited to members of the profession."

+ A L A Bkl 9:198 Ja '13

"Dr. Mumford's views are in the main sound and well presented, although we think he lacks a clear understanding, not to say appreciation, of the attitude of the investigator. The general reader, besides enjoying the sensation of getting behind the curtain upon the stage of medical endeavor and among the actors and the 'props,' will derive much pleasure and no little profit from incidental discussions on the question of female suffrage and of socialism."

+ Nation 96:63 Ja 16 '13 270w

"Pleasant and readable essays."

+ N Y Sun p10 Ja 25 '13 80w

"Dr. Mumford has a good many things worth saying and he says them in an enjoyable gossip way, with little glints of humor, and a sunny good humor shining all through the pages, notwithstanding an occasional sharp edge for human stupidities."

+ N Y Times 17:708 D 1 '12 130w

MUNRO, ROBERT. Paleolithic man and terra-mara settlements in Europe. il *$5.50 Macmillan (Eng ed 13-4429)

"This volume is divided into approximately equal parts, but while the two parts discuss different subjects, yet the subject that is common to both is the history of the origin and development of man upon the earth. The idea held by most people in regard to the general evolutionary doctrine of the origin of man is extremely vague; and even now it is possible to find intelligent men who say that the evolutionary origin of man is not proved. To those who wish to get rid of their vagueness, and to those who still imagine that the general evolutionary doctrine of the origin of man abides in the doubtful realm of hypothetical speculation, we commend this massive volume with its clear expositions to the intellect, and with its abundant illustrations which will convince through the eye." (Boston Transcript) The volume is made up of the series of lectures delivered at Edinburgh university in 1912 as the Munro lectures in anthropology and prehistoric archaeology.

"Dr. Munro's present work supplies a want that has long been felt. It is a comprehensive and popular treatise, well written and well illustrated."

+ Ath 1912,2:419 O 12 1200w

"The book is a great storehouse of anthropological and archaeological facts. It is written in popular language, is clear in its expositions, and with its numerous and decisive illustrations and clever diagrams the story of the development of man has been made most enchanting."

+ Boston Transcript p18 D 24 '12 600w

"There has been no equally important contribution to European prehistoric archaeology, in English, for years."

+ Dial 55:116 Ag 16 '13 600w

"Will be welcomed equally by the general reader and the student."

+ Nature 91:368 Je 12 '13 570w

"The volume will appeal both to specialists, who will find it valuable for references, illustrations and descriptive material, and to the lay reader who wishes to have in easy, comprehensive form the latest results in European prehistoric archeology." W. D. Wallis.

+ Science ns37:633 Ap 25 '13 900w

"The book contains an amazing amount of detail. It may indeed be thought to give too much detail and too few conclusions. Yet it is hardly fair to call this a fault. The subject is one which depends entirely upon the minutiae of evidence, and the evidence is often so equivocal that a book of conclusions unsupported by copious illustration is valueless."

+ Spec 110:452 Mr 15 '13 1100w

MUNRO, WILLIAM BENNETT. Government of American cities. *$2.25 (2c) Macmillan 12-26006

An earlier work by the author treated of "The government of European cities." In this work he describes in the same way "the machinery of city government in the United States." He has endeavored "to outline the growth of American cities, to explain the present-day powers and duties of the city as a municipal corporation, to describe the different organs of municipal government, and to make clear the relations which these bear to one another. The book deals with government rather than with administration, with the framework rather than with the functioning mechanism of the municipal organization." (Preface)

"A treatise of the highest competence and value."

+ Am Hist R 18:435 Ja '13 70w

+ A L A Bkl 9:291 Mr '13

"On the whole, this promises to be one of the books that the student of American municipal government cannot do without." Edgar Dawson.

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:321 My '13 700w

"Scholarly and comprehensive discussion. Does all that the author says he has hoped to do—to provide 'both for the college student of municipal government and for the general reader an introduction to the study of a very large and important subject.'" C. L. King.

+ Ann Am Acad 47:304 My '13 550w

"Dr. Munro has produced a thoroughly satisfactory work, which has neither the dryness of the average textbook nor the superficiality of a work for the general reader, but the valuable characteristics of both classes."

+ Ath 1912:756 D 21 200w

"As is almost inevitable in a book of so wide a range, not all the data given are up-to-date. The volume well complements the author's earlier work on 'The government of European cities.'"

+ Engin N 69:813 Ap 17 '13 1100w

"Those who wish to study municipal organization on its broad lines as it is and to understand the modifications which are so rapidly taking place will nowhere find a more competent guide."

+ Ind 75:159 Jl 17 '13 230w

"This book [and Beard's 'American city government'] taken together furnish us with the most complete and up-to-date treatment of city government we have. Professor Munro's work is better suited to the student of government, its copious reading references and footnotes making it especially valuable in this respect, while Professor Beard's book, though important for the student, is more fitted both in matter and in style for the general reader. One must regret that Professor Munro has relied too confidently on Hatton's 'Digest of city charters.'" V: J. West.

+ J Pol Econ 21:653 Jl '13 700w

"It would be possible to quarrel with Professor Munro here and there, but his book is authoritative both for the history of the development of our city government, and for the presentation of the considerations for and against proposed changes in it. These considerations are set forth with an adequacy and fairness which make them historical, too, rather than polemical."

+ Nation 96:84 Ja 23 '13 380w

"Prof. Munro is . . . a candid critic, but he is equally open-minded to merits as well as faults. In short the professor is a rational rather than a rabid reformer, and has written a Baedeker of reform in city affairs worthy to rank with the best."

+ N Y Times 18:106 Mr 2 '13 750w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:545 S '13 530w

+ R of Rs 47:505 Ap '13 80w

"The chapters are close-knit and do not attempt to point a moral or aid a cause." J. P. Heaton.

+ Survey 30:374 Je 14 '13 230w

MUNSTERBERG, HUGO. American patriotism, ism, and other social studies (Eng title, Social studies of to-day). *$1.50 Moffat 13-10653

The title essay asserts that our patriotism "draws its strength from the glaring ignorance of the rest of the world." The other chapters deal mainly with timely topics in America and Germany. Their titles are: The educational unrest; The case of the reporter; The Germany of to-day; The German woman; Coeducation; Household sciences; The Germans at school; and Psychology and the navy.

"Sane, pungent criticism."

+ A L A Bkl 10:22 S '13

"The chapters which deal with Germany are particularly informing and interesting. Not quite so much can be said for the other studies."

+ Lit D 46:1394 Je 21 '13 70w

"There is much worth reading in these essays, though the reader must often wish that the writer were not impressed with such a tremendous sense of his responsibility in the premises whether the premises are international relations or collegiate education."

+ N Y Sun p6 My 10 '13 2650w

"These are no unfounded, upstart thoughts of an upstart thinker, and America will do well to ponder the subject of American patriotism. The other essays contained in the volume have already appeared in several American periodicals, but are as crisp and telling as the first in their criticism of various phases of American and German life. The collection is perhaps not important, but it is vastly interesting and worthy of recommendation."

+ N Y Times 18:306 My 18 '13 700w

"Professor Münsterberg's views on American patriotism may seem somewhat trite."

+ Outlook 104:873 Ag 16 '13 600w

"Professor Münsterberg is one of the very few men of ability and wide views resident in the United States who have the courage or take the trouble to tell their countrymen the truth. He also employs a sound and attractive style, and his book makes good reading for Europeans no less than Americans."

+ Sat R 116:495 O 18 '13 900w

Spec 111:106 Je 19 '13 500w

"Altogether it is a stimulating and suggestive book that may ruffle some sensibilities, but to good purpose."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 5 '13 1250w

MUNSTERBERG, HUGO. Psychology and industrial efficiency. *$1.50 (3c) Houghton 13-2474

After an introduction in which he discusses Applied psychology, the author treats his subject under three headings: The best possible man; The best possible work; The best possible effect. "In the first section, the author shows how psychology and the psychological laboratory may be used to select workers best fitted for their work. He shows how the evil consequences of a young man engaging in a life work for which he is temperamentally unfitted, can often be avoided by simple psychological experiments. . . . The second section lays stress on the effect of surrounding conditions on the worker. This has clearly been recognized as a psychological phenomenon, and the author points out how the economy of movement, the elimination of extraneous noises and other conditions which affect the physical well-being of the worker react psychologically upon him and improve his capacity and efficiency. . . . Under 'The best possible effect,' such subjects are considered as the effects of advertisements, the effect of display, buying and selling, and other factors dealing with economical phases." (Indust Engin)

MÜNSTERBERG, HUGO—Continued.

"The chief difficulty in evaluating the book arises from the fact that it is not addressed to any particular body of readers. Psychologists will find in it little that is new; economists, little that is as yet significant; the practical industrial worker, little of immediate applicability; and it is doubtful whether the general reader will be convinced by the book that psychology has yet made any real contribution to the problems treated therein. Nevertheless the book is from several points of view distinctly satisfactory." H. L. Hollingworth.

+ — Am Econ R 3:657 S '13 570w

"The author is perhaps over-enthusiastic about the success of his experiments and has failed to take account of the extensive literature in the field, but he has made a very valuable and indeed a most stimulating contribution to the subject."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:382 My '13

"We have drawn attention to this work because it illustrates an outlook which is increasingly finding favour in America, and may prove subversive to the real progress of humanity. When a man has been metamorphosed into a machine, ethical considerations may cease to enter into the question of his treatment."

+ — Ath 1913,1:306 Mr 15 370w

"Our author has no lack of common sense and that still rarer quality, a sense of humor. Such a book as this should make an appeal to a large proportion of our readers for it has a message for everyone interested in either industrial or human efficiency, even though its human efficiency message may chiefly concern one's own self."

+ Engin N 69:812 Ap 17 '13 1150w

"His book ought to prove useful to owners and managers of factories, men who wish to make the best of themselves and their opportunities, and students of industrial conditions."

+ Ind 74:825 Ap 10 '13 220w

"The reviewer has seldom read a book which gave him more pleasure or which left such a feeling of time profitably spent."

+ Indust Engin 13:128 Mr '13 600w

"A very readable and suggestive book." Maurice Parmelee.

+ J Philos 10:528 S 11 '13 570w

Reviewed by S. B. Vincent.

+ — J Pol Econ 21:778 O '13 1200w

Lit D 47:540 S 27 '13 270w

"When Professor Münsterberg forsakes the eternal values for the temporal, he is always interesting, perhaps because he brings into his subject a certain breeziness, due to a wide contact with men, and because he deals with the things that we all like to talk about. This is the case in 'Psychology and industrial efficiency.'"

+ — Nation 96:368 Ap 10 '13 1000w

"No business man can find in this book specific advice on which he can act. It is simply a prospectus with a few concrete illustrations of what will some day grow into one of the great engineering sciences. In short, Prof. Münsterberg is appealing to an audience which can at best have only secondary interest in his work. If he wrote for the statesman, for the citizen, he would have an audience that saw in applied psychology, not an incidental source of profit but the technique of its greatest ideal." Walter Lippmann.

+ — N Y Times 18:127 Mr 9 '13 1350w

"A valuable contribution to a vital interest."

+ Outlook 103:864 Ap 19 '13 220w

"The author's last contribution to applied psychology is perhaps the most cautious in statement but the most valuable in content." W. D. Scott.

+ Psychol Bull 10:282 Jl 15 '13 570w

R of Rs 47:505 Ap '13 230w

Reviewed by H. L. Hollingworth.

+ Science ns38:56 Jl 11 '13 570w

MÜNSTERBERG, MARGARETE ANNA ADEL-
HEID. Anna Borden's career. il $1.30 Appleton 13-18717

Miss Münsterberg's heroine seems to typify the modern feminine unrest. She is the daughter of a millionaire, who tires of society and tries in turn many occupations. She is successively, a nurse, an actress, a factory worker, and the wife of a strike leader. In none of these ventures, however, does she find any permanent satisfaction. Her inherent restlessness drives her on to new experiments.

"The striving for originality sometimes makes unreasonable demands upon a novelist, and this is strikingly demonstrated in this novel, in which an effort to reach a new idea and possibly to point a moral results in the most absurd heroine created for many a day."

+ — Boston Transcript p20 S 10 '13 280w

"Miss Münsterberg has built up a firm and consistent psychological analysis of an all too prevalent and a none too wholesome type. But it must be admitted 'Anna Borden's career' would profit by less analysis and more art in the way of story telling. The faults are those of the young writer whose grip with life has been quick and strong without being very greatly extended, and in whose hands the devices of dialogue and incident are a bit unwieldy."

+ — N Y Times 18:478 S 21 '13 700w

MURRAY, GILBERT. Four stages of Greek religion. $1.50 (3c) Lemcke 13-35393

These lectures by the Regius professor of Greek in Oxford university were delivered at Columbia in 1912. In the first and second lectures, Saturnia regna, and The Olympian conquest, two stages of the development of Greek religion are traced. The third lecture, The failure of nerve, is a study of the period of decline between Plato and the neo-Platonists. The final lecture, the last protest, considers the brief revival under Julian the apostate. Following these the author gives in full a translation of a little-known text, a treatise by Salustius, "On the gods and the world."

"Scholarly essays."

+ A L A Bkl 9:438 Je '13

"Fascinating book. The reader will not be disturbed by these criticisms, which we make rather out of respect for the author and his great subject than by way of detracting from the merits of his book."

+ — Ath 1913,1:152 F 8 1000w

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 1200w

"It is delightfully clear and intelligible, as well as provocatively suggestive, and will amply repay thoughtful perusal."

+ Dial 55:53 Jl 16 '13 350w

"Every student or lover of Greek culture or of the history of religion will need to read these lectures."

+ Ind 74:763 Ap 3 '13 750w

"In view of Mr. Murray's intimate frankness it may not seem unsuitable to describe the book itself as the latest protest against orthodoxy and athelism alike."

+ Nation 96:618 Je 19 '13 1550w

+ N Y Times 18:533 O 12 '13 750w

+ N Y Times 18:677 N 30 '13 380w

"It is in the next chapter, 'The Olympian conquest,' that we have the book at its most characteristic, at its best. We thank Professor Murray for a wise and wholly lovable book, a book full of the writer's favorite virtue Sophrosyne, a Sophrosyne sweetened and salted always by the saving grace of humour."

+ Spec 110:401 Mr 8 '13 1450w

MURRAY, JOHN HUBERT PLUNKETT. Papua; or, British New Guinea; with an introd. by Sir W. MacGregor. 11 *$3.75 Scribner 12-29306

"Mr. Murray begins with a careful geographical account of the British province, followed by a history of the island from the age of the first explorers, an exhaustive account of the native tribes, of the methods under which the Australian officers administer justice, and of the progress in developing the resources of the country. The book is provided with a fairly adequate map and a good series of photographs."—Nature

"Of most absorbing interest are the chapters dealing minutely with the native life and customs. Interesting illustrations."

+ A L A Bkl 9:331 Ap '13

+ Ath 1912,2:552 N 9 50w

Nation 96:601 Je 12 '13 300w

"The book may be safely recommended as an instructive account of some of the wildest races in the empire."

+ Nature 90:544 Ja 16 '13 330w

"The best and most illuminating things in the book, notwithstanding the mass of valuable information it contains, are the casual remarks the author lets drop frequently."

+ N Y Sun p6 D 7 '13 130w

"The book is much more comprehensive than any of the other Papuan publications, which as a rule deal each with some aspect of Papuan life instead of presenting a general survey of the island and its people."

+ N Y Times 18:119 Mr 2 '13 80w

Sat R 115:85 Ja 18 '13 50w

MURRAY, MARGARET ALICE. Ancient Egyptian legends. (Wisdom of the East ser.) *60c Dutton 13-6081

This "is not a translation or a compendium, as most of the volumes are, but a retelling in story form of the traditions derived from monuments and from books. The Egyptian train of thought is preserved, but the story is made intelligible to the general reader, while notes are provided for students."—N Y Sun

"Miss Murray tells us in her preface that she has 'told them in her own way, adhering strictly to the story'; yet we find the stories of Setna, of the birth of Hatshepsut, and the history of Osiris so bowdlerized that much of the point is lost. We think Miss Murray would have done better, in imitating the greatest living Egyptologist than in following the guides she seems to have chosen."

— Ath 1913,1:127 F 1 320w

"Nowhere else have these charming legends been presented in so readable a form."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 2 '13 170w

Ind 74:1150 My 22 '13 50w

"It is a very interesting addition to folklore literature."

+ N Y Sun p12 Ap 19 '13 80w

N Y Times 18:357 Je 15 '13 100w

+ — Spec 110:200 F 1 '13 120w

MUSGROVE, CHARLES D. Nervous breakdowns and how to avoid them. *$1 (2c) Funk

The chapter headings of this book suggest the inclusiveness of the author's treatment: Breakdowns; Danger signal; Health; Value of health; Rewards and penalties; Human engine, and how to stoke it; What to eat; How to eat food; How much food to take; When to take food; Fresh air; Exercise; Baths and bathing; Rest; Sleep; Holidays; Recreation, hobbies; Work; Worry; The strong man.

"The author handles his subject understandingly and presents his conclusions convincingly."

+ N Y Times 18:648 N 23 '13 40w

MYERS, GUSTAVUS. History of the Supreme court of the United States. $2 Kerr 12-14453

"Mr. Myers has here, in a spacious volume, given the history of the Supreme court of the United States as he sees it. He presents a comprehensive history of the development of capitalist resources, power and tactics, and of the great and continuing conflict of classes, in order to show the influences so persistently operating upon the minds and acts of the justices of the Supreme court throughout its entire history." (Ann Am Acad) His "method of work is to study first the recommendations of each judge when he was appointed to office, then to study the reports of special committees of Congress investigating matters that afterward came before the court for settlement, and finally to follow up the history of the great suits that have been determined by the court. . . . The result of Myers' work, however, is whole condemnation of the court." (Am J Soc)

"This is a valuable book notwithstanding the dogmatic viewpoint and the plain purpose of the author to condemn the Federal Supreme court as simply a tool of the interests. Inferences are drawn, conclusions set down which are unjust sometimes to the characters under consideration. Aside from this the work is of great value. Its bold presentations and analysis of evidence seldom used, its short histories of the judges, of the party affiliations and business connections are all of utmost importance to him who wants to know the truth and where to find it in case of need. What the reviewer warns the reader or the librarian against is the conclusions oft times drawn, the inferences and interpretations." W: E. Dodd.

+ — Am J Soc 19:124 Jl '13 650w

"While suggestive, the volume as a whole leaves one strongly with the impression that Laborite socialism enjoys too recent a revelation to fit its devotees for the task of writing history as that task is conventionally conceived." E: T. Corwin.

— + Am Pol Sci R 7:500 Ag '13 1150w

Ann Am Acad 49:255 S '13 350w

MYERS, PHILIP VAN NESS. History as past ethics. *$1.50 Ginn 13-7341

This book "is an expansion of a course of lectures given for several years to my advanced classes in history, and is designed as a brief introduction to the history of morals. In treating the science of morals as a branch of history my thought is, without trenching in the least upon the domain of the philosophy of morals, to make the work of the department of history more helpfully introductory than it has hitherto been to that of the department of moral philosophy. The book is the outgrowth of a conviction that the philosophy of ethics, if it shall become a stimulus and guide to social service and humanitarian effort . . . must be based on a knowledge of the facts of the moral life of the race in all the various stages of the historic evolution."—Preface

+ — A L A Bkl 10:22 S '13

Am Pol Sci R 7:473 Ag '13 120w

"It is difficult to determine at one reading whether teachers of history or of ethics will find the book of greatest service. It will undoubtedly be suggestive and stimulating to both."

+ Ann Am Acad 49:246 S '13 200w

MYERS, PHILIP VAN NESS—Continued.

"Teachers of both history and ethics should find this book not only helpful, but also inspiring."

+ Ath 1913,1:590 My 31 100w

— Ind 75:337 Ag 7 '13 90w

"The author's thesis is in praiseworthy harmony with the sociological attitude of to-day, but it is to be doubted whether this book is a successful presentation of that thesis." R. S. Bourne.

— + J Philos 10:641 N 6 '13 550w

"The theoretical part cannot be accounted original, nor very convincing; it is, indeed, not quite consistent, a circumstance which seems to arise from the fact that Mr. Myers has taken, for his purpose, ideas from many sources which do not always fit neatly together. In spite of his theorizing, Mr. Myers's book will doubtless have its uses."

— + Nation 97:17 J1 3 '13 300w

"No one is better equipped than Dr. Myers to interpret for us the ethical movement of history."

+ R of Rs 48:251 Ag '13 220w

N

NASSAU, REV. ROBERT HAMILL. In an elephant corral, and other tales of West African experiences. *$1 Neale 13-1062

"The work of a missionary, but not about mission work. He recounts vacation experiences of travel and hunting in the wilderness of the Gaboon country, many years ago, when that region and its natives were even wilder than present, and gives, by the way, much legendary material of interest to folklorists." —Ind

"One judges that few copies will ever need rebinding or the medical assistance of the paste-pot. The stories are given in such flatness of spirit that they neither stimulate our imagination nor satisfy our sense of the practical. The general style is not worthy of discussion—one wishes it were better, or worse. 'In an elephant corral' is indeed harmless; it is also virtually without use."

— Boston Transcript p24 Mr 12 '13 130w

+ Ind 74:826 Ap 10 '13 130w

"An extremely interesting miscellany. As in his other books, the author has the knack of showing things just as they are."

+ N Y Sun p4 F 8 '13 80w

"One of the best things in his book is the account of his gorilla hunts."

+ N Y Times 18:273 My 4 '13 70w

"This book is more suitable for adult readers than for children."

+ R of Rs 47:509 Ap '13 70w

NEALE, WALTER, comp. Masterpieces of the southern poets. *$1 Neale

"Mr Neale announces in his preface that it 'is not meant to be a comprehensive anthology,' but 'to comprise mainly selections from those lyric masterpieces of the southern poets that are a part of the living literature of the world.' Out of the work of more than a thousand southern writers he has chosen 143 selections by fifty poets."—Boston Transcript

"Mr. Neale has given us in delightfully convenient and artistic form a charming little collection of poems. We miss Alicia Van Buren's tender and sympathetic songs, which though simple and unpretentious are like mountain rills. And can it be that Cale Young Rice is a prophet without honor. Louisville should arise in her wrath and protest against the cruel discrimination." N. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 F 15 '13 450w

Ind 74:873 Ap 17 '13 480w

+ — N Y Sun p8 F 8 '13 100w

+ R of Rs 47:631 My '13 70w

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 170w

NEARING, SCOTT. Social religion: an interpretation of Christianity in terms of modern life. *$1 (2½c) Macmillan 13-1915

The book gives the substance of an address delivered by Dr. Nearing before the Friends' general conference at Ocean Grove in July, 1910. "It contains a startling array of facts with respect to the prevalence of ignorance, poverty, and vice, and a sharp call to the church to 'cease dogmatizing' and to give the country a religion that will meet the demands of the day." (N Y Times)

"A good book to arouse the apathetic, but of no constructive value."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:383 My '13

+ Ath 1913,1:306 Mr 15 80w

"As a study of the social world in which we live, Mr. Nearing's book has no uncertain value. It will be of service to ministers, lecturers, and social workers who are dealing with these vital questions." L: Wallis.

+ Bib World 41:282 Ap '13 1000w

"The author has marshalled his case against modern society well and succinctly, with an abundance of telling illustration and sound information. The book is a useful compendium of effective facts which a reformer might well carry in his pocket."

+ Dial 54:308 Ap 1 '13 150w

N Y Times 18:89 F 23 '13 180w

Outlook 103:734 Mr 29 '13 150w

"This volume has both the interest and the fault of oral utterance—intensity of feeling and disproportion in statement. On the social side of every subject discussed, it is the one-sided plea of an advocate before a supposedly uninformed and unconvinced, if not indifferent, jury of church people. On the religious or church aspect of each subject it is a protest against the indifference of the church, everywhere taken for granted, from which appeal is taken to the ideals of the religion of Christ. On both sides criticism abounds without trace of the critical method in reaching conclusions or citing statistics to support them." Graham Taylor.

— + Survey 29:904 Mr 29 '13 600w

NEEDHAM, HENRY BEACH. Divorcing Lady * Nicotine; getting the upper hand of the smoking habit. *35c Forbes 13-7616

"The author puts forward in light narrative form a plea for the discontinuance of the tobacco habit, and quotes his own experiences as an example." (Ath)

Ath 1913,1:468 Ap 26 70w

"The struggle . . . is here related humorously, yet with the serious purpose of encouraging other men who have made the fatal vow."

+ Chaut 71:61 Je 21 '13 50w

"We can discern little that will help others to give up the habit in the little book; the author's experience must be interesting chiefly to himself."

— N Y Sun p12 Ap 19 '13 50w

N Y Times 18:390 J1 6 '13 80w

NEESER, ROBERT WILDEN, Landsman's log; with an introd. by C: J. Badger. il *$2 (6½c) Yale univ. 13-5454

"This book records the observations and impressions formed by a civilian during a winter's cruise with the Atlantic fleet. It is a journal of what a fleet does in times of peace to maintain its efficiency, a record of what it accomplishes when off parade." (Preface) The record is written in the form of a log, presenting an account of each day's occurrences. The cruise extended from January 5 to April 28.

"An admirable book of its kind, at once agreeable in style and informing, and pervaded by the enthusiasm which often characterizes accounts of pleasant personal experiences."

+ A L A Bkl 9:439 Je '13 *

"Aside from its value in throwing real light on the work of the navy, it is a very interesting tale of the sea."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 18 '13 380w

"Some of these [statistical] items might need correction to bring them up to date."

+ — Dial 54:346 Ap 16 '13 420w

+ Nation 97:38 Jl 10 '13 230w

"The book gives an accurate idea of life on a battleship, of the duties of every man on board and of the ship's routine. Instructive as it is, it is not a mere didactic description, but an enthusiastic account of personal experiences."

+ N Y Sun p8 Ap 5 '13 130w

+ N Y Times 18:300 My 18 '13 50w

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ap 3 '13 420w

NETHERSOLE, SUSIE COLYER. Wilsam.
* $1.35 (1c) Macmillan 13-10048

"Goods driven ashore when no wreck or ship is visible, hence called goods of God's mercy"; such is the definition given of the word that forms the book's title, and it is of such a piece of wreckage—a little girl rescued from the waves in a storm, to become indeed "goods of God's mercy" to her finders—that the story is told. It is a story of the Kentish coast and of Kentish hop fields, a story of peasant life, with many and varied characters.

"Many people will find it depressing although it is full of high ideals and steady courage in the face of sorrow and trial."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:36 S '13

"Undeniably a work of considerable promise; but the fulfilment is yet to come." F; T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 37:538 Jl '13 800w

"With all its many shortcomings, 'Wilsam' is obviously the work of a novelist who is bound to find herself." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 14 '13 950w

"It is a rare book; one of the occasional books that stir readers, for their good and for their purification."

+ — Ind 75:273 Jl 31 '13 600w

"The spirit of the book, as a whole, is enervating rather than bracing; it lacks the robust constitution of great fiction."

— Nation 96:547 My 29 '13 450w

+ — N Y Sun p3 My 31 '13 330w

"He or she who seeks intellectual refreshment in a modern story wherein truth to nature is vividly set forth in the language of the imagination—human nature interpreted in terms of art—will find here a rare treasure. Like most novels that linger long in the memory, 'Wilsam' is strong in its 'local color' and in its minute portrayals of rugged, primitive characters."

+ N Y Times 18:301 My 18 '13 850w

+ Outlook 104:261 My 31 '13 230w

"The method which the author has selected for the writing of this story is a little irritating, as the 'point of view' from which each chapter is written has to be discovered by the reader from the title of the said chapter."

— Spec 110:764 My 3 '13 220w

"Few of the recent novels—in fact, few of the novels of a span of years—are so well worth reading as 'Wilsam.'"

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 500w

"Is an exceptionally appealing realistic study of homely country life."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 11w

NEUMAN, BERMAN PAUL. Simon Brandin.
* $1.20 Doran

"It is the story of a Russian Jew who, after seeing his entire family massacred, escaped as a boy to America, became a millionaire at the age of thirty, and, at the opening of the story, is in London actively directing a nihilistic movement on a gigantic scale. One closes the book with a sort of nightmare impression of kidnappings and bomb-throwing and assassinations and a choice assortment of other horrors. And through them all Simon Brandin is slowly being weaned away from his blood-thirsty plans of vengeance by a young Jewish girl whom he has befriended and who eventually teaches him the greatest power in the world is not vengeance, but love."—Bookm

"Did it emanate from a young and unknown hand, we should have welcomed it as a work of promise, but from Mr. Neuman we can only regard it as a hurried and consequently none too well-constructed, effort."

— Ath 1912:2:309 S 21 50w

"It does seem a pity that an author who has it in him to do such admirable work as that contained in 'Roodles' should waste his energies on what at best is little more than cheap melodrama." F; T. Cooper.

— Bookm 37:207 Ap '13 200w

"The story is generally well-written."

+ — Boston Transcript p10 My 1 '13 380w

"It is the study of the hero's white-hot rage of the heart out of which grow the red revolutionaries of Russia that gives the book its chief distinction. As a story it is rather scrappy in its conception, and is not worked out along dramatic lines nor by a natural development."

+ — N Y Times 18:280 My 11 '13 300w

"There are plots and counterplots, spies, bombs, and assassinations in the book, which is redeemed by the impressive figure of the hero, Simon Brandin."

+ — Spec 109:1020 D 14 '12 120w

NEWELL, FREDERICK HAYNES, and MURPHY, DANIEL WILLIAM. Principles of irrigation engineering, arid lands, water supply, storage works, dams, canals, water rights and products. il $3 McGraw 13-10681

A book on irrigation for advanced students and engineers. "As the work is limited to one volume, all elementary subjects, such as flow of water, etc., have been excluded and only a broad survey of the principles of irrigation engineering is given, in as simple and concise a form as possible. The subject matter has also been arranged so that even persons without a thoroughly technical knowledge of hydraulics may read it with profit." (Engin Rec)

"The text is well written and the illustrations serve their purpose admirably. It is to be recommended to engineers and students desiring a broad view of the principles involved in considering planning, constructing and operating irrigation systems."

+ Engin Rec 68:532 N 8 '13 400w

+ Outlook 104:721 Jl 26 '13 60w

NEWLIN, KATHARINE. Penelope intrudes.
* $1.25 Cassell 12-40661

The story of an American girl who visits some English cousins, overcomes their prejudices and finally wins their affections. "The American standpoint is throughout adopted, but that spirit of militant patriotism which can recognize no failings on one side of the Atlantic, and no good qualities on the other, is entirely avoided."

"Interesting for girls, in its contrast of English and American temperament."

+ A L A Bkl 9:172 D '12

"A vivacious and amusing story."

+ Ath 1911:2:730 D 9 60w

NEWMAN, JOHN HENRY, cardinal. Sermon¹⁰ notes of John Henry Cardinal Newman, 1849-1878; ed. by Fathers of the Birmingham oratory. il *$1.75 Longmans 13-35655

"These 'Notes' cover nearly thirty years of Newman's experience as a preacher after leaving Anglicanism and entering the Roman Catholic church. . . . While Newman was in the Church of England, he read his sermons. After his entrance into the Church of Rome, his practice was to speak extemporaneously, and then go to his study, directly after the service and make running notes of the discourse. In this way the material in the present book originated. . . . These 'Notes' begin with 1849, and are thoroughly impregnated with the spirit of Romanism. Most of them are expository. Some are polemical, e.g., 'Causes which keep men from Catholicity,' 'Prejudice as a cause why men are not Catholic,' 'The world hating the Catholic church.'"—Bib World

A L A Bkl 10:22 S '13

"These notes provide a valuable index to the preacher's mind, while they are in themselves eminently readable as epitomized sermons."

+ Ath 1913,1:379 Ap 5 80w

"The volume is not one that will have a large circulation; yet it has value for several types of mind, homiletical, historical, and dogmatic, in many denominations. While this material will not induce Protestants to follow in the footsteps of Newman, it ought to do something toward softening the hard spirit with which the Roman church is regarded by many outsiders; and it will help to make more intelligible the character of the gifted author of 'Lead kindly light.'"

+ Bib World 42:61 Jl '13 220w

NICHOLAS, ANNA. Making of Thomas Barton. *$1.25 (2c) Bobbs 13-9289

A group of short stories, many of them picturing Hoosier life and character. The titles are: The making of Thomas Barton; A race drama; A Hawburg sensation; Miss Lucyanna's eventful day; Out of the past; When grandmother ran away; A bit of human interest; What could he do? A story without a moral; Was it all a dream? The eternal feminine; An ever-present help; The post-mistress; Katharine Clark's story.

"They are slight but well written and have a nice bit of humor and cheerful optimism."

+ A L A Bkl 10:70 O '13

"Pleasant, commonplace little tales, not especially striking, but indicating that the author is a close observer of human nature and that she is capable of showing to others what she sees."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Jl 16 '13 150w

"The short stories are pleasant reading."

+ N Y Sun p4 My 10 '13 200w

"An interesting collection."

+ N Y Times 18:502 S 28 '13 170w

NICHOLSON, MEREDITH. Otherwise Phyllis.¹⁰ il *$1.35 (1c) Houghton 13-18956

Phil, otherwise Phyllis, the heroine of this story is a warm-hearted tom-boy who grows up in an Indiana town where everybody knows everybody and where the Athenaeum lecture course with the speaker introduced by the Presbyterian minister is the main feature of a winter's calendar. For this is another hoosier chronicle, and many characters of greater and lesser importance enter into the story. A dramatic touch is added by the sudden return of Phil's mother, who should have come as a repentant prodigal but who came instead as a beautiful, triumphant and self possessed woman of the world.

+ A L A Bkl 10:118 N '13 ✕

Ath 1913,2:381 O 11 130w

"Once again, Mr. Nicholson has given evidence of that keen discernment, that shrewd understanding of character, and that unsuspected seriousness of purpose first revealed in 'A Hoosier chronicle.'" F. T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 38:200 O '13 380w

"It is as a chronicler of the trivial and the minute that Mr. Nicholson excels, and in 'Otherwise Phyllis' he has surpassed not only himself but also the storytellers and chroniclers of American life who are growing more and more numerous with astonishing rapidity."

+ Boston Transcript p20 S 10 '13 250w

"The way in which Mr. Nicholson steers clear of sloppy sentiment deserves our profound gratitude. The quality of matter-of-factness attaches to this story throughout, and this is what makes its art so genuine." W. M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:361 N 1 '13 470w

+ Ind 76:95 O 9 '13 70w

+ Lit D 47:694 O 13 '13 150w

"Frankly, whether the reader finds charm in the story as a whole will depend upon his relish for the middle western idea of maidenly fasnation."

+ Nation 97:287 S 25 '13 500w

"The book is written in a crisp, agreeable style, and this study of Lois makes it a little something more than a pleasant story."

+ N Y Times 18:497 S 28 '13 400w

+ N Y Times 18:666 N 30 '13 250w

"Phyllis's mother is skillfully but not convincingly drawn; one feels that her offense rests too lightly on her. Otherwise the story is thoroughly sound in its moral discrimination."

+ Outlook 105:279 O 4 '13 450w

NICOLL, SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON. Problem of Edwin Drood. *$1.25 Doran (Eng ed A13-337)

"This 'study' is the result of a 'prize competition' that has been going on in Sir Robertson Nicoll's paper, The British Weekly, and contains the author's analysis of the various theories which have been advanced as to the probable ending of Dickens's unfinished novel, 'The mystery of Edwin Drood.' To this controversy Sir Robertson adds certain discoveries which he has just made in the original proof-sheets of the novel, showing that the text of the latter as we have it is not the text intended by Dickens." (N Y Times) "The sum and substance . . . is that Dickens's last hero was murdered by John Jasper, that Helena Lawless was the impersonator of the bewigged Datchery, and that the opium woman was a sister, a cousin or an aunt to one of the other characters. The statements and the arguments by which Dr. Nicoll elaborates these theories extend through some two hundred discursive pages that are not without their interest to the lover of Dickens and to the many who take pleasure in the pursuit of elusive literary mysteries." (Boston Transcript)

A L A Bkl 9:331 Ap '13

"His book is a real contribution to the subject. The present reviewer regards it as an entirely satisfactory strengthening of the best views concerning the two main issues of the story."

+ Ath 1912, 2: 516 N 2 700w

"The book's great achievement, indeed, is that it does not depend for its interest by any means exclusively upon the discovery of 'x' in the matter of the specific solution of the Edwin Drood mystery." T. Secombe.

+ Bookm 36:662 F '13 2000w

"It is in its concluding chapters that Sir William Nicoll's book is most valuable, for his analysis of the story is one of the best and most closely reasoned that has appeared anywhere." B. E. Stevenson.

+ Bookm 37:314 My '13 400w

Boston Transcript p11 D 14 '12 850w

"Badly arranged and wasteful of time and words. But since it brings into a single volume a large amount of material both positive and conjectural we may thank its author for it in spite of his shortcomings." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p27 D 18 '12 800w
+ Nation 96:60 Ja 16 '13 800w

"The inferences drawn are logical and fair; it is an admirable piece of work in its way, but the problem seems as far from solution at the end as it was before and the author's labor seems futile."

+ — N Y Sun p 8 D 14 '12 90w
N Y Times 17: 749 D 1 '12 110w

Outlook 103:47 Ja 4 '13 80w

"All that we are likely ever to know of the projected ending of Dickens' last and unfinished novel has been summed up clearly and capably."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 27 '13 1450w

NIKTO, VERA, pseud. Mere woman. *$1.25
Appleton 13-11034

A Russian woman, married young to a dissipated army officer, divorces her husband and returns to her father's home. A clandestine affair with a second man, Vadim Orloff, also an officer, is followed by a marriage that makes her a princess. "The rest of the story leads back to Vadim, who, coming into her life again, finds her present inaccessibility an unsuspected stimulation, and he and she and the husband, Prince Boris, play a little game that leads to death—Vadim's. The final page leaves Sonia after the fatal shot under her husband's imperious, significant gaze, lifting a hand that scarcely trembled, to move a pawn in the simple game of chess she was playing with her husband."

"We are accustomed to the modern novel of Russian society which presents a succession of sensuous episodes, culminating in a revolver shot and somebody's death. 'A mere woman' shows little variation from the type."

— Ath 1913,1:489 My 3 80w

"Futility is the philosophy that lies on every page of this book. But it is not greatly done, and it leaves merely irritation at human weaknesses rather than a sense of the eternal pathos of human life."

— Bookm 37:466 Je '13 350w

"The story gives the impression of being based on real life."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '13 400w

"The book is written with unusual ability."

+ N Y Times 18:568 O 19 '13 260w

"This is a plain and simply-written book, which opens in a manner that at once engages the reader's attention, and proceeds in the course of the next few pages to justify amply the expectations of interest aroused at the start. The end of the book is unsatisfactory, and is even poorly narrated."

+ — Sat R 115:621 My 17 '13 600w

NORGATE, KATE. Minority of Henry the Third. *$2.75 Macmillan 13-1872

"In this careful study of an important period in English history Miss Norgate continues the work begun long ago in her 'History of the Angevin kings' and carried on later in her 'John Lackland.' There is no trace of the spectacular in Miss Norgate's method whether she is dealing with the passage of events or with the elucidation of character. One need not look in her pages for masterly or splendid portraiture, or for fascinating historical settings to such portraiture. . . . Accuracy is felt by her to be of prime importance, and we never find her sacrificing it in order to present us with a brilliantly colored picture of events or florid portrait of some great leader in war or diplomacy."—Boston Transcript

"The narrative is sober, straightforward, and very careful, based on a wide study of all the available printed material, and may be declared with confidence to be the most thorough study of the period yet made." G. B. Adams.

+ — Am Hist R 18:792 Jl '13 700w

"This is an eminently sane, careful, and scholarly piece of work. May we, in conclusion, suggest a few emendations of detail?"

+ — Ath 1912,2:372 O 5 550w

"In the present volume we have much excellent writing. Always dignified, her style on occasion rises to real impressiveness, and one gains from her latest effort a clear and comprehensive idea of England as she appeared during the eventful minority of the engaging but yielding son of the unloved John."

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 30 '12 220w

"With the same scrupulous regard for accuracy and exact detail which characterized her biography of King John, Miss Kate Norgate has continued her minute examination of early thirteenth-century English history."

+ Nation 96:527 My 22 '13 270w

"Miss Norgate puts before us a stirring and dramatic scene, as vivid and picturesque as a book of Froissart. The accounts of the sieges of Lincoln and Dover are exceedingly well done. Most skilful and interesting are the sketches of the leading actors, among whom the Earl of Pembroke is pre-eminent by his character and chivalry."

+ Spec 110:406 Mr 8 '13 850w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN. Poor, dear Margaret Kirby, and other stories. 1l *$1.30 (1c) Macmillan 13-1637

The dozen and a half stories that make up the contents of this book were written at different times and are now collected from the several magazines in which they have seen publication; but all are much alike in spirit, and are akin, too, to the author's first success, "Mother." The first is the story of a woman who, having lost wealth, retires from society to live in a country district, happy with husband and children, but who is always referred to by commiserating friends as "poor dear Margaret Kirby."

+ A L A Bkl 9:300 Mr '13 +

"May be safely recommended for the 'jeune fille.'"

+ Ath 1913,1:304 Mr 15 50w

"The author has method, form, an eye for values, and other technical attributes which establish her authorship above her feelings. The stories in 'Poor, dear Margaret Kirby' have entertaining, plausible plots, told briefly yet not hurriedly, usually with skill and ease; the title story is the chief exception and is unfortunately placed in the book."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '13 370w

"The whole book is a cheerful message of peace and happiness to the true modern woman."

+ Cath World 97:399 Je '13 200w

"We do not know what book of short stories we would feel like naming as better, if a friend asked for a book to help the tedium of a journey."

+ Ind 74:704 Mr 27 '13 70w

"If these tales are tracts, they are tracts in the best sense, presented with skill and inspired by real feeling."

+ Nation 96:390 Ap 17 '13 300w

"As pleasant and entertaining a collection of short stories as we have come across in a long while."

+ N Y Sun p3 F 8 '13 130w

"Some of the stories are delightful, and some are well-nigh maudlin in their tone; some of them are bits of clever observation, sunny good humor, and well-sustained faith in human nature; a few strain sentimentality beyond the limits of human possibility or common sense. But, for the most part, the little narratives are entertaining, wholesome, and readable."

+ — N Y Times 18:101 F 23 '13 220w

"A collection of excellently told short stories."

+ R of Rs 47:629 My '13 70w

+ Spec 110:932 My 31 '13 50w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN.—Continued.

"A collection of stories which are chiefly distinguished by a wholesome, healthful atmosphere of sentiment and humor."

+ Springfield Republican p6 Ap 24 '13
220w

NORRIS, WILLIAM EDWARD. Right honour-
12 able gentleman. *$1.35 Brentano's A13-1346

A story of English social and political life. Mr. Calthrop, the "honourable gentleman" has separated from his wife. The story deals with his relation with a young and beautiful widow who, with the best of intentions, tries to unite the hopelessly mismatched pair.

"The characters are not all successful, but include a good study of a shrewd country squire. Mr. Norris's writing is easy and accomplished."

+ Ath 1913,1:282 Mr 8 120w

"Mr. Norris draws his figures exceedingly well, and if one may strain a point and admit that the situation he describes is possible, his people may be regarded as real persons of interest, and most of them of attractive type."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '13 270w

"There is not much plot to 'The right honourable gentleman' and few characters for whom the reader will care, but the conversation is easy and agreeable and there is enough to hold the attention."

+ N Y Sun p4 Ap 26 '13 110w

"The story presents the characteristics which have become associated with the author's name. Its well-sustained interest is preserved to the end, but the plot is developed in so quiet a manner as to make all the incidents fall into their places in a background against which the well-considered characters stand out in relief."

+ N Y Times 18:576 O 26 '13 270w

"Written with Mr. Norris's much-appreciated ease and experience."

+ Spec 110:932 My 31 '13 20w

NORTHRUP, EDWIN FITCH. Methods of 5 measuring electrical resistance. il *$4 Mc-
Graw 13-518

"The author 'has selected for presentation all those methods which in his judgment are useful, for commercial tests and measurements, for purposes of instruction in educational institutions and for application in technical and research laboratories. 'So we have collected in one book a large number of methods covering practically the entire field of electrical resistance measurements.' (Science) "In Appendix, various useful data are given, not the least valuable of which are collections of constants of galvanometers of different types and different makes, and of the resistivity of various elements and alloys." (Engin N)

"The plan of the book is eminently practical and adapted to the needs of the practitioner. The book will be useful to all who are interested in the principles, and practice of electrical measurements."

+ Elec World 61:896 Ap 26 '13 100w

"The book is of a very practical character and commends itself highly to engineers whose work brings them into touch with resistance problems. The long experience which the author has had, both as a designer and user of electrical instruments, enables him to speak with peculiar authority and with much commonsense on the various topics which he has treated." C. H. Sharp.

+ Engin N 69:540 Mr 13 '13 1150w

"The book will be welcomed by almost every one who uses resistance apparatus and galvanometers—by the men engaged in commercial testing because of the description of the methods suited to the needs and the good advice given in regard to the selection of apparatus for different kinds of work; by the instructor in our educational institutions because it constitutes a valuable reference book for him and his students; by the specialist because to him the author succeeds in a marked degree in giving the benefit of his wide experience in the design, construction, and use of resistance and electrical measuring apparatus." Frank Wenner.

+ Science ns37:562 Ap 11 '13 1200w

NORTON, CHARLES ELIOT. Letters of Charles 12 Eliot Norton; with biographical comment by his daughter, Miss Sara Norton, and M.
A. DeWolfe Howe. 2v il *$5 Houghton
13-22356

"In the course of his long and busy life Charles Eliot Norton came into warm friendship and close intercourse with a very large number of the great writers of America and England, and his letters are chiefly valuable because they contain curious facts and vital impressions concerning many of the immortals of the nineteenth century. . . . His list of intimates contains the names of Ruskin, Carlyle, the Brownings, Mrs. Gaskell, Clough, John Forster, Fitzgerald, Burne-Jones, Morris, Leslie Stephen, John Stuart Mill, Matthew Arnold, George Eliot, Goldwin Smith and many others of high rank in the literature and the intellectual life of England—and it may be remarked that with respect to these important folk Mr. Norton was not a mere hanger-on, but a friend among friends, cordially treated and highly esteemed."—N Y Times

Ath 1913,2:590 N 22 30w

"Readers on this side will turn most eagerly to those passages in which English affairs and personalities are described to American friends. They will not be disappointed. What is most interesting in the book is its reminiscences of a distinguished literary coterie, to which there is nothing at the present day either in England or America that quite corresponds."

+ Ath 1913,2:615 N 29 1400w

"In the best sense of those much abused words, this is emphatically the book of the year." P. F. Bicknell.

+ Dial 55:402 N 16 '13 1850w

"As for the work of the editors of these volumes it is sufficient to say that there is not a word of their own about Norton, nor is there a letter of his included, which would have given offence to his scrupulous taste in such matters; and, on the other hand, there is no evidence that anything has been omitted which is necessary to the understanding of the man and his position. Possibly the interest of the volumes would not have been diminished if an even stricter selection had been exercised in the earlier letters. He came to maturity late, and it is the gravity of his judgment more than any adventitious aids of fancy or cleverness that holds our attention."

+ Nation 97:529 D 4 '13 4000w

+ N Y Sun p7 N 1 '13 2000w

"The thread of 'biographical comment' in which these letters and extracts from journals are strung is in excellent taste. It explains and completes the rest of the text. The volumes, as a whole, are valuable and unique." E: Cary.

+ N Y Times 18:589 N 2 '13 2300w

"Norton's letters, written by an alert and sympathetic observer, contain remarkable pen portraits of his English friends."

+ N Y Times 18:673 N 30 '13 330w

NORTON, HENRY KITTREDGE. Story of 5 California. il *$1.50 (1½c) McClurg 13-16995

"The present work is the result of an endeavor to bring within the limits of one volume the narrative of all the important events which make up the history of the state of California, in order that it may be available to the many who have not the time nor the inclination to read through the vast amount of print which contains the record." The illustrations are from interesting old prints and there is a folding map. Statistics are given in the appendices.

+ Boston Transcript p9 S 27 '13 350w

"Mr. Norton is fortunate in holding little or no prejudice to distort his pages. Even so quarrel-provoking a topic as that of Frémont's asserted conquest is treated with a dispassion that makes further quarrelling needless. Nothing of consequence is omitted, and the tale is told smoothly and animatedly. The book is heartily commended to all who wish to satisfy themselves that this nation really borders upon two oceans."

+ Dial 55:413 N 16 '13 330w

+ Ind 75:578 S 4 '13 170w

"Mr. Norton has told the story of his state well, though perhaps the material deserves a more intensive treatment and a more careful study. But for the purposes of the present narrative 'The story of California' makes delightful and fascinating reading."

+ N Y Times 18:568 O 19 '13 780w

"A brief, clear review."

+ Outlook 104:874 Ag 16 '13 50w

"An excellent short history."

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 16 '13 630w

NOYE, EDWINE. Forest: an idyll of the woods. Ulbrich

In this dramatic nature poem "the motive is similar to that in La Motte-Pouqué's story of Undine. The spirit of the birch tree desires an immortal soul, and this is to be gained only by securing the kiss of a human being. She is called the Dryad, but is, rather, one of the hamadryads. With the gaining of her wish, she learns what suffering goes along with the possession of a conscience, the knowledge of good and evil."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p7 O 19 '12 180w

"The story is delicately and gracefully told."

+ Ind 73:794 O 3 '12 300w

"The whole plot is fresh, quaint, and full of imagination, and ought to work out well sometime with real actors on the boards."

+ Lit D 46:148 Ja 18 '13 150w

"A poetic little fantasy of delicate grace and charm. There are occasional lines which would have profited by more careful polishing."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 N 14 '12 450w

NOYES, ALFRED. Tales of the Mermaid tavern. *$1.35 Stokes 13-8385

In these nine long narrative poems the author recounts in stately blank verse and swinging rime the great deeds of the Elizabethan age. Ben Jonson, Shakespeare, Peele, Drayton, Sir Walter Raleigh, and other men of famous name appear at the Mermaid as tellers of or listeners to these tales. The titles are sufficiently enticing to invite a reading: A knight of the ocean-sea; A corner of angels; Black Bill's honey-moon; The sign of the Golden shoe; The companion of a mile; Big Ben; The burial of a queen; Flos mercatorum; Raleigh.

+ A L A Bkl 9:439 Je '13

"His volume as a whole, in spite of its many passages, of vivid insight and firm craftsmanship, cannot be accepted as faithfully mirroring the spirit of Elizabethan times."

+ — Ath 1913,1:691 Je 23 600w

Reviewed by Brian Hooker.

+ — Bookm 37:445 Je '13 1600w

"No novel of the present season can hold one's attention more absorbingly than these tales. In them romance and characterization is spun with a vigorous and enchanting skein of adventure, wit, good fellowship, tragedy and humor. Elizabethan England was never so embodied in romance as in the delineation of that great group of geniuses at the Mermaid tavern whom Mr. Noyes has made the heroes of his narrative." W: S. Braithwaite.

+ + Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '13 2100w

"Certainly, we have no other poet now living whose work can measure up to these 'Tales of the Mermaid tavern,' and no age of English poetry is so rich that it might not be proud to reckon this work among its greater glories." W: M. Payne.

+ + Dial 55:107 Ag 16 '13 1350w

+ Lit D 46:662 Mr 22 '13 1650w

+ — Nation 97:189 Ag 28 '13 680w

"Mr. Noyes has made the most of the material he has cleverly discerned, and there is breadth and bottom to this moving book of free and easy rhyme."

+ N Y Sun p14 Ap 26 '13 280w

"With 'Tales of the Mermaid tavern' Alfred Noyes takes his place undeniably and triumphantly among the masters of English literature. The prophecies of Swinburne and Edmund Gosse, made on the publication of his earlier works, are fulfilled. Not in this generation is the country of Wordsworth and Tennyson to lack a great poet." Joyce Kilmer.

+ + N Y Times 18:237 Ap 20 '13 1450w

+ N Y Times 18:670 N 30 '13 300w

"There is magic in his verse even if we cannot help feeling a lack of the substantial humanity which it so insistently professes to portray."

+ — No Am 197:361 Je '13 380w

"In this instance, however, Mr. Noyes must be judged by what he attempted, not what he accomplished. By such a standard, 'Tales of the Mermaid tavern' must be classed as a piece of unsuccessful bravado."

+ — Outlook 104:578 Jl 12 '13 300w

R of Rs 47:371 Mr '13 270w

+ — R of Rs 47:758 Je '13 700w

+ Sat R 116:176 Ag 9 '13 550w

"Mr. Noyes's verse is full of the essential quality of high poetry, and, greatly daring, he has greatly succeeded."

+ Spec 111:22 Jl 5 '13 900w

"However high be the just praise of it as poetry—and much of it is, at the least, very rare poetry indeed—here is unfolded an intensely rich and human drama filled with that spirit of great-hearted adventure which came to fruit in the literary masterpieces of the age no less than in the voyages and far discoveries of English seamen."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 8 '13 2200w

"Nothing so delightful has been written in verse for a long time, and the little volume which contains these tales of the Elizabethan age is blessed not only with beauty and variety but with that largeness of spirit which fits well with the true season of recreation."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 80w

NOYES, ELLA. Salisbury Plain. 1l *$3.50 Dutton 13-35740

"It is of Salisbury Plain, its stones, cathedral city, villages and folk that Ella Noyes writes, and her text is accompanied by a series of drawings in color and black and white that bring each scene strictly to the reader's eye."

... One picturesque scene after another confronts the reader as he turns the pages. Its fields and woods, its hills and valleys, its roads and water courses are visualized, and many great names and characters associated with it are made a part of Miss Noyes's story."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 10:61 O '13

"The author has devoted particular attention to the archaeological features of the district, while she is by no means blind to its picturesque side, and the combination of interests is at the same time entertaining and instructive. The coloured illustrations by Dora Noyes are for the most part happy in conception and execution."

+ Ath 1913,1:431 Ap 19 100w

Reviewed by Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 38:386 D '13 230w

Boston Transcript p7 S 3 '13 700w

+ Dial 55:481 D 1 '13 150w

NOYES, ELLA —Continued.

"Miss Noyes has, moreover, performed her task with exceptional ability, and the illustrations are as praiseworthy as the text." C: E. Hesselgrave.

+ Ind 76:509 D 11 '13 70w

"The best portions of the book are the descriptions of agricultural life and village customs."

+ Nation 97:214 S 4 '13 170w

"A book that will stand by itself for quiet charm, unflinching interest and intimate authenticity."

+ N Y Times 18:484 S 21 '13 700w

"Its size and detailed treatment make the volume perhaps better suited for the public library than for the private reader, unless the latter has a special individual interest in the subject; nevertheless, the beauty of the book as a book and the graphic narrative insure a reasonable amount of popular interest in the work."

+ Outlook 105:46 S 6 '13 100w

"Her descriptions, if imperfect, are honest, and a reader cannot well go through her three hundred pages—no easy task—without learning to feel respect and something more for her knowledge and devotion. Where we can test it, her work bears the mark of personal study of books and places, though, except at Salisbury cathedral, she does not aim at any kind of completeness in her study. She is least successful when her aim is to do more than give information."

+ — Sat R 115:749 Je 14 '13 730w

NOYES, FRANCES NEWBOLD. Mark. II
* $1.25 Clode, E: J. 13-3810

The author introduces her hero as a wholly unsophisticated youth brought up in Australia by a father and mother who kept from him all knowledge of the conventional world. As an inheritor of millions he comes to England and takes a place in its smartest society. "He begins by refusing an invitation to dinner extended to him by Lady Mordaunt, because he is too much interested in 'Ivanhoe' to bear to leave it. Then he goes to speak to a girl in white who attracts him, without waiting for the formality of an introduction. Nothing would have been easier than to have made this young person an insufferable prig. But Miss Noyes has done nothing of the kind. Instead, he proves really an 'enchanted creature,' as Lady Mordaunt expresses it." (N Y Times)

"The plot is so plainly a fantastic frame for the talk that it cannot be taken seriously, while the hero's end is an effective exit. It is a bright and readable book."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Mr 1 '13 150w

"Its faults are obvious, but they are healthy. It is crude in spots, but it is often delightfully spontaneous. The story fulfills its chief duty as a first novel, that, namely, of being most thoroughly promising. It does more than that. It proves distinctly entertaining, it moves with ease, and it holds your interest. You grumble a bit at its crude spots to be sure, and especially at the adventures in her green garments, flowing like water. But you chuckle even more often at its brightness, its flashes of wit, and at its freshness, where the writer forgets herself and allows it to be fresh."

+ — N Y Times 18:113 Mr 2 '13 850w

NUTTALL, MRS. G. CLARKE. Trees and how they grow; with fifteen autochromes by H. E. Corke. il *$2 Cassell

This book "consists of a series of pleasantly written articles on hardy trees, which are treated separately, and described from the picturesque or ornamental point of view. Special attention is directed to the structure of the flowers, methods of pollination, and the character of the fruits, and rather less to the leaves and other details. The economic uses of the timber are referred to, and in most cases the chapter ends with some references to folk-lore or quotations from early writers." —Ath

"The volume seems to require an Introduction to explain the principles of plant physiology, for there is nothing to inform the reader how trees obtain their food and assimilate it."

+ — Ath 1913,1:337 Mr 22 150w

"A readable and interesting account of a number of common trees." F. Cavers.

+ — Nature 91:344 Je 5 '13 350w

"It is seldom that the spirit of companionship with trees is so well revealed in a book designed primarily for general information as has been done in this volume."

+ N Y Times 18:267 My 4 '13 370w

"This popular account of our commonest trees by two well-known collaborators has much to recommend it. Fair botanic accuracy is combined with herbals and mythology. The book is a good proof that popular botany can be made readable and interesting without twaddle. The illustrations form an attractive feature."

+ — Spec 110:sup693 Ap 26 '13 200w

NYSTRÖM-HAMILTON, MRS. LOUISE. Ellen Key; her life and her work; auth. tr. from the Swedish by Mrs. A. E. B. Fries; with an introd. by Havelock Ellis. il *$1.25 Putnam 13-13082

"The author's aim in this little work is not to discuss Ellen Key's literary works, but 'to give a true picture of the woman.' The book is entirely the study of a personality. But so much of the subject's life has been work and so much of her personality is in her books that a major part of the biography is occupied with an account of her literary activities, because of the strong light which these throw upon her character. . . . One finds in this story of Ellen Key's upbringing explanation of many of the ideas for which she has become the recognized champion." —N Y Times

A L A Bkl 10:23 S '13

Ath 1913,2:sup396 O 11 30w

+ Ath 1913,2:452 O 25 50w

+ Boston Transcript p19 Ag 6 '13 1100w

+ Lit D 47:534 S 27 280w

"Mrs. Nyström-Hamilton's biography of Ellen Key throws some desired light upon the personality of this interesting woman, though as a whole it is rather unsatisfactory as a study of character and in information meagre and vague."

+ — Nation 97:239 S 11 '13 700w

"The details will be welcome to those who take Miss Key and her fellow Scandinavian seeresses seriously."

+ — N Y Sun p5 Je 14 '13 100w

"Will be gladly received by many readers interested in the feminist movement."

+ N Y Sun p15 Je 14 '13 70w

"The picture Louise Hamilton gives of Miss Key's personality is just, adequate, and very interesting."

+ N Y Times 18:394 Jl 13 '13 950w

"It will clear away some of the misconceptions regarding Ellen Key that have to a certain extent limited the influence of her words. The value of this 'Life' is chiefly that it stimulates interest in Ellen Key's books."

+ Outlook 104:578 Jl 12 '13 250w

R of Rs 48:117 Jl '13 100w

O

OBENCHAIN, ELIZA CAROLINE (CALVERT)
(ELIZA CALVERT HALL, pseud.). Book of hand-woven coverlets. il *$4 Little

12-25218

"Its ten agreeable chapters afford us a glimpse into the primitive times of the spinning-wheel and hand-loom; introduce to us the mountain weavers of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Kentucky, where indeed 'women are working at wheel and loom just as their great-great-grandmothers worked'; discuss the mysteries of coverlet designs and colors and names; touch on the historic and family associations of the 'storied coverlet'; and, finally, appeal to the reader to rescue and cherish any heirloom of the coverlet kind that may be lying unappreciated in attic or storeroom. Sixteen colored plates and forty-eight in half-tone present to the eye as many patterns of hand-woven coverlets."—Dial

"Very agreeable reading not only for lovers of bygone days but for anyone interested in the revival of this beautiful home industry."

+ A L A Bkl 9:192 Ja '13

"There are more than facts and comments in this book—there are poetry and imagination." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:530 Ja '13 200w

"The handicraftsman and the general reader alike will feel the charm of its pages." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 900w

"Even if, as she intimates, there still remains a vast unexplored domain of coverletlore, her book is still a considerable and a praiseworthy achievement."

+ Dial 53: 450 D 1 '12 350w

+ Lit D 45: 1143 D 14 '12 500w

+ Nation 96:138 F 6 '13 500w

N Y Sun p 6 N 2 '12 100w

N Y Times 17: 757 D 8 '12 80w

"Under this title we expect an array of accurate facts concerning the treasured coverlets of our great-grandmother's day that have recently been rescued from burial in attics and cedar chests. Nor are we disappointed."

+ Outlook 102: 818 D 14 '12 470w

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 9 '13 250w

O'CONNOR, ELIZABETH (PASCHAL) (MRS. THOMAS POWER O'CONNOR). Little Thank You. *$1.25 (3c) Putnam 13-1638

A Virginia story in which a sunny-hearted little lad holds the place of honor as leading character. Little Thank You's mother is left a widow at eighteen. Her struggle to earn a living for her son takes her away from the loved Virginia home to a northern city. Here she meets a man who wants to lift the responsibility from her shoulders, and it is Little Thank You whose intervention moves her to overcome her prejudice against a second marriage and listen to the dictates of her heart.

"'Little Thank You' is a nice enough child, in spite of his name."

+ — Ath 1912:2728 D 14 30w

"Mrs. O'Connor has by no means the naïveté which can make such a wallow of sentimentality seem her proper region, and she certainly knows better than to concoct ingeniously such an appalling saccharine structure."

+ — Bookm 37:467 Je '13 170w

"Mrs. O'Connor writes in a pleasant, pretty style with a faculty for appealing to sentiment without stooping to mawkish sentimentality."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 130w

"It is a sweet and sunny story, appealing to that which is best in our nature."

+ Lit D 47:482 S 20 '13 170w

"The pretty, sentimental phantasy is told with great charm."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Ap 19 '13 100w

ODD farmhouse, by the Odd farmwife. *$1.35 Macmillan 13-35656

"The odd farmhouse' is an old country place in County Kent, England. The identity of the 'Odd farmwife' is not revealed any further than the telling that she and her husband are Americans who take a vacation from literary work in this country by renting a small out-of-the-way place in the mother land. . . . Such discussion of matters that come within the scope of woman's observation and interest go to the making of a volume that will prove enjoyable to any reader who cares to get at the life of the English people without the trouble of going among them and sharing their perplexed thought on questions of the day."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 10:23 S '13

"The gifts of imagination and graceful expression are possessed in no small measure by the 'Farmwife.' Sometimes, also, we are conscious of lapses in taste. The few pieces of verse scattered through the volume are well above the average in distinction and technique."

+ — Ath 1913:1:327 Mr 22 600w

"The reader will find that the book has a distinct individuality."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 550w

+ Nation 97:311 O 2 '13 180w

"Interesting because of the novelty of the scenes described rather than from any very unusual merit in the way the subject of country life has been treated."

+ Outlook 104:263 My 31 '13 80w

"A delightful book."

+ R of Rs 47:761 Je '13 170w

ODELL, SAMUEL W. Princess Athura. II *$1.25 Crowell 13-4611

This is a romance of Persia in the sixth century B. C. It is the love story of Prince Darius Hystaspis, afterwards Darius the great, and Athura, daughter of Cyrus. The story opens with an account of the battle in which Cyrus meets his death, and thruout is filled with colorful incident.

OGDEN, GEORGE WASHINGTON. Home place. *$1.30 (1c) Harper 12-23703

Home place is a little street four blocks long in the heart of a city—any city it may have been. The dwellers of Home place number not only Mr. Burd, the blacksmith, with Mrs. Burd and the twins, Bolona and Bolena, but also the daughter of Thornwood the banker, estranged from her family since her marriage to Wainwright, the hopeful but not yet successful young author. The course of the story recounts the upward and downward careers of the Thornwoods and Wainwrights, and at the same time keeps pace with the fortunes of the Burd family, telling of the romance of Bo Burd and Tillie, the girl whose stage ambitions came to a disastrous end at an amateur night performance. It is a story of the people told with some cutting sarcasm at the expense of "society."

"A vigorous and interesting story."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Ja 11 '13 750w

OGG, FREDERIC AUSTIN. Governments of Europe. *$3 (1c) Macmillan 13-2442

The aim of this book, which, altho designed primarily as a college text book, should meet the demands of a much wider audience, is to promote the intelligent study of government. To this end the author provides description of the governmental systems of the countries of Europe, including the smaller states, such as Portugal, Switzerland, etc., with the larger. "In part the treatment is historical, as regards origin and growth; in part the constitutional conditions of the present day and the machinery of governments are considered." (Outlook)

Reviewed by W. F. Dodd.

+ — Am Hist R 19:174 O '13 600w

"A thorough and well proportioned work which contains a wealth of information and will facilitate the historical and comparative study of government, though it contributes nothing new."

+ A L A Bkl 10:23 S '13 †

OGG, FREDERIC AUSTIN—Continued.

"The scholarship of the book is admirable." Edgar Dawson.

+ Ann Pol Sci R 7:505 Ag '13 650w

+ Ann Am Acad 48:264 J1 '13 200w

"As far as we can see, Prof. Ogg is throughout the book merely writing up and condensing the statements and opinions of acknowledged authorities. His command of these is beyond criticism, but he has nothing to add to them. His book has little more personality than a time-table."

+ Ath 1913.1:402 Ap 12 150w

"Will prove serviceable for the general reader who wishes clear and concise accounts of how government is administered in the European states."

+ Dial 55:54 J1 16 '13 300w

"No other work comprises so much information on contemporary constitutional and political developments in different states. It is admirably thorough." G. B. H.

+ Eng Hist R 28:824 O '13 130w

"Particularly important because of its discussion of the most recent political developments in each of the countries and for its presentation of the smaller countries such as the Scandinavian and Iberian states, usually omitted in works of this kind."

+ Ind 75:337 Ag 7 '13 70w

"The work has been done with great care and may be trusted, whether the volume is used as a college text-book or more properly as a book of reference by those who have to deal with European politics."

+ N Y Sun p5 Ap 19 '13 170w

N Y Times 18:72 F 9 '13 110w

"Dr. Ogg has assembled the elements for his experiment, but he has omitted the crystallizing chemical. The very fact that the usual reader or student is not equal to the task which Dr. Ogg proposed to himself is cause for regret that he did not accomplish it. The writer who will do for constitutions what Savigny did for Roman law, and what has been done for comparative anatomy, comparative philology, and other sciences, has yet to appear."

+ N Y Times 18:124 Mr 9 '13 770w

"Covering so wide a field and dealing with so great a body of facts, the treatise achieves effectiveness only through unusual clearness of aim and an admirable sense of proportion. Yet few works are more genuinely informing than such a one as this, when it is really, as in the present case, what it professes to be."

+ No Am 197:712 My '13 350w

"This work is for the special student rather than for the general reader; but all readers can admire the scholarship, thoroughness, and wealth of information included."

+ Outlook 103:501 Mr 1 '13 100w

"A very painstaking, comprehensive, and useful compendium."

+ R of Rs 48:120 J1 '13 80w

O'GRADY, ALICE, and THROOP, FRANCES.

³ Story teller's book. *75c Rand 12-15223

For the convenience of the busy mother and teacher, this volume collects the best stories suitable for young children. Very simple tales, fairy tales, nature stories and humorous stories provide for many ages and many moods. "An introduction outlines the duty of the storyteller. The sources are varied, and close to child life in interest." (Lit D)

"Its handling is sincerely done." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1360 D 12 '12 30w

+ Lit D 45:1070 D 7 '12 50w

"Entertaining tales."

+ N Y Times 17:464 Ag 25 '12 30w

OHNET, GEORGES. Eagle's talon; adapted ⁴¹ from the French by Helen Meyer. il *$1.25 (2½c) Putnam 13-22214

The story takes place in the years following the French revolution, and the chief actors are a group of the Chouans who under Cadoudal had supported the king during the revolution. A beautiful and unprincipled woman spy is one of the characters most concerned in the working out of the plot; and the Bourbon conspiracy against Napoleon is the basis of most of the action. A series of dramatic episodes, ending in the execution of Cadoudal, make up the substance of the story.

O'KANE, WALTER COLLINS. Injurious insects; how to recognize and control them. il *$2 (2½c) Macmillan 12-26716

Part 1 of this work treats of The structure, habits, and classification of insects; part 2 of The methods of insect control, and part 3 describes Injurious insects with suggested means of prevention and extermination for each species described. The pests described in this part are grouped as follows: Pests of garden and field crops; Pests of orchard and small fruits; and Pests of the household, of stored products, and of domestic animals. Within the two first groups the insects are arranged according to the place where they are found at work.

"Contains a very large amount of authoritative information for the farmer, fruit-grower and truck gardener."

+ A L A Bkl 9:331 Ap '13

"But though its purview is not British, we scarcely know a better book on the subject of prevention and cure of insect depredations. The photographs in many cases are far more obscure and opaque than if the drawings of an entomological artist had been used."

+ Ath 1913.1:224 F 22 120w

"As a book to read, it is important; as a book to consult, it is indispensable."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Mr 29 '13 100w

"The book ought to prove of great service."

+ Ind 74:63 Ja 2 '13 80w

"The most striking feature of the book is the absence of the hackneyed illustrations borrowed from the old texts and from Federal and State bulletins. The book will prove of value to agriculturists as a 'finding list,' and may meet admirably the needs of some agricultural schools and 'short courses.'"

+ Nation 96:314 Mr 27 '13 450w

"A good book for farmers, stock raisers, dog owners, housekeepers, and all others who are apt to suffer through the operations of insect pests."

+ N Y Times 18:173 Mr 30 '13 60w

"Professor O'Kane's work is illustrated with 600 original photographs, which afford, in connection with the text, an entirely new presentation of a matter of the utmost importance to American agriculture."

+ R of Rs 47:379 Mr '13 90w

OLCOTT, CHARLES SUMNER. Country of ¹² Sir Walter Scott. il *$3 Houghton 13-20785

"After an introductory chapter on 'The making' of Sir Walter, Mr. Olcott successively carries us along the paths trodden by Scott and his characters from poem to poem and from novel to novel, closing with a final biographical chapter entitled, 'A successful life.' He makes his book something more than a mere itinerary of the Waverley novels, and he fills it with the plentiful legend and fact whose exhaustless store was at Scott's command."—Boston Transcript

"The chief value and charm of the volume is in the sixty photographs, excellently chosen and reproduced."

+ A L A Bkl 10:104 N '13

"To every reader of Scott, to every reader of English literature, Mr. Olcott's book will be indispensable." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 27 '13 1000w

Dial 55:481 D 1 '13 130w

Reviewed by C. E. Hesselgrave.

Ind 76:509 D 11 '13 110w.

"A good deal of human interest is mingled with the description of places, and the photographic illustrations are well taken and clearly reproduced. The book can be recommended as a good one in its kind."

+ Nation 97:464 N 13 '13 110w

"The book makes pleasant reading."

+ N Y Sun p4 S 27 '13 200w

OLCOTT, FRANCES JENKINS. Children's¹ reading. *$1.25 (2c) Houghton 12-27449

The author who has had wide experience as a children's librarian offers here sound advice to those whose privilege it is to guide the reading of children. To each chapter is appended a list of books and a more complete list is given in the appendix. All the books she recommends were "selected by standards based on Christian ethics, practical psychology, and the literary values of generally accepted good books." (Preface) Some of the subjects discussed are: The influence of good books; Some modern conditions and the effects of bad books; Children's interests; Ways of guiding reading; Some classics and standards; Fiction of to-day; Useful books; Religious books.

"A very readable and trustworthy guide for parents."

+ A L A Bkl 9:199 Ja '13 +

"The teacher and librarian as well as the parent, will find it very convenient to have so much information of a practical nature in a single volume. It is a mine of information published in attractive form." Irene Warren.

+ El School T 13:406 Ap '13 300w

"Miss Olcott has written just the treatise all parents and teachers should have."

+ Ind 73: 1360 D 12 '12 60w

"A short notice can do no justice to such a book. No responsible parent can find a legitimate excuse for not buying this serviceable guide."

+ Lit D 45: 1078 D 7 '12 150w

"Answers sensibly a large number of questions that are frequently asked by parents."

+ Nation 96:553 My 29 '13 100w

"It is a conscientious piece of work helped out with many useful classified lists of books. These, we fancy, will be of greater assistance to librarians than to parents, unless the latter have intelligence and knowledge enough to pick out what their individual young ones really want."

+ N Y Sun p 13 N 30 '12 90w

"The little volume is a sane, thoroughgoing analysis of the entire field of juvenile literature."

+ N Y Times 17: 748 D 1 '12 100w

+ Outlook 102: 864 D 21 '12 130w

OLCOTT, FRANCES JENKINS, comp. Story-telling poems. *$1.25 Houghton 13-23428

This volume of poems is adapted for story-telling, reading aloud and for the children's own reading. "The rhymes and poems are selected for their story-telling qualities, for their lively interest to children, for their humorous, imaginative, and ethical values, and as far as possible, for their literary form." A subject index, index to first lines, index to titles and index of authors convert the book into a handy reference book.

Reviewed by M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:440 D '13 50w

"This is a judiciously planned little book, and no child could have a more competent guide than Miss Olcott."

+ Nation 97:543 D 4 '13 150w

"Some verses to which distinguished names are attached must have been taken more for the stories than for their poetical merits, and the number of humorous pieces might have been larger with no harm done, but the anthology is a good one."

+ — N Y Sun p6 N 8 '13 100w

OLD COLONY TRUST COMPANY, BOSTON.

¹⁰ Analyses of the railroad corporations whose bonds are a legal investment for Massachusetts savings banks. il priv. ptd. Old Colony trust co., 17 Court st., Boston, Mass. 13-15194

A carefully compiled treatise including a history of each corporation, comparative capitalization, earnings and traffic statistics, a description of the bonds issued, assumed or guaranteed by each, the range of prices during the years 1903 to 1912 inclusive, and the states of New England in which the bonds are considered a legal investment for savings banks.

OLIVER, FRANCIS WALL, ed. Makers of British botany. il *$3 Putnam 13-15586

"This volume is the outcome of a course of ten lectures delivered at University college, London, in the spring of 1911, in which a series of different botanists each gave the biography of one of the 'fathers' of the subject. To those biographies six chapters have been added, in order to render the book 'more fully representative.'"—Ath

"As a supplement—and to some extent a corrective—to Sachs's classical 'History of botany,' the present work must stand on the shelf of every serious botanist."

+ — Ath 1913,1:18 Ja 4 250w

"The essays and studies besides having a great historical value in the progress of British botany are extremely important in giving an account of the scientific methods in which the subject has been treated."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '13 800w

"A most interesting book." J. M. C.

+ Bot Gaz 56:231 S '13 210w

"Taken all together, the treatment necessarily lacks continuity and unity." T. D. A. Cockrell.

+ — Dial 55:307 O 16 '13 250w

"The volume is full of interest, and contains much concerning the lives and activities of some of the lesser-known British botanists. The list is incomplete. Bentham, for instance, is an unfortunate omission, and it is to be hoped that it may not be long before a second edition is called for and that Prof. Oliver may carry out his intention of adding accounts of several other British botanists who should never be excluded from a historical account of botany in Britain." A. W. H.

+ — Nature 91:264 My 15 '13 900w

"An extremely readable volume, which gives a good survey of the work that has been done in this country. We may be forgiven for regretting the omission of Darwin and Bentham."

+ — Spec 110:581 Ap 5 '13 530w

OLLIVIER, ÉMILE. Franco-Prussian war and its hidden causes; tr. from the French; with an introd. and notes by G. Burnham Ives. il *$2.50 Little 12-28679

"Ollivier was Premier under the government of the third Napoleon in the latter part of 1869. He has always suffered under the obloquy of being mainly responsible for the war of 1870. It is chiefly to defend himself against this charge that the venerable statesman is writing his monumental history of the second empire. A summary of the volumes of this work already issued may be found in the volume 'The Franco-Prussian war and its hidden causes,' which is an abridgement of the larger work, and which now appears in translation, with an introduction by George Burnham Ives." (R of Rs) "With much diligence and results most satisfactory for his readers Mr. Ives also has prepared a great quantity of notes which accompany M. Ollivier's 'ex parte' narrative and give parallel views of the same events from other, and not always agreeing, sources." (N Y Times)

"The title of the book arouses expectations that are not fulfilled." Munroe Smith.

+ — Am Hist R 19:153 O '13 1450w

"A convincing work."

+ A L A Bkl 9:439 Je '13

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

OLLIVIER, ÉMILE—Continued.

"Such a volume in English was needed, and is certain to attract readers."

+ Ath 1913,2:11 J1 5 150w

"We strongly recommend the book to those interested in modern history."

+ Ind 74:1094 My 15 '13 280w

"It is a fascinating story, highly dramatic in itself, and well told; that it is told by one of the chief actors whose bias is obvious, and whose interest in the theme remains fresh and vital after forty years, makes the present narrative none the less important and all the more interesting."

+ Nation 97:186 Ag 28 '13 2000w

"M. Ollivier speaks out plainly and is worth listening to. Whatever place in history his first personal narrative may obtain, it is a man's story told in manly style. M. Ollivier and Mr. Ives have done a good thing well."

+ N Y Sun p6 D 14 '12 1700w

+ N Y Times 18:74 F 16 '13 200w

"The Franco-Prussian war and its hidden causes" is wonderfully clear and complete in its setting forth of individual facts and causes. Its lucid definition of opinions, its unequivocal statements as to facts and views, give it value alike to the student of history and to the general reader. Free from the vanity of personal memoirs, it shows individual traits as active forces, revealing the anxieties, hopes, ambitions, of men engaged in world-affairs."

+ No Am 197:711 My '13 480w

Outlook 104:117 My 17 '13 550w

"The conception and execution of the volume are most praiseworthy." G. S. Ford.

+ Pol Sci Q 28:326 Je '13 650w

+ R of Rs 47:249 F '13 240w

"It is good to have in English M. Ollivier's able defence of his own part in the most disastrous adventure ever undertaken by French ministers, and, so long as it is clearly understood that the statement is ex parte, it may be accepted. The translator has done his best to give the reader the opportunity of checking M. Ollivier's statements by reference to other authorities."

+ Sat R 116:240 Ag 23 '13 1100w

"A really readable book, and one which will be of interest to all students of contemporary European politics."

+ Spec 111:352 S 6 '13 250w

OMAN, CHARLES WILLIAM CHADWICK.
Wellington's army, 1809-1814. ii *$2.10 Longmans 13-1365

"Prof. Oman has written the very book that one would have wished him to write on Wellington's army in the Peninsula, how it was organized, moved, armed, clothed, and fed. Like Prof. Firth's book on 'Cromwell's army,' it throws a flood of light on the campaigns by supplying the small but all-important details which the ordinary historian ignores." (Ath)
The appendices are: the establishment of the army in 1809; a chronological list, by Mr. C. T. Atkinson, of the changes in the divisions and brigades from 1809 to 1814; and a bibliography of Peninsular diaries and memoirs.

"The general reader as well as the military student will find this book of unusual interest." F: L: Huidekoper.

+ Am Hist R 18:804 J1 '13 1800w

A L A Bkl 9:383 My '13

"We may safely say that the keenest student of Napier or of Prof. Oman's own work on the Peninsular war will learn much that is new to him from this unpretentious little book. A most interesting and valuable book on the army, abounding in illustrative anecdotes."

+ Ath 1912,2:580 N 16 600w

"Interesting and valuable."

+ Nation 96:367 Ap 10 '13 250w

+ N Y Times 18:82 F 16 '13 200w

"His habit of enunciating his military decisions upon all and every subject connected with the art of war as if they were final is at times somewhat comic. Mr. Oman in places coins novel military terms which are unintelligible to the soldier. Some of these plates are so obviously incorrect that we took the trouble to ascertain how and where they had been obtained. They will all six be found in volume 1 of Major Ludlow Beamish's excellent 'History of the king's German legion,' published in 1832. Beamish gives them in colours and describes them carefully. Mr. Oman has had them reproduced in monochrome and in five cases out of six has re-named them."

— Sat R 114:807 D 28 '12 1050w

+ Spec 110:156 Ja 25 '13 1450w

ONIONS, OLIVER. Debit account. *$1.25 Do-
ran 13-4993

This story, a sequel to "In accordance with the evidence," takes up the story of Jeffries's life after his marriage. "The story is almost wholly of his mind and of the influence of past events and of present material surroundings upon it. His eyes are continually turned inwards upon his soul, he is constantly reflecting upon the past, although he does not regret the deed that enabled him to marry Evie Soames, and he is certain that he was justified in doing what he did to Archie Merri-dew. . . . Figures out of the past that he has almost forgotten rise to confront him; the associates of his days at the business school remind him persistently of his friendship with Archie Merri-dew, and one of them is shrewd enough to guess what happened. It is these ghosts that make clear to Jeffries's mind the impossibility of allowing the past to lapse utterly into oblivion." (Boston Transcript)

"Unfortunately, the autobiographer is of so common a sort as to detract seriously from the psychological interest which is nevertheless admirably maintained."

— + Ath 1913,1:65 Ja 18 40w

"A story such as this needs the glimmer of humor to make it the real life it purports to be, and into its seriousness and tragedy come many flashes that display the novelist's keen insight into human nature. Like its predecessor, 'The debit account,' piques our interest because of its originality, and because Mr. Onions is a novelist who is obviously not content to follow a beaten track. It is a novel, moreover, that stimulates thought, and that keeps us alive to the claims of fiction as one of the most significant and vital forms of literature." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 21 '13 1650w

"One finds himself bewildered by the subtle and confusing style of the narrator, who leaves the reader to deduce much of the story from rather vague expressions. Even the reader is not taken wholly into the confidence of the hero, who tells his own story."

— Lit D 47:484 S 20 '13 180w

"It is a pity that so much good work should be wasted on such sordid and unprofitable material."

— + N Y Sun p3 Je 7 '13 100w

"In accordance with the evidence' placed Mr. Onions among the novelists whose work is of real importance, and his right to the position is strengthened by this remarkable sequel to that very interesting and original book. 'The debit account' is that rare thing, a novel which is distinctly different. Not because of its strange plot—tales of men in whose lives exists some dark secret are by no means uncommon—but because it is so evidently the production of an unusual and fearless mind. It is a book which challenges the intelligence, one that can be reread more than once without loss of interest." L. M. F.
++ — N Y Times 18:348 Je 8 '13 800w

"The inconveniences of a sequel are somewhat too thoroughly illustrated by 'The debit account.' Mr. Onions should have made more clear in his conclusion the growth and clash of conflicting elements after the supreme revelation. He set himself apparently too difficult a task, and his grip upon it becomes perceptibly more lax as it draws to a conclusion. There is a violence about the culminating scene which is quite unconvincing, and not at all 'in the picture'; and after the delicate workmanship, for which one is so grateful, the common place of the Envoi is deplorable."

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

— + Sat R 115:117 Ja 25 '13 750w

"Much of the art of the book lies in the fact that, although the subject is so tremendous and the emotions roused are so profound, there are no startling discoveries or detections made by any of the characters. If we look at the two books as a whole, which is the only way in which they ought really to be considered, it will be seen that Mr. Onions has worked on a large canvas and has achieved an extraordinarily powerful result, but as a work of art neither volume can properly stand alone. It is, however, perfectly easy for the reader when warned, to get Mr. Onions's two books at the same time, and whoever reads them as a whole will acknowledge that he has made a great step forward in his art. His tragedy is molded on heroic lines, for he has redeemed the rather sordid nature of his design by the breadth and understanding of his treatment."

+ + — Spec 110:322 F 22 '13 1500w

ONIONS, OLIVER. In accordance with the evidence. *$1.25 Doran 13-7881

A story in which an "ungainly slow witted stenographer, wretchedly poor and with little hope of bettering himself, tells of his dull life, of the squalid business college with which he is connected." (N Y Sun) The events related all lead up to a murder—an act for which the hero calmly justifies himself and proceeds to marry the woman who was to have been the wife of the murdered man. "Nobody has paid yet. Nobody ever will" is the assertion with which his story closes.

"To people who care for style and composition, and appreciate the absence of non-essentials, it will give great satisfaction, though even among them some will be dismayed by certain elements of the central situation."

+ — Ath 1912,1:304 Mr 16 220w

"Mr. Onions is master of the technique of his art, but we are not so sure about his psychology. At all events, we fail to see how dwelling on dirt and plague, sores and misery is any more realistic or true to life than looking at normal and healthy conditions or the more cheerful things in life."

+ — N Y Sun p5 Ap 19 '13 220w

"This writer, whose work is now brought for the first time before the American public, is undeniably an artist in that exceedingly difficult branch of literature we call realism. He knows how to say the thing which is in his mind, and it is something worth saying. He is a thinker who is able, not only to face the facts of life as he sees them, but so to reproduce them on paper that those who read may see them almost if not quite as he does. And he is not one of those who think that truth is to be obtained by following the present-day fad of transcribing hundreds of tiny, unimportant details." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 18:264 My 4 '13 770w

"Cleverness, indeed, is the mark of the book, though his readers will wish that Mr. Onions would treat them again to some work in his earlier and more poetic vein."

+ — Spec 108:804 My 18 '12 270w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Double life of Mr. Alfred Burton. Il *$1.25 (1½c) Little 13-18474

"The tale is an allegory of a man's two natures expressed in a dual personality produced by the eating of a magical bean. Many amusing situations, cleverly handled, arise in the double life of the glib-tongued Alfred Burton of the auctioneer's salesroom, and the Alfred Burton who wrote 'London awake,' which created a sensation in London literary circles."—Ind

"Oppenheim seeks another world to conquer. And he conquers it without the slightest difficulty. He proves himself once again a master story teller." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 3 '13 730w

"Of course the thing is impossible, and one of the Alfred Burtons is improbable, but the story nevertheless keeps the reader at it, thoroughly entertained."

+ Ind 75:690 S 18 '13 120w

"The humor of the book strikes one as a trifle forced; nevertheless, many scenes are amusing. The novel might have been a better one had the author's treatment of his subject been wholly serious or wholly comic—the mixture of the two produces at times a grotesquerie which is more curious than admirable—yet it is always interesting." L. M. F.

+ — N Y Times 18:451 Ag 31 '13 850w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Mischief-maker. *$1.25 (1c) Little 13-6729

The hero of this story is a young under secretary for foreign affairs who, having in a moment of indiscretion revealed a state secret to a woman, is forced to resign and keep in hiding. To tell more of the plot of the tale would be "to disclose its wonderful secrets of state and society, to seek to identify the British cabinet minister and the great German politician around whom the plot revolves, to re-write an account of the threats, the dangers, the murders attempted and accomplished, and the suicides that throng its pages, to summarize the picturesque events of night life in Paris that are interwoven into the progress of the story, to portray the beauty and intellectual brilliancy of the women and the strength and hardihood of the men, would be as unnecessary as it is impossible. No pen can or should attempt to re-make an Oppenheim story in miniature." (Boston Transcript)

"A very exciting, ingenious story."

+ A L A Bkl 9:300 Mr 13 *

"An exciting, if not over-probable story."

+ — Ath 1913,2:208 Ag 30 80w

"It is sufficient to say that in 'The mischief maker,' Mr. Oppenheim has outdone himself, and that the reader who cannot enjoy it is hopeless. It is Oppenheim at its very best." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 19 '13 550w

Ind 75:574 S 4 '13 80w

"In this story dramatic romance, diplomatic intrigue, and international crises are mixed. The result is breathless interest rather than logical approbation."

+ — Lit D 46:782 Ap 5 '13 180w

"The mischief maker' is frankly a 'spell-binder' and it fulfills its purpose of taking us wholly out of our own world while we read. Its literary quality and its brilliant pictures of life raise it above the class of the merely sensational."

+ N Y Times 18:241 Ap 20 '13 500w

OPPENHEIM, LASSA FRANCIS LAWRENCE. Panama canal conflict between Great Britain and the United States of America: a study. *75c (9c) Putnam 13-6704

A discussion of the validity of Great Britain's protest against the recent Panama canal act, based on a study of the Clayton-Bulwer, Hay-Pauncefote and Hay-Varilla treaties, the Panama canal act itself and the Memorandum of President Taft accompanying the signing of the act. Mr. Oppenheim argues that the United States is prevented by the treaties from allowing to her own coastwise shipping the use of the canal on any terms not also extended to the shipping of other nations. He also believes that if England requests it the matter should be submitted to arbitration, arguing that to refuse to do so would impair our national honor and credit.

"A concise but forcible presentation of the case from the British point of view."

+ Am Hist R 18:875 Jl '13 30w

OPPENHEIM, L. F. L.—Continued.

Ath 1913,1:163 F 8 80w

"Valuable and timely study."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 2 '13 380w

"With his contention in the main we agree, tho not with all his arguments."

+ Ind 74:925 Ap 24 '13 80w

"The little book will certainly help in making a vexed problem intelligible."

+ N Y Sun p6 Ap 12 '13 80w

"A calm and dignified statement."

+ N Y Times 18:326 Je 1 '13 80w

"A concise and authoritative argument."

+ Outlook 104:39 My 3 '13 30w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:551 S '13 80w

"The distinguished international jurist sets out the arguments in the Panama canal controversy with extreme clearness and meticulous impartiality."

+ Spec 110:365 Mr 1 '13 50w

ORCUTT, WILLIAM DANA. Madonna of sacrifice. 1l *50c (10c) Browne & Howell 13-3813

A brier and pathetic little tale of a page in the service of a great Italian family who worships the Madonna which is one of the art treasures of the house. When his master thru stress of poverty is led to sell the old masterpiece, replacing it by a copy so like the original that it is thought no one can detect the substitution, the little page alone finds his Lady changed, her eyes unforgiving and unkind. And, already worn by sickness, he dies at the feet of the counterfeit, believing that an act of his own had caused the change in his Lady's countenance

"A few infelicities in style mar what would otherwise be a little gem of narration. Sometimes tenses are mixed."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 5 '13 280w

"Charmingly told."

+ Cath World 97:411 Je '13 70w

"The sentimental tale is pretty."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 1 '13 50w

ORCUTT, WILLIAM DANA. Writer's desk. book. *60c (2c) Stokes 12-20803

An excellent little handbook designed as a reference work for the writer, but well adapted to the needs of any one, business or professional man, or even the ordinary letter writer, who in matters of good usage often finds himself in doubt. The chapters treat of: Punctuation; Capitalization; Spelling; Compound words; Division of words; Indentation and paragraphing; Spacing; Italic; Abbreviations; Numerals; Correct and faulty diction; Letter-writing; Postal information. The volume is well indexed.

"More complete and satisfactory than any recent book."

+ A L A Bkl 9:112 N '12 ✦

"One may turn these chaste leaves (Mr. Orcutt is by vocation a bookbinder) and read the crisp rules with large approval, with substantial agreement, even if with occasional dissent, until 'Examples of correct letter writing' is reached and then judiciously wish that brief section had been omitted or made more helpful."

+ Ind 73:1260 N 28 '12 130w

ORCZY, EMMUSKA. Eldorado. *$1.35 Doran 10 13-6257

"A new story of the Scarlet Pimpernel, that extraordinary adventurer whom the Baroness Orczy has created for the delectation of lovers of romance. His exploit in 'Eldorado' is the rescue of the dauphin from the Temple, which is accomplished with neatness and despatch. The rescuer gets himself into the toils, and how he gets himself out of them provides material for a most exciting narrative."—Dial

+ A L A Bkl 10:71 O '13

"The book is in the writer's usual vein, but somewhat lacking in incident compared with the previous stories of the same hero."

+ Ath 1913,2:111 Ag 2 50w

"Even the hackneyed nature of the material does not prevent the author from contriving a new plot with considerable freshness of interest." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:151 S 1 '13 150w

N Y Sun p11 Je 14 '13 70w

"The book is exciting in its way; it shares the lot of most sequels in not being nearly as good as the original story."

+ N Y Sun p3 Je 28 '13 170w

"Entertaining as it all is, one never loses the feeling that it is but a play. The proof reading is unusually careless."

+ N Y Times 18:435 Ag 17 '13 250w

"The author has plot invention, but the writing of the book is weak."

+ Outlook 104:579 Jl 12 '13 50w

+ R of Rs 48:503 O '13 30w

"Of course, if you do not mind this sort of insanity, you will probably like the story."

+ Sat R 116:339 S 13 '13 250w

ORCZY, EMMUSKA, baroness. Meadowsweet. *$1.25 Doran 12-20795

"Unlike her preceding stories, politics and history have no part in this volume. Simple people for the most part are its actors, with simple incidents and a rural community for its setting." (Springfield Republican) "The heroine is irresistibly lovely. She is a wild tomboy whose heart is suddenly awakened by the man whom her elder sister is trying to ensnare. The intrigue of that elder sister brings them together, and her lies separate them; but, as lies generally do, they bring them together again at last. That elder sister is terribly wicked, but her wickedness is most cleverly handled and put before us by the author." (N Y Times)

"A story as 'sweet' as its name, with many prettily worded descriptions of pretty scenes and pretty people; but lacking something in reality and depth, while the plot has not the cunning of some of this author's former works."

+ Ath 1912,2:309 S 21 170w

"If there is villainy, there is also some picturesque love-making described with success." P. G. Hubert, Jr.

+ Bookm 36:462 D '12 200w

+ Ind 75:574 S 4 '13 100w

"There are many who will get pleasure out of the uncertainty of the outcome and the thrills of suspense and anxiety, but it is difficult to see why such a story is written."

+ Lit D 45:1020 N 30 '12 120w

+ N Y Sun p3 Ja 25 '13 800w

"So charmingly romantic a book comes only 'once in a while.' It is a novel likely to be long remembered by readers who are sensitive to the impress of true and lovely things."

+ N Y Times 17:643 N 3 '12 250w

"In every respect her latest book is markedly her best creation."

+ Springfield Republican p5 N 7 '12 300w

ORDWAY, EDITH BERTHA. Etiquette of to-day. *50c Sully & Kleinteich 13-9185

The author "discusses such matters of universal and daily interest as family etiquette, conversation and correspondence, casual meetings and calls, the personal card and the engraved invitation, behavior in public, the art of being a guest, duties of host and hostess, duties of the chaperon, etiquette of the marriage engagement, the conduct of a wedding, etiquette for children and etiquette for mourning."—Boston Transcript

"Will be useful to those without much social experience."

+ A L A Bkl 10:105 N '13 ✦

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"A practical up-to-date manual which the readers will find helpful and authoritative."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 6 '13 150w

"In her chapter on 'Family etiquette' she reaches the level of ethics."

+ N Y Times 18:300 My 18 '13 280w

ORTH, SAMUEL PETER. Socialism and democracy in Europe. *$1.50 (1½c) Holt

13-3236

The keen analysis of the origin and meaning of the socialist movement given in the first chapter recommends the book at once to the discerning reader. An historical survey of the movement and a study of the various socialist theories are followed by an analysis of socialism in actual practice so far as it has been tried out in France, Belgium, Germany and England. The socialists, the author says, "are feeling their way from protest to practice. Their heads are in the clouds. . . . But are their feet upon the ground?" This is the question he attempts to answer. The concluding chapter relates the socialist movement to the movement toward democracy.

"A compact and well-balanced description." O. D. Skelton.

+ Am Econ R 3:702 S '13 270w

"It is sympathetic without being partisan, and withal admirable for its perspective." F. A. McKenzie.

+ Am J Soc 19:252 S '13 650w

"One of the most useful and readable of recent books on socialism."

+ A L A Bkl 9:440 Je '13

"A careful historical study of the development of socialism in four European countries." Alexander Fleisher.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:269 J1 '13 50w

Boston Transcript p4 F 21 '13 1000w

"A somewhat sketchy but readable volume well worth the attention of every student of contemporary social phenomena." F. A. Ogg.

+ Dial 54:300 Ap 1 '13 1000w

"A valuable feature of the book is the appendix containing a bibliography and the platforms of the Socialist and Labor parties."

+ Ind 74:921 Ap 24 '13 130w

+ Nation 97:388 O 23 '13 330w

"Dr. Orth opens new and interesting ground in his study of socialism from an unaccustomed point of view."

+ N Y Times 18:145 Mr 16 '13 850w

+ N Y Times 18:679 N 30 '13 350w

"The work may be described as containing material of the utmost value to any one who is watching the progress of modern industrial democratic movements."

+ Outlook 103:372 F 15 '13 100w

"The chapters on Belgium and Germany are particularly clear and illuminating. Those on France and England are distinctly disappointing." Carlton Hayes.

+ Pol Sci Q 28:679 D '13 700w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 6 '13 270w

Reviewed by M. B. Sumner.

+ Survey 30:309 My 31 '13 300w

OSBORNE, ALBERT B. Finding the worthwhile in Europe. Il *$1.40 McBride, Nast & co. 13-10868

The book is written "for those who do not care about the usual European exhibits that are described and explained in every guide-book, who want to see and study the things that will help to resolve for them the inner heart of each nation, but who cannot find anywhere advice and direction as to how to go about it. To Mr. Osborne each European country means something in particular, has its own distinguishing characteristics, and in his book he picks out these dominant traits and tells the reader where to go to find them in their best form. Great cities he finds to be very much alike, whatever country they may be in, and so he has little to say of them."—N Y Times

+ A L A Bkl 10:105 N '13 *

"The illustrations are remarkably clear and interesting; indeed the book itself bristles with individuality."

+ Boston Transcript p18 J1 30 '13 400w

"A chatty little guide-book. To follow the author implicitly would take well over a year; but a chapter here and there will help the American who wants to be told what to see."

+ Ind 75:397 Ag 14 '13 100w

"There are concessions to the common spirit of haste, which the author's book, if it has any meaning, is intended to counteract. It is futile to say 'don't hurry' and then to show how you may. The photographs are good and interesting."

+ N Y Sun p4 My 31 '13 150w

"The little book will be a real godsend to those who wish to keep out of the well-beaten paths of European travel and yet desire that a European trip should bring them into contact with things that are worth while. The author writes entertainingly, with just enough of historical allusion to make a background for present conditions."

+ N Y Times 18:364 Je 15 '13 380w

OSBORNE, ALBERT B. Picture towns of Europe. Il *$2 (4c) McBride, Nast & co. 12-26222

This volume, with 48 full-page illustrations and a map, is intended for the traveler who prefers to leave the beaten path to search for the unc cosmopolitan. The author has selected "the towns that of themselves, and by their environment, as well as by something of the ancient life and tradition still surviving there, suggest most clearly to the present day the colorful and picturesque past." (Preface) The list comprises Clovelly, Mont St. Michel, Carcassonne, San Gimignano, Bussaco, Cintra, Toledo, Ronda, Bruges, Middelburg, Ragusa, Salzburg, Gruyères, Rothenburg, and Hildesheim.

+ A L A Bkl 10:105 N '13

"His chapters and his illustrations present in very inviting form some of the picturesque and the historically interesting aspects of [fifteen towns]."

+ Dial 53: 497 D 16 '12 150w

"Will serve to recall pleasant days abroad, or to stir stay-at-homes to travel."

+ Ind 73: 1431 D 19 '12 30w

Lit D 45: 1133 D 14 '12 130w

"Mr. Osborne writes with charm and distinction, conveying in few and well-chosen words the impression each of the places described has made on him personally, and giving just sufficient of history or legend to stir the memory of those who know whereof he speaks and to whet the curiosity of those who look forward to such travels in the future."

+ Nation 96:86 Ja 23 '13 230w

"The book hardly holds together, for picturesque is an absolutely vague term that defines nothing. It will be admitted that all the towns Mr. Osborne describes and photographs are picturesque; so are hundreds of others to the eyes that will see them right."

+ N Y Sun p 8 N 30 '12 120w

OWEN, WILLIAM BAXTER. Humanities in the education of the future and other addresses and papers. *$1.25 (3c) Sherman, French & co. 13-1568

Many of the essays in this collection supplement the title essay in its plea for a liberal classical education. Some of these are: The value of discipline in education; The teaching of the classics; High school training in its bearing upon civic integrity. Some of the papers are commemorative of the lives of fellow educators, and others, evidently addressed to student bodies, bear directly on the problems of student life.

OWEN, WILLIAM BAXTER—Continued.

"We have gotten a good deal that is interesting and helpful from the volume."
+ Educ R 46:95 Je '13 50w

"A strong ethical and religious note recurs frequently in these interesting and judicious papers."

+ Outlook 103:232 Ja 25 '13 100w

P

PACKARD, FRANK LUCIUS. Greater love hath no man. il $1.25 Doran 13-8906

A story of useless self-sacrifice. "A founding adopted by a New England country physician is brought up as one of the family, and becomes the professional assistant of his patron. He is given the name of Varge, and is devoted to Dr. and Mrs. Merton. Harold Merton, their degenerate son, quarrels with his father, and kills him in a fit of passion. Varge thereupon, to spare the woman who has been as a mother to him, makes the preposterous self-sacrifice of assuming the guilt of the crime, and is sentenced to the penitentiary for life." (Dial) His release after the death of Mrs. Merton brings the story to a close.

"The sacrifice which inspires this melodramatic story makes an exceptionally heavy demand upon our credulity."

— Ath 1913,2:38 Jl 12 70w

"This book makes us hopeful that the day of self-sacrifice is passing. Otherwise we might have accepted Varge's burnt offering of his life as beautiful. Instead it catalogues itself as a distinctly foolish piece of work."

— Bookm 37:458 Je '13 620w

"In plot and in style dating back to the dark ages of fiction writing, 'Greater love hath no man' is an extremely amusing story, and it is emphatically worth reading simply for the purpose of furnishing a dire warning. It is exactly what a novel should not be." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 130w

"It makes an interesting and even exciting story, but the reader revolts at Varge's indefensible and impossible heroism." W. M. Payne.

+ — Dial 55:148 S 1 '13 230w

N Y Sun p3 My 3 '13 150w

"A gripping story of prison life with several really visible characters."

+ — N Y Times 18:514 O 5 '13 250w

PAGE, LOGAN WALLER. Roads, paths,
' and bridges. (Young farmer's practical lib.) il $1 Sturgis & Walton 12-16928

"The book opens with a brief history of road building and comments on road legislation. The author describes methods of construction and maintenance of the various types of roads and paths that are adapted to rural communities, with suggestions and advice governing the selection of materials and treatment of roadsides. A chapter on modern road problems treats briefly of the effect of automobile traffic and the use of oils and other dust layers. Culverts and bridges are treated by the author, the information given being of a descriptive rather than a technical nature."—Engin N

"The director of the U. S. Office of public roads in this little book covers practically the same ground that Byrne and Frost do in their fuller and more technical volumes, and does it in the direct, simple manner that will make the information useful to the average countryman."

+ A L A Bkl 9:22 S '12 ✚

"The layman or farmer will find in it a large amount of valuable information, set forth in an unusually clear manner, and made doubly interesting by many illustrations." A. W. Dean.

+ Engin N 69:139 Ja 16 '13 120w

"It is the best work on the dirt road that has yet appeared, and its review of the principal features of more expensive types of construction, of maintenance and repairs, and of roadside treatment is well done."

+ Engin Rec 66:675 D 14 '12 470w

N Y Times 17:447 Ag 11 '12 50w

PAGE, THOMAS NELSON. Land of the spirit.
il $1.20 (2½c) Scribner 13-8250

Mr. Page's new book is "a collection of seven short stories, two of which, 'The stranger's pew' and 'The shepherd who watched by night,' are of an allegorical import, and a third, 'The stable of the inn,' merely the telling of the tale of the incidents preceding and attendant upon the birth of Christ. . . . Of the other four stories in Mr. Page's collection, 'The old planters' and 'The trick-doctor' are characteristic tales of the South that Mr. Page knows and can write about so well. 'The bigot' has New England for its scene, and 'The outcast' is a bit of melodrama that might have happened anywhere."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 9:456 Je '13

"Several of the stories strike us as not being finished—they just stop, leaving the reader to work out the conclusion for himself."

+ — Ath 1913,2:228 S 6 70w

"As we pursue—we had almost said as we force—our way through these stories, we persistently feel their lack of the inevitable." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 23 '13 1300w

"These stories are all beautifully finished and have true literary merit."

+ Ind 75:46 Jl 3 '13 100w

+ Lit D 47:696 O 18 '13 180w

Nation 97:188 Ag 28 '13 200w

"Written with grace and skill though they are and interesting in various ways, they show little that is characteristic of the author."

+ N Y Sun p4 Ap 26 '13 80w

"The story called 'The outcast' is spoiled by an overdose of melodrama."

+ — N Y Times 18:375 Je 22 '13 130w

PAGE, VICTOR WILFRED. Modern gasoline
' automobile; its design, construction, maintenance and repair, etc. il $2.50 Henley

12-24593

"The author has confined himself to the design, construction and operation of the motor cars built for either pleasure or commercial use at the present day, and he has treated this subject exhaustively. While the book is written in nontechnical language, it goes into much detail with respect to questions of design and aims to cover the main variations in type which still exist in automobile details."—Engin N

"On the whole, it is the best of recent works for the man who wants anything beyond the simple descriptive books."

+ A L A Bkl 9:292 Mr '13

"Useful to the seasoned motorist as well as to the prospective purchaser."

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 8 '13 250w

"The book before us bears every evidence of having been compiled and written with painstaking care and with a thorough knowledge of the subject in every phase. The style of the author is clear, and the work is well arranged. The illustrations in the book deserve especial praise."

+ Engin N 69:336 F 13 '13 300w

PAGET, STEPHEN, and CRUM, J. M. C.
 * Francis Paget, bishop of Oxford, Chancellor of the Order of the Garter, honorary student and sometime dean of Christ church; with an introd. by the Archbishop of Canterbury. *$5 Macmillan

A biography which gives an intimate picture of its subject's life and character. "Francis Paget was a man who needed, if he was to be known at his best, some admission into the intimacy of family life. He filled great posts, and filled them worthily. He was a theological professor in a famous university, the dean of a great college, the bishop of an important see, and to each of these various duties he gave his whole mind. But if we had had only the picture of his official career we should have gained but an imperfect idea of the man. His gaiety, his humour, his happy wit, came out only in his familiar intercourse with those whom he knew best." (Spec)

"It would certainly have gained by compression. The two best things in the volume are the Archbishop of Canterbury's Introduction and Mr. Campbell Crum's final chapter. The Introduction is beyond praise."

+ — Ath 1912:2:749 D 21 1300w

"Not an obituary notice or a family scrap-book, but a picture, drawn with a firm hand, and noteworthy outside the deanery and the diocese in which the Bishop's work was done."

+ Sat R 115:240 F 22 '13 1350w

"Impartiality and a just sense of proportion are merits which are almost essential to a good biography, and close kinship does not always secure them. But the rule has its exceptions, and Mr. Stephen Paget's life of his brother, the late Bishop of Oxford, is one of them."

+ Spec 110:235 F 8 '13 1250w

PAGET, WALPURGA EHRENGARDE HELENA (VON HOHENTHAL) LADY. Scenes and memories. il *$2.25 Scribner 12-29309

"These 'scenes and memories' have been gathered together by Lady Paget out of voluminous, as yet unpublished, recollections of her long life spent in many parts of Europe. She spent her childhood in a thousand-year-old castle in Saxony. After her marriage to an English diplomat there were years in Copenhagen, Lisbon, Rome, and Vienna." (N Y Times) "Her account of the early married life of the Empress Frederick is of much interest." (Ath)

+ A L A Bkl 9:332 Ap '13

"Some of the chapters making up this volume have already appeared in the Nineteenth century and after, but they were well worth republishing."

+ Ath 1912:2:551 N 9 130w

"There are many just and discriminating estimates of the characters of royal personages who loomed large in current history during those years. And there are many intimate and vivid glimpses into their private lives that have real historical value."

+ N Y Times 18:68 F 9 '13 350w

"Lady Paget's volume is entitled to a good place among books of this class."

+ Spec 110:363 Mr 1 '13 450w

PAINE, RALPH DELAHAYE. Adventures of "Captain O'Shea. *$1.35 (1c) Scribner 13-19330

"Captain O'Shea and his bold engineer Johnny Kent, are as dashing and daring a pair of seamen as ever trod a deck or knocked down a sailor, and their adventures on many seas are abundantly stirring." (Boston Transcript) There are four stories in the book: The castaways; The king of Trinidad; The liner "Alsatian"; and The branded man.

"They are all capital tales, full of excitement and humor."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 250w

"These are real people, not melodramatic marionettes, and the exciting episodes so well narrated are all quite plausible and decidedly novel."

+ Ind 76:315 N 13 '13 70w

"Four strange tales wildly improbable if looked at from the stolid point of view of realism, but with lavish invention and with stirring incident galore."

+ Outlook 105:712 N 29 '13 30w

"Of the four stories in the book the last . . . is the prize thriller. But they are all entertaining and Capt. O'Shea is a jolly companion with whom to spend a couple of stormy evenings."

+ N Y Times 18:518 O 5 '13 220w

PAINE, RALPH DELAHAYE. Steam-shovel man. il *$1 Scribner 13-18714

A story of the digging of the Panama canal. Walter Goodwin, a likely young American of seventeen, facing the necessity of going to work at once, finds an opportunity to work his passage down to Panama. He has been told that it is the "right place for a husky young fellow" but once there he finds there are difficulties in the way and he passes thru some exciting adventures before he finds himself at last at work on a steam shovel. There is some good base-ball in the story too.

"A great deal of interesting Panama canal history may be learned from [this story]." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:317 N '13 60w

"Mr. Paine is too good a literary man to be unduly sensational or melodramatic, but the story has plenty of thrills in it as well as excellent descriptions and character delineations."

+ Ind 76:358 N 20 '13 40w

+ N Y Times 18:489 S 21 '13 130w

"While it cannot, in any sense, be called a strong book, it is bright, clean and wholesome, without a word of cheap slang or profanity to mar it. Its characters are human."

+ Springfield Republican p5 D 16 '13 130w

PALMER, CLAUDE IRWIN. Practical mathematics; being the essentials of arithmetic, geometry, algebra and trigonometry. 4 pts pts 1-2 ea *75c McGraw (12-23086)

"While there is nothing radically new in the methods of treating the various portions of the subject, the one thing which stands out most prominently is the fact that each point is very thoroughly explained and an unusually large and varied list of practical examples, involving each new conception or operation, is introduced to supplement these explanations."

Various machine parts, simple tools and short-cut methods are given thorough explanation with profuse illustrations. A number of useful tables are inserted in the text and at the end of each volume. The tables of contents and indexes make the works handy for reference."—Engin N

"A very practical pair of elementary little volumes. It would be well if such books could be introduced into schools for the sake of the practical suggestiveness of the problems used."

+ Elec World 60:1330 D 21 '12 130w

+ Engin N 68:1119 D 12 '12 280w

PALMER, GEORGE HERBERT. Intimations of immortality in the sonnets of Shakspeare. *75c (8c) Houghton 12-26316

The 1912 lecture on the Ingersoll foundation at Harvard university. Professor Palmer assumes first that the Shakespeare sonnets fall into three contrasted and unequal groups,—group one comprising the first seventeen, two, the next one hundred and nine, and three, the last twenty-six; that the first two groups stand practically in the order intended by their author; that the speaker thruout is Shakespeare; and that the person addressed is in the first two groups, a man, in the last a woman. He analyzes the sentiments and situations in the sonnets and thru their significance and beauty reveals the intimations of immortality.

PALMER, GEORGE HERBERT—Continued.

"Of decided significance to Shakespearean students."

+ A L A Bkl 9:199 Ja '13

"Historical criticism is not likely to abandon its attempts to solve the mystery of these baffling poems; but so long as the mystery remains unsolved, a consistent reading of them in any aspect, such as is here offered, will be welcome. However, Professor Palmer set out upon a very different quest, and the particular thing which he has brought back is the fact that Shakespeare 'once at least looked into immortality.'"

+ Dial 54:103 F 1 '13 280w

"The whole book is worthy of a lining up with the lectures of John Fiske and Professor Royce on the same subject."

+ Ind 74:1346 Je 12 '13 750w

"As an essay of appreciation and interpretation the work belongs in the front rank of sonnet literature. As a lecture on immortality the book is as satisfying to the spirit as a cathedral nave."

+ Outlook 103:93 Ja 11 '13 100w

"His digression from the beaten path of previous lectures gives freshness and literary interest to a theme that has, for the most part, been confined to theoretic, philosophic and metaphysical discussion."

+ R of Rs 47:247 F '13 120w

Springfield Republican p5 Ap 10 '13 450w

PALMER, ROBERT. Little tour in India. *$2.50
Longmans

"This is a collection of letters, not written originally 'for publication,' as the author says in his modest preface, and the letters show that their writer is a keen observer both of the people and the scenery among whom he travels, and that he writes what he thinks about them." (Sat R) The author is a son of the Earl of Selborne, and the letters were written during a period spent in India two years ago.

"When the influences which surround Mr. Palmer are borne in mind, it will be admitted that he is reasonably independent in his views. The letters sent home which make the book have not been 'touched-up' for the press. Their style is bright and clear, but a little revision might have spared us such repetition as may be found on pp. 38 and 55. Tourists who are making a first trip may read Mr. Palmer with advantage."

+ — Ath 1913.1:243 Mr 1 500w

"The letters are lively, readable, and unintentionally instructive."

+ Dial 54:512 Je 16 '13 280w

"There is little of importance in the impressions he records; they are such as a pleasant, level-headed, mildly interested boy might form, and differ from those of the ordinary hasty traveller in that sight seeing is by no means an object to the author. His remarks are unpretentious and frank. He has some humor, much kindness, and very little conceit."

+ — N Y Sun p5 Ap 5 '13 330w

"Some of the letters sent home from Kashmir are specially good and descriptive. The whole book is fresh and humorous, and, though originally just 'letters home,' we are glad Mr. Palmer's friends made him publish them."

+ Sat R 115:526 Ap 26 '13 600w

PARADISE, FRANK ILSLEY. Christianity and commerce: a study in western expansion.
*$1 Dodd 13-4379

The author calls attention "to the fact that the mission fields of the East are not what they were in the early days of missionary effort. . . . There has been a great transformation throughout the East in respect to all material things, and new conditions confront those who are directing the operations of Western foreign missionary societies. Mr. Paradise takes note of these new conditions in his book, and endeavors to show in what way they should be met by those who desire that the Christian ideals of the West may take permanent hold upon the Orientals."—N Y Times

"The book is a careful and thoughtful study of the problem of Christian missions; and the solution offered is the only possible one; and the sooner we get about the work in dead earnest the better for civilization, both at home and abroad."

+ Boston Transcript p12 Ap 29 '13 400w

Chaut 71:90 Je 28 '13 220w

N Y Times 18:315 My 25 '13 200w

PARKER, SIR GILBERT. Works. Imperial
2 ed. 18v subs Scribner 12-27845

"The set will contain all the author's fiction, novels and short stories, including much that appeared in periodicals and has never been republished since. It will also contain his essays in verse. Each volume will have a photogravure frontispiece; that in the first volume is an excellent portrait of Sir Gilbert Parker. For this edition he has written a general introduction, with a special introduction for each volume; these contain interesting autobiographical matter as well as explanations about the way in which the stories came to be written and the characters in them."—N Y Sun

v. 1-4 "contain Sir Gilbert's earliest stories gathered under the titles 'Pierre and his people' and 'Romany of the snows'; a volume of later Canadian tales, 'Northern lights,' and the first long novel he wrote, 'Mrs. Fatchion.'"—N Y Sun

v. 5-18 include Cumner's son and other South Sea folk; When Valmond came to Pontiac; The trail of the sword; The translation of a savage; The pomp of the Lavillettes; At the sign of the eagle; The trespasser; The march of the white guard; The battle of the strong; The lane that had no turning; Michel and Angele; John Enderby; There is sorrow on the sea; Donovan Pasha and many short stories; A lover's diary; The judgment house.

Boston Transcript p27 D 18 '12 280w

Boston Transcript p25 Ap 16 '13 700w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '13 600w

Boston Transcript p21 Jl 2 '13 480w

+ Boston Transcript p21 S 10 '13 600w

Reviewed by W. S. Braithwaite.

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 1 '13 2000w

"These books of Sir Gilbert's earlier years will prove a pleasant revelation to the host of those who know him only by the recent novels that have made him so widely popular a writer."

+ Dial 54:189 Mr 1 '13 130w

+ Dial 54:311 Ap 1 '13 100w

"The eighteen volumes comprising this edition make a dignified and impressive appearance, and the writer who lives to see his work given such a setting may well be considered fortunate."

+ Dial 55:312 O 16 '13 110w

+ Ind 74:152 Ja 16 '13 350w

+ Ind 74:769 Ap 3 '13 170w

"Not the least of the edition's attractions are the introductions, written by Sir Gilbert himself, a general one to the whole edition, and a special one for each volume. He gives interesting and illuminating facts of literary biography, and considers his works in relation to himself, to one another, and to his scheme of literary life."

+ Lit D 46:238 F 1 '13 500w

+ Lit D 46:478 Mr 1 '13 160w

+ Lit D 46:1139 My 17 '13 250w

+ Lit D 47:484 S 20 '13 400w

+ Lit D 47:695 O 18 '13 370w

+ Nation 96:181 F 20 '13 600w

- + Nation 97:164 Ag 21 '13 2400w
- + N Y Sun p5 D 7 '12 250w
- + N Y Sun p3 F 1 '13 200w
- + N Y Sun p4 Ap 5 '13 140w
- + N Y Sun p6 My 10 '13 130w
- + N Y Times 18:82 F 16 '13 80w
- + N Y Times 18:264 My 4 '13 100w
- + N Y Times 18:484 S 21 '13 200w

"Of the form of the Imperial edition there may be made only one remark in general and two in particular: the edition is worthy of companionship with the fine collective editions of Kipling, Stevenson, and Meredith put forth by the Messrs. Scribner; in particular, the paper is a joy to the eye and the hand, but (and here is the second particular remark) one earnestly hopes that the lovely maroon covers will not, in the course of a few years on the shelves, assume the faded tints that time has developed on the somewhat similar binding of the Kipling 'Outward bound edition.'"

- + Outlook 103:43 Ja 4 '13 1450w
- + Outlook 103:372 F 15 '13 80w
- + Outlook 103:863 Ap 19 '13 40w
- + Outlook 104:393 Je 21 '13 50w
- + Outlook 105:329 O 11 '13 130w
- + Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 120w

PARKER, SIR GILBERT. Judgment house. il
$1.35 (1c) Harper 13-5686

The story begins in the year of the Jameson raid and ends with the close of the Boer war. Altho most of its action takes place in England, South African affairs form, thruout, the background. Of the men of the story, one is a diplomat, intimately concerned with England's South African policy; one is a millionaire newly returned from the Transvaal. It is the first of these, Ian Stafford, to whom Jasmine Grenfel is engaged when the story opens, but it is the second, Rudyard Byng, whom she marries. At the last the scene shifts to South Africa. The two men are in the British service and Jasmine, who has separated from her husband, joins the nurses corps. It is the change wrought in her character by hardship and contact with suffering that makes possible the reconciliation with which the book closes.

"The plot has some unusually interesting features, but the style is annoyingly heavy and verbose."

- + A L A Bkl 9:344 Ap '13 +

"We confess that the extravagances and anomalies of the book have impressed us almost to the exclusion of the working out of the plot itself."

- + Ath 1913,2:178 Ag 23 500w

- + Atlan 112:695 N '13 140w

"The people in the book are real enough; it is what they do that doesn't quite ring true." F: T. Cooper.

- + Bookm 37:442 Je '13 700w

"In the matter of style as well as in those of invention and characterization, it stands up on Sir Gilbert's highest level of achievement." W: M. Payne.

- + Dial 55:149 S 1 '13 450w

"If all of the contemplative and expository pages could be cut out, the story would be sweeping, absorbing drama, scarcely lacking the theater properties and stage setting."

- + Ind 74:769 Ap 3 '13 150w

Nation 96:599 Je 12 '13 370w

"Never has Sir Gilbert written a novel more filled with the keen and poignant sense of life than is this story. It is a thrilling, majestically moving story. But it moves too slowly for its own good."

- + N Y Times 18:156 Mr 23 '13 1500w

"Largely conceived and written with power, 'The Judgment house' can hardly fail to produce upon the minds of most readers its intended effect, justifying the claim which, in the manner of romance, it seems to make somewhat insistently—the claim to a meaning beyond the obvious. We cannot, however, suppress a certain doubt as to the method and the manner."

- + No Am 197:571 Ap '13 2400w

- + Outlook 104:36 My 3 '13 450w

- + Spec 111:389 S 13 '13 40w

"A strong and interesting study lacking neither in action nor in the variety of its elements."

- + Springfield Republican p5 My 22 '13 550w

PARKER, SAMUEL CHESTER. Textbook in the history of modern elementary education, with emphasis on school practice in relation to social conditions. il $1.50 (1c) Ginn 12-28412

In this book "the author has traced the development of the elementary school from the time of the first city vernacular institutions of the middle ages down to the present day. An effort has been made to make it possible to teach education in the same manner as history is taught by modern teachers; i.e., to induce the pupil always to keep in mind the proper relation between different events and periods rather than to treat each event and period as an isolated affair." (Boston Transcript) The Introduction treating of the meaning and scope of elementary education and of the development of schools in the middle ages, is followed by: Part 2, Elementary schools on a religious basis; Part 3, Transition to secular basis of elementary education; Part 4, Secularized elementary education.

- + A L A Bkl 9:440 Je '13

"The book should prove stimulating to elementary teachers."

- + Ath 1913,1:590 My 31 120w

"The work is plainly a textbook and as such will commend itself to all prospective teachers and other students of an interesting subject."

- + Boston Transcript p22 Ja 15 '13 130w

"In common with most educational historians, the author is probably unaware of the vast system of Catholic parish schools which is being maintained at the present time in the United States. The work is an excellent one. It is well written, the matter is well selected, and for the most part is treated in an impartial manner."

- + Cath World 97:108 Ap '13 600w

"Professor Parker has made a real contribution to the writing of our educational history." W: H. Kilpatrick.

- + Educ R 46:416 N '13 530w

"The book steers clear of both the Scylla of unsupported generalizations and pseudophilosophic interpretations and of the Charybdis of dead-level detail that have destroyed many a fair historical craft. Mr. Parker's text is, in general, the type of 'thing we long have sought, and mourned because we found it not.' It will be of real service in training teachers, especially for elementary grades." F. P. Graves.

- + School R 21:497 S '13 1450w

PARKHURST, CHARLES HENRY. Pulpit and the pew. $1.50 (6½c) Yale univ. press

13-18730

The eight addresses contained in this volume were delivered before the Divinity school of Yale university in 1913 as the Lyman Beecher lectures. The titles are: The preacher and his qualifications; Pulpit aims; The pulpit's estimate of the pew; Love considered as a dynamic; Ministerial responsibility for civic conditions; Responsibility of the church to the life of the town; Dealing with the fundamentals; The sanctuary and sanctuary service.

"The present lecturer measures up to the high standard of the series."

- + Boston Transcript p11 N 20 '13 330w

N Y Times 18:520 O 5 '13 50w

PARKIN, GEORGE ROBERT. Rhodes scholarships. II *$2 Houghton 12-27616

"The volume opens with a comprehensive study of the life of Mr. Rhodes, especially his great work in South Africa; the important provisions of his will are given and explained. Oxford and the colleges and the methods of the selection of the beneficiaries of the will are described; age limit and collegiate standing are shown, and the university system together with the social side of Oxford life is presented. Many advantages to the students are made clearer than they have been in the reports previously published."—Boston Transcript

"It is of value to the scholar in helping him to select the best preparatory course and in otherwise preparing him for life at Oxford."

+ A L A Bkl 9:292 Mr '13

"Since the Rhodes scholars are drawn to Oxford from many remote communities, it is desirable that candidates should have definite information as to the scope of the foundation and the conditions of the university; and since they will be drawn in the future from distant generations, it is desirable that they should have a plain statement such as this, both as to the career and the ideals of the founder as interpreted by the first trustees of his will. The chapters upon the university by Mr. F. J. Wylie are not the least valuable part of this book. Nobody could be better qualified to speak of the social side of Oxford life and the share of the Rhodes scholar in it."

+ Ath 1913,1:30 Ja 11 550w

+ Ath 1913,1:253 Mr 1 '13 500w

"Scholars in general and those who wish to become Rhodes scholars will find much that is interesting and profitable in this volume by Mr. Parkin, who is organizing secretary of the Rhodes scholarship trust."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 21 '12 300w

"If a boy reads Dr. Parkin's book he will be indirectly influenced to a study of the classics; he may become ambitious to obtain a Rhodes scholarship; and, not of least importance, he will have come in contact with a great man and a great idea, described in such a manner that the impression of both man and idea must be vivid. The book should be in the library of every preparatory school and college." E. W. Murray.

+ Class J 8:349 My '13 800w

"Dr. Parkin's charming book on the Rhodes scholarships has a very special value also as expressing the matured opinions of the two men who have most earnestly devoted themselves to the success of the enterprise." C. F. T. Brooke.

+ Ind 74:579 Mr 13 '13 2200w

"Both for the general reader and for the prospective candidate for a Rhodes scholarship the present volume will be of value and interest."

+ Nation 96:156 F 13 '13 1050w

"Dr. Parkin has on the whole performed well a task that was by no means easy." Stanley Went.

+ N Y Times 18:7 Ja 5 '13 1850w

"This is a book of practical information for teachers, candidates, and committees of selection. It makes many interesting suggestions for making the most of the specific opportunities at Oxford."

+ R of Rs 47:764 Je '13 100w

Reviewed by Charles Boyd.

+ Sat R 115:514 Ap 26 '13 2100w

"The book is an extremely interesting account of perhaps the most remarkable experiment that sprang from Rhodes' brain."

+ Spec 110:155 Ja 25 '13 1300w

PARMELEE, MAURICE FARR. Science of human behavior, biological and psychological foundations. II *$2 (1½c) Macmillan 13-1720

The author applies the genetic method in his study of human behavior. He believes that this method is valuable because it emphasizes the fact of evolution; because it makes possible a comparative study; and because it makes the complex forms of behavior more understandable by resolving them to their simpler elements. He believes that such a study as this, from the biological point of view, will benefit both psychology and sociology by tending to clear up many of the "hazy and mystical explanations of human phenomena frequently proposed by writers in these two sciences."

Reviewed by C. C. North.

+ Am J Soc 19:256 S '13 730w

"Supplants Holmes' 'Evolution of animal intelligence' in some respects, but is not so full as Washburn's 'Animal mind.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:441 Je '13

"His volume should be helpful to those who, at the beginning of their studies, want to acquire a general view."

+ Ath 1913,1:283 Mr 8 80w

"We must caution the reader not to give too much weight to some of the positive statements."

+ — Ath 1913,1:311 Mr 15 1200w

"The author covers a wide and important field and has put an immense amount of data into the hands of the student of human behavior."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 21 '13 200w

"It must be admitted that Dr. Parmelee is entirely right in urging that biology and comparative psychology are necessary for the correct understanding of human behavior, and is to be commended for the attempt to supply, in a clearly written and not too voluminous work, the more essential data for this purpose. On the other hand it seems to me that the book as a whole may be justly criticized, not so much for its own peculiar faults, as for the pedagogical spirit which it represents. The author seems to confuse classification with explanation." T. D. A. Cockerell.

+ — Dial 54:376 My 1 '13 950w

"We should not like to have this book displace the usual textbooks on fundamental ethical and moral principles, but we should be very glad to see it used in connection with them."

+ — Educ R 46:95 Je '13 200w

"This book is a necessary one inasmuch as there is great need for a comprehensive exposition of the biological and psychological basis of human conduct for all who would seriously study problems in education, in jurisprudence, in medical practice—in fact in any department of human intercourse. This attempt suffers, however, from this point of view, in being too much a book for the professional student, and too little a book for the intelligent reader who is not a systematic student, altho the latter can get a great deal from it."

+ — Ind 75:571 S 4 '13 350w

"It is a well-written and fairly unified compendium of the chemical, anatomical, physiological, psychological and anthropological investigations bearing upon human behavior, based upon a wide but not always well-proportioned knowledge of the literature; but we cannot see that the author has succeeded noticeably in his attempt to 'make the conceptions more precise'—certainly not in the field of psychology."

+ — Nation 96:369 Ap 10 '13 830w

"The general student could not have a better introduction to comparative psychology in its application to man and society." A. E. Crawley.

+ Nature 102:396 D 4 '13 320w

N Y Times 18:86 F 16 '13 80w

"In but one part of the book is there a lapse from ample clarity. The chapters devoted to neurology are so bestrewn with terms far beyond the lay mind that they are confusing and not helpful." F. A. Dewey.

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:542 S '13 530w

"On account of its admirably simple phraseology it is well suited to the general reader, though this is accomplished at the sacrifice of nearly all stylistic quality, the idiom at times verging on colloquialism." F. L. Wells.

+ — Psychol Bull 10:280 JI 15 '13 750w

"The author's treatment is much more satisfactory when the broad trend of the book is considered than when particular passages are taken for examination." R. S. Woodworth.

+ — Science ns37:416 Mr 14 '13 850w

PARR, OLIVE KATHARINE. Little cardinal.
$1.25 (2½c) Benziger 12-23203

"The little cardinal' is really about Herbert Cardinal Vaughan, whom she has elsewhere called 'The children's cardinal,' though the actual protagonist of the present book is little Lord Uriel Adair, known by the former title. He is one of the children of that Catholic children's crusade which Cardinal Vaughan started out of his abounding and tender love for the pathetic little savages of the slums, the waifs and juvenile victims of poverty."—N Y Times

"A sentimental little story, told, however, with a touch of humour."

+ — Ath 1912,2:690 D 7 50w

"A story that goes straight to the heart."

+ Cath World 96:408 D '12 80w

"The tone and moral of the story are very uplifting."

+ Lit D 46:782 Ap 5 '13 170w

"There is too much of the sentimental style in it, but it is a tender, human book, good for any one to read."

+ — N Y Times 17:739 D 1 '12 100w

PARRISH, RANDALL. Air pilot. il *$1.25 (2c) McClurg 13-8283

The story, as related here, is told in the smoking room of a transatlantic steamer by a distinguished French aeronaut, Philip Dessaud. He explains to the listening men how it happened that his monoplane failed to appear in a recent Chicago exhibition where it had been scheduled as one of the features, and in so doing narrates a thrilling story of love and international intrigue. At the conclusion of his tale he introduces to his listeners the heroine of the series of adventures, now become Madame Dessaud, his wife.

"The literary quality is poor; the popularity of the subject is the only excuse for its purchase except in large libraries."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:456 Je '13

"His latest story is full of action and dramatic incident."

+ Boston Transcript p18 JI 16 '13 250w

"The story is really one of improbable international complications, similar but inferior to some of the yarns of E. Phillips Oppenheim."

— Nation 97:124 Ag 7 '13 200w

+ — N Y Sun p3 My 3 '13 170w

+ — N Y Times 18:472 S 14 '13 210w

"The story is very diverting, and carries with it an uncommonly interesting love story."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 270w

PARRISH, RANDALL. Gordon Craig, soldier of fortune. il *$1.35 (1½c) McClurg 12-24816

A story designed for those readers who like plenty of plot and action and mystery in their stories. The hero is a penniless young ex-Philippine-soldier, working his way east after his discharge. A chance of making $10,000 is suddenly offered him, and he takes the chance, for it merely means the impersonating for a few months of the heir to a southern estate. It is necessary, too, that a girl be found to impersonate the wife of the heir—and there the romance comes in. A villain appears with rival claims to the estate—and following his appearance comes the exciting action. The two men who draw young Craig into the scheme are engaged in a gigantic fraud—and thereby hangs all the mystery.

"A poor specimen of the sensational adventure story by Randall Parrish who has written better things, and the English is as careless as the plot. It is a hash of several styles and several plots that do not blend."

— N Y Sun p14 N 23 '12 50w

N Y Times 17:787 D 22 '12 150w

PARSONS, MRS. ELSIE WORTHINGTON (CLEWS). Old-fashioned woman; primitive fancies about the sex. *$1.50 (2½c) Putnam 13-10590

A book made up of a collection of "primitive fancies about the sex" gathered by the author in her journeys of exploration into the field of anthropological research. She presents a rich fund of primitive lore together with some spicy comment on modern notions and ideas, which, viewed calmly and dispassionately, appear little less amusing and absurd than some of the beliefs of the Bagobos, the Dyaks or the Tonga islanders. The work is carefully annotated with references cited.

"It is a satisfaction to turn from the heat and partisanship of the woman movement to the pages of Mrs. Parsons' 'The old-fashioned woman.'" F. F. Bernard.

+ Am J Soc 19:414 N '13 370w

+ A L A Bkl 10:61 O '13

"The book is carefully and sanely written. It is well worth a thorough perusal."

+ Ann Am Acad 49:246 S '13 180w

Ath 1913,2:624 N 29 '13 17w

"The author is an investigator, not a seer, hardly a theorizer; it is often difficult to decide whether her crisp observations are meant for irony or scorn, or whether they are impartial statements. As it is frequently the case in most works of research, the book gives the effect of having been written piecemeal, and through neglect or independence of methods, it does not seem to have been refurbished for the purpose of coordination. Mrs. Parsons is very readable, and her felicity of observation makes her a generally vivid stylist, but she seems to shirk committing herself and consequently her meaning and her statements themselves are often obscure. She stimulates interest without satisfying it." M. J. V.

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Je 4 '13 500w

"The author's style is scholarly, as we should expect it to be, but it is almost too ponderous, a bit too scholarly, if that criticism were allowable."

+ — Lit D 47:50 JI 5 '13 180w

"A very readable book which differs from most books of its kind in the fact that it is based upon some real knowledge of anthropology."

+ Nation 97:127 Ag 7 '13 170w

"It is a selection only from a vast literature, as is natural, but no man can deny that it is a fair one. Interspersed are comparisons with existing American customs, sometimes absolutely apposite, sometimes a bit misleading, but always telling. To the mere onlooker these are great fun."

+ N Y Sun p5 My 31 '13 280w

"The book will command the attention of the great body of thoughtful readers."

+ N Y Times 18:324 My 25 '13 100w

"Learned as Mrs. Parsons's book is, it is anything but heavy reading. Written in an admirable vein of satire... it is never ill-natured. The sympathetic reader will chuckle over it; to the unsympathetic it will prove exceedingly beneficial—unless they are beyond hope." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 18:356 Je 15 '13 550w

Outlook 104:1011 Ag 30 '13 120w

R of Rs 48:249 Ag '13 70w

"If she strains a point a little now and then in order to point a moral it cannot be said that she has failed to make out her case. Her books can hardly fail to serve the purpose of prompting a challenge of outgrown convention which needs to be shaken from its inertia."

PARSONS, ELSIE W.—Continued.

+ — Springfield Republican p5 O 2 '13 420w

"The book is an effective plea for the modern recognition of women as individuals and not as members of a class, and is especially interesting by reason of the humor and broad sympathy of the author." E. H. Naumburg.

+ Survey 30:437 Je 28 '13 500w

PARSONS, FRANK ALVAH. Principles of advertising arrangement. il $2 Prang A12-1712

The book presents the substance of a series of lectures delivered by the author, who is director of the New York school of fine and applied art, before the Advertising men's league of New York City. It treats advertising from a new point of view. "The psychologist in his analysis of advertising oftener leaves us with a knowledge of the principles underlying its construction without emphasizing forcibly enough the effects of these principles. Mr. Parsons makes us constantly seek effects." (Ann Am Acad)

A L A Bkl 9:384 My '13

"The work is exceedingly suggestive in nature and tends to provoke most healthy argument in relation to the principles involved. The chapters on color are excellent and establish a simple method for class approach to this subject."

+ Ann Am Acad 48:265 Jl '13 250w

"It will prove valuable to both advertiser and the public."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ag 16 '13 300w

"Of direct value to every teacher of design. The illustrations alone, selected with a view to teaching objectively by contrasts, are invaluable as an aid in all such problems as class posters, announcements, school monthlies or annuals, and all other forms of design involving lettering and decorative detail. The text smacks of Mr. Parsons himself. It is good-natured, enthusiastic, unconventional, and forceful, the work of a man of conviction and fearlessness action."

+ School Arts Magazine 12:67 S '12 150w

"Here is a book as vigorous and reckless, as astute and significant as Charles Martel! In the realm of commercialism it challenges the whole innumerable host of Islam. From foreword to tail-piece it bristles with keen insights and sharp truths, hard facts and strong reasons. Every theory is exemplified. Every argument is clinched with an illustration from life. It is what the advertising men call 'a live proposition.'"

+ School Arts Magazine 12:206 N '12 200w

PARTINGTON, J. RIDDICK. Higher mathematics for chemical students. il $2 Van Nostrand (Eng ed Agr11-2271)

"The titles of the chapters will give an idea of the scope of the text. Functions and limits, rate of change of a function, differentiation of algebraic functions, maximum and minimum values of a function, exponential and logarithmic functions, partial differentiation, interpolation and extrapolation, the indefinite integral (two chapters), definite integrals, application of the definite integral, differential equations (two chapters), and appendices containing the theory of quadratic equations, the solutions of systems of linear equations by determinants, approximation formulas, and a tabulation of the exponential and natural logarithmic functions. Everywhere are found detailed and vital applications to chemistry, to which the list of entries in the index bears ample witness."—Science

"Should be of great advantage to mathematically inclined chemists as well as interesting to pure mathematicians."

+ Nation 96:466 My 9 '12 70w

"Of all the mathematical books intended for the use of chemical students which have come under the notice of the present writer, Mr. Partington's is the most serviceable. The author has had a clear notion of the practical problem to be solved, and has performed his task successfully." J. W.

+ Nature 88:74 N 16 '11 200w

"Judged from the point of view of the mathematician, Partington's work is far from good; it has that sort of inaccuracy which indicates that its author, no matter how much he may use his mathematics, does not have any thorough knowledge of the subject. For the class for whom it is designed the book is far more useful than the ordinary text on calculus." E. B. Wilson.

+ — Science ns37:63 Ja 10 '13 1050w

PARTRIDGE, MRS. EMELYN NEWCOMB, and PARTRIDGE, GEORGE EVERETT. Story-telling in school and home. il $1.25 (2c) Sturgis & Walton 12-25351

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"A very thoughtful and scientific study of story-telling from the point of view of modern child psychology as taught by G. Stanley Hall. Perhaps too psychological for the ordinary teacher or parent."

+ A L A Bkl 9:332 Ap '13

"This is a most masterful and valuable book. The authors know their subject thoroughly and present it from both the philosophical and the historical point of view as well as from the practical. We most heartily commend this book to all teachers who handle literature in any form."

+ Chaut 72:61 S 20 '13 250w

+ Educ R 45:209 F '13 60w

"We have long needed such a helpful manual." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1360 D 12 '12 40w

+ Outlook 103:321 F 8 '13 100w

PARTRIDGE, G. E. Reading book in modern philosophy. $1.50 (1½c) Sturgis & Walton

The author has prepared this book in the belief that such a "selection of standard writings, that shall be read and re-read until they become possessions of the mind" should be at the command of students. He makes selections from the writings of Descartes, Hobbes, Spinoza, Leibniz, Locke, Berkeley, Hume, Kant, Fichte, von Schelling, Schopenhauer, Hegel, and Spencer.

"The book is handy in size and it will meet a real need."

+ Boston Transcript p25 N 12 '13 110w

PARTRIDGE, GEORGE EVERETT. Studies in the psychology of intemperance. $1 (2c) Sturgis & Walton 12-25118

"The book is divided into two parts. Part first deals with 'the intoxication impulse,' and gives in an interesting and sequential way the history of intemperance. The modern view of the physiological and morbid actions of alcohol is concisely given, but necessarily in an abbreviated form. . . . The second part of the book, comprising forty-seven pages, is given over to the consideration of 'the practical problem.' In this limited space the author discusses the saloon and the club and the methods of approaching a solution to the problem of drunkenness. The two concluding chapters on educational measures and the care of the inebriate contain considerable food for thought."—Survey

"A well based and well presented study of the 'intoxication impulse.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:249 F '13

"To one and all a volume of this kind has an important service to perform. As an antidote to the unreason circulated in regard to alcoholic poisoning, this book may be highly recommended. It is important not because it offers a new view of the effects or a new remedy for the abuses, but because it offers the basis for an understanding of the problem, whatever may be the solution in this or that environment. It also provides for a reasonable attitude towards regulation, which means that it is an instrument of sanity and not of prejudice."

+ Dial 54:24 Ja 1 '13 380w

N Y Times 17:770 D 15 '12 100w

+ — Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 1250w

"The criticisms that may be made are that insufficient attention is given to the alleged biologic causes for intemperance, and that the author is somewhat dogmatic. The careful reader, however, soon detects that these apparent defects are not really faults, as the book reflects the author's opinions and follows quite closely the modern conception of drunkenness." I. H. Neff, M. D.

+ — Survey 29:397 D 28 '12 480w

PATON, RAYMOND. Drummer of the dawn. 12. *$1.30 Dodd

The story of a child genius who dies before his promise comes to full flower, but who exerts a remarkable influence over certain people with whom he comes in contact. One of these is a brilliant, middle-aged man, with creative power spent thru dissipation, who takes charge of the boy, Philip, when fortune casts him adrift in London's Bohemia.

"Owing to something in the nature of a recent glut in angelic youths retrieving hoary sinners, we were none too ready to find this book interesting. We did so, however."

+ — Ath 1913:1:592 My 31 110w

"Mr. Paton has a very realistic way of depicting characters."

+ — Boston Transcript p8 S 20 '13 380w

+ — Spec 111:218 Ag 9 '13 30w

PATRICK, MARY MILLS. Sappho and the Island of Lesbos. il *$1.25 Houghton (Eng ed 13-6742)

"This little volume, written for 'lovers of Greek poetry,' gives a faithful account of the famous poetess, her home, contemporaries, work, and the customs and manners of her age. . . . Sappho is here considered in relation to her surroundings, her contemporaries, and her poems, which are translated and thoughtfully discuss."—Lit D

"A readable, attractive little volume."

+ A L A Bkl 10:23 S '13

"These essays on Sappho are chiefly noteworthy for their pictures of modern Mitylene. As a contribution to a critical estimate of the poet they are inconsiderable. The prose translations of the poems and fragments, including the most recently discovered, are surprisingly superior in style to the rest of the book."

+ — Ath 1912:2:444 O 19 170w

"Sappho is an interesting personality, and one may get an excellent impression of the woman, the poet, her home, and her age from this little book."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '13 500w

+ — Dial 54:467 Je 1 '13 350w

"The book is concise and complete as a direct portrayal of her surroundings, associates, and accomplishments."

+ Lit D 46:907 Ap 19 '13 150w

"A readable, if somewhat amateurish, style. Miss Patrick's familiarity with the modern life of the Aegean islands adds greatly to the interest of her work."

+ — Nation 96:527 My 22 '13 320w

"Sappho seems very real, definite, and admirable as we read of her, and her contemporaries, and of the manners and customs of her time and place, in Mary Mills Patrick's monograph."

+ N Y Times 18:263 My 4 '13 400w

"The illustrations are charming and helpful."

+ Outlook 104:632 Jl 19 '13 130w

PATTERSON, CHARLES BRODIE. What is new thought? The living way. *$1 (2c) Crowell 13-6277

"New thought, as opposed to old thought," says the author, "takes the ground that the truth regarding life and its laws is not to be found in the study of phenomena, but rather in man's inmost consciousness." And the principal object of his book, as he states it is "the throwing of light on the pathway of life in order to make it easier for people to overcome the unrest of mind and body, and to show that through inner knowledge one may become harmoniously adjusted to outer environment." (Preface)

"The most recent advances of the cult are here set down though the spirit of the book is conservative."

+ Boston Transcript p19 Jl 23 '13 200w

+ Lit D 47:884 N 8 '13 160w

"The exposition it contains is simply and clearly written and thoroughly comprehensive."

+ N Y Times 18:195 Ap 6 '13 50w

"Truths for individual and social application are prominent in this volume, and give it a serviceable value which is lessened by its doubtful theorizing on harmonic and magnetic vibration, and its utterly groundless teaching that 'all sorrow, suffering, disease, and death have their origin in Fear.'"

+ — Outlook 104:39 My 3 '13 180w

"It is difficult to find a more helpful or inspiring book. The author's statement of the principles of new thought is masterly in its definitive skill and wisdom."

+ R of Rs 48:249 Ag '13 150w

PATTERSON, JOHN EDWARD. His father's wife. *$1.35 (1½c) Macmillan 13-20345

A story which deals with an unnatural situation and the maze of consequences growing out of it. Given a father with a child wife whom his grown son loves, there are bound to be complications. It is a gripping tale of long-suffering, renunciation and tragic happenings.

"There is much fine and forceful work in the portrayal of the character, that of the father being particularly alive and convincing."

+ N Y Times 18:601 N 2 '13 200w

"A strong piece of work."

+ Outlook 105:548 N 8 '13 150w

PATTERSON, JOHN EDWARD. Story of Stephen Compton. *$1.25 Doran 13-122

"Mr. Patterson takes his figures from among the proletariat and describes fully their woes of many sorts. . . . He brings Stephen Compton out of the depths, makes him a great lawyer and a leader of Parliament; even arranges a brilliant trial marriage for him. Later, after the death of his wife, he goes back to his first love amid the scenes of his boyhood and completes a real romance. . . . The story as a whole is a striking exposition of the obvious trend of British politics; perhaps of politics everywhere."—Boston Transcript

"It is in assembling the myriad details of the hero's environment that the book is most successful. Mr. Patterson has attempted writing on the scale of a Balzac; it is no small triumph to have achieved partial success."

+ — Ath 1913:1:97 Ja 25 220w

Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 220w

"He has written a rather odd mixture of old-fashioned Sunday-school book and sociological novel-with-a-purpose. The style of the book is wordy, involved and inaccurate. The volume can be recommended with confidence to teachers of rhetoric in search of horrible examples."

— Nation 96:390 Ap 17 '13 280w

"Mr. Patterson's intention in the writing of this novel was excellent and his idea attractive. But the manner of its execution is disappointing. These early scenes are presented with such truth, simplicity, and graphic quality that they are well worth reading by any PATTERSON, JOHN EDWARD—Continued. one who cares to get a glimpse into the life they describe. But afterward the interest lags. The story is much too long drawn out, and it is told too much in narrative, with little feeling for the vivifying dramatic touch. Also, the style is slovenly and careless in the extreme."

— + N Y Times 18:161 Mr 23 '13 380w
R of Rs 47:629 My '13 50w

"Mr. Patterson takes himself seriously, and his solid work deserves consideration. Both the politics and the superficialities of the social life of the well-to-do are crudely drawn, but with evident earnestness, and the Burnley scenes are really good exercises in drab colour."

— + Spec 110:365 Mr 1 '13 250w

PATTERSON, MARJORIE. Dust of the road.
10 il $1.30 (1½c) Holt 13-18222

A record of stage life in its every day aspects from the point of view of the men and women who follow the profession. Tony Meredith a young American of southern birth leaves her Virginia home to try for stage success abroad. She studies at the Conservatoire in Paris and joins a provincial touring company in England. She works her way up to success, but when love comes to her and she is forced to make the old choice between domesticity and a career, she makes the conventional choice.

"The story is little more than a pretext for the introduction of a gallimaufry of stage slang, stage superstitions, and stage anecdotes with most of which many persons are already familiar."

— Ath 1913,2:228 S 6 130w

"But, disappointing as the ending is, the fact remains that the book lives up to its title. Marjorie Patterson has proved that she is entitled to be taken seriously as an author as well as upon the stage." F. T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 38:313 N '13 360w

+ Ind 76:95 O 9 '13 70w

"The story as a story is rather involved, but the aim of the book is evidently to describe conditions 'behind the scenes.' In that, it succeeds."

+ — Lit D 47:880 N 8 '13 150w

N Y Sun p14 O 18 '13 650w

N Y Times 18:632 N 16 '13 120w

"Realistic work, but decidedly dull in places."

+ — Sat R 116:372 S 20 '13 30w

PATTERSON, REV. ROBERT J. Catch-my-pal: a story of good Samaritanism. $1 Doran
A13-1384

"A new way of fighting the Demon Rum is set forth in this book. . . . Mr. Patterson started his movement by persuading six Armagh men to sign the pledge of total abstinence, and each of these men agreed to persuade one of his acquaintances to sign the pledge, or, in other words, agreed to catch a pal and make a total abstainer of him. The six men became twelve, and the twelve became twenty-four, and presently there was a big organization of non-drinkers in Armagh—and the good work is still going on. It is said that the Armagh plan has been tried successfully in a great many other places, and that it has greatly restrained intemperance in communities which formerly seemed quite beyond redemption."—N Y Times

N Y Times 18:116 Mr 2 '13 230w

"The book is a glowingly Irish account of what has been a unique illustration of the power of sheer brotherhood, applied after the method of the Gospels and in the unconventional spirit of the Good Samaritan. The material given here is to be classed for significance in interpreting religious experience with two recent publications—'Varieties of religious experience' and 'Twice-born men.'" J. F. Bushnell.

+ Survey 30:221 My 10 '13 270w

PAUL, HERBERT WOODFIELD, ed. Famous speeches; selected and ed., with introductory notes. $3 Little (Eng ed 13-3721)

"This second series of speeches includes eighteen specimens of oratory by English and American speakers of highest reputation within the last eighty years." (Boston Transcript) "Macaulay, Lincoln, Disraeli, Parnell, Gladstone, Lowell, Chamberlain, and Lord Rosebery are among those whose speeches have been drawn from. Each speech has an introductory note by the editor." (Ath)

Ath 1912,2:306 S 21 30w

"They constitute a notable body of modern eloquence."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 1 '13 550w

Dial 54:349 Ap 16 '13 80w

"Upon the whole, a book worth having, though it might and should have been much better."

+ — N Y Sun p34 Ap 5 '13 1200w

N Y Times 18:259 Ap 27 '13 100w

"It must be confessed that speeches do not as a rule provide very lively reading matter, and this second collection of Mr. Herbert Paul's only emphasizes the fact that a good rhetorical style is usually a very bad literary one. Indeed, we ought not to read speeches, any more than we listen to them, for their literary style, and those in Mr. Paul's volume make up for any lack of it by their historical and political interest."

+ — Spec 109:564 O 12 '12 320w

PEARSON, EDMUND LESTER. Voyage of the 12 Hoppergrass. il $1.35 (3c) Macmillan 13-22818

The "Hoppergrass" was a big cat-boat on which the two boys of the story and an old salt, Captain Bannister, cruise along the New England coast. The captain didn't like the boat's name, which had been given her by a former owner. He wanted to rename her the "Hannah J. Pettingill" after a deceased aunt, but the boys objected, and the "Hoppergrass" she remained thru all her various adventures. First the crew of the boat rescued a young man, whose name seemed to be "Daddles," from a desert island; then the two boys and Mr. Daddles lost the "Hoppergrass" and her captain; then the captain lost her himself; then the boys, with Mr. Daddles, ran down the two young pirates who had stolen her, and there was a happy reunion of all concerned, with a revelation concerning the genial Mr. Daddles (which wasn't his name) who turned out to be a very famous person indeed with a wonderful sprinting record and an international reputation.

"The voyage of the Hoppergrass" is probably more nearly in the 'Treasure Island' class than anything written since then. That is to say while it is not exactly the same kind of story, it is in the same field and is done with almost an equal measure of art. Thomas Fogarty has supplied just the right kind of line drawings." M. C. Anderson.

+ + Bookm 38:441 D '13 110w

"The story is full of charm and that whimsical quality which makes Mr. Pearson so attractive a writer for boys." W. S. Braithwaite.

+ Boston Transcript p26 N 26 '13 100w

"As in 'The believing years,' so in 'The voyage of the Hoppergrass,' the spirit of youth permeates every page. It is more of a rollicking story than its predecessor, containing less of the reflective philosophy of youth, but it is none the less a tale that will rejoice the hearts of all readers. It is to be regretted, however, that Mr. Pearson is not more fortunate in his illustrator."

+ + — Boston Transcript p9 D 13 '13 400w

"A thoroughly amusing tale."

+ N Y Sun p3 N 15 '13 110w

"Mr. Pearson's new story will be enjoyed by all young persons between the ages of 8 and 80. Not a single really improbable incident occurs during the entire voyage, yet it is all enveloped in that glamour bestowed by the rose-tinted glasses of youth. 'The voyage of the Hoppergrass' will prove to older readers a pleasant journey to the Land of Long Ago, only we do wish that Mr. Daddles had finished his account of the wreck of the Hot Cross Bun.'

+ + N Y Times 18:632 N 16 '13 620w

"This story, like Mr. Barrie's 'Peter Pan,' would have been written by a boy, if a boy could have written it."

+ + Outlook 105:711 N 29 '13 160w

PEARSON, HENRY GREENLEAF. James S.
Wadsworth of Geneseo. il $4 (4c) Scrib-
ner 13-13554

The subject of this biography was a wealthy landowner of the Geneseo valley, prominent in the life of his state, who, in 1861, at the age of 53, enlisted under General McDowell. He was raised to the rank of brevet major-general, fought at Chancellorsville and at Gettysburg where he held Culp's hill after the first day. At the Wilderness he was mortally wounded, dying later in the hands of the enemy. A confederate soldier to whom he had done a kindness asked permission to take charge of the body; he was thus saved from an unknown grave and was accorded later a burial with state and national honors. He was his state's most distinguished soldier, and this is his first published biography.

+ A L A Bkl 10:61 O '13

"An exceedingly interesting account of his life."
D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 20 '13 1150w

"The book is of permanent value."

+ Dial 55:88 Ag 1 '13 300w

+ Lit D 47:534 S 27 '13 400w

"A well-written piece of biography."

+ Nation 97:149 Ag 14 '13 280w

N Y Times 18:372 Je 22 '13 150w

"This is his first biography, and it is an admirable one. It has the merit wanted in so many biographies of presenting from first to last a perfect picture of its subject. The painting is done without a flaw. The author, too, is a critic who sees with his own eyes, and his comments on the men and acts of the time are those of a man with vision. It is an addition both to the national portrait gallery and to the general literature of the war, for which we are grateful."

+ + N Y Times 18:385 J1 6 '13 2000w

+ Outlook 104:874 Ag 16 '13 50w

"His letters and speeches and his intimate relationship with the president and various secretaries of state all help to throw a vivid light behind the scenes. The book is well written, and paints a most attractive picture of a gallant, energetic, and patriotic gentleman. It is a pity that as a military record the value of the text is so largely discounted by the inadequacy and poor quality of the maps."

+ — Spec 111:921 N 29 '13 730w

"The writer has the biographer's hand, and gives us something more than a restatement of the well-known events of a great period."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 17 '13 240w

PEDDIE, ROBERT ALEXANDER. Engineering and metallurgical books, 1907-1911.
$1.50 Van Nostrand (Eng ed 12-27451)

"A full catalogue of all British and American books on engineering, metallurgy and allied topics, published during the five years 1907 to 1911. . . . The text is arranged under specific subject headings in alphabetical order, and in addition to the titles, the American and English prices and publishers' names are given. The volume lists practically all the current books on applied science in the English language."—Engin Rec

"A useful book of reference."

+ Elec World 61:740 Ap 5 '13 80w

"A bibliography of good engineering or of good metallurgical books, with brief but pithy descriptive and critical notes, would be a real boon to the earnest searcher for technical data and information. The book before us is far from being such a work."

— Engin N 69:136 Ja 16 '13 120w

"The same information could only be obtained by the expenditure of much time and labor, and this book should prove a valuable addition to all engineering and reference libraries."

+ Engin Rec 66:675 D 14 '12 120w

Indust Engin 13:80 F '13 70w

PEET, THOMAS ERIC. Rough stone monuments and their builders. *75c (2c) Harper 13-467

In this volume, recently added to "Harper's library of living thought," the author gives "A complete though brief sketch of our present knowledge of the megalithic monuments." His aim is "to enable those who are interested in Stonehenge and other great stone monuments of England to learn something of the similar buildings which exist in different parts of the world, of the men who constructed them, and of the great archaeological system of which they form a part." (Preface) In addition to the megalithic monuments of the British Isles the author considers those of Scandinavia, France, Spain and Portugal, Italy and its islands, Africa, Malta, and Asia.

+ A L A Bkl 9:384 My '13

"The book may be safely recommended as a cautious summary of a most difficult problem."

+ Nature 90:567 Ja 23 '13 200w

"A thorough little monograph."

+ N Y Sun p15 N 23 '12 30w

N Y Times 17:728 D 1 '12 70w

Spec 109:909 N 30 '12 40w

PEETS, ELBERT. Practical tree repair. il $2
13 (4c) McBride, Nast & co. 12-23382

A book devoted entirely to one branch of arboriculture—that concerned with the prevention and repair of physical injuries to the framework of the tree. The commonly used terms "tree-doctoring" and "tree surgery" the author points out, are misnomers. Titles of chapters are: A program for saving the trees; The tree's structure and manner of growth; Wounds and their treatment; Boring insects and their control; Rot-fungi and their work; The value and function of filling trees; The filling of cavities; The various types of cavities; The treatment of cavities without filling; Bracing; The prevention of wounds and cavities; The trade of tree repairs. The treatment thus far is general but a final chapter, Notes on the various species, considers the problems presented by special trees.

"Some very sensible and practical advice as to the care of trees is given in this volume. The illustrations depicting different methods of repair are a valuable feature."

+ N Y Times 18:720 D 7 '13 380w

PEIXOTTO, ERNEST CLIFFORD. Pacific shores from Panama. il $2.50 (6c) Scribner

"Spanish America of the Pacific still remains one of the few countries undiscovered by the tourist. The few foreigners who use the steamers that slowly meander up and down its coast are for the most part commercial travelers, mining engineers, or a stray missionary or archaeologist. The few books that have been written about it . . . deal with the region from one or the other of these viewpoints. But no book that I have been able to find treats of it as a journey of recreation, a quest for the knowledge usually to be obtained by travel." (Preface) It is from this point of view that the country is described in this beautifully illustrated volume.

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 13 '13 830w

"So much excellence of more than one sort is seldom included within a single book of travel."

+ Dial 55:479 D 1 '13 170w

PEIXOTTO, ERNEST CLIFFORD—Continued.

Reviewed by C. E. Hesselgrave.

+ Ind 76:512 D 11 '13 60w

"That land is fortunate which has Mr. Peixotto to sketch it with pencil and pen. He is equally facile with both, and the pleasant narrative vies with the fourscore drawings in descriptive excellence."

+ Lit D 47:881 N 8 '13 210w

"The volume is essentially of the gift-book type, and yet it is more than that, for the text of richly illustrated gift books is rarely as interesting and as trustworthy as in the present case. There are remarkably few misstatements."

+ Nation 97:542 D 4 '13 300w

"He tells of the things he saw easily and pleasantly."

+ N Y Sun p5 O 25 '13 120w

"Mr. Ernest Peixotto is a pleasantly chatty person to have for a guide, and never has he been more entertaining than in the personally conducted tour which he offers his readers in his 'Pacific shores from Panama.'"

+ N Y Times 18:590 N 2 '13 370w

"A volume of interest and of restfulness to those who want to know more about South America. We say 'restfulness' advisedly. Most books on South America are full of statistics and information. They are necessary and valuable, of course. But they are not always restful. Mr. Peixotto's is."

+ Outlook 105:710 N 20 '13 150w

PELLEW, CHARLES ERNEST. Dyes and dyeing. il *$2 (3c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-1623

"This book is intended for the use of craftsmen and others who are trying to dye and stain textiles by hand and on a small scale, rather than for professional dyers or dyeing chemists who are interested in factory dyeing, conducted on a large scale." (Preface) It has grown out of the author's own experiments and out of his class room work in chemistry and in textiles. He believes the book will be of value to other craftsmen and to teachers of art in public and private schools.

"An invaluable work for the teacher, the worker in textiles who dyes on a small scale and the student."

+ A L A Bkl 9:384 My '13

"He has here that rarity, a popular book written by a thorough master of his subject."

+ N Y Sun p5 F 15 '13 130w

+ N Y Times 18:305 My 18 '13 70w

PELOUBET, FRANCIS NATHAN, and ADAMS, ALICE DANA, eds. International Bible dictionary. il *$2.40 (½c) Winston

The present work has been based on the one-volume edition of Dr. William Smith's "Bible dictionary" which Dr. Peloubet revised and published in 1881. It has however been thoroly revised and much enlarged and is printed from new plates with new maps and illustrations. "Every article has been tested by the best and most modern authority and there is scarcely an article which has not been changed in some respect, while in many cases the changes have been great and important, or the articles wholly rewritten. . . . This dictionary has no room for detailed speculations and debatable theories, but devotes itself to the facts of the Bible itself." (Preface)

"In addition to those massive monuments of learning edited by Cheyne and Hastings there are such splendid single volume dictionaries as the Standard and Hastings's. And they all have their place. Each has its superior points over the others. This volume has the advantage over the two named above in number of articles, in number of illustrations, in durability of binding and in the fact that it is less than half the price of either of the others. In general it gives more space to persons and places than either Hastings's or the Standard, but it is inferior to both of these in its treatment of the New Testament books; and this is especially true of the four Gospels. The emphasis in the Standard and in Hastings's is upon the New Testament and the New Testament subjects. To the editor of this volume the Old Testament appears to be of equal value with the New. For the average Sunday school teacher it is the best Bible dictionary published."

+ — Boston Transcript p19 D 24 '12 450w

+ Dial 54:107 F 1 '13 220w

"The most commendable thing about this new book, besides its reasonable price, is the large number of illustrations. Pictures of Biblical sites, recovered monuments, and significant, Oriental activities of the present day do something to atone for the unscholarly character of the five thousand articles."

+ — Ind 73:1431 D 19 '12 70w

"As a work of reference this dictionary is misleading, although as a repository of names of persons and places mentioned in the Bible, with full Scripture references, it will be found useful."

+ — Nation 96:396 Ap 17 '13 150w

"There are many good points in this comparatively low-priced and well-illustrated volume. The announcement of its publishers that it conforms to 'the latest discoveries and conclusions of modern scholarship' is but partly sustained by its contents."

+ — Outlook 102:778 D 7 '12 150w

PENDEXTER, HUGH. Young fishermen. il *$1.20 (1½c) Small 12-25075

This is the first number of a new series for boys to be known as "Along the coast series." The young hero, Jeff Pride, is a woodsman who is new to coast life. He enters into a partnership with Sidney Luce, a young lad who has grown up by the sea and who knows the fishing industry from the bottom up. In their lobster fishing enterprise they win the enmity of a band of smugglers, but with the aid of old Cap'n Twink, they are able to bring the marauders to justice.

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:579 Ja '13 30w

+ — N Y Sun p4 D 7 '12 100w

PENNELL, ELIZABETH (ROBINS) (MRS. JOSEPH PENNELL). Our house and London out of our windows. il *$2.50 Houghton 12-25107

A new and enlarged edition of a volume which first appeared under the title "Our house and the people in it." The author and her artist-husband had apartments overlooking the Thames and there entertained many artists. Much of the story relates amusing difficulties with English servants and beggars. "Sixteen glimpses of 'London out of our windows' are offered, depicting with Mr. Pennell's customary charm and skill many of the most characteristic aspects, both by day and by night, of the greatest of modern cities." (Dial)

"This book is a pleasant trifle got out for the Christmas trade as text for some pictures of Mr. Pennell's—which it far surpasses." Algonon Tassin.

+ — Bookm 36: 399 D '12 150w

"In this new and handsome edition, with the added attraction of Mr. Pennell's illustrations, the book is sure to find the wide circle of readers which it so well deserves."

+ Dial 53: 456 D 1 '12 200w

"It is hardly necessary to say that these sketches are not only a delight in themselves, but they have an appropriateness which can be asserted of few pictures that are intended to adorn a tale."

+ — Nation 95:489 N 21 '12 120w

"If there were no other delightful paragraph to be found in 'Our house' than the one in which we are told exactly what Elizabeth Robins Pennell's extremely respectable British cook thought of Whistler, the book would still be eminently worth reading for the joy of that particular page. But there is much beside."

+ N Y Times 17: 682 N 24 '12 770w

"Any one who has looked out of the high-hung windows of the 'House' will rejoice in the impressions of the views made by the artist, and be glad once more to read the witty, unforced character sketches with wise comments written by the other artist."

+ Outlook 102: 820 D 14 '12 90w

PENNING, L. Life and times of Calvin; tr. 10 from the Dutch by B. S. Berrington. il *$3.50 Dutton

"In translating [this work] from the Dutch the Rev. B. S. Berrington has given to English readers a lively and popular summary of recent research on this subject, of which such a quantity was poured forth at the quarter-centenary of the reformer's birth. . . . The whole picture is extremely partisan."—Eng Hist R

"This volume is not worthy of an extended notice, for it is the work of a mere rhetorician rather than of a scholar. It is full of inaccurate statements, devoid of true historical perspective, and its continual appeal to anti-Catholic prejudice reminds one of the fourth-rate controversialists of the A. P. A. days of the early nineties."

— Cath World 97:685 Ag '13 270w

"While in the main reproducing correctly the views of competent scholars—particularly those of Doumergue—the book is full of minor slips." P. S.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:397 Ap '13 320w

"The author seems to have modelled his style upon a rather low type of 'penny thrillers,' and the translator ably seconds his endeavor. There is not a gleam of scholarly purpose. It would be idle to attempt specific criticism where all is beneath the level of critical comment. One has only to open the book anywhere to find one's self moved to unseemly hilarity rather than to respectful attention."

— Nation 97:191 Ag 28 '13 270w

PEPPER, JOHN HENRY. Boy's playbook of science; rev., rewritten & il., with many additions by J. Mastin. *$2.50 Dutton 12-18025

"The author asserts that as far as possible he has avoided the use of technical terms, and parents will, of course, thank him for the assurance that 'tho some of the experiments can not well be performed outside a laboratory, the majority are within the compass of execution in an ordinary house-kitchen, with the assistance of the glass and crockery generally found there.' Among interesting discussions, we note the sections on photography, telephony, wireless, and the x-rays, apart from the usual details of physics. The book contains countless diagrams."—Lit D

"The work of revision and addition strikes us as ably done."

+ Ath 1912,2:250 S 7 70w

"Under the guise of play, the profoundest truths may be fathomed, is the author's belief; but his approach is ever of the straight, simple, scientific kind." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1369 D 12 '12 70w

Lit D 45:1079 D 7 '12 150w

"A very large number of phenomena are dealt with in a manner which is often too cursory to be clear, and is sometimes, indeed, actually erroneous."

— Nature 90:538 Ja 16 '13 400w

"In its present form the book is quite abreast of the times, and bright boys who make use of it will gain valuable information, while at the same time they are greatly entertained."

+ N Y Times 17:451 Ag 18 '12 80w

Outlook 102:321 O 12 '12 50w

"As an introduction to physics and chemistry for juvenile readers, the work has a distinct educational value."

+ Sat R 114:sup8 D 7 '12 50w

PERKINS, MRS. LUCY (FITCH). Irish twins. 12 il *$1 Houghton 13-24317

The story of the childish adventures of two engaging Irish youngsters, Larry and Eileen. Their play time and their work time at home and at school are described and a few bits of Irish folk lore are introduced into the narrative as stories told to the two by Grannie Malone.

"The illustrations are fully as charming as those for the Dutch and Japanese twins, but there's even more humour in these new ones, as befits the nationality." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:443 D '13 40w

"A nice little story with attractive pictures by the author."

+ N Y Times 18:730 D 7 '13 130w

PERKINS, MRS. LUCY FITCH. Japanese twins. il *$1 (5c) Houghton 12-25844

The twins are Taro and Take, a little brother and sister who live in a tiny Japanese house with a father, mother, grandmother, and a baby brother. They go to school, celebrate their birthdays, ride in a jinricksha, and play games after the manner of other Japanese children. The pictures of the two children at work and at play add much to the attractiveness of the little story.

"The atmosphere is pleasing, the local color fuller than in the companion volume, 'The Dutch twins,' and there are many attractive drawings."

+ A L A Bkl 9:304 Mr '13 *

"Lucy Fitch Perkins, in such a simple story as 'The Japanese twins,' is charming both as writer and as artist." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73: 1372 D 12 '12 20w

"The Japanese twins' can be read aloud by the parent or teacher, and the pictures will do much to make the narrative attractive."

+ Lit D 45: 1079 D 7 '12 120w

"It fulfils the requirements of a nursery story book and is at the same time a contribution to ethnography."

+ N Y Sun p 10 N 30 '12 70w

"There should be in every household where there are small people a children's hour for the enjoyment of just such books."

+ N Y Times 17: 748 D 1 '12 50w

"Children are fascinated. Teachers of drawing will enjoy the illustrations—honest pencil sketches, reproduced in facsimile, capital hints for pose drawing in costume, and standards in technique." H: T. B.

+ School Arts Magazine 12:636 My '13 50w

PERRIS, GEORGE HERBERT. Germany and the German emperor. *$3 Holt (Eng ed 12-26755)

"Mr. Perris begins with the early history of Germany, the Thirty years' war, the Rise of Prussia, and the Napoleonic wars, and it is not till we get well into his book that we come to the period of Bismarck and to the German empire as we know it to-day." (Ath) "The title of the book shows that the author has bestowed special pains on the short section dealing with William II. . . . Mr. Perris is perfectly clear about the Emperor's intense sincerity, though he finds it hard to understand how a man in his position can let himself always speak what is uppermost in his mind. What is more, he recognises how the Emperor's character has become steadily broader and stronger during his twenty-four years' reign." (Sat R) The author hopes for an Anglo-German understanding but sees no immediate prospect of its being brought about.

"The author's attitude toward the German people is friendly, toward the government aggressively hostile."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:384 My '13

"We are furnished with one of the best accounts in brief compass of political parties and political problems under the Empire that has come to the attention of the reviewer."

PERRIS, GEORGE HERBERT—Continued.

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:327 My '13 350w

"The discussion of the rivalry of England and Germany is remarkably fair considering the author's evident predispositions in favor of the former country. The last chapters on the economic revolution now in progress and the political revolution which the author thinks inevitable in Germany are the best in the book." C. L. Jones.

+ Ann Am Acad 46:225 Mr '13 320w

"We do not feel sure that Mr. Perris's book, full of information as it is, and good as is its object, will make us better liked in Germany. Some of his words about the Kaiser are perhaps unnecessarily harsh."

+ Ath 1912,2:513 N 2 650w

"Of historical facts he gives few, if any, that are new. But the interpretation of the physical, personal, and social forces which interplayed in the earlier stages of German development is usually sound, and the description of German polity and achievement within our own generation is exceptionally clear, well-informed, and convincing." F. A. Ogg.

+ Dial 54:418 My 16 '13 900w

"The work is timely and readable, written with all the dash and concentration of an accomplished publicist. 'Germany and the German emperor' will be read with profit by all who are interested in the great scene of war and politics unfolded before the eyes of the present generation."

+ Lit D 46:352 F 15 '13 750w

"On his main theme Mr. Perris writes with considerable knowledge and, on the whole, with good judgment, though not wholly without an English bias. The author is at his best in the chapters dealing with the modern economic changes in both Germany and England and with the movements from country to city life. The book is written with considerable care and on the whole with great accuracy. There are but few minor blemishes."

+ Nation 96:522 My 22 '13 1800w

N Y Sun p5 Ja 11 '13 1550w

"With a very clear idea of what he has meant to do and a style of uncommon simplicity and vigor he has made an extremely interesting book as well as an instructive one—good reading from cover to cover." H. W. Boynton.

+ N Y Times 18:359 Je 15 '13 570w

R of Rs 47:125 Ja '13 100w

"Mr. Perris is an honest man with terrific prejudices. He is a rabid Free Trader and abhors conscription. There are times when his prejudices run away with him, and he writes of the Germans as though they were British Nonconformists. The bulk of the book deals with the evolution of modern Germany, and here Mr. Perris' clear appreciation of facts guides him rightly. Had he brooded over his material for a year or so and then worked it out at length, he would perhaps have written first-rate history. As it is, the reader is painfully conscious of the endeavor to pack too much into a paragraph."

+ Sat R 114:679 N 30 '12 1350w

"The book is written with distinction and obvious care, and, except for a few lapses . . . keeps on a high level of technical performance. Yet when we have reached the end of the book we have to confess that there is not much likelihood that the ordinary reader will be in a better position than before to hail the German as a man and a brother."

+ Spec 109:514 O 5 '12 1500w

"A comprehensive and able study of the history and development of the great Teutonic empire."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 1100w

PERRIS, HARRY SHAW. Pax britannica: a study of the history of British pacification.
$1.50 Macmillan 13-15875

"Mr. Perris writes from the point of view of one who has been secretary of various peace societies, and he gives a history of the progress of our civilization towards peace." (Ath)

"Americans will find two of his chapters peculiarly interesting. One of them is concerned with the records of the chaotic days of Celt, Teuton, Dane and Norman, when Britain was a scene of almost incessant warfare. . . . The other chapter is the one discussing the history of Anglo-American relations from the days of the old sea-dogs, Gilbert and Raleigh, down through the portentous period of the colonial wars and the revolution and on to the year of the irritating crisis of the Venezuelan incident." (Boston Transcript)

Ath 1913,1:520 My 10 50w

"An excellent chapter—the best in the book—is devoted to Anglo-American relations, and those on both sides of the Atlantic who are interested in the present dispute about the Panama canal should read the whole of Mr. Perris's plea for arbitration and peace. We do not find his figures always satisfactory."

+ Ath 1913,1:563 My 24 800w

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 18 '13 230w

"A sober and well made book, written with a high purpose and fine feeling."

+ Educ R 46:310 O '13 40w

"Granting Mr. Perris his claim to what he calls 'a point of view which is new in history books,' we may safely admit that he has produced a readable and interesting volume, even though to some it may seem to have been conceived in leisure and carried out in haste." S. A. Mellor.

+ Hibbert J 12:235 O '13 870w

"It must be concluded that Mr. Perris has produced an unscientific work, in which he has fallen into that worst of faults in the historian, the attempt to prove a theory from the most practical of all things, historical facts."

— N Y Times 18:414 Jl 27 '13 400w

R of Rs 48:120 Jl '13 50w

"Mere réchauffé of the most banal Whiggism, Liberalism, Radicalism, and Nonconformity without any discrimination, and the conclusion is that we shall enter on the era of perpetual peace when the Church is disestablished and Home rule is achieved."

— Sat R 115:815 Je 28 '13 250w

PERSKY, SERGE. Contemporary Russian novelists; tr. from the French by Frederick Eisemann. $1.50 (2c) Luce, J. W. 13-20230

"The principal aim of this book is to give the reader a good knowledge of Russian literature as it is to-day. The author has subordinated purely critical material, because he wants his readers to form their own judgments and criticize for themselves." (Preface) A long treatise on Tolstoy included in the original volume is omitted from the translation because so much has already been written about this great Russian. The authors who are discussed in this edition are: Tchekoff, Korolenko, Veresayev, Gorky, Andreyev, Merezhkovsky, Kuprin.

"As a whole Mr. Persky's view of the Russian novelists is eminently sane." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 22 '13 1000w

"M. Persky's volume is concise in its characterizations, sympathetic in its treatment, and wholly lacks the bias which destroys the efficacy of so many works on Russian subjects."

+ N Y Times 18:689 N 30 '13 600w

PETRE, FRANCIS LORRAINE. Napoleon's last campaign in Germany, 1813. Il $3.50 Lane 13-135

The author "has dealt already with the campaigns in which Jena, Eylau, and Wagram were the central episodes, and he has now completed a careful study of Napoleon's last struggle in Germany, from Lützen to Leipsic. . . . He does not try to envisage a campaign as a whole, in its political and human as well as in its military aspects. His business, as he conceives it, is to state the facts about the opposing armies, to detail their movements with all possible precision, and summarize the results." (Ath) "He has gathered his information from Napoleon's own dispatches from the memoirs of eye-witnesses and participants, and from the best recent secondary authorities in French and German. He writes as a military critic rather than as a political historian; and he can make a striking comparison of what Napoleon did in 1813 with what the Japanese did in the war against Russia, or with what he happened to see in the French manoeuvres last summer." (Nation)

"On the purely military side of the war Mr. Petre is a painstaking and accurate writer. He is a little too ready to quote orders, details of routes, and tables of strengths without troubling to weld them into a lucid narrative."

+ — Ath 1912,2:579 N 16 600w

Reviewed by H: E. Bourne.

+ — Dial 55:357 N 1 '13 250w

"The author of this volume has succeeded in telling clearly and accurately the details of one of the most confused and complicated campaigns in history."

+ Nation 95:617 D 26 '12 800w

"It will be found of especial value by those students of his career who wish full accounts of the movement and massing of troops, details of army making and management, and minute information upon every plan. The ordinary reader will perhaps find it too detailed and too technical to hold his attention. But the author's frequently interjected comments and observations are so well based upon his facts, so keen and so illuminating that they offer ample reward for the less-interesting pages which call them forth."

+ — N Y Times 17:775 D 15 '12 700w

"Mr. Petre has known how to set forth his facts well."

+ Outlook 103:823 Ap 12 '13 100w

"There is no attempt at fine writing, but we find evidence of conscientious research, and an effort to arrive at accuracy which is worth far more than rhetorical display. The maps and plans are utterly out of keeping with the rest of the work."

+ — Sat R 115:557 My 3 '13 1000w

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 1 '13 900w

PHELPS, EDITH M., comp. Selected articles¹ on government ownership of railroads. (Debaters' handbook ser.) *$1 (1½c) Wilson, H. W. 12-25549

A new volume in the "Debaters' handbook series" designed to meet the growing interest in the question of government ownership and regulation. "The present status of government regulation and government ownership of railroads in the United States and other countries, is briefly outlined in the Introduction and the General discussion, while the Affirmative and Negative discussions contain reprints of valuable material covering the arguments for and against the adoption of government ownership by the United States. The bibliography is a selected one, the references having been chosen so as to give the reader access to the most usable and most easily obtainable material." (Explanatory note)

"On the whole, good judgment has been shown in the selection of the articles."

+ Am Econ R 3:121 Mr '13 40w

"Useful addition to the series."

+ A L A Bkl 9:200 Ja '13

PHELPS, EDITH M., comp. Selected articles¹ on the parcels post. 2d and rev. ed. (Debaters' handbook ser.) *$1 (1½c) Wilson, H. W. 13-35746

For this second edition the bibliography has been revised and brought up to date, and new articles have been added to the reprints. "The new material provides a brief history of the parcel-post law enacted in August, 1912, together with information and discussion concerning its various provisions and actual workings." (Explanatory note to 2d ed.)

A L A Bkl 10:83 O '13

PHELPS, EDITH M., comp. Selected articles¹ on the recall. (Debater's handbook series) *$1 (1c) Wilson, H. W. 13-22314

A handbook arranged like other volumes in the series with briefs, bibliographies and selected reprints. Two briefs, one on the recall of judges, one on the recall of judicial decisions, have been prepared for this volume. "It has not been considered necessary to include one for the general recall as the brief for the recall of judges can be easily adapted for the purpose. The bulk of reprinted matter has been devoted to the judicial recall also, as this seems to be the most popular and important, and many of the arguments are the same as for the general recall." (Explanatory note)

A L A Bkl 10:146 D '13

PHELPS, EDITH M., comp. Selected articles¹ on woman suffrage. 2d and rev. ed. (Debaters' handbook ser.) *$1 (1½c) Wilson, H. W. 12-29975

"So much has been published on woman suffrage since the first edition of this book was issued, that it has seemed advisable to make the second edition practically a new work. Nearly all of the articles formerly included have been replaced with later material, and the bibliography has been greatly enlarged and brought up to date. Two entirely new features—a brief and an introductory chapter—have also been included."—Explanatory note to second edition.

+ A L A Bkl 9:267 F '13

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON. Teaching in² school and college. *$1 Macmillan 12-21409

"The author justifies his purpose by declaring that he loves to teach, and it is evident also that he loves his subject and loves his students. He disclaims any knowledge whatever of scientific teaching. . . . Professor Phelps recognizes that the science and art of teaching are worthy subjects for study, but thinks that teaching is distinctly a human profession and that the chief factor is the teacher himself. . . . As regards the teaching of literature, he would cut down the writing of themes, and declares that 'the best way to learn to write is to read, just as one learns good manners by associating with well-bred people.' (Educ R) The chapters in which he discusses these matters are: School-teaching and discipline; Private school-teaching and scholarship; Imagination in teaching; The efficiency of college teaching; Education and instruction; English composition; English pronunciation; Teaching English literature; The moral aspect of teaching.

"The pointedness, informality and personal flavor of these ten essays give them unusual charm and practicality."

+ A L A Bkl 9:161 D '12 †

"It is concrete, specific, and practical throughout." M. V. O'Shea.

+ Dial 54:142 F 16 '13 270w

"This little book is like a fresh breeze blowing across the arid plains of scientific pedagogy. Any teacher in any school or college will be helped and encouraged by reading these chapters." S: T. Dutton.

+ Educ R 44:523 D '12 600w

"The author has clear and positive opinions, upon which he insists with emphasis; but he is in every case careful to support his statements with entertaining illustrations drawn from personal experience and observation. Any teacher will be interested in this book, for he will be sure to find in it some things that confirm his opinions and some that contradict them."

+ Ind 74:59 Ja 2 '13 230w

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON —Continued.

"A frank, vigorous, and certainly a readable little book."

+ Nation 96:467 My 8 '13 280w

"A characteristically vigorous and unpedantic book."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 370w

"In the main we agree enthusiastically with all that Professor Phelps has so vigorously and concretely set before us. Everyone who loves teaching—that is to say, every sincere teacher—will read the book with quick interest." C. L. Maxcy.

+ — Yale R ns2:579 Ap '13 600w

PHILIP, ALEXANDER. Dynamic foundation¹⁰ of knowledge. *$2 Dutton 13-9488

"The author of 'Matter and energy' and of 'The doctrine of energy,' essays published some years ago, pursues in the present volume his theories of a dynamical interpretation of the concept of matter. He claims for his book that it is a small, but sincere contribution to the inquiry after truth, and that the subject which he discusses is the most practical of problems." (Ath) He "undertakes to show in some detail how the conceptions of science have their origin and meaning in the 'dynamic' implications of action." (Nation)

"His reasoning is logical, and for the most part sound; and his language is clear, and not overburdened with technicalities."

+ Ath 1913,1:63 Ja 18 80w

"The book is none the less worth while, if somewhat amateurish."

+ — Nation 97:172 Ag 21 '13 200w

"The book is well written, and contains much sound analysis of perception and the like, with much that is debatable but suggestive and stimulating."

+ — Nature 91:107 Ap 3 '13 220w

PHILIP Dru: administrator; a story of tomorrow, 1920-1935. *$1.20 (2c) Huebsch 13-1612

"In the year 1920, the student and the statesman saw many indications that the social, financial and industrial troubles that had vexed the United States of America for so long were about to culminate in civil war." This opening sentence from the first chapter of this anonymous "story of tomorrow" contains a statement of the novel's plot and purpose; for it is a story of that war, of the overthrow of the present government, grown wholly corrupt under the manipulation of the moneyed interests, and the subsequent remodeling of national and state governments with a new constitution.

"Now, if the author is really a man of affairs, this is an extraordinarily interesting book. It shows how utterly juvenile a great man can be. If he is really an 'insider,' then we who are on the outside have very little to learn. If he is really an example of the far-seeing public man, then, in all sincerity, I say, God help this sunny land. The imagination is that of a romantic boy of 14 who dreams of what he would do if he had supreme power and nobody objected. But if Philip Dru is a projection of an anonymous great man, the only adequate comment is that of the girl whom Dru marries: 'How you do enthuse one, Philip.'" Walter Lippmann.

— N Y Times 17:754 D 8 '12 700w

PHILLIPS, LADY. Friendly Germany: why not? *2s 6d Constable & co., London

"Lady Phillips has succeeded in suggesting new trains of thought, and putting a new point of view, to those who have come to the conclusion that war between Great Britain and Germany is inevitable and impending. She considers it desirable and perfectly feasible that the two countries should eventually be united by a close bond of friendship, and expresses the view that the agitation which is seeking to divide them is mainly artificial." (Ath) "In brief, the argument of Lady Phillips is that England and Germany are face to face with two great dangers which should sink all other differences into insignificance. From without they are threatened by the rise of the black and yellow races; from within by the growth of socialism." (N Y Times)

"Should be widely read at the present time."

+ Ath 1913,1:434 Ap 19 200w

"Earnest little volume."

+ N Y Times 18:313 My 25 '13 750w

"Very able little book."

+ Spec 110:888 My 24 '13 330w

PHILLIPS, ALEXANDER HAMILTON. Mineralogy: an introduction to the theoretical and practical study of minerals. 11 *$3.75 Macmillan 12-25079

"The object of the book is to bring together for the beginner, in concise form, the facts and basic principles of the several branches of mineralogy, unadulterated by an excess of data. . . . Part 1 deals with the crystallographic and optical properties of minerals. . . . Part 2 begins with a chapter on the relation of minerals to elements, a subject of importance, and one on which a clear conception of mineral compositions should be based. This is followed by an excellent but short chapter on the origin of minerals, in which the author makes a short digression into the field of economic geology. The physical properties of minerals, such as hardness, cleavage, specific gravity, etc., then follow.

Part 3 is determinative mineralogy, and includes: (1) Blowpipe tests; (2) determinative table of minerals with the use of their physical properties; (3) a table for the determination of rock-forming minerals in sections; and (4) a table for determining minerals by their chemical tests."—Engin N

"The geological student will be grateful for the tabular scheme, which will facilitate the identification of rock-forming minerals in thin sections under the microscope. No geologist who uses the microscope can afford to be ignorant nowadays of crystal optics, and an excellent introduction to the subject is given in this volume. Prof. Phillips has profusely illustrated his book, mostly with photographs of mineral specimens, but in some cases these are so indistinct that no mineralogist, however expert, could identify them."

+ — Ath 1912,2:732 D 14 500w

"The work closes with an excellent index, which would be still more useful if a locality list were added to it. Professor Phillips is to be congratulated on producing such an excellent work, and one which should be of great use to every mining engineer." Heinrich Ries.

+ — Engin N 68:1121 D 12 '12 480w

"It is a creditable work. The author is well acquainted with his subject and holds to his purpose. The facts presented are reliable and the whole treatment is attractive, instructive, and useful."

+ Engin Rec 67:308 Mr 15 '13 320w

"By his experience in teaching the subject the author is well qualified to write a book suitable for students who wish to acquire a sound working knowledge of mineralogy. So far as we have tested it, the book seems satisfactorily accurate."

+ — Nature 91:291 My 22 '13 700w

PHILLIPS, DAVID GRAHAM. Degarmo's wife, and other stories. *$1.30 Appleton 13-16791

Three stories, Degarmo's wife, Enid, and White roses and red, make up the contents of this volume. The first is a story of a marriage between a girl of seventeen and a man of thirty-seven which turned out well in spite of incompatibility of years and temperament.

"The stories, though plainly exaggerated, are written with ease and liveliness, and their morality is unimpeachable, if a little obvious."

+ — Ath 1913,2:228 S 6 130w

— Boston Transcript p18 Ag 6 '13 950w
 "This posthumous book is well worth reading."

+ N Y Times 18:438 Ag 17 '13 500w

PHILLIPS, DAVID GRAHAM. George Helm.
 *$1.30 Appleton 12-21733

The story "relates the career in politics and love of a young lawyer who swayed the people and shook the money power." (N Y Sun)
 "He was very poor, and he began his career as an unknown lawyer in a middle-west town. From the start he fought against machine politics, and though for a while he was defeated, in the end he triumphed gloriously and became a 'reform governor' and married the daughter of the corporation millionaire who was his enemy." (N Y Times)

"A very fair example of Mr. Phillips' work."

+ — Nation 95:615 D 26 '12 250w

"The story is dramatically told and readable. The generalizations are of the strongest and most confident."

+ — N Y Sun p3 D 7 '12 300w

"It is a mediocre sort of a political novel, far from the best of its kind, yet not the worst. We must confess that George himself, who is presented as a 'Lincoln type' of hero is a very tiresome and wooden individual and that Eleanor who is supposed to be an 'aristocrat,' is a vulgar little snob."

+ — N Y Times 17:612 O 20 '12 220w

PHILLIPS, MARY E. Tommy Tregennis. *$1.20
 (2½c) Small A13-918

A little Cornish fishing village is the scene of this story, and its hero is Tommy Tregennis, six years old. Tommy's father is a fisherman, and there are days and nights when Tommy and his mother must wait anxiously for the fishing boats to come in. Tommy's mother takes lodgers, and two of the little boy's best friends are the two ladies, the "blue lady" and the "brown lady," he called them, who spent a summer at her house. The story is written for older readers, not for children.

"The author's name is new to us, but she is a real artist, and we do not expect to read a truer or prettier book concerning young life this season."

+ Ath 1912,2:sup498 O 26 70w

"We cherish books whose standards are those of 'Emmy Lou' and 'Wee Macgregor.' 'Tommy Tregennis' is fully capable of acquiring entrance to this advanced society. The author has understood her main character so thoroughly, and has made him so completely realistic, that he lives in one's mind as an actual child—and to create a child from words and sentences is one of the finest arts in the world."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 2 '13 670w

"A very small boy is photographed with great precision and will charm the reader. The fisher folk too are desirable acquaintances."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 29 '13 70w

"The author is to be congratulated who has the art and skill to write such an idyl as this—simple, sweet, and true, and gay with the essential comedy of life."

+ N Y Times 18:392 Jl 6 '13 220w

"Mrs. Tregennis and her 'apartments' and her lodgers are surely drawn from real life, and they seem so comfortable on the one hand, and so entertaining on the other, that we should like to meet their originals."

+ Spec 109:sup 789 N 16 '12 170w

PHILLIPS, MARY ELIZABETH. James Fenimore Cooper. Il *$2.50 Lane 12-29333

"Miss Phillips' book is a direct and simply told sketch of Cooper, the man—not the author. It gives, in a clear, forceful way, accounts of events of his life, his associates, his homes, his works, and his character. We see a man successful in a material as well as an artistic way, and to whom all experiences furnished available material, from his years in the navy, to his foreign travels of later years. His home life and its beauties are made real in these pages. There is a wealth of illustrations. Many of these, indeed, the most of them, will be entirely new to the public."—Lit D

+ A L A Bkl 9:333 Ap '13

"The book is notable especially as a fine example of the extra-illustrator's art, and for its bringing together of a multitude of rare and inaccessible old plates and prints." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 21 '13 370w

"As a biographer, Miss Phillips is agreeably 'naïve' and pious rather than gossipy in the usual sense. Amazingly uncritical at times, she has clogged her pages with inane quotation and countless irrelevancies and nothings; but she has done so with a simple faith that wins an unflinching indulgence on the part of the reader."

+ — Dial 54:310 Ap 1 '13 230w

"Every loyal American should read the book. Professor Lounsbury's volume on Cooper—a little masterpiece of criticism and narrative—is admirably supplemented by Miss Phillips's book."

+ Lit D 46:598 Mr 15 '13 180w

+ Nation 96:210 F 27 '13 600w

"The present volume succeeds in displaying many personal characteristics of the novelist, and gives a certain sense of the truth and loveliness of the man. So far as it goes, there can be no question of its accuracy. But, invaluable though it be, as a sourcebook, Miss Phillips's effort cannot be called either satisfactorily comprehensive or well written. The diction throughout is weak, amateurish, often grammatically bad; the phrasing is inept, and ill-proportioned is the rule in the matter of quotations and points dwelt on. Besides, the number of things omitted is as astonishing as the number of points adduced. The satisfactory biography of Cooper thus remains to be written." Shaemas O'Sheel.

+ — N Y Times 18:105 Mr 2 '13 1800w

"An interesting biography."

+ Outlook 103:597 Mr 15 '13 180w

"It is an extremely entertaining, useful book."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ja 9 '13 1450w

"An uncommonly interesting and graphic record of the life and, to a commendable extent, of the times of the first great American novelist."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 27 '13 950w

PHILLIPS, STEPHEN. Lyrics and dramas.
 *$1.25 Lane 13-21930

A one-act drama, "Nero's mother," originally planned as one of the acts of "Nero" is included in this volume. "The king" is the title of another dramatic poem in the volume; and some of the lyrics are: "The aeroplane," "A nightmare of London," "The real tragedy of the wards."

"The lyrics exhibit a facility which, in the absence of humour, has ruined most of them."

+ — Ath 1913,2:489 N 1 90w

"The pieces here gathered are all in themselves fragmentary and occasional, and the juxtaposition of them not only fails to give them coherence as a whole, but even takes away something of their effect and their significance. To be sure, the superb technique of 'Marpessa' or of 'Paolo and Francesca' is still at work in this verse, but the magic of it is gone."

+ — Ind 76:313 N 13 '13 330w

"A book worthy of the author of 'Marpessa' and 'Christ in Hades.' The dramatic poems, 'Nero's mother' and 'The king,' are splendid poetry, and the lyrics are full of beautiful thoughts and beautiful phrases."

+ Lit D 47:886 N 8 '13 650w

PHILLIPS, STEPHEN—Continued.

"If Mr. Masefield deals in some of his more strenuous moments in stuff without form, it must be said with all due respect for a justly honored name the Stephen Phillips in 'Lyrics and dramas' sometimes indulges in form without stuff; if the one serves life in the raw, the other is in danger of being betrayed by literary art overdone."

— + N Y Sun p26 N 29 '13 250w

"This new volume displays Mr. Phillips both as lyric and dramatic poet, and in both capacities the gifts that first won us are clearly seen to be still firmly his." R: Le Gallienne.

+ N Y Times 18:597 N 2 '13 1200w

"Mr. Stephen Phillips is 'minor' to the heart. Every symptom of the minor poet is in these 'Lyrics and dramas.' He is inspired by other literature rather than by life itself."

— + Sat R 116:620 N 15 '13 820w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Joy of youth. *$1.30
" (1½c) Little 13-16792

A story of youth and art which differs from the Dartmoor novels chiefly in its atmosphere, which is one of pure joy. Loveday Merton is engaged to Sir Raleigh Vane—a Willoughby Patterne sort of man—when she collides with Bertram Dangerfield in the east room of the British museum. Bertram is an artist; he is young and irrepresible, and he shocks a Vanestowe dinner party by voicing sentiments that "no delicate-minded person could utter in Christian company." To Sir Raleigh he is an enigma, but to Loveday he comes, with his fresh, clean views of life, like a breath of pure spring air. Two joyous young things, so unquestionably made for one another, can be kept apart by no conventional prejudice. And fortunately, Sir Raleigh, too, finds a fitter mate, leaving Loveday free.

A L A Bkl 10:118 N '13

"The chief drawback to the artistic writing of the story lies in the frequent digressions made by the painter; but he is full of the joy of youth, and, at the time of reading, his declamations appear real enough."

+ — Ath 1913,2:494 N 1 130w

"It is an odd sort of book to come from Mr. Eden Phillpotts, and one feels that in roaming so far from the 'good red earth of his native Dartmoor,' he has in large measure lost his cunning." F: T. Cooper.

— + Bookm 38:416 D '13 550w

"In 'The joy of youth' Mr. Phillpotts has proved himself, what he has heretofore proved himself many times, a novelist who can infuse living ideas into a novel without weakening its powers as a story and with an increase of its vitality as a work of art. 'The joy of youth,' 'The forest on the hill,' or 'Widcombe fair' marks an advance for Mr. Phillpotts and gives him a new distinction among English imaginative writers." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 1 '13 2500w

"The reader who does not mind being shocked at heresies or who is no longer capable of it will find the book a mine of delight and will be trying to read it aloud to somebody. No cleverer dialog has appeared in any recent novel."

+ Ind 76:264 N 6 '13 350w

Nation 97:435 N 6 '13 550w

N Y Sun p18 O 11 '13 800w

"Interesting as Dangerfield is, we have not the thorough belief in his existence we have had in that of so many of the inhabitants of Dartmoor. There are times, indeed, when he seems less an individual than a cleverly made mask, through whose papier mache mouth the author is pronouncing his own criticisms on pictures and upon the modern world." L. M. F.

+ — N Y Times 18:510 O 5 '13 900w

"It is an altogether pleasant book, very exhilarating, while the pictures of Italy are as good in their way as Mr. Eden Phillpotts' pictures of Dartmoor."

+ Sat R 116:592 N 8 '13 330w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Widcombe fair. *$1.35
" (½c) Little 13-7336

This book, which is the final volume in Eden Phillpotts' Dartmoor series, is an "attempt to view a village at a stroke." No one story is told, but numberless stories are suggested. No one career is traced in detail but many characters, with their hates and loves and aspirations, appear for a time on the stage. In the final scene a stranger, looking down on Widcombe, sees in it a sparsely settled village, in which, it seems to him, a barren and colorless folk must live out a starved existence; we who have been nearer know that the valley is teeming with life and that all human passions hold sway there.

"Though the Dartmoor village people are described with characteristic realism and though some of the situations border on the tragic, the effect of the whole is more cheerful and humor is more prominent than in the others of the Dartmoor stories."

+ A L A Bkl 9:400 My '13

"A book which is strong in beauty and sympathy."

+ Ath 1913,1:219 F 22 120w

"Hardy never did anything on so large a scale as this, or with a truer touch, and it is better than Balzac, because it is sane and tender and our own."

+ + Atlan 112:692 N '13 550w

"Most readers will hail it as the writer's best work."

+ Ind 75:100 J1 10 '13 100w

"The story is a close survey of all the life of the village of Widcombe. It is really a dozen stories, and it is exceedingly skillful and interesting."

+ N Y Sun p3 Ap 12 '13 1350w

+ — N Y Times 18:328 Je 1 '13 850w

"This is a book to read leisurely and to enjoy deeply."

+ Outlook 103:863 Ap 19 '13 70w

"Many descriptive passages of carefully chosen language repay reading, for Mr. Phillpotts is an artist. Apart from the scenery, the interest is exclusively human, and with this Mr. Phillpotts has successfully packed a stout volume."

+ Spec 110:544 Mr 29 '13 320w

PHOTIADÉS, CONSTANTIN. George Meredith; his life, genius, and teaching; rendered into English by A. Price. *$1.50 Scribner 13-35824

This "little book is not so much a criticism as what is commonly called an 'appreciation.' In his first chapter the author endeavours to give his countrymen some idea of the personality of this poet, whom he was privileged to visit at Box Hill in 1908, and of that abundant, vehement, complex, highly coloured talk which was his natural method of expression. Then follows a brief sketch of the poet's life, written, it would seem, before the recent biographical article in the 'Fortnightly,' and this pleasantly and tactfully accomplished, the author proceeds to the more difficult task of attempting an exposition of the range and nature of Meredith's genius. This object he tries to accomplish by setting before the French reader an actual epitome and representation of one of the poet's most characteristic works, 'The adventures of Harry Richmond.' This analysis (which is commendably full and accurate) is followed by two chapters on the art and genius of Meredith."—Spec

A L A Bkl 10:106 N '13

"We welcome the appearance in English of this sprightly yet penetrative monograph on George Meredith, and could wish that Mr. Price's version were better."

+ — Ath 1913,2:103 Ag 2 750w

"As might be expected, it is Gallic in its ecstatic appreciation, and rambling discursive in its wanderings through Meredith's career, producing the impermanent effect of a series of notes set down for the moment rather than the lasting result of the labors of a chronicler and biographer." E. F. E.

— + Boston Transcript p25 S 24 '13 500w

"'Sprawly' is the only word which adequately characterizes the volume. M. Photiades is an enthusiastic admirer of Meredith, and a minute student of the master's works; but he has little critical insight, and still less capacity for synthesis. Fortunately, the book is made up largely of straight narrative, in which the author is facile, and of comment upon citations, in which he is often felicitous."

— + Dial 55:264 O 1 '13 500w

"The author is frankly national in his point of view. It is as to a brother Celt that he does homage to Meredith, and as products of the fervidly intellectual Celtic temperament that he interprets his books."

— + Nation 97:388 O 23 '13 400w

Reviewed by R. Le Gallienne.

+ N Y Times 18:546 O 12 '13 1650w

+ — Spec 111:424 S 20 '13 800w

PICKETT, LA SALLE CORBELL (MRS. G. E. E. PICKETT). Bugles of Gettysburg. il *$1 (3½c) Browne & Howell 13-11967

A little romance written in commemoration of Gettysburg in this fiftieth year since the battle was fought, by Mrs. Pickett, wife of General Pickett of the famous charge. "Though most of the famous southern leaders enter the pages of the book, three names are found most prominently, General Pickett, Jasper Carrington and Garnett Philipps. In order to throw Pickett into greater relief the story is told from Carrington's point of view." (Boston Transcript)

"There is, in this little book, a remarkable description of the famous charge at Gettysburg—a description that reveals the charge from within, as it were." A. M. Chase.

+ Bookm 37:566 J1 '13 200w

"This little book by the wife of General Pickett of the famous Pickett's charge, wins its way to our hearts because it is not written with the partisan spirit, but in loyal remembrance to the whole nation. Without the love episode the horror of the story would be too great, while with it it gains in beauty and in tenderness." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '13 1000w

Dial 54:425 My 16 '13 50w

"The tone and atmosphere of the book bear evidence of long and faithful preparation for its writing."

+ Dial 54:512 Je 16 '13 370w

+ Lit D 47:692 O 18 '13 100w

+ Nation 97:167 Ag 21 '13 40w

R of Rs 48:251 Ag '13 70w

PICKETT, LA SALLE CORBELL (MRS. G. E. PICKETT). Literary hearthstones of Dixie. il *$1.50 Lippincott 12-24429

"Eleven writers and their homes have been chosen by Mrs. Pickett as the successive themes of a like number of biographical narratives. They are of varying repute, ranging from Poe, Sidney Lanier and Joel Chandler Harris to William Gilmore Simms, Paul Hamilton Hayne and Augusta Evans Wilson, and including also Henry Timrod, Francis Scott Key, Dr. George Williams Bagley, Margaret Junkin Preston and Father Ryan."—Boston Transcript

"The style is somewhat flowery."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:293 Mr '13

Boston Transcript p9 N 30 '12 250w

"An interesting and instructive account of the literary homes of Dixie's famous men and women."

+ Lit D 45:1026 N 30 '12 230w

"Much moist sentiment and pseudo-poetic conjecture are poured out."

— Nation 96:15 Ja 2 '13 130w

PICKETT, LA SALLE CORBELL (MRS. G. E. E. PICKETT). Pickett and his men. il *$2.50 (3c) Lippincott 13-13215

The book is written as a tribute to the memory of the author's husband, General Pickett of the famous third day's charge at Gettysburg. It is therefore a fitting volume to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of that battle. The story begins with an account of General Pickett's service in the Mexican and Indian wars, but the greater part of the volume is given to the narrative of the war between the states. For her material the author has relied on official reports and on the accounts of eye-witnesses and participants.

+ A L A Bkl 10:83 O '13

"Stirring history Pickett and his men made, and Mrs. Pickett has recorded it remarkably well. With a spirit of 'noblesse oblige' she lays as much stress, or more, upon the doings of Pickett's men than on their leader's. And, rare gift in a woman,—she is a good historian,—clear in the presentation of her facts, and at the same time unflatteringly picturesque and entertaining." A. M. Chase.

+ Bookm 37:564 J1 '13 900w

"Mrs. Pickett's enthusiasm for the cause of which she writes, and her own descriptive skill give the book no little charm."

+ Boston Transcript p18 J1 30 '13 450w

+ Dial 54:513 Je 16 '13 100w

+ Lit D 47:536 S 27 '13 150w

+ — Nation 97:167 Ag 21 '13 400w

"Supplies the full details that the student of history requires."

+ N Y Sun p5 Je 7 '13 80w

N Y Sun p16 Je 14 '13 80w

N Y Times 18:384 Je 29 '13 50w

"The spirit of the book is admirable, and will be read with almost equal interest by the survivors of both armies."

+ R of Rs 48:118 J1 '13 120w

"Contains an abundance of suggestive material and wide range of southern episode, but the style is too affected, and the material does not converge upon the personality of the subject, as in a true biographical study. There is not a great conception nor a broad treatment. Many irrelevant incidents intrude and the work in no sense can be called a contribution to military history."

— + Springfield Republican p5 J1 17 '13 120w

PICKTHALL, MARMADUKE WILLIAM. Veiled women. *$1.25 Duffield 13-3757

"This is a picture of life in an Egyptian harim in 'the seventies' under Khedive Ismail. It draws a picture of the Egyptian woman's world as it always was, and, seemingly, always will be, despite Frankish innovations and well-meant efforts to enlighten people who object to illumination." (Ath) "His heroine is an English governess who marries the son of the Pasha, and although Mr. Pickthall apparently thinks the ideals of Islam finer than those of Christianity, Barakah, as the Egyptians rename the Englishwoman, suffers the inevitable degeneration which apparently overtakes all secluded women." (Spec)

"The picture is true in every line, and as vivid as it is possible to make it within the bounds of English decency. There may even be some critics who will find that it does not always keep strictly within them, but these, perhaps, will be over-nice. This is more than a brilliant novel: it is a philosophy of woman from the Muslim, and especially from the Muslim woman's point of view, and we fancy it will agitate the dovecoats."

+ Ath 1913,1:184 F 15 1200w

Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 100w

Ind 74:1348 Je 12 '13 130w

N Y Sun p38 Ap 5 '13 1050w

PICKTHALL, MARMADUKE W.—Continued.

"Barakah is not a person who arouses much sympathy on the part of the reader, and this weakens an otherwise interesting book."

+ — N Y Times 18:234 Ap 20 '13 300w

"The story has plenty of incident, and, while its construction is weak, it is a book which will be read with interest because of its first-hand knowledge and its evidently truthful reflection of Turkish life to-day."

+ — Outlook 103:779 Ap 5 '13 100w

"The book is interesting more from the curious nature of the facts disclosed than from any subtlety of character-drawing or distinction of writing. Anyone who is curious to know how life passes behind the veil cannot do better than to read it."

+ Spec 110:544 Mr 29 '13 130w

PIER, ARTHUR STANWOOD. Story of Harvard. il *$2 (4c) Little 13-21858

Drawing from such authentic sources as Peirce's "History of Harvard," and President Quincy's "History of Harvard," the author has written the history of that institution from its foundation to the present. The chapters are: Past and present; The beginnings and the first president; Harvard in the seventeenth century; Leverett and Wadsworth; Before the revolution; The revolution; Harvard in exile; The period of readjustment; The beginning of the modern era; Harvard under Quincy; Ante-bellum days; Harvard in the war; President Eliot's administration; Undergraduate activities; Freshman and senior. The book is illustrated with attractive sketches.

+ A L A Bkl 10:146 D '13

"To the author is due the hearty thanks of Harvard men and of all who have an interest in or a little curiosity about the great university, for a volume that is full of information." A. M. Chase.

+ Bookm 38:292 N '13 1250w

"The best of the drawings is that depicting the Harvard union; the least successful is that of Memorial hall, which reminds one of a cat putting up its hind quarters when stroked. To return to the text: the chapter on 'Harvard in the war' fills one with a thrill; it is admirably enthusiastic. Mr. Pier's book will be widely read; it will be treasured by graduates of their own recollections and experiences. It will bring up many pleasant and some disquieting experiences and all will at least recognize in the illustrations what the artists intended to portray. They are not poetic; they are not exactly cheerful; they are autumnal, but they are what they are." N. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 O 1 '13 900w

+ Dial 55:485 D 1 '13 180w

"Mr. Pier summarizes well the accounts of the more formal historians. His style is dignified, yet easy, and he shows good judgment in selecting for mention characters and events that deserve to be made salient. Little fault can be found with his presentment, except that it is incomplete. The book, indeed, seems meagre, when one thinks of what it might have told."

+ — Nation 97:513 N 27 '13 1050w

"Mr. Pier has dealt skillfully, if modestly, with the old material, and the result is an admirable book of its kind."

+ N Y Times 18:645 N 23 '13 1300w

PIGOU, ARTHUR CECIL. Wealth and welfare. s *$3.25 Macmillan 13-7937

"Prof. Pigou's valuable study of distribution surveys at considerable length the nature of the [British] national dividend, the various hindrances to equality of the marginal net products, the relation of the state and voluntary groups to the control of industry, and the effects of the various forms of interference with the distribution of the national dividend."—Ath

"There is little danger that its brilliant quality and significance will go unappreciated among students of economics, who should be sufficiently hardened to withstand the somewhat benumbing effect of its style. At his best he puts the reader in his debt for many new outlooks, and he has made an enviable large contribution to dynamic economic theory." J. M. Clark.

+ — Am Econ R 3:623 S '13 950w

"Though it contains a great deal of the economic theory which characterized the older school, in many respects it shows marked originality."

+ A L A Bkl 9:441 Je '13

+ Ath 1912:624 N 23 50w

"We have no hesitation in acclaiming 'Wealth and welfare' as the book which of the economic works published for the last ten years is the most certain to influence subsequent writings. It is the unification of many and varied trains of thought, and a presage of hope for the future of economics."

+ Ath 1912:778 D 28 420w

"Social reformers with universal panaceas for changing social conditions will do well to read and ponder the sober and at the same time, hopeful reasoning of this book. The book deserves to gain for itself many thoughtful readers."

+ Boston Transcript p7 F 15 '13 450w

"Professor Pigou's analysis constitutes one of the most painstaking economic works of recent years. The wealth and variety of information which he employs remind the reader of Adam Smith, as does also the subtlety of his dissections."

+ Nation 97:538 D 4 '13 1150w

"These considerations are not novel, but Prof. Pigou's treatment of them is out of the ordinary because of the system and thoroughness with which the ground is covered and because of the wealth of the illustrations from experience, tending to develop caution with half-baked schemes to benefit some at the cost of others. It may be doubted that there exists elsewhere such a storehouse of both reason and fact on both sides of the subject. For Prof. Pigou is student as well as teacher, and no less benevolent in intent than those whose methods he doubts." E. A. Bradford.

+ N Y Times 18:153; 169 Mr 23; 30 '13 1800w

"It is really 'a book of statesmanship.' Coming from a scientific economist of a country where the same general economic conditions to be ameliorated exist as here, and where more progress in dealing with them has been made than here, it is eminently needed by our many 'untutored amateurs' in economic reform."

+ Outlook 103:322 F 8 '13 400w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:560 S '13 170w

PILLANS, T. DUNDAS. Real martyr of St. Helena. il *$1.75 (3c) McBride, Nast & co.

That Sir Hudson Lowe, governor of the island, rather than Napoleon himself, was the real martyr of St. Helena, is the author's thesis. The book is an attempt to clear Sir Hudson's name of the calumnies that have been heaped upon it.

Reviewed by H. C. Shelley.

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 9 '13 400w

"The trouble with this book is that it indulges in such furious and childish abuse of Napoleon and of those who dare to sympathize with him that it almost defeats its object of clearing Lowe."

+ — N Y Times 18:592 N 2 '13 650w

"The author is quite incapable of forming a just judgment of Napoleon, and if he were, there was nothing left to be said after Mr. Fisher's summing up."

— Sat R 116:117 J1 26 '13 270w

"Mr. Pillans, unfortunately, writes with more heat than is necessary after the lapse of nearly a century, and his work is marred by the lack of a sense of proportion."

+ — Spec 111:sup794 N 15 '13 1350w

PITTSBURGH. FLOOD COMMISSION. Report, 1911. il $10 Flood commission of Pittsburgh, Pa. 12-10291

"The report itself occupies about one-half the volume. Its twelve chapters deal with such topics as the Allegheny and Monongahela drainage basins; Floods and flood damage at Pittsburgh and along the rivers; Methods of flood relief; Flood protection; Storage reservoirs; Relation of storage reservoirs to navigation, sanitation, water supply, and water power. The Commission recommends as a means of preventing further flood damage at Pittsburgh a combination of flood protection and flood prevention—namely, the construction of seventeen large storage reservoirs at the headwaters of the rivers, and the building of low walls along the low lying portions of the water front at Pittsburgh. . . . The various appendices, which take up the second half of the book, discuss forest conditions in the Allegheny and Monongahela basins, stream flow, methods of flood relief in foreign countries and give a complete bibliography of flood literature. The volume is profusely illustrated with photographs, maps and diagrams." (Ann Am Acad)

"The report is the most valuable source of information available for problems connected with the conservation of streams." G. B. Roorbach.

+ Ann Am Acad 46:214 Mr '13 350w

"We advise every person who reads this and who is responsible for the maintenance of an engineering reference library wherever located to forthwith apply to the Pittsburgh flood commission for a copy of its report. So far as our knowledge extends, this is by all odds the most valuable contribution to engineering literature on the subject of river regulation by storage reservoirs that has ever appeared."

+ Engin N 67:960 My 16 '12 650w

PLASS, ANNA ALIDA. Civics in simple lessons for foreigners. il *50c Heath 12-23680

"To meet the demand for a book of simple lessons for foreigners which, while aiding them to learn English, should at the same time give information concerning the principles of our government, has been the aim of the author. A very limited vocabulary has been used in presenting the subject. . . . The volume, which is well illustrated, gives the elementary facts about the different city departments and officials, about the state government and state law makers, the courts and the national government. Occasionally realistic and practical lessons are included such as a telephone call for the doctor and a petition for naturalization. At the close of the book is a vocabulary in Italian, German, Swedish, Polish, French, Greek and Yiddish."—Survey

"One of the most practical of these readers."

+ A L A Bkl 9:293 Mr '13

Reviewed by J. P. Heaton.

+ Survey 30:69 Ap 12 '13 150w

PLUTARCH. Nicias and Alcibiades; tr. with introd. and notes, by Bernadotte Perrin. *$2 (2c) Scribner 12-23748

This is the third and final volume of Professor Perrin's translation of "Six of Plutarch's Greek lives." The first of the two preceding volumes "Themistocles and Aristides" appeared in 1901; the second, "Cimon and Pericles," in 1910. While the present volume is independent of the other two, the author calls attention to the two essays contained in those volumes, "Plutarch the biographer," and "Biography before Plutarch," with the statement that he would be glad to have readers of the present volume familiar with them. To this third volume he contributes an introductory essay on "Primary sources for Greek history during the Peloponnesian war."

"Characterized by the same accurate scholarship, excellent work in translation and literary quality as the two earlier ones."

+ A L A Bkl 9:267 F '13

"The series offers an attractive means of approach to Greek history."

+ Ath 1912,2:477 O 26 70w

Dial 54:106 F 1 '13 70w

"Professor Perrin of Yale has done a charming piece of work in his new translation of Plutarch's 'Nicias and Alcibiades,' with a scholarly introduction and admirable notes."

+ Educ R 44:426 N '12 50w

"Tho with a little of the tang of the classroom in his otherwise admirable rendering . . . Professor Perrin is an engaging guide in Greek history."

+ Ind 74:872 Ap 17 '13 100w

"The charm and accuracy of the translation are as noticeable as the sanity of the introduction and the aptness of the commentary."

+ Nation 95:619 D 26 '12 100w

N Y Times 17:654 N 10 '12 100w

POLLARD, ALFRED WILLIAM. Fine books. (Connoisseur's lib.) il *$7.50 Putnam (Eng ed 12-29956)

"The author follows the history of book-making down through the ages, by means of the work of its most famous practitioners, with especial attention to the art of illustration. He has himself studied the subject of fifteen century cuts until he confesses that their naive simplicity has so captivated him as to cause him to rate them too highly. The volume has forty plates, reproducing examples of wood-cuts, engravings, title pages, and printed pages from books of the fifteenth, sixteenth, and eighteenth centuries. Mr. Pollard ends his survey of book illustration with the latter part of the seventeenth century because of lack of space. But in his preface he defends modern illustration. . . . For some of the modern makers of artistic books he has warm praise."—N Y Times

"One of the best of this excellent series."

+ A L A Bkl 9:293 Mr '13

"Altogether, the book ranks with the best of a valuable series."

+ Ath 1912,2:528 N 2 750w

"A fine book on fine books." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p22 My 23 '13 1100w

"A volume which every collector of beautiful books and every student of the history of printing and of book-illustration must find indispensable. In one respect only does Mr. Pollard's book invite criticism: the index is not as ample as it should be." F. W. Gookin.

+ + Dial 54:17 Ja 1 '13 2000w

Ind 74:56 Ja 2 '13 500w

"To give the necessary facts and leave out the unnecessary ones, and still make the book readable, was no easy task, but Mr. Pollard has achieved even more: he has given us the facts, which perhaps might have been found elsewhere, but he has put life into them by his own explanations and remarks, and made the book one to be read with pleasure as well as for instruction."

+ Nation 95:585 D 19 '12 1250w

"Is one of the most valuable and interesting in that very attractive series."

+ N Y Sun p19 D 7 '12 200w

"The volume is a delightful piece of book-work, and has also an interesting content, so that it is worthy the attention alike of bibliophile, book collector, book lover, and book reader."

+ N Y Times 17:781 D 15 '12 600w

"This work is itself an example of fine book-making. It forms one of the beautiful volumes of the Connoisseurs' library, and, as in all those volumes, the choice of type, paper, and margins, and the skill with which the photogravures, line drawings, and color plates are produced, are worthy of the highest praise. Naturally a book prepared with such art and at such expense is for a comparatively few readers, but it should be in all public libraries and on the shelves of those who have an interest in the 'art preservative.'"

POLLARD, ALFRED WILLIAM—Continued.
+ Outlook 102:864 D 21 '12 120w

POLLARD, HUGH B. C. Busy time in Mexico.
8 il *$3 Duffield 13-21527

"The author describes this account of life and sport in Mexico as 'An unconventional record.' He relates his adventures in that country up to 1911, and adds an appendix giving a résumé of the political events that have since occurred." (Ath) "He writes of Aztecs and ruins, of art and natives, of outfit and travel, of the fox chase and the bull fight, and of the poorer classes as well as of 'society.' . . . He writes a vivid story of the rise of the revolution." (Boston Transcript)

"Can hardly be called literary, but it is easy and entertaining."

+ — Ath 1913:1:590 My 31 50w

"Mr. Pollard is a Maderista and he writes a very good story, but one cannot help remembering that he was inspired to enter 'journalism' by large comic and sporting sections, big headlines and red ink." F. L. W.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '13 800w

"His record is 'unconventional' to the extent of being inaccurate in so many particulars as to create the suspicion that it may be exaggerated in others. It contains, however, some extremely interesting matter that has appeared in no previous volume on Mexico."

+ — Dial 55:265 O 1 '13 450w

"While the author's occasional generalizations may not be safe to accept, and his judgments at times may be prejudiced, he is certainly an independent witness as to what goes on in Mexico and not afraid to speak out his mind."

+ — N Y Sun p6 Je 14 '13 120w

"The descriptions of Mexican manners and customs and characteristics and the accounts of adventures and experiences are written with great spirit, and show keen observation, alert interest, and a cynical sense of humor. One doubts sometimes the veracity of Mr. Pollard's adjectives and disapproves quite often of their number and intensity. But it is an entertaining book."

+ — N Y Times 18:411 J1 27 '13 600w

N Y Times 18:412 J1 27 '13 230w

+ Sat R 116:529 O 25 '13 70w

POLLARD, JOYCE. Stories from old English romance. *75c Stokes 12-29051

A collection of tales which have their counterpart in Old English literature. Mandeville, Langland, Robin Hood and Malory's "Morte d'Arthur" are sources.

"The more of such collections we have, the better." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1364 D 12 '12 50w

"It is a well done bit of work, which makes a capital story book."

+ N Y Sun p9 N 30 '12 80w

+ Spec 109:sup489 O 5 '12 80w

POLLOCK, HORATIO M., and MORGAN, WILLIAM SACHEUS. Modern cities. il *$1.50 (1½c) Funk 13-22694

The authors have made a study of social conditions in representative English and American cities with special reference to the advance steps taken in each case toward betterment. Contents: Modern city; City planning; Home planning; City streets and some splendid types; Value of art in cities; Value of parks; Harbor development; Conservation of human life; Municipal government; Municipal home rule; Selection of city officers and employees; Control of municipal public service corporations; Recent developments in education; Religion and municipal life; The social evil; Conditions and methods of social progress in American cities. Appendix. Index.

"It is a most stimulating and encouraging contribution to modern civics and deserves to be read and studied by every thoughtful person." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 28 '13 1050w

"The book is both informative and stimulating."

+ Outlook 105:764 D 6 '13 70w

POMEROY, SARAH GERTRUDE. Little-known sisters of well-known men. il *$1.25 Estes 12-24507

"Many men of distinction have borne witness to the help and encouragement they have received from their wives; that others have owed as much to their sisters is the theme of Sarah G. Pomeroy's new book." (Ind) The nine chapters of the book tell the stories of the Countess of Pembroke, Mary Lamb, Dorothy Wordsworth, Elizabeth Whittier, Sarah Disraeli, Eliza Parkman, and the sisters of Browning, Macaulay and Thoreau.

"Well told, unpretentious sketches. They are too superficial to be widely useful, but answer admirably to the need of a popular biography for girls."

+ A L A Bkl 9:294 Mr '13 *

"Although the studies were prepared (as we are told in the Introduction) for academic degrees, there is a deplorable lack of authentic information regarding sources of material. Far too many of the long extracts are uncredited; and in the bibliography we note at least two errors in exact titles. But notwithstanding these flaws, and a painful effort to connect some of the sketches by 'a chance bond of time or place,' the book is interesting and appreciative. We look in vain for a few names."

+ — Dial 54:61 Ja 16 '13 280w

"These biographies are pleasing and unpretentious—like their subjects."

+ Ind 73:1136 N 14 '12 50w

"We recommend it as an ideal series of biographical studies for the girl of fifteen or sixteen. Literature becomes here a 'live' subject." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1366 D 12 '12 30w

"Unfortunately, having studied her subjects as college requirements she resorts now and again to the didacticism of the research-worker. Tho not intended primarily for children, here is an ideal supplementary reading-book for high-school girls."

+ — Lit D 45:1079 D 7 '12 150w

+ Nation 95:540 D 5 '12 150w

"It is superficial work; the author does not make good use of any opportunity she may have had."

+ — N Y Sun p8 N 2 '12 100w

N Y Times 17:795 D 29 '12 80w

POORE, HENRY RANKIN. Conception of art. 9 il *$2 Doubleday 13-12622

This work is, "as the title suggests, intellectualistic in tendency. The idea of a special aesthetic sense, Mr. Poore scouts. Art arises in the intelligence, borrowing power from the emotions, and its appeal is to the intelligence chiefly." (Nation) "Among the subjects treated are: The definition of art; The logic of art; Philosophical phases; The theories of Delsarte and Tolstoy; The body and soul and spirit of art; The genesis of art; The aesthetics of Chinese and Japanese art; Later tendencies; Latest tendencies, &c. The book is in the nature of a sequel to Mr. Poore's previous volume, 'Pictorial composition.'" (N Y Sun) The final chapters have been previously published with the title, "New tendency in art."

+ A L A Bkl 10:62 O '13

"It is certainly singular that a book especially addressed to the layman and the art student, with the purpose of clarifying a subject that undoubtedly needs this process, should prove to be so difficult to understand. Mr. Poore is intensely literary, so far as his point of view is concerned, though he is a mediocre literary artist. He lacks simplicity and lucidity. He is not methodical. He jumps from one part of his topic to another, and back again in a most erratic and confusing manner." W. H. D.

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '13 750w

"As a whole, the book is of curiously uneven texture. It contains cogent and closely analyzed criticism, much chat and anecdotal illustration, many misprints. Our chief issue with Mr. Poore is that, insisting on a scientific definition of art, he accepts the loose and popular idea of beauty. In general it is a suggestive and interesting book, full of common-sense on topics that are often beclouded by mere rhetoric."

+ — Nation 97:130 Ag 7 '13 320w

"A practical, simply worded treatment."

+ N Y Sun p14 Je 14 '13 100w

"The whole tone of the book is one of normal sympathy with intellectually regulated effort. Nevertheless, one feels in leaving it that Mr. Poore has not yet done complete justice to his own perceptive and analytic powers. The separate chapters have not been sufficiently welded together and the reader gets his pleasure in separate fragments."

+ — N Y Times 18:457 S 7 '13 1050w

POORE, HENRY RANKIN. New tendency in art. il *75c (5c) Doubleday 13-11315

That there is a relation between the new art and the new philosophy represented by Bergson, is the first point made by the author. An acceptance of this fact is the first step toward an understanding of what the creators of these new and peculiar forms of art are attempting to do. Mr. Poore deals with post impressionism, futurism and cubism. His attitude is critical and at the same time tolerant.

"The most interesting and spicy part of Mr. Poore's book is the second chapter in which he tackles futurism and its creed. Mr. Poore's own literary style is not always beyond criticism. He means to be liberal and open-minded in his attitude towards the new movements in art, but his own instinctive sense of order and logic is frequently at odds with this mental position, so that in the end the reader gets a rather confused impression as to just where the author stands."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '13 400w

+ — Ind 74:1446 Je 26 '13 200w

"If Henry Rankin Poore had taken as much pains to explain what cubism and futurism are driving at as he has with post-impressionism he would have relieved a suffering public which is pretty sure that it is being humbugged. The reader may learn something from the little book. More helpful even are the illustrations, which are selected with great fairness."

+ — N Y Sun p6 My 31 '13 150w

School Arts Magazine 13:81 S '13 40w

POPP, ADELHEID. Autobiography of a working woman; tr. by E. C. Harvey. il *$1.25 (4½c) Browne & Howell (Enged W12-117)

The author is an Austrian socialist, a writer, lecturer and worker for the cause, who has risen from the lowest ranks of labor. Her schooling ended and her working life began at the age of ten. But she was endowed with an active mind; she read insatiably and indiscriminately, everything that came to hand. Quite by accident she stumbled onto the teachings of Social democracy, became a disciple of Engel and Lassalle, a friend of Bebel, and a woman of importance in her party. The story of her hard life is simply told. It is a story of a working girl's life in Vienna; similar stories might be told of Chicago or New York.

+ A L A Bkl 10:24 S '13 *

"The autobiography of Frau Popp has no eloquence beyond that of facts, and no beauty beyond that of her own simple, sincere, and noble character. Yet her story strikes deep, and is valuable, because it is, in all its early portion, the story of hundreds—nay, thousands—of young women."

+ Ath 1912:1:408 Ap 13 480w

"No better basis for imagining what it is that the very poor have to contend with, hour by hour, can be found than 'the autobiography of a working woman.' The book shows no dogmatism and presents no minute facts which might tire a casual reader, but it is instinct with truth, and it presents that bitter sordidness which has been the destruction of countless souls less strong than that unconsciously depicted by its author."

+ + Dial 55:54 Jl 16 '13 400w

"Adelheid Popp relates the events of her life with directness, simplicity, and power."

+ Lit D 47:705 O 18 '13 150w

"One must acknowledge that it is not only a very vivid and a very moving narration, but that it also unconsciously throws much light upon the spiritual forces that for the first time in human history have become entangled with economic theories."

+ N Y Times 18:481 S 21 '13 180w

Spec 110:586 Ap 5 '13 350w

POPPE, THOMAS WILLIAM. House wiring. * il 50c Henley 12-9905

"A very practical little pocket-book describing the methods and devices used in house wiring. The descriptions refer essentially to the mechanics of the subject and give directions for installing electric lamps and wiring in the average two-story dwelling house."—Elec World

A L A Bkl 9:249 F '13

"The book will be very useful to the amateur wireman and to the householder who intends to superintend or install his own wiring on a small scale. It will also be serviceable to apprentices and helpers, as well as to professional wiremen. The descriptions are clear and free from technicalities. A defect in the book is in the lettering of the illustrations, which is sometimes crude."

+ — Elec World 59:1221 Je 1 '12 100w

PORTENAR, ABRAHAM JACOB. Organized labor; its problems and how to meet them. *$1 (4c) Macmillan 12-24604

A book written by a labor man—an ardent upholder of union principles—who believes that labor is standing at a parting of the ways. One way leads to Syndicalism, the doctrines of which are preached in America by the International workers of the world; the other way leads along a steady line of advance toward stronger and more useful organization on the principles for which the American federation has always stood. Recent outrages that have shocked the country are violations of those principles due to the influence of Syndicalist teaching. While openly opposing the I. W. W. the author accepts what is best in their doctrine and agrees with them that the old craft-unionism must give way to industrial-unionism. He differs from them in advocating arbitration and the trade agreement, the strike to be reserved always as a last resort.

"The book is well written, and the author's sincerity of purpose, clarity of reasoning, and firm grasp of fundamental economic principles will make a strong appeal to the intelligent and unbiased reader, whether he be a union man or not." C. W. D.

+ Am Econ R 3:141 Mr '13 150w

+ A L A Bkl 9:385 My '13

"The book is clearly written and very suggestive." Alexander Fleisher.

+ Ann Am Acad 47:307 My '13 420w

"The dominant note of the book is one of practical common-sense combined with a belief that no problem is settled until it is settled right." G. M. Janes.

+ Dial 54:241 Mr 16 '13 400w

"A valuable contribution to the solution of the labor problem. The author does not realize the failures in co-operative factories with which British experience is strewn; but his advice is in general sound."

PORTENAR, ABRAHAM JACOB—Continued.

+ — Ind 73:1427 D 19 '12 400w

"A criticism of the labor movement by a trade unionist, though it be subjectively written and hardly profound, deserves attention."

+ J Pol Econ 21:182 F '13 70w

R of Rs 47:123 Ja '13 80w

"It is a simple, generous and courageous statement of the position of the workingman, worthy of the consideration of serious-minded questioners of what to do to bring about industrial justice."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 20 '13 420w

PORTER, MRS. ELEANOR (HODGMAN). Pollyanna. il $1.25 Page 13-3816

"It is a story of the wonders worked by a sunny disposition and shows the far-reaching influence of a child's love." (Lit D) "A little girl who has been taught the game of finding something to be glad for in whatever happens, and to do at once what she thinks is right, is landed suddenly in a somewhat fossilized New England village. She applies her scheme of life to the people about her with startling results, as funny as they are pathetic." (N Y Sun)

+ A L A Bkl 10:71 O '13

"To the list of those who have done something to make the world more joyous must be added the names of Pollyanna and Eleanor H. Porter."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 24 '13 280w

"Joy fills the book and makes it worth while."

+ Ind 75:99 J1 10 '13 180w

"It is a wholesome, charming book, moral, but not 'preachy.' The scenes develop naturally under the influence of Pollyanna's naive freshness and her irresistible individuality."

+ Lit D 46:898 Ap 19 '13 230w

"It is easy to overdo this sort of thing, but the author manages to keep it well in hand; the incidents are natural, the people are life-like and pleasant, though the aunt's sternness may be a little overdrawn, and the little girl is a child throughout. It is a book for grown-up people who will understand the criticism of convention; it would be a disaster if many little girls should undertake to imitate the heroine."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Mr 8 '13 170w

PORTER, GENE (STRATTON) (MRS. CHARLES DARWIN PORTER). Laddie. il $1.35 Doubleday 13-17971

A romantic and sentimental story with scenes laid in Indiana. The story is told by Little Sister, the youngest member of a large family but it is concerned not so much with childish doings as with the love affairs of older members of the family, chief among them that of Laddie, the older brother whom Little Sister adores, and the Princess, an English girl who has come to live in the neighborhood and about whose family there hangs a mystery. There is a wedding midway in the book and a double wedding at the close.

"A bright, cheery tale."

+ A L A Bkl 10:71 O '13 *

"The book's one redeeming quality is that touch of the 'wild woods' magic' which characterized its much more successful predecessor 'Freckles.'"

+ — Ath 1913.2:316 S 27 130w

Reviewed by F. T. Cooper.

Bookm 38:199 O '13 250w

"It is a sentimental tale, but its sentiment is wholesome. It contains abundant humor, too, and the little girl's account of the spelling match is one of the most amusing of its many incidental stories."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 3 '13 600w

"The inimitable handling of everything of the out-of-doors in the author's earlier stories is present in no less degree in her latest book."

+ Ind 76:37 O 2 '13 80w

N Y Sun p10 Je 14 '13 60w

"The author would seem to have determined that whatever her book might lack in quality it should make up in quantity. To this end have been produced some six hundred large pages, in which the diminutive plot . . . is altogether swamped. There is a great deal of preaching, virtue is rewarded right and left, and doubtless many readers will pronounce 'Laddie' to be a sweet story."

+ — N Y Times 18:459 S 7 '13 250w

+ N Y Times 18:500 S 28 '13 150w

"The many thousands of readers who enjoyed 'Freckles' and 'A girl of the Limberlost' will not be disappointed in 'Laddie.'"

+ Outlook 105:46 S 6 '13 150w

"A comforting sugar-cookie romance, bubbling with the elixir of youth."

+ R of Rs 48:503 O '13 100w

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 25 '13 580w

POST, CHARLES JOHNSON. Across the Andes. il $2 (3c) Outing pub. 13-5570

The author, who at the time of the journey described in this book was acting as manager for a mining concern "started down the west coast of South America by steamer, and after the usual vexatious voyage, made the by train to the shores of Lake Titicaca and across it by steamer. A railroad train awaited him when he left the great lake of the Andes, and carried him to La Paz, Bolivia, one of the oldest and most remarkable cities on interior South America. At La Paz Mr. Post left the last traces of civilization and set off through the wild interior to the headwaters of the Amazon. . . . Descending from the final Andean pass, Mr. Post came out upon the valley of the Mapiiri river." (Springfield Republican) The book is illustrated with sketches by the author and photographic reproductions.

"His book is pleasantly personal and leisurely, with life enough in its style and events."

+ Ind 74:656 Mr 20 '13 120w

"It is brightly written, not overloaded with information (tho it would be the better for a map), and reveals the artist not only in the excellent illustrations of his own drawing, but in the vivid, colorful descriptions of the scenery and incidents. It is an interesting book and one very useful to any intending traveler to those wild parts."

+ — Lit D 46:789 Ap 5 '13 130w

"The fact that some of the pictures are improperly labelled and some of the text considerably exaggerated will not spoil the book for the ordinary reader."

+ — Nation 97:340 O 9 '13 270w

"A very entertaining story of adventure. The reader must not be discouraged by the frivolous character of the opening chapters. He describes the people and the country vividly; he has many interesting and exciting experiences and draws a picture of the forest country that is more impressive than anything we have read of it, outside of fiction."

+ — N Y Sun p5 F 22 '13 130w

"One who is interested in South America, and who enjoys reading a description of travels which afforded daily thrills and countless unique situations should be well pleased with Mr. Post's book."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 550w

POWELL, E. ALEXANDER. Gentlemen rovers. il $1.50 (3c) Scribner 13-20203

"This book is written as a tribute to some men who have been overlooked by history and forgotten by fame. Though they won for us more than half the territory compressed within our present day borders, not only have no monuments been erected to perpetuate their exploits, but they lie for the most part in forgotten and neglected graves. Boyd, Truxton, Eaton, Reed, Laätte, Smith, Ide, Ward, Walker—even their names hold no significance for their countrymen of the present generation, yet they played great parts in our national drama." (Foreword) Stories from the lives of these unknown heroes are told in nine chapters with these titles: For rent; an army of elephants; When we fought Napoleon; When we captured an African kingdom; The last fight of the "General Armstrong"; The pirate who turned patriot; The man who dared to cross the ranges; The flag of the bear; The king of the filibusters; Cities captured by contract.

"Mr. Powell's intensely interesting book might well be taken for supplementary reading in all American schools."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 350w

"If the author had told what they did fully and had left the praise or blame to the reader's judgment on their deeds he would have given us a book worth having. As it is, his chief service is to recall their names to memory."

— + N Y Sun p4 S 27 '13 150w

"It is a very interesting assortment of militant free lances that Mr. Powell has assembled in this book."

+ N Y Times 18:610 N 9 '13 500w

"A book good for younger as well as for older readers."

+ Outlook 105:498 N 1 '13 120w

+ R of Rs 48:633 N '13 120w

POWELL, E. ALEXANDER. Last frontier. II

1 *$3 (4½c) Scribner 12-26828

"It is a graphic discussion of the development of Africa, from the standpoint of world politics. Seldom has any author been able so successfully to lay out in the pages of a book a great stretch of the earth's surface for which the powers are contending, or have contended, with a clarity such that the whole affair becomes as real as a chess board, on which the pawns are moved as one watches the game. Aside from this, Mr. Powell has sketched with remarkably quick strokes the main characteristics of the different parts into which Africa is divided by natural and artificial lines, their natural resources and the distinguishing qualities of their inhabitants. Added to this are a great number of excellently chosen photographs, which are reproduced, not merely because they are picturesque or beautiful, but in some cases because they are truly significant of movements now in progress."—Springfield Republican

+ A L A Bkl 9:200 Ja '13

"The author's vivid style makes his book attractive."

+ Ath 1913,1:216 F 22 200w

"Mr. Powell has much that is new and interesting to tell us of Africa, and he does it in a bright and journalistic way." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:525 Ja '13 650w

"A wonderfully gratifying volume of African travel and tale." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p10 N 30 '12 1200w

"The author is a good talker, a versatile artist, an engaging companion. His book is a useful, popular introduction to the history of modern Africa. But the long continued, important, and unselfish work which the missionaries have done, as pioneers of civilization in Africa does not receive anything like its full measure of treatment."

+ Cath World 96: 401 D '12 420w

"The man who knows the value and zest of a broad outlook on our contracting world in our cosmopolitan age will delight in this book."

+ Lit D 46:360 F 15 '13 200w

"In a book which is as fascinating as a novel, Mr. Powell shows much intimate knowledge of some of the countries which go to make up the 'Dark continent,' particularly in its northern and eastern parts."

+ Nation 96:236 Mr 6 '13 320w

"He discovers so many things which others have told about before that the reader may feel inclined to take his political prognostications with a grain of salt."

+ N Y Sun p 9 N 30 '12 130w

"Many magazine readers are familiar with the author's power to portray vividly, even startlingly, the ins and outs of nations. It will be found that in book form Mr. Powell is just as stimulating."

+ N Y Sun p 35 N 30 '12 300w

"Nothing less than a continent is Mr. Powell's study, and he is a student competent to the task. Mr. Powell's pages are full of sheer fascination."

+ N Y Times 17: 758 D 8 '12 400w

+ R of Rs 47:125 Ja '13 230w

"One of the most vividly interesting and valuable books of the year. All in all, this is the most satisfying book upon Africa which has appeared for a number of years; it has the advantage over earlier important studies of being up-to-date to the extent of discussing with much illumination the consequences of the so-called final settlement in 1911, between France and Germany, of the vexed question of Morocco. It is a book which those interested in the great drama of international affairs can hardly afford to miss."

+ Springfield Republican p 5 D 19 '12 1900w

Reviewed by Ellsworth Huntington.

+ Yale R ns3:180 O '13 950w

POWELL, GEORGE HAROLD. Coöperation in agriculture. (Rural science ser.) II *$1.50 (1½c) Macmillan 13-8094

"This volume is intended as a discussion of the principles that underlie the organization and management of the American coöperative associations in agriculture. . . . The writer has discussed some of the legal questions involved, the financing and management of such organizations as they have appeared to him as the result of experience and a general study of the coöperative question. These principles are then illustrated by showing how they are applied to certain agricultural crops." (Preface) Among other forms of cooperation, the author considers Coöperation in irrigation, The rural telephone, and Mutual insurance.

"His work shows a grasp of the issues involved and a ripeness of conclusion that comes only from actual contact with the practical side of coöperation." I. B. Cross.

+ Am Econ R 3:968 D '13 530w

"Fuller and more scientific than Coulter's 'Coöperation among farmers.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:442 Je '13

"The book provides a valuable contribution to a general study of the co-operative movement, besides being of particular interest to farmers."

+ Ath 1913,2:66 Jl 19 130w

"He deals with the practical business question involved in a way that should make the book a valuable aid to farmers who intend to coöperate or who ought to coöperate."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 31 '13 170w

Hibbert J 12:212 O '13 60w

+ Nation 97:106 Jl 31 '13 250w

+ Nature 92:229 O 23 '13 270w

N Y Sun p5 My 3 '13 120w

"Another volume of decided value in the discussion of agricultural topics."

+ N Y Times 18:333 Je 1 '13 220w

POWERS, HARRY HUNTINGTON. Message of Greek art. II *$2 (2½c) Macmillan

A13-2579

Not a history of Greek art but a message of what that art has to tell of the Greeks, of their personality, their ideals and their expe-

POWERS, HARRY HUNTINGTON—Continued. riences. The work is an interpretation of Greek achievement in its fundamental, progressive and inspirational sense. Numerous illustrations adorn the text.

"Interesting and suggestive to art students and thoughtful readers generally."

+ A L A Bkl 10:106 N '13 +
Ath 1913,2:sup438 O 18 20w

"His sty'e seems to us needlessly elaborate."

+ — Ath 1913,2:630 N 29 130w

"Art will have a new significance to every reader of this valuable book."

+ Chaut 71:115 J1 5 '13 100w

"Many who could not be tempted by a sounder book will be captivated by these glowing pages. If the author exhibits no penetrating connoisseurship, his enthusiasms are generally for the best things. To bring many into the presence of the best things is a great achievement." F. B. Tarbell.

+ — Class J 9:80 N '13 500w

"The book is fascinating throughout; but, like other fascinating books, of criticism, must be read with some reserves."

+ — Dial 55:362 N 1 '13 570w

+ Int Studio 51:sup141 D '13 210w

"While the work will not fail to interest any specialists whose generalizing faculty is still alive, its chief public should be found among college students and the more intelligent sort of tourists. To this public it may confidently be recommended."

+ Nation 97:520 N 27 '13 200w

"Whether his views are orthodox or not does not matter much, for modern art criticism leaves plenty of room for differences of opinion. There is a good deal of practical sense in Mr. Powers's book."

+ N Y Sun p5 S 27 '13 180w

"An excellent tonic book suitable for general reading and not unfitted for use in colleges and secondary schools."

+ No Am 198:726 N '13 750w

"Its instruction as to Greek culture is not always as elemental as might be necessary. To those a little familiar with Greek conditions, however, the book is an inspiration."

+ — Outlook 105:330 O 11 '13 120w

"Appreciation of 'Greek art' cannot but grow and ripen under the influence of such an illuminating and stimulating book as this." H. T. B.

+ School Arts Magazine 13:161 O '13 170w

POYNTING, JOHN HENRY. The earth; its shape, size, weight and spin. il *40c (1½c)
Putnam 13-6035

A volume in the series of "Cambridge manuals of science and literature" the aim of which is "to explain in a general way, without mathematical detail, how the shape and size of the earth have been determined, how its mass has been measured, and how we know that it rotates, and so uniformly that it is a nearly perfect time-keeper." (Preface) There are three chapters: The shape and size of the earth; Weighing the earth; The earth as a clock.

"An excellent, brief scientific manual."

+ A L A Bkl 10:147 D '13

PRATZ, CLAIRE DE. France from within. il *$3 Doran 12-24044

"Comments casually upon numerous views of France from without; opinions and volumes written by superficial observers, which she admits to have certain value; but her purpose is to show to English readers the real France from the inside, and, so far as she goes, she does it well and thoroughly; she discusses the life of the people in general and in detail; but avoids such complex subjects as government and politics." (Boston Transcript) "The book contains an intensive and interesting study of such subjects as marriage, divorce, the jeune filie, the bachelor woman, the housekeeper, and the maid." (Lit D)

"These intimate and discerning studies have unique interest in that they are written from the French viewpoint for English readers."

+ A L A Bkl 9:442 Je '13

+ — Ath 1912,2:337 S 28 200w

"Obviously the author is a keen observer and a woman of perspicacity, for she estimates the great problems of national life as accurately as she does the little incidents of human life; but it is to the latter phase that most of the volume is devoted." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p11 Mr 29 '13 850w

"The author of this volume is of French blood, but she was born in England. Educated in London and Paris, she acquired the point of view of each country in judgments of the other, and was, therefore, qualified to give an interesting estimate of French character and home life."

+ Lit D 46:907 Ap 19 '13 180w

+ Nation 97:440 N 6 '13 520w

"Altogether the book is crowded with information told in the most entertaining, human way. Certainly, the volume should fulfill its avowed purpose of creating a juster opinion among foreigners of the French nation, and particularly of its women." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ N Y Times 18:329 Je 1 '13 1150w

"Occasionally the book seems trivial, and in one instance, to us Anglo-Saxons, unmoral. Despite this, it is well worth reading. In general it is very feminine."

+ — Outlook 104:73 My 10 '13 120w

"Very stimulating in style and unusually illuminating in the choice of incidents and situations."

+ R of Rs 47:635 My '13 80w

"She is not always correct in her appreciation of the sterling qualities which preserve for the French noblesse the influence which they still exercise in Paris society and in the country; nor can it be said that she, who knows Paris so well, is equally in touch with the country gentry and the social leaders in the provincial towns of France. Her opinions of the sanctity of the marriage tie are also very lax."

+ — Sat R 115:84 Ja 18 '13 1050w

"This excellent book, though more acute than profound or comprehensive, not only gives a faithful picture of French life, but indicates the evolution which it is undergoing. There is much appropriate insistence upon admirable French qualities too little appreciated in other lands, but comparatively little reference to those distinctive traits which find expression in and are tested by popular governments. This is the most conspicuous lack."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ap 3 '13 1100w

PRESTON, ANNA. Record of a silent life. *$1.25 (2c) Huebsch 13-1488

The record covers many years of the life of a woman born dumb. Her own affliction gives her a sympathy for all suffering and when she is left with a great house and an independent fortune she makes her home a haven for all outcasts and failures. She takes them as boarders but allows them to make their own terms and announces in her advertisement, "children, pets, old people, and invalids not only admitted, but invited." Her story is made up of a chronicle of the lives of the queer derelicts of humanity who find their way to her door.

"It is written with the realism of a diary and the detail of a pathological study; yet the result is cold and detached."

— Ath 1913,1:251 Mr 1 50w

"An excellent piece of literary work, but not convincing as a true record of the existence of a woman born without speech. The characters are original and well-drawn."

+ — Boston Transcript p7 D 21 '12 180w

"A strange, unclassifiable book, seeming at first intolerably and offensively gloomy, this 'Record' gradually unfolds the reader in a poignant interest."

+ — N Y Times 18:66 F 9 '13 220w

"It is an original and kindly picture."

+ Spec 110:932 My 31 '13 30w

PREVITÉ ORTON, CHARLES WILLIAM.

Early history of the house of Savoy (1000-1233). 11 *$3.75 Putnam 13-7648

In tracing the history of the house of Savoy from 1000 to 1233 the author has made "a laborious investigation of the documents concerning that period, the number of which is very great, since they include not only Burgundian sources, but those of Piedmont proper, and those which relate to such larger affairs as Frederick Barbarossa's struggles with the Lombard communes. The origins of the house of Savoy possess not merely the interest which attaches to the oldest reigning family in Europe, but to the process by which it crossed the Alps and established itself in the upper valley of the Po. Mr. Orton describes minutely every stage of this advance and the changing conditions of feudalism. . . . Two maps, carefully prepared, show the dominions of the house of Savoy in about 1080 and 1189." (Nation)

"The occasional page or two of generalization and summing up, in which Mr. Orton interprets the significance of medieval life, surpasses the rest in interest, and proves to us that, having mastered his details, he has grasped the whole period." W: R. Thayer.

+ Am Hist R 19:138 O '13 670w

"A valuable piece of research in a field left untillied by English historians. No mediævalist can afford to neglect this book, which does credit to Cambridge historical scholarship. It is well indexed, and has two useful maps."

+ Ath 1913,1:159 F 8 420w

"A chronicle which can always be read with confidence in its trustworthiness and often with interest."

+ Nation 97:61 J1 17 '13 200w

"The narrative makes no pretensions to literary merit or general interest, but Mr. Orton has amply proved in it his capacity for taking pains."

+ Spec 110:502 Mr 22 '13 70w

PRICE, MORGAN PHILIPS. Siberia. 11 *$2.50
Doran 13-35187

"Mr. Price's book is partly a gossip account of travel, partly a compilation from Blue-books on the economic present and future of Siberia, and the relation of Mongolia to the Russian and Chinese empires." (Sat R) "He is a student of economics; he has little to say of the things previous travellers have dwelt on, the great railroad, the convicts or political matters. He has lived among the people so as to be able to judge of their quality and capacity, he has examined the agricultural possibilities and the resources of the western portion of the country and of the adjacent Mongolian territory. He demonstrates that Siberia has the same possibilities that Canada has and shows how they may be developed." (N Y Sun)

+ A L A Bkl 9:333 Ap '13

"An account, not merely or primarily, of the adventures of a traveler, but of observations and conclusions such as the student wants and finds it so difficult to get from most books on Siberia." G. B. Roorbach.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:284 J1 '13 500w

"Besides the charming narrative of a traveller who has gone through Siberia by rail and road with ears and eyes open, and possesses a power of description which makes all he tells interesting, this book contains a valuable investigation of the actualities and possibilities of Siberia."

+ — Ath 1913,1:62 Ja 18 900w

"The student of political and economic science will value the results of Mr. Price's careful investigation."

+ Lit D 46:908 Ap 19 '13 260w

"Without being noteworthy either as a work of art or as a scientific authority, the volume is always sensible and informing, and nearly always entertaining."

+ — Nation 96:553 My 29 '13 220w

"It is the story of a remarkably intelligent traveller and observer and gives material for thought to every reader."

+ N Y Sun p4 D 21 '12 130w

N Y Times 18:150 Mr 16 '13 130w

"While Mr. Price writes interestingly and suggestively on the commercial and financial features of Siberia, the ordinary reader will, we fancy, be more interested in the description of the inhabitants and the Russian officials, the Slavs and Tartars, the political exiles, the commercial travelers, the fur trappers, and the Chinese merchants."

+ Outlook 103:143 Ja 18 '13 120w

"Its title is very much too big for it, since the country covered does not even quite include the basins of the Irtysh, Ob, and Yenesei, a fair third of the entire country. The information in the latter half of the volume seems accurate and up to date, but such a compilation is at once too dry for the ordinary reader and too condensed and without sufficient authority for the student. The illustrations are quite unhelpful, and show no capacity either to take or to make a photograph."

— + Sat R 114:775 D 21 '12 120w

PRICHARD, HESKETH VERNON HESKETH.

November Joe. 11 *$1.25 (2c) Houghton 13-19332

November Joe is a new type of detective. He is a woodsman trained in wood ways. A snapped twig, a crumpled leaf are the clues by means of which he follows his quarry. The stories which recount his adventures combine admirably the open, free atmosphere of the out-of-door novel with the keen suspense and the air of mystery demanded by the reader of detective fiction.

"May November Joe live long and continue to delight readers with his wonderful sagacity."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 120w

"The method is the same as that long ago made familiar in the triumphs of Sherlock Holmes, but the forest environment in which the action is placed gives to the story a touch of freshness and adds the stimulating breath of the outdoors to the interest which inheres in mysterious crime and clever detective work."

+ N Y Times 18:687 N 30 '13 230w

PRINCESS Mary's locked book. 11 *$1 (3½c)
Cassell 13-3303

A pleasant little story of a young prince and princess, destined to marry one another, who meet incognito in London and fall in love in the fairy tale way. The princess tells her own story in the form of a diary.

"A simple, chatty book of the travel-made-easy kind."

+ Ind 74:989 My 1 '13 50w

"The slight love story and the visits to the sights of London are, however, subsidiary to the raptures over the conveniences of the well known London hotel, which the book is written, apparently, to advertise."

— N Y Sun p4 F 8 '13 50w

"The book is prettily and vivaciously written."

+ N Y Times 18:93 F 23 '13 180w

PRINCETON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.
Biblical and theological studies. 11 *$3
Scribner 12-10660

In honor of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Princeton theological seminary the members of the faculty present this collection of fifteen essays. A partial list of contents is as follows: Theological encyclopedia, by Francis L. Paton; The emotional life of our Lord, by B. B. Warfield; The child whose name is Wonderful, by J. D. Davis; The supernatural, by W. Benton Greene, jr.; Modern spiritual movements, by C. R. Erdman; Jesus and Paul, by J. G. Machen; The eschatological aspect of the Pauline conception of the spirit, by Gerhardus Vos.

PRINCETON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

—Continued.

"It is this sense of a mighty conflict, in which the Princeton theologians stand as the protagonists of supernaturalism against an aggressive naturalism, which gives to their articles a dignity and a scholarly impressiveness which cannot be easily ignored. Their utterances thus represent the best case which can be made out for orthodoxy, and stand as typical of the best conservative scholarship of the country at the opening of the twentieth century." G. B. Smith; S. J. Case; D. D. Luckenbill.

+ — Am J Theol 17:94 Ja '13 4000w

"After allowing for the American spelling and division of words, and for the frequent use of the (to us) ugly phrase 'back of' (it even translates the German 'dahinter'), there is little to indicate the trans-Atlantic origin of the book. The uncertainties in the future tense and the subjunctive mood might come from a Scot or an Irishman, and the scholars whose views are criticised are for the most part English or German, especially German." G. E. Ffrench.

+ — Hibbert J 11:466 Ja '13 1050w

Ind 75:48 Jl 3 '13 100w

Nation 95:389 O 24 '12 280w

"This volume is, in the fullest sense, a worthy memorial of American scholarship."

+ N Y Times 17:348 Je 9 '12 300w

FRINGLE, MRS. ELIZABETH WATRIS¹² (ALLSTON) (PATIENCE PENNINGTON, pseud.). Woman rice planter. il *$2 (2c) Macmillan 13-22122

In the form of a diary, this Carolina woman, who for some years has managed two rice plantations, gives a faithful daily record of her life, her work, her relations with black workers, some faithful, some faithless, and of the mental and spiritual recreations that have made light her days of loneliness. Owen Wister, who writes an introduction to the work, says that "as the narrative proceeds the reader gradually perceives that he has met with a southern picture unsurpassed, and that it makes a native document of permanent historic value."

A L A Bkl 10:147 D '13

"We read the book with absorbing interest and pleasure and lay it down with regret not unmixed with thoughtfulness."

+ Chaut 72:221 N 15 '13 350w

+ Dial 55:465 D 1 '13 120w

"The hackneyed term a 'human document' will suggest itself to readers of 'A woman rice planter' as the best brief description of the vivid though quiet and unpretending pages of that remarkable narrative."

+ Dial 55:485 D 1 '13 180w

+ Ind 76:264 N 6 '13 270w

"The letters give a vivid picture of life on a Carolina plantation, relating things just as they happen with pathos and with humor."

+ N Y Sun p5 O 18 '13 110w

"The pictures are vital to the text, which is itself a human document of great value and absorbing interest."

+ N Y Times 18:702 N 30 '13 60w

PRIOR, MELTON. Campaigns of a war correspondent; ed. by S. L. Bensusan. il *$4.20 Longmans (Eng ed 13-35188)

"Mr. Melton Prior, whose sketches in The Illustrated London news are widely known and admired, has left voluminous notes of his experiences during the various campaigns in which as an artist he was engaged. . . . The expeditions described include Ashanti, 1873-4; Russo-Turkish war, 1877; Zulu and Boer wars, 1879-81; Egypt, 1882; Alfridi, 1897; the Boer war, 1900-2; and the Russo-Japanese war, 1904-5; besides many minor campaigns." —Ath

"Full of interest to the general reader as well as to the student of military history."

+ A L A Bkl 9:333 Ap '13

"A book of considerable interest."

+ Ath 1912,2:551 N 9 180w

Nation 95:483 N 21 '12 300w

"Tragedies and adventures in plenty are to be found in his pages, but he neither hides nor emphasizes the horrible side of war, and the result is an eminently readable book, which may be picked up and laid down by the reader as the fit pleases him."

+ N Y Times 17:751 D 1 '12 1500w

"Packed full of incident and anecdote."

+ R of Rs 47:125 Ja '13 70w

"Not originally intended for publication, they are written in a very free style, and show us some curious sidelights. They should, therefore, provide much interesting reading not only for the student of military history, but for the general reader as well."

+ Sat R 115:150 F 1 '13 180w

"No book founded on such a basis of experience could be uninteresting or wholly valueless, and Mr. Prior had both a retentive memory and a fluent pen. Moreover, he followed his profession with an intrepidity which resulted in many a private and, as it were, unofficial adventure. Unfortunately his method is rather lacking in grasp. He seems always too close to his subject, and his descriptions have the hurried and impersonal quality of pencil sketches from the front."

+ — Spec 110:107 Ja 18 '13 600w

PROTHERO, ROWLAND EDMUND. English farming, past and present; new ed. *$4 Longmans 13-873

Taking his "Pioneers and progress of English farming" as a basis, the author has rewritten parts of it, omitted other parts and added much new material. "The main object of the volume as a whole—as of the earlier volume—the author declares in the Preface to be 'to suggest that advances in agricultural skill, the adoption of new methods, the application of new resources, the invention of new implements, have been, under the pressure of national necessities, powerful instruments in breaking up older forms of rural society, and in moulding them into their present shape. . . . The appendices have been similarly expanded, excised, and brought down to date. A feature is the annotated 'Chronological list of agricultural writers down to 1700,' which appears in a somewhat changed and considerably enlarged and improved form in the new volume. A double-column index covering some 35 pages adds greatly to the usefulness of the book." (J Pol Econ)

"Written with both scholarship and insight."

+ Am Hist R 19:191 O '13 30w

"Based upon his former book, his new one bids fair to become the standard work on the history of English agriculture, notwithstanding the recent plentiful output of literature."

+ Ath 1912,2:559 N 9 150w

"The work abundantly justifies the object for which it was undertaken. It is a pleasure to testify to the thoroughness with which the author has delved into the various sources in the effort to throw a flood of light on every phase of the development of agriculture in England." J. G. Thompson.

+ J Pol Econ 21:469 My '13 2350w

"Mr. Prothero is a learned, picturesque, and suggestive advocate of small holdings."

+ Nation 96:597 Je 12 '13 1450w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

+ N Y Times 18:58 F 9 '13 70w

"Masterly book."

+ Spec 110:884 My 24 '13 1350w

PROUTY, OLIVE HIGGINS. Bobbie, general manager. *$1.25 (1c) Stokes 13-3300

The story of a very fine tom-boyish girl who successfully manages and mothers a family of brothers and sisters, some younger, some older than herself. Bobbie spends one tragic term in a boarding-school to which her family in mistaken kindness send her, feeling that she ought to acquire some of the attributes of a lady. Bobbie who has already developed the much more valuable attributes of a woman is decidedly out of place in the frivolous, fashionable atmosphere and when family circumstances call her home she comes again into her own element. She sees her family married; marries herself and continues to be to husband, brothers and sisters and nieces a wise and kindly general manager.

"Though far from the world of romance, it will interest the ordinary reader."

+ A L A Bkl 9:345 Ap '13

"Perhaps the best and most direct way of explaining just what is the type of 'Bobbie, general manager,' is to say that it belongs in kind, if not in degree, in the class with Miss Alcott's 'Little women.'" F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:337 My '13 400w

"It is the world of 'Little women' that she depicts. The story itself with its various love episodes is interesting."

+ N Y Sun p3 Mr 8 '13 120w

"The best feature of the book is the girl's constant revelation of herself. The novel is a first effort, and shows much promise in the conception and interpretation of character, and in the ability to catch and put into words without seeming to try to do so that elusive thing, the atmosphere of a human life."

+ N Y Times 18:21 Ja 19 '13 150w

+ R of Rs 47:629 My '13 30w

PROWSE, RICHARD ORTON. James Hurd. *$1.25 Lippincott 13-17333

"An interesting, psychological study of a married couple estranged by the tragic fate of their only child, a boy of seven years old, who, through an accident, suffers physically and mentally. The child hates his mother with perverse intensity; her presence provokes his evil spirit, and she is forced to avoid him, even when his suffering rouses all her instinct to comfort. The strain tells on her nerves—she becomes morbid and demoralized. Her husband understands, but cannot console her; the two lose touch with one another; and though both recognize that they are drifting apart, they are powerless against it. Gradually the man realizes that the only way out is through the death of the child."—Ath

Ath 1913,1:649 Je 14 150w

"It is a cruel book, a haunting book, one that you almost hate the author for having written, and yet one that, having read it, you would not blot out from your memory even if you could."

+ — Bookm 38:62 S '13 550w

"The English is admirable."

+ N Y Sun p3 Je 14 '13 170w

"It is a strange, in some respects a repelling book, and it is a book to own. It is penetrated, not with modern opinions nor with modern revolt, but with the very Zeitgeist itself—witness Evelyn Hurd's luminous address on 'Spiritual individualism.' Our horizon cannot fail to be widened, our sympathies made more broadly inclusive by its companionship. It reaches toward the great things of humanity and searches into the secrets of the soul."

+ N Y Times 18:424 Ag 3 '13 550w

PRYCE, RICHARD. Burden of a woman. *$1.35 (2c) Houghton A13-600

The scene of the story is the Welsh village to which Mary Redwing, with her little daughter Peggy, comes for isolation and shelter. In Maen Gorsedd Mary lives a life of peace for eight years before the story of her past becomes known. But even then her new friends are true to her. None turns away save one—Peter Davidson, the man who had wished to marry her. Peter is the righteous man who has no forgiveness in his heart for the woman who has sinned. It is after his marriage with Hannah Rees a girl of good family and unsullied reputation that his eyes are opened to the inner meaning of the words "morality" and "virtue."

"Well written and fairly interesting, but not to be compared with 'Christopher.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:345 Ap '13

"Mr. Pryce does not moralize; he simply tells his story, always an adequate and interesting one, and tells it persuasively and well."

+ Atlan 112:694 N '13 250w

"In plot and in characterization it possesses something new, and it sheds not a little light upon the sympathetic qualities of the border Welsh people." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 5 '13 100w

+ Ind 74:1202 My 29 '13 50w

"But for the fact that the scene is laid in a Welsh border-county instead of upon Dartmoor, and for the single page of epilogue which supplies, or implies, a happy ending, this tale might almost have been told by Mr. Phillpotts. But we have not here the feebleness of conscious imitation; we feel that Mr. Pryce is more certain of his ground, more absorbed, at least, in his theme, than in his studies in polite romance."

+ Nation 96:309 Mr 27 '13 250w

"Very interesting."

+ N Y Sun p3 Ap 19 '13 350w

"Mr. Pryce has given his problem an interesting presentation and written an interesting story."

+ N Y Times 18:76 F 16 '13 300w

+ — Outlook 103:502 Mr 1 '13 40w

R of Rs 47:630 My '13 80w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 6 '13 220w

PRYCE, RICHARD. Elementary Jane. *$1.35 (1½c) Houghton A13-713

Jane Smith is a simple-minded, unimaginative young girl, fair and sweet as a country-grown blossom, who finds an opening in a London music hall. She sings sweet and pretty songs about violets that nestle in the lane to sophisticated cockney audiences; catches the popular fancy and becomes, in a small way, famous. She finds many friends and two lovers—Michael, "the drum" in the musical hall orchestra, and Curley Merino of the famous "Merino family." It is Curley whom she marries and to whom she remains constant even after his light-hearted desertion. After Curley's meeting with a well-merited end there is no direct promise that Michael's long faithfulness is to be rewarded; but we hope that it is.

"A simple story, improbable but well told and on the whole pleasant reading."

+ A L A Bkl 9:345 Ap '13

+ Atlan 112:694 N '13 320w

"Like the character of its heroine, 'Elementary Jane' is notable for its simplicity, and the story possesses not a little of the charm to its readers that she must have exercised over her music hall audiences."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 130w

+ Ind 74:1202 My 29 '13 50w

PRYCE, RICHARD—Continued.

"'Elementary Jane' is the 'real thing'—the really spontaneous and really finished work among the present group."

+ Nation 96:309 Mr 27 '13 250w

N Y Sun p3 Ap 19 '13 850w

"The whole story deals with music hall performers and managers, but in a simple, natural, human way. Not the slightest taint of melodrama lurks anywhere within its pages. It is to be counted much in the author's favor that he could do this and make the book interesting by its sheer humanness, and wholesome, rather than depressing by the force of his simple-natured heroine."

+ N Y Times 18:182 Mr 30 '13 300w

"Gives a thoroughly realistic picture of music-hall and lodging-house life; but it is not inspired with imagination, nor does one really care very much, for the people who move through it."

+ Outlook 103:502 Mr 1 '13 40w

"An excellent character study."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 6 '13 220w

PRYCE, RICHARD. Jezebel. *$1.35 (1c) Houghton
A13-517

Her father named her in a moment of anger and of unjust suspicion against his wife. And when old enough to understand its significance the girl accepted the name as a challenge. Loving kindness would by this time have softened its harshness by modifying it to Jessy. But for herself she would have none of it. She gave her name in full—Jezebel Dexter. She grows to womanhood thru a long, sweet childhood. At the age of four she conquers her stern old father and changes his prejudice to love. She continues to conquer all her life in like manner. She is a headstrong girl, willful and impetuous, but such is her charm that long before the end of the book is reached her very name has lost its unpleasant connotation, to become, like its bearer, winsome.

+ A L A Bkl 9:345 Ap '13

Atlan 112:694 N '13 50w

"Mr. Pryce is a close student of woman, and in both these stories he has utilized his skill to the advantage of his subject and to the pleasure of the readers. He is distinctly a novelist who is likewise a commentator on life."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 130w

"Too much is made of the name and the plot is as old as 'Romeo and Juliet'."

+ Ind 74:1201 My 29 '13 30w

"Mr. Pryce has made a dramatic and engrossing story out of this unusual collection of possibilities."

+ Lit D 46:579 Mr 15 '13 180w

"In substance as in manner, 'Jezebel' is clever and self-conscious."

+ Nation 96:308 Mr 27 '13 500w

"There is much good work in 'Jezebel' and the story is readable. The harping on the poor joke of his heroine's name is tiresome."

+ N Y Sun p4 F 8 '13 120w

"A well-told story of an interesting personality. The plot is unusual and the characters are well-drawn. 'Jezebel' has not the simple realism of some of Mr. Pryce's other work, but it is a clever and readable tale."

+ N Y Times 18:102 F 23 '13 150w

+ Outlook 103:502 Mr 1 '13 40w

R of Rs 47:630 My '13 20w

PRYCE, RICHARD. Time and the woman.
$1.25 (2c) Fenno 13-35469

A story of a young and beautiful mother with a grown-up daughter. The daughter is equally beautiful, but she is kept in the background, subdued and suppressed in order that she may dim none of the mother's brilliancy. Gerald Ventnor, a young man of the ordinary idle, clubman type, is attracted to the mother and becomes one of the frequenters of her house. He scarcely sees Araby the daughter, in the beginning, but gradually, almost against his own knowledge, he falls in love with her. But when he awakens it is too late, the wily mother has arranged for her daughter's marriage to a man in whom she herself has no interest.

"Should have been allowed to lie forgotten—it is mere froth."

—Ind 74:1201 My 29 '13 70w

"It is all very interesting and well-written, but it does not quite succeed in gripping the attention. To borrow from the slang of the theatre, it lacks 'punch.'"

+ Nation 96:309 Mr 27 '13 350w

N Y Sun p11 My 3 '13 750w

"This is a moderately clever story of London, with the people for whom amusement is the serious business of life."

+ N Y Times 18:66 F 9 '13 150w

"For the author's sake it is to be hoped that this book is in truth what it appears to the reader—an early manuscript, disinterred from his waste basket."

—N Y Times 18:438 Ag 17 '13 220w (Review of Houghton edition)

+ Outlook 103:502 Mr 1 '13 40w

PRYOR, ROGER ATKINSON. Essays and addresses, with explanatory notes. *$1.50
Neale 12-29489

These essays and addresses are accompanied by a brief introduction, explanatory notes and a portrait of the author. Contents: Independence of the South; The sufficiency of the new amendments; The soldier, the friend of peace and union; The General Grant anniversary; The reciprocal obligations of the bench and bar; The bar and forensic oratory; Influence of Virginia in the formation of the federal constitution; The people of the state of New York vs. the North River sugar refining company.

"The beauty of well-chosen phraseology and carefully-ordered periods distinguishes the book."

+ Dial 54:60 Ja 16 '13 300w

"His style has the old-fashioned leisureliness. The book needs a few notes, particularly on the first speech, and more dates."

+ Nation 95:593 D 19 '12 150w

+ N Y Times 18:142 Mr 16 '13 130w

P'U SUNG-LING. Strange stories from the lodge of leisures; tr. from the Chinese by George Soulié. *$1 Houghton 13-35399

"George Soulié, of the French consular service in China, has given us here a translation of twenty-five stories from a Chinese work which contains more than three hundred similar tales and belongs to the second half of the eighteenth century." (Lit D) "If this little collection may be compared with anything in occidental literature, it is with the fairy tales of the brothers Grimm. The adventures of 'Hong the currier,' for example, are closely paralleled by those of various heroes of more familiar folklore. . . . But these resemblances are comparatively few for it is the belief in metempsychosis, derived from Buddhism and adapted to the requirements of a somewhat naïve fiction, which plays the dominating part in most of these tales." (N Y Times)

"Certain of the tales possess a quaint and delicate charm. The perfection and lightness of touch of a Lafcadio Hearn, evinced in the best tales, is harmoniously matched with the crudity and formlessness of others."

+ Dial 54:514 Je 16 '13 100w

"Most of the stories are combination love- and ghost-stories possessing a delicate charm of imagination. Each has a suggestive moral, more or less clearly defined, while their very unusual character and phraseology make them singularly charming."

+ Lit D 47:484 S 20 '13 170w

+ Nation 97:464 N 13 '13 350w

"Lacking the charm and spirituality of those wonderful Indian tales translated by F. W.

Bain, these stories are nevertheless exceedingly interesting in the glimpses they afford of a conception of life and the world very different from our own."

+ N Y Times 18:438 Ag 17 '13 280w

PUGH, EDWIN WILLIAM. Charles Dickens originals. il *$2.50 Scribner 12-29353

"Of the real characters that inspired the novelist to the creation of their famous doubles in fiction no genuine Dickens-lover will ever tire of reading. Such chapters as those of Mr. Pugh on Mary Hogarth, Maria Beadnell, the Brothers Cheeryble, some Pickwickians, relics from 'The old curiosity shop,' certain criminal prototypes, and so on, afford both entertainment and instruction." (Dial) Some of the other persons described are the originals of Sam Weller, Nicholas Nickleby, Dolly Varden, Little Dorrit, Mr. Micawber, and Barnaby Rudge. An index of names and book-titles is included.

"Mr. Pugh writes effectively, but has an irritating habit of pausing on a row of dots."

+ — Ath 1912:2:598 N 16 130w

"Mr. Pugh is vigorously contentious and elaborately disputatious. He has none of Mr. Crockett's reluctance towards surmise and conjecture, and the personal equation dominates his entire book" E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p6 D 21 '12 250w

"Careful and interesting work. One of the most inviting of recent works about the great novelist."

+ Dial 53:502 D 16 '12 220w

"He writes to satisfy a wide-spread interest in gossip about a popular novelist. He does, indeed, speak of his purpose to establish the deep influence that Dickens's acquaintances and friends had on his characterization and outlook on life. But he does not take his declared purpose too seriously. It would be inconvenient."

— Nation 96:184 F 20 '13. 1000w

"When it comes to Dickens's actual practice in building his figures around a single striking trait we find it hard to follow Mr. Pugh in his attempt to find an analogy in the practice of Shakespeare. If, in this book, as in Mr. Crockett's 'Originals of Scott,' the enthusiasm of the special student now and then runs into adulation, that is the price which almost invariably must be paid for such devotion as theirs." H. W. B.

+ — N Y Times 17:799 D 29 '12 700w

"All lovers of Dickens will enjoy this book. So will those who are interested in seeing how a great novelist gets material for his work."

+ Outlook 103:45 Ja 4 '13 120w

"The book will find a welcome from lovers of Dickens and students of literature, and from some who have leisure for general reading."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 1 '13 330w

PUMPHREY, MARGARET BLANCHE. Stories of the Pilgrims. il *$1 Rand A13-266

These stories of the Pilgrims, told for children, were published first in 1910 under the title "Pilgrim stories." The author writes of the everyday life of the Pilgrims in England, Holland, and Plymouth, and to make her stories of especial interest to young readers she gives to the Brewster children and their boy and girl companions of the colony the central place in each tale.

"Graphic and well written accounts."

+ A L A Bkl 9:268 F '13 *

"The first part of the story is to be recommended for its simple and direct narrative. In an agreeable manner, one is made to associate the facts of history with the incidents of a simple story. Mrs. Lucy Fitch Perkins, in her line drawings, has satisfactorily illustrated the incidents which form the many little stories."

+ Lit D 45:1080 D 7 '12 100w

PURDY, HELEN THROOP. San Francisco as it was, as it is, and how to see it. il *$2.50 (3½c) Elder 12-24865

"Twenty-seven chapters give the city's early history and later fortunes, describe its chief points of interest, furnish glimpses of the men who have made it famous, advise the reader how best to see its noteworthy features, and in closing touch briefly on its environs. Maps of the bay region, the city itself, and the exposition site at Harbor View, are added. More than two hundred illustrations from photographs and other sources make visible to the eye much that is described in the text."—Dial

"The style suits the purpose of the work very well, being simple and straightforward and happily without the glowing rhetoric found in many books on California."

+ A L A Bkl 9:249 F '13

Dial 53:497 D 16 '12 220w

"The facts have been collated with care and discrimination."

+ Ind 74:1301 Je 5 '13 120w

"A thorough and interesting guidebook, artistic as well as practical. It is lavishly illustrated with pictures, many of which are works of art, and with maps that are unusual and informing."

+ N Y Sun p7 N 16 '12 130w

+ N Y Times 18:98 F 23 '13 70w

PUTNAM, GEORGE PALMER. Southland of North America. il *$2.50 Putnam 13-10667

"The book takes the reader from Panama northward to Guatemala over a region which for some few years of the last century constituted the confederation of Central America. . . . Most of the distance travelled by the tourist was made by water. Their journey northward was made from port to port by steamers of the Pacific Mail. They crossed to Costa Rica by rail from the Pacific to the Caribbean Sea, making a short stay at the capital, San José. . . . The volume is very fully illustrated by about a hundred photographic views of scenery and of natives in costume and pursuing their ordinary employments. One has only to supply in imagination the temperature of the tropics to realize what is the daily life of these neighbors of ours."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 10:62 O '13 *

"Those who want an admirable summary of the present position of these peppery tropical republics will find it given in a very few words in these pleasant pages."

+ Ath 1913:2:152 Ag 16 750w

"An entertaining account."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 14 '13 400w

"Especially commendable is Mr. Putnam's care to confine his remarks to that of which he has personal or otherwise trustworthy knowledge, a practice not universal with writers on Latin America."

+ Dial 55:55 Jl 16 '13 300w

"It performs a valuable service in bringing home in entertaining and sensible fashion the present day problems of these little states which are to be of increasing concern to us."

+ Ind 75:509 Ag 28 '13 130w

"The student, traveler, or reader who desires only to be amused will thoroughly enjoy Mr. Putnam's book."

+ Lit D 46:1394 Je 21 '13 220w

"He is a keen and sympathetic observer."

+ Nation 97:190 Ag 28 '13 300w

"With so many books, reliable and otherwise, professing to give exact information of the land through which the Panama canal has at last forced its way, it is pleasant to pick up Mr. Putnam's entertaining and unpretentious volume. The charm of his book lies in its descriptions of places that are off the beaten track of travel. For one thing, he writes of a country that is practically unknown to the tourist."

PUTNAM, GEORGE PALMER—Continued.

+ N Y Times 18:326 Je 1 '13 1600w

"We know of no book on Central America which puts the reader into more actual touch with that country than does Mr. Putnam's."

+ Outlook 104:720 Jl 26 '13 180w

"There are plenty of interesting pictures in the volume and some quite entertaining reading."

+ R of Rs 48:121 Jl '13 80w

"For 'The southland of North America' there should be a warm welcome. The many photo-engravings which illustrate the text are unusual, even in a day when readers have grown accustomed to demand nothing less than good pictures in such a book as this."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 550w

PUTNAM, NINA WILCOX. Impossible boy.
il $1.35 (1½c) Bobbs 13-6544

A company of wandering gypsies with their dancing bears are the actors who appear first on the stage in this comedy. One of them is Pedro who has ambitions to be a painter. A meeting with Samuel Hill, an artist who has just been disappointed in love, gives him his opportunity. Hill wants to leave the world, Pedro wants to go to New York to paint, they accordingly effect a fair exchange. Pedro moves into Hill's New York studio, Hill takes charge of the dancing bear and joins the gypsy strollers. The story thereafter follows the adventures of both, and reveals, thru the introduction of some melodramatic by-play the secrets of Pedro's personality and parentage.

"A nice, happy, joyous book for the nice, happy, joyous Young who are just beginning to know their New York!"

+ Bookm 37:342 My '13 500w

"Full of charm and color and the lingering sweetness of the hedgerows in early spring, touched with the shadow of a half-dispelled tragedy, a thrill with life, yet whimsical and fantastic, 'The impossible boy' is an endless delight."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 24 '13 270w

"The adventure of the youngster, the bear and the red haired maiden is pretty, and we like the portly lunch wagonman. The South American business, revolution, villainy and love affair is all clumsy and spoils the story."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 29 '13 200w

"All the characters wear cloaks of magic and motley, and their adventures are the more enjoyable therefor. There is satire also of the gentle sort. Altogether there will not be a jollier, more fascinating, nor more amusing novel this spring, it is safe to say."

+ N Y Times 18:158 Mr 23 '13 500w

PUVIS DE CHAVANNES, PIERRE. Puviss de Chavannes; with a biographical and critical study by André Michel, and notes by J. Laran. il $1 Lippincott (Eng ed 13-35189)

Together with a volume on Edouard Manet, this little book inaugurates a new series to be known as "French artists of our day." A short introductory note, and critical comments accompany the reproductions of the artist's pictures.

A L A Bkl 9:333 Ap '13

+ Ath 1912,2:597 N 16 70w

"M. Michel's brief introduction of some eight pages is admirably sympathetic and intimate, a fine example of that kind of appreciative art criticism in which the French writers excel." W. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '13 700w

+ Dial 54:102 F 1 '13 270w

"This is a most welcome collection, and the generosity with which plates are furnished is a point in its favor. The work of translation has been inefficiently done."

+ Ind 74:654 Mr 20 '13 80w

"The series seems in all respects well planned, but we hope the English manufacturers will in subsequent numbers provide half-tone cuts of better and more even quality."

+ Nation 96:66 Ja 16 '13 50w

N Y Times 18:28 Ja 19 '13 50w

"Interesting book."

+ Outlook 103:735 Mr 29 '13 250w

+ R of Rs 47:381 Mr '13 20w

+ Sat R 115:368 Mr 22 '13 100w

"M. Michel has written sympathetically of the great decorator. The volume, as far as the illustrations are concerned, will not supersede the one devoted to this painter in the series published by Newnes and co. a year or two ago."

+ Spec 110:sup130 Ja 25 '13 80w

PYCRAFT, WILLIAM PLAYNE. Infancy of animals. il $1.75 (2c) Holt A13-861

A work on a subject which the author feels has been neglected. While works on natural history abound, too little attention has been given in them to the early stages of growth; and while treatises on embryonic development are many, post-embryonic development has been overlooked. "The purpose of this book is to stimulate a wider interest in this theme, which contains food for thought not only for the evolutionist, but also for the students of sociology and of child-life in particular." (Preface)

"It is a worthy treatment of the theme. The book is not a repetition of old reprinted facts, but gives the results of the great recent advances in the study of wild life, not a few of the observations being the author's own. Unfortunately, references to the original papers are given in only a few cases." Wallace Craig.

+ Am J Soc 18:839 Mr '13 350w

"A scholarly yet entertaining history of the young of animals."

+ A L A Bkl 9:442 Je '13

"The plates and numerous illustrations in the text are good, and the volume is worthy of the author's knowledge and reputation."

+ Ath 1912,2:733 D 14 150w

"A particularly noteworthy feature of the book are the numerous illustrations, for the most part original, too, and really illustrative of points made in the text. They add immeasurably to the value of the book, which is altogether a notable addition to the popular literature of science."

+ Ind 74:924 Ap 24 '13 250w

"About equally balanced in its excellences and shortcomings. It contains a very great number of extremely interesting facts which are offered from a novel point of view; but the arrangement is poor and the diction is inadequate. The trail of the museum lies upon the text, whereas the subjects demand the freedom of treatment of the field naturalist."

+ Nation 97:84 Jl 24 '13 580w

+ N Y Sun p6 F 22 '13 1450w

"It may be said in commendation of his treatise that it is both entertaining and authoritative; the author writes charmingly about a subject he knows thoroughly, and gives us a great volume of curious and valuable information."

+ N Y Times 18:81 F 16 '13 230w

"A valuable and interesting work." F. H. Herrick.

+ Science ns38:304 Ag 29 '13 2600w

+ Spec 110:sup688 Ap 26 '13 950w

"Scarcely less fascinating than the poetic studies of Henri Fabre upon his beetles and wasps."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 17 '13 550w

Q

QUICK, HERBERT. On board the good ship
 12 Earth. $1.25 (1½c) Bobbs 13-19084

A series of essays, presenting, in a popular vein, a discussion of certain philosophical and economic world problems. One group of chapters deals with the problems of diminishing natural resources; in another group the author discusses what he terms the "seven perils of humanity," meaning certain racial perils. Other chapters take up: Patriotism—vice or virtue? The evils of good government; The prevention of floods; The soil in jeopardy; The water courses; Poverty vs monopoly; The nightmare of militarism, etc. Edward Alsworth Ross who writes an introduction to the book says that it belongs to that class of "light-bringing books" which "bear us to some mount of vision and show us a panorama."

"Striking but superficial survey of world problems."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:148 D '13

"Most of it is rather trite."

+ — Boston Transcript p8 N 8 '13 160w

QUILLER-COUCH, SIR ARTHUR THOMAS
 ("Q" pseud.), comp. Oxford book of Victorian verse. $2 Oxford W13-37

"As a kind of supplement to 'The Oxford book of English verse,' we have now from Arthur Quiller-Couch 'The Oxford book of Victorian verse' which, beginning with Landor, goes anthologizing down the century among dead and living poets even to our day." (Nation) Eighteen American poets are represented and two hundred and fifty-six English, including "such contemporary 'Edwardian' and 'Georgian' poets as Alfred Noyes, John Masefield, Wilfrid Wilson Gibson and Lascelles Abercrombie." (Boston Transcript)

+ — A L A Bkl 9:385 My '13

"These eight hundred pieces include a body of poetry which any reign, except another woman's would be hard pressed to surpass. The book has one advantage over most others of its class—the readers of the Clarendon Press have, as usual, done their work with punctilious exactitude. A few slips are easily excused in a work of its size."

+ — Ath 1912,2:750 D 21 1400w

"It brings together a great body of modern verse not easily accessible in other ways to American readers, and shows great taste in selection. Its weakness is in its representation of American poets who might better have been omitted altogether." W: A. Bradley.

+ — Bookm 37:197 Ap '13 200w

Boston Transcript p8 Ja 18 '13 270w

"Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch has certainly interpreted his commission in the widest possible way, for he has laid American poets under such generous tribute that he has included not merely Lowell, Holmes and Whittier, but also N. P. Willis. On the other hand, he is so hospitable to the newest poets that he closes his anthology with some samples of the work of Lascelles Abercrombie, who can hardly be said to belong to the Victorian era." H: C. Shelley.

+ — Boston Transcript p9 Ja 18 '13 230w

"It is certain that the editor has not repeated the success of the 'Oxford book of English verse.'" W. S. B.

+ — Boston Transcript p7 F 15 '13 1350w

"As must be inevitable with any anthology, the individual poetry-lover will grumble a little over what will seem to him errors of proportion or omission; but his abiding feeling will be one of gratitude for such a wealth of treasure in so compact and beautiful a form"

+ — Dial 54:149 F 16 '13 220w

"Sir Arthur's new anthology challenges comparison more or less directly with two other works occupying approximately the same field, or parts of it: Palgrave's 'Golden treasury' (second series), and Alfred H. Miles's 'Poets and poetry of the nineteenth century.' To the former it is inferior in that exquisite and magisterial finality of taste which makes its compiler the prince of English anthologists, while it falls below the latter in representative fullness. But it possesses an advantage that neither of the others can claim, in the completeness of its retrospective view."

+ — Ind 74:1040 My 8 '13 600w

"The book is not impeccable from any canon of taste."

+ — Nation 96:235 Mr 6 '13 230w

"Valuable and delightful." Ludwig Lewisohn.

+ — N Y Times 18:238 Ap 20 '13 300w

"Those who have placed their 'Oxford book of English poetry' beside the 'Golden treasury' will, we think, be disappointed in the present volume. Sir Arthur may not have lost his literary good taste, but he has severely shaken our trust in his sense of proportion."

+ — Outlook 103:502 Mr 1 '13 400w

"We must draw attention to a serious blot upon the collection. One of the most beautiful and best-known lyrics in the language—Beddoes's 'Dream-pedlary'—is grossly mutilated without a word of apology and without even any hint that the mutilation has been performed. Who can now feel absolutely certain, without a reference to an original edition, that Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch's blue pencil has not been through a couple of stanzas of 'The scholar gypsy,' or that he has not pruned a dozen superfluous lines from the 'Hymn to Proserpine'?"

+ — Spec 110:sup131 Ja 25 '13 490w

QUIRK, LESLIE W. Fourth down. II $1.20
 Little 12-22871

Penfield Wayne, a freshman at Wellworth is the hero who "learns a lesson in the course of the tale, the lesson on which the idea of democracy is founded; but after all, the main business is football, which is quite as it should be." (Bookm)

"A clean, spirited story, crowded with realistic scenes in freshman life."

+ A L A Bkl 9:176 D '12

"It is a spirited account of freshman life, and just leads on from one game to another, each described with a loving particularity boys will rejoice in." Hildegrade Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:573 Ja '13 90w

R

RABELAIS, FRANCIS. Works; tr. into English by P: Motteux. 2v II $5 Lipplincott

"Though the present publishers give no clew to the translation they have used, aside from the date on the titlepage (and the mention of Motteux in the table of contents), it is apparent that this is the Urquhart-Motteux version. Sir Thomas Urquhart's translation of the first and second books was published in 1653. That date appears on the titlepage of the present edition. . . . [Its] raison d'être would seem to be in Mr. Heath Robinson's illustrations. They certainly form a remarkably successful attempt to reproduce the spirit of the text. . . . Here then, is an attractive edition to all who wish to investigate one of the world's extraordinary books. Its incredible grossness, its exuberance and its wide learning make it thoroughly characteristic of the age which produced it."—Boston Transcript.

"It is somewhat of a pleasure nowadays to see an ambitious essay in illustrating carried through in honest black line, and whatever reservations we may make as to the substance of the two volumes, artist and publisher may be congratulated upon its form."

+ — Ath 1912,2:sup710 D 7 400w

RABELAIS, FRANCIS—Continued.

"The abundant drawings have rich medieval humor and raciness. The wood-cut suggestion in his work also admirably retains the spirit of the times, and the treatment is rightly one of high caricature. Delicious is the word for many of them, and as a set they are characterised by much fertility of imagination." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:392 D '12 80w

+ Boston Transcript p25 D 4 '12 350w

"The antique flavor of this time-tested version corresponds well with the archaism of Rabelais's style, and the humorous conceits of the illustrator fall no whit behind the amusing inventions of the author."

+ Dial 53:453 D 1 '12 80w

"Divested of their mere extravagances and mere filthinesses—concessions to the taste of the time—his writings abundantly testify a man of big mind and sympathy. The illustrations by W. Heath Robinson which embellish the present reprint do little toward drawing out the hidden richness of the text. As a gallery of hideous and bestial faces, with here and there a group of figures of more or less allegorical force, these pictures are noteworthy." H. W. B.

+ N Y Times 17:558 O 6 '12 1250w

Spec 109:973 D 7 '12 50w

RAILTON, GEORGE SCOTT. Authoritative life of General William Booth, founder of the Salvation army; with a preface by Gen. Bramwell Booth. 1l *$1 Doran 13-924

"The object of this memoir is to note some of the things that a truly great man did and said, which made him a power for the good of his fellowmen. Most of it is a reproduction of his sayings and writings to his devoted followers. It is written from the standpoint of the successors on whom his work has devolved, and with the purpose of promoting its expansion. It includes a few of the tributes to his memory by the European press, and chapters on the financial system, the organization, and the spirit of the Salvation army."—Outlook

"Probably wider in appeal than the future definitive work will be and of value as a history of the Salvation army."

+ A L A Bkl 9:294 Mr '13

"Characteristic of Mr. Booth and in harmony with the plan of the biography is the omission of those details which, while of less moment than the successive steps in the evangelist's rise to world-wide recognition and in the recruiting of his great army of religious workers, would have pictured the man to us more vividly as a human being and would have imparted variety to the narrative."

+ Dial 54:186 Mr 1 '13 400w

+ Ind 74:113 Ja 9 '13 70w

"The writer of these pages was First Commissioner to General Booth. His account of the development of the Salvation army movement is as authoritative as any one could write and gives the life of the General most sympathetically."

+ Lit D 46:243 F 1 '13 220w

"Commissioner Railton's book is intended primarily for members of the Salvation army, and is too tractarian in character to command the interest of readers not in active association with that body."

— Nation 96:236 Mr 6 '13 300w

+ N Y Times 18:91 F 23 '13 900w

Outlook 103:233 Ja 25 '13 150w

R of Rs 47:376 Mr '13 70w

RAINSFORD, REV. WILLIAM STEPHEN.

Reasonableness of the religion of Jesus. *$1.25 (2½c) Houghton 13-4088

This volume presents the substance of the Baldwin lectures for 1911 at the University of Michigan, under the Baldwin lectureship for the establishment and defence of Christian truth. The subjects of the six chapters are: The reasonableness and necessity of growth and change in religion; Jesus' doctrine of the seed (2 chapters); The naturalness and supernaturalness of Jesus; Jesus' doctrine; Jesus' doctrine of man's approach to God.

+ A L A Bkl 10:24 S '13

Boston Transcript p11 Ap 25 '13 280w

"One of the best of Dr. W. S. Rainsford's rich contributions to religion."

+ Ind 75:748 S 25 '13 120w

"This book presents serious contemporary problems in clean cut statement. Whether or not the reader falls in step with the author, the discussion will have been clarified, the issue put forth in its naked outline."

+ N Y Sun p5 Je 28 '13 850w

"The volume is well worth reading."

+ N Y Times 18:173 Mr 30 '13 80w

"An interpretation of Christian faith that will light up some places that many thoughtful people find darkened by dogma. Dr. Rainsford's candor in not pretending to any assurance he does not profess makes the more persuasive his statement of profound faith in that which is essential. This is a book for those who wish to believe but do not see how they can."

+ Outlook 104:344 Je 14 '13 80w

RAMALEY, FRANCIS, and GIFFIN, CLAY E. EMERY. Prevention and control of disease. 1l $3 (2½c) Francis Ramaley, Boulder, Colo. 13-2358

"Recent progress in disease prevention has depended largely upon the efforts of laboratory investigators, physicians and public-health officials. There is now needed an intelligent body of citizens to appreciate this work and cooperate in its extension. It is with this thought in mind that the present book is published. . . . [It] is intended for the general public and for use as a text in college classes. It is not written for medical students, practicing physicians, or biologists of any kind."—Preface

"The vastness of the field attempted to be covered and the necessity of avoiding technical discussion in a work of this kind must needs result in portions of it appearing incomplete to a specialist reader."

+ Nature 92:193 O 16 '13 250w

"The book contains a large amount of information which the layman should have and it is presented in interesting form." E. L. Opie.

+ Science ns38:446 S 26 '13 450w

RAMSAY, SIR WILLIAM. Elements and electrons. (Harper's lib. of living thought) *75c (2c) Harper 13-532

To trace the progress of recent scientific discovery that goes to reaffirm the "ancient doctrine of the discrete nature of matter and the hypotheses of the existence of atoms and molecules" is the author's purpose. He "presents a sketch of the progress of the modern theory of the nature of matter and of the hypotheses of the existence of atoms and molecules, and presents all that science has discovered and believes concerning the electron." (N Y Times)

"Perhaps, in view of the many popular works on chemistry, more space might have been devoted to the work of the last twenty years, but little of importance has been omitted."

+ Ath 1912.2:629 N 23 100w

"While the separate chapters are well developed, there is a lack of continuity in the book as a whole."

+ Nation 96:238 Mr 6 '13 120w

"It need scarcely be stated that a popular treatise from the pen of Sir William Ramsay is sure to be of absorbing interest. This is particularly the case with the present volume, with the subject of which the author's name is so intimately associated."

+ Nature 90:567 Ja 23 '13 320w

"No more brilliant summary of an important subject can be found."

+ N Y Sun p15 N 23 '12 70w

N Y Times 17:728 D 1 '12 70w

Spec 109:909 N 30 '12 40w

RAND, KENNETH. Dirge of the sea-children, and other poems. *$1 Sherman, French & co. 13-16307

The author of these verses is a Yale senior, chairman of the "Yale literary magazine." Gipsy life and the sea are favorite themes with him as a group of his titles will show: Tuscan dawn song; To you in Romany; The old highway; The sea-tramp; Harbor bound; The tops'i schooner; Sea chantey; and Gypsy song.

"In spite of the triteness of his themes, most of his poems are so well made as to be decidedly worth reading. Those about the sea are particularly sincere and appealing."

+ — Lit D 47:32 JI 5 '13 370w

"Perhaps the best things in the collection are the poems that touch on gypsy life."

+ N Y Times 18:468 S 14 '13 150w

"Mr. Rand has a facility, a sense of quantity and a capacity for the invention of poetic phrases that mark him as one who may perhaps do distinguished things. He handles an unusual number of verse forms with striking ease and effectiveness; in his songs there is much melody, and he occasionally shows a command of sweeping cadences."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 JI 10 '13 850w

RANDALL, EMILIUS OVIATT, and RYAN, DANIEL JOSEPH. History of Ohio; the rise and progress of an American state. 5v il $25 Century history co. 13-9459

"The first two volumes written by Mr. Randall, cover the pre-state period of Ohio history; volume 3, written by Mr. Ryan, shows how in the two-score years ended in 1837, the Ohio wilderness was tamed and how popular government and statehood was established; in volume 4 Mr. Ryan undertakes to present an accurate and impartial history of the state of Ohio from 1837 down to the present time. The fifth volume contains treatises by selected writers on the literary men and women of Ohio, the judiciary, the doctors and medical colleges, the state's relation to the Great lakes, and the manufacturing interests of the state."

—N Y Times

"The 'History' was prepared for the general reader, proud of his state's heritage, rather than for students of history. The inevitable weakness of joint authorship is apparent. All through the work there are evidences of the want of co-ordination and condensation. All these criticisms aside, however, this centennial 'History of Ohio' will appeal strongly to state pride and will satisfy those for whom primarily it was written. It is a story of achievement with many a page of far more than ordinary interest and attractiveness." F. W. Shepardson.

+ — Am Hist R 18:820 JI '13 850w

"Comprehensive and well-constructed work."

+ N Y Times 18:174 Mr 30 '13 150w

"It may very well invite even the casual reader, especially if he be an Ohioan by birth or environment. In these volumes he is fairly sure to find something, at least on the historical side, to challenge his interest and attention."

+ Outlook 104:73 My 10 '13 60w

RANDALL, JOHN ARTHUR. Heat. (Wiley 12 technical ser.) il *$1.50 Wiley 13-3287

A work designed for the use of technical and industrial students in which heat is considered as a form of molecular energy. To each chapter the author has appended a summary of its conclusions, together with a number of problems for solution by the student.

"The matter is well presented in not too technical language, and will be of value for specially designed short courses or for those who are studying the subject by themselves."

+ A L A Bkl 10:107 N '13 +

"The discussion of the meaning of energy is evidently handicapped by the knowledge on the part of the author of the very limited training in mechanics possessed by the students for whom the book is written. Apart from the limitations imposed by the mode of treatment referred to, this book is a straightforward and lucid presentation of the subject."

+ — Nature 91:502 JI 17 '13 200w

RANDALL, JOHN HERMAN. Culture of personality. *$1.50 Caldwell 12-22235

The author considers "the final worth of our human personality in the great onward movement of nature." The book "is divided into fourteen thoughtful chapters on various aspects of personality, on the training of the mind, the mastery of the affections, the education of the will, and kindred themes." (Dial)

"The author is modern in spirit, direct, devout, earnest, the master of a forceful style, a believer in the noblest and best things in life. The book is a good one to place in the hands of thoughtful youth."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 1 '13 200w

Dial 53:343 N 1 '12 170w

"Unfortunately the author is addicted to the vice of 'fine writing.' But those who have as yet adventured meagrely or not at all upon the deep sea of this questioning will doubtless find his book interesting."

+ — N Y Times 17:691 N 24 '12 130w

"The culture of personality belongs to the 'new thought' classification and is one of the best books of its kind for the general reader. It emphasizes the ego embodied in man and clearly points out the road to development of personality. It lifts one out of the grossness of the material and sends us with a mighty sweep onto the high plains of spiritual vision."

+ R of Rs 47:248 F '13 230w

"The chapter in which the author treats of the subconscious life is one of the most informing and valuable in the book."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 27 '13 350w

RAPPOPORT, ANGELO S. Home life in Russia. il *$1.75 Macmillan 12-37899

The author "describes to us the little Russian villages, the manner of construction of their houses and of the cultivation of the land. He tells of the people at work, of their manner of labor on their farms and of their sports and games in their hours of leisure. He gives us a picture of the daily life of the Russian peasant. . . . From his description of the life of the lower classes in country and village Russia, the author turns to the life in city and town among the more intelligent, educated and wealthy classes. He discourses of the quaint life of Moscow, of the universities and students, of the education of women and of women in literary life, of dinners and dining, of the amusements of the people and finally, of the Russian soldier and police."—Boston Transcript

"An informing volume. More comprehensive and useful than Reynolds but much less spontaneous and entertaining."

+ A L A Bkl 9:442 Je '13

"His treatment of village life is inferior; and, while the country sketches leave much to be desired, the chapter on Moscow is worthy of praise. But the main fault we find with Dr. Rappoport is that he has borrowed far too much from other authors. Whole pages are taken from Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace, and, good as they are, they are out of place when transplanted. If his book is reprinted, he should clear up some shaky grammar."

+ — Ath 1913,1:453 Ap 26 450w

"It is a mass of information, all of interest, which Mr. Rappoport has collected and which he sets forth in a truly appetizing manner."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '13 400w

RAPPOPORT, ANGELO S.—Continued.

"A substantial and worthy volume. He is not wholly systematic; the four or five pages of notes are important and certainly ought to have been amplified and incorporated into the text. Nor is he very consistent in spelling proper names." C. S. Northup.

+ Dial 55:204 S 16 '13 270w

"Though Dr. Rappoport gives excellent and entertaining information, he sometimes presents it in a form unintelligible to persons not previously acquainted with Russian affairs. His incoherent style, and in particular his continual neglect of paragraph structure, make reading wearisome. Important mistakes occur. The best feature of the volume is its admirable illustrations."

+ Nation 97:17 J1 3 '13 230w

N Y Times 18:379 Je 29 '13 550w

"An informative book. But of the real Russian home and its intimate life one finds little in this volume, and hence it may be disappointing to many."

+ Outlook 104:344 Je 14 '13 100w

R of Rs 48:123 J1 '13 30w

"Some of the customs he describes have not quite the wide observance he supposed, but nothing that he relates can be regarded as entirely unfounded."

+ Sat R 116:116 J1 26 '13 220w

RAUSCHENBUSCH, WALTER. Christianizing the social order. $1.50 (1½c) Macmillan 12-26399

This work follows the author's "Christianity and the social crisis" and is in a way an answer to the challenge raised by that book. Having advocated in it a regeneration of the moral order he had to meet the demand: How is it to be done? In this book he attempts the answer. Part 1 describes the social awakening of religious organizations; part 2 seeks to show that the Christianizing of the social order was the original aim of Christianity; part 3 is an analysis of what is and what is not Christian in our social order; part 4 shows up the "invasion of God's country" by the forces of vice and greed; parts 5 and 6 look to the future by discussing The direction of progress and The methods of advance.

"There is no more stirring plea in our literature for renovation of our social system than Professor Rauschenbusch's appeal in this book. It is unequivocal, but after all it is not radical." A. W. Small.

+ Am J Soc 18:809 My '13 950w

Reviewed by A. W. Small.

+ Am J Theol 17:318 Ap '13 900w

"An impressive sequel to 'Christianity and the social crisis.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:250 F '13 ✕

"'Christianity and the social crisis' has been surpassed." Scott Nearing.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:286 J1 '13 320w

"A trenchant and awakening criticism of present social conditions. At one or two main points his views do not compel full assent. On the whole the book is stronger in criticism than in construction." Shailer Mathews.

+ Bib World 41:137 F '13 2300w

"It is a strong work, based on sound learning, and inspired with the prophetic spirit. It is a splendid complement to the author's 'Christianity and the social crisis.'" F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 8 '13 800w

"In some ways is a better book than the other. The writing is more brilliant. The animus against a sacramental and sacerdotal form of Christianity which seemed to some readers to mar the impartiality of 'Christianity and the social crisis' is less in evidence. There is persuasive sanity, force in concrete application, and uncompromising courage." V. D. Scudder.

+ Dial 54:128 F 16 '13 2650w

"Many readers will be apt to express the opinion that the doctor's statement of the condition of the country is extravagant, distorted, sensational, misleading, and dangerous—dangerous because it comes from a professor in a theological seminary, one who is expected to speak with care and soberness."

— N Y Times 18:84 F 16 '13 450w

"Historical learning, philosophic thought, prophetic insight, are conspicuous in the treatment of his great theme, with a direct incisiveness often touched with humor, and the gleam of pat words and pithy phrases."

+ Outlook 103:373 F 15 '13 280w

R of Rs 47:121 Ja '13 150w

RAWLING, CECIL GODFREY. Land of the New Guinea pygmies. il $3.50 Lippincott (Eng ed 13-9449)

"The account and results of an expedition sent out by the British ornithologists' union, to Dutch New Guinea, covering what was virgin soil so far as whites are concerned, make up the bulk of this portly volume. In Chapter 19 is a little monograph on the pygmies by Dr. H. S. Harrison, written from the anthropological point of view, and the first chapter gives the history of European contact with and possession of the island. The rest is cast in narrative form, following the progress of the expedition, fully illustrated by reproductions of excellent photographs, picturing the country and the natives and their manner of life. The title of the volume is very naturally taken from the Tapiro pygmies discovered by the author, yet the data he gives of the other natives of full stature of the coast and plains are almost as interesting as those which give name to his book."—Lit D

"On the basis of a diary which he seems to have kept diligently for most of the time, Capt. Rawling constructs a thrilling tale such as will carry the general reader with him from start to finish. Perhaps his account, as compared with Mr. Wollaston's, is somewhat less fully charged with matter suitable to the needs of the man of science. By way of compensation, however, he makes a better story of it, having a light touch which amongst other merits, has that of mercifully sparing us the full sense of what these devoted explorers had to endure."

+ Ath 1913.1:191 F 15 1150w

"The narrative is interesting and straightforward, always clear, and without pretensions to fine writing. The illustrations are good, and illumine the story."

+ Lit D 46:784 Ap 5 '13 350w

+ Nation 96:549 My 29 '13 280w

"The illustrations add greatly to the value of a fascinating and valuable book, one which not only enlarges the boundaries of knowledge but which throws light upon the responsibilities and the possibilities of civilization in relation to barbarism."

+ N Y Times 18:312 My 25 '13 1100w

Sat R 115:751 Je 14 '13 550w

"It says an immense deal for the vitality of Captain Rawling that he has been able to make out of such dismal experiences such a delightful book. Out of the most crushing discomforts he seems to have extracted amusement, and he can see the humour of situations which to most men would have been unrelieved misery. Mr. Wollaston has already issued an interesting book on the enterprise, but there was room and to spare for Captain Rawling's cheerful and vivacious chronicle."

+ Spec 110:402 Mr 8 '13 1400w

RAWNSLEY, W. F. Introduction to the poets. (English lib.) 75c Dutton

"Though composed of short accounts of very different men living at widely separated epochs the book produces a delightful unity of effect. Indeed—if we may except the first chapters—Mr. Rawnsley has in the construction of his book borne witness to the way in which unity of purpose can unite men as diverse as a Milton and a Byron, or as a Burns and a Rossetti. . . . Mr. Rawnsley has had space for accounts of but a few even of the greatest poets. . . . Though in dealing with other poets he only uses material common to the world at large, in his chapter upon Tennyson he speaks with authority. The families of Tennyson and of Rawnsley have been close friends for more than a generation, and Mr. Rawnsley tells of the poet's intimate life with all the force of a family tradition confirmed by many years of affectionate friendship."—Spec

"The book contains no rare or choice felicities of appreciation, but is sound and usually just."

+ — Ath 1912,1:502 My 4 70w

"Will furnish good biographical matter and a graceful commentary on the English authors usually taken up for reading in social reading clubs."

+ Ind 74:154 Ja 16 '13 50w

"The essays are no more at all than the merest commonplace of biographical and critical data. The world may be roughly divided into those who read poetry and those who do not. To those who do, the little volume before us would hardly be even a primer, and to those who do not it would certainly lack the vitality and originality to inspire interest."

— No Am 197:141 Ja '13 200w

"A wonderfully pleasing volume. The long chapter upon Tennyson, founded, like the rest of these studies, upon a lecture, is certainly the best in the volume, and as it is also the last the reader closes the book with a very pleasing impression."

+ Spec 109:211 Ag 10 '12 450w

RAY, ANNA CHAPIN (SIDNEY HOWARD, pseud.). On board the Beatic. il $1.30 (1½c) Little 13-2842

The heroine, who is past thirty, is taking her first unchaperoned ocean voyage. The hero, who is a middle aged captain of industry, has dropped the middle initials from his name and is traveling as a plain undistinguished gentleman. Other characters enter in, a vivacious young niece, an Englishman or two, a widower who is also a minor poet; but there is little plot, save that which concerns the two, who, having fallen in love on the outgoing voyage, meet again on the homecoming journey and come to a satisfactory understanding.

"An amusingly snobbish and unreal story, but harmless and full of the kind of sentiment and sort of incidents that appeal to the average novel-reader."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:346 Ap '13

Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 270w

"The author writes well but takes an unconscionable amount of space to tell a trivial and not very interesting story."

— + N Y Sun p4 F 22 '13 130w

"Mildly interesting and quite irreproachable, as always, Mrs. Ray comes forward with another story about people who have no particular reason for their existence. It is a story very definitely for the Young Person, of whatever age, but of only one sex."

— + N Y Times 18:95 F 23 '13 130w

RAY, PERLEY ORMAN. Introduction to political parties and practical politics. $1.50 Scribner 13-9578

"This is something more than a text-book about political parties and practical politics, although it is so described by the author. The treatment of such subjects as the spoils system, the recall, the direct primary and political machines and bosses is not merely a statement of facts, but a thoughtful study. At the end of each chapter is an appendix, giving bibliographical and other references and a summary of questions and debates."—Outlook

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:683 N '13 100w

"Party machinery and campaign methods are given but a short chapter each. This under-emphasis is probably the only criticism that can be made of the book from the point of view of a complete text-book."

+ — Ann Am Acad 49:247 S '13 150w

"Prof. Ray presents things vividly, without over-elaboration or bias, and supplies ample bibliographical references for students who wish to go further."

+ Ath 1913,1:622 Je 7 70w

"The material is well selected. It is also written in a clear, brisk, text-book style. Exception will be taken by many students in this field to the author's rosy view of direct legislation as a remedy for the evils of our legislative system. A more sweeping criticism is that of his arrangement. Especially commendable is its attention to the forms of the ballot and to the comparatively neglected topic of the politics of legislative bodies."

+ — Nation 97:17 J1 3 '13 270w

Outlook 104:770 Ag 2 '13 80w

"The errors are usually such as one would expect from the difficulty of keeping abreast of recent occurrences. The book fulfils admirably the purpose for which it was designed."

E. M. Sait.

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:684 D '13 1050w

+ R of Rs 48:247 Ag '13 70w

REA, LILIAN. Enthusiasts of Port-Royal. il $3 Scribner 13-10623

"It is not so much a history from within. . . . It is rather a history of external events, enlivened by carefully descriptive portraits of the chief personages who, from beginning to end, played their different parts in the stirring drama of the two convents, Port-Royal de Paris and Port-Royal des Champs." (Spec) "Divided into four parts, concerned respectively with 'Port Royal des Champs' (Jansenius and the Arnaulds), 'Port Royal de Paris in its greatness,' 'The second Port Royal' (Pascal and the persecution), 'Port Royal decadent' (containing chapters on the literary history and on Port Royal of to-day), the work is fully documented and well illustrated." (Ath) The illustrations are from old prints.

Ath 1912,2:412 O 12 100w

"The present work suffers from lack of form and arrangement, and does not give the impression of having been written from any very definite point of view. It is disfigured by occasional Americanisms, but its style is, as a rule, clear and unpretentious; and its very discursiveness makes it, in a sense, easy to read. Whilst barely adequate to the needs of one who wishes to go deeply into the study of religious philosophy or education, it should form a really useful introduction to those who are unacquainted with an important phase in religious history."

+ — Ath 1912,2:549 N 9 1000w

"If Lillian Rea ever read the list of authorities which she cites at the end of her superficial and inaccurate account of Port Royal, she gives no evidence whatever of that fact in the present volume."

— Cath World 96:543 Ja '13 470w

"Is yet another of those popular works (based indiscriminately upon sources secondary for the most part) which have scant interest for the historian. The style is discursive, and too often slovenly and colloquial." C. E. M.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:399 Ap '13 100w

"Readable but distinctly amateurish."

+ — Nation 96:339 Ap 3 '13 200w

"Much research has gone into the making of the book."

+ N Y Times 17:605 O 20 '12 130w

REA, LILIAN—Continued.

"A brilliant contribution to ecclesiastical history."

+ — Sat R 115:271 Mr 1 '13 850w

"Interesting and well-planned book."

+ Spec 109:1068 D 21 '12 430w

REDFIELD, WILLIAM COX. New industrial day. $1.25 (2½c) Century 12-25163

The spirit in which the author approaches the hotly contested industrial problems of our day is that of the Scripture phrase, "Come, let us reason together." The new industrial day which he foresees is one in which fair play to both sides in the controversy will prevail; one in which profits will cease to be the supreme law, and in which comprehension will take the place of compromise. The chapters are: Wealth and waste; The days of the rule of thumb; "What have we got to do with abroad"; Costs and their causes; Half way on the industrial road; The rise in human values; The scientific spirit in management; The new industrial day.

"There is abundant illustration of sound and humane business practices supplied out of a long and successful career in business." Herbert Croly.

+ Am Econ R 3:129 Mr '13 130w

"A very readable constructive work, comparing conditions in the United States and other countries and furnishing good arguments against a protective tariff."

+ A L A Bkl 9:294 Mr '13 ✕

"One of the most readable of the many recent contributions to the literature of up-to-date business management. Replete with illustration and apt allusion, the book will furnish to the uninformed an admirable source of superficial knowledge."

+ Ann Am Acad 47:284 My '13 150w

"The book is based not only upon sound sense but upon sound economics." G: M. Janes.

+ Dial 54:241 Mr 16 '13 470w

"Leaving aside all political considerations, the book is an undoubted addition to the literature of the day. The book abounds with epigrammatic expressions. Some of the most telling are included in a series of business proverbs for the manufacturer. The book is well worth reading several times."

+ Indust Engin 13:185 Ap '13 700w

"When one is asked to believe that through scientific management there will come to pass that state of harmony in which employer and employee work together for the same end, one cannot help questioning whether all the present-day evidences of class conflict and irreconcilable interests will not require some deeper-going, more fundamental adjustment than anything that is offered here."

+ — J Pol Econ 21:275 Mr '13 320w

"To the manufacturer who has not quite realized the full importance of newer methods of efficiency and the cash value of a well-paid labor force this will be an eye-opening book, and there are not many who can read it without finding valuable and stimulating suggestions."

+ Lit D 46:356 F 15 '13 170w

"To many readers this [a quoted passage] will seem utopian. It is, on the contrary, the sober and guarded statement of conclusions cautiously and candidly reached by a shrewd, trained, and experienced business man. And the book in which he has given the fruit of his study and his practice is one of the most hopeful signs of these days in many ways so troubled and puzzling."

+ N Y Times 17:688 N 24 '12 950w

"There are many manufacturers and managers who would find the reading of this book a profitable investment of their time."

+ Outlook 104:262 My 31 '13 150w

R of Rs 47:122 Ja '13 320w

Reviewed by J: A. Fitch.

+ Survey 29:819 Mr 8 '13 750w

REDMAN, JAMES LAW. Isles in summer seas (beautiful Bermuda). il $1.50 (4½c) Dillingham 13-10268

The author describes his ramblings thru Bermuda, and his brother J. Hodson Redman furnishes a number of pen and ink sketches that attractively illustrate the text. "Contrary to the practice of most tourists in Bermuda, Mr. Redman devotes the major part of his attention to St. Georges rather than to Hamilton, a fortunate circumstance since the eastern portion of Bermuda is by no means so well known or so interesting as the western." (Boston Transcript)

"Taken as a whole the book will be of service to the tourist in Bermuda, but with greater pains it might have been very considerably bettered. Commonplace humor mixed with travel detail has never yet produced pleasing literary effects."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '13 200w

"The charming little sketches scattered thru-out the book encourage one to follow the travelers thru a rather wearying round of conventional sight-seeing—in the hope that the promise of the first few pages may be fulfilled and another delightful word-picture lie just over the page."

+ — Ind 74:1307 Je 5 '13 120w

Nation 96:647 Je 26 '13 100w

REED, MYRTLE. Threads of grey and gold. il $1.50 (2½c) Putnam 13-19035

This is a miscellaneous collection of essays, sketches and poems. Characteristic titles that indicate the variety of the book's contents are: The courtship of George Washington; Romance of Lincoln's life; Romance and the postman; The superiority of man; The ideal woman; One woman's solution of the servant problem; The rights of dogs; Women's clothes in men's books; The technique of the short story.

"Both essays and verses are written with grace and finish."

+ Ath 1913,2:593 N 22 60w

"Although it may not win many readers, it will prove no disappointment to Miss Reed's large body of admirers."

+ N Y Times 18:492 S 21 '13 200w

REICHARDT, ERNEST NOEL. Significance of ancient religions in relation to human evolution and brain development. il $4 Dodd 13-165

"Dr. Reichardt is interested in the physical and psychological significance of the ancient forms of religion, and so he discusses their relation to human evolution and brain development. Like so many extreme scientists he believes that religion developed with human evolution and because of it, rather than the strictly biblical interpretation of a full-grown religion and a departure from it. . . . As is natural in a book on ancient religions, the author spends a great deal of time on the Jewish religion."—Boston Transcript

Ath 1912,2:483 O 26 30w

"Dr. Reichardt presents a very careful as well as interesting and instructive exposition of the history of the religious movement in the world, and his scientific basis adds a stronger plea to his theories."

+ Boston Transcript p22 My 28 '13 1000w

Dial 54:423 My 16 '13 320w

"The author's explanation of the evolution of human religions and human faculties has the merit of simplicity and the unfortunate demerit of being founded on imagination rather than on ascertained facts."

+ — Nature 90:407 D 12 '12 250w

"In the development of his thesis Dr. Reichardt presents an interesting evolutionary study."

+ N Y Times 18:87 F 16 '13 150w

RENTON, RICHARD. John Forster and his friendships. 11* $3 Scribner (Eng ed 13-15907)

This life of the friend and biographer of Dickens recounts his friendship not only with the great Victorian novelist but with Landor, Browning, Lord Lytton and others of the period. "From pinched, unpromising beginnings he became important, influential, rich; the intimate friend of one or two of the most interesting men of the time; his success was earned by his merits, his friends were won by his character, and influence, when he attained it, did not spoil him." (Spec)

"This book might have been reduced to half its present dimensions without loss. Mr. Renton has some interesting reminiscences of his own concerning old times, but he repeats a great deal that is known, and moralizes incessantly on curious coincidences, the causes of friendship, the colder hearts of the present day, &c. Mr. Renton is pleasantly enthusiastic, especially about bygone drama, but he is more reflective than critical, and he has allowed his book to go forth without adequate revision. Grammar, punctuation, and style all need attention; e. g., such a sentence as the long one at the top of p. 78 should have been rewritten."

+ — Ath 1912,2:519 N 2 200w

"Mr. Renton's purpose is laudable, and he has done his best. His one fault is that he is in no wise equipped for the writing of a book." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ja 25 '13 420w

"It is diffuse without being sprightly, confused in composition, and careless in style. The biographical writing now produced in England is, with occasional exceptions, in the hands of deplorably incompetent writers, and the present volume is not an exception."

— Nation 96:236 Mr 6 '13 120w

"With all its faults of matter and manner, this volume does contain a formidable amount of material, from which, painfully, the reader may build up for himself a picture of the man John Forster." H. W. Boynton.

+ — N Y Times 18:38 Ja 26 '13 1250w

"This biography is not at all a satisfactory work. Mr. Richard Renton has stuffed out his book with the unnecessary, and he has skimmed and starved the narrative in other places. Mr. Renton has no sense of proportion, and his comments are trite and ill-written."

— Spec 109:1105 D 28 '12 700w

REPPLIER, AGNES. Americans and others. *$1.10 (2½c) Houghton 12-25129

It is in the essays A question of politeness, The mission of humour, and The nervous strain, that Miss Repplier touches on traits peculiarly American; for American manners, the American sense of humor, and the American proneness to rush and hurry are our most commented upon national characteristics. Miss Repplier brings to the consideration of each a fresh point of view. Other essays are: Goodness and gaiety; The girl graduate; The chill of enthusiasm; The condescension of borrowers.

+ A L A Bkl 9:201 Ja '13

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 7 '12 1000w

"The essay on 'The mission of humour' is so clever that it alone is worth the price of admission. And the volume is full of the witty, pointed sayings with which Miss Repplier has really spoiled us."

+ Cath World 96:679 F '13 400w

"They make witty readings, are full of live thoughts, and tinged with a sense of justice and fairness that appeals to every reader."

+ Lit D 46:149 Ja 18 '13 150w

"These essays on various aspects of contemporary manners contain something of that dry and clarified sweetness and light which we find in the letters of Dr. Johnson's lady friends, and which might be explained as the product of Georgian classicism and feminine finesse. They preserve the mean of a cultivated drawing-room style; they are neat without primness, witty without paradox, satirical without malice, and serious without lapsing into homily. They are well nourished with select reading, intelligent travel, and shrewd observation of men and women. If we should hint a defect, there is a trace here and there of the professional essayist's 'anthologizing' habit."

+ — Nation 95:616 D 26 '12 630w

"These essays have 'sugar and spice and everything nice,' not forgetting the salty savor of rugged common sense."

+ N Y Sun p8 Ja 4 '13 1600w

"A book of prose for which we may well give thanks."

+ N Y Times 17:669 N 17 '12 1250w

"Miss Repplier is not a genius, but she has genius. There is a large amount of this article hidden away in this volume of essays. Some people like Emerson, some like Charles Lamb. For our part we would rather read Agnes Repplier."

+ N Y Times 17:744 D 1 '12 50w

"Her latest volume contains two or three essays which are direct contributions to the American's knowledge of himself; and her whole volume might be filed as an exhibit of some of the best American intellectual qualities."

+ Outlook 102:569 N 16 '12 200w

REYNOLDS, GERTRUDE M. (ROBINS) (MRS. LOUIS BAILLIE REYNOLDS). Make-shift marriage. *$1.25 Doran 12-24817

"Astrid Carey, the victim of the makeshift marriage, is a very attractive young woman, quite superior to the man whom she serves as secretary and who later in a fit of pique marries her and then takes her home to his mother. The mother, strangely enough, soon discovers that she loves her daughter-in-law more than she loves her son. Under the circumstances it is quite natural, for the girl is a much more desirable daughter than the frivolous, beautiful girl who, Oliver Brendon believes, wrecked his life. But his life was not wrecked, it was saved, and the story of the opening of his mind to the important discovery is one of much merit and originality."

— Boston Transcript

"The dialogue is occasionally excellent, otherwise the story seldom escapes mediocrity."

— + Ath 1912,2:274 S 14 50w

"Varied phases of romance, intrigue and adventure all are set forth in the vivid style that has made the author's work popular."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 220w

"A really enjoyable novel, unusually well written and with flashes of genuine feeling and of insight into character."

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 22 '13 170w

"Never was a marriage so abrupt and unpardonable as in Mrs. Baillie-Reynolds's latest story. The characters in the book are original and very much alive."

+ — N Y Times 18:278 My 11 '13 350w

REYNOLDS, ROTHAY. My Russian year. 11 *$2.50 Pott (Eng ed A13-761)

The author was the St. Petersburg correspondent of the London daily news and spent five years in Russia. "In Mr. Reynolds's pages we are introduced to the Russian himself, as he is at court, in the monastery, in his home, even in prison; and the reader willingly admits, at the close of the last page, that he has learned enough to cause him to modify many of his long-maintained opinions of Russia and the Russians." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 9:443 Je '13

"The book is most readable, but it is a pity that it has no map and no index, and that the binding is weak."

+ — Ath 1913,1:64 Ja 18 300w

"One finishes . . . 'My Russian year, with the conviction that one has at last actually come into a close relation with the Russian people, and with a true knowledge of the soul of the great white empire. . . . Taking it all in all, 'My Russian year' is one of the best of recent books dealing on the life and customs of contemporary Russians. It would make an excellent satchel-companion for the Baedeker volume on Russia." S. A.

REYNOLDS, ROTHAY—Continued.

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 21 '13 600w

"A volume every chapter of which is full of interesting comment and of color." C. S. Northup.

+ Dial 55:203 S 16 '13 670w

"There is such spirit in this book, such masterly arrangement of material, such power to evoke the image, and the soul under the image, of Russian life, that it is not merely a collection of impressions. Mr. Reynolds seems to have seen Russia 'en masse.' He has had perfect sympathy toward his subject and so he has understood it. He has taken a large heart and a keen understanding with him on his travels. It is never dull, never pedantic, but alive with insight, enjoyment, and literary style."

+ N Y Times 18:311 My 25 '13 1000w

+ Sat R 116:87 J1 19 '13 330w

"Altogether the book is too diverse in chronology to justify its title. Russia of 1912 or 1913 does not seem to show itself in these pages. They mostly relate to 1907-8-9, and are consequently out of date. For the rest Messrs. Mills and Boon are to be congratulated on getting such a good account of St. Petersburg social life, balls, squashes, tea-parties abounding with gossip of all kinds."

+ Spec 110:539 Mr 29 '13 1250w

REYNOLDS, STEPHEN. How 'twas; short stories and small travels. *$1.60 Macmillan 12-29053

A volume of short stories and sketches picturing lower class English life. The author "has elaborated the philosophy of self-respecting poverty and analysed for us that civilization which is different indeed from the ordinary middle-class thing, but in many ways far superior. . . . Mr. Reynolds starts with a fine equipment. He is a student of character, and, what is more important, he has the capacity to understand it." (Spec) Some of the best of the stories are stories of the sea and of the coast life of Devon.

"Marked individuality and sympathy mingled with a sturdy philosophy distinguish these short sketches and tales, which give faithful pictures of life among the lower classes in England and show keen observation and insight."

+ A L A Bkl 9:173 D '12

"While much above the average in merit, Mr. Reynolds's short stories will not satisfy those who are familiar with any of his longer work. If we were asked for a reason for his comparative failure, we should assign it to the fact that his presentments are rather silhouettes than portraits."

+ Ath 1912,1:733 Je 29 120w

"In these stories he has packed a good deal of human nature, not the kind most of us know or are accustomed to meet with in the ordinary course of our lives, but the kind we learn to admire and have an ideal sort of respect for, because it is so clean washed through and through with convictions and traits, and a moral sturdiness and heroism, unmodified by conventions and social artifices. It is a positive tonic for spirit and mind to read such stories." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 11 '13 650w

"A volume of merit."

+ Ind 74:985 My 1 '13 100w

"It is easy to realise that a great range of appetite would be required for their consumption, and that it would be impossible to conceive a taste which could commend them all."

+ Sat R 114:120 J1 27 '12 750w

"The book is a miscellany in which short stories predominate. But not the least good are the sketches of travel. As for the tales the first thing that strikes one is that they have been badly selected. They are surprisingly unequal in merit, and some have no merit at all."

+ Spec 109:95 J1 20 '12 1300w

RHEAD, GEORGE WOOLLISCROFT. Modern practical design. 1l *$3 Scribner 12-29046

"An instructive chapter on 'Plant-form as the basis of design' is followed by chapters on 'The ornamental filling of given spaces,' 'All-over patterns—wall-papers, printed fabrics, textiles,' 'Book decoration,' 'Pottery,' 'Stained glass,' 'Metal work and jewellery,' 'Wood working and carving,' 'Dress embroidery,' 'Fancy costume and the fashion plate,' 'Fans and lace,' and 'Posters.' The technique, tools, and practical methods appropriate to these diverse branches of applied art are explained with admirable lucidity, though necessarily with brevity, and the illustrations, which are both abundant and clear, have been selected almost wholly from representative work by modern artists and craftsmen."—Int Studio

"As a general survey it is one of the best works for the designer and general worker in the crafts, and contains much that is of interest to the teacher."

+ A L A Bkl 9:162 D '12

"This admirable and practical handbook should be stimulating to intelligent young students. The whole book is clear and expert."

+ Ath 1912,2:600 My 25 80w

+ Int Studio 47:252 S '12 120w

RHODES, JAMES FORD. Lectures on the American civil war. *$1.50 (5c) Macmillan 13-2028

These lectures with their calm unimpassioned view of the civil war, prepared for presentation to an Oxford audience, may prove illuminating to many Americans, who, thru over familiarity with the details of the conflict, may have a blurred vision of the general aspects and the larger issues involved. "Of all the good points . . . there is none better than the discussions of the great men of the war days, especially Lincoln, Lee and Douglas, the last of whom the author remembers as a child. . . . Much space is given to a discussion of our relations with England during the war, especially the Trent affair that might so easily, had not the rulers of both nations acted so wisely and moderately, have embroiled us in a disastrous war with England." (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Rhodes is not at his best in this form of exposition. Forced to extricate himself from details, he has put in bald and almost dogmatic form conclusions which he erstwhile expressed with important qualifications. If he has read the newer literature on the antecedents of the war, he has paid scant attention to its effect upon his earlier conclusions."

+ Am Hist R 18:844 J1 '13 420w

A L A Bkl 9:385 My '13

+ Ann Am Acad 48:265 J1 '13 200w

+ Ath 1913,1:216 F 22 80w

"The fairness and clearness with which these lectures are written and the critical judgment which has reduced the number of details and made a unity of the war, give a merit to the book that places it in the front ranks of books on the civil war."

+ Boston Transcript p28 F 12 '13 450w

"The one weak spot in the lectures seems to be the undue leniency with which Dr. Rhodes has treated Jefferson Davis." W. B. W.

+ Eng Hist R 28:616 J1 '13 450w

"American readers will find the lectures disappointing."

+ Nation 96:446 My 1 '13 280w

"A general view of the conflict, by a scholar who is the highest authority in his subject, has a value of its own, and the popular form that he was forced to choose will make the little book acceptable to many."

+ N Y Sun p4 F 8 '13 80w

"The volume, of less than 200 pages, is a marvel of condensed but interesting, and just presentation of a large subject in small space."

+ N Y Times 18:109 Mr 2 '13 220w

"We do not know where the student or the reader can find in so short a compass so clear, human, and accurate an account of the period from 1832 to 1865 as may be found in this book. The present volume can be read with equal appreciation in the South as well as in the North—a statement that cannot be made of many historical essays on the civil war period."

+ Outlook 104:117 My 17 '13 170w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 13 '13 220w

RHYS, ERNEST. English fairy book. il
$1.35 Stokes A13-711

"The tales include 'Cinderella' and others which belong to the common European stock of fairy-lore, but for the most part they are of English origin and setting, chap-book tales, Cornish and Devonshire legends, and one or two modern stories, such as 'Jacob Pont.'" (Sat R) "Mr. Frederick Whitney's black-and-white pictures and red dragon initial letters, together with the clear type of the letterpress, help to complete this engaging book." (Spec)

"Not a necessary book, but one that will be useful in larger libraries."

+ A L A Bkl 9:405 My '13

+ Ath 1912,2:378 O 5 50w

"If it were not for the red lettering it would be an ideal gift for the imaginative child." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1367 D 12 '12 50w

"Rich volume."

+ Lit D 45:1080 D 7 '12 120w

"Handles the stories with reverence."

+ N Y Times 17:748 D 1 '12 50w

"They are all entertaining, extremely well told."

+ Sat R 114:sup5 D 7 '12 100w

"A capital collection."

+ Spec 109:sup683 N 2 '12 130w

RHYS, ERNEST. Lyric poetry. *$1.50 Dutton
13-24871

A volume in the "Channels of English literature series." "Mr. Rhys begins to trace his development of the lyric in the earliest English verse, proceeding to Wyatt and Surrey through the poets of the 'Exeter book' and their successors, and from Wyatt and Surrey down to the minor Victorians." (Boston Transcript)

"The plan of the author enables him to cover a great deal of ground outside the actual lyric, and to write an interesting book, which is a little difficult to read, perhaps, but includes much sound criticism."

+ Ath 1913,2:278 S 20 320w

"A book which might have become the standard treatment of the subject for American readers but for certain limitations. These limitations are the lack of specimens of the contributions by American poets to the development of the lyric. It is a little disappointing to find such neglect in a work so admirably treating a subject to which the American poets have contributed a more or less distinctive development." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p23 O 15 '13 1250w

"There are no accurate references; bibliography is provided in neither notes nor appendix; and the index is only of proper names. The proof-reading is also left with much to be desired." R. M. Alden.

+ Dial 55:405 N 16 '13 1000w

"Mr. Rhys's book is not exceptional. The author has attempted to cover too much ground, and has not resisted an inclination to deal with merely curious verses, such as spell-rhymes, and with work of a purely antiquarian interest."

+ Spec 111:sup683 N 1 '13 1250w

RHYS, GRACE. Charming of Estercel. *$1.35
Dutton A13-2063

The Earl of Essex is always a picturesque figure in a work of fiction. "In this novel we have Essex in Ireland and opposed to him the figure of Tyrone the O'Neill, who was seeking freedom for Ireland, and who seemed to have so nearly won it. The story is of heroic days and heroic figures appear. Tyrone leads his people by the strength of their faith in and devotion to him. Estercel, the hero of the story, is a worthy admirer of the O'Neill, and is distantly related to him by blood, a fact which meant far more in the sixteenth century than in the nineteenth or twentieth. There is more than a taste of Celtic folk-lore in the book, and the two girls of the story, especially the evil Meraud, seem like figures from an early hero tale." (Boston Transcript)

"Will not interest many but will give variety to a large collection."

+ A L A Bkl 10:118 N '13

"As regards both delicacy of adjustment of the effects and description this work impresses us as notably superior to the great mass of current historical fiction."

+ Ath 1913,1:358 Mr 29 110w

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 23 '13 400w

Ind 75:574 S 4 '13 100w

"It is not a great romance, but it is a good one, spontaneously and skillfully told."

+ Nation 97:312 O 2 '13 250w

"Practically all that the reader cares to retain of this story is to be found in the preface—the two legends, and the anecdote of the horse's revenge. There is not enough love or passion to compensate for the cruelty and torture recounted, the historical part is not clearly enough defined to make much impression, and the relations of Estercel and his wonderful white horse, Tamburlaine, instantly send the mind to the legend of Bellerophon and his winged Pegasus, although the author states definitely that the characterization of Tamburlaine is true to the life of horse-nature, not of one but of many horses that have come under her observation."

+ Outlook 104:964 Ag 23 '13 250w

RICE, JOSEPH MAYER. Scientific management in education. *$1.25 Hinds 12-28413

The author "has brought together a series of pioneer investigations previously reported in the 'Forum' during the years 1896-1904. His motive was to discover what could be expected from the schools and how far the curriculum could be extended to include the subjects demanded by 'the new schools of education' without detriment to the three R's. For this purpose he formulated three tests, or examinations, in spelling, arithmetic, and English composition, respectively, which were given to some hundred thousand pupils in a number of schools in several cities." (Nation) These tests "convinced Dr. Rice that in two-thirds of our public schools the pupils are not reasonably rewarded for their expenditures of time and effort." (N Y Times)

"[Dr. Rice's] discussion of the results [of the tests] is most instructive, in spite of the fact, as it seems to us, that his tests show the usual fatal tendency to reveal mainly the not unexpected or the negative."

+ Nation 96:646 Je 26 '13 650w

"Should be carefully considered by teachers, members of school boards, and all other persons who for various reasons desire that our children shall have the benefit of the best possible teaching."

+ N Y Times 18:106 Mr 2 '13 170w

RICHARDS, E. E. The Louvre. (National treasures) il *75c (2½c) Small

In the first chapter of this little volume the author traces the history of The palace of the Louvre; in the second of The museum of the Louvre. In the succeeding chapters he describes the art treasures, grouped as follows: The paintings; The Greek and Roman sculptures; Mediaeval renaissance and modern sculpture; The Egyptian and Asiatic antiquities; The antique paintings, potteries, bronzes and ornaments; The ivories, enamels, furniture and faience; The Musée de marine, The Musée chinoise, the collection Grandidier, and chalcographie.

"Some of the illustrations fail dismally to convey the beauty of the originals."

— Ath 1912,2:529 N 2 40w

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 15 '13 40w

+ Lit D 46:1142 My 17 '13 50w

R of Rs 47:764 Je '13 20w

Sat R 115:370 Mr 23 '13 70w

Spec 109:sup787 N 16 '12 180w

RICHARDS, GRANT. Valentine. *$1.35 (1½c)
12 Houghton 13-22099

A lightly told story that has its serious moments and at least one tense situation. Young Valentine Barat is the son of a famous architect who, altho he takes the boy into his office, refuses to grant him any of his confidence. The attractions of Paris, the hazards of racing, and minor dissipations generally, occupy much of Valentine's time, but at heart he takes his work seriously and feels keenly the injustice of his father's attitude. It is after his father's death, in going over his papers, that Valentine finds that, as a workman, his father fell short of perfection. He discovers a flaw in the elder Barat's calculations which can only mean that his greatest work—a public building—is unstable. Valentine faces a dilemma—to tell is to ruin his father's reputation; to remain silent is to endanger many lives. The end is happily contrived; for this is not at all a serious tale.

"'Valentine' is a far better novel than its predecessor, 'Caviare.'"

+ Ath 1913,2:208 Ag 30 60w

"An agreeable senation of having passed several pleasant hours with thoroughly likable people, such as one would be glad to know, is the first impression that will come to the reader on finishing 'Valentine.' And this is not, nor is it intended to be, the faint, faint praise that damns. When it can be said in addition, that the book is well and brightly written throughout, with no dull moments, and that there is a good strong plot, which owes none of its interest to melodrama, nor to the overstretched arm of coincidence, it will be seen that Mr. Richards has, again, given us an uncommonly good story." T. B. Storer.

+ Bookm 38:432 D '13 420w

"In short, 'Valentine' is a good story about enjoyably human people, told with the rich personal charm of the accomplished raconteur." R. T. P.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 1 '13 950w

"Another purposeless succession of scenes in Paris and London, described pleasantly enough, make up Grant Richards's 'Valentine.'"

— + N Y Sun p3 O 25 '13 150w

"The story does not develop much interest until one reaches this point [part 3]. It has moved with exceeding slowness; there have been few events that have done more than stir the surface of the reader's attention; in-consequent conversations have been prolonged to dullness. But from this point the tale becomes an absorbing novel."

+ — N Y Times 18:604 N 2 '13 630w

RICHARDS, MRS. LAURA ELIZABETH
* (HOWE). Miss Jimmy. *$1 Estes 13-1380

"This [is a] story of a Maine village, in which Jemima Dolly, familiarly known as 'Miss Jimmy,' comes home after some years spent in a city as a trained nurse, finds plenty to do on her native heath, and does it with bird-like alertness, a constant sense of humor, the breeziest of spirits, and a capacity that is always equal to the occasion."—N Y Times

"Breezy little tale. Each character stands for a type and all are overdrawn, but few readers will quarrel with the story on that account."

+ — A L A BkI 9:346 Ap '13

"The story is delightful and in it Mrs. Richards has created another charming character to place beside Mrs. Tree and Miss Phoebe."

+ Boston Transcript p10 My 1 '13 400w

"It is sane, sweet and wholesome."

+ Ind 74:704 Mr 27 '13 50w

"Mrs. Richards' New England village folk are turned into caricatures and excessive sentimentality spoils her simple tale. She cannot write otherwise than well; but her story seems to have escaped from old files of Gleason's pictorial or the Waverley magazine."

— + N Y Sun p3 F 1 '13 70w

"Mrs. Richards' local picture is usually accurate, but it is a photographic accuracy. It is the obvious with which she concerns herself; still she makes pleasant reading out of it. Her admirers will find it quite charming."

+ — N Y Times 18:66 F 9 '13 120w

RICHARDSON, CLIFFORD. Asphalt construction for pavements and highways. il *$2
McGraw 13-8784

"This is a pocketbook for engineers, contractors and inspectors charged with the construction of asphalt streets and highways. It is virtually an expanded instruction book covering the handling of stone, bitumens and all standard mixtures from the plant to placement on the road surface. Sound advice is also given in the chapters on maintenance and repairs, the plant, laboratory methods for examination of bituminous materials and mineral aggregates, and instructions for taking samples."—Engin Rec

"The book as a whole is of great practical value, especially to the engineer in charge of a laboratory for use in connection with the inspector of asphalt pavements." E. A. Fisher.

+ Engin N 69:1250 Je 12 '13 470w

"Convenient little book of great value."

+ Engin Rec 67:590 My 24 '13 180w

RICHMOND, MRS. GRACE LOUISE (SMITH).
Mrs. Red Pepper. il *$1.25 (1½c) Double-day 13-10503

The book is, in a sense, a sequel to a former story by the author; it carries on the Red Pepper Burnses thru the first years of their married life. It tells another love story, too—that of Dr. Leaver, a famous city surgeon and Charlotte Ruston, a southern friend of Mrs. Burns.

"A pretty, rather sentimental story."

+ A L A BkI 9:456 Je '13

"Although she lacks subtlety and profoundness in every phase of writing, Mrs. Richmond succeeds in constructing a pleasantly satisfactory story and in the fortunate accomplishment of making her characters familiar and likeable. 'Mrs. Red Pepper' is a book which 'does one good.'"

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '13 220w

+ Lit D 47:486 S 20 '13 130w

"A charming story."

+ N Y Times 18:486 S 21 '13 230w

RICHMOND, MRS. GRACE LOUISE (SMITH). Under the Christmas stars. il *50c (6½c) Doubleday 13-23022

The story of the new daughter-in-law, introduced to the family on Christmas eve, who didn't seem to fit into the circle. Molly's clothes were a little too loud; Molly's voice; the way Molly did her hair—in fact everything about western Molly—was a little bit different. But an emergency arose; roads were blocked with snow, and the doctor, summoned hurriedly, could not get thru. Then it was Molly who took charge, and who saved the little life that might, but for her, have left the world, as he entered it, on Christmas day.

"A very attractive volume well illustrated, a story leading to the real Christmas spirit of love and kindness."

+ Boston Transcript p27 N 26 '13 130w

N Y Sun p4 N 15 '13 30w

N Y Times 18:657 N 30 '13 90w

RICKER, NATHAN CLIFFORD. Treatise on design and construction of roofs. il *$5 Wiley 12-22158

"According to the reviewer's interpretation of the author's preface, this book is intended primarily for the use of architectural students in preparing themselves for examination for license to practice. It covers the usual design of roofs, including definitions of parts, loads, methods of determining stresses and the determination of stresses in about all the known forms of roofs, proportioning of sections, calculation of dimensions, detailing and determination of weight."—Engin N

"The reviewer would commend the book for the treatment of graphostatics; the multitude of examples and of types thus treated; the advocating of less severe conditions than the combining of maximum wind and snow-load stresses; the consideration of the stability of walls against wind loads and the pressure on foundations due to such loads; the introduction of stiffness as a fundamental factor in proportioning beams; the general clear and complete treatment. There are a multitude of minor errors of all kinds throughout the book." A. W. Carpenter.

+ — Engin N 69:135 Ja 16 '13 1100w

"Because of the author's lack of familiarity with structural methods he has missed the proper emphasis and sense of proportion. The work is labored and academic and consists largely of a collection of examples worked out to the most elementary numerical detail."

— Engin Rec 67:334 Mr 22 '13 550w

RIDGE, WILLIAM PETT. Mixed grill. *$1.20 Doran A13-1620

A group of stories by an English writer who has been called "the O. Henry of London life and character." The book "is literally a good deal of a mixture, in situations, types of character, and social strata; and more than once the whole point of a story hinges upon certain class distinction which an American reader may be a little slow in catching, so that their real flavour will not be wholly caught until the second reading." (Bookm)

"Mr. Pett Ridge makes, as usual, effective use of the indirect narrative style, and if a suspicion of staleness is evident in one or two of his 'dishes,' he amply atones for it in the others."

+ Ath 1913.1:304 Mr 15 100w

Reviewed by F. T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:669 Ag '13 370w

"It is with a kindly and friendly humor, a tender and tearful wistfulness that Mr. Pett Ridge brings these lives before us for a flash, leaving us with a memory of human experience."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '13 420w

"Perhaps their chief merit as a group lies in the fact that the author does not appear to be laboring for any sort of effect, serious or comic."

+ Nation 97:78 Jl 24 '13 170w

"An interesting collection of short sketches."

+ N Y Times 18:502 S 28 '13 230w

"While some of them are very entertaining [they] are not all quite equal to the reputation of their author."

+ — Spec 110:721 Ap 26 '13 20w

"[These short stories] are pleasantly written, but fall short of the degree of humor of perception that would make them an addition to the literature of low life. They are genial and wholesome in tone, and may serve a reader lying indolent in a hammock on a warm summer afternoon. Mr. Ridge employs skilfully his well-known formula, but in an evident attempt to avoid caricature he has sometimes missed tang."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Jl 10 '13 100w

RIDLEY, ALICE (DAVENPORT) lady. Margery Fytton. *$1.30 Duffield (Eng ed 13-4425)

Hugh Fytton, a country gentleman, is about to leave his property to his only child Margery when he learns, thru some old papers, that she is not his child after all. He disinherits her, making his nephew Tom Fytton his heir. He dies shortly after "leaving Margery to be brought up among the children of his half-sister, the child is conscious only that her father has done her an unexplained injustice, and that she hates the awkward, humble Tom Fytton with all her heart. This is only the beginning. The real story deals with the tragedy of Margery's unhappy childhood, her difficulties with her aunt, the crisis she faces when at twenty-one she learns the secret of her birth, her own development and the change in her feelings toward Tom." (Boston Transcript)

"The weakness of plot is forgotten in the fluent dialogue and excellent characterization."

+ — Ath 1913.1:162 F 8 70w

"Although the identity of Margery's father is not revealed until the end, the interest of the story throughout is kept away from the line of mystery. It is likewise to the author's credit that she has sketched with charming delicacy details that might otherwise have appeared crude, and that she has subdued a story of considerable 'power' in its outlines to the level of normal emotions."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 20 '13 370w

Nation 97:311 O 2 '13 250w

"The fact that practically all the characters belong to the same social stratum makes for a certain monotony, and the book would have gained by compression. But with all deductions this is an ingenious as well as agreeable specimen of the problem-novel."

+ — Spec 110:242 F 8 '13 850w

RIES, HEINRICH. Building stones and clay-products. il *$3 Wiley 12-26708

"It takes up, first, a general but brief description of rock minerals and rock and the properties of building stone in general. Then follow specific chapters on igneous rock and gneisses, sandstones, limestones and marble, slate and serpentine. The latter part of the book is devoted to clay products and takes up the general properties of clay and describes in detail building brick, terra cotta, hollow block, roofing tile, wall and floor tile, and sewer pipe and sanitary ware."—Engin N

"Covers very nearly the same ground as Eckel, but solely from the architect's viewpoint."

+ A L A Bkl 9:295 Mr '13

"While engineers in these days rarely have occasion to use building stone, they should find this book of great reference value for those times when they do. It furthermore gives in most concise form a wealth of information regarding those clay products which more frequently enter into engineering structures."

+ Engin N 68:1120 D 12 '12 370w

RIES, HEINRICH—Continued.

"There is little that is new in his book on building stones and clay-products, but it is well produced, and compiled by an experienced hand."

+ Nature 91:395 Je 19 '13 100w

"In attempting to cover so much ground within a limited number of pages much has to be omitted, and the question naturally arises if the subject does not suffer by such condensation to the extent of largely losing its value. A few minor errors are observed, as in the credit to Merrill on page 49, and to Watson on page 50. These are, however, comparatively immaterial matters." G: P. Merrill.

+ — Science ns36:907 D 27 '12 230w

RIGGS, ARTHUR STANLEY. France from sea to sea. il $1.25 (2c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-10867

"The author's journey begins at Boulogne, it is continued along the east to the Riviera, then across country to the Pyrenees, and north through western France to Brittany and Normandy, winding up in Paris; a journey which others may make in his track if they find it convenient. The book combines personal experiences of all sorts with bits of historical information and with visits to some places off the beaten track as well as many that are well known. The practical omission of Paris enables the author to find room for many other places of interest."—N Y Sun

"A cheaply made book, poorly illustrated."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:107 N '13

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '13 420w

"An attractive book containing many hints of profitable journeyings. A fine book for the traveler by automobile."

+ Ind 74:1306 Je 5 '13 70w

"Any book that turns the traveler to the France outside of Paris is rendering good service."

+ N Y Sun p4 My 31 '13 170w

"He writes with zest, and it will be an unenthusiastic reader who will not be fired with the desire to follow all over France in his footsteps."

+ N Y Times 18:364 Je 15 '13 350w

"An unusually attractive book of travel."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 380w

RIGGS, ARTHUR STANLEY. Vistas in Sicily. il $1.10 (1½c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-128

"The most usual mistake made regarding Sicily," says the author, "is that it is a little island, vaguely located in imagination somewhere near Italy and peopled by Italians." It is to clear up current misconceptions and to set forth the beauties of this island paradise that he has written his book. He writes of the history of the island, its scenery, and its people. He sees Sicily as "the home of all beauty, the abiding place of a people as picturesque in character as they are in face and costume."

+ A L A Bkl 9:443 Je '13

"He makes the wonderful island of Sicily live again in a remarkably satisfactory guide-book which is far more than a guide-book. The proof of the pudding is the eating and anyone taking up Mr. Riggs's volume will not satisfy his appetite until he has devoured it all. He is not always consistent in his spelling of Greek names. There are also a few evident misprints, but on the whole the book is clearly and satisfactorily printed."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Ja 15 '13 400w

+ Ind 74:1150 My 22 '13 30w

"The author in writing his book has several advantages; he understands Italian, he has unusual sympathy for the Sicilians, he has read up the extremely interesting history of the island, and has visited nearly every part of it. He describes what he has seen intelligently, with no pedantry; is as much concerned with human nature and the incidents of travel as with scenery or history, and has written a book that is helpful and enjoyable, whether the reader has seen Sicily or not."

+ N Y Sun p4 Ja 18 '13 120w

RILEY, W. Windyridge. $1.30 Appleton

13-35273

"Grace Holden, thirty-five, unmarried and self-supporting, wearies of London and its social problems. Accident brings her to a tiny village—the Windyridge of the title—where, obedient to the promptings of what she calls her 'Inner Self,' she settles down in a small but picturesque cottage, and prepares to enjoy the 'call of the heather.' Incidentally, she will earn her living by photographing all and sundry." (N Y Times) "Photography, however, is only a side issue in the book, which is chiefly occupied with character sketches of various people who live in the village." (Spec)

"There is a quaint charm about this story. The only fault we have to find with the book is that it occasionally lapses into the sentimental."

+ — Ath 1912,2:344 D 28 50w

"There is no particular need that 'Windyridge' seems likely to satisfy. And yet, like so many books written to-day, it cannot be dismissed as trash, because it is not badly enough written and has, such as it is, a point of view."

+ — Bookm 37:344 My '13 420w

"The book is in novel form, told in the first person, with character delineation rather more prominent than the love element, which is none the less engrossing. Humorous and pathetic episodes in the lives of the villagers are given—accounts which unite to give a clear and charming idea of the fascinating life with which Miss Holden identified herself. The book has both atmosphere and charm—the charm of strength and simplicity."

+ Lit D 46:656 Mr 22 '13 170w

"The style is rather stiff and awkward, especially in the dialogues, but there is a feeling for natural beauty which would have charm were it not so overdone that the temptation to skip becomes irresistible."

+ — N Y Times 18:178 Mr 30 '13 220w

"We feel that the native simplicity and straightforwardness of Mr. Riley's writing is seriously disfigured by a kind of insincerity characteristic of modern journalism; a tendency to avoid plain terms and seek conventional equivocations and circumlocutions. The particular merit of the book is that it is not ashamed to discuss ethics and religion—not going very deeply into problems, perhaps, but quietly and confidently recognising their existence."

+ — Sat R 114:401 S 28 '12 850w

"The novel is light, but some of the people in it are very attractive."

+ Spec 110:323 F 22 '13 70w

RINEHART, MRS. MARY ROBERTS. Case of Jennie Brice. il $1 (3c) Bobbs 13-3809

"A reporter on the lookout for a good story arranges with a disappointed playwright and his wife that the latter shall disappear for a week, in order to create a sensation which will help the journalist's reputation with his editor and throw some publicity in the direction of the theatre in which the actress is appearing. The situation affords the opportunity for the playwright actually to murder his wife, and what began as a practical joke turns out to be far more 'yellow' and serious than was ever intended." (N Y Times) A flooded house in Pittsburgh makes an unusual setting.

"The case of Jennie Brice' has almost all the attributes of a gawsome recital, yet the reader brings off from it no depression, but merely the excitement of a well-spun yarn."

+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 8 '13 200w

"The author holds much more closely to the thread of her story than is her wont; it is decidedly better in construction and in directness than recent work of hers. She has strange ideas of the ethics of newspaper men, however, and she refrains from explaining why the picturesque narrator should conceal her relationship from her niece."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Mr 1 '13 170w

"It is lacking in the ingenuity which marked 'The man in lower ten,' and it contains no vestige of the humor which characterized the author's share in the farce, 'Seven days.' It is a poor attempt to write a mystery story, in which a murder is flimsily traced to its source during flood times in Pittsburgh, and in which a tedious trial is followed with none of the clever turns of cross-examination which any writer with the facile pen of Mrs. Rinehart might have given had she taken the trouble. The fundamental idea of the book is fairly good, though not original."

— N Y Times 18:123 Mr 9 '13 200w

"As detective stories go, this story is a pretty good one."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 300w

RIPLEY, ELIZA MOORE (CHINN) MCHAT-TON. Social life in old New Orleans. il *$2.50 (3¼c) Appleton 12-26768

Recollections of a girlhood spent in what is perhaps the most picturesque city of our country. After the war the author lived for a number of years in Cuba and her later life was spent in the north; she views the old southern civilization therefore thru a long perspective of years and varied experience. "With her alert mind she could see the difference in point of view of modern days and could compare intelligently the conditions of different periods. Her reminiscences begin in the early forties and are interesting and amusing. They are told simply and heartily, with no striving for dramatic effect." (Lit D)

"Much is very local and trivial, but the book as a whole reproduces with considerable vividness a unique and fascinating life and the changed conditions brought about by the war."

+ A L A Bkl 9:295 Mr '13

"Mrs. Ripley has an engaging style that admits the reader to her confidence at once, and gives a certain distinction to even trivial matters."

+ Boston Transcript p24 D 4 '12 370w

"It is both interesting and important, even to the serious student of history."

+ Dial 54:146 F 16 '13 450w

"Obviously, the writer is an apologist for the conditions, tho not for all the results, of slavery. But we do not say this by way of reproach. She proves her open-mindedness no less than her intelligence, observation, memory for long past incident, and wide reading. Surely it is evident that 'Social life in old New Orleans' is a book in a thousand."

+ Ind 73:1429 D 19 '12 470w

"Her style is smooth and almost photographic. She appreciates the new while tenderly cherishing the old, with its French and Creole customs, its fascinations, and wide social activity."

+ Lit D 45:1140 D 14 '12 160w

+ N Y Times 18:68 F 9 '13 320w

+ Outlook 103:233 Ja 25 '13 480w

R of Rs 47:375 Mr '13 70w

"If occasionally the sketches betray a lack of that overkeen appreciation of picturesque values in the tid-bits of history in which the purveyor of historical romance delights, their veracity as personal documents is writ so large as to more than counterbalance."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ja 2 '13 850w

RIPLEY, WILLIAM ZEBINA. Railroads: rates and regulation. il *$3 Longmans 12-26396

Prof. Ripley discusses his subject in the following chapter divisions: History of transportation in the United States; Theory of railroad rates; Rate making in practice; Personal discrimination; Local discrimination; Problems in routing; Freight classification; Trunk line rate system; a distance tariff; Special rate problems; Movement of rates since 1870; rate wars; Act to regulate commerce of 1887: 1887-1905; emasculation of the law; Elkins amendments; Hepburn act of 1906; Effects of law of 1906; Mann-Elkins act of 1910; Commercial court, freight rate advances of 1910; Long and short haul clause; Conflict of federal and state authority. Index.

"Taken as a whole Professor Ripley's first volume seems likely to become the authoritative treatise on the subject of railway regulation by the federal government." M. B. Hammond.

+ — Am Econ R 3:647 S '13 1600w

"A noteworthy, scholarly and very complete discussion."

+ A L A Bkl 9:296 Mr '13

"The chief fault which the reader finds, as the author anticipated, is the 'exuberant mass of illustrative material.' In particular does the first part of the volume, dealing with rates, appear over-elaborate. The book is written in Professor Ripley's usual vigorous pleasing style, and in spite of the elaboration, the interest of the reader does not lag. There are several errors in minor particulars." T. W. Van Metre.

+ — Ann Am Acad 47:311 My '13 370w

"An admirable presentation of both theory and practice. The work is a valuable addition to the discussion of the railroad problem, and, if the second volume yet to appear is as good as the present one, it is not too much to say that it will be the standard authority on the subject."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 19 '13 450w

"The book represents an enormous amount of labor on the part of its author and contains a great amount of information on the subject of which it treats. The chief criticism we make of the book is to raise the broad question as to the practical usefulness of all this great mass of information to those who have to do with the actual fixing of railway rates, either as railway officers or in connection with governmental commissions. While the bulk of the book and the large space given to concrete examples may be criticised by the busy engineer or the over-worked railway commissioner who desires to make use of the book as a guide in his work, it is on the other hand true that the book is admirably adapted for use as a textbook and work of reference for students of economics. We recommend it also to students of engineering who desire to post themselves on the recent history of government railway legislation."

+ — Engin N 69:332 F 13 '13 900w

"It is perhaps a shortcoming of the work that practically nothing is written concerning the passenger, mail, and express branches of railway business. Another important defect is the large number of inaccuracies of fact which occur in Professor Ripley's pages. The unmingled merits possessed by the book are its concreteness and its wealth of illustrative data." L. H. Haney.

+ — J Pol Econ 21:656 Jl '13 1600w

"A book that is likely long to remain a standard authority on the subjects discussed. If there is one outstanding weakness in the book it is lack of clear generalization. Leaving out of consideration books devoted to special phases of the problem, this is the most scholarly work that has appeared on American railways since Hadley's 'Railroad transportation' in 1885."

+ — Natlon 96:361 Ap 10 '13 1250w

"He has earnestly tried to be entirely fair to each of the three parties concerned in the matter, owners, shippers, and the public and he has presented his facts and arguments in a lucid, logical style."

+ — N Y Times 17:715 D 1 '12 180w

RIPLEY, WILLIAM ZEBINA—Continued.

"The volume is not written in advocacy of any 'ism,' but is a product of the scientific and historic spirit."

+ Outlook 104:120 My 17 '13 300w

"The book will be an extremely valuable work of reference; while the general reader, who may skip the multiplied details of cases and decisions, will find much that is too interesting to be overlooked. Many slips have escaped the proof reader, some of these being serious enough to reverse the sense of a clause." J. M. Clark.

+ — Pol Sci Q 28:347 Je '13 1050w

"So much information about the American railroad problem has never before been brought together in a single volume."

+ R of Rs 47:505 Ap '13 100w

RITTENBERG, MAX. The mind-reader. 11
10 $*1.30 (1½c) Appleton 13-10535

"A series of stories of mysterious crimes and strange events. The problems are solved, not by a commonplace detective, but by a master of psychology. The stories are ingenious, and the man of science works only for the good of humanity."—Spec

"Unusual and rather interesting, although the methods may be far-fetched from a strictly scientific point of view."

+ — A L A Bk1 10:37 S '13

+ N Y Sun p4 Ap 12 '13 180w

"The stories are surprisingly unequal in merit, some quite absurd and banal; others ingenious and well carried out. The author makes effective use of an intimate knowledge of Europe, and, if the reader were not continually annoyed by the difficulty of finding the beginnings and the endings of the stories, the book would beguile sufficiently well a tedious hour or two."

+ — N Y Times 18:290 My 11 '13 100w

+ Spec 111:65 Jl 12 '13 50w

"The volume as a whole [is] one of unusual merit when compared with the trash generally found in fiction of this type."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 10 '13 220w

RITTENBERG, MAX. Swirling waters. 11
10 $*1.25 Dillingham 13-18000

A novel of the financial world of London. "The hero, Clifford Matheson, is a financier, whose one idea is to get rid of his business, and incidentally of his wife, and devote himself to pure science. He also wishes to stop a very harmful deal on the part of a certain Lars Larssen, but in the circumstances he finds complete disappearance more than difficult, and he is finally obliged to come reluctantly to life again." (Spec)

"Those who enjoy seeing successful financiers manipulating millions will be interested. The writing is brisk, and there is the inevitable love interest."

+ Ath 1913,2:13 Jl 5 30w

"Mr. Rittenberg writes with spirit and force, the rise of Larssen to dominance, and the striking denouement of the plot making virile appeal. The scenes are dramatic, and the human note throughout is insistent."

+ Boston Transcript p24 S 24 '13 300w

Ind 76:38 O 2 '13 80w

"The book is fairly good reading though it is not very subtle, nor are the characters drawn in a particularly lifelike manner. Lars Larssen is the best figure, but even he is a little conventional."

+ — Spec 111:218 Ag 9 '13 130w

RIVES, GEORGE LOCKHART. United States
11 and Mexico, 1821-1848. 2v 11 $*8 (1½c)
Scribner 13-203-9

A study of the relations of these two countries during the years between 1821 and 1848, the period from the beginning of Mexican independence and the close of the war with the United States. A knowledge of this critical period which culminated in war is essential to a right understanding of the present Mexican situation, for as the author says: "We have not always been fortunate in our conduct toward the other nations of this hemisphere, and our failures have, as I think, been chiefly due to our ignorance." Volume 1 carries the record up to the entrance of Texas into the union; volume 2 continues it to the close of the war. There are maps, a bibliography, and an index.

+ A L A Bk1 10:148 D '13

"Mr. Rives has accomplished an important and valuable work. He has cleared away all the misconceptions that have befogged this period of our history." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '13 1550w

"This work is exhaustive and minute, it appears to be judicious. It quotes and refers to a wide range of printed sources and public documents."

+ Ind 76:175 O 23 '13 1000w

"A particularly commendable feature of the book is the full appreciation it shows of the point of view of the Mexicans."

+ Nation 97:436 N 6 '13 900w

"A historical work of interest, dignity and importance. It is manifest that the book is much more than an attempt to supply an immediate popular demand. It involves too long and too thorough and antecedent preparation."

+ N Y Sun p13 O 4 '13 3700w

"Mr. Rives has written with judgment and fairness, and has recorded the triumphs of American arms with none of the heroics which have marred some previous accounts. In fact, in every page of his work appears the sober opinion of a man far enough removed from the events to form a clear judgment upon them."

+ N Y Times 18:493 S 28 '13 1250w

N Y Times 18:675 N 30 '13 280w

"This volume comprises an account as nearly complete as it would be humanly possible to construct it of the relations of the United States and Mexico between the years 1821 and 1848. It is the history of a brief period written with painstaking thoroughness and infinite detail. His book has its value, but in perusing it the unprofessional student of history will find his vision of the woods somewhat obscured by the trees."

+ — No Am 198:729 N 13 250w

"The author frequently presents his material in animated and sometimes almost dramatic form; and he presents also the philosophy of history as well as events in detail."

+ Outlook 105:498 N 1 '13 120w

"Much in these volumes will be found of exceptional value at the present moment of crisis in Mexico."

+ R of Rs 48:629 N '13 350w

RIZAL Y MERCADO, JOSE. Reign of greed; a complete English version of El filibusterismo, from the Spanish, by Charles Derbyshire. $1.50 (1c) Philippine educ. co.

12-24209

This second book by the young Filipino author who was condemned to death as a revolutionist in 1896 was published in 1891. It is a story of the last days of the Spanish reign in the Philippines. "Written some four or five years after 'Noli me tangere' [The social cancer], the book represents Rizal's more mature judgment on political and social conditions in the islands, and in its graver and less hopeful tone reflects the disappointments and discouragements which he had encountered in his efforts to lead the way to reform." (Translator's introduction)

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 21 '13 120w

+ Ind 74:652 Mr 20 '13 180w

"Here is a Filipino, with no European blood in his veins, who writes with the compelling charm of a Galdós, who has a considerable store of European culture and a perfect understanding of European ideals; which strikes chords of emotion that no American could find exotic; who believes passionately in all that Western civilization stands for, and whose appeal for the fraternity of races has not a trace of cowardice or pose."

+ — Nation 96:35 Ja 9 '13 400w

"The reign of greed' is written with more political force and less charm, and is almost without incident. The translator has supplied an excellent introduction, and the books themselves are interesting reading, not as novels but as history."

+ N Y Times 18:111 Mr 2 '13 150w

RIZAL Y MERCADO, JOSE: Social cancer; a complete version of Noli me tangere, from the Spanish, by Charles Derbyshire. $1.50 (1½c) Philippine educ. co. 13-1382

This story was published in Berlin in 1887. A limited edition sent to Hong Kong was surreptitiously introduced into the Philippines where government and church united in an attempt to suppress its circulation. The hero of the story Crisostomo Ibarra, a young native of good family, returns to his country after several years of study abroad, full of patriotic dreams. He finds that his hopes for the welfare of his native land can never be realized while the social cancer—the monastic orders—are sapping its vitality. He is excommunicated and driven from the country, a fugitive, while Maria Clara, the beautiful young girl he was to have married, is forced into a nunnery.

"The author of these two novels shows a thorough knowledge of all the intricacies of the Philippine questions at that date, and as though from bitter experience he places upon them the sacred and bloody seal of truth. The books should be known, for no other reason than as a justification of all that our government is trying to do and has done, to better the lives of the people in the Philippines."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 21 '13 120w

"The best picture of the Philippines under the old regime is to be found in the novels of Jose Rizal."

+ Ind 74:651 Mr 20 '13 150w

"This portrayal of Filipino life gives permanent interest to these books. The translation is accurate almost to literalness. Yet it might have been more appreciatively worked in the spots where the spirit becomes most distinctively local. [The translator's notes] are most often entirely neglectful of those characteristic features of Oriental life which necessarily recur in the narrative, and which only people of long residence in the Philippines can be presumed to understand."

+ — Nation 96:35 Ja 9 '13 400w

"His two books are thoughtful, earnest, well-written studies of social conditions in a time that already seems very long ago. For us their interest is historic. 'The social cancer' is the more interesting story; its narrative of the misfortunes of a pair of lovers separated by political and religious oppression, has a real plot."

+ N Y Times 18:111 Mr 2 '13 150w

ROBBINS, EDWIN CLYDE, comp. Selected articles on reciprocity. (Debaters' handbook series) *$1 (1c) Wilson, H. W. 13-6906

A brief, a bibliography, and a group of selected articles presenting both the affirmative and negative sides of the question of reciprocity make up the contents of this volume. The question for debate as stated is, "Resolved, that the United States should adopt the policy of entering into reciprocal trade treaties with foreign nations."

"The book may be commended to those who want a handy compendium on the subject." H. R. M.

+ Am Econ R 3:421 Je '13 100w

A L A Bkl 9:443 Je '13

ROBBINS, EDWIN CLYDE, comp. Selected articles on the commission plan of municipal government. 3d and enlarged ed. (Debaters' handbook ser.) *$1 (1½c) Wilson, H. W. 12-23976

In preparing the third edition of this number of the "Debaters' handbook series" few changes were found necessary other than the bringing of the bibliographies and statistics up to date. Growth of interest in the subject has led in a short time to an unusual increase in the amount of material available.

A L A Bkl 9:268 F '13

Ann Am Acad 49:247 S '13 100w

ROBBINS, EDWIN CLYDE, comp. Selected articles on the open versus closed shop. 2d ed. (Debaters' handbook ser.) *$1 (1½c) Wilson, H. W. 13-6906

To this second edition no new reprints have been added. Since the status of the question has changed but little since the publication of the first edition, such additions were deemed unnecessary. The bibliography, however, has been revised and brought up to date.

ROBERTS, CHARLES GEORGE DOUGLAS. Children of the wild (Eng title, Babes of the wild). il *$1.35 (1½c) Macmillan 13-20346

A little learner scarcely beyond the Santa Claus age, alone with his Uncle Andy and big Bill Pringle, the guide, on the shore of a wilderness lake, learns all about furred, finned and feathered kindred of the wild. The spirit of the woods fills the little questioner who, with skilful instruction, grasps eagerly the science of animal life. The chapters of the book are devoted to Babe's experiences and development. A valuable book for both boys and girls.

"The 'mechanism' is a little too much in evidence, but it undoubtedly helps to lighten the narrative."

+ — Ath 1912:2:sup498 O 26 80w

"Even the sceptical, who looks with scorn upon the supposedly inevitable juvenile level of animal stories will find intense, half-forgotten pleasure in these stories."

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 22 '13 200w

"These stories are unusually effective because of their charming descriptions of the forests and their sympathetic interpretation of savage nature. They both reveal and interpret the wild life of the woods."

+ Ind 76:358 N 20 '13 100w

"The author's nature stories are as fascinating to older readers as they are to the young; young animals, tame or wild, have an irresistible charm, which Mr. Roberts enhances and to which Mr. Bransom's effective pictures add attraction."

+ N Y Sun p4 N 8 '13 70w

"It has none of the sentimentalism which disfigures so many 'nature books.'"

+ N Y Times 18:737 D 14 '13 160w

"Mr. Roberts knows animals, and he also evidently knows boys. His stories are well written, sound in their natural history and stirring in their incidents."

+ Outlook 105:812 D 13 '13 50w

"Mr. Roberts is much too fine an artist to fall into the crude mistake of imputing purely human emotions to the lower animals. We have read a book in which rabbits had all the fine feeling of the country gentleman in whose park they lived. Mr. Roberts is never guilty of that. So we only ask, How can he know the feelings and thoughts of swordfishes?"

+ — Spec 109:sup782 N 16 '12 200w

ROBERTS, CHARLES GEORGE DOUGLAS. Feet of the furtive. il *$1.35 (1½c) Macmillan 13-4077

"With surprising versatility the author turns from the adventures of a salmon to those of a bear attacked by wolves; from those of an Indian leopard escaped from a circus into the great North-West to those of a cheeky little chipmunk. About all of them he writes with sympathy, knowledge, and not a little humour." (Ath) Some of the titles are: The gauntlet of fire; The keepers of the nest; In the year of no rabbits; The invaders; The leader of the run; With his back to the wall; King of beasts; The spotted stranger; and The feud.

ROBERTS, C. G. D.—Continued.

+ A L A Bkl 9:444 Je '13 ✖

"It is always pleasant to adventure with Mr. Roberts into nature's fastnesses, and in 'The feet of the furtive' he is singularly happy; moreover, we can, as we read, congratulate ourselves on gaining instructive information in a lively manner."

+ Ath 1912,2:549 N 9 170w

"Mr. Roberts is essentially an artist, and whether his story is long or short his climax is always artistic and effective."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 350w

Ind 74:1043 My 8 '13 50w

"The stories are fascinating and the form of narrative most entertaining."

+ Lit D 46:1030 My 3 '13 130w

"Contains several well-written stories of a kind much in vogue at the present time." R. I. P.

+ Nature 92:295 N 6 '13 130w

"Mr. Roberts differs from many nature writers in rarely ascribing human motives or sentiments to his beasts."

+ N Y Sun p3 Mr 8 '13 80w

"Mr. Roberts certainly handles his material well, and many people will doubtless read and enjoy his book."

+ — N Y Times 18:241 Ap 20 '13 300w

"The book is as readable and even dramatic as the best of the author's always excellent work in this field. Paul Bransom's drawings are capitally and truly done."

+ Outlook 103:733 Mr 29 '13 80w

"He writes a vivid style, and he knows his beasts of the North American wilds as intimate acquaintances. There is a sameness about animal stories, in one sense, yet each in this volume has its point and its variety. It is so rare for naturalists and reviewers to catch Mr. Roberts tripping that we must point out that the copperhead snake has no rattle."

+ — Spec 110:sup133 Ja 25 '13 200w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 450w

ROBERTS, ELMER. Monarchical socialism in Germany. *$1.25 (4c) Scribner 13-7560

The author says that his purpose in writing this book has been "to convey some notion of the extent in which the associated monarchies, forming the German imperial state, are engaged in profit-yielding undertakings that in other states are usually left entirely to persons and companies, and also to give some account of other social and economic experiments." These experiments are discussed in chapters as follows: State owned enterprises; German railway policy; The passing of the unskilled; Labor exchanges in Germany; Experiments with unemployment insurance; Goodwill toward trusts; Taxing the increase in land values; Monarchical versus red socialism; Looking toward the future; Emperor William II; Some reflections on the growth of the German navy; The play instinct in Germany.

Am Econ R 3:705 S '13 50w

+ A L A Bkl 10:24 S '13

"The clearness and seriousness of the author's attitude toward his book, and the variety of the subjects which he touches on, makes the book interesting reading for all who look toward the future aspect of the classes with understanding and sympathy, or with intelligent anxiety." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '13 700w

"Mr. Roberts has long been a representative of the Associated press in Germany, and he writes out of a considerable fulness of experience and observation."

+ Dial 55:265 O 1 '13 470w

"The book is well written and will be found excellent reading."

+ Educ R 46:424 N '13 80w

"Interesting, because of its clarity and conciseness."

+ Ind 74:921 Ap 24 '13 270w

"The book would have gained in value by more uniformity of presentation. Nevertheless it is written in an attractive manner so that it will interest the student in economics as well as the general reader."

+ J Pol Econ 21:675 Jl '13 200w

+ N Y Sun p5 Je 28 '13 80w

N Y Times 18:338 Je 8 '13 380w

"The book will, we believe, be of greatest use as a book of reference. It would have been possibly of greater value to the man in the street had the author's style been somewhat more vivacious."

+ — Outlook 104:825 Ag 9 '13 320w

R of Rs 47:636 My '13 130w

"The book, which sees Germany through pretty rose-colored glasses, is readable and comprehensive. Not so long as to be wearisome, and not over-crowded with statistics, it includes the main essentials in a form which will be clear to those who have not followed the situation carefully, while at the same time it will be interesting to the closer student."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 15 '13 850w

"Full of facts useful to the beginner in the study of any and all types of socialism." Ellen Lee.

+ Survey 30:504 Jl 12 '13 200w

ROBERTS, MORLEY. Private life of Henry Maitland. *$1.25 Doran 13-261

"Under a thin veil of disguise, a veil which has been quickly penetrated, Mr. Roberts has written the life of his most intimate friend. That Henry Maitland is no other than George Gissing is now an open secret."—N Y Sun

"Exactly what motives prompted Morley Roberts to present the biography in its present disappointing form is hard to realise, for, lacking courage to tell it as a straight narration, he has put it in a fictional form with such a laboured attempt to disguise the subject that one almost suspects him of sensationalism." G. Middleton.

— Bookm 36:655 F '13 1000w

"As for the story, it is a mere recital of distressful facts and of an ugly possibility, unlit by humor or mercy; it is, in fact, scandal—and scandal merely. All Mr. Roberts's moral values impress me as being hopelessly wrong." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p8 Ja 11 '13 470w

"In its egotism, its self-sufficiency, its aggressive complacency, 'The private life of Henry Maitland' is unequalled. Either as biography or fiction, the work is badly done. It is ill-written, chaotic in form and arrangement and a scrappy assortment of ideas upon ethics, politics, sociology, art and science." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p4 F 1 '13 1250w

"The new book has a double interest—literary and ethical. It not only throws light upon the character and career of one of the most gifted English novelists of the nineteenth century, it also shows clearly how that character foredoomed a disastrous career."

+ Ind 74:655 Mr 20 '13 330w

"As a study of a human soul apart from the fact that the identity is easily decipherable one would have to look far to find a more enthralling narrative."

+ Lit D 46:1136 My 17 '13 300w

"If Mr. Roberts could not relate the facts as frank biography, he should have kept silence; to approach them in this oblique fashion lon gives the impression that he is ashamed of the man whose friend he proclaims himself to be."

— Nation 96:256 Mr 13 '13 900w

"Now, when the time is ripe, comes Mr. Roberts's book, explaining with sympathy, yet with unimpassioned statement, the secret why and how of Gissing's life. He does so without a shred of reserve, revealing the inward facts in almost startling nakedness."

+ — N Y Sun p15 Ja 25 '13 470w

"I say that Mr. Roberts has done well to tell us the truth about Gissing as he knew him." Upton Sinclair.

+ N Y Sun p12 Mr 15 '13 1400w

+ — N Y Sun p11 Ap 12 '13 1000w

"It is no use pretending that Mr. Roberts's book is not downright bad, careless in statement, squalid in effect, poor as criticism, weakly planned and entirely without any literary distinction." H. G. Wells.

— N Y Times 18:9 Ja 12 '13 1200w

"We confess, moreover, that we find it difficult to think of a justification for the presentment of Henry Maitland's life in this form."

— Spec 110:199 F 1 '13 140w

"The book is a finished analysis of misdirected genius and a clever dissection of conditions unknown beyond a limited circle."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 20 '13 430w

ROBERTS, THEODORE GOODRIDGE. Harbor master. (Eng. title, Toll of the tides) ll $1.25 Page 13-2841

"A tale of wreckers on the coast of Newfoundland, written with a view to explaining the feeling the fisherman has that anything he can win from the sea is by rights his. Black Dennis Nolan, who had constituted himself skipper, wanted more than the sea yielded. He saved a beautiful singer from the wreck, and fell in love despite the fact her whole heart was possessed by the grand world where she had made her triumph. Her coming and her going furnish the main incident of the story."

—Ath

Ath 1913,1:66 Ja 18 90w

Boston Transcript p22 Mr 5 '13 330w

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 1 '13 120w

"He gives a most vigorous and graphic story of a brief enterprise of organized wrecking, and there is more in it than mere excitement and violence. There is plenty of those, and one gruesome touch besides, but underneath is the more subtle effect wrought by a new lust of gold upon the characters of the men and of the community as a whole."

+ Spec 110:242 F 8 '13 250w

"This is distinctly the best story Mr. Roberts has written. It is well developed throughout, overflowing with exciting situations and suggests a faithful picture of the life and manners of the people of that isolated community of 60 years ago."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 280w

ROBERTS, THEODORE GOODRIDGE. Two shall be born. ll $1.25 (2c) Cassell 13-8319

A love story which opens in New York and comes to its close in the Canadian woods. It is a story of a lovers' quarrel, an angry parting and a long-delayed reconciliation, but in the interval, while the lovers are separated, the hero, in the north woods, engages in many a hardy adventure and becomes involved in big enterprises. A villainous half-breed, a trusty French-Canadian guide, a pretty little French girl, a mysterious Englishman acting as a Hudson Bay company factor are among the minor characters.

"There is a curiously unfinished quality about [the book] as though the author had mapped out a longer story than he has written, and worked up only parts. The quarrel between the hero and the heroine is clumsy, the indications of character at the beginning are indistinct. When the story gets into the Canadian woods it improves greatly and many of the episodes are interesting, and show that the author can tell a story if he wishes to."

+ — N Y Sun p5 Ap 19 '13 70w

N Y Times 18:263 My 4 '13 220w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 7 '13 250w

ROBERTSON, JOHN GEORGE. Literature of Germany. (Home university library of modern knowledge) *50c (1c) Holt 13-7914

The author "confines his study to movements and tendencies, giving little attention to individual writers, with the exception of course, of the few giant-figures of German literature." (Ath) The chapters treat of: The middle ages; The period of the reformation; Renaissance and rococo; The age of classic achievement; Romanticism; The post-romantic epoch; The last phase.

"An excellent concise and entertainingly written survey of German literature by an acknowledged authority."

+ A L A Bkl 9:444 Je '13

"This general elimination of the personal element, virtually demanded by the size of the volumes in the 'Home university library,' does not deprive the subject of its interest, for under the author's skilful treatment it shows life and continuity."

+ Ath 1913,1:187 F 15 70w

"In one particular, it needs correction. Professor Robertson writes as though German literature had been entirely neglected, and speaks of 'the inferiority of our English translations from the German compared with those from the French, Italian and Spanish.' Surely this is unjust to Carlyle, to Coleridge, to Bulwer Lytton, and many more who have given us admirable versions of German classics. This injustice leaves its mark on Professor Robertson's bibliography, in which there is no reference to Carlyle's illuminating essays on German literature. Apart from this, the book may be warmly commended for its sanity of judgment and the conciseness with which it traces the development of German literature from mediæval times to the present age." H: C. Shelley.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Mr 15 '13 400w

"We may question Professor Robertson's judgment in the matter of omissions, but seldom in the matter of evaluation or the indication of relationships. The little book is interestingly written and is of a kind to inspire respect for both subject and author."

+ — Nation 97:243 S 11 '13 180w

"There is too little about the beautiful early poetry and proportionally too much about the dreary period before Goethe."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Mr 22 '13 50w

"Dr. Robertson's volume is one of the best and most helpful of the recent English studies of German literature."

+ R of Rs 47:636 My '13 150w

ROBERTSON, JOHN MACKINNON. Baconian heresy: a confutation. *$6 Dutton (Eng ed 13-13234)

The author of this volume ably answers the Baconian arguments. "To begin with, unlike many who have written on the subject, he takes the problem seriously, he meets his opponents' weakest and most trivial contentions with the same care that he gives to their superficially strong points, he amasses against them a hundred instances of their mistaken zeal where one would suffice. . . . In short he gives his opponents no opportunity to complain of him, as they have of many of his predecessors, for contempt of the Baconian court. He propounds and he argues the case against the Baconians as if it were worth arguing." (Boston Transcript)

ROBERTSON, JOHN MACKINNON—Continued.

"Mr." Robertson has found time and patience to deal 'concretely in detail, and comprehensively' with [the Baconian] arguments, especially when they are based on the legal and classical acquirements of the poet. Mr. Robertson's steady rain of effective blows reduces his various adversaries to a pitiable state. He does not bring forward much that will be new to the expert. In a few other cases we should have been glad to find more precise statement or fuller references—the more so because throughout Mr. Robertson shows a wide and accurate grasp of the innumerable details with which he deals. He completes his book with an excellent general index."

+ + — Ath 1913,1:302 Mr 15 1800w

Reviewed by H: C. Shelley.

Boston Transcript p9 Ap 12 '13 270w

"If it were possible to lay the Baconian ghost by the hurling of incontrovertible facts against it, then it would disappear forever under the sheer weight of Mr. Robertson's argument. Abundant leisure is necessary for the reading of Mr. Robertson's book, but if anybody is inclined to fall a victim to the Baconian delusion, he will find his time well spent. Perhaps at times he will be a trifle disconcerted by Mr. Robertson's prolixity, by his verbosity, and by numerous oddly constructed sentences that require a second or a third reading to discover their meaning. But the work is as scholarly as it is profound, and it is beyond all question the most comprehensive and absolutely convincing refutation of the Baconian theory." E. F. E.

+ + — Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '13 1350w

"The chief value of the book is in the original investigations." C: L. Moore.

+ — Dial 55:141 S 1 '13 2750w

"Incidentally, the book contains some interesting critical asides, such as the examination of Shakespeare's prose style, which concludes that Chaucer was the greater master of the two."

+ Nation 97:247 S 11 '13 480w

"His book is probably the most closely reasoned, the richest in original research work, the calmest and most coherent in the marshaling of fact and argument that has appeared under the 'Stratfordian' colors. Mr. Robertson's treatment of [the 'legal knowledge' theory] to which he devotes four long chapters of his book, is in the nature of constructive criticism and forms an admirable contribution to our knowledge of the dramatic literature of the Elizabethan period. Another extremely valuable bit of constructive criticism to be found in Mr. Robertson's book is his analysis of the claim that a remarkable degree of classical scholarship is revealed in the Shakespeare plays. The volume is packed full of interesting information bearing on the literary life of the Elizabethan age."

+ + N Y Times 18:337 Je 8 '13 2650w

"Whatever may be thought of the necessity for establishing the main thesis the process by which Mr. Robertson establishes it is interesting enough to justify the book."

+ — Spec 110:545 Mr 29 '13 230w

ROBERTSON, JOHN MACKINNON. Evolution of states. $2.50 Putnam (Eng ed 13-1517)

"This book is 'an expansion under a new name,' of the author's 'Introduction to English politics' published in 1900. It consists of a series of sketches showing the historical evolution of the various European nations, and closes with a sketch of English history from the revolution to the time of Queen Anne. In each case the author discusses only the domestic politics. . . . The first third of the book is devoted to the political, economic and culture forces emanating from Greece and Rome. The Italian republics, Switzerland, Holland, the Scandinavian countries, Portugal and the British islands are treated separately. In each case the author concludes that national deterioration is not due to national traits of character or to any natural law of growth and decay, but to lack of effort on the part of the people and their governments to understand the causes of deterioration, and to their failure to provide proper political machinery for compromising and adjusting conflicts between classes and interest."—Ann Am Acad

Am Pol Sci R 7:281 My '13 100w

"The book may well be pondered by those philosophers who are prone to make prophecies based on alleged historical parallels." A. H. Snow.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:286 Jl '13 470w

Ath 1912,2:562 N 9 30w

Boston Transcript p22 My 7 '13 1000w

"His work is essentially an interpretation; a historian in the accepted sense of the word, Mr. Robertson cannot claim to be. He has made no study of first-hand materials; he takes the conclusions of men who have searched the sources, and from these he attempts to construct his system of interpretation. The work, nevertheless has its value; it shows that the author has thought deeply on social questions in their wider aspects; and his views are always interesting and often rational and plausible."

+ — Dial 54:383 My 1 '13 600w

"Presents a constructive thesis of historic causation which is amply substantiated with quotations and exact references."

+ J Pol Econ 21:669 Jl '13 330w

Nation 97:291 S 25 '13 450w

"The new edition of the treatise will convince, we are sure, a candid reader that, whether he agrees with or differs from Mr. Robertson's interpretation and conclusions, the writer is intellectually honest and has diligently sought for the truth. The mere amount of work, of reading, of knowledge that the new edition shows is impressive. We profoundly disagree with its interpretation and its fundamental conclusions."

+ — Sat R 115:587 My 10 '13 1450w

"A meaty and scholarly volume which should appeal to serious and thoughtful minds, which recognize that the perfection of self-government will not be obtained in a night, and that it is only in building upon the past that progress is achieved."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 370w

ROBIE, VIRGINIA. By-paths in collecting. 11 1 $2.40 (3c) Century 12-25216

"In china collecting there are many byways and highways, little paths, as it were, off the beaten track," says the author at the opening of her first chapter. It is some of these little known paths that she follows. The first is the path that leads to "pink Staffordshire" an old English ware overlooked and ignored in favor of the more aristocratic "old blue." China holds first place in the author's interest but there are, too, chapters on pewter, brasses, furniture, old pianos, samplers and sun dials. And she "gives excellent advice to those who are eager to acquire good things, and presents facts as to values that will be helpful to those making purchases and exchanges." (N Y Times)

"Very readable and comprehensive though rather superficial chapters. The author's wide experience is evident, and her suggestions will interest the American collector, for whom she writes."

+ A L A Bkl 9: 163 D '12

"The illustrations and charm of this book would make a collector out of the most confirmed modernist." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:530 Ja '13 380w

"What one welcomes here, as in all the chapters of this really valuable work, is a real freshness of interest and a recognition of the fact that any one who is likely to be moved to read the book has already acquired some of the fundamental facts concerning the search for the antique. Nothing that is really vital to the general subject of collecting is here neglected, but the reader need not hesitate about adding this new work in the fear that he will only be getting a restatement of other and similar books in the same line of research."

+ Lit D 45: 910 N 16 '12 450w

"The chatty, informal style of the book is very readable. An unwarranted generalization here and there is noted."

+ Nation 95: 547 D 5 '12 250w

"As the catalogue of contents will show, she mapped out her book with proportion and adhered severely to her chosen topics. It was the only way in which she could have covered so wide a field in such simple and unaffected fashion. There's a delightful frontispiece and a good index. But the remarkable, and numerous photographs are the big help."

+ N Y Sun p 34 N 30 '12 200w

+ N Y Times 17: 767 D 8 '12 70w

"Her book is entertaining even to one who does not collect and does not intend to, but who wants to be fairly intelligent about what he is likely to find as he walks about." H: T. Bailey.

+ School Arts Magazine 12:348 Ja '13 100w

ROBINS, ELIZABETH (MRS. G. R. PARKES).
My little sister. $1.25 (2c) Dodd 13-951

Since that modern Moloch—the white-slave traffic—must exist; since, as we are complacently told, it is a "necessary evil"; since, as the man in this story hopelessly mumbles, it is "human nature," where are they to come from—the sacrifices for its altar? Why not my little sister, your little sister, since some little sister it must be? The book in England is published with the title "Where are you going to?" taken from the song Betty sang in face of the besotted libertines who surrounded her when we saw the last of her—"Where are you going to, my pretty maid?" Where she went we never know. London swallowed her and neither the forces of law nor of love could avail to bring her back.

"The combined realism and restraint, and the almost perfect delineation of the two sisters make the story both a work of art and a masterly exposition of the horrors of the white-slave traffic."

+ A L A Bkl 9:300 Mr '13 ✖

"If the placid fireside public can find sufficient interest in the story which meanders through a great part of this novel, there is a good chance of their being healthily disturbed."

+ Ath 1913,1:65 Ja 18 50w

"A curious combination of an exceptionally tragic situation and a faulty technique, inexcusable from an author of her repute. The book cannot fail to attract attention, in spite of its vagueness; it cannot fail to leave a poignant heartache behind it. Nevertheless, the author has undertaken a task for which she was technically not qualified." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 36:564 Ja '13 600w

"Told with infinite skill and the finest of art. Not until it is completed does the reader realize its perfection." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 22 '13 1050w

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 25 '13 170w

"No matter what she planned when she set about the writing of 'My little sister' her work resulted, consciously or unconsciously, in one of the most notable novels of recent years." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p23 F 5 '13 200w

"It must be urged against it that a girl of such a family, of such high social standing, would be less likely than another to be sought as a victim of such designs, which inherent improbability considerably weakens the tragic force of the very moving and poignant narrative." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:306 Ap 1 '13 270w

"It is a question whether this indictment of the white slave traffic should be placed in the hands of young girls or in those of their mothers, but we are sure that its reading will go far to pointing out the lurking dangers of life which are prevalent in villages as well as in great cities."

+ Ind 74:1149 My 22 '13 220w

"To gain our attention Miss Robins uses a voice shrill and emotional to the point of hysteria. She does distress and harrow her readers—if that is worth while."

+ Nation 16:335 Ap 3 '13 450w

"The reader who is qualified will accept this tale. As for us, we are far from being qualified. We leave it to the marines, strongly doubting than even those willing heroes will be able to swallow it."

+ N Y Sun p14 Mr 22 '13 1150w

"Mr. Kaufmann attempted to do this, and failed like most modern radicals, through suffering from a perversion of old-time Puritan tendencies. W. L. George tried, and succeeded in being salacious. Miss Robins has succeeded (can we say) beautifully in making our consciences writhe without an appeal to our brutish instincts. There is little sensationalism in the tale, with the possible exception of the last fifty pages. This will be the most talked of book of fiction of the season."

+ N Y Times 18:40 Ja 26 '13 300w

"So long as the story relates to Bettina it is extraordinarily good, but the rest of it drops considerably. To be sure, the other characters are alive and the sister love story pleasing. But there is too much of it. It seems what is padding is padding of the best, but not inevitably required. Particularly is this so after the catastrophe. The book is a true work of art." Hildegarde Hawthorne.

+ N Y Times 18:90 F 23 '13 950w

R of Rs 47:630 My '13 70w

"Miss Robins has written of the day and for the day, but she has scarcely given us a line which is likely to be quoted a year hence."

+ Sat R 115:149 F 1 '13 750w

"Miss Robins's writing is hardly up to her usual standard in this book. Perhaps the fact of its being a novel with a purpose has a little blinded the author to the canons of her art, for it must be confessed that the story is thin and the characters are rather slightly sketched."

+ Spec 110:281 F 15 '13 130w

"Such a book is not merely a literary production, an exquisite work of art; it is a high, sincere human service. From a literary point of view it is a great book. One is reminded of the Æschylean definition of tragedy: 'That which purifies the heart through pity and terror.' But this book not only reaches great tragic and dramatic heights, but its subtle art is such that it blends with the tragedy in an almost eerie way a lyric chord which echoes throughout, an unbroken strain of hope and pity, of the essential dignity and sanity and rightness of life." H. B. Laidlaw.

+ Survey 30:199 My 3 '13 2600w

ROBINS, ELIZABETH (MRS. G. R. PARKES).
Way stations. $1.50 (1½c) Dodd 13-8096

Elizabeth Robins, tho an American woman, has been intimately associated with the militant suffrage movement in England. Her book follows the progress of the movement since its inauguration in 1905. It is made up of a collection of speeches and magazine articles prepared by the author to meet special occasions or to explain particular phases of the suffrage situation. These she has linked together by brief bits of narrative so that the whole may present a connected chronicle.

+ A L A Bkl 10:25 S '13

"Way stations' will prove, to the majority of us, the most illuminating and comprehensive presentation that has yet been given of the militant activities. In this book, as in all her work, Miss Robins shows a broad philosophical understanding. There is much that will be suggestive and stimulating to the reader who is interested in the feminine movement other than in its direct relation to suffrage." Fola La Follette.

ROBINS, ELIZABETH—Continued.

+ Bookm 37:210 Ap '13 1450w

"Practically an authentic history and record of the woman suffrage movement in England since 1906." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '13 150w

Nation 96:446 My 1 '13 450w

N Y Times 18:240 Ap 20 '13 170w

"The usefulness of the book lies in the fact that what has been said and thought and experienced on the subject during the past eight years is here so available in a condensed form and expressed with that skill of the finished writer which is one of the author's attainments. The book has, of course, that added vigor found in work done with enthusiasm and by conviction; and it is, in a measure, the inner history of Miss Robins's own conversion to and progress in the faith whose story she tells." Hildegarde Hawthorne.

+ N Y Times 18:251 Ap 27 '13 900w

"A thoroughly readable book, and a book that it would be good for people of all shades of opinion to read."

+ — No Am 198:142 Jl '13 350w

ROBINSON, ARTHUR RAYMOND. Memory and the executive mind. $3 (5½c) Donohue 12-13496

The part which memory plays in the achievement of success is emphasized by the author of this little book. It is not with mere worldly success that he is concerned, but with what he calls the "larger success," meaning the development of individuality and the participation in a rich and full life. Part 1 of the book treats of Memory and its development; Part 2, of The executive mind; Part 3, of The larger success.

"The argument throughout is logical and convincing, and the book should prove helpful and inspiring to those who read it attentively and faithfully practise the suggestions made."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 220w

+ Cath World 97:551 Jl '13 50w

R of Rs 46:248 Ag '12 150w

ROBINSON, LENNOX. Patriots: a play in three acts. (Abbey theatre ser.) *75c (5c) Luce, J. W. 12-15004

One of the plays in the repertory of the Abbey theatre company. Its theme "is the return of an Irish revolutionist from prison, after eighteen years' incarceration, and his failure to fit into the new Ireland, which he finds concerned with problems of material prosperity; the study of Gaelic and indulgence in many meetings and lectures being its only reminders of the old national spirit to which he has sacrificed his all." (Ind)

"The dramatist succeeds in providing his players with a number of portraits to vivify, and a plenty of humor and satire and pathos."

+ Ind 74:704 Mr 27 '13 130w

"Lennox Robinson wrote 'Patriots' for the artistic Abbey theatre. If he has used in it his ironic arguments so often that they begin to lose force, he still had in his good character sketches, and his splendid theme of the inspired martyr from whom his cautious adherents dropped away, a play of real vitality. He had it—until, to drive home his theme and end his piece, he resorted to character-twisting."

+ — N Y Times 18:163 Mr 23 '13 150w

"Mr. Robinson has a fine idea; and has worked it out very successfully up to a point. The characters are roughly but well drawn—especially the patriot himself. But the play is the work of a writer whose imagination is not yet working at full pressure, and whose craftsmanship is quite elementary." John Palmer.

+ — Sat R 113:743 Je 15 '12 1150w

ROBINSON, VICTOR. Pathfinders in medicine. il $2.50 Medical review of reviews 13-14

"This book contains a series of papers most of which have already appeared in the Medical review of reviews, the Medical record, and other magazines. It is dedicated to Ernst Haeckel. Dr. Abraham Jacobi wrote the preface." (Survey) "There are fifteen essays in the volume dealing with Galen, Aesculapius, Paracelsus, Servetus, Vesalius, Paré, Scheele, Cavendish, Hunter, Jenner, Laennec, Simpson, Schleiden, Schwann, and Darwin." (N Y Times)

N Y Times 18:119 Mr 2 '13 100w

R of Rs 47:377 Mr '13 50w

"Mr. Robinson has lived with the characters of whom he writes until he has formed a vivid picture of the personality of each, a picture he manages to convey to his audience with great success. No one can read a chapter without discovering the author's antipathy to the Christian religion, and the monarchical system of government. This prejudice against what he regards as superstition and sycophancy, leads him into some extreme statements and mars to a certain extent what would otherwise be delightful reading." Alice Hamilton, M. D.

+ — Survey 30:69 Ap 12 '13 380w

ROCKWELL, FREDERICK FRYE. Gardening indoors and under glass. il $1.20 (2½c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-511

The author claims for this work that it is not a technical book, but "simply an attempt to tell in so plain a way that they cannot be misunderstood the every-day details of the successful management of plants in the house and within such small glass structures as may be made, even with limited means and time, a part of the average home." (Foreword) Part one deals with plants in the house; part two with the construction and care of cold frames, hot beds, and small home greenhouses.

+ Nation 96:423 Ap 24 '13 150w

"A pretty complete manual for all the plants that are kept through the winter, not neglecting the rubber plant."

+ N Y Sun p5 D 21 '12 50w

RODIN, AUGUSTE. Art; tr. from the French¹ of Paul Gsell by Mrs. Romilly Fedden. il $7.50 Small 12-27821

A series of conversations with the French sculptor in which he advances his own intimate views on art as here reported by one of his disciples, M. Gsell. "It is not necessary for the reader to agree altogether with everything that Rodin says. . . . But with the general tendency of his ideas every experienced artist and everybody who has formed his own notions of art through personal experiences, must agree most heartily. The spirit in which he speaks is the true spirit of the creative artist. His simplicity is that of a great personality; there is nothing esoteric in the doctrines he sets forth; and the book should be a valuable educational force." (Boston Transcript)

"A notable and unique work."

+ A L A Bk 1 9:201 Ja '13

"M. Rodin talks well, and we could wish for a Boswell who would press him more shrewdly when his statements become vague, or when, as in his attack on the academic idea of an abstract beauty of simplified form, he does less than justice to the reasons of his absent opponents."

+ — Ath 1912, 2: 384 O 5 570w

Ath 1913, 2:553 N 8 40w

"An excellent translation. It is one of the rare books on art which set forth the ideas of a great mind, and therefore add to the store of the world's literature on this subject a contribution of permanent value."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 21 '12 380w

"Wonderfully stimulating and suggestive book; the artist will find in the volume itself endless delight, and to the layman it will open many fresh interests. Unfortunately, the English text has none of the charm of the original; it is a literal rendering of M. Gsell's lively idioms, but so faithful to Gallic turns of phrase as to sound foreign in English and not a little stiff and ungraceful." Winifred Smith.

+ — Dial 54:46 Ja 16 '13 1250w

Int Studio 49:257 My '13 80w

Lit D 45: 1178 D 21 '12 1500w

"This book will be a valuable possession for any art lover."

+ Nation 96:66 Ja 16 '13 80w

"In this book, which I am pretending to review, M. Gsell appears as Rodin's Boswell and reports very intelligently a number of remarkable practical observations made by Rodin. They are practical even when they deal with the most mystical recesses of art. For Rodin, like all great workmen who can express themselves in words, is very straight and simple, and disposed to be useful to those who listen to them, and not to waste their time. He knows what is important and what is not and what can be taught and what cannot." G: B. Shaw.

+ N Y Times 17: 732 D 1 '12 2150w

R of Rs 47:234 F '13 1500w

RODIN, AUGUSTE. Venus; auth. tr. from the French by Dorothy Dudley. il *50c (17½c) Huebsch 13-1935

A little book in which the modern French sculptor, an exponent of modern art, pays tribute to the wonder and beauty of that gift to us from the art of the ancient world—the Venus of Melos.

"A little less literalness of rendering would have been advisable on the translator's part. Otherwise the book is thoroughly pleasing."

+ — Dial 53: 504 D 16 '12 120w

Ind 73:1505 D 26 '12 70w

"The translation is adequately done, but errs on the side of literalness. This is an important little tract for it contains in epitome most of the views on the craft which the master has elsewhere expressed more diffusely."

+ — Nation 96:67 Ja 16 '13 150w

"Some of Rodin's reflections on art in general and some of his remarks about this Venus are interesting; we are not impressed by his commonplace observations on Venus, the goddess, and on woman."

+ — N Y Sun p 16 N 23 '12 80w

"It must be said, however, that interesting though it is, this little article is scarcely an adequate example of Rodin's thought."

+ — Springfield Republican p 5 N 28 '12 330w

ROE, VINGIE E. Heart of the Night Wind. il *$1.30 Dodd 13-10500

"The story, outlined as briefly as possible, is simply this: a human wail, of the female sex, having been befriended by a kindly tribe of Indians, becomes the protégée of a very remarkable and exceptional old woman who is cook, mother, and general-in-chief of a certain lumber camp in Oregon. Picture to yourself a young girl with sensibilities of high tension, who has never known any life outside of a lumber camp. . . . And then try to imagine what it means to a girl like that to come in contact with a man from the east . . . and you have the essence of the whole situation."—Bookm

+ A L A Bkl 10:71 O '13

"In the present book Miss Roe has really found her proper sphere. The volume is undoubtedly defective. It has an unfortunate intermixture of the east, with which the author apparently is unfamiliar; and of the west, with which she is unquestionably profoundly intimate. The author certainly has an exasperating and quite ungoverned style." F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 37:339 My '13 300w

"There is an inordinate amount of villainy that belongs to a lower grade of literature and detracts much from the real interest in the story."

+ — N Y Sun p3 My 17 '13 150w

"[The author has] delved for all the romance with which such life is filled and which she knows so well how to reproduce for her readers."

+ N Y Sun p15 Je 7 '13 200w

N Y Sun p13 Je 14 '13 50w

+ N Y Times 13:405 Jl 20 '13 170w

ROGERS, ALLEN; AUBERT, ALFRED BEL-LAMY; and others, eds. Industrial chemistry; a manual for the student and manufacturer. il *$5 Van Nostrand 12-22000

The volume contains forty-four monographs by almost as many specialists and has 340 illustrations. The variety of topics is indicated by a few of the chapter titles: Materials used in the construction and operation of chemical plants; Power transmission, boilers, engines and motors; Commercial chemicals; Lime, mortar, cement and plaster; Metallurgy of iron and steel; Fertilizers; Vegetable and animal oils, fats and waxes; Laundering; Brewing and malting; Dyestuffs and their application; and Glue and gelatine.

"The work lacks uniformity, some sections being technical and others rather popular, and there are some gaps and a little repetition. Well illustrated and indexed. A useful supplement to Thorpe's 'Dictionary of applied chemistry' and a good substitute in smaller libraries."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:296 Mr '13

"The book does not meet the needs of the manufacturer, but, on account of the excellent treatment of principles, it is well suited as a student's manual, and as such will be welcomed by teachers of applied chemistry. In some of the chapters the literature of the subject is freely referred to, while in others no authorities are cited. The editors did not adopt the official abbreviations of the American chemical society in the case of periodicals."

+ — Nation 96:505 My 15 '13 200w

ROHMER, SAX. Insidious Dr. Fu-Manchu. 12 *$1.25 McBride, Nast & co. 13-22449

A detective and mystery story with a Chinese villain. The story is told by a doctor who is an intimate friend of Smith, the detective-hero of the various adventures. "The volume is not a book of short stories but a well-connected narrative starting with the return to England of Wayland Smith, on the trail of his dangerous antagonist, and ending with the spectacular death or disappearance—the reader is left in doubt—of Dr. Fu-Manchu." (Bookm)

"Murders and outrages occur throughout the book with a regularity which at length becomes monotonous."

— Ath 1913,2:13 Jl 5 60w

"The thrills are piled up skilfully, the style is simple and direct. A few affectations in the quieter passages are forgotten when things begin to happen. In a word, the book is a very creditable specimen of its kind." R. H. Phillips.

+ Bookm 38:305 N '13 500w

Boston Transcript p10 N 17 '13 330w

"Among the many victims of violence in these chronicles we may mention the rules of English grammar."

— Nation 97:385 O 23 '13 270w

"They are respectable, and readable samples of the mechanical mystery tale."

+ — N Y Sun p3 S 27 '13 110w

Spec 111:287 Ag 23 '13 5w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Jean-Christophe: journey's end; tr. by Gilbert Cannan. il *$1.50
(1c) Hot 13-30294

In the three parts published in this volume—Love and friendship, The burning bush, and The new dawn—M. Rolland's epic novel is brought to a close. "The two great events of this recital of the final years of Jean Christophe's life are his liaison with the wife of an old friend, with whom he takes refuge in Switzerland after his flight from Paris as a result of participation in a socialistic revolution, and his platonic friendship with the beautiful Grazia, whom he has known in his younger days." (Boston Transcript) "It is to the young men of the world that M. Rolland dedicates his book. . . . It is written in the full knowledge that life is hard and bitter and cruel, yet ever with the faith that to the sufferer who does not yield that life becomes thru his informing spirit radiantly beautiful. It is this spiritual quality, this ever present consciousness of the infinite, that gives the work a unique place among its contemporaries" (Ind)

"This volume shows the author's purpose more clearly than the earlier ones did, and is the most dramatic of the three."

+ A L A Bkl 9:401 My '13

"His book will live, if only for the portraits of Antoinette, the type of woman who has been the salvation of France at its worst moments, and Grazia—and for a few of the incidental characters who appear for a moment in the kaleidoscope of the hero's progress. It is a picture of a France which, under its incessantly changing surface, remains the centre of civilization, and so should interest every civilized man and woman."

+ Ath 1913,1:251 Mr 1 420w

"The reading of 'Jean Christophe' is an exciting plunge into the vortex of modern European life. It is a mental and physical stimulus, it will open the eyes, it will stir the intellect with a multitude of ideas and ideals, but the mistake must not be made of imagining that the life it portrays is the whole of life. It is the truth and nothing but the truth, but it is far from the whole truth. If we bear that in mind, we shall discover in 'Jean Christophe' the elements of a great novel, if not a great novel itself." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 12 '13 1250w

"To us of today 'Jean Christophe' is a vital, compelling work, a work forged in the fire of a terrible sincerity. We who love it feel that it will live."

+ Ind 74:417 F 20 '13 800w

"This is a work of truly international value."

+ Ind 74:824 Ap 10 '13 350w

"'Jean-Christophe,' despite its great shortcomings as a novel, is a stirring attempt to present sincerely an important message to a material-minded generation."

+ Nation 96:360 Ap 10 '13 500w

"M. Rolland is engrossed with the joy of creation and the exercise of his excellent power of observation and analysis, but he forgets that there is an active audience. A demand for editing, however, does not imply that 'Jean Christophe' is a formless mass of material, justified by volume only, and valuable in parts as a searching and pungent commentary on the continental thought of—we must say it—yesterday. Yet we come from the book with the refreshment of contact with a live and healthy force."

+ N Y Times 18:142 Mr 16 '13 1400w

"This third volume, like the two which preceded it, has a fairly complete interest in itself, independent of that of the others. 'Jean-Christophe' is elemental, powerful and fascinating."

+ R of Rs 47:630 My '13 100w

"One cannot read 'Jean Christophe' and fail to speak of it in comparison with works acknowledged to be classics."

+ Sat R 115:sup3 Mr 15 '13 1750w

"'Jean Christophe' holds a notable place as a book that has given to the world something definitely new in form, in spirit, and in ideal. For M. Rolland's book is not distinguished from the rest of contemporary romance by its length alone."

+ Spec 110:656 Ap 19 '13 2250w

"A piece of true literature not to be missed."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 30w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Life of Michael Angelo; tr. from the French by Frederic Lees. il *$2 Dutton (Enged A13-730)

"M. Romain Rolland's book is neither a biography nor a study of the works of Michel Angelo. It is rather a series of essays dealing with the personality of the master." (Spec.) "The contents is divided into two parts: First, The struggle; second, The abdication. In the first part there are three chapters—Strength, Shattered strength, and Despair. In the second part there are also three chapters—Love, Faith, and Solitude. This is followed by an Epilog, an appendix with poems in Latin by Michael Angelo, a bibliography, and an index. The footnotes are numerous and valuable." (Lit D)

"Occasionally the reader feels that the note of tragedy is forced to the point of sensationalism."

+ A L A Bkl 9:296 Mr '13

"The work is the sympathetic study of a man of imagination."

+ Ath 1912, 2: 384 O 5 700w

Dial 55:215 S 16 '13 300w

"The book is packed with the best of Michael Angelo, and the best of Rolland—and that should be commendation enough."

+ Ind 73: 1258 N 28 '12 330w

+ Lit D 45: 1141 D 14 '12 320w

"The translation, saving bad transcription of Italian names, is tolerably done. The style is emphatic, nervous, at times torrential—in striking and refreshing contrast to the usually placid tone of French monographs on art. Many will feel that Mr. Rolland forces the note of tragedy. At least, he deserves the credit for a reading that is coherent, suggestive, and masterly."

+ Nation 96:43 Ja 9 '13 120w

"This biography has the qualities even of its defects. Its occasional extravagance is forgotten in the delight we find in its imagery, eloquence, and especially in the lack of that pseudo-simplicity with which mediocrity often attempts to veil its own commonness of thought and expression."

+ N Y Sun p8 Ja 25 '13 2000w

"If Marie Bashkirtseff (cheerful thought!) had written 'The life of Michael Angelo' the work would have been one not dissimilar from this before us by Romain Rolland." R. C. Holiday.

+ N Y Times 17: 761 D 8 '12 1400w

"It is really no biography at all; it is rather an appreciation. It is true it purposes to cover the sculptor's life, but it does so not as a history of that life but as a psychological study."

+ Outlook 103:499 Mr 1 '13 900w

"Romain Rolland brings Michael Angelo very near to us."

+ R of Rs 47:232 F '13 1400w

"Altogether the book makes a most interesting study of an extraordinary man. The translation has been well done on the whole, though occasionally a word seems to suggest an imperfect appreciation of the original. More care should have been taken in one respect, for there is no point in giving the French form of Italian names such as Pic de la Mirandole, or, worse still, such a picture as 'Marcile' Ficino."

+ Spec 109: sup 783 N 16 '12 1000w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. Theodore Roosevelt: an autobiography. II *$2.50 (1c) Macmillan 13-24840

Chapters from Mr. Roosevelt's autobiography which have been appearing in the "Outlook" during the past year have been collected and published in this volume. It is not a complete biography for, as the author says, there are chapters which cannot now be written. Those which have been written bear the titles: Boyhood and youth; The vigor of life; Practical politics; In cowboy land; Applied idealism; The New York police; The war of America the unready; The New York governorship; Outdoors and indoors; The presidency; The natural resources of the nation; The big stick and the square deal; Social and industrial justice; The Monroe doctrine and the Panama canal; The peace of righteousness.

Ath 1913,2:sup396 O 11 100w

"It is greatly to be regretted that the publishers have not given to Colonel Roosevelt's book a mechanical setting commensurate with its merits. The volume is undeniably ugly; it is clumsy and heavy; the page is ill-proportioned and the paper is unpleasantly shiny, while the multiplied illustrations are not displayed to advantage. In fact, the volume might be likened not unfairly to an ill-made subscription book cluttered with haphazard process-cuts." Brander Matthews.

+ — Bookm 38:418 D '13 1800w

"He has given us in his autobiography a book of extraordinary personal fascination." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p22 N 19 '13 2500w

"Emphatically and unmistakably the author has stamped himself on every page of his book, and no reader desiring a better acquaintance with him will be disappointed in this ample autobiography." P. F. Bicknell.

+ Dial 55:476 D 1 '13 1300w

"One of the most interesting volumes that have recently seen the light." W. P. Trent.

+ — Ind 76:341 N 20 '13 1250w

"What Mr. Roosevelt has done is to write an 'apologia.' He takes up his deeds one after another, retells them briefly, and then immerses them in a flood of explanation and justification. Even this method of treatment would give his book importance if the explanation and justification contained new matter, but they do not. One chapter does not fall into the category of all the rest. It is entitled Outdoors and indoors. Free not only from partisanship but from didacticism, it is the stuff of which genuine autobiography is made."

+ — Nation 97:507 N 27 '13 870w

"The book is very well worth reading, not only for the man who wrote it, but for the interest of the things which he has to tell."

+ N Y Times 18:642 N 23 '13 1750w

N Y Times 18:673 N 30 '13 320w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. History as literature, and other essays. *$1.50 (2½c) Scribner 13-20807

Eleven addresses and essays whose thesis is that the domain of literature must be ever more widely extended over the domains of history and science. Chapters: History as literature; Biological analogies in history; The world movement; Citizenship in a republic; The thralldom of names; Productive scholarship; Dante and the bowery; The foundations of the nineteenth century; The search for truth in a reverent spirit; The ancient Irish sagas; An art exhibition.

Reviewed by Brander Matthews.

+ Bookm 38:421 D '13 650w

"A book sound and brilliant in its substance and inspiring in its spirit."

+ Ind 76:93 O 9 '13 1250w

"That the knowledge which they exhibit is wide rather than deep, the expressions of opinion suggestive rather than convincing, and the criticism of accepted standards often airy and superficial, is, of course, entirely characteristic."

+ — Nation 97:363 O 16 '13 200w

"The collection was decidedly worth making."

+ — N Y Sun p12 S 27 '13 1350w

"We hope that we are not disrespectful or unfair to Mr. Roosevelt when we confess that the impression made by all these elaborate and—in a good sense—pretentious essays is of a certain amateurishness, and often of banality."

+ — N Y Times 18:573 O 26 '13 1400w

"They are all characteristic examples of Mr. Roosevelt's distinctive quality as a thinker, the quality that leads him never to aim above the head of the average man, whom he seems to regard as a creature of the most naïve simplicity and of very satisfactory limitations."

+ — N Y Times 18:674 N 30 '13 320w

+ Outlook 105:710 N 29 '13 180w

+ R of Rs 48:629 N '13 170w

ROOT, ELIHU. Experiments in government and the essentials of the Constitution. $1 (8c) Princeton univ. press 13-15248

The question with which Senator Root is concerned in this series of lectures, delivered as the Stafford Little lectures for 1913, is this: "How can we adapt our laws and the workings of our government to the new conditions which confront us without sacrificing any essential element of this system of government which has so nobly stood the test of time, and without abandoning the political principles which have inspired the growth of its institutions?"

A L A Bkl 10:107 N '13

Am Pol Sci R 7:476 Ag '13 50w

Ath 1913,2:135 Ag 9 70w

"The lectures are worth reading as the product of a master mind; and Americans who desire to retain a government which makes real the union between civil order and popular liberty will profit by the careful reading of these lectures."

+ Boston Transcript p19 Ag 13 '13 230w

"The senator's book is not large, but its thought is mighty, its language is both simple and eloquent and more is meant than appears in the text. The informed observer of affairs can read much between the lines, and can be trusted not to lay the pages down until the last has been turned."

+ N Y Times 18:393 J1 13 '13 1650w

"Both the essays are a pleasure to read for their clearness and economy of language, their temperateness of expression, and, above all, their contact with real affairs. No one could read Mr. Root without respect, and we shall all admit that he understands the political genius of the American people infinitely better than Englishmen can hope to do, but we are unable to accept his arguments as to the referendum or poll of the people in general."

+ Spec 111:281 Ag 23 '13 2750w

ROSCOE, EDWARD STANLEY. English scene in the eighteenth century. *$2.75 Putnam (Eng ed A13-825)

"The author tries to give the reader the same mental impression of social conditions, fashions, industrial affairs, and society at large that an Englishman of the eighteenth century might have. For this purpose he takes an imaginary Englishman of the time through London to Bath on visits to a family of the middle class, to members of the nobility, to literary people, to clergymen, and even to a peasant's cottage."—Outlook

+ — A L A Bkl 9:386 My '13

"We fail to find in the index the words 'Deist,' 'enthusiasm,' or 'philosophy.' Paley and Paine are alike ignored. The summary, however, is capable on the social, naval, and industrial aspects of the century, and agreeable reading throughout."

+ — Ath 1912,2:727 D 14 120w

"He has not selected his details with a single view to the completeness of his picture, and he curiously bestows his colour on the less ROSCOE, EDWARD STANLEY—Continued. important of its outlines. Nevertheless, he succeeds at times in his second object very well—which is to assemble seemingly unrelated or minute facts into a new and stimulating generalisation. The general temper of the book, too, is very human." Graham Berry.

+ — Bookm 37:452 Je '13 1400w

+ Boston Transcript p23 F 5 '13 830w

"We obtain in a comprehensive glance a pretty intelligent view of the whole period."

+ Dial 55:89 Ag 1 '13 320w

"Mr. Roscoe's book is well illustrated. We wish, however, that he had given under each reproduction of a print or painting the artist's name and other details of its 'provenance.' This would have doubled the interest of his well chosen illustrations."

+ — Ind 74:702 Mr 27 '13 350w

Lit D 46:474 Mr 1 '13 300w

"The vision of the eighteenth century which Mr. Roscoe offers to us is unquestionably general, and yet it is far from clear."

— Nation 96:362 Ap 10 '13 1150w

"It is a mechanical and pretty dull book, for the author draws no apparent inspiration from the far from uninteresting material at hand."

— N Y Sun p4 F 15 '13 80w

"Our chief objection to his book is that what he has in the majority of cases selected as characteristics of the eighteenth century are in many cases characteristic not merely of the eighteenth but of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and even of the twentieth, and probably will be of the twenty-second centuries. Aside from these objections, the volume contains good descriptive matter."

+ — N Y Times 18:36 Ja 26 '13 250w

+ Outlook 103:320 F 8 '13 120w

"The book, and it is a pity, has blemishes quite easy to avoid. We hope, for Mr. Roscoe's sake, that he did not revise his own proofs. We find many things. In spite of them, the book is quite readable, and, a little corrected, should form a good introduction to a study of the period. As above said, we think Mr. Roscoe had a task so difficult as almost to transcend human faculty, but we do not 'wish it had been impossible.'"

+ — Sat R 115:18 Ja 4 '13 1300w

"Taken all in all his book is an admirable résumé of 18th century life in England, for though he endeavors no such thorough examination of the subject as others have made of the same century and still others of other centuries in England, he has an excellent sense of proportion and combines a pleasant style with essential sobriety of purpose."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 20 '13 600w

ROSE, HENRY. Henrik Ibsen, poet, mystic¹² and moralist. $1 Dodd (Eng ed A13-1108)

Mr. Rose treats of Ibsen the reformer rather than of Ibsen the dramatist. "After classifying the Ibsen dramas as 'Earlier plays,' 'History and religion,' 'Plays of social life,' and 'Psychological plays,' Mr. Rose concludes his work with three chapters on 'The last phase,' 'Art for the sake of life' and 'Mysticism and idealism.'" (Boston Transcript)

"An interesting study."

+ Ath 1913:1:412 Ap 12 30w

"We need not regret that Mr. Rose wrote this book, for it gives incentive to reflection and argument." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p25 O 1 '13 900w

"Any interpreter of Henrik Ibsen is welcome if only he be large enough to quarrel with. Mr. Henry Rose at times falls short of this magnitude. On the whole Mr. Rose's work lacks breadth and finish and fluency."

+ — N Y Times 18:562 O 19 '13 1300w

ROSE, JOHN HOLLAND. Personality of Napoleon; the Lowell lectures for 1912. 11 *$2.50 Putnam 12-28680

"In a strict sense this is not a summing up or condensation of Napoleon's career, for there is, of course, no attempt at a complete record of events. Yet in the sense that 'character is destiny' it is one of the most significant and fruitful of all the studies of the life that began at Ajaccio and ended at Longwood." (Springfield Republican) "Dr. Rose's method is to select eight aspects of the great Corsican for topical treatment: the man; the Jacobin; the warrior; the lawgiver; the emperor; the thinker; the world ruler; the exile. He excludes therefore, the statesman and the man of letters." (Ind)

+ A L A Bkl 9:386 My '13

"Those who take up the book without any preparatory knowledge of its contents may find some things in it that are familiar, some things that suggest special pleading, but they will certainly find in it as well more information about the great conqueror and statesman than is ordinarily compressed within similar limits." E. W. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 2 '13 330w

"Is the most important attempt to present a complete conception of the great man's characteristics since Taine published the first part of his 'Modern régime.'" H: E. Bourne.

+ Dial 55:357 N 1 '13 400w

"The reader who finds Dr. Rose's illustrations of Napoleon's characteristics too copious and crowded, should console himself with the knowledge that he is reading, after all, the work of a master of his subject. The book is not without suggestive and debatable epigrams." P.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:404 Ap '13 180w

Ind 74:416 F 20 '13 850w

"Delightful volume in which the learning of a scientific historian is combined with the skill of an accomplished essayist."

+ Lit D 46:1138 My 17 '13 200w

"When a man who knows a great deal about a great subject discloses briefly and charmingly the heart of his subject, his book is likely to be worth reading. This is such a book."

+ Nation 96:336 Ap 3 '13 900w

"His views are eminently respectable and equally dull; his lectures are worthy examples of the modern accurate scholarship that is almost unreadable."

+ — N Y Sun p6 Ap 19 '13 130w

"Over the difficulties of subject and method—the necessity of summarizing, of weighing, and judging so elusive a thing as personality—the author measurably triumphs by virtue of a scholarly incisiveness, a sanity of emphasis, and a really eloquent style."

+ No Am 197:712 My '13 330w

"This book, is, we are inclined to think, the best, most judicial, most fair-minded estimate of this enigmatical character that we have ever read. We recall no book quite comparable to this for giving to the student of French history a clue to the interpretation of Napoleon as the man, the warrior, and the law-giver."

+ Outlook 103:734 Mr 29 '13 100w

"The scholarly Lowell lectures of 1912."

+ R of Rs 47:377 Mr '13 20w

"In this book Dr. Rose does not profess to throw new light on Napoleon's personality, but it is a comprehensive, and for its purpose adequate, sketch, with due acknowledgments to earlier workers in the same field, such as Mr. Oscar Browning."

+ Sat R 114:741 D 14 '12 300w

"The lectures throughout are full of information and characterized by sympathetic insight and clear thinking. Those who have learned to appreciate Dr. Rose's earlier works will feel themselves under a fresh sense of gratitude for this latest contribution to a subject of abiding interest."

+ Spec 110:104 Ja 18 '13 1950w

"It must take its place at once as one of the most important and most satisfying of recent additions to the Napoleonic literature."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 6 '13 1500w

Reviewed by W. C. Abbott.
Yale R ns3:173 O '13 50w

ROSE, WILLIAM GANSON. Success in business. $1.25 Duffield 13-4134

"Mr. Rose essays to tell his readers 'how to achieve success in business,' and says that success in business involves 'the goal, character, knowledge and power.'" (Ind) "Business knowledge, power-getting, the mental attitude towards work, loyalty, and a score of other similar topics are treated forcibly." (Outlook)

"We think some men would profit by reading this book."

+ Ind 74:767 Ap 3 '13 70w

"It contains a lot of sound philosophy and an abundance of excellent maxims."

+ N Y Times 18:194 Ap 6 '13 50w

"These short talks are written concisely and in epigrammatic style, with frequent quotations, and with the occasional telling of anecdotes which bear pointedly on the subject."

+ Outlook 103:780 Ap 5 '13 50w

ROSEGGER, PETRI KETTENFEIER. Forest farm: tales of the Austrian Tyrol; with an appreciation by Maude Egerton King and a biographical note by Dr. Julius Petersen. *2s Fifeild, London

"The tales here collected are taken from his prose writings. They give vivid pictures of the primitive life of the peasants of Styria, brimmed with superstition and reverence, courage and passionate loyalty to home and country. In most cases the stories mirror personal experiences of the poet, and through their simplicity of thought and expression shines the splendor of the gospel of love, Rosegger at all times proclaims."—Boston Transcript

"These tales from the Austrian Tyrol, made known to us through translations by various scholars, preserve to an unusual degree not only the strength and beauty, but the spirit of the original. In his work is no taint of that imitation which weakens much of that of the writers of our day."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 8 '13 420w

"The stories are entertaining and original, for the author has distinct talent in his line, and this selection is well suited to make him known to English readers."

+ N Y Sun p5 D 21 '12 50w

"Even in translation this volume of 'Tales from the Austrian Tyrol' is as fresh and sweet as the smell of plowed land after a spring rain."

+ Outlook 103:46 Ja 4 '13 100w

ROSENAU, MILTON JOSEPH. Milk question. (Northwestern univ., the N. W. Harris lectures for 1912) il *$2 Houghton 12-26011

"This book takes up every phase of the subject and the searcher after truth can find here the actual facts which underlie the mass of more or less loose statements we are all accustomed to hear made concerning such matters as milk-borne infections, the infection of human beings with bovine tuberculosis, the comparative value of milk as a food, the dangers of dirty milk, the real bearing of the milk question on infant mortality and the much disputed subject of pasteurization."—Survey

"Although the author is an expert and an enthusiast on the sanitary aspects of the subject, he is quite able to see that it has economic, social, and commercial implications which must not be overlooked. Dr. Rosenau's attitude is in refreshing contrast to much that is written today in a pseudo-hygienic spirit about the 'milk peril.'" Marlon Talbot.

+ Am J Soc 19:114 J1 '13 450w

"The most complete and up-to-date work on the practical milk problem."

+ A L A Bkl 9:250 F '13 +

"The book is rich in facts, strong in demonstrations, and able in rational discussion."

+ Ann Am Acad 45:270 Ja '13 280w

"As the volume before us is eminently readable, and not highly technical, we can strongly recommend it to the general public."

+ Ath 1913,1:73 Ja 18 1000w

"Altogether the book is a valuable one, and one to read, ponder and digest." R. T. Hewlett.

+ Nature 91:554 J1 31 '13 600w

+ N Y Times 18:59 F 9 '13 50w

"It is a relief to have a book appear which is written for laymen primarily and which gives in readable form the latest pronouncements of science on the vexed question of what is good milk and why it is good, what is bad milk and why it is bad. To any one who wishes a clear understanding of this important question and wishes to be kept from making extravagant, or obsolete or inaccurate statements this book is recommended." Alice Hamilton.

+ Survey 29:481 Ja 11 '13 420w

ROSS, DENMAN WALDO. On drawing and painting. il *$2.50 Houghton 12-25085

"The object of this book is to give a technical analysis of the art of drawing and painting; to describe the materials of the art and the methods of using them; to consider the practice of painting and the painter's point of view; the methods of study he should follow and the ideals he should have in mind." (Publisher's note) "While thoroughly modern in his scientific approach to art study, Dr. Ross, no less strongly than Kenyon Cox, urges the classic point of view." (School Arts Magazine)

"While interesting and suggestive to art teachers and the professional painter, it has little to offer beginners and will not be a satisfactory text because of its narrow presentation."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:334 Ap '13

"The essay is digressive, delightful, and scholarly."

+ Ind 74:473 F 27 '13 100w

"The classical atmosphere of Mr. Ross's book is refreshing. The introduction is especially rich in wisdom and deserves to be read by every artist and art student in the country, as well as by the collector and amateur. We cannot subscribe to all the statements in this book, for a great many of them depend upon personal taste, but it must be admitted that the precepts given are those of the old masters."

+ — Nation 96:426 Ap 24 '13 1100w

"A singularly important contribution to the literature of art teaching. It is a book for serious study and for reference." J. H.

+ School Arts Magazine 12:498 Mr '13 430w

ROSS, EDWARD HALFORD. Reduction of domestic flies. il *$1.50 Lippincott 13-21876

In this book the author presents "an earnest statement of the problem of the house fly in relation to filth and infections, with many practical suggestions for its solution. He would reduce the number of flies by doing away with their breeding places. Citing the parallel sanitary work with mosquitoes in relation to malaria and yellow fever, the author discusses the importance of domestic flies. No exact figures are given to show the damage done by them but many of the worst cases, notably those of typhoid in the Boer and Spanish-American wars, are marshalled in convincing manner, and emphasis is directed toward illustrating the relation of flies to infantile enteritis."—Survey

ROSS, EDWARD HALFORD—Continued.

"An English book, perhaps not as valuable in the United States as Howard's 'The house fly, disease carrier.'"

+ — A L A Bkl 10:108 N '13

"The author makes out a very strong case in the interests of public health."

+ Ath 1913:1:525 My 10 70w

"Will be of great assistance in the world-wide campaign against that disgusting and dangerous pest."

+ Engin N 70:580 S 18 '13 220w

+ N Y Sun p4 My 17 '13 100w

"We very strongly commend his book to all who have any power to assist in the admirable object which it inculcates."

+ Spec 111:250 Ag 16 '13 430w

"The book is full of good advice and practical suggestions, especially along the line of organization of anti-fly campaigns and the making of maps of fly-breeding places. With so much good material, the pity is that the author did not defer publication until after he had tried the reduction of flies in at least one city. As it is the book will do much to discourage fly-fighting." Jean Dawson.

+ — Survey 30:647 Ag 23 '13 570w

ROSS, MRS. JANET ANNE (DUFF-GORDON), and ERICHSEN, NELLY. Story of Lucca.

il $1.75 Dutton 12-29311

"This is the second volume of the 'Mediaeval towns' series which has appeared under the joint authorship of Mrs. Janet Ross and Miss Nelly Erichsen. Here, as in 'The story of Pisa,' the former is responsible for the historical chapters, the latter for the description of the city and its artistic treasures."—Nation

+ A L A Bkl 10:62 O '13

"Within the limits the authors set themselves, this unpretentious little book is excellent."

+ Ath 1913:1:155 F 8 500w

"Nothing better than Miss Erichsen's portion of the book is to be found in all the series. Mrs. Ross's chapters, on the contrary, fall below the rather low standard of historical narrative which she set herself in 'The story of Pisa.' They can be of no conceivable value to the serious student; they may, perhaps, amuse the tourist."

+ — Nation 96:447 My 1 '13 150w

"Within the limited compass of a short review it is not possible to do justice to so full a record as this of all the intricate achievements in war, politics, art, and industry of this little republic."

+ Spec 110:23 Ja 4 '13 500w

ROSS, JOHN ELLIOT. Consumers and wage-earners. $1 (4c) Devin-Adair co. 12-24605

That the author has any affiliation with the National consumer's league is not stated, but his book is a plea for such reform as the league advocates and a vindication of the principles for which it stands. To the book he gives a sub-title, The ethics of buying cheap, and it is the individual buyer, who buys inconsiderately, regardless of conditions of production, whom he holds responsible for much of the wretchedness of the producing class. His chapters are: The point at issue; Obligations of the consuming class; What is a just employer; Theory of industrial organization; Industrial conditions: wages; Industrial conditions: health; Industrial conditions: morals; What should the individual consumer do?

"Dr. Ross has answered adequately and convincingly the question so often asked to-day about the responsibility of the consumer for the inhumane treatment of the producer. His calm temper and scientific method provoke the wish that this his first effort in the field of industrial justice may be followed by many others."

+ Cath World 96:676 F '13 550w

"The author's statement of the case is concise, logical and interesting. The chief criticism to be offered is that the author's theory savors strongly of the iron law and the Marxian theory of value."

+ — J Pol Econ 21:672 Jl '13 300w

ROWBOTHAM, FRANCIS JAMESON. Story—lives of our great artists. il $1.35 Stokes (Eng ed W12-139)

This volume deals with the following English painters: Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney, Morland, Turner, Constable, Landseer and Watts. The author "presents a very good survey of the career of each of these men and a brief critical estimate of his work. His book is illustrated with reproductions of pictures by the artists about whom he writes." (N Y Times)

"There is no more fascinating volume than Rowbotham's 'Story lives of our great artists.' Each biography is carefully developed and presents a most graphic canvas of the social atmosphere surrounding the individual men." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1365 D 12 '12 80w

+ Lit D 45:1083 D 7 '12 50w

"Here is a fluent and sufficiently agreeable compilation of an anecdotal sort. Why Landseer is in and Hogarth, surely the greatest of British artists, out, does not appear. It is a book for such as must take their art plentifully sugar-coated with obvious human interest."

+ — Nation 95:598 D 19 '12 70w

+ N Y Times 17:767 D 8 '12 70w

ROWLAND, ELEANOR HARRIS. Significance of art. $1 Houghton 13-20789

"The chapters that make up this book, with the sub-title 'Studies in analytical esthetics,' make no pretense of covering thoroughly the field of the fine arts. They make a strong plea, however, for the importance of training eye and ear through familiarity with the masterpieces of sculpture, painting, and music, in order to be able to recognize the beauty, picturesqueness, and dramatic situations of daily life."—Outlook

"Thoughtful persons will find much in these studies to delight as we'll as instruct."

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 28 '13 280w

"Her book is clear, unpretentious, and stimulating. Occasionally her law of material drives her to rather untenable propositions."

+ — Nation 97:520 N 27 '13 250w

"Miss Rowland not only shows appreciation of the limits and possibilities of her subject, but stimulates her reader to more fructifying thought concerning aspects of it usually neglected."

+ — N Y Times 18:613 N 9 '13 400w

"The final chapter, 'Art and nature,' is particularly interesting, and ought to be helpful for those who may be inclined to oppose nature to art."

+ Outlook 105:712 N 29 '13 220w

+ R of Rs 48:637 N '13 50w

ROYCE, JOSIAH. Problem of Christianity. 2v $3.50 (2½c) Macmillan 13-10606

The contents of these volumes comprise two series of lectures, delivered at the Lowell institute in Boston, and at Manchester college, Oxford. Volume 1 treats of The Christian doctrine of life; volume 2 of The real world and Christian ideas. They are related to the author's previous works, "The philosophy of loyalty" and "The sources of religious insight," for in them he applies the principles of his philosophy of loyalty to the special case of Christianity. "The depth and vitality of the ideal of loyalty," says the author, "have become better known to me as I have gone on with my work. Each of my efforts to express what I have found in the course of my study of what loyalty means has contained as I believe, some new results."

Reviewed by G. B. Smith.

+ — Am J Theol 17:631 O '13 3400w

A L A Bkl 10:25 S '13

"Were theology written after the manner of Prof. Royce, it would be read in greater measure. If all philosophers in discussing theology . . . showed the spirit of Prof. Royce's last two chapters, much less would be heard of conflict between sister sciences. It is in no carping spirit that we briefly mark some places where it is possible or desirable to part company with the author. His emphasis on loyalty is justifiable and welcome, it is at the root of Christian doctrines; but we fear that he places on it too heavy a superstructure."

+ + — Ath 1913,2:34 Jl 12 1000w

Boston Transcript p23 My 7 '13 350w

"But no matter how much we may disagree with Professor Royce's treatment of some of the Christian ideas, we unstintedly express our appreciation of his fresh and original approach to Christianity, his fine and reverent spirit, his noble vision of the universal beloved community, his identification of his philosophy of loyalty with the Christianity of the Pauline churches, this frank admission that his philosophy finds its source of inspiration in Christianity; and the new light he casts upon some of the ancient Christian doctrines. No one who is interested in the higher life of men, be he scientist, philosopher or theologian, can afford to neglect this book." F. W. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p20 S 10 '13 1500w

"Professor Royce has written an important book." W. E. Campbell.

+ — Cath World 98:364 D '13 2550w

"We commend these volumes to scholars and students without reserve."

+ Educ R 46:311 O '13 80w

"Seldom have I read a book of modern philosophy so profoundly suggestive, so stimulating, so kindled with fine ethical fire. What matters it that here and there one's private notions get a jostle, if all the time he walks in company with a thinker whose thoughts are stirring the solemn depths of life? Professor Royce is such a thinker. Whatever he touches he illuminates; his finger-tips are organs of light. All things lovely and of good report are the stronger for his book. Its message of 'Loyalty' is needed; it is the answering challenge of a noble mind to all that is most menacing in the disorders of the present age." L. P. Jacks.

+ — Hibbert J 12:215 O '13 2900w

"The present work is less impressively solid than the author's 'World and Individual.' The ideas are fewer, and there is less ground for the attitude of leisurely suspense. The work is none the less a notable contribution to the interpretation of Christian ideas. The style is perhaps too stately, but masterly from the standpoint of clearness of exposition and often eloquent. And it must be said that the main purpose has been achieved."

+ Nation 97:77 Jl 24 '13 950w

"Prof. Royce has contributed largely to the treasures of religious thought. If he comes bringing not peace but a sword the blade of his trenchant weapon shears away a burden and is an Excalibur of faith not hostile to reason."

+ N Y Sun p8 Je 28 '13 1650w

N Y Times 18:677 N 30 '13 270w

+ — No Am 198:282 Ag '13 1900w

+ — Outlook 104:874 Ag 16 '13 120w

RUFFINI, FRANCESCO. Religious liberty; tr. by J. Parker Heyes, with a preface by J. B. Bury. $3.50 Putnam A13-445

"In this monumental work of historical research an Italian scholar traces from its rise in ancient times through its development in modern times to its triumph in the nineteenth century the progress of religious liberty as 'an idea and principle essentially juridical.' . . . The story of the long struggle is followed through all states and all churches in large detail, and with ample recognition of its chief prophets and promoters."—Outlook

A L A Bkl 9:334 Ap '13

"There is abundant evidence in the book that the author knows the history of the period with which he deals, and every page shows that he is a competent historian."

+ Ath 1912, 2:442 O 19 350w

"This book deserves a long and discriminating review. The author is professor of ecclesiastical law in the university of Turin. His learning is prodigious, and it is evident on almost every page. But the inadequacy of translation is apparent in numerous passages where the meaning is left in doubt. Yet upon the whole, the work can be understood, and it will have to be reckoned with by all students of religious liberty whether considered in its historical development or in its abstract conception."

+ — Bib World 41:69 Ja '13 550w

"A scholarly, impartial and complete history of the rise and development of religious liberty in Europe, [which] really deserves more extended treatment than can be given here."

+ Ind 75:747 S 25 '13 700w

"If Professor Ruffini's volume were nothing more than an account of the endeavors of the protagonists of liberty in the realm of conscience and worship, it would demand recognition. But it has a larger and more practical interest for Americans in its keen criticism of the form which religious toleration has taken upon this continent. As to recent events and present tendencies, one may question Professor Ruffini's facts."

+ — Nation 96:84 Ja 23 '13 700w

"Judging from the fullness and general accuracy of the chapter devoted to the progress of religious liberty in this country, the rest, relating to European countries, may be accepted as equally careful and thorough. Some slips there are."

+ — Outlook 103:48 Ja 4 '13 320w

"A book which should do much to clear people's ideas about the true meaning of the popular and ambiguous phrase 'religious liberty.'"

+ Spec 111:214 Ag 9 '13 800w

RUNKLE, BERTHA BROOKS (MRS. LOUIS H. BASH). Scarlet rider. il $1.35 (1½c) Century 13-11302

A stirring romance of England in the days of George the Third. The scenes of the story are laid at Yarracombe house, an old manor on the Isle of Wight and its charmingly daring heroine is Lettice Yarracombe. The hero is an American naval officer, an escaped prisoner from an English ship who, seeking shelter, is rescued by Lettice who persuades him to don the family livery and pose as a new servant. She believes him to be the "Scarlet rider," a notorious highwayman, and the plot of the story is concerned with the revelation of the personality of the real rider, and with the young American's escape with Lettice, who in the end joins her fortunes with his.

A L A Bkl 10:37 S '13

"A well-constructed and wholly interesting plot and a fascinating tomboy heroine are the chief merits of this tale."

+ — Ath 1913,2:348 O 4 150w

"It takes no special cleverness to discover the Scarlet rider's identity before the book is one-third read, and the only remaining surprise is at the density of the other actors in the story who are phenomenally long in discovering the truth." F. T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 37:667 Ag '13 400w

"Of course the materials are familiar as those of a certain type of novel, but they are handled skilfully enough not to interfere with the reader's interest and enjoyment."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 6 '13 250w

Nation 97:13 Jl 3 '13 370w

"Miss Runkle has handled her plot very well, and has lost no opportunity for introducing romantic incident and perilous adventure, while she has admirably maintained the suspense and the mystery until the end."

+ N Y Times 18:503 S 28 '13 200w

RUNKLE, BERTHA BROOKS—Continued.

"There is adventure and plot in abundance—perhaps overabundance—but the tale has liveliness and romance."

+ Outlook 104:531 J1 5 '13 50w

"As the action of the book takes place within the space of a few days, it is necessarily brisk and unflagging, while the characters are entertaining, filled with real life and play their parts well in the rapid game of hide and seek with the 'Scarlet rider.'"

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 350w

RUPPIN, ARTHUR. Jews of to-day; tr. from the German by Margery Bentwich, with an introd. by Joseph Jacobs. *$1.75 (2c) Holt (Eng ed A13-1621)

The author of this book is an ardent Zionist who looks forward hopefully to the establishment of a Jewish kingdom in Palestine as the only hope for the maintenance of Jewish culture and religion. They cannot remain as they now are, a scattered people, gradually being assimilated into modern European culture, and still "remain Jews in the characteristics they have retained throughout the Christian ages." He regards the Zionist aim of establishing a permanent Jewish population in Palestine with agriculture as a basis and Hebrew as a national language, as difficult but possible.

"Of special interest to Jews, but a readable book for the general public."

+ A L A Bkl 10:108 N '13

"Dr. Ruppín gives us some deeply interesting statistics relating to the Jews. The book has a fair index."

+ Ath 1913:2:29 J1 12 550w

"While the book is not worth much from the standpoint of its economic and political program, it is a valuable addition to the descriptive literature of modern Judaism; and it ought to be placed in public and private libraries wherever there is any interest in the subject."

+ Bib World 42:320 N '13 300w

"No student of economics can fail to find much food for thought in this volume, which, although written from the Jewish standpoint, is fair in its statements and strong in its advocacy of broad culture, whatever may be the results."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ag 2 '13 450w

"Some fears and many prejudices will disappear after a careful reading."

+ Dial 55:152 S 1 '13 530w

"The essay of Dr. Joseph Jacobs prefix to the excellent translation of Margery Bentwich is very illuminating as a guide to the Zionist drift of Dr. Ruppín's comprehensive work."

+ Lit D 47:706 O 13 '13 200w

"One need not share his enthusiasm to admire it, or to be interested in his book."

+ N Y Sun p6 Je 28 '13 3250w

"His book contains, in succinct form, much of the information about Jews which is likely to be sought for by the ordinary reader."

+ N Y Times 18:462 S 7 '13 1800w

+ N Y Times 18:678 N 30 '13 330w

"This book is decidedly worth reading."

+ Outlook 104:1009 Ag 30 '13 230w

"A scholarly discussion."

+ R of Rs 48:379 S '13 80w

Spec 111:103 J1 19 '13 200w

RUSSELL, ARCHIBALD GEORGE BLOME-FIELD. Engravings of William Blake. il *$7.50 Houghton (Eng ed 13-1941)

In a critical introduction, Mr. Russell discusses the life, work and method of work of Blake. This is followed by a catalog divided into four classes: "(1) prints designed and engraved by Blake; (2) prints designed but not engraved by him; (3) prints engraved but not designed by him; and (4) prints signed by engravers, but believed to be Blake's work, and attributed work regarded as doubtful by the author." (Ath) The illustrations are thirty-two reproductions from the artist.

"This book should become a standard work on its subject."

+ Ath 1913:1:105 Ja 25 400w

"An important contribution to the literature of Blake's art." W. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 4 '13 1150w

+ Dial 54:469 Je 1 '13 270w

"The present carefully compiled and annotated catalogue, with its full information regarding variety of states and the whereabouts of original drawings and studies, will be indispensable to the Blake collector."

+ Nation 96:400 Ap 17 '13 450w

+ N Y Times 18:248 Ap 27 '13 230w

"The particular value of the present volume, however, lies, as may be expected, in the direction of a better understanding of Blake's engravings, and it should be, therefore, of particular interest to all engravers."

+ Outlook 103:780 Ap 5 '13 70w

"It is much more; it is a catalogue made by one not only scholarly and accurate but most happily sympathetic."

+ Sat R 115:624 My 17 '13 400w

RUSSELL, GEORGE WILLIAM (A. E., pseud.). Co-operation and nationality. *50c (1½c) Norman, Remington & Co. (Eng ed 12-9383)

The purpose of this book is "to set forth the problem of rural life in Ireland, to show how the conditions of that life have come to be what they are, and to point out the need of two things: first, agricultural co-operation; and second, the establishment of social institutions that shall make life worth while in the rural districts of Ireland." (Am J Soc) The following are the chapter headings: The problem of rural life; Past and present conditions; Need for an agricultural revolution; The rise of agricultural co-operation; Building up a new social order; Town and country; Organized communities and political life; The creation of citizens; Women on the land; Union of men and women workers; Farmers and the state; Ideals of the new rural society; Life finding its level.

"The reading of this little book by every farmer in the country and every rural economist would be very suggestive and helpful." J. L. Gillin.

+ Am J Soc 18:578 Ja '13 320w

"The author has wished, he says, to show in this book that the co-operative movement is a sincere attempt to solve some Irish and some human problems; and it is only those who think in terms of mean political strategy who will refuse to believe him." J. M. Hone.

+ Sat R 113:203 F 17 '12 1400w

RUSSELL, GEORGE WILLIAM ERSKINE. Half-lengths. *$2.50 Duffield

(Eng ed 13-13930)

A group of miscellaneous papers contributed originally to the "Manchester guardian." "For the most part they are sketches or portraits of prominent men and women in England during the last half-century, although there are a number of other papers of the sort to be most accurately described as philosophies of life upon such subjects as the relations of fathers and sons, of mothers and sons, etc., and two particularly appealing papers upon the spirit of Oxford and Cambridge. Of more robust and tangible material . . . is the opening paper, entitled 'Sense and sensibility,' which consists of a sharply etched and in some ways decidedly frank study of Cardinal Newman and Cardinal Manning, both separately and in their relations to one another." (Springfield Republican)

+ A L A Bkl 10:149 D '13

"It is but seldom that Mr. Russell rises above superior commonplace, and such merits as his essays possess are due to the aptness of their anecdotes."

+ — Ath 1913,1:301 Mr 15 630w

"Perhaps the most interesting portion of Mr. Russell's book is the impression he gives of Cambridge from an Oxford man's point of view. Mr. Russell's readers will find his entire collection of retrospective papers in every way agreeable. They are the product of a life filled with a continuously pleasurable contact with men and events." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p18 J1 23 '13 950w

"All who love English life and follow the changes of English politics and literature will read with delight this collection of sketches, desultory but discordant elements in a captivating series."

+ Lit D 47:642 O 11 '13 330w

+ Nation 97:413 O 30 '13 530w

N Y Times 18:457 S 7 '13 330w

"It is a delightful, invigorating work, filled with politics, personality, and history; its literary style shows the hand that from long experience knows no effort."

+ R of Rs 48:505 O '13 150w

"Mr. Russell writes a style lucid, rapid, and polite, well suited to the point of view from which he comments on human nature and affairs, which is that of a man of the world who is at the same time an ardent churchman, and that of a Whig."

+ Spec 110:sup1090 Je 28 '13 650w

"There is a mature and mellow quality to the collection of varied sketches."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 7 '13 650w

RUSSELL, JOHN EDWARD. First course in philosophy. $1.50 (1½c) Holt 13-8369

The author has prepared this book to meet the special needs of students who are "young in philosophy," but he hopes that it will prove of service to workers in other fields who "desire to know something of those problems of the world and our human life with which philosophers are occupied." He says further: "I have aimed to encourage the student to philosophize for himself, rather than merely to appropriate the product of other men's thinking. With this purpose in view, I have let the representatives of various philosophical theories advocate and defend their respective doctrines; and for the most part, have refrained from closing the debate." (Preface) Part 1 treats of The problem of reality; part 2, Epistemology; part 3, The problem of conduct.

"A text which will be of service not only to the beginner in philosophy, but to students whose points of departure lie in other fields."

+ Bib World 42:61 J1 '13 170w

"While its style is not particularly attractive, its substance and arrangement are both admirable."

+ — Educ R 46:311 O '13 100w

"Simple and clear in style, well adapted to provoke the interest and the best thought of the beginner in philosophy without confusing or unduly perplexing him."

+ Ind 75:338 Ag 7 '13 100w

RUTHERFORD, ERNEST. Radioactive substances and their radiations. il *$4.50 Putnam 13-8310

This volume is in reality a new edition of the author's 'Radioactive transformations' published in 1906, but so revised that it becomes practically a new book in which "we have all that has been discovered, and all that has been theorised, about radioactive substances since Becquerel, after the discovery of the Röntgen X-rays in 1895, found that a uranium salt emitted a type of radiation capable of penetrating through a considerable thickness of opaque matter." (Sat R)

"The standard work on the subject. Up-to-date, comprehensive, authoritative and suggestive. Supersedes 'Radioactive substances, their properties and behavior.'"

+ A L A Bkl 10:63 O '13 *

Reviewed by R. A. Millikan.

+ Astrophys J 38:206 S '13 470w

"It is seldom that the pioneer of a new section in science finds so little to unsay or alter, and the fact speaks volumes for the soundness and justness of Prof. Rutherford's judgment. Prof. Rutherford's book is written and produced with the care and pains which he has taught us to associate with his work."

+ — Ath 1912,2:732 D 14 950w

Boston Transcript p12 Ap 29 '13 180w

"In this subject, as in all others which have arrived at any maturity, the labour of keeping abreast of the literature becomes increasingly heavy, and the value of a complete and authoritative treatise up to date proportionately great. Even more gratitude will be felt to the author by workers in this field for the present work than for its predecessors." R. J. Strutt.

+ Nature 91:28 Mr 13 '13 750w

"The book is entirely one for trained chemists and physicists; and even on a subject which might offer an opportunity to popular exposition, the waters at various baths, and the radio-activity of the earth and atmosphere, it is severely technical."

+ Sat R 115:214 F 15 '13 200w

"This book will undoubtedly be the standard work on radioactivity for the next five or six years at least." R. A. Millikan.

+ Science ns38:29 J1 4 '13 750w

Spec 111:423 S 20 '13 1100w

RYAN, MRS. MARAH ELLIS (MARTIN). Woman of the twilight. il *$1.35 (1½c) McClurg 13-9142

The story opens in the Mexican village in southern California in which McLane Sargent first saw the woman who inspired the story which made him famous and which he called, symbolically, "The woman of the twilight." The scene shifts to the Atlantic coast and to fashionable New York. Here some years later, Sargent meets Monica Wayne, but does not recognize her as "La Querida" the little wild girl of his Mexican experience. In the working out of events, the plot of his story is in some measure repeated in his own life; Monica passes out of his world, becoming to him another "Woman of the twilight."

"This new story is rather more logical than the majority of its class. Also it is written with dignity; there is no cheap sensationalism and no attempt to pander to depraved tastes by those 'almost improprieties' which the author through the mouth of one of her minor characters so justly ridicules. Several of the minor characters are cleverly drawn . . . but they are lingered over far more than their relative importance warrants, and to this the book's faults of construction are partly due. The author's talent deserves a far more careful cultivation than she has apparently seen fit to bestow upon it."

+ — N Y Times 18:340 Je 8 '13 450w

S

SABIN, EDWIN LEGRAND. On the plains with Custer. il *$1.25 (2c) Lippincott 13-21063

The story of Custer's daring campaigns and disastrous last charge has been told many times. It is told here in a manner that will interest boys, for a boy is made the hero of the story. Ned Fletcher, a young lad who has been captured by the Indians, is rescued by Custer himself, and as bugler, serves in the famous "fighting seventh cavalry."

Reviewed by M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:446 D '13 60w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

SABIN, EDWIN LEGRAND—Continued

"This stimulating story is far ahead of the usual run of tales of the plains and, because of its literary quality and scholarship, will impress the scenes strongly upon the memory of boy readers."

+ + Ind 76:359 N 20 '13 90w

N Y Sun p5 N 8 '13 40w

"A first-class, good Indian story."

+ N Y Times 18:615 N 9 '13 60w

SABIN, EDWIN LEGRAND. Treasure mountain. il $1.50 (2½c) Crowell 13-18734

This story is an addition to a well-known series. Chet and Phil, the "Bar B" boys, are old friends. In this story the two leave the ranch to go up into the mountains on a prospecting expedition.

"The boy who wants to know about prospecting and mining will want this book," M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:317 N '13 80w

Ind 76:357 N 20 '13 40w

SAGER, JULIET GILMAN. Anne, actress. 11 *$1.25 (1½c) Stokes 13-20201

A moving story of stage life. Anne Houghton, after many years of wearying work as a stock actress, is given her chance to star. Thru all the years of hard striving there has been a little daughter out in California for whom she has been working, looking forward to the time when they two could be together. Now at this moment of promised triumph the daughter—a very grown up daughter she proves to be—comes to New York, obtains a small part in her mother's play and, by a trick, snatches success away from her. In the background all the time there is a country doctor, loyal and devoted to Anne, who in the end wins her away from the petty failures and successes of her mimic world.

"The first part of the book . . . is sincere and convincing. It is only when the 'situation' around which the story is built comes that it becomes unreal and artificial." H. Dick.

+ + Bookm 38:304 N '13 500w

"The story as a whole, is fairly plausible. One structural melodramatic fault cannot deprive the story of its remarkable faithfulness to the facts of stage life. In many of its details it is almost photographic in its closeness to the reality of conditions in the theatre."

+ + Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 300w

"Her story will be wholesome for stage-struck girls. Miss Sager has not written a homily, however, but the dramatic story of an actress, who was at the same time a mother, and who rose grandly to meet the call of a great renunciation."

+ N Y Times 18:577 O 26 '13 300w

SAINT-GAUDENS, AUGUSTUS. Reminiscences of Augustus Saint-Gaudens; ed. and amplified by Homer Saint-Gaudens. 2v il $7 (4c) Century 13-22528

This beautiful two-volume work is both biography and autobiography. While convalescent after an illness in 1906, Augustus Saint-Gaudens was urged to dictate the story of his life, and as a means of passing tedious hours, he took up the task. This dictated manuscript is presented here with little or no revision, and to it Homer Saint-Gaudens, the son, has added supplementary material sufficient to round out a complete biography. These two portions of the text are set in different type that the reader may avoid confusion, both writers having used the first person. The book is a record of work and of friendship. The story of the creation of those great works of art, the Shaw memorial, the Sherman statue, and the figure in the Rock Creek cemetery, is almost of secondary interest in comparison with the record of the sculptor's friendships with Stevenson and others.

"Inspiring and interesting."

+ A L A Bkl 10:149 D '13

"Homer Saint-Gaudens has united and amplified the precious fragments . . . and his familiarity with his subject, his sympathy and frank admiration for his father's achievements, make this work a delightfully intimate and illuminating résumé of an exceptional life. It is something that was needed, and it is an occasion for gratitude that the task fell to hands so competent." Lorado Taft.

+ + Dial 55:469 D 1 '13 3750w

"It is seldom that one meets with a book so thoroly healthful and happy as this life of Augustus Saint-Gaudens. A word should be said for the excellent bookmaking. Tho large, the volumes are light and easily held; the paper is most pleasant to touch, and the types give a clear and open page that invites the reader. The illustrations from Mr. Saint-Gaudens' work are many and what one would desire, and the series portraits of the sculptor are most welcome."

+ + Ind 76:456 D 4 '13 750w

"The artistic personality of Saint-Gaudens remains to be elucidated. Naturally, this memoir, being a personal memorial, makes such attempt. It is interesting throughout, and will doubtless be satisfactory to those unplagued by the critic's curiosity as to the way of the genius 'qua' artist."

+ + Nation 97:574 D 11 '13 850w

"These two beautiful volumes are full of frank and winning revelations of personality."

+ N Y Times 18:673 N 30 '13 360w

"Few American biographies have the interest and importance of the autobiography of a great sculptor. Mr. Homer Saint-Gaudens has edited his father's memoirs with admirable taste and skill."

+ Outlook 105:810 D 13 '13 1150w

+ R of Rs 48:634 N '13 40w

SAINTSBURY, GEORGE EDWARD BATE-
10 MAN. English novel. *$1.50 Dutton 13-35815

In this volume of the "Channels of English literature" series the author traces the development of the novel from its beginnings in Malory to its culmination in the novelists of the mid-Victorian era. "Of reading for the task undertaken Professor Saintsbury, as he himself would tell us if it were not otherwise abundantly evident, has a mighty sufficiency. One is sure that no obscure novel of the eighteenth century is named which the critic has not read and noted." (Nation) "His insistence on the value of romance is at the root of the author's analysis of the history of the English novel." (Ath)

"Stimulating and interesting even to those who may not agree with the personal opinions expressed."

+ A L A Bkl 10:108 N '13

"Rarely indeed has a more illuminating and pleasant textbook of literature been offered to the public."

+ Ath 1913,2:221 S 6 1150w

"We would almost rather read Mr. Saintsbury than the authors he writes about; and in a good many cases we admit that is what we have done. There is only one flaw in his panoply. He seems to have had little metaphysical training,—at least, like Arnold himself, he scorns philosophy and bids it begone from the field of criticism where innate and educated taste is the only guide and director." C: L. Moore.

+ + Dial 55:253 O 1 '13 1950w

"With all the author's conclusions the reader may not agree, but all will allow that they are fresh, pungent and eloquently stated."

+ Lit D 47:706 O 18 '13 180w

"On the whole, though Professor Saintsbury's attitude is generally right towards the novelists passed in review, the book contains little that is memorable and quite misses the deeper currents of life and thought of which fiction is, so to speak, the surface indication."

+ Nation 97:267 S 18 '13 450w

"Aside from the authority of his great learning, which is one of its results, one is particularly grateful, in reading the criticism of Prof. Saintsbury, for the immense gusto of his attitude toward literature. This new book on the English novel possesses all his well-known qualities, and, apart from its being an original exploration and exposition of its subject which probably no other living critic could have made, it has the further quality of being uncommonly attractive reading. Doubtless, Prof. Saintsbury's style has its faults. It was a critical fashion a short time ago, to make much of them. Personally, I should be glad if the parentheses were not so continually overworked." R: Le Gallienne.

+ N Y Times 18:465 S 14 '13 2500w

"A wonderfully interesting and companionable book."

+ N Y Times 18:666 N 30 '13 280w

"A delightful and discursive commentary."

+ R of Rs 48:504 O '13 250w

"This is a book worth keeping. It can warm one. But Mr. Saintsbury makes too much of the stories of Blackmore, amiable stories certainly, fresh and wholesome and worthy, but not exactly great; and, alas! he makes one uncomfortable when he turns to George Eliot or to Thomas Hardy. Clearly they are not in his line at all."

+ Sat R 116:307 S 6 '13 300w

"It is in itself a book we may thoroughly enjoy and must cheerfully praise; it reveals courage, sympathy, insight, and scholarship. We find it difficult to imagine that the work could have been done with more skill or more charm."

+ Spec 111:sup796 N 15 '13 850w

SAKOLSKI, AARON MORTON. American railroad economics. *$1.25 (2c) Macmillan
13-21315

The author says in his preface that the subject treated in this work has not hitherto been given the attention and critical analysis commensurate with its importance. The purpose of the work, he says, "is a critical examination of facts and figures derived from railroad reports and other publications with a view to assisting in the correct judgment of railroad activities and operating results." Contents: Railroad rates; Railroad securities; Railroad systems of the United States; Economics of railroad construction; Physical factors in economic operation; Traffic statistics; Interstate commerce commission's system of railroad accounts; The income account; Net income and its distribution; The general balance sheet; Railroad capitalization.

+ Boston Transcript p10 N 24 '13 800w

"An admirable text-book. The treatise will prove of value to the student, and being written largely from the viewpoint of the financial expert, it will afford assistance to the investor. The author has drawn freely on his experience as an investment analyst, and his illustrations of principles by concrete cases are well chosen and effective."

+ Engin Rec 68:560 N 15 '13 700w

SALE, MRS. EDITH TUNIS. Old time belles and cavaliers. il *$5 Lippincott 12-26765

A collection of biographical sketches, each containing "stories of womanly heroism and manly bravery during the days of the [American] revolution and early days of the republic." (Lit D) Pocahontas, Mary Ball Washington, Martha Dandridge Washington, Alice De Lancey, Peggy Chew, Peggy Shippen, Dolly Payne, Theodosia Burr, Brian Fairfax, Ann Carmichael, Robert Carter, William Byrd and Count Rumford are the names one notices first in the list of the thirty dealt with. The illustrations are reproduced from celebrated portraits by Gainsborough, Gilbert, Stuart, Copley, Sully, Peale and from rare engravings.

"A pleasant style and a disposition to pass with no unnecessary delay from one subject to the next distinguish Mrs. Sale's handsome volume. The book forms a sort of national portrait gallery,—or one room, of peculiar interest, in such a gallery."

+ Dial 53: 501 D 16 '12 270w

"A book of more than local interest."

+ Ind 73: 1317 D 5 '12 10w

"A book full of valuable historical information, beautifully bound and combining a work of art with real worth. The title is sufficiently descriptive of its contents but it gives no adequate idea of the charm of its narrative nor the wonderfully interesting reproductions of the portraits of these belles and cavaliers by famous painters."

+ Lit D 45: 1141 D 14 '12 200w

N Y Times 18:106 Mr 2 '13 70w

"A capital book of very high class gossip."

+ Outlook 102: 735 N 30 '12 40w

SALISBURY, ROLLIN D.; BARROWS, HARRIS LAN HARLAND; and TOWER, WALTER SHELDON. Elements of geography. (American science ser.) il *$1.50 (1c) Holt
12-18744

"This book represents the reaction against the merely physiographic study of geography, and builds upon a physiographic basis a large amount of more general geographic instruction." (Educ R) "After a short general discussion of the earth as a planet, and of its main features, we find a proper importance awarded to climate and weather. . . . After these the authors deal with the oceans, then the 'materials of the land' (soils, minerals, etc.) and lastly land-forms, with the consideration of the forces which shape them, and their influence on human conditions and on life generally." (Nature)

A L A Bkl 9:334 Ap '13 ✦

Educ R 44:531 D '12 50w

Ind 75:345 Ag 7 '13 40w

Nation 97:129 Ag 7 '13 100w

"The present volume forms an interesting study, possessing many virtues and certain faults. A tendency observed in other American textbooks is also to be noticed in this—that of introducing details which can scarcely be considered to have any relation with geography, even following the widest connotation of that term. Many both of the diagrams and of the views are on too small a scale to fulfil their purposes properly."

+ Nature 90:643 F 13 '13 330w

"The book is in no sense a compilation of encyclopedic knowledge. But it is truly a contribution to the advancement of scientific geography. It is an epoch-making text marking the end of the old pure physiography as now taught in most schools, and the establishment of geography as a distinct and definite science. Its influence in the next decade will be far-reaching."

+ School R 21:151 F '13 470w

SALISBURY, ROLLIN D.; BARROWS, HARRIS LAN HARLAND; and TOWER, WALTER SHELDON. Modern geography for high schools. (Am. science ser.) il *$1.25 Holt
13-3259

A book designed for use in a course in general geography in high schools. "It is mainly concerned with human relations to the earth's surface. But the groundwork of physical conditions is well laid. No attempt is made to describe the continents or the oceans, and this duty is probably left to the well-trained teacher and his wall-maps. Features met with on the earth are referred to their causes, and their effect on human enterprise is always kept in view." (Nature)

A L A Bkl 10:26 S '13 ✦

Ind 75:345 Ag 7 '13 40w

"The book provides the kind of geography which every citizen should understand, whether he is developing a local industry or extending the borders of an empire." G. A. J. C.

SALISBURY, R. D., and others—Continued.
 + Nature 91:374 Je 12 '13 250w

SALMON, ARTHUR L. Man and the woman: 8 chapters on human life. *75c (3c) Forbes 13-9572

The book is made up of chapters on: The coming of love; Love or passion; The motives of marriage; Ideals of marriage, and like topics. The author "does not bother himself with recent manifestations of feminine nature nor stop to consider whether or not there is such a thing as antagonism between the sexes—omissions that would seem to brand him as hopelessly old fashioned. And, in a way, that is what he is, for he finds little or nothing in the relations between the sexes that is not or could not be made tender and lovely and mutually helpful and enobling." (N Y Times)

"Truth to tell, the treatment is commonplace. The author's sincerity is not to be doubted but his vision is neither broad nor clear. Nobody will be hurt by reading it, however, and some may receive a gentle stimulation."

+ Chaut 71:61 Je 21 '13 120w

"There is more manly vigor in the books the women write."

— N Y Sun p4 My 17 '13 30w

"A sane little book, fine and sweet in its spirit and noble in its ideals, while it holds to the very practical basis of asking no more of either men or women than actual observation proves them able to do."

+ N Y Times 18:386 J1 6 '13 200w

SANDARS, MARY FRANCES. Princess and queen of England; life of Mary II. il *$4 Duffield

"In devoting this somewhat bulky volume to the life of Mary II, daughter of James II and Consort of William of Orange, the author attempts to present that somewhat unhappy queen in a more sympathetic light than her former biographers have done. In this task she has been considerably assisted by securing access to what she claims to be completely fresh material, in the shape of letters written by Mary, when Princess of Orange, to her friend, Lady Bathurst, and portions of the former's private diary, which was never intended for the public eye."—Ath

"The book suffers somewhat from discursiveness, for which the author's pleasant and facile style largely makes amends."

+ Ath 1913.1:333 Mr 22 170w

"This book is the first long life of Mary to be attempted, and Miss Sandars is able to increase its value and interest by the inclusion of many letters and portions of her private memoirs, as well as letters written to her friend Lady Bathurst, all of which have come to light since the publication of Miss Strickland's volume, the only other biography of Mary II. Miss Sandars gives us many charming pictures of the womanly side of Mary and of her love for her sister and her friends." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '13 1050w

"A notable book which is certain to be much read."

+ Lit D 46:1385 Je 21 '13 1150w

"The fullest and best life of Queen Mary in English."

+ Nation 97:411 O 30 '13 300w

"It does not compare favorably with Miss Strickland's work in literary skill, or in the ability to marshal historical data into picturesque and interesting narrative. Miss Sandars, on the other hand, is far more judicious in temperament and endeavors to treat impartially and with justice all the actors in the drama of Mary's life. Mary's position when she and William ascended the English throne was one of peculiar difficulty, and Miss Sandars deserves praise for the care with which she has considered all sides of the matter."

+ N Y Times 18:346 Je 8 '13 800w

"It is not exhausting, however, for the biographer, Mary F. Sandars, has known how to save her stout volume from that criticism, even though we may wish that the text here and there had been more lively."

+ Outlook 104:307 Je 7 '13 50w

"Miss Sandars' biography is straightforward and fairly readable, but it is a great pity that she has not made it much better. A first-rate piece of work on Queen Mary would be a real addition to historical literature. The style, however, is occasionally very slovenly. Nor is the scholarship satisfactory."

+ Sat R 116:429 O 4 '13 1600w

"We hope that a new edition of her book may make the succession of events a little clearer. If we cannot quite follow Miss Sandars in her admiration for Mary II as a woman, it is a different matter when we look at her as a queen."

+ Spec 110:383 My 24 '13 1400w

SANDERSON, EZRA DWIGHT, and JACKSON, C. F. Elementary entomology. il *$2 (2½c) Ginn 12-18435

"In this work the authors have provided a text-book for beginners undertaking a course of elementary entomology. The book is divided into three sections, the structure and growth of insects, descriptions of species typical of the orders, and a section containing a series of laboratory exercises, together with a key to the orders and information concerning the apparatus and methods employed in collecting and preserving."—Nature

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 20 '13 170w

"We have rarely seen a work in which so large an amount of information is compressed into so small a space, and the text is well and profusely illustrated. Such errors as we have found are but few, and detract little from the general usefulness of the work."

+ Nature 90:489 Ja 2 '13 280w

"[Several parts of the book] show evidence of hasty and careless work. The laboratory exercises are carefully arranged, are well written and apparently have been tried out with elementary classes. These chapters form the most satisfactory part of the work. The key to the families of diptera is written by an eminent authority in that group and will doubtless prove one of the most valuable parts of the book. Unfortunately some of the smaller families are omitted. When properly revised, it will make a welcome addition to the rapidly growing list of entomological texts." C. R. Crosby.

+ Science ns37:220 F 7 '13 3150w

"A most attractive and useful textbook."
 + Springfield Republican p5 O 24 '12 170w

SAN FRANCISCO relief survey. il $3.50 (2½c) Survey associates 13-9196

This volume presents a report on the organization and methods of relief used after the earthquake and fire of 1906. It is compiled from the individual reports of six expert investigators: Charles J. O'Connor; Francis H. McLean; Helen Swett Artieda; James Marvin Motley; Jessica Peixotto; Mary Roberts Coolidge, and their survey and summary of the work done should aid other social workers who may be called on in emergencies to solve similar problems. The report is presented in six parts as follows: Organizing the force and emergency methods; Rehabilitation; Business rehabilitation; Housing rehabilitation; Relief work of the Associated charities; The residuum of relief.

"Outside of its interesting sociological data and its obvious practical value, the study is significant in demonstrating the modern viewpoint and way of approach in regard to problems of relief." E. L. Talbert.

+ Am J Soc 19:398 N '13 470w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

A L A Bkl 10:26 S '13

Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 370w

Engln Rec 68:25 Jl 5 '13 130w

Ind 74:1301 Je 5 '13 70w

"Will prove of great interest to the general public."

+ N Y Sun p5 Ap 26 '13 80w

"In addition to being an entertaining book it has a distinct practical value."

+ N Y Times 18:305 My 18 '13 200w

Reviewed by J. F. Moors.

+ Survey 30:435 Je 28 '13 1300w

SANTAYANA, GEORGE. Winds of doctrine: studies in contemporary opinion. *$1.75
Scribner 13-25357

The essays that make up the contents of this volume are: The intellectual temper of the age; Modernism and Christianity; The philosophy of M. Henri Bergson; The philosophy of Mr. Bertrand Russell; Shelley, or the poetic value of revolutionary principles; and The genteel tradition in American philosophy.

"Brilliant, original essay written by a philosopher who has the poet's vision and power of expression and uses both in revealing and sharply criticizing tendencies in modern thought."

+ A L A Bkl 10:63 O '13

"This downright manner and robust sense make the book fresh and lively almost frolicsome in parts. But it should be taken seriously, for its high spirits are the natural result of that feeling of enhanced power which accompanies the exercise of keen critical faculties."

+ Ath 1913,1:353 Mr 29 650w

"This new book of his should attract the attention of thinking Catholics, for in a manner especially detached and impartial he reviews the various phases of religious and philosophical opinion just now popular in the English-speaking world."

+ Cath World 97:534 Jl '13 750w

"Several religious problems are discussed, but somewhat slightly and contemptuously. The essay on Shelley seems to me the best in the book." G. D. Hicks.

+ — Hibbert J 11:655 Ap '13 280w

+ — Nation 96:574 Je 5 '13 1250w

"The essays are notable for their vigor and directness, and also for their scholarly and brilliant style."

+ N Y Times 18:291 My 11 '13 100w

"It is critical on every page and extraordinarily interesting."

+ N Y Times 18:325 Je 1 '13 900w

N Y Times 18:677 N 30 '13 320w

"Independence of standpoint and a literary style of an excellence rare among philosophers are the qualities which have given Professor Santayana's works so many admiring readers. The present collection of essays does not fall below his usual level of excellence."

+ Spec 110:365 Mr 1 '13 280w

"Brilliant volume."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 50w

SARGENT, FREDERICK LEROY. Plants and their uses. Il *$1.25 Holt 13-3252

"The main purpose of the book is to show some of the educational possibilities offered by plants of every day use, and at the same time to guide beginners to such general ideas about plants as should form part of a liberal education." (Preface) Chapters are devoted to: Cereals; Various food plants; Flavoring and beverage plants; Medicinal and poisonous plants; and Industrial plants. Other chapters are more concerned with formal botany. Among them are: Classification and description; The parts of the seed plant; Kinship and adaptation, etc.

"Is in reality an agreeable and helpful introduction to the study of botany."

+ Educ R 46:315 O '13 50w

Ind 75:343 Ag 7 '13 60w

"The book is very carefully indexed and will undoubtedly fill a useful niche as a general work of interesting information about plants."

+ Nation 97:417 O 30 '13 450w

SARSON, MARY, and PHILLIPS, MABEL ADDISON. History of the people of Israel in pre-Christian times; with a preface by A. A. David. *$1.25 Longmans A13-687

"This book gives the impression of a running commentary, linking the Old Testament with book-narration and prophecy and poetry. It also touches the history of surrounding nations, the position of the Hebrews amongst them, and the religious and other characteristics of contemporary civilizations. Quotations from the Old Testament text are printed in fuller type. This summary from the preface by the head master of Rugby, who comments the book for upper forms, is a good description of the book."—Ath

"A compact, readable guide through the intricacies of the Old Testament, specially useful for young students."

+ A L A Bkl 9:335 Ap '13

Ath 1912,1:562 My 18 80w

"We earnestly congratulate the authors on the able and candid way in which they have carried out their great work, and on having provided serious readers with so competent a guide-book through the intricacies of the Old Testament."

+ — Ath 1913,1:150 F 8 1750w

"The authors write with reverence and faith, but they have assimilated the higher criticism of the Old Testament, and old-fashioned readers will wince at the amount of early history which is relegated to the domain of tradition and legend; still their work is far more constructive than destructive."

+ Sat R 114:775 D 21 '12 170w

"Altogether the work wins our highest admiration. It immeasurably surpasses earlier works of its kind and scope. Even mature scholars and divines cannot fail to find much profit from its pages."

+ Spec 109:175 Ag 3 '12 150w

SAUNDERS, CHARLES FRANCIS. Under the sky in California. Il *$2 (3c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-8631

"The main concern of the author has been to draw attention to an immensity of almost unexplored mountain, desert, cañon and flowery plain, which the average tourist sees—if at all—from the car window. This is the real California." (Preface) With descriptions of the country the author gives practical directions to those who wish to see it as he has—as a camper. There are chapters on: The deserts; The mountains; Spring days in a carriage; The Franciscan missions; Winter on the isle of summer; Tourist towns; Residence in the land of summer; Concerning the climate; Camp cookery for the non-professional camper.

"Readable and attractive."

+ A L A Bkl 10:26 S '13

"Mr. Saunders is an ideal traveller, finding pleasure wherever he goes, and allowing the reader to share it generously by reason of a happy sincerity of expression which stimulates as well as interests. The illustrations—from photographs taken by the author and his wife—are as delightful as is the text."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '13 400w

"The volume will be a helpful one to many inquirers, and a guide and inspiration for a wider appreciation and enjoyment of nature in California." C: A. Kofoid.

+ Dial 55:110 Ag 16 '13 630w

SAUNDERS, CHARLES FRANCIS—Continued.
 "There is an undeniable charm about the book."

+ Ind 75:633 S 11 '13 130w

"Delightfully sympathetic and entertaining volume."

+ Nation 97:212 S 4 '13 400w

"The book is written in a pleasant tone and imparts a great deal of essential information without being didactic."

+ N Y Sun p5 My 3 '13 100w

"It is an entertaining chronicle of days full of varied interests and happenings."

+ N Y Times 18:430 Ag 10 '13 320w

"Written with a sense of humor as well as with a delicate appreciation of nature."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 800w

SAYLOR, HENRY HODGMAN. Book of annuals. Il $1.20 (15c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-10311

A little book described on the title page as "a pictorial guide to the choice and culture of fifty of the most dependable plants that flower the first year from seed." A general chapter on Sowing, transplanting and culture is followed by a description of the fifty plants with special directions for the culture of each. For each there is a full page illustration.

+ N Y Sun p5 My 17 '13 30w

"Is just the sort of a volume to help many gardeners of limited experience."

+ N Y Times 18:348 Je 8 '13 70w

SAYLOR, HENRY HODGMAN. Making a fireplace. Il $50c (7c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-3269

A little manual of instruction concerning the right construction of various types of fireplaces—brick, stone and concrete.

+ A L A Bkl 9:444 Je '13

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 15 '13 20w

+ N Y Times 18:267 My 4 '13 30w

SCHAUFFLER, ROBERT HAVEN. Romantic America. Il $5 (6c) Century 13-22379

A book of many illustrations, celebrating the picturesque elements, scenic, historic and industrial, that go to make up America. The chapter titles are: Provincetown, the heart of Cape Cod; The spell of old Virginia; The city of beautiful smoke; Mammoth cave; Yellowstone park; Among the old California missions; The Yosemite valley; The Grand canyon; The creole city of New Orleans; The open road in Maine; Unique Mount Desert. A colored frontispiece by Maxfield Parrish, reproductions from the etchings of Joseph Pennell, paintings of André Castaigne, George Inness, Jr., and others, are among the book's illustrative features.

+ A L A Bkl 10:149 D '13

"The handsome volume has eighty pictures gathered from many American artists, but they are not as pictorial as the text." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 38:393 D '13 600w

"His impressions of our cities are well worth knowing."

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 25 '13 480w

"In both conception and execution the work is of no ordinary character."

+ Dial 55:479 D 1 '13 250w

Reviewed by C. E. Hesselgrave.

+ Ind 76:511 D 11 '13 240w

"Mr. Schaffler has done justice to his theme. The book will teach many restless globe-trotters that they had better stay at home and study what a world of beauty and historic association is lying unnoticed at their very door."

+ Lit D 47:952 N 15 '13 300w

"There is a robust text to carry the handsome illustrations, which is not always the case with your volume 'de luxe.' It is no disparagement to the galaxy of artists who have collaborated with the writer to say that without their work the book would still be a vivid portrayal of the charm of American landscape and our older architecture."

+ Nation 97:562 D 11 '13 130w

"A gift book of exceptional interest as well as beauty."

+ N Y Sun p27 N 29 '13 90w

"The publisher has cooperated with author and artists to make the work complete and satisfying in every way."

+ N Y Times 18:701 N 30 '13 130w

"Mr. Schaffler's volume seems as important and worth while a book as has yet been written in description of America."

+ Outlook 105:710 N 29 '13 310w

SCHELLING, FELIX EMMANUEL. English lyric. $1.50 (2c) Houghton 13-7361

A volume published as one of a series treating of "The types of English literature." The author follows the development of the lyric from mediæval times to the present, considering only the lyric poetry of England. His chapters are: Definitions; Mediæval lyric; Lyrical poetry in the England of the Tudors; The lyric in the reigns of the first two Stuart monarchs; The lyrical decline; The lyric and the romantic revival; The Victorian lyrics; Some successors to Swinburne and Meredith.

"A scholarly and valuable book for the student."

+ A L A Bkl 10:27 S '13

Ath 1913, 1:544 My 17 80w

"His chapter on 'Some successors of Swinburne and Meredith' is a curious mixture of unconvincing classification and indiscriminating judgments."

+ Ath 1913, 1:591 My 31 180w

"The index, too, is worthy of more than the reviewer's usual parting word." R. M. Alden.

+ Dial 55:405 N 16 '13 100w

"Scholarly and interesting book."

+ Lit D 46:1031 My 3 '13 1400w

"The book will serve a useful purpose. One or two slips have been noted."

+ Nation 96:479 My 8 '13 270w

"The book, being so professional as it is, might well have been carried a little further into the style and manner of the classroom for the sake of sharp differentiation and delineation. Lacking the clear perfection of contour that only high creative genius can impart, a marginal indication of progress, particularly at such critical points as period transition and the sounding of new notes in English song, would not mar it. It is as it stands, a keen, incisive, comprehensive and scholarly study of an opulent subject."

+ N Y Sun p30 Ap 5 '13 1900w

"It should find a cordial welcome in unacademic circles."

+ N Y Times 18:668 N 30 '13 200w

+ Outlook 104:305 Je 7 '13 230w

"The chapter of Mr. Schelling's book devoted to 'The lyric and the romantic revival' can scarcely be overpraised for its beauty of diction and lavish outpouring of knowledge."

+ R of Rs 47:761 Je '13 130w

SCHELTEMA, JOHANN FRIEDRICH. Monumental Java. Il $4.25 Macmillan 13-2565

A book made up of "the recollections and personal impressions of the author, who in long northern winter evenings lived over again 'sunny spells' spent in Java between 1874 and 1903. . . . The monuments and temples, the history, archaeology, and mythology of Java are all described with quick observation; and the authorities come in for some sharp criticism of their carelessness in regard to the old buildings under their charge. The criticism is, however, balanced by a sense of humour which takes away much of the sting." (Ath) The book is illustrated with photographs.

"It was written for pleasure, and it is a pleasure which most readers will share, for it shows spontaneity and freshness apart from the real interest of the subject."

+ Ath 1913,1:49 Ja 11 150w

"It is a pity that, in the interests of clearness and good taste, the author did not submit his manuscript to some kindly friend more familiar with English idiom who would have excised some of the metaphors, improved the punctuation, and shortened the sentences."

+ — Nation 97:130 Ag 7 '13 450w

"Erudite and enlightening." W. W. Skeat.

+ Nature 91:427 Je 26 '13 170w

"There is a want of plan which is distinctly aggravating. The excellent photographs—especially of Boro Budoor—with which the book is illustrated give some idea of the splendour—and, alas! the decay—of these ancient monuments."

— + Sat R 115:428 Ap 5 '13 900w

Spec 109:sup684 N 2 '12 50w

SCHILLER, FERDINAND CANNING SCOTT.

* Humanism; philosophical essays. 2d ed
* $3.25 Macmillan 13-35193

"This work was first published nine years ago. A second edition having been called for, the author has taken the opportunity thus offered to include four papers previously published in periodicals; and therefore the present edition is enlarged to that extent. The subjects of the new papers are: Humanism and humanism, Solipsism, Infallibility and toleration, and Freedom and responsibility. These are congruous to the general subject, and are placed just where they are in the book that the original order may not be too much disturbed." (Boston Transcript) "Though there is evidence of careful revision throughout, Dr. Schiller has found little that called for alteration." (Ath)

"The treatment is as popular as the subject admits, the style is clear and colloquial and the thought profound and original."

+ A L A Bkl 9:353 Ap '13

Ath 1912,2:649 N 30 1750w

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 29 '13 270w

"May confidently be recommended to the lay reader."

+ Dial 55:25 Jl 1 '13 470w

Nation 96:262 Mr 13 '13 500w

SCHLOESSER, HENRY HERMAN, and CLARK, WILLIAM SMITH. Legal position of trade unions. *10s 6d King (P. S.) and son, London 12-8180

The book traces the progress of trade union legislation in England. "The first chapter presents a survey of the historical development of trade-unions as marked by legislation, with references to some important decisions which were in large measure responsible for the enactment of the laws, and is followed by five chapters not very clearly demarcated: Definition of trade-unions and their powers, Direct interference with the disposal of labor and capital, Restraint of trade, Limitation of the court's jurisdiction, and Procedure. . . . The authors naturally use the Trade union act of 1871 as the dividing line, setting forth the effects of the earlier restrictive statutes, as well as of the more recent legislation. . . . The interest of the book turns more largely on its presentation of a condition differing strikingly from our own than upon resemblances. Among the many cases cited but few appear that are familiar as citations in American opinions, and reciprocally there are but few instances where the authors have found occasion to refer to American statutes or decisions."—Am Econ R

"The book is written in a readable style, is adequately indexed, with analytical side notes and ample citations." L. D. Clark.

+ Am Econ R 2:912 D '12 550w

"So far as is known to the reviewer, the book is more comprehensive than any other on the subject except the recent book of Greenwood, 'The law relating to trade unions.' There seems to the reviewer to be some inaccuracies in the book which can be specifically pointed out." W. B. Hunting.

+ — Am Pol Sci R 7:490 Ag '13 1300w

"To those who wish to familiarize themselves with the history, the working and the present legal status of British trade-unionism, the book of Messrs. Schloesser and Clark will prove of singular value. It is so inclusive as to be practically complete. It has been compiled with evident care, and it is clearly written. For students of British trade unionism it is a companion volume to Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webb's 'History of trade unionism.'" E. P.

+ Pol Sci Q 27:710 D '12 600w

"Admirable book."

+ Sat R 113:786 Je 22 '12 200w

SCHMUCKER, SAMUEL CHRISTIAN. Meaning of evolution. 1l *$1.25 (2c) Macmillan (13-14764)

"It is the attempt of this book to give to people whose training is other than scientific some conception of the great story of creation. Without dogmatic certainty but without indecision it tries to tell what modern science thinks as to the great problems of life. It tries to describe the possible origin of animals and plants, their slow advance, the length of their steady uplift, the forces that brought it forth. It tries to tell a little of the men who have helped to develop the great idea of evolution, of the men who persuaded the scientific world of its truth, and of the later minds that are modifying and enlarging the idea of the master evolutionist."—Preface

"In a work of this description Prof. Schmucker would have done well to confine himself to science. The last chapter, on the Bible, is out of place, though we recognize its sincerity and good motive."

+ — Ath 1913,2:531 N 8 250w

+ Chaut 71:115 Jl 5 '13 120w

"The personal field-observations of the author, especially some of those on birds, form the one redeeming feature of the book."

— + Dial 55:362 N 1 '13 400w

Outlook 105:599 N 15 '13 150w

R of Rs 48:637 N '13 50w

"Dr. Schmucker has stated the facts of the case in a clear non-technical language with much literary grace and with scientific accuracy, consequently the book is well adapted to a wide range of readers even outside the biologically initiated." H. E. Walter.

+ Science ns38:779 N 28 '13 530w

SCHOFIELD, WILLIAM HENRY. Chivalry in English literature. (Harvard studies in comparative literature, v 2) *$2.25 Harvard univ. 12-28468

Prof. Schofield attempts to trace from the study of Chaucer, Spenser, Malory and Shakespeare "how the ideals of French chivalry entered into English literature and thereby affected the attitude of the English-speaking world." "The general trend of the lectures may be gathered from their closing sentences: 'Chaucer exalts worthiness, determining acts; Malory, nobility, accepting obligations; Spenser, worth, procured by self-discipline; Shakespeare, high-nature, transforming character. Chaucer says 'do'; Malory, 'avoid'; Spenser, 'study'; Shakespeare, 'be.'" (Ath)

"We feel that the conception suffers from the attempt to bring such disparate modes of thought as those of Chaucer and Spenser into the same field of view. But apart from a too modern outlook, we have little but warm appreclation for the spirit and execution of these lectures."

SCHOFIELD, WILLIAM HENRY. —Continued.

+ — Ath 1913,1:99 Ja 25 400w

"Professor Schofield's book fails to do justice, in his study of chivalry, to those qualities which are derived not from French but from Germanic sources. The essay on Chaucer seems the most satisfactory." M. H. Shackford.

+ — Dial 54:339 Ap 16 '13 1100w

+ Ind 75:449 Ag 21 '13 1650w

"Certain generalizations in themselves justify the existence of this book. If it contained nothing else, indeed, it would be distinctly more valuable. For it is not so constructed as to support and lead up to its conclusions. Large portions of the book have nothing to do with these generalizations, or with chivalry at all, and are simply padding. But even the relevant portions are so lax and invertebrate that the book as a whole is a weariness. Paragraph after paragraph reads like Newman's school-boy's essay on Fortuné."

+ — Nation 96:259 Mr 13 '13 750w

"The work has been done with evident enthusiasm for the subject—and enthusiasm which leads to a stressing of the nobler aspects of chivalry and occasional forgetfulness of its shortcomings. This volume is not primarily designed for the scholar. Prof. Schofield, as is well known, has displayed much originality in his separate investigations of problems of mediaeval literature, and he indicates here and there in the book under discussion the results of his own research. This, however, need disturb nobody. Although addressed in the beginning to a university audience, these lectures are obviously general rather than special in design; their chief aim is to outline certain important tendencies in the development of English idealism." W. W. Lawrence.

+ — N Y Times 18:29 Ja 26 '13 2300w

SCHOONMAKER, EDWIN DAVIES. The
 "Americans. $1.50 Kennerley 13-10644

This play "is intended to be an epic of labor, a drama of the struggle between capital and labor which emphasizes the necessity for unionized, militant opposition of the masses to the classes. The end brings tragedy, the bugles sound, and real industrial warfare commences." (R of Rs) A timber king, representative of the materialistic capitalist, and his idealistic son are the two chief characters.

"The author deserves credit for imaginative dealing with a weighty problem, but contributes nothing particularly helpful towards its solution. Why he should have elected to write some of his dialogue in the blankest of verse is a mystery."

+ — Nation 97:107 Jl 31 '13 280w

"It would be the easiest thing in the world to pick flaws in 'The Americans.' But the idea of the book is big and simple, and those are winning qualities." Helen Bullis.

+ — N Y Times 18:482 S 21 '13 350w

"The reader must draw a sharp dividing line between this drama as an acting play and as social philosophy. As a play, it is well written, energetic, vital, and powerful; as social teaching, it seems in error."

+ — R of Rs 48:124 Jl '13 150w

SCHULTZ, JAMES WILLARD. Quest of the "fish-dog skin. il $1.25 (3c) Houghton 13-35735

This story for boys is a sequel to "With the Indians in the Rockies" but is in no way dependent on it. It describes the journey of two boys, an Indian and a white lad, across the mountains from Fort Benton to the Pacific in 1861. The fish-dog skin of which they are in search is seal skin.

+ A L A B4l 10:75 O '13 +

SCHULTZ, JAMES WILLARD. Sinopah, the
 "Indian boy. il $1.10 Houghton 13-5574

The author, who has lived among the Indians "begins the story of little Sinopah, who was afterward the great Blackfoot chief Pitamakan, or Running Eagle, with his birth, and tells of his christening, his babyhood, his early pets, his games, his part in the long marches of the tribe, how nearly he came to being swallowed up in a mighty herd of buffalo, how he learned to make and use the bow and arrow, how he tracked a mountain lion, and so on until, when he was twelve years old, he was taken into the Mosquito society and cast his childhood behind him."— N Y Times

"Will be useful to teachers because of its detailed descriptions of Indian customs."

+ A L A Bkl 9:461 Je '13

"We can recommend it."

+ Ath 1913,1:282 Mr 8 30w

"Good for all children, be they white or red, to read."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 12 '13 180w

+ N Y Sun p4 Ap 26 '13 70w

"This story of the childhood of a real Indian boy who grew up to be a great chief will appeal to both boys and girls all the more since they can be sure that it is a true picture."

+ N Y Times 18:299 My 18 '13 200w

SCHULZE, RUDOLF. Experimental psychology
 "and pedagogy for teachers, normal colleges and universities; tr. by Rudolf Pintner.
 $3.75 Macmillan E13-663

This book is the outcome of work done at the Psychological Institute at Leipsic. "It is designed to show school teachers what is being done and what may be attempted in the way of applying these laboratory methods to construct a secure foundation for the art and science of teaching." (Ath) "The experiments deal with the anthropometrical measurements, the measurement of sensations, of perceptions, of space and time, of fertility of ideas, of the character and intensity of the feelings as indicated by various forms of expression, of reaction time, of the expressions and the scope of attention, of power of assimilation, of the memory, of apperceptive combinations, of the sounds and the melody of speech, and of mental and physical work." (Ind)

"It would be a matter for regret if teachers should be led by this book into attempting investigations on their own account, without having made a thorough study of the principles of psychology, and without that personal guidance which is more indispensable in this than in any other branch of experimental science."

+ Ath 1913,1:64 Ja 18 220w

"To the teacher of educational psychology who wishes to introduce some experimental work into the class exercises the descriptive accounts of experiments will be very useful." C. H. J.

+ El School T 13:456 My '13 150w

+ Ind 75:338 Ag 7 '13 130w

"Few texts dealing with the application of psychology surpass this book in the quality of the typography . . . in the number and excellence of the illustrations, and in the clearness of exposition, suggestiveness, and freshness of treatment. The author is inclined to place rather too much value on the method of correlation as a means of measuring intelligence. The work of the translator has been well done." J. E. W. Wallin.

+ — J Philos 10:500 Ag 28 '13 350w

"The book itself is of very unequal value, but has much material which can be made use of, particularly by advanced classes in educational psychology." W. F. Dearborn.

+ — Psychol Bull 10:283 Jl 15 '13 570w

SCHURZ, CARL. Speeches, correspondence and political papers of Carl Schurz; sel. and ed. by F. Bancroft. 6v *$12 Putnam 13-13552

These six volumes supplement the three volumes of Reminiscences that were published a few years ago, and together the two works constitute a very complete record of Carl Schurz's contribution to our national life. These volumes "are edited with the candor and absolute respect for the truth which Schurz would have desired and which, amid all the distractions and temptations of a strenuous public career, he practiced. To our mind, this chapter in American biography and history has its chief value in the shining light it throws on the true nature of Americanism. Schurz, born in Germany, was as truly and wholly an American as any direct descendant of the immigrants of Plymouth or Jamestown." (N Y Times)

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 27 '13 1700w

"The editor has selected with excellent judgment what best illustrates the qualities of the orator and statesman. It may be admitted that Schurz's speeches, when read so many years after their delivery, betray at times a certain diffuseness, resulting from the Socratic method which he often employed with such telling effect."

+ — Nation 97:261; 286 S 18; 25 '13 3600w
N Y Sun p15 Je 14 '13 50w

"Mr. Schurz once had the notion, in one of his intervals of busy retirement, of writing a political history of the United States. That political history, for the period of his active interest in American politics, is written here, from his point of view, and written in the most authentic as well as the most interesting way. It is a work of first rate value and authority."

+ N Y Sun p9 Je 21 '13 4400w

"One of the most valuable contributions to American history made in the period covered."

+ N Y Times 18:377 Je 29 '13 1350w

"The volumes constitute a deserved and fitting memorial of one of the purest and most useful of the public men of America."

+ N Y Times 18:674 N 30 '13 370w

"Indispensable material for the future student of American history, and useful material for the statesman and the political editor of the present and the future generation."

+ Outlook 104:632 Jl 13 '13 180w

SCOTT, JOHN REED. Unforgiving offender. 11 *$1.25 (1½c) Lippincott 13-9286

"The critical years in the life of Stephanie Lorraine, a young and beautiful woman whose marital and love affairs have drawn her into unfortunate entanglements are pictured in 'The unforgiving offender.' In her own words she has run 'to the unconventional' to a remarkable extent. The greatest trial comes when she runs back to the conventional. . . . Although Stephanie is the figure about whom all the action moves, the author has been at pains to create several strong characters who leave a definite impression upon the reader. Montague Pendleton is an excellent portrayal of the American club man of good breeding and fine sensibility; Devereux is an example of the sort of person who finds food for mirth in all things and Lorraine appears as one whose vexing habit of uncertainty is equalled only by his vexing obstinacy."—Boston Transcript

Ath 1913.2:253 S 13 50w

"The atmosphere of the Country club, with its endless gossip and fruitless search for happiness is admirably delineated."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '13 200w

N Y Sun p4 Ap 26 '13 70w

"The story is not among Mr. Scott's best but has interesting features notwithstanding a surfeit of small talk not always germane."

— + Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13 300w

SCOTT, TEMPLE. Use of leisure. *50c (2c) Huebsch

In this little volume in the "Art of life" series, the author reiterates an old truth too seldom heeded: "Making a living is not living; making a living is only a means to living." He denies the truth of the popular platitudes: "Blessed be drudgery," and "To labor is to pray"; and makes a plea for more of the leisure that promotes true living. There are three chapters, entitled: Wanted—leisure; The right use of leisure; Work, the creator

SCOTT, WILLIAM RUFUS. Americans in Panama. 11 *$1.35 Statler pub. 12-25275

"Most of Mr. Scott's book is taken up with a firsthand and lively description of the Panama canal." (Outlook) The information covers "the history of the isthmus, the railroad, the French canal work, the so-called revolution which resulted in the independence of Panama, the geography of the Canal zone, the history of the work under American management, the important features of the canal and the working and living conditions." (Engin N)

"It is written in livelier style, that of the newspaper correspondent, and is conceded by engineering authorities to be the best popular account of the work of building the canal which has so far appeared."

+ A L A Bkl 9:335 Ap '13 ✕

"To the reader desiring a popular account of the work of building the Panama canal, we are inclined to rate this book as the best that has so far appeared."

+ Engin N 68:937 N 14 '12 600w

"There are a number of inaccurate statements in the book concerning engineering topics, and chapter 20 on the commercial value of the canal, needs extensive revision with the help of Professor Johnson's report and the last canal act passed by Congress. But the book as a whole is readable and well balanced and gives the kind of non-technical information desired by the average visitor."

+ — Engin Rec 66:675 D 14 '12 330w

"This book can be recommended as a short, straightforward history of the American work on the isthmus. It is marred by an occasional lapse into the colloquial style of the usual newspaper correspondent."

+ — Nation 96:87 Ja 23 '13 80w

"The volume is distinctly interesting on the historical side."

+ Outlook 103:48 Ja 4 '13 700w

SEAGER, HENRY ROGERS. Principles of economics. 11 *$2.25 (1c) Holt 13-20159

This work is the fourth edition of the author's "Introduction to economics." The title has been altered "to conform to the usage which has grown up of designating as 'principles' any treatise which covers the whole field of economics. . . . In this edition I have done a good deal more than bring the information up to date, important as that part of my task has been. I have rewritten several of the theoretical chapters and recast the explanations of the laws of value and distribution." (Preface) In the second part of the book four new chapters, covering the subjects of profit sharing, social insurance, socialism, etc., have been substituted for the single chapter on Plans of economic reform.

A L A Bkl 10:171 D '13 ✕

"Both the spirit and the results of the discussions in this work make manifest the advance economics has made since the days in which it was known as the 'dismal science.'"

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 13 '13 290w

SEAMAN, AUGUSTA HUIELL. Mamselle of the wilderness. 11 *$1.25 (1½c) Sturgis & Walton 13-12283

This is a story of La Salle's attempt to found a colony on the lower Mississippi. Little Mamselle is a convent bred girl, who knows nothing of her parentage who is taken from the sisters, who have been her only friends, and sent out to the new world. She makes good friends and after the endurance of perils and hardships in the ill-fated colony finds a home and happiness. It is a story for young people, well written and full of interest, with due attention paid to historical detail.

SEAMAN, AUGUSTA HUIELL —Continued.

"In spite of its adventures the story is related in a generally stilted and somewhat commonplace fashion, with great lack of freshness not only in its plot, but in its treatment of history."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 6 '13 180w

+ Chaut 72:205 N 8 '13 170w

+ Lit D 47:486 S 20 '13 150w

"We do not see that there is anything to be said for this sort of thing unless that babies cry for it."

+ Nation 97:188 Ag 28 '13 120w

"The author can tell a story, and in spite of some absurdities parts of her tale will interest the reader."

+ N Y Sun p3 Je 28 '13 80w

SEARCY, ALFRED. By flood and field: adventures ashore and afloat in north Australia. il $2 Macmillan (Eng ed 13-35190)

The author describes his experiences in Australia about twenty-five years ago. He lived for some time with the blacks, then "after a time he was taken by them to Port Essington, and from there was finally able to reach Port Darwin, where he found men of his own race, and was taken into service in the Customs house. Here his chief duty was the circumvention of opium-smugglers. Later he joined the police force and was occupied in the region of the McArthur and Roper rivers, to the west of the Gulf of Carpentaria." (Nation)

"His first-hand knowledge of native life, of which he for a time became a part, and of conditions in one of the few remaining wild corners of the globe, give it historical as well as travel-adventure value."

+ A L A Bkl 9:335 Ap '13

"Its fifty and odd chapters are all adventure stories which bear the impress of more or less literal truth, and, withal, are as full of half-breadth escapes and thrilling hazards as any fiction. In addition, the book should be serviceable for its realistic views of scenery and life in the most picturesque and least familiar portions of the Australian continent."

+ Ath 1912,2:445 O 19 200w

"As the narrative is confessedly written for the most part from memory, after the intervention of about a quarter of a century, one cannot help feeling that certain of the sensational adventures recorded may unconsciously have taken on additional color in the meantime; but on the whole the book is doubtless a trustworthy picture of conditions then existing."

+ Nation 96:37 Ja 9 '13 250w

SEARS, ANNA WENTWORTH. Two on a tour in South America. il $2 (3c) Appleton 13-21751

An informal account of a three months' tour thru South America. The trip was one of business but the story is told by the wife of the business man, who was concerned with manners and customs and other matters not of a business nature. The route of travel was down the west coast from Panama to Santiago, across Argentina and up the east coast. There are descriptions by the way, of Callao, Lima, Valparaiso, Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro, and other towns, well-known or otherwise.

"For the general reader this is a book of travel of exceptional interest. For the many whom the opening of the Panama canal will soon draw to South America its information and suggestion are well high invaluable."

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 27 '13 470w

+ N Y Sun p5 O 25 '13 120w

"A very sprightly volume."

+ N Y Times 18:576 O 26 '13 140w

SEARS, JOHN VAN DER ZEE. My friends at Brook farm. il $1.25 Fitzgerald 12-25256

"Mr. Sears was a member of the Brook farm school when a boy, and it is from that point of view chiefly that the book has been written, but he reinforces his story with enough of more general information to make it comprehensive."—Springfield Republican

"The book has no special literary merit but is interesting and will have a place in many libraries because of the subject."

+ A L A Bkl 9:251 F '13

"None have given a more attractive or more illuminating picture of the community as seen and shared in by its younger members than John Van Der Zee Sears."

+ Ind 74:151 Ja 16 '13 800w

"Many of the anecdotes are new, and the style is easy and entertaining."

+ Lit D 46:352 F 15 '13 100w

"As an account of interesting personages and happenings seen from the point of view of a clever boy, the book is well worth while. It is a fault of the book that it gives almost no dates or statistics. The book illuminates, but leaves in shadow much that one would like to see more clearly."

+ Nation 96:184 F 20 '13 850w

"It is an important footnote to American history which John Van Der Zee Sears has contributed."

+ Springfield Republican p7 D 5 '12 850w

SEDGWICK, ANNE DOUGLAS. The nest. $1.25 (2c) Century 13-385

The nest, The white pagoda, The suicide, A forsaken temple, Miss Jones and the masterpiece, are the titles of the stories collected in this volume. "Although each of the five stories . . . has its own group of characters, its own incidents, its own scenes, they are so similar in manner and style that they seem like the successive chapters of a novel." (Boston Transcript) "There are subtleties of psychological philosophy in [Miss Sedgwick's] stories, a sort of inner vision of the underlying meaning of certain apparently ordinary occurrences." (Lit D)

"These short stories compare favorably with the author's best work."

+ A L A Bkl 9:346 Ap '13

"Subtlety is the most noteworthy quality in these short stories. She has thought fit to include her 'first attempt with her last,' and we therefore have 'Miss Jones and the masterpiece,' which reads very well up to a point, but is ruined by the 'dénouement.'"

+ Ath 1912,2:592 N 16 110w

+ Atlan 112:698 N '13 300w

"The perfection of the art in these stories does not go far enough to make them plausible as transcripts from real life, which was very apparently the author's purpose in writing them. They have the value of scientific documents, and they prove the novelist to be an adept wielder of the literary scalpel. If we do not seek to believe them, if we do not look into them as into a looking glass, we shall derive from them no little aesthetic pleasure. The pity is, however, that going as far as they do they do not touch life itself completely." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 1050w

"Where so many writers nowadays are concerned with mere surface passions, she penetrates to the hidden sources of selfishness which hoodwinks itself and hypocrisy which is half sincere. She deals with the 'nuances' of life rather than its broad brush-work."

+ Ind 74:988 My 1 '13 400w

"Warnings are not labeled as such in these fascinating tales, but the perspicacity of her mental vision and her keen satire combine to make the stories helpful as well as entertaining and technically satisfactory."

+ Lit D 46:900 Ap 19 '13 150w

Nation 96:548 My 29 '13 370w

"The cleverness, observation and humor that Miss Sedgwick has made familiar through her longer work also characterize these short stories."

+ N Y Sun p11 Je 14 '13 30w

"The first story in the collection, and quite the best of them all, from which the book takes its title, is a complete and convincing bit of life."

+ — N Y Times 18:174 Mr 30 '13 700w

Outlook 104:37 My 3 '13 50w

"In reading these stories most will exclaim 'How clever!', and it is exactly their refinement of cleverness which is their weakness. They attempt to show life as a wonderfully constructed jig-saw puzzle."

+ — Sat R 114:805 D 28 '12 700w

"The incisive and analytical talent of Anne Douglas Sedgwick does not lend itself quite happily to the production of the short story. Although almost all the stories in this collection are accounts of a problem and not of an incident, yet the reader cannot help feeling that the author would have realized her characters much better, and therefore have interested him much more, if she had written of them at length."

+ — Spec 109:1108 D 28 '12 170w

"Her story, 'Suicide,' in the hands of one less talented would have become crude or morbid; in hers it is a subtle blend of varied elements which happily belies the title."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 24 '13 40w

SEDGWICK, HENRY DWIGHT, Jr. Italy in the thirteenth century. 2v il *$5 Houghton 12-26825

This work "includes all the important happenings in politics, religion, art and social progress. Primarily devoted to Italy and Italian leaders in all fields of endeavor it nevertheless and naturally touches on the general aspects of European civilization. While intended to be what its title implies, a history of the thirteenth century only, it really covers the period from 1160 to 1300, embracing the career of the greatest of all popes, Innocent III; St. Francis of Assisi, the founder of the Franciscan order; Giotto and the early life of Dante. . . . A comprehensive chronological and bibliographical appendix and a carefully made index add considerably to the value of the book to students."—N Y Sun

"As one would expect in a work of such scope, written by any one but a profound scholar, there is only a superficial treatment of the many problems involved, and a failure to notice a number of others." G. L. Hamilton.

— Am Hist R 18:574 Ap '13 950w

A L A Bkl 9:335 Ap '13

"Mr. Sedgwick's field is too vast for his book to be in any sense exhaustive. It is not always well proportioned, and its judgments will not always pass unchallenged, but it fulfils its purpose as a popular historical introduction to Dante."

+ — Ath 1913.1:182 F 15 950w

"The value of a work such as this, though not great from the constructive historical viewpoint, is considerable." N. M. Trenholme.

+ — Dial 55:15 Jl 1 '13 2200w

+ — Ind 74:1398 Je 19 '13 380w

"Before issuing a second edition of his book, Mr. Sedgwick ought to rearrange his material so as to make the political history consecutive and to bind together the chapters on other subjects."

+ — Nation 96:282 Mr 20 '13 1500w

"In his comprehensive story of Italy's greatest century Henry D. Sedgwick lives well up to his reputation as a biographer, historian and essayist."

+ N Y Sun p17 D 14 '12 350w

"Such chapters as 'The Lombard communes,' 'The university of Bologna' and 'Papal jurisprudence' would pass as independent studies in the history of institutions, and seem to indicate a legal training on the part of the author."

+ N Y Sun p13 Mr 1 '13 2100w

"Every chapter of Mr. Sedgwick's two volumes represents years of reading and travel. Congratulations must mingle with our reservations, that we should possess an American work of so much culture and research." T. Walsh.

+ — N Y Times 18:9 Ja 12 '13 1400w

"There is a consciousness that behind all of Sedgwick's statements lie years of travel, study, and sympathy."

+ Outlook 104:769 Ag 2 '13 480w

"The chief merit of Mr. Sedgwick's volumes is their clearness. He has a tangled story to unfold, and he has made it clearer than most of its narrators."

+ Spec 111:215 Ag 9 '13 1200w

"The reader's enjoyment of Henry Dwight Sedgwick's vivid, yet scholarly two-volume work can scarcely fail to be coupled with an envy of the author in his task. The chief criticism to be made is the minor one that occasionally the lack of continuity is greater than might have been effected by different arrangement."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ja 16 '13 2000w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 30w

SEITZ, DON CARLOS. Buccaneers; rough verse. il *$1 Harper 12-26311

A group of verses all celebrating the bold virtues and picturesque vices of those gentleman adventurers who sailed the Spanish main in the good old days of piracy. A cover design and frontispiece by Howard Pyle are quite in keeping with the spirit of the book.

"Although the appeal of these poems must be but for the few, it will receive from them a peculiarly warm appreciation. Far from being impeccable, technically 'rough' is too harsh an adjective for these poems. For they have a fine rhythm and verve, and from them comes the invigorating breath of the sea, and that call of the blood which wakens instincts, centuries perhaps quiescent, but never to be wholly extinguished."

+ — Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '13 380w

"The poems are strong, realistic, and picturesque, and it also might be said they are based on an intelligent and veritable conception of what the buccaneers were like."

+ N Y Times 18:163 Mr 23 '13 160w

"It is a book that grown-up boys and those who are not grown up will want to read more than once."

+ R of Rs 47:374 Mr '13 70w

SELBIE, WILLIAM BOOTHBY. Schleiermacher: a critical and historical study. *$2.25 Dutton A13-2131

A work published as one of the volumes of the "Great Christian theologians" series. "While the author naturally pays chief attention to the two works of Schleiermacher which held the chief place in his thought, the 'Reden' and the 'Glaubenslehre,' his other less familiar works are not neglected, and the literature extant has been studied and is freely quoted. . . . The whole of Schleiermacher's system is discussed under the heads, 'The doctrine of God,' 'The person of Christ,' 'Man and sin,' 'The work of Christ,' 'The Christian life,' and 'The doctrine of the church.'" (Am J Theol)

"The religious and theological interests are never separated. The spirit of scholasticism is absent and the emphasis is laid on those points which affect our present needs most directly. The style is simple and clear almost without exception and the interest never flags." G: Cross.

SELBIE, WILLIAM BOOTHBY—Continued.

+ Am J Theol 17:446 J1 '13 1000w

"A just and discriminating criticism of Schleiermacher and a clear exposition of his philosophy."

+ A L A Bkl 10:150 D '13

+ Ath 1913,1:279 Mr 8 70w

"Will supply a want that has long been felt." G. D. Hicks.

+ Hibbert J 11:655 Ap '13 100w

"His monograph is valuable, not simply as a historical study, but as an indication of the spirit in which healthy reconstructive work in modern theology must be carried on." James Moffatt.

+ Hibbert J 11:662 Ap '13 350w

"Considering the excellence of the work, and the fact that we have comparatively little in English about Schleiermacher, we heartily recommend this volume."

+ Nation 97:211 S 4 '13 270w

N Y Times 18:311 My 25 '13 80w

"A work of importance. A timely help."

+ Outlook 104:305 Je 7 '13 150w

SELIGMAN, EDWIN ROBERT ANDERSON.
10 Essays in taxation. 8th, ed., rev. and enl. *$4 (1½c) Macmillan 13-6903

The eighth edition, completely revised and enlarged, of a work appearing in 1895. Eight new essays have been added. The chapters are: Development of taxation; General property tax; Single tax; Double taxation; Inheritance tax; Taxation of corporations—History; Taxation of corporations—Principles; Taxation of corporations—Complications and conclusions; Modern problems in taxation; A quarter century's progress in taxation; Separation of state and local revenues; Relations of state and federal finance; Importance of precision in assessments; Classification of public revenues; Betterment tax; Recent reforms in taxation; Recent literature in taxation; American reports on taxation.

"The book is now thoroughly revised and brought down to date and again deserves its place as probably the most valuable single American book on taxation. Professor Seligman excels, as always, in his careful analysis of laws and movements and in his exhaustive summaries of the world's literature of taxation. On the other hand, one could wish that more original study had been given to the economic effects of taxation." F. R. Fairchild.

+ — Am Econ R 3:949 D '13 1400w

A L A Bkl 9:465 Je '13

"Though consisting of technical essays in taxation, there is much in this volume that is of prime interest to persons interested in public affairs from the broader viewpoint."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:475 Ag '13 130w

"The opinions and conclusions of so accurate and thorough an investigator will receive the most careful consideration. Perhaps the most helpful additions are the essays summarizing the findings of recent reports in this country." R. E. George.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:287 J1 '13 320w

"During the last few years 'Essays in taxation' has been a book no student could safely neglect, and with the new edition it has regained its pre-eminence."

+ Ath 1913,1:521 My 10 220w

"Like all of the author's books the present volume is characterized by breadth of knowledge and clearness of insight concerning the fundamental problems of taxation. The reader is conscious that he is following the main road of thought and not a mere blind alley. The book in its new form is to be commended to all economic students and readers interested in the progress of sound and just taxation."

+ Boston Transcript p22 My 7 '13 200w

Nation 97:61 J1 17 '13 170w

"The changes are equivalent to the writing of a second volume in bulk, and almost to the writing of two new volumes in fact, so thorough has been the bringing down to date. It is this feature which makes the eighth edition indispensable to those who follow the rapidly changing phases of legislation on this subject."

+ N Y Times 18:433 Ag 17 '13 220w

Outlook 104:39 My 3 '13 30w

SELTZER, CHARLES ALDEN. Trail to yesterday. il *$1.35 (2c) Outing pub. 13-21741

A western story in which a puzzling situation, revealed in the first chapter, is not explained until the end of the book is reached. Sheila Langford, an eastern girl, visiting the west for the first time, loses herself on the prairies in a storm and is rescued by a strange man, known as "Dakota" and sheltered in his shack. The man appears to be in everything a gentleman and the strange freak which leads him to insist on a marriage ceremony is to her inexplicable. The marriage is kept secret, and a long chain of peculiar circumstances, involving her father and two other men, serves to bewilder the girl further. In the final chapter a satisfactory explanation is made.

"Readable and harmless."

+ A L A Bkl 10:158 D '13

"Much of the story is marked by keen insight of human nature and no little skill in holding the reader's attention on edge without violation of art verities. Some faults in the style are trying to one's patience."

+ — Boston Transcript p24 N 5 '13 400w

+ — Nation 97:508 N 27 '13 200w

SERVICE, ROBERT WILLIAM. Rhymes of a rolling stone. *$1 Dodd 12-25200

Collected into this volume are poems of a Canadian who has experienced the dangers, hardships, joys and thrills of the great outdoors in the far-north.

"He tells a melodramatic story well, and expresses vigorously the primal passions of the wild. His new book is quite up to his old level, and the fact that his methods of expression are rather journalistic than poetical should not impede his access to a wide public."

+ — Ath 1913,1:158 F 8 80w

"Whatever has been said of Mr. Service's 'Songs of a Sourdough' and 'Ballads of a Cheechako,' applies with equal force to his 'Rhymes of a rolling stone.' Philosophy, mood and meter have as strong and savory a flavor of Kipling as ever, revealing an unchanged and single-hearted discipleship on the part of their author. There is some gain in fine accuracy of expression—a little in subtlety of meaning; and a slight corresponding loss in vigor and spontaneity. The poems are nevertheless redolent of the ease that comes from untutored joy in creation, not perfect mastery after long toiling. They are uneven, careless, now slipshod in thought and now in execution. Mr. Service seems unconsciously to rely overmuch on the extraneous value accruing to them from the qualities of interest inherent in their subject matter."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ja 4 '13 270w

"Will undoubtedly please his admirers; it is spiritual, musical, and slangy. Furthermore, not a line of it could have been written before the days of Kipling."

+ — Lit D 45:1190 D 21 '12 100w

"'Rhymes of a rolling stone,' spite of the 'red blood' and strenuousness in it, is not a cheerful book; the Baedeker of 'the bitter road the younger son must tread' could hardly be that." H. M. B.

+ — N Y Times 18:22 Ja 19 '13 600w

Spec 111:24 J1 5 '13 150w

SETON, ERNEST THOMPSON. Book of woodcraft and Indian lore. il *$1.75 (1½c) Doubleday A13-354

The author's "aim is to give boys and young men practical information about outdoor life, and, as he phrases it, 'the activities, customs, laws, and amusements' that have developed in the camps which he has carried on. Much of the lore here collected and made workable is derived from the Indians, and Indian dances, songs, and ceremonies are included. . . . There are talks about outdoor camping, camp games, natural history, trapping, forestry inspection, and many other things connected with the great and delightful subject of woodcraft in its broadest sense." (Outlook) The book, which is fully illustrated with drawings by the author, is really the eleventh edition of the "Birch-bark roll" which has been published annually, but it is far more comprehensive than any of the previous numbers.

"Useful to the adult amateur camper as well as to the boy scout."

+ A L A Bkl 9:465 Je '13 ✕

+ Ath 1912,2:758 D 21 100w

"The illustrations, half a thousand pen sketches, are as neat and accurate as Mr. Thompson Seton's usually are."

+ Nation 96:63 Ja 16 '13 130w

N Y Times 17:696 N 24 '12 100w

+ N Y Times 17:797 D 29 '12 170w

+ Outlook 102:864 D 21 '12 150w

+ Spec 110:761 My 3 '13 80w

"A book which will appeal to any boy, and particularly to the boy who has joined the boy scout movement. This book should become one of the classics of the boy's library."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 24 '13 230w

SHACKELFORD, ETHEL. Jumping-off place. 12 *$1.25 Doran 13-10664

"The scene of this jumping-off place is a mining camp in Montana, where a society darling is deposited by a scheming doctor and an erratic will to work out her salvation for a couple of months. . . . To her surprise she finds herself in the camp with her husband whom she adores, though she has been separated from him in her childish desire to have her own way. All this is not told until the end of the book however."—Boston Transcript

"The story does not lack interest, and the situation is really good, but the handling of the characters shows an amateurish turn."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 250w

"The dialogue involved is of the 'bright' or piquant type which the undergraduate disposes of as 'fresh.'"

— Nation 97:187 Ag 28 '13 280w

"Altogether an interesting book, and one which gives promise of still better work in the future."

+ — N Y Times 18:485 S 21 '13 240w

SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM. Stories of Shakespeare's English history plays, by H. A. Guerber. 11 *$1.25 Dodd 12-22821

"What H. A. Guerber's present handbook seeks to do is to furnish a synopsis of each of the Shakespearean histories, cataloguing motives and incidents in a clinical manner. There is no heroic atmosphere aimed for in the author's method."—Lit D

"They are without literary merit but have some value for young students as direct, clear outlines of the plot."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:286 Mr '13

"Its method brings out, with considerable emphasis, the instructive value of this epic cycle of plays."

+ — Dial 53:390 N 16 '12 170w

"Painstaking and uninspired analyses." M. J. Moses.

+ — Ind 73:1364 D 12 '12 10w

Lit D 45:1072 D 7 '12 30w

"Of value for those who would be thoroughly acquainted with Shakespeare's plays."

+ N Y Times 17:541 S 29 '12 20w

SHAW, STANLEY. William of Germany. 11 *$2.50 (2c) Macmillan

A sketch, by an Englishman, and for English readers, of the Emperor of Germany. The biographer, inasmuch as his subject is living, makes no attempt to review the Emperor's life as a whole; nor does he foretell the ultimate consequences of his character and policy. He unites history and biography in an enlightening manner and gives to the whole a touch of his own philosophy. In commenting upon the Emperor of to-day, he says: "Time has taught him more than his early tutor, worthy Dr. Hinzpeter, even taught him; and if his spring was boisterous, and his summer gusty and uncertain, a mellow autumn gives promise of a hale and kindly winter."

"He has given us a readable book about one of the most interesting or living men, and in a final chapter there is as good a description of the Kaiser as one can find anywhere. The growth of the German navy is described with skill, but here and there the condensation we have spoken of makes Dr. Shaw seem occasionally inaccurate; and we have noted a few mispellings. The index is not satisfactory."

+ — Ath 1913,2:247 S 13 630w

"The author of this volume has made plain the characteristics of the German folk, which knowledge is necessary for the understanding of the German emperor."

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 14 '13 350w

"This book, though not of its kind a particularly bad or gauche specimen, does not invite us to a serious estimate of the Kaiser. It is too naive. It deals too much in trifling things." D.

+ — Sat R 116:619 N 15 '13 1250w

"The political argument of Mr. Shaw's book fails because it is irrelevant. Apart from these considerations the biography of so notable and picturesque a figure as the German Emperor cannot fail to be interesting. Mr. Shaw's book will be useful because it gives all the main facts of the Emperor's reign in chronological order."

+ — Spec 111:656 O 25 '13 1500w

SHEEHAN, REV. PATRICK AUGUSTINE. 2 Miriam Lucas. *$1.35 Longmans 12-24626

"A story of modern Ireland, with its religious differences, its labor struggles, its sharp social distinctions, and its poetry and legend and hot-blooded enthusiasms withal. It is not a picture of one side of Irish life or Irish character; it is a study of Irish life and character in all its complexities. And the tradition, the imagination, the credulous romance of the Irish peasant folk impress us all the more strongly because they are shown, not in a mist of nebulous dreams, but against the troubled background of modern industrial conditions. Socialism and labor agitators, as well as mystery and visionary peasants, meet us in Canon Sheehan's book."—N Y Times

"His novel, which is far too long, is marred by faults of style which might more easily have been pardoned in a less fluent writer."

+ — Ath 1912,2:522 N 2 50w

"The narrative would bear excision of at least some seventy or eighty pages."

+ — Boston Transcript p7 D 7 '12 150w

"Miriam herself is a bit stiff; we are interested more in her life than in her character. But her lover is very human and likable, and the young enthusiast of Trinity college is drawn with a sympathy and pathos that make him very appealing. Miriam's brief experience in New York forms a section of the story less likely to be enjoyed by American readers."

+ — Cath World 96:538 Ja '13 300w

"Like all of Canon Sheehan's stories, this one has a quaint and individual flavor; but unlike several of them, it has very little else to commend it. The plot is melodramatic, the situations are forced, the persons are unreal; the hero a flabby figure, the villain a monster, the heroine a bore."

+ — Nation 96:106 Ja 30 '13 270w

SHEEHAN, PATRICK AUGUSTINE -Continued.
 "Miriam Lucas" is a long and complex story, as an attempt to show more than one side of life must be. But it is unfailingly interesting. Its character sketches are both vivid and lovable. It presents, accurately and impartially, one picture after another of Irish life. And in its completeness it is not only interesting but valuable."

+ N Y Times 17:692 N 24 '12 370w

SHEEHAN, PERLEY POORE. The seer. *$1.20
 2 Moffat 12-23762

"The story is told by a young book-agent who in a southern town meets a wandering revivalist in whom he sees vast possibilities for good. This man, the seer, is a child of nature with a great heart and one idea—to uplift his fellows. Beginning with a circus tent to which the outcasts of the town are invited, the movement spreads until a new city known as Joytown arises. The seer's creed is not that of the churches. He denounces all belief in hell. Kindness and Hope are his watchwords. He accomplishes miracles of regeneration and even cures the sick of their ills. Like many saints before him, he suffers martyrdom as his reward for a life of self-sacrifice."—Bookm

"Mr. Sheehan just misses having written a big book. The theme is tremendous, many of the episodes are described with power, and the figure of the mystic seer stands out well. It is a sincere attempt to accomplish something beyond the reach of most men." P. G. Herbert, Jr.

+ Bookm 36:463 D '12 200w

"This is a book which grips, in which the author, Perley Poore Sheehan, says something worth reading."

+ Ind 74:990 My 1 '13 130w

"If the man himself could have been presented as a picture, and left at that, this would have been a better book: but it would not have been a story!"

+ Nation 95:538 D 5 '12 330w

"It is to the author's credit that he has succeeded in telling his story without sentimentality on the one hand or maudlin mysticism on the other. The charm that the book undoubtedly possesses lies in its entire simplicity, in the humanness of its hero, and the natural, personal quality of the author's narrative style."

+ N Y Times 17:692 N 24 '12 220w

SHELLEY, FRANCIS (WINCKLEY) lady.
 9 Diary of Frances, Lady Shelley; ed. by her grandson, Richard Edgecumbe. 2v v 2 il *$3.50 Scribner (12-15703)

v. 2. The first volume of Lady Shelley's "Diary" appeared last year. This second volume "carries the career of this brilliant member of the British nobility from 1818-1873, years through which her pen was constantly describing with rare aptness and much humor the great events of the times and the great personages." (Springfield Republican) "Wellington plays the most important part in its pages, but there are glances at other personages—Sir Robert Peel, Sir Walter Scott, Walter Savage Landor, Lady Caroline Lamb, and the royalty of England. . . . A letter from Sir Walter Scott 'to my husband's young kinsman Percy Shelley, who seems disposed to become a poet,' is included in the 'Diary,' and for the satisfaction of curious readers of the earlier volume a pedigree of both branches of the Shelley family prefaces the present book, giving the exact relationship existing between the young poet and the diarist." (N Y Times)

"Fully as interesting and valuable as the first."

+ A L A Bkl 10:27 S '13

"The second volume of Lady Shelley's diary is not so interesting as the first; we might indeed have missed some of the later pages without any abatement of value."

+ — Ath 1913,1:693 Je 28 700w

+ Boston Transcript p21 J1 2 '13 270w

"Of far greater interest than its predecessor, chiefly because it adds considerably to our knowledge of Sir Walter Scott and the Duke of Wellington." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p5 J1 12 '13 320w

Dial 55:309 O 16 '13 430w

"The second volume of Lady Shelley's diary is more interesting, in some ways, than the first."

+ Nation 97:413 O 30 '13 730w

"The second volume fully equals its predecessor in its abundant and brisk anecdote and its intimate, often undignified, glimpses of famous folk of the period."

+ N Y Times 18:426 Ag 10 '13 800w

+ Outlook 104:768 Ag 2 '13 70w

+ Spec 110:1059 Je 21 '13 1850w

"This is to be rated one of the most entertaining and interesting of the recent volumes of letters and diaries which fall into a general class with it."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 24 '13 1200w

SHELLEY, HENRY CHARLES. Art of the Wallace collection. (Art galleries of Europe) il *$2 Page 13-11314

The "book opens with a short preface, then sketches the history of the Wallace collection, with some account of Lord Hertford, by whom was bequeathed to Richard Wallace what was to constitute the best part of the now famous art treasures bearing the legatee's name, and then proceeds to describe the more remarkable features of the collection as they are to be seen in the various galleries of the museum. Illustrations from photographs, forty-eight in number help to call attention to what is most noteworthy; and the book is well indexed at the end."—Dial

"An entertaining account for the general reader."

+ A L A Bkl 10:150 D '13

"The volume is carefully prepared, shows the courage of the writer's preferences, and is interesting."

+ Dial 55:54 J1 16 '13 400w

"Mr. Shelley is a very competent and clever literary journalist, and, as usual, acquits himself most creditably."

+ Ind 74:1204 My 29 '13 80w

+ Int Studio 51:sup140 D '13 250w

"Of real value to students of art. It should prove especially valuable to the intending sojourner in London, who very likely may not realize the particular importance of this collection."

+ Outlook 104:393 Je 21 '13 40w

"A concise, well written volume with good illustrations."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 3 '13 1150w

SHELLEY, HENRY CHARLES. Royal castles of England. il *$3 Page 13-18695

"This volume carries on a series of books about famous old castles in many countries. Mr. Shelley has brought together facts, legends, and traditions about a large number of ancient strongholds, some well known by name to every one; of many others most Americans at least have never heard. There are numerous photographs."—Outlook

"Readable account."

+ A L A Bkl 10:150 D '13

"The text narrates the various romances and tragedies in a pleasant and unpretentious manner." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 38:384 D '13 70w

"He has succeeded not only in enveloping his admirable series of legends, facts, and traditions of all the English castles of prominence with an atmosphere of historic charm and imaginative splendor, but he has interpreted the local sentiment relating thereto in an interesting and accurate fashion."

+ Ind 76:39 O 2 '13 70w

"A work . . . sure to interest the intelligent reader, young or old. We do not like to criticize a work which has been so admirably done, but we regret to see that the old Sussex fortress of Bramber on the Arun is not mentioned."

+ — Lit D 47:584 O 4 '13 220w

Outlook 105:153 S 20 '13 60w

SHELLEY, HENRY CHARLES. Tragedy of "Mary Stuart. il *$3 Little A13-2060

This story "differentiates itself from the thousand and one other narrations of the same famous history in the concentration of attention on the fifteen most eventful and significant months of her 'long and weary pilgrimage' (to quote her own phrase), and the summary treatment, in the form of prologue and epilogue, of the less stirring earlier and later years. The bulk of the book has to do with the murder of Darnley, the precipitate Bothwell marriage, the imprisonment in Lochleven castle, and the defeat at Langside. . . . The author declares himself to be an impartial chronicler, not a partisan, and his straightforward narrative seems to prove that he is unentangled by the fatal fascinations of his heroine."—Dial

+ A L A Bkl 10:108 N '13

"An uncritical assurance—which may attract the general reader—is, we think, the chief defect of the book. It has, however, considerable literary merit, though the style is occasionally melodramatic and not always amenable to grammar."

— + Ath 1913,2:275 S 20 500w

"Though we may quarrel with the opinions of the author and with the biased estimate which he gives of the queen, we must admit that the story is well and clearly told, and that he brings to the task a full store of research and knowledge, and a clear presentation of the dramatic facts of her life from the date of her farewell to France until in England she gladly ascended the scaffold to lay aside the joys of life which had been stolen from her so long before by the jealous cousin." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p25 S 17 '13 570w

"No notes or bibliographical references are introduced, the evident purpose being to present the Queen of Scots in a few clear and telling strokes with strict avoidance of irrelevant details. In this Mr. Shelley has succeeded."

+ Dial 55:267 O 1 '13 220w

"Mr. Shelley tells nothing that is new; but he has the gift of story telling, and there is probably no book in which the love, the crime and punishment are depicted so connectedly or so vividly as in these pages."

+ — Ind 76:95 O 9 '13 170w

"This book is especially valuable for its direct method, concise form, and its accurate adherence to historical fact."

+ Lit D 47:768 O 25 '13 200w

"No matter how much one may have read upon the subject, he finds here a presentation so fresh and vivid as to be virtually new."

+ N Y Sun p7 O 18 '13 1400w

"However much he may feel justified in relieving the reader of the burden of voluminous footnotes, the omission is indisputably a serious detraction from the value of the work. Although Mr. Shelley is a writer and a scholar of established reputation, it is yet asking too much even of the lay reader to accept without question many a fact which has been disputed for centuries."

+ — N Y Times 18:514 O 5 '13 1100w

"Mr. Shelley has an instinct for the dramatic and he tells his story well."

+ R of R 48:506 O '13 120w

"Mr. Shelley's book would have been more valuable, certainly more really impartial, had he thought fit to show something of the other side of the shield."

+ — Spec 111:658 O 25 '13 470w

SHELTON, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Lakes-to-the-Gulf deep waterway: a study of the proposed channel, terminals, water craft, freight movement, and rail and boat rates. il $1 W: A. Shelton, 6146 Greenwood av., Chicago 12-18569

"Mr. Shelton's monograph is a challenge to the 'promoters' of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf deep waterway to give proof that the investment of a large amount of public funds in their transportation scheme would be justified. A study of the statistics of the present traffic on the Mississippi river, of existing rail and water rates, and of the difficulties of navigation that would be encountered in the proposed waterway, lead him to the conclusion that from the standpoint of traffic at least, the enterprise would be a colossal failure."—Ann Am Acad

"While Mr. Shelton has done little more than restate the conclusions of other opponents of the proposed deep waterway, his monograph is an addition to the literature on the subject because it deals only with the specific traffic difficulties and with these in a concise, concrete manner." H. E. Hoagland.

+ Am Econ R 3:115 Mr '13 200w

"The full citation and comparison of rates make it valuable to students."

+ A L A Bkl 9:297 Mr '13

Ann Am Acad 45:271 Ja '13 120w

SHEPARD, MORGAN (JOHN MARTIN, pseud.). Prayers for little men and women. il $1.25 (18c) Harper 12-25192

"A book of seventy-four prayers, all of them sincere in effort and exact in verse, is here presented in charming 'format.' It will serve many mothers who would vary the 'Now I lay me' of their early childhood."—Lit D

"Stevenson's Vaillma prayers have become classics. One doubts the same of this collection of prayers for children, in the form of verse; but they are pretty and simple, and many people are going to like them." Hildgarde Hawthorne.

+ — Bookm 36:461 D '12 50w

+ Ind 73:1081 N 7 '12 30w

"Despite the earnest effort of John Martin to produce easy verse, there is an artificial introspection accredited to children which is altogether false." M. J. Moses.

— Ind 73:1371 D 12 '12 50w

"Has he not at times, instead of praying from the heart of a child, imposed upon the child a prayer that does not come from youth? Yet separately these prayers breathe sweet sentiment and encourage the best in one. Mr. Rae's decorations are in good taste."

+ — Lit D 45:1076 D 7 '12 130w

"The rhymed sentiments are sincere though sometimes forced. The number alone stifles one with their piety."

+ — N Y Times 17:748 D 1 '12 30w

SHERMAN, CHARLES. Upper crust. il $1.25 (1½c) Bobbs 13-9287

The hero of the story is Algernon Van Rensselaer Todd who cannot be convinced by his mother that an inheritor of millions need work. As a sociological experiment he changes places with one, Joseph Holmes, a peddler, and starts out to see the world. Finding himself later in the summer in Maine near one of the family estates of the Todds, he calls, to learn that Mollie O'Toole, the pretty young housekeeper sent up by his mother, is posing as "Mrs. Todd," the mistress of the house and step-mother to the absent Algernon. Not relishing the idea of playing step-son to the pretty Mollie, he applies for the position of chauffeur and as "Joseph Holmes" acts in that capacity. Later appears the real Holmes to announce that he is Algernon Van Rensselaer Todd—and there are other complications, too, many of them.

"Jolly good reading, original and clever."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '13 350w

SHERMAN, CHARLES—Continued.

"It is an entertaining tale in spite of too much smart talk on the young man's part and far too many declamations on the woes of poor girls from the young woman."

+ — N Y Sun p3 My 10 '13 180w

"It is the sort of novel that sentimental young women of the grammar school degree of mental development are likely to find of absorbing interest."

— N Y Times 18:585 O 26 '13 200w

"A pretty love story with humorous accompaniments and confused identities follow, keeping the reader entertained and amused throughout."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 5 '13 280w

SHERRILL, CHARLES HITCHCOCK. Stained glass tour in Italy. il $2.50 Lane 13-20792

The author has previously written books on the stained glass of France and England. Italy is not a "stained glass country," but the diligent search of Mr. Sherrill has discovered many excellent examples in Rome, Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Milan, Florence, Venice, and other cities.

"The book is pleasantly written."

+ Ath 1913,1:702 Je 28 220w

Dial 55:481 D 1 '13 140w

Reviewed by C. E. Hesselgrave.

Ind 46:510 D 11 '13 56w

"In the majority of the illustrations the windows come too small to illustrate the various points made by the author, but we are well aware of the great difficulties attendant upon photographing interiors of churches, and stained glass especially."

+ — Int Studio 50:250 S '13 100w

"Mr. Sherrill is a competent and agreeable cicerone, but possibly too intent on the main issue."

+ — Nation 97:492 N 20 '13 160w

"He has much of interest to say about Italian stained glass, but his tour is not very adventurous; we fancy it may repay him to examine the Italian field more carefully. The illustrations are good."

+ — N Y Sun p4 O 4 '13 120w

+ Outlook 105:498 N 1 '13 170w

"His copious historical information concerning the cities of Lucca and Milan are entertaining enough, but have slender bearing upon his subject."

+ — Sat R 116:622 N 15 '13 730w

"The delightful photographs of interiors of Italian churches which illustrate Mr. Sherrill's book are in themselves enough to attract many purchasers. But the book is by no means unworthy of the pictures."

+ Spec 110:1122 Je 28 '13 230w

SHIELDS, FREDERIC. Life and letters of Frederic Shields; ed. by Ernestine Mills. il $3 Longmans A13-996

"Mrs. Mills gives an admirable account of Shields's work as an illustrator, describes sympathetically his early struggles, and explains how he was, at length captured by the pre-Raphaelite movement and then devoted himself to that decorative painting which has its chief memorial in the Chapel of the ascension on the Bayswater road in London. But for the general reader the chief attraction of the life will be those passages which relate to the strange romance of Shields's marriage." (Boston Transcript) "Amongst the typical works reproduced some, including 'One of the bread watchers' and 'Whistle and answer,' display considerable imaginative power." (Int Studio)

+ Ath 1912,2:735 D 14 670w

"The book has a two-fold interest: that which inheres to its new light on Ruskin, Kingsley, and the many artist friends of Shields, and that which is native to the somewhat eccentric character of its subject." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ja 4 '13 400w

"The extracts given from his diaries, if not always presenting that inexplicable fascination of personality, reveals a conscientious devotion to his ideals and loyalty to friendship that is certain to win a moral admiration for the achievement of the career here recorded." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p28 F 12 '13 1250w

"Not the least interesting portions of a book that is full of psychological suggestions are the accounts of Shields' relations with Madox Brown, Rossetti, Morris, and Holman Hunt."

+ Int Studio 48:346 F '13 280w

"The elevated character of the man, and his close relation to the Rossetti circle, will doubtless attract sympathetic readers to this tactfully compiled and fully illustrated memoir."

+ Nation 96:582 Je 5 '13 450w

+ Spec 110:sup692 Ap 26 '13 500w

SHOEMAKER, MICHAEL MYERS. Indian pages and pictures. il $2.50 Putnam 12-29299

A seasoned traveler this time "takes his readers on a year of leisurely journeyings" in Rajputana, Sikkim, the Punjab and Kashmir, so rarely seen by the globe-trotter. "He should be commended for omitting the familiar rhapsody on the Taj Mahal and the story of the mutiny without which no book on India heretofore has been complete. He does follow the footsteps of Lalla Rookh, 'to the fair vale of Kashmir and as the old Moghuls were wont to do, drifts dreamily amidst her encircling snows and upon her lakes and rivers.'" (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 9:387 My '13

"Taken altogether, it is a sound and sensible production, with much to interest and amuse those who care more for up-to-date information about the country than for a knowledge of its past. It would have benefited by careful proof-reading, for occasionally sentences are obscure."

+ — Ath 1913,1:278 Mr 8 450w

"He has a style with which he takes readers through the highways and byways of the lands he visits, and he explains fully what he sees today and what has been seen in days and years gone by." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 15 '13 1100w

"One can only say that our traveller has added a unit to the large number of readable but negligible books on India."

+ — Dial 54:385 My 1 '13 400w

"Worth reading."

+ Ind 75:47 Jl 3 '13 80w

"The writer, an observant traveller, has given us a book well worth reading for its sympathetic rendering of the local atmosphere. While very successful in the general effect of his pen pictures, done with a bold, free hand, he is, at times, inaccurate in details."

+ — Nation 96:263 Mr 13 '13 280w

N Y Sun p4 D 21 '12 80w

"Mr. Shoemaker talks jauntily of many things. He writes graphic narrative and good description. But he has a garrulous pen that leads him, at the slightest suggestion, so far afield that only the most conscientious reader will follow him without occasional resentment at his loquacity."

+ — N Y Times 18:39 Ja 26 '13 220w

"Many books have been written about India, and some are more authoritative than is the present volume. But few are more entertaining."

+ — Outlook 103:500 Mr 1 '13 50w

+ R of Rs 47:378 Mr '13 40w

"On the whole he 'garrules' pleasantly, and there are photographs to illustrate his remarks, and a good many people will certainly get and enjoy his rather lengthy account of his time in India."

+ — Sat R 115:527 Ap 26 '13 170w

SHORES, ROBERT JAMES. New brooms.
12 *$1.25 (2c) Bobbs 13-18198

Any one who has ever read letters addressed "To the editor" and signed "Constant Reader" or "Old Subscriber" will delight in this volume. The author has hit upon the happy device of presenting his whimsical, little essays in the form of letters written by a variety of persons, of both sexes and of many professions, and addressed "To the editor of the Idler," "A bachelor on women; On pensioning writers; A puritan in Bohemia; Beds for the bad; Is Chesterton a man alive? On looking backward; The literary life; The necessity for beggars; and The fruit of fame, are some of the subjects on which they write.

"The method of presentation suffers in verisimilitude by the fact that in style, manner of thought, and habit of expression, they are all evidently from the same pen. But they are gracefully written and are so full of neatly worked out whimsicalities, epigrams, and pungent truths that the book makes very pleasant entertainment for an occasional half hour."

+ — N Y Times 18:628 N 16 '13 500w

SHUFFREY, L. A. English fireplace: a history of the development of the chimney, chimney-piece and firegrate, with their accessories from the earliest times to the beginning of the 19th century. ll *$1.60 Helburn (Eng ed 13-6947)

"Mr. Shuffrey makes a detailed study of the evolution of the fireplace as a feature of the domestic architecture of England, shows how the usefulness and the comfort of it were gradually increased, how presently it began to be treated as a subject for ornament and a decorative possibility, and traces also its constant vital connection with the development of the various styles of domestic architecture that have come and gone in England." (N Y Times) "The volume is well indexed and contains two hundred illustrations in the text. The chief feature is, however, the series of one hundred and thirty excellent reproductions in collo-type after photographs, chiefly by Mr. W. Galsworthy Davies, of some of the finest examples of fireplaces in England." (Int Studio)

"Mr. Shuffrey, than whom no one is better equipped, might have given some data as to the size of the rooms in which the examples illustrated are placed, and the position they occupy. In other respects he has written a monograph covering the whole field in a thoroughly efficient and practical manner."

+ — Ath 1913,1:19 Ja 4 350w

"Sumptuous and exhaustive treatise."

+ Int Studio 48:347 F '13 180w

+ N Y Times 18:39 Ja 26 '13 250w

SHURTER, EDWIN DU BOIS, and TAYLOR, CARL CLEVELAND. Both sides of 100 public questions briefly debated. *$1.25 (3½c) Hinds 13-8251

Present day subjects, such as Labor unions, Chinese immigration, Simplified spelling, and Equal suffrage, furnish the questions for debate presented in this book. "Under each question are given the main lines of argument, affirmative and negative. These arguments are stated in distinct, concise propositions (usually four each) which cover the issues in the question. . . . The arguments on each side are followed by references, selected for the definite purpose of substantiating the propositions as stated." (Preface)

"Will be peculiarly acceptable to high-school students who are interested in debating."

+ Dial 54:349 Ap 16 '13 50w

+ N Y Times 18:305 My 18 '13 80w

SIDGWICK, ARTHUR HUGH. Walking essays. 3 *$1.40 Longmans (Eng ed A13-863)

"There is a deal of sound sense mixed with delightful nonsense in Mr. Sidgwick's contentions. He writes to please himself, and, evidently an Oxford scholar, he has a wide range of culture, including Kant and Meredith, Greek and German." (Ath) This royal exercise is eulogized under the following headings: Walking and conversation; Walker miles; Walking and music; Walking, sport and athletics; Walking as a social form; Walking in literature; Walking equipment; Walking alone.

+ A L A Bkl 9:387 My '13

"We ventured in advance to suspect a Sidgwick of philosophy and humour, and we are amply justified. The author of 'Walking essays' has produced a really delightful book in praise of his craft, and seeks with all the ardour of an accomplished sophist to reduce the pretensions of tea-table hostesses, and other people who do not take walking so seriously as they should. Every page holds something aptly said."

+ Ath 1912,2:474 O 26 330w

"There is really nothing whatever of the petty or the pompous in Mr. Sidgwick's pages, and his rhetoric is unimpeachable. Indeed, of all the fine fellows, from Hazlitt to Mr. Belloc, who have written of walking, few have shown a neater facility of composition, a fuller flavor of wit and high spirits, or a closer philosophic grasp of the subject. And it should be remembered that Mr. Sidgwick has had to sustain his pitch through eight chapters, whereas the others wrote only a single essay apiece." W. R. Browne.

+ Dial 54:98 F 1 '13 1250w

"Mr. Sidgwick rides his hobby with a mock solemnity that is quietly amusing. The most entertaining essay is on 'Walking in literature.'"

+ Nation 96:15 Ja 2 '13 180w

SIDGWICK, ETHEL. Succession: a comedy of 10 the generations. *$1.50 (1½c) Small 13-12595

The story is the continuation of the study in temperament begun in "Promise." Antoine Edgell, the child genius of that story appears here as a boy of fourteen, winning his first laurels in public, the pride and hope, and sometimes the despair of his family, the Lemaures, who have already produced two members of genius in Charles Lemaure, the father, and Henriette, his daughter, and Antoine's mother, who now look to Antoine to continue the tradition. With subtle analysis the author sets forth the boy's delicate temperament and shows with rare skill the constantly increasing tension of his sensitive nerves. At the last he is rescued by his English father and taker for a time from the musical atmosphere to a life more free and offering a better opportunity for a natural development.

"Though it has the flashes of wit, keen insight and remarkable character drawing of the earlier books, and is a much more serious exhibition of the power of the author, it will not have their charm for the average reader."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:71 O '13

"A finished literary performance which, regarded from many points of view, is remarkable. It may be argued that it shares the limitations of genre music. To this extent it might be urged that this is not a great human novel. The technical quality of the dialogue and the restrained yet profound emotional interest show the artistry of the writer."

+ — Ath 1913,1:489 My 3 200w

"In her new novel 'Succession,' Miss Sidgwick has written a work of fiction that has the enduring quality of art. She has made of the novel a fine art in a different way than any of her contemporaries. As a craftsman of this kind it is safe to say she has no superior, certainly few equals among the great novelists of today. She has added a new technique to the novel. And yet there is nothing superficial, nothing written for the sake of an elegant surface, in a single page of her book. It is big with life on a tremendous scale of subtle treatment. It is not only one of the big-novels of the years, but a permanent contribution to English fiction. A rare, fine achievement; a masterpiece of art and temperament and life." W. S. B.

SIDGWICK, ETHEL.—Continued.

+ + Boston Transcript p24 S 24 '13 1700w

"We suspect that most male readers may get rather tired of Antoine's artlessness, in the course of these five hundred pages."

— Nation 97:312 O 2 '13 350w

"Antoine's successes and nervous sufferings and illnesses become tiresome through repetition; we feel sorry for him, but are glad to leave him. It is a pity that this should be so, for as a piece of psychological analysis Miss Sidgwick's book is impressive."

+ — N Y Times 18:502 S 28 '13 250w

"It is too much elaborated and minute for the hasty reader who loves action and the dramatic. But it is sincere work, is close and deep in its study of temperament and artistic 'entourage,' and is unusually true in character drawing."

+ — Outlook 105:280 O 4 '13 70w

SIDIS, BORIS. Psychology of laughter. *$2 (2½c) Appleton 13-17010

The author has attempted to examine some of the many and widely differing manifestations of the ludicrous in order that he may arrive at some conception of the fundamental principles that underlie laughter. He finds, as others have, that the basis of the comic is incongruity. "We laugh at the real unreality or unreal reality." Also he finds that, whatever the case, "laughter arises from the consciousness of our superiority." Unlike Bergson he does not exclude comedy from the sphere of art and concludes that "the highest point reached by laughter is intimately related with the highest intellectual, aesthetic and moral development." His pages are illuminated with many examples of the comic, the ludicrous, of wit, satire, etc.

A L A Bkl 10:27 S '13

"It is not a book to be read in the solitude of the closet; it must be read aloud and discussed."

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 3 '13 570w

"One gets the impression that this book, like Moses's razors in the 'Vicar of Wakefield,' was made to sell."

— Dial 55:312 O 16 '13 130w

"The volume is more than valuable in its intimations as to the legitimate sources of laughter, and the author's reflections upon the 'Ludicrous,' 'Ridicule and social decadence,' 'Ridicule, malice, and the human'; his differentiations between wit and mere ridicule; and, best of all, his presentation of the truly logical advance of the sentiment of humor from its beginning as a provocative of the laughter of hostility, of unkindness, and meanness, into its relation with the infinite, are worthy of the study not only of the practitioners of the arts of laugh-making, but of lay readers as well, who by their demand consciously or unconsciously influence the quality and character of the supply." J. K. Bangs.

+ Lit D 47:1011 N 22 '13 2200w

Reviewed by Hereward Carrington.

N Y Times 18:413 J1 27 '13 550w

"When [the author] passes from the laughable to the question of the function of laughter, his work may be unreservedly commended. In fact, his exposition of the connection of laughter with the 'subconscious reserve fund' of nervous energy now known to play an important part in human efficiency is so informative that it should be read by all who would keep abreast of the progress of scientific thought in its bearings on the inner life and development of man."

+ — Outlook 104:963 Ag 23 '13 320w

"Has not only value but charm."

+ R of Rs 48:381 S '13 150w

SIDNEY, GERALD. My dog and I. fl *$1 (4c) Holt 12-24944

A dog story that is the fulfilment of the author's early ambition to write a book to "expose the awful possibilities inherent in the blandest of puppies. . . . The book is founded on fact, the indisputable fact that if you keep a puppy it will sooner or later form a stumbling block in your ways of peace; hence it should appeal to all who have suffered at the hands (or rather paws—muddy paws) of the canine species, and will, it is hoped, serve as a warning to those who are on the verge of rashly purchasing a pup without strict inquiry into its moral nature."

"Mr. Sidney is decidedly humorous in places, but he overdoes his effects, and his book is spoilt by exaggeration. Were he less uproarious, he would probably be funnier."

+ — Ath 1912, 2: 310 S 21 28w

Lit D 46:473 Mr 1 '13 130w

"A 'Jeu d'esprit' which may be recommended to the taste of the ten-year-old whose sense of humor does not find itself sufficiently developed to appreciate the relative subtleties and delicacies of 'Peck's bad boy.'"

+ — Nation 95: 565 D 12 '12 350w

"Old fashioned British farce of the horse play order of wit. It is no book for dog lovers since the one dog in the book only serves to make trouble. Ridiculous people get into all sorts of absurd scrapes, which follow fast on one another. The narrative is helped out with comical pictures."

+ — N Y Sun p 14 N 23 '12 70w

SILBERRAD, UNA LUCY. Keren of Lowbole. *$1.25 Doran 13-7337

"Keren is only a natural and charming young woman, but life in the forests of Lowbole develops many traits that make her an unusual figure in an original and well-told story. The time is that of witch days and perhaps it is not strange that she is suspected of witchcraft, since she has for a 'mother a gypsy, of the people long known for their dealings with darkness, the father a worker in curious arts.' . . . A missing will which restores a noble young man to estates seized by a cruel step-mother, gives a sustaining interest to the plot, and among the most attractive figures is a travelling dissenter who has a remarkably apt facility for quoting Scripture."—Boston Transcript

"A good story of mystery well sustained, of adventure and love."

+ A L A Bkl 10:72 O '13

"It would be ungracious to carp at a pleasant story which, though by no means free from faults, is gracefully written and never uninteresting."

+ — Ath 1913,1:219 F 22 80w

Boston Transcript p20 S 10 '13 200w

"An unusual and a fascinating book."

+ N Y Times 18:592 N 2 '13 230w

"In its own class the story is one of the best we have seen for a long time."

+ Outlook 104:767 Ag 2 '13 130w

"It is not quite so successful as the author's modern novel."

+ — Spec 110:721 Ap 26 '13 20w

SILBERRAD, UNA LUCY. Success. *$1.20 Doran (Eng ed 12-4465)

An inventor genius loses his position with a foundry through disputes over the rights of patents. He accepts work and a home with an uncle, whose daughter "by degrees puts enough heart into Michael to make him, the outcast of Galhardy's, attempt to recover some of the reputation he has lost in the eyes of the engineering world; but at more than one crisis . . . Michael's instinct is more to get the work done than to make it known that he did it. This is Mrs. Silberrad's purpose in calling this novel 'Success'; fame is not the only spur that raises the clear spirit." (Sat R)

"An absorbing, well written story, which should interest young men."

+ A L A Bkl 9:346 Ap '13

+ Nation 97:78 J1 24 '13 250w

"No fault can be found with the thesis, nor with the charming if rather elaborate descriptions and the lifelike minor characters. The author has, however, extraordinary ideas about business methods and equally strange ideas about inventions; these render absurd some of the most earnest portions of her tale, while the mess into which the hero gets is wholly unintelligible."

— + N Y Sun p4 F 22 '13 150w

"The story flows easily, and is full of clever scenes. The writing is often careless, abounding in colloquialisms not reduced to order. A competent proof-reader should have eliminated these and innumerable other small carelessnesses."

+ — Sat R 113:401 Mr 30 '12 330w

"The story, like all Miss Silberrad's work, is admirably written."

+ Spec 108:446 Mr 16 '12 320w

SILL, E. MATHER. The child: its care, diet and common ills. il *$1 (2c) Holt 13-9865

A book designed for the progressive young mother who "is not satisfied to follow the customs and dictation of her mother or grandmother. . . . The young mother of today . . . desires to acquire that confidence in herself which shall make her mistress of such situations as will probably arise in the bringing up of her children. . . . The author has endeavored to answer all the questions that the intelligent young mother would wish to ask, and to explain the problems that are apt to confront her."—Preface

"A capital handy inhabitant of the medicine closet."

+ Chaut 72:62 S 20 '13 100w

Ind 75:340 Ag 7 '13 30w

"The book's very simple, concise language will increase its value in times of emergency."

+ N Y Times 18:559 O 19 '13 230w

SIMKHOVITCH, VLADIMIR GREGORIE-VITCH. Marxism versus socialism. *$1.50 (2c) Holt 13-15024

This work is an examination into the Marxism theory of socialism and a study of the modern deviations from that theory with an attempt to explain them. The phases of the subjects as discussed in the various chapters are: Popular misunderstandings about the rôle of Marx's theory of value; Marxian socialism in outline; The economic interpretation of history; Concerning concentration of production; The disappearance of the middle class; The theory of increasing misery; Data relating to the status of the wage-earner; Class-struggle conceptions: forerunners of Marx; The Marxian class-struggle doctrine; The theory of crises; The social revolution and the inevitable cataclysm. The collapse of Marx's theory of value; Marx's attitude towards eternal justice.

"A logical, scholarly analysis."

+ A L A Bkl 10:150 D '13

"Among the many recent works on socialism there are few, if any, which give a clearer insight into Marx's doctrines or a better analysis of modern theories as contrasted with them."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:682 N '13 70w

Ath 1913,2:sup398 O 11 60w

"Professor Simkhovitch has contributed in this book the most important study of an all-absorbing question."

+ Boston Transcript p20 J1 9 '13 550w

"A discussion of socialism satisfying and thorough. It is no primer, but while sane in presentation of live issues, and scholarly in tone, even to footnotes, authorities, quotations, and index, it is very readable and stimulating."

+ Chaut 71:173 J1 26 '13 170w

"A careful study of this book will be found a great aid to clear thinking on current political and economic questions."

+ Educ R 46:424 N '13 60w

"The work has been well done, and in a way was worth the doing."

+ Nation 97:357 O 16 '13 370w

+ N Y Times 18:418 Ag 3 '13 1050w

"A peculiarly keen analysis of Marxian socialism."

+ R of Rs 48:379 S '13 70w

"The argument is well sustained throughout and the book is illumined and enriched by the fruits of a wide, desultory and curious reading. Despite an occasional tendency to wander into devious, though always interesting by-paths, the author maintains a sure sense of proportion and an unusual acquaintance with the whole literature of Marxist criticism." W. E. Weyl.

+ Survey 30:650 Ag 23 '13 550w

SIMMS, PARIS MARION. What must the church do to be saved? *$1.50 Revell 13-17693

As a whole the book is a plea for the unified Protestant church. "The author is a Presbyterian minister in active service, and he cannot, therefore, be criticized as an outsider engaged in finding fault with the church. The book is the outgrowth of a lecture which has been received with sympathy by churches, religious assemblies, Young men's Christian associations, and Chautauqua audiences. The bulk of the book is in Part 2, entitled 'The discreditable situation within the church.' Under this general head the author takes up 'the un-Christian divisions' which accompany denominationalism; 'the appalling situation in the country church'; 'the absurdities of creed-subscription'; and 'the abuse of ecclesiastical authority.'" (Bib World)

"While the volume contains nothing essentially new, it is an able and useful summary of present conditions. In general the author's remedies for existing troubles are also commonplace, though stated with power. On the whole, he has given us a good handbook for today's religious workers and students."

+ — Bib World 42:319 N '13 350w

Chaut 72:78 S 27 '13 240w

Outlook 104:1010 Ag 30 '13 330w

SIMONTON, IDA VERA. Hell's playground. *$1.35 Moffat 13-13493

"Her theme is the same, identical theme that has served Mr. Conrad a dozen times, in 'Almayer's folly' and most of the volumes which succeeded it,—the inevitable, foreseen degeneration of the white man in the tropics, due to three chief causes: the absence of his ordained companion, the white woman, the slow poisoning from alcohol, and the still more pernicious degradation wrought by the native female. . . . Incidentally it should be noted that Miss Simonton's real interest is not with the individual, but with the system, and that she does not hesitate to attack in unsparing terms the foreign administration in French and Belgian Congo."—Bookm

"The spirit of the narration, in spite of many crudities of style and immaturities of judgment, inevitably challenges comparison with Joseph Conrad,—the Conrad of a decade ago, the Conrad of 'The heart of darkness.' Miss Simonton indulges in a Zolaesque frankness of utterance, which must have required some courage on the part of her publishers to reproduce. This is not a novel to be indiscriminately recommended; but to the thinking class who are not afraid of blunt phrasing, and who wish to be told the truth, it will furnish food for thought." F: T. Cooper.

+ — — Bookm 36:565 Ja '13 470w

SIMONTON, IDA VERA—Continued.

"The author's foreword to 'Hell's playground' is excellent, and the book, for all its crudities and weaknesses, is not without promise. Miss Simonton has sincerity, purpose. Some day we feel she will write a better book."

— + N Y Times 17:628 O 27 '12 250w

SIMPSON, EVELYN BLANTYRE. Robert
Louis Stevenson originals. il *$2.50 Scribner
13-35186

"As Miss Simpson says, though he 'left no lengthy autobiography, throughout all his work are legible sign-posts which point to his routes through life. We may, therefore, follow him around the globe, and Miss Simpson's method being like Mr. Crockett's we have a faithful series of pictures not merely of the story-teller's characters, but of the story-teller himself. Much autobiography and personalia give the volume an added interest."—Boston Transcript

"We do not think the time has yet come to give a satisfactory account of the Stevenson originals, nor is the subject fitted to the loose style of the author. At the same time it is fair to say that the book shows considerable industry both in text and illustrations, and contains an attractive sketch of the author's brother."

— + Ath 1912,2:691 D 7 80w

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 21 '12 170w

+ Nation 96:601 Je 12 '13 250w

+ Spec 110:sup693 Ap 26 '13 220w

SIMPSON, HAROLD. Rambles in Norway.
(Rambles ser.) il *$2.50 Estes
(Eng ed 13-1809)

"This is a gossiping guide-book, with the details of hotel fees and travelling arrangements omitted." (Ath) "Mr. Simpson has covered most of the picturesque points on the southern and western coasts of Norway, that land of fjords, glacier-capped mountains and waterfalls, of which those who travel there are sure to retain lifelong recollections." (Lit D) Characteristic chapter titles are: An enchanted voyage; A haven of peace; A perfect day; The garden of the north; The wonderful mountains; The wonderful Geiranger.

"It will hardly appeal to those who have not visited Norway or are not intending to do so, though it is free from dullness. There are numerous illustrations, but no map."

— + Ath 1912,1:465 Ap 27 50w

"The book, both in its reading matter and in its many illustrations, colored and monotone, inspires a desire to ramble among the lakes and fjords and mountains of the land of the midnight sun."

+ Dial 53:496 D 16 '12 230w

"The illustrations are all interesting. Those in color, however, heighten too much some of the real effect."

+ — Lit D 45: 1133 D 14 '12 80w

"He has translated his zest into print with such telling effect that the stay-at-home reader will promise himself a trip to Norway at the first opportunity."

+ N Y Times 17:639 N 24 '12 120w

SINCLAIR, MAY. Combined maze. il *$1.35
(1c) Harper 13-3068

"As Miss Sinclair was inspired by the Greek idea of dramatic poesy when she found the hero of 'The divine fire,' so she is inspired here by the Greek idea of physical perfection." (N Y Times) This is another story of cockney London; of the land of little clerks; of the young men and women who, after long days on high office stools, spend enchanted nights in the London polytechnic gymnasium, where on the night of the Grand Display they run together the intricate windings of the combined maze. Young Ransome ran the maze with Winnie Dymond, toward whom he had experienced a queer feeling of tenderness mixed with a sense of absurdity until Violet Usher disillusioned him—made him see that no really nice woman would appear so in public, in short tunic and long black stockings. He had not been able to marry Winnie; he could not afford it—not for years and years. The years of waiting proved his undoing; he married Violet Usher, and found that once linked with her he must tread with her to the end the complicated maze of life.

"Miss Sinclair writes vividly and with sympathy of the class she depicts; but some unpleasant details, which add nothing to the interest or strength of the book, would have been better omitted."

+ — Ath 1913,1:251 Mr 1 120w

"It would be overpraise to say that this new volume is as big or important a novel as 'The divine fire'; but the difference this time is in degree and not in kind. It is a wise book and a rather cruel book that leaves a sort of heart-ache behind it—but the heart-ache is of a distinctly salutary sort." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:202 Ap '13 650w

"Incessantly Miss Sinclair makes her story alive and her characters live. She has never done this before. Artifice has now given way to reality and her novel now becomes a story of things as they are and of humanity as it is. The promise of 'The divine fire' and of 'The helpmate' is now fulfilled. At last Miss Sinclair has found herself." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '13 1400w

Reviewed by W: M. Payne.

Dial 54:465 Je 1 '13 200w

"A story which will seem to some readers spoiled by anti-climax, yet all the same as cleverly intuitive as this novelist's earlier work."

+ — Ind 74:1150 My 22 '13 30w

+ Nation 96:573 Je 5 '13 600w

"It is a story and a study—but first of all it is a story—a real story about real people, people keenly and kindly seen, fearlessly and faithfully yet sympathetically painted; some of them and some moments of them flashed upon you in a fashion and in words which belong to genius."

+ N Y Times 18:130 Mr 9 '13 1500w

"The author handles her theme with those clear, broad strokes which characterized 'The divine fire,' and those novels which have given her such high rank. There is in this book evident, however, a certain pessimism which is, to say the least, not satisfying to the moral or artistic sense."

+ — R of Rs 47:629 My '13 150w

"People who do not mind dwelling upon the extremes of misery which can be reached by human beings will do well to read 'The combined maze,' but readers who like their novels to distract them from the worries of everyday life had better not."

+ — Spec 110:721 Ap 26 '13 350w

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL, Jr. Sylvia. *$1.20
(1c) Winston 13-10539

Altho this is a novel of purpose, the story as such takes precedence over moral preaching. The heroine, a southern coquette and breaker of hearts, falls seriously in love with the first man who failed to fall immediate captive to her wiles. But he, altho admirable in every way, is disapproved of by the family because of a stain on his father's name. Separated from her lover, Sylvia is persuaded into a marriage with a man she does not love, a man of family and wealth. The tragedy that follows is suggested, not fully revealed, and there are several loose threads not woven in with the story's ending.

"Mr. Sinclair's construction is at least a trifle bewildering. For 402 pages we had been wondering who might be the old woman who was writing this story; in what part of the world she was writing it (which we didn't find out); why Sylvia's blind daughter was living with her (which we didn't find out); and why Sylvia's former lover was living with them (which we didn't find out, either)." R. B.

— + Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '13 950w
Nation 97:34 J1 10 '13 420w

"It may be said at once that this is the best novel Mr. Sinclair has yet written—so much the best that it stands in a class by itself." L. M. F.

+ — N Y Times 18:310 My 25 '13 750w

SINGH, BHAWANI. Travel pictures. il *$2
Longmans 13-35269

"Bhawani Singh's 'Travel pictures' is the record of an Indian potentate's tour of Europe; the author is an important man in his own country, being no other than the Raj Rana Bahadur of Jhalawar. He made his journey in 1904, and kept a diarial record of his observations and impressions 'primarily,' he remarks, 'for the benefit of my people in Jhalawar, whose ideas of European civilization were of the vaguest.' He traveled in Great Britain, France, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Switzerland, and Italy."—N Y Times

"There is a good deal of personal detail not of special importance."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:387 My '13

"A delightful book. He has a kind word for everybody, except for some Spaniards and Italians who ill-treated horses. Nothing escapes his eye; he inquires into the meaning of everything (even the three gilt balls over our pawn-shops); and he notices all sorts of odds and ends which have some interest, though they are so familiar to us that we never think about them. There are a few trifling mistakes that should be corrected."

+ — Ath 1912,2:777 D 23 630w

"Written in a charmingly simple manner that surprises the reader with its fascination."

+ Boston Transcript p28 F 12 '13 530w

"The story of the Prince's journey is told with delightful naïveté."

+ N Y Times 18:84 F 16 '13 150w

"It is of interest to note what particular things attracted his attention, and it must be said that he showed not only an enterprising spirit in seeing things which many modern tourists would not care about or would not notice, but that he describes what he saw with considerable graphic ability. Naturally, much of the matter, while it may be informative to the people in India, is to western readers the repetition of things known; and it is equally true that there is a good deal of personal detail which is not of special interest, at least to American readers."

+ — Outlook 103:278 F 1 '13 110w

— Spec 110:625 Ap 12 '13 200w

SINGMASTER, ELSIE. Gettysburg: stories of the red harvest and the aftermath. il *$1
(3c) Houghton 13-9476

The first three are stories of the battle of Gettysburg—of the first, the second, and the third days. The fourth is a story of that day of dedication on which Lincoln spoke his undying words. The remainder—and they are the best, judged as short stories—tell of the later days and of the old men for whom the days of battle still live in memory. The titles are: July the first; The home coming; Victory; The battle-ground; Gunner Criswell; The substitute; The retreat; The great day; Mary Bowman.

+ A L A Bkl 9:456 Je '13

"Not all the stories are of equal merit, those of the later period disclosing a familiarity with characters and conditions which seems rather lacking in the stories about the battle." A. M. Chase.

+ — Bookm 37:567 J1 '13 120w

"These absorbing little stories, tenderly pathetic and humorous by turn, have a directly human appeal, as unique as it is insistent. Through all the stories runs the inspiration of a high loyalty as unobtrusive as it is unmistakable."

+ + Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '13 320w

+ Ind 75:48 J1 3 '13 80w

"She writes with a restraint and a sense of fitness in mood and word which keep her clear of the exuberance and sentimentality with which our magazine fiction is wont to 'exploit' similar materials."

+ Nation 96:644 Je 26 '13 350w

"They leave a painful sense of injustice that is unavoidable."

+ — N Y Sun p4 My 3 '13 50w

N Y Times 18:344 Je 8 '13 50w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton.

N Y Times 18:377 Je 29 '13 200w

"Stories which have the ring of sincerity and truth."

+ R of Rs 48:251 Ag '13 100w

SKEAT, REV. WALTER WILLIAM. Science of etymology. *$1.50 Oxford 13-1263

"This little book is intended for a wider circle of readers than that which might appear to be indicated by its title. Its purpose is simply to furnish persons of ordinary education with such information as is necessary to enable them to make intelligent use of an etymological dictionary. . . . Professor Skeat begins by explaining, and justifying on common-sense principles, the true methods of etymological research in general, and then proceeds to give an account of the comparative phonology of each of the main branches of the Indo-germanic family of languages, with abundance of well-chosen illustrative examples."—Ath

"A work containing much valuable information."

+ A L A Bkl 9:387 My '13

"A work of this kind was certainly needed. The quantity of philological detail contained in this small volume is really astonishing. The book contains a great deal of valuable information which is not elsewhere accessible in a popular form."

+ Ath 1912,2:376 O 5 250w

"A further example of the veteran etymologist's genius for presenting accurate etymology in an intelligible and interesting manner. If the classical student will take up this book merely for recreation, he will not be disappointed on this score, and will also find himself in possession of a deal of information which is of real and direct value to him in his work, notably what is said of the Latin element in English." C. D. Buck.

+ Class J 8:272 Mr '13 150w

+ Nation 96:503 My 15 '13 50w

"His book is full of fascinating problems; it shows the variety of his philological researches; it contains a great deal of common sense in the comments on etymological matters and a refreshing absence of dogmatism in the statements."

+ N Y Sun p5 D 14 '12 250w

SKINNER, HENRIETTA CHANNING DANA. Their choice. il *$1 (4½c) Benziger 13-2571

The story presents the diary of a woman of thirty-five who goes to The Hague to act as chaperon to her brother's children while he is occupied with an arbitration conference. Here she meets two Austrians, father and son. The father is much older than she, the son a few years younger. Both fall in love with her, and while she prefers the younger she feels that the difference in their ages should prevent their marrying. She hesitates between the two and in the end makes her choice.

"The author is too mawkish for our taste."

— Ath 1913,1:335 Mr 22 24w

SKINNER, H. C. D.—Continued.

"It would demand the pen of a master of fiction to make anything out of the plot of 'Their choice' and the whole matter of criticism, in this case, rests in the one word 'inconclusive.'"

— Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 150w

"A sweet, sentimental little story. The story lacks the scope and the strength we expect from the author, but remains nevertheless very charming."

+ — Cath World 97:116 Ap '13 70w

"The story is told gracefully in diary form, which enables the writer to comment agreeably on some phases of life abroad."

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 1 '13 80w

N Y Times 18:152 Mr 16 '13 150w

SLADE, DOROTHEA. Gutter-babies; il. by Lady Stanley. $1.25 Houghton 12-25114

"A collection of sketches about the children and the grownups of a tenement district in London. The stories are worth reading for more reasons than one—for their well-drawn human portraits of the 'gutter' children and for their unspoken comments on the 'gutter' life. . . . One of our modern students of economics has said that the tragedy of the London slums lies not in their poverty, but in the fact that they are hopelessly static. . . . Through all the insight and the understanding and the real love of Dorothea Slade's book about the slum children, the American reader finds this sense of permanent acceptance to vex him and move him to revolt."—N Y Times

"The author evidently knows thoroughly the types and life she depicts so sympathetically but she has a disturbing tendency to sentimentality and one wonders if anything is gained from such studies beyond a closer knowledge of a condition that seems as hopeless as it is piteous. Suggestive of De Morgan but amateurish by comparison."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:336 Ap '13

"A wonderful sympathy has gone to the writing and illustrating of this book on gutter ways and means."

+ Ath 1913:1:189 F 15 180w

"We feel convinced this is the real thing."

+ Ind 74:986 My 1 '13 120w

"Miss Slade writes with feeling as well as with brilliance; some of her little sketches are very moving, and all of them are very tender and very sweet. But they are written obviously from the 'outside,' by some one who accepts unquestioningly the establishment of the gutter and its hereditary unvarying, perpetual habitation."

+ — N Y Times 17:778 D 15 '12 300w

SLATER, ERNEST (PAUL GWYNNE, pseud.).

¹ Along Spain's river of romance. (Eng. title, Gaudalquivir) il $3 (3c) McBride, Nast & co. A13-486

A travel book of distinction and rare charm. The author started out with the resolve "to trace the Guadalquivir from source to mouth, filling in the gaps of a patchy acquaintance which had ripened into friendship, and even in warm affection in parts, much as one becomes familiar with a human being at certain periods in his life." "He gives bits of description and bits of history, but he finds more interest in the people he meets and understands. The book, therefore, is an account of the people and customs of Spain and more particularly of Andalusia." (N Y Sun)

+ A L A Bkl 9:297 Mr '13

+ Ath 1913:1:330 Mr 22 850w

"We find the book interesting and valuable from the intimate and definite information which it gives us about modern Andalusia." G: G. Brownell.

+ Dial 54:505 Je 16 '13 1000w

"More than a conventional travel book. The English author, Paul Gwynne, indulges in digressions ethnic, social and scientific."

+ Ind 73: 1322 D 5 '12 40w

"Andalusia is supposed to have more than an ordinary fascination for the traveler and Mr. Gwynn has written a book that exerts that spell on its readers."

+ Lit D 45: 1132 D 14 '12 200w

"His book reflects his manifold interests. He is always less concerned with the actual river than with what its symbolizes. He presents a good deal of information, but his style is light and readable, though the humor is at times a trifle strained."

+ — Nation 96:186 F 20 '13 230w

"It is a delightful personal narrative, the information being given in explanation of things that happen or come the author's way. He knows his Spain well and shares his knowledge with his reader. The book derives no little aid from the many pictures; the artist's name should have been mentioned somewhere."

+ N Y Sun p 6 N 30 '12 150w

"Mr. Gwynne does not ignore anything of moment, either in his descriptions of scenery or in his historical references; his story is very entertaining."

+ N Y Times 18:116 Mr 2 '13 80w

"Those who know their Spain, and those who do not, but expect to, may take pleasure in Mr. Gwynne's book. It is extremely readable and instructive."

+ Outlook 103:500 Mr 1 '13 70w

SLATER, GILBERT. Making of modern England. $2.50 Houghton 13-35657

This "history begins at the battle of Waterloo, and is written from the social and economic rather than from the political and international point of view. It thus emphasizes a side of the country's development which, in spite of its obvious importance, is often overlooked in general histories." (Spec) "Not only industrial and economic events, however, are reviewed in this book. Its author has had something to say about such matters as the Crimean war, international relations, and imperialism as they affected the laboring man. His survey, is, of course, rapid, but it is often suggestive, and presents new aspects of facts which are perfectly familiar. . . . His sketch of the rise of the municipality in the modern sense of the word is distinctly interesting, and he writes with unusual authority of the growth and evolution of the labor movement." (N Y Times)

"A well constructed, authoritative work, conceived in a scientific and judicial spirit and written in a clear, though not particularly interesting style."

+ A L A Bkl 10:28 S '13

"It seems to the reviewer that Dr. Slater has been more anxious to interpret his facts than to find and state them; that he expresses his opinions too freely and too positively; and that consequently his work can scarcely be classed as history. But as a summary of the causes that have led to the disturbed conditions of the present, written from the viewpoint of one who is sympathetic toward the yearnings and strivings of the toiling masses, it has an interest and a value of its own. But it is an argument rather than a historical narrative." L. M. Larson.

+ — Dial 55:404 N 16 '13 1300w

"Mr. Slater is really spurring on, in this admirable book, all interested not only in English, but also in American political evolution. They will read with pleasure and instruction and lay on their shelves such a compendium, to which they may safely recur again and again for reference or information."

+ Lit D 47:640 O 11 '13 370w

"Mr. Slater's interest in economic questions only makes his book on 'The making of modern England' the more significant as an illustration of the influence of modern conditions on the study of history."

+ Nation 96:642 Je 26 '13 700w

"Apart from the novelty of the presentation of the facts, Dr. Slater's history is valuable for the clearness with which he has set forth a side of English life not always sufficiently emphasized."

+ N Y Times 18:230 Ap 20 '13 900w

"His sketch of the rise of the modern municipality is very interesting and he writes with unusual authority of the growth and evolution of the labor movement."

+ N Y Times 18:675 N 30 '13 330w

"This volume has in a marked degree the qualities of clarity, breadth of view, clear perspective and concise, convincing narrative, which were conspicuously lacking in Dr. Slater's earlier work on enclosures." J. T. Shotwell.

+ Pol Sci Q 28:697 D '13 870w

"The value of Dr. Slater's work is perhaps a little impaired by the evident bias which he shows towards the views of 'intellectual collectivism.' He is, nevertheless, well informed, and writes with ability."

+ Spec 110:200 F 1 '13 170w

Reviewed by W. C. Abbott.

Yale R ns3:173 O '13 20w

SLATTERY, REV. CHARLES LEWIS. Authority of religious experience. (Paddock lectures for 1912) *$1.80 Longmans 12-22793

"The six lectures included in this volume were delivered in Lent of 1912 in the General theological seminary, upon the Paddock foundation. The provinces with which Dr. Slattery deals, by way of illustration and suggestion, are those of Biblical criticism, the Church, Immortality, the Revelation of Jesus Christ, and the Knowledge of God. . . . The author brings to bear illustrations from psychotherapy, pragmatism, pluralism, etc. And yet it becomes rather apparent that the bent of the apologetic is to make the confessional 'status quo' acceptable to the modern mind."—Bib World

"Few men are so well qualified as is the gifted rector of Grace church in New York to speak on behalf of the religious experience of Christians who are not specialists in the realms of theological scholarship. Every scholar ought to be grateful for this interpretation of the sentiments of lay Christians as furnished to us by this large-minded pastor."

+ Am J Theol 17:155 Ja '13 480w

"Though written originally for theological students, the work is not technical in style or treatment but admirably adapted to the general reader, full of suggestion and broad in point of view."

+ A L A Bkl 9:204 Ja '13

"A brief survey gives no notion of the marked literary excellence of the book, of its aptness of illustration, of its frequent cogency of argument. These lectures reveal a broad general acquaintance with current modes of thought in the various fields of practical and formal theology." H. B. Robins.

+ Bib World 40:424 D '12 700w

"Even the average man must admit that the subjects themselves are as interesting as they are vital. And if he will run over the subjects of the divisions of these general themes as they are outlined by the author of this book we do not believe he can keep himself from being interested. Then if he will take the trouble to read these lectures we are sure he will discover that when theology is written from the standpoint of experience, as by the present author, it is most interesting."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 8 '13 350w

+ Ind 75:692 S 18 '13 50w

SLOAN, MAURICE M. Concrete house and its construction. il $1 Am. Portland cement manufacturers 13-8312

A work on the construction of fireproof dwelling houses which both the architect and the prospective house owner will find of value. There are many illustrations from photographs showing what has already been done in the way of adapting this new material to house construction.

"We know of no other similar work that gives so fully or clearly the many small but necessary details of fittings and connections of concrete house construction, details that in many ways are quite different from those required in the larger types of concrete construction. It provides, too, very satisfactory chapters on structural design and construction. While the author is evidently not quite clear whether he is addressing the builder or the owner, and so confuses the very different instruction the two should have, it is nevertheless the fact that he has succeeded in his intention 'to make clear the advantages of concrete in the construction of dwellings.' It is perhaps a matter of taste, but it seems to us that Mr. Sloan could have been more happy in his selections of examples of the architectural possibilities of concrete."

+ Engin N 69:1252 Je 12 '13 420w

"The book seems to be very well designed for its purpose."

+ Engin Rec 67:703 Je 21 '13 300w

SMART, GEORGE THOMAS. Temper of the American people. *$1.25 (1½c) Pilgrim press 12-26027

This Englishman who writes sympathetically of American characteristics starts with the initial thesis that the American is a man of feeling. He refutes the charge of materialism brought against American society and even exonerates us from the charge of money worship, saying that "no one cares for the substantive value of money less than the American." "He is cognizant tho of other national sins and does not spare censure where it is needed. Some of his chapters discuss: The sense of history in America; Political feelings in America; Industrial attitudes in America; The element of change in American life; and The admiration of education in America."

"An admirably impartial and discerning study."

+ A L A Bkl 9:444 Je '13

Boston Transcript p22 Ja 1 '13 320w

N Y Times 18:59 F 9 '13 80w

"An appreciative and in many respects discriminating essay. Occasionally the author allows himself to express opinions on subjects he has but superficially examined, at least once indulging in the criticism of a subject which the criticism itself shows he is not even elementarily acquainted with; but such lapses—even if they are not readily forgiven—are to be expected in a book of this kind."

+ Outlook 104:391 Je 21 '13 220w

SMITH, ADOLPHE. Monaco and Monte Carlo. il *$4.50 Lippincott 12-29980

The author views Monaco "as a sort of Jekyll and Hyde community, and so divides his book into two parts, one treating of the good and the other of the bad side of Monaco. In the first part he relates, with considerable detail, the history of the principality from its earliest date, devotes several chapters to its present ruler, Prince Albert I. . . . The second part is devoted to that part of his subject in which the public is chiefly interested, and some sixteen chapters tell all about the management of the Casino, the government's share in its winnings, the people who play and their superstitions, the making and working of the roulette tables, the gardens and the theatre, and the sports of the visitors."—N Y Times

+ A L A Bkl 9:252 F '13

+ Ann Am Acad 46:199 Mr '13 100w

Ath 1912,2:519 N 2 30w

SMITH, ADOLPHE—Continued.

"Not only has there been no general book on Monte Carlo, but the information for this one came direct from headquarters. There are numerous illustrations in this readable book, which seem to cover every conceivable phase of the subject it treats." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:524 Ja '13 450w

"It is all an absorbingly interesting story that Mr. Smith has to tell, and he is well seconded in his undertaking by Mr. Charles Maresco Pearce, who contributes eight colored drawings, while the camera is responsible for forty-eight uncolored views."

+ Dial 53:497 D 16 '12 200w

Lit D 46:359 F 15 '13 280w

N Y Times 17:689 N 24 '12 200w

SMITH, CHARLES ALPHONSO. What can literature do for me? *$1 (2c) Doubleday 13-10593

A series of brief essays on books and the value of reading. The chapter headings indicate the character of the contents: It can give you an outlet; It can keep before you the vision of the ideal; It can give you a better knowledge of human nature; It can restore the past to you; It can show you the glory of the commonplace; It can give you the mastery of your own language.

"We do not find Professor Smith's book at all adequate. It is apt to lead to the inexperienced wrong. There are better guides to follow."

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 23 '13 300w

"The style is lucid, its only faults being an occasional touch of the pedagogue and an occasional yearning toward the mathematical in analysis."

+ Chaut 71:116 J1 5 '13 270w

Ind 75:632 S 11 '13 150w

"The six chapter headings promise a systematic, if somewhat thin and sentimental, treatment of the educational possibilities of literature. Some of the advice in the book has the same unfortunate quality as these headings."

+ Nation 97:148 Ag 14 '13 380w

"One closes the book with the earnest wish that it might be widely read and well heeded, for the sake of the mental health and vigor of American men and women."

+ N Y Times 18:466 S 14 '13 230w

"The earnest tone and sincere spirit of the book must commend it to anyone who really wants a guide to put into the hands of an honest but unenlightened seeker after truth—as the titles of the several chapters clearly show."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 24 '13 420w

SMITH, ELMER BOYD. Seashore book. il 1 *$1.50 Houghton 12-22138

The Bob and Betty, who learned much in the country in the "Farm book," this time have a summer on the seashore. They see many kinds of vessels come and go, one built, one launched, one wrecked; they experience the novelty of clamming and the commoner delights of fishing, rowing and swimming. An old sea captain takes them to the faraway seas in imagination by telling yarns of whaling and of Eskimos on strange shores. Twelve full page pictures and many small ones add to the book's attractiveness.

"There is just enough text to connect and explain the pictures, which, in color and black and white, are very attractive."

+ A L A Bkl 9: 176 D '12 *

"The scope of Mr. Smith's 'Seashore book' is good, but the execution is not what it should be; the pictures are too pale and commonplace, the story too trite. Where is his humor of the 'Noah's ark' days?" M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73: 1361 D 12 '12 40w

Lit D 45: 1086 D 7 '12 30w

SMITH, FRANCES LOWE. Recipes and menus¹² for fifty. *$1.50 Whitcomb & B. 13-22541

The recipes in this book are adapted for use in small institutions, summer camps or college halls. They have been worked out in the school of domestic science of the Boston Young women's Christian association.

SMITH, FRANCIS HOPKINSON. Charcoals of² new and old New York. il *$5 Doubleday 12-29488

The pictures "show distinctive bits of the city, some retrospective of the past, some full of the spirit of the hustling present. Among them are 'The little church around the corner,' 'Gansevoort market,' 'Poe's cottage at Fordham,' 'The city hall,' 'The skyscraper,' 'No. 5 West Twenty-eighth street,' and some lovely landscape views along the banks of the Bronx. The page or two of comment that accompany each picture are full of quaint humor, outspoken opinion, and description."—N Y Times

"The pleasing, impressionistic text has the author's usual charm, and shows his attachment to New York old and new. A beautifully printed and artistically bound work, which larger libraries will wish to place beside Van Dyke's 'New New York.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:297 Mr '13

Reviewed by Algernon Tassin.

Bookm 36:532 Ja '13 900w

"Mr. Smith has made a series of drawings soft and romantic enough to soothe any eye."

+ Nation 95:535 D 5 '12 150w

"The pages of pictures are very lovely and the pages of letterpress are very entertaining."

+ N Y Times 17:786 D 22 '12 330w

SMITH, FRANCIS HOPKINSON. In Thackeray's London. il *$3.50 (11c) Doubleday 13-24454

Informal descriptions and dissertations on those places in London that are associated with Thackeray's name or with scenes and characters from his novels, accompanied by twenty-one full-page pictures in crayon. The chapter titles are: The charter house; The colonel's rooms; Where the colonel walked and prayed; Smithfield market; Staple inn; No. 36 Onslow square; Jermyn street; Berkeley square; St. George's church; Hanover square; The Reform club; Covent garden; Fleet street and "the Cock" tavern; The Cheshire cheese; Fleet street and St. Paul's; Hare and Lamb court; Middle temple; London bridge.

"An attractive book, the text graceful, bright, sympathetic; the illustrations from charcoal drawings by the author are beautiful."

+ A L A Bkl 10:151 D '13

"The text has just the right endearing tone both in its tender, humorous make believe and in its real personal encounters." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 38:384 D '13 230w

"One-and-twenty excellent drawings accompanied by hardly less excellent chat on the themes they suggest."

+ Dial 55:480 D 1 '13 170w

"The text is partly Hopkinson Smith and partly Thackeray, and wholly satisfactory."

+ Nation 97:534 D 4 '13 150w

"Charming and artistic as are the pictures in search of which F. Hopkinson Smith made his pilgrimage, and pleasant as are his reminiscences of Col. Newcome and Thackeray himself and 'Vanity fair,' the most delightful portion of the book is the narrative of personal experiences in his taxicab sketching tour."

+ N Y Sun p4 N 15 '13 160w

"Thackeray's London' is eminently satisfying in both content and manufacture."

+ N Y Sun p28 N 29 '13 100w

SMITH, FRANK BERKELEY. Street of the Two Friends. il *$1.50 Doubleday 12-24919

A "collection of tales told in the first person by an American artist whose studio in Paris is under the eaves of an old house on the 'Rue des Deux Amis.' Mostly they are about other painter men and models and demimondaines, and the women all have hearts of gold and various kinds of luck. Now and then the artist or one of his people takes a disgusted trip back to America, whence presently he flees, like a homing pigeon, back to Paris and glad welcomes."—N Y Times

"Mr. Smith may not appeal to a wide audience; but those whom he reaches instinctively reach back to him, as to a kindred spirit." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 36:565 Ja '13 180w

+ Chaut 70:352 My '13 130w

+ Ind 74:1204 My 29 '13 50w

"All the stories are convincing and atmospheric, choice in diction and graphic power."

+ Lit D 46:240 F 1 '13 170w

Nation 96:83 Ja 23 '13 220w

"The younger Smith lags far behind his father in artistic and literary effort. These are cosmopolitan sketches of not very interesting happenings, written with the forced enthusiasm of the visitor who comes to admire."

— N Y Sun p14 N 23 '12 100w

"F. Berkeley Smith has an engaging style, like his father before him, and he has the instinct for telling a story in just the way to enlist emotional interest in it, no matter what it may be about."

+ N Y Times 17:677 N 17 '12 230w

"While not without qualities to recommend them for pleasant reading, they do not equal the Parisian sketches of the late Guy Wetmore, Carryl, 'Zut and other Parisians.'"

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ja 9 '13 130w

SMITH, FRED B. Man's religion. 75c (1½c)
Assn. press 13-1163

A Y. M. C. A. worker of international reputation offers this little manual which "is intended as a testimony to the importance of certain features of method and message in the conduct of Christian work for men and boys, rather than a thoro presentation of the philosophy underlying them." Some mention is also given of the ideals which are reconstructing the whole life of the church. Chapters: Reason for the book; Present situation; Specialization in work for men and boys; Religion of fact; Religion of sacrificial living; Religion of social service; Religion of cooperation; Religion of a missionary spirit; Religion of democracy; Conclusion.

+ R of Rs 48:248 Ag '13 140w

SMITH, GEORGE FREDERICK HERBERT.
Gem-stones and their distinctive characters.
1l *$2 Pott (Eng ed GS12-603)

Designed for expert and layman this manual describes the character and technology of gem stones, then deals in turn with the precious stones, semi-precious stones, ornamental stones and the three organic products, pearl, coral and amber. A section contains tables upon the following properties of gem-stones: chemical composition, color, refractive indices, color dispersion, dichroism, specific gravities and degrees of hardness. "An important feature of the book is the number of illustrations given in it. Besides those in the text, there are thirty-three plates, three of which are in colour, giving a fair idea of the appearance of the gems in their natural and cut conditions." (Nature)

"Valuable to the craftsman, gem-cutter and collector. As a whole the work is distinguished for its well adjusted balance of technical and general information. Large libraries will want this as well as Wodiska though they duplicate considerably."

+ A L A Bkl 9:336 Ap '13

"It is comprehensive and thorough. It is well written, though abounding in technicalities."

+ Ath 1912,1:333 Mr 23 70w

"This compact and well-illustrated manual supplies a want which has long been felt. The early chapters of the book, describing the characters of gem-stones and the methods of discriminating between different species, are characterised by simplicity, clearness, and accuracy. In the descriptive part of the book an attempt at classification of gem-stones is made, which will probably not meet with very general acceptance." J. W. J.

+ — Nature 89:294 My 23 '12 450w

"Mr. Herbert Smith gives us in this volume a great variety of interesting and useful information."

+ Spec 108: 918 Je 8 '12 300w

SMITH, GERALD BIRNEY. Social idealism and the changing theology. *$1.25 (3c) Macmillan 13-7550

The volume contains the substance of a series of lectures delivered in 1912 at the spring conference of alumni of Yale Divinity school and the ministers of Connecticut. After first showing how, in the first centuries of Christianity, the authority ideal was made a source of moral power, the author goes on to trace the changes within the past four or five centuries which have brought a new type of moral loyalty into being and which have made imperative on the part of the church the modification of this authority ideal. In the final chapters the ethical aspects of theological reconstruction are considered.

"The book as a whole is itself an admirable example of the historical method in systematic theology; and with its new diagnosis of the theological situation, its ethical valuation of scientific method, its recognition of development in ethics and the consequent need of religious guidance, and its full adoption of the empirical method and of the ethical and social point of view, it cannot fail to be of great service to all readers who are seeking a more adequate basis for constructive theological thinking." E. W. Lyman.

+ Am J Theol 17:639 O '13 2000w

+ A L A Bkl 10:28 S '13

"This volume is a frank, clear-cut, constructive, and exceedingly suggestive analysis of the situation which twentieth-century Christianity faces. It is not a 'pious' book but is profoundly religious and dominated by a spirit of transparent moral loyalty. It is a most welcome contribution to present-day theological solutions."

+ Bib World 42:59 Jl '13 500w

Boston Transcript p20 Jl 9 '13 300w

N Y Times 18:269 My 4 '13 100w

"His work is one to be read and pondered by all who realize the fact that the moral leadership of the church is now at stake."

+ Outlook 104:263 My 31 '13 150w

SMITH, GOLDWIN. Selection from Goldwin Smith's correspondence; ed. by Arnold Haultain. il *$4.50 Duffield 13-22307

This selection covers the period from 1846 to 1910 altho the letters of the first twenty years of that period are few in number. "In the fall of 1868 Goldwin Smith left England for America, and from that date until within a week of his death his letters, written chiefly to his friends in England are a record of his impressions of the United States and Canada, and have a permanent historical value in the discussions which they contain of the relations existing between the two countries and of their political connection with the old world. . . . His active interests touched various fields in the literature and science of his day as well as the realm of international politics. Something of this diversity of interest is shown in this volume of correspondence, in which are letters to and from Matthew Arnold, Prof.

SMITH, GOLDWIN—Continued.

Tyndall, Lord Herschell, Frederic Harrison, Moncure D. Conway, Justin McCarthy, as well as the political leaders in both countries." (N Y Times)

"The vigour remains in the letters of over sixty years which Mr. Arnold Haultain, as literary executor, has piously collected. Vigour, dogmatism, inconsistency, would no doubt be the three marks of the whole, if we were to sift and analyze all that is written. Mr. Arnold Haultain is not a faultless editor. He misdates, by at least ten years, a letter to Lord Mount Stephen. Names are sometimes misspelt like that of Sir Henry Acland. The index, too, needs supplementing in many points. The portraits, however, are admirably chosen."

+ Ath 1913.1:561 My 24 1150w

"Goldwin Smith's letters are seldom interesting as letters, we mean in the sense in which the correspondence of many famous men have become a part of English literature. They are interesting and instructive because of their contents, the emphatic and individualistic views of Goldwin Smith upon social, economic and political questions of the day."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 3 '13 480w

"The careful editorship of the volume deserves more than a passing word of commendation."

+ Dial 55:153 S 1 '13 400w

"Above anything else Goldwin Smith was attracted to the study of political subjects, and his analyses of them, reflecting the best nineteenth century scholarship, are of value in reaching an estimate of the factors that have contributed to Canadian and American progress."

+ N Y Times 18:395 J1 13 '13 1350w

"Goldwin Smith was himself a brilliant and incisive letter writer, and he called out those qualities in many of his correspondents."

+ R of Rs 48:250 Ag '13 220w

Sat R 115:748 Je 14 '13 1300w

"His letters reveal no new secrets either about himself or others, and chiefly serve to show—what no one ever doubted—that he held in private the convictions he expressed in public, while it must be confessed that, though at times instructive, they form on the whole somewhat melancholy reading. Why, we cannot but ask, should Mr. Haultain have thought it necessary to publish these letters at all?"

— Spec 111:345 S 6 '13 1700w

SMITH, GORDON ARTHUR. Mascarose. il *$1 12 (2c) Scribner 13-21703

A storiette which makes its appeal thru symbolism. A young troubadour seeks a grim castle with his lute in hand, bent upon cleansing the dismal hall with his sunlight of song. Like the true physician his pleasure lies in watching life conquer death, and love cast out pain. Ere his magic has triumphed over the jealous hearts of warring royalty he is scourged and banished from court. But the seeds of life and love spring up to bring him a delayed blessing. There is a thread of love-making upon which the incidents of the tale are strung.

"The story is not without charm; its conventional romance keeps us in suspense, and it is told gracefully and pleasantly. For all the mediaeval setting and plot, however, and the half-attempt at the mediaeval style, the author has produced a very uneven piece of work."

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 31 '13 480w

"The love portion is well nigh faultless as far as it goes. The humor is perhaps more clumsy, while the mediaeval dressing is of the stage rather than of fact or literature. If the reader is not too critical he will enjoy the story."

+ N Y Sun p4 O 25 '13 90w

SMITH, JESSIE WILLCOX, il. Dickens's children. *$1 Scribner 12-22525

Ten drawings in color representing Tiny Tim, David Copperfield, Paul and Florence Dombey, Little Nell, Pip, Jenny Wren, Oliver Twist and the Artful Dodger, Mrs. Kenwigs and the four little Kenwigs, The runaway couple from the "Holly tree inn," and Little Em'ly. Quotations from the books form the text to accompany the pictures.

"A good table book for libraries able to afford it."

+ A L A Bkl 9:215 Ja '13

"Her drawing and colouring are delightful, and the pictures are pervaded with feminine sympathy for children in their appealing moods, and with her well-known expressive charm. More almost than any one else she can make you feel how serious to themselves are the little souls of children." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:391 D '12 70w

+ Outlook 102:507 N 2 '12 80w

SMITH, JOSEPH RUSSELL. Industrial and commercial geography. il *$4 Holt 13-20156

The characteristics which distinguish this from other books of geography are summed up in the preface. "This book aims to interpret the earth in terms of its usefulness to humanity. Since the primary interest is humanity rather than parts of the earth's surface, the book deals with human activities as affected by the earth, rather than with parts of the earth as they affect human activities." Part 1, Industrial geography, has chapters devoted to: The cereals, Starch foods, The animal industry, Sugar, Fisheries, Leather and rubber, etc. Part 2, Commercial geography, attempts "to increase and reinforce this regional knowledge by a description of the commerce of the world." (Preface)

Nation 97:466 N 13 '13 400w

SMITH, MABELL SHIPPIE (CLARKE) (MRS. JAMES RAVENEL SMITH). Twenty centuries of Paris. il *$2 (2½c) Crowell 13-21733

In her first chapters the author writes of Earliest Paris, Merovingian Paris, and Carolingian Paris; in her final chapters of Paris of Louis Napoleon, and Paris of to-day. Between these intervene chapters on the Paris of the renaissance, the reformation, of Richelieu, of the revolution, etc. The treatment is both descriptive and historical. A series of descriptive pictures is presented of the Paris of different periods. There are numerous illustrations and folding maps.

"At no time does the author lose her facility of grasping the main facts of history in their relation to the city and of presenting them always with a sure and often humorous touch."

+ Chaut 72:190 N 1 '13 180w

"Mrs. Smith digresses into many points of French history that are not necessary and thus confuses the reader, while as regards the city she pays more attention to the history than to the extant remains of the several periods. Her book will be helpful in many ways to visitors to Paris."

+ N Y Sun p5 O 18 '13 80w

"In the first place, Mrs. Smith does not embarrass us with the great wealth of the historical material at her command. In the second place, she says what she has to say simply and distinctly, thus leaving in our minds a vivid and effective outline."

+ Outlook 105:712 N 29 '13 220w

+ R of Rs 48:630 N '13 30w

SMITH, NELLIE MAY. Three gifts of life: a girl's responsibility for race progress; with an introd. by T. Denison Wood. *50c (2c) Dodd 13-4361

A book on sex hygiene which may be given to young girls for their own reading or used as a guide by those who are responsible for their training.

"A sane and readable book on sex hygiene for girls, the best one yet published for girls of eighteen and under and easily understandable by those having little education."

+ A L A Bkl 9:445 Je '13 ✚

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '13 280w

+ Chaut 70:353 My '13 50w

"It is all positive and sane, and is by far the best book we have for educational work with girls." M. E. Dodd.

+ Survey 30:147 Ap 26 '13 400w

SMITH, SAMUEL GEORGE. Democracy and the church. *$1.50 (2c) Appleton 12-25773

The author, who believes that the church deserves a more considerate treatment from her critics than she has received says of this study that it is "An effort to use the genetic method in considering the relation of the Christian church to the development of democracy." He considers creed and sect only as their activities have had a bearing on democratic institutions. The ten chapters, which present, in different form, the substance of a series of lectures delivered at Bangor theological seminary, are: Jesus and democracy; Influence of primitive Christianity; Papacy and liberty; Social revival in Italy; Social upheavals in England; Luther and liberty; Social influence of the reformation; Democracy and education; Social spirit of modern Christianity; Democracy of tomorrow.

"The book may be specially commended to social workers who are convinced that the church is hopelessly out of sympathy with modern movements of thought and action and not worthy of being taken into serious consideration as an ally in the task of social reconstruction." G. S. White.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:288 Jl '13 380w

"Professor Smith handles the new teaching of eugenics with great deftness."

+ Boston Transcript p11 D 14 '12 270w

"This interpretation of Jesus as the author of the ideals of democracy will help many readers to clarify their thought upon modern social problems."

+ Chaut 69:358 F '13 130w

"The range of this volume is larger and its contents richer than the title may indicate to many who attach a meager meaning to its terms. For a university professor to stand sponsor for the fiction that 'New England . . . burned witches' is inexcusable."

+ Outlook 103:93 Ja 11 '13 270w

Pol Sci Q 28:567 S '13 150w

R of Rs 47:121 Ja '13 230w

"A book that deserves to be widely read, both because of the subject and the clear way in which it is handled."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 20 '13 800w

SMITH, WILLIAM BENJAMIN. Ecce Deus: studies of primitive Christianity. *$2.25 Open ct. 13-5408

"An English edition, somewhat revised and enlarged, of a German work published in 1911. This remarkable book seeks to prove positively by means of what is called the symbolic method of interpretation that the Jesus of the Gospels is not an historical man but a mythical god, of a cult like Mithra. Of the fresh matter contained in the English version, the most interesting are the postscript in which Dr Smith pays his respects to some of the reviewers of the German original, and the section headed The gospel portrait, in which it is argued that 'it seems quite impossible that the Synoptics were aiming to depict any character at all either real or ideal.'—Nation

"Shows the same fragmentary and opportunist character which marks his previous work in this field." S. J. Case.

— Am J Theol 17:280 Ap '13 80w

"While the general consensus of opinion is against both scholars [Drews and Smith] in their contention, the fact must be apparent even to their opponents that they have done good service in clearing away from the figure of Christ much that is undoubtedly unhistorical and misleading. His work is not to be regarded as an attack on Christianity, but simply as an alternative explanation of its origin and growth."

+ Dial 54:187 Mr 1 '13 250w

Reviewed by T. K. Cheyne.

+ Hibbert J 11:917 Jl '13 3500w

"The new material, the insertion of headings to sections, the addition of indexes, and the excellence of the book-making as a whole make the English edition more valuable than the German original."

+ Nation 96:159 F 13 '13 300w

"It would be unprofitable for the uncritical person to read what Prof. Smith has written in support of his contention; but the critical student, no matter what his own opinions may be, should not ignore the book."

+ N Y Times 18:193 Ap 6 '13 370w

SMITH, WINIFRED. Commedia dell' arte: a study in Italian popular comedy. *$2 (3c) Lemcke 12-23493

Altho primarily concerned with the popular comedy of Italy this monograph, which is issued as one of the "Columbia university studies in English and comparative literature," touches also on the like comedies of 16th and 17th century France, Germany and Spain and Elizabethan and Jacobean England. The author "adopts the modern view that this extemporaneous comedy sprang direct from the exuberant life of the times, notably from the performances of the jugglers and mountebanks employed by quack-doctors to advertise their wares." (Ath)

"This comprehensive monograph fills a distinct gap in our bookshelves."

+ Ath 1912,2:739 D 14 370w

Reviewed by C. F. T. Brooke.

+ Ind 74:255 Ja 30 '13 180w

"Miss Smith's book is of great value as a more critical and a far more complete survey of the whole field than had previously been made. The work is very accurate. The clearness of the presentation is somewhat injured, here and there, by a desire to avoid the appearance of mechanism in order and statement. The gain is more than the loss, however, for the style has a grace and vivacity that one does not associate with doctoral theses."

+ Nation 96:265 Mr 13 '13 600w

"A readable and instructive monograph."

+ N Y Times 17:754 D 8 '12 60w

"This is not by any means a slight study of what sounds a light subject. It is written rather for experts than for general readers; it is laboriously compiled and full (rather too full) of footnotes and what is usually called 'patient research.' One has some difficulty first in finding then in keeping the thread of the discourse—which is a pity, as, to mix metaphors, there are many plums in the pudding worth picking out."

+ Sat R 115:242 F 22 '13 600w

SNATH, JOHN COLLIS. Affair of state. *$1.25 (1½c) Doubleday 13-6334

For the period of this story the author looks forward into the future—how far cannot be determined, but of the time of which he writes, organized labor has grown mightily in power, altho women have not yet won their enfranchisement. The hero of the story is James Draper, a cabinet member who has risen from the ranks of labor. In the crisis in which the forces representing syndicalism threaten to overthrow the British government, Draper is called to act the part of saviour of his country. The result is a reestablishment of government with Draper as prime minister.

SNATH, JOHN COLLIS—Continued.

"Gives an excellent idea of the English method of procedure but will fail to interest the average reader of fiction."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:401 My '13

"Syndicalism, in fact is not a subject for Mr. Snaith, who is best in romance and fantasy. We suspect him of having had his tongue in his cheek while he was writing."

— Ath 1913,1:162 F 8 120w

"It will be a long while before we see a more finished specimen of a novel wholly in the grand style."

+ Atlan 112:693 N '13 200w

"The chief reason why the whole story lacks bigness is that the specific story is not one that in its very nature demands the lofty setting of Parliament buildings and privy councils; the same essential situation might have been as fittingly developed within the humbler circles of a mayor and board of aldermen." F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 37:441 Je '13 850w

"The perplexities of politics multiplied by the power of the proletariat, as set forth by Mr. Snaith, carry the reader through a maze in which he sometimes is lost."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 My 7 '13 270w

"Mr. Snaith has brought no finer artistic power to bear upon the finest of his previous performances, and this is no small thing to say of the author, for example, of 'William Jordan, junior.'" W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:21 Jl 1 '13 580w

"A book worth while in these days when thrones tremble daily."

+ Ind 75:100 Jl 10 '13 100w

"It has been a long journey from the grim realism of Mr. Snaith's earlier work to the unblushing make-believe of his present manner."

— Nation 96:474 My 8 '13 280w

"It may be that the Egeria who directs the affairs of England, the democratic statesman who stands between capital and labor and the other politicians are all portraits. A Britain, however, with party divisions into right, centre and left, with no Nationalists, or Welsh members, must puzzle even English readers, who may possibly discover what the author is driving at."

— N Y Sun p4 Ap 5 '13 130w

"An admirably told story."

+ N Y Times 18:388 Jl 6 '13 420w

"Deserves to rank with the best fiction-production of the decade; it is balanced, ripe in judgment, and dramatic in the sense opposed to theatrical."

+ Outlook 104:36 My 3 '13 180w

"The action is carried along almost entirely by conversation, most of it very brilliant."

+ R of Rs 47:629 My '13 50w

— + Sat R 115:427 Ap 5 '13 750w

SNEATH, ELIAS HERSHEY, and HODGES, GEORGE. Moral training in the school and home. *80c (1½c) Macmillan 13-10560

A book designed as a handbook for teachers in elementary schools. "It is not a guide for teaching ethics to children, for such instruction belongs to a later period of their development. It merely aims to assist teachers in their efforts to train children systematically in the virtues." (Preface) The book is the outgrowth of the authors' experience in preparing the "Golden rule series" of literary and ethical readers, and may be used with that series or independently, as reading lists of good stories and other illustrative material are given at the end of every chapter.

"Parents as well as teachers will welcome the effort made by Prof. Sneath and Dean Hodges in outlining a systematic moral training without which children cannot grow to valuable citizenship."

+ Chaut 72:77 S 27 '13 180w

"The authors' remarks on the bodily, intellectual, social, political, aesthetic life are sensible and likely to be helpful."

+ El School T 14:188 D '13 80w

+ Ind 75:340 Ag 7 '13 70w

+ Nation 97:233 S 11 '13 100w

"Well-meant and more or less useful little manual."

+ — No Am 198:886 D '13 600w

SNEDDEN, DAVID SAMUEL. Problems of educational readjustment. *$1.50 Houghton 13-15261

The problems of liberal versus vocational education are presented in this book by the Massachusetts state commissioner of education. The book "points out the deficiencies in our educational system as it exists at present and offers possible remedial measures. It takes up such matters as liberal education, the value of history as a study, debatable issues in vocational education and the comparative value of localized and centralized administration of the schools." (Boston Transcript)

"Ten thoughtful papers."

+ A L A Bkl 10:109 N '13

"The work, taken as a whole, is eminently constructive and it will commend itself to educators as an admirable exposition of the many obstacles that stand in the way of what is generally termed educational reform."

+ Boston Transcript p19 Ag 13 '13 350w

"Dr. Snedden knows what he means and has the gift of stating the issues simply."

+ Nation 97:233 S 11 '13 400w

SOANE, E. B. To Mesopotamia and Kurdistan in disguise. 1l *$4 (3c) Small (Eng ed 13-10273)

The author gives "an account of a trip he made in 1908 from Constantinople by steamer to Beirut, thence by train northward to Aleppo, thence northeastward to the Tigris, and south to Bagdad, sometimes by desert cart, sometimes by caravan, sometimes by the riskiest of rafts, sometimes by boat. All the time he was in disguise, and so poorly supplied with money that it was necessary to practice all the small economies that were possible. Not once during the entire trip was he known or believed to be an Englishman or even a European. Mostly he traveled as a Persian Mussulman. . . . A good deal of space, scattered all through the narrative, is devoted to the history of cities and towns, of the region as a whole, of different sections, of important epochs, and of the exploits of individuals. In this there is much new matter, which will be of particular interest to students of affairs in the Middle East."—N Y Times

+ A L A Bkl 9:445 Je '13

"We had not until now thought it possible to write a dull book about a journey through Mesopotamia. Mr. Soane has achieved this innovation, chiefly by packing his four hundred solid pages with a quantity of sketchy history, wedged in between the too familiar everyday incidents of Eastern travel, which unless fired by imagination or lit up by humour are apt to be the stalest of literary provender. It is only when Mr. Soane leaves the Tigris for the mountains of Kurdistan that he has much to say that is either novel or interesting."

— + Ath 1912,2:623 N 23 150w

"Mr. Soane's tale is of rare interest and the book is especially timely since the eyes of the world today are fixed upon the Middle East and its people." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '13 700w

"Of all recent accounts of travel and description, this record of a journey from Beirut to Bagdad is one not merely of the most fascinating, but also one of the most valuable. His book is authoritative on its main subject."

+ — Nation 97:266 S 18 '13 750w

"Some part of the information Mr. Soane acquired is doubtless important to science, but the attraction of the book is the gallery of interesting, human, ordinary men that he met and had to deal with and the many instances he gives us of Kurdish kindness and squareness."

+ N Y Sun p6 Mr 29 '13 500w

"The book is filled with entertaining anecdotes of the journey, stories that illuminate racial character, and throw light upon manners and customs. They throw light, too, upon the trail of the Turk over vassal lands and upon the sort of regard in which he is held by those vassals. Whoever is interested in the fate of Turkey will find much that is illuminating in Mr. Soane's volume."

+ N Y Times 13:170 Mr 30 '13 900w

"Whoever is interested in the fate of Turkey will find the volume of much value. Students of affairs in the Middle East will discover in it much fresh material, part of it obtained from old histories to which he had access through the local friendships that he formed."

+ N Y Times 18:680 N 30 '13 300w

+ R of Rs 47:634 My '13 70w

SOMBART, WERNER. Jews and modern capitalism; tr., with notes and introd. by M. Epstein. *$5 Dutton (Eng ed 13-16822)

Professor Sombart has written this book "to prove the double thesis of the Jewish foundation of capitalism and the capitalistic foundation of Judaism. He traces the connection which he asserts to exist between Jews and modern capitalism from the transferring of the hegemony of the world's commerce from the Italians and Spaniards in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries to northern Europe, where the Jews had established themselves. By their introduction of the methods of underselling and competition and by their participation in the banks and exchanges of Holland and England they brought about the modern economic system of credit and competitive prices."—N Y Times

"Sombart's animated style does not suffer in the translation."

+ Am Econ R 3:909 D '13 80w

"Written with a brilliance not often associated with economic treatises, and its speculations may well fascinate if they fail to convince."

+ — Ath 1913,2:29 J1 12 550w

"A distinct addition to Semitic literature has been made by Professor Sombart. It will be seen that some of his generalizations are as dangerous as many such deductions are, yet these faults may be overlooked in view of the suggestive nature of his arguments." H: C. Shelley.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ag 23 '13 550w

"This book is a perfect storehouse of information on the part which the Jews have played in the economic history of the world. The author is an enthusiast on this subject, but if he gives great honor to the Jews, he as surely discredits the faults of his people."

+ Boston Transcript p10 N 24 '13 650w

"On the whole Prof. Sombart fails to prove either side of his double thesis, the Jewish foundation of capitalism or the capitalistic foundation of Judaism. But his exaggerations only serve to make his pages the more provocative of thought, and Jews themselves have much to learn from his presentations of unnoticed facts of their own history." Joseph Jacobs.

+ — N Y Times 18:530 O 12 '13 1750w

"His book is a very real contribution to the hitherto neglected economic history of the Jewish people. It is misleading in the argument which the author endeavors to make from his facts, because he has failed to take account of other facts, just as important, which did not carry out his theory."

+ — N Y Times 18:679 N 30 '13 260w

"Like all exponents of a novel thesis, the author is inclined to overprove his point and unnecessarily extend his argument. His historical section is, generally speaking, uncritical, and he relies too much on secondary authorities. Yet the book is in a high degree stimulating and original, and with its main argument there will be pretty general agreement."

+ — Spec 111:102 J1 19 '13 1650w

SOMERMEIER, EDWARD ELSWORTH. Coal. ii *$2 McGraw 12-25744

The scope of this practical treatise is indicated by the chapter headings: Composition and heating value; Chemical analysis of coal; Sampling; Methods of analysis; Determining the calorific value; Summary of chemical determination or records; Improvement of coal by washing; Purchase of coal under specifications; Flue gas analysis; Analytical tables.

"A careful discussion. As the only book limited strictly to this subject, and covering it very fully and accurately, it will be of great value to engineers and those in charge of businesses buying coal."

+ A L A Bkl 9:253 F '13

"The reviewer does not consider the book elementary and there are many parts which would not be easily understood by the man without technical training. The author's use of the metric system will commend itself to the chemist, while it will not impress the mechanical engineer and the steam user quite as favorably. The subjects are covered well and completely and the analytical tables in Chapter 10, giving the comparative composition of different fuels and of coal from different localities are useful for reference."

+ — Engin Rec 67:223 F 22 '13 280w

SOMERVILLE, EDITH ANNA CENONE, and MARTIN, VIOLET (MARTIN ROSS, pseud.). Dan Russel the Fox. *$1.25 Doran 12-25210

The heroine is "a capable, highly educated young woman—an orphan of considerable means—who suddenly succumbs to the Passion of the Chase. . . . Half-way on the road to becoming a blue stocking, she is rapidly converted into an Amazon." (Spec) "A chance acquaintance with an Irish widow, who talks much of hunting . . . brings her, under the wing of a married cousin, to the west of Ireland. Here she not only learns to ride, but is so enthralled by the passion for hunting that she finds an epitome of all manly virtues in the amateur Whip—John Michael FitzSymons . . . an uneducated youth of the squireen type, whose whole heart is in the stable and his kennels, and who does not want to be bothered by women." (Sat R)

"This delightful story will appeal to a wider public than that which appreciates the ordinary hunting novel."

+ Ath 1911,2:484 O 21 120w

"The freshness and verve with which the story moves along is irresistible. This is the spirit of Ireland in happy mood."

+ Ind 74:766 Ap 3 '13 140w

"The book may provoke laughter, but it will not be good natured laughter."

+ — N Y Sun p5 N 16 '12 80w

"A wholly amusing little story it is, and there is cause for regret that it will please so few. The consolation lies in the fact that it will be delightfully satisfying to those few."

+ N Y Times 17:778 D 15 '12 180w

"There are one or two fine runs in the book, excellently described, and the authors have

SOMERVILLE, E. O. Æ, and MARTIN, V.

—Continued.
lost none of their genius for quaint dialogue and unexpected vocabulary."

+ Sat R 113:216 F 17 '12 350w

"We can heartily and gratefully congratulate the authors on the superlative quality of the entertainment they have given us in 'Dan Russel the fox.' Their gallery of Irish portraits, drawn from the quick, already extensive and brilliant, has been richly enlarged by at least half a dozen personages, gentle and simple, who vie in their irresistible appeal to our affection and interest with Flurry Knox, the Slipper, Mrs. Cadogan, the Major, and Philippa."

+ Spec 107:556 O 7 '11 1100w

SOMMERVILLE, FRANKFORT. Spirit of Paris. il $2 Macmillan (Eng ed A13-1818)

This is one of the books in which it is evident that the author "has been more interested in delving down into the characteristics, the animating soul, of a region, a city, or a people than in following the conventional lines of description that usually compose books of travel. . . . It is evident that he knows thoroughly both the city and its people, and that he has for both such tenderness and affection that he sees always their best and most pleasing phrases and prefers not to talk about, or more than admit now and then, what ever may be seamy in character and customs. . . . The author's endeavor is to discover and reveal just what that elusive fascination is that makes Paris the magnet for the traveler from all countries." (N Y Times)

"Although this author is ignorant of Boston English—which Sir Edwin Arnold pronounced the best English spoken in the world—he has given us an exceedingly interesting and delightful book upon Paris, brightly written and illustrated with two score of charming pictures in color." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p21 J1 2 '13 700w

+ Dial 55:481 D 1 '13 160w

"Mr. Somerville is sympathetic and seems particularly at home in describing the gay world—which naturally includes the theaters."

+ Ind 75:48 J1 3 '13 150w

"This is a thoroughly enjoyable, charming book."

+ Lit D 47:584 O 4 '13 200w

"A pleasant volume. The figure pieces by Kirchner are clever, the sketches of bits of Paris by Fraipont and L. Gauthier are pretty, the rest are insignificant."

+ N Y Sun p4 Je 21 '13 120w

"A charming book, eminently readable from first page to last, and as informing as it is delightful, but as to spirit rather than fact. Although the author is an Englishman, his chapter on 'Americans in Paris' is discriminating, just, and very interesting, especially in the portion that treats of the influence of French upon American art."

+ N Y Times 18:364 Je 15 '13 650w

"The text has one patent fault. It gives too much of one side of the picture. We learn about the excellences—and they are many—of French women. We do not learn so much about the less attractive side of their characters and lives."

+ Outlook 104:720 J1 26 '13 150w

"Written in lively style."

+ R of Rs 48:122 J1 '13 20w

SOUTER, ALEXANDER. Text and canon of the New Testament. *75c (1c) Scribner
A13-524

This volume is published as one of the "Studies in theology." Because of the rapid progress made in the study of the subjects treated here, it becomes necessary, every ten years or so, as the author points out, for some one to "attempt to gather together the result of multitudinous books and articles . . . if any beyond the narrow circle of experts are to be put in possession of the new facts." The book is divided into two parts; the first treats of the text, the second of the canon of the New Testament.

"Mr. Souter's new volume is a most admirable addition to the 'Studies in theology.' Not only does it contain all the information that could reasonably be expected in a volume of this size and purpose, not only are the facts and theories it presents as up to date as is humanly possible, but Mr. Souter has further succeeded in producing a most pleasing and readable book. Aside from a good presentation of the general field, the strongest feature of the book lies in the sections of Latin versions."

+ Am J Theol 17:479 J1 '13 350w

"The volume is small, though the subject is great and complex, but the clear and definite presentation of facts accounts in a measure for its size and makes it most serviceable for students."

+ Ath 1913,1:157 F 8 450w

"The history of the text of these books and how they were brought together in the collection which is now known as the canon should be interesting. It is this and more, it is fascinating when written by one who has the learning, the literary ability and the spiritual sense to appreciate the value of the New Testament. The author of this work . . . is such a writer. Some twenty selected documents are given in a separate section which will prove valuable to the student."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 300w

"The treatment of the text, which is at once trustworthy, readable, and informed, gives the work a place instantly alongside of the excellent manuals of Lake and Kenyon."

+ Nation 97:510 N 27 '13 200w

+ Sat R 115:493 Ap 19 '13 200w

SOYER, NICOLAS. Soyer's standard cookery.
il $1.50 (1c) Sturgis & Walton 12-18957

The introduction to this book tells the interesting story of the author's famous ancestor, Alexis Soyer, the French chef who revolutionized cookery in England, who organized the relief service during the Irish potato famine, and who went out during the Crimean war to bring the English commissary service to a state of order. Like his grandfather, Nicholas Soyer, who has been a chef in the homes of the great, has voluntarily devoted much time to cookery in the homes of the poor, and his book embodies the results of his experience with both classes. It will be especially valuable for the many simple, economical dishes described. Many of the recipes from "Paper bag cookery" are repeated in this volume.

"The chapter on hors-d'œuvres is the most comprehensive we know of, special attention being also given to the various 'butters' that go with these appetizers."

+ Nation 95:620 D 26 '12 300w

SPARGO, JOHN. Applied socialism. *$1.50 (2c)
Huebsch 12-16985

In this book the author presents "a study of the application of socialistic principles to the state." It is not an account of the working out of socialistic principles in the isolated cases where they have been tried; rather it is a theoretical discussion of their probable effect if generally applied. Among other matters Mr. Spargo considers: Property and industry under socialism; Personal liberty in the socialist state; Labor and its remuneration; Incentive under socialism; Socialism and the family; Socialism and intellectual service; Religious freedom under socialism.

"While not striking many original notes, the book affords a comprehensive, lucid and frank treatment of the whole question." O. D. Skelton.

+ Am Econ R 3:702 S '13 500w

SPARGO, JOHN. Syndicalism, industrial unionism and socialism. *$1.25 (2½c) Huebsch 13-9157

Mr. Spargo's book is valuable as an exposition of the typical socialist's attitude toward syndicalism and toward sabotage, direct action, the general strike, and other principles for which syndicalism stands. His chapters are headed: What is syndicalism? The philosophy of syndicalism; Syndicalism and the general strike; Sabotage as a revolutionary weapon; Relation of syndicalism to socialism. Says the author in his preface, "I am not a believer in syndicalism. . . . For this reason I shall be the more careful to keep all taint of partizanship from my statements of its principles and aims, however much I may afterward assail them."

"The bibliographic notes that are appended are valuable." Alexander Fleisher.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:269 J1 '13 50w

"The book while not an objective study is an interesting presentation of a growing movement."

+ Boston Transcript p19 J1 23 '13 170w

"The book is well worth reading, especially by all who are likely to have to meet labor problems."

+ Engin N 69:1254 Je 12 '13 120w

"The best exposition of syndicalism and its allied subjects."

+ Ind 75:508 Ag 28 '13 150w

"If there are timorous souls affrighted by the industrial disorders which crowd the columns on the front pages of the newspapers, it will cheer them up to read Mr. Spargo's denunciation of them and explanation why they neither can nor should succeed."

+ N Y Times 18:337 Je 8 '13 950w

"The book gives an excellent cross-section view of the temper of socialism in its present stage of development."

+ N Y Times 18:679 N 30 '13 400w

"Here again, common sense, taking due cognizance of both sides of a question, without looking for an impossible theoretic solution, weighs facts and reaches conclusions obviously sound as far as they go. The book is written avowedly from the standpoint of a socialist, and its chief defect for the general reader lies in the persistence of the author's purpose to discriminate Marxian socialism from syndicalism. His discussion of socialist policy is by no means devoid of interest, but to the reader in search of general enlightenment such discussion is not of prime importance."

+ — No Am 197:719 My '13 350w

"An exceedingly interesting discussion of the subject. Whether one wholly sympathises with Mr. Spargo's point of view or not, he has done a useful thing."

+ R of Rs 47:637 My '13 100w

"Regardless of its inaccuracies, Mr. Spargo's book may be helpful to both socialists and non-socialists, though it is weak in its interpretation of the spirit and the causes of the movement." L. Levine.

+ — Survey 31:167 N 8 '13 120w

SPEARING, HERBERT GREEN. Childhood of art; or, The ascent of man; a sketch of the vicissitudes of his upward struggle, based chiefly on the relics of his artistic work in prehistoric times. il *$6 Putnam 13-35397

"The 500 or so illustrations in black and white and color admirably reproduce photographs of the most notable and significant art works of the prehistoric ages, and in the text the author, with marked wisdom and lucidity, shows the relation the relics that have been found by the archaeologists bear to the story of the upward struggle of mankind." (N Y Times) Contents: Palaeolithic cave paintings; Palaeolithic sculpture; The origin of drawing; Why did the cave men draw? Schematism and stylization; Early African and Siberian art; The earliest Egyptian pottery; Predynastic carving and drawing; Pharaonic art; The earliest Chaldean art; Chaldean statues and reliefs;

Discoveries in Crete; Progressive Cretan art; The humble origins of Greek art; Greek sculpture; Greek painting; The triumph of Greek art.

"The work is diffuse and didactic at times and the scholar and expert may find it amateurish, but it is full of interest to the general reader."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:445 Je '13

"A curiously unequal book, which mingles shrewd and pregnant observations on the one hand with loose and shallow statements on the other in about equal proportions. He has also studied with some care a good many text-books on his subject, and if he has not always completely assimilated or digested their contents, it is human to err. The worst fault, in fact, in Mr. Spearing's book is the persistent way in which he drags in his political opinions in season and out of season."

+ — Ath 1913.1:18 Ja 4 850w

"A book to command attention. It is, in fact, so fully up to date that it makes more or less note of everything thus far published and of some things so new as to be yet unpublished. But the volume is far from being merely a technical work. The style is so vivid, the treatment so picturesque, that the narrative is as entertaining as it is enlightening."

+ Dial 54:345 Ap 16 '13 500w

"If Mr. Spearing's book fails to make a unitary effect, it may still commend itself for its valuable review of neolithic art, for its abundant illustrations, and its generally cautious scholarship."

+ — Nation 96:427 Ap 24 '13 300w

"It is a most impressive exposition which will greatly please those fairly well informed on the subject to which it relates, and greatly astonish those having only meagre and vague knowledge of primitive artistry."

+ N Y Times 18:81 F 16 '13 180w

N Y Times 18:136 Mr 9 '13 120w

"Scholarly and suggestive book." C. H. C. Baker.

+ Sat R 115:204 F 15 '13 250w

SPEARMAN, FRANK HAMILTON. Merrilie Dawes. il *$1.35 (1½c) Scribner 13-18955

A novel in which the characters are a group of financiers who buy and sell railroads with the celerity and nonchalance with which lesser men might acquire and dispose of so much kindling wood. Merrilie Dawes, the heroine, is a very rich young woman who says she is tired of being looked upon as "an estate." She cannot escape her destiny, however; the wealth is hers, and thru the possession of it she finds herself involved in the financial ventures that threaten to overwhelm her friend John Adrane. She meets Adrane only after he has become engaged to Annie Whitney, but in the panic which bankrupts John this inconvenient engagement is dissolved and he is left free to become something more than a friend to Merrilie.

"A generally entertaining book."

+ A L A Bkl 10:118 N '13

+ Boston Transcript p12 D 8 '13 190w

"Altogether it is a clean story that holds one's interest throughout."

+ Cath World 78:391 D '13 150w

"The financial action that interlocks with the love-story is plausibly and, in the crucial scenes, admirably done."

+ — Nation 97:360 O 16 '13 230w

"The most interesting feature of Mr. Spearman's story is neither the plot, which is not particularly new, nor the style, which, especially in the dialogues, is often stiff, nor the character drawing, which leaves much to be desired. It is the mental attitude of the author, as reflected by those persons in the novel whom he evidently likes and admires, that forms the interest in 'Merrilie Dawes.'"

+ — N Y Times 18:488 S 21 '13 400w

SPEARMAN, FRANK HAMILTON—Continued.

"The book has originality and abounds in incident."

+ Outlook 105:280 O 4 '13 70w

SPEED, HAROLD. Practice and science of drawing. il $1.75 Lippincott A13-1215

A volume published as one of the series in the "New art library." The author addresses himself primarily to art students. "The standpoint of the author is modern and at the same time conservative; his sympathies are broad; and his attitude toward the variety of influences by which the student is beset is liberal but sane. With keen insight and good taste, he is often able to harmonize apparently conflicting art standards. . . . Considerations of composition receive special attention in several chapters on Rhythm; but the author throughout the book, treats drawing as something of far greater significance than mere representation." (School Arts Magazine)

"Though intended for art students it is an interesting and illuminating book for the general reader who wishes to appreciate drawing."

+ A L A Bkl 10:63 O '13 +

"No work on art has been published in recent years which might be more advantageously placed in the hands of a young student, as a statement of the logical elements of drawing and painting. Every page shows robust commonsense expressed in a clear style."

+ — Ath 1913,1:385 Ap 5 270w

"It cannot fail to be of the greatest value to students and amateurs." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 14 '13 1350w

"An excellent book."

+ N Y Times 18:332 Je 1 '13 80w

"A most readable book as well as a valuable treatise upon drawing by an accomplished draughtsman and painter. The book combines to a reasonable degree the scientific with the 'artistic' attitude of approach to the subject of art study." J. H.

+ School Arts Magazine 13:79 S '13 250w

SPENCE, LEWIS. Myths of Mexico and Peru. 10 il $2.50 (3c) Crowell 13-35819

The author calls attention to the folly of the tendency to speak of America as "a continent without a history." He points out that "for centuries prior to European occupation Central America was the seat of civilizations boasting a history and a semi-historical mythology second to none in richness and interest. It is only because the sources of that history are unknown to the general reader that such assurance upon the lack of it exists." (Preface) It is to correct such current misconceptions that he offers this book, the result of recent archaeological researches into the ancient civilisations of Mexico and Peru.

"A book specially interesting to the student of history and folklore."

+ A L A Bkl 10:109 N '13

"Mr. Spence hopes that his volume upon this subject may prove the means of leading many English students to the consideration of American archaeology. It presents that study in such an attractive light that it may well have that effect, yet it is hardly an antiquary's book. For the general reader the book is all that it should be."

+ Ath 1913,2:186 Ag 23 430w

"The romance of 'Old America,' the mediæval history of Mexico and Peru, is interestingly presented in Mr. Lewis Spence's volume which will charm all people interested in folklore."

+ Bookm 38:325 N '13 300w

"It is carefully arranged and well written, and is equipped with many tables of statistics and other important information bearing upon ancient Mexico and Peru."

+ Boston Transcript p10 O 11 '13 600w

"Zeal and industry and an equipment of rather unusual learning have gone into the making of Mr. Spence's elaborate volume."

+ Dial 55:488 D 1 '13 130w

"The wildest tales of magicians, princesses, dwarfs, giants, and strange Mexican gods of which the images are extant, give the book a peculiarly Oriental flavor, such as one finds in the 'Thousand and one nights' and other Arabian stories."

+ Ind 76:138 O 16 '13 120w

+ N Y Times 18:519 O 5 '13 200w

SPENCER, MRS. ANNA GARLIN. Woman's share in social culture. $2 Kennerley 13-35265

This work is both an historical survey of the part which women have played in the social culture of the past and an exposition of the share which, thru social necessity, they must make theirs in the future. "The last part of Mrs. Spencer's book is almost a triumphant prophecy. There is no longer doubt that the full recognition of women must come. It is only a part of the great movement toward democracy, and the democratic state has taken over the control of education, charity and social effort toward common welfare, confessedly woman's sphere is social service, and there is opportunity for them to do but take over the women as a part of the body-politic." (Boston Transcript)

"One of the most satisfactory works we have had on the 'woman question.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:388 My '13

"There is not throughout the book that continuity of thought which one might justly expect in a book. Nevertheless, the work is a good one, and wholly commendable."

+ Ann Am Acad 48:266 J1 '13 200w

"Mrs. Spencer has a clear insight into social conditions, combined with definite historical data and research, which lifts the book to a high position among works on social questions." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 1300w

"The author has achieved the feat of becoming a sociologist and remaining exquisitely reasonable and human. The book has atmosphere, perspective, human interest; it is full of stimulus to thought and of an admirable justice and right-mindedness. To the sanity and lucidity so necessary in such studies, the author unites a keen sense of the eternal values." C. A. P. Comer.

+ Dial 54:342 Ap 16 '13 180w

+ — N Y Sun p4 My 17 '13 80w

"We have no fear that Mrs. Spencer will be annoyed by the reminder we have given her of the American man's kindly disposition toward the women of his country and of his readiness to respond to appeals for the support of reform movements. She will, of course, cheerfully admit that recognition of these things is quite relevant to any consideration of the very interesting and valuable exposition she makes in her book of what women wish to do with respect to certain social conditions that seem to them intolerable."

+ — N Y Times 18:118 Mr 2 '13 800w

"The most conspicuous quality exhibited in Mrs. Spencer's book is sanity." C: Zueblin.

+ Survey 30:437 Je 28 '13 570w

SPENCER, FREDERICK A. M. Meaning of Christianity. 7s 6d Unwin, T. Fisher, London

"It is the author's object 'to know the truth of the subjects with which the main doctrines of Christianity deal; namely, the means of intercourse of human souls with God, the position of human souls in the universe, the destiny of God for them in the future, and conditions of fulfilling that destiny.' In this study the Bible is used with no implication of its finality, and early Christian dogma is likewise treated historically and genetically. The author brings materials for illustration and argument from broadly diverse fields of physical science, philosophy, biblical criticism, and the psychology of religion. . . . The twelve chapters deal successively with 'The spiritual,' 'God,' 'Christ,' 'The Holy Spirit,' 'Sin,' 'The atonement,' 'The doctrine of grace,' 'The institutions of Christianity,' 'The end of the world,' 'The resurrection,' 'The judgment,' 'The kingdom of God.'—Am J Theol

"The best feature of the volume lies in its expositions and appreciations of modern critical views and the psychological aspects of religious experience. The constructive element is of unequal merit and in part a disappointment. While there is much that provokes thought and awakens interest, one lays the book aside with the feeling that it is not a great and permanent contribution to theological construction." H: B. Robins.

+ — Am J Theol 17:450 Jl '13 900w

"In spite of the difficulty presented by the mere scope of the undertaking, the result may at once be pronounced interesting and suggestive." A. L. Lilley.

+ Hibbert J 11:686 Ap '13 1350w

Reviewed by T. Whittaker.

+ — Int J Ethics 23:478 Jl '13 800w

SPRADING, CHARLES T. Liberty and the great libertarians; ed. and comp. with preface, introd. and index. $1.50 (1c) C: T. Sprading, 6829 Broad st., Los Angeles

13-17355

The editor calls this book "an anthology on liberty; a handbook of freedom." In it he "has gathered together some of the finest passages from the apostles of liberty of the last two centuries." (Ind) Among the authors represented are: Edmund Burke, Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, John Stuart Mill, Emerson, Thoreau, Ingersoll, Henry George, Bernard Shaw, Olive Schreiner, Maria Montessori.

Boston Transcript p19 Jl 30 '13 650w

"The extracts are well selected, and even the dullest and most slavish spirit might well feel some spark of fire and enthusiasm from them."

+ Ind 75:578 S 4 '13 100w

+ N Y Times 18:423 Ag 3 '13 70w

STACPOOLE, HENRY DE VERE. Street of the flute-player. *$1.25 Duffield 12-24621

A story "of Athens in that year which saw the first production of Aristophanes's 'Frog.' That writer of plays, the aristocrat named Diomed, the drunken painter Moschion, the banker Gyges, a beautiful girl flute-player, and many other types of olden days, move through a story made up of singular incidents told in a modern fashion."—Outlook

"In this very readable book the author, who is a practised novelist, gives us a very dramatic story in Attic setting. Mr. Stacpoole has evidently made careful studies of the books of the period, and mastered a great number of details. Regarding the general sense of the book, it seems to us that he gives us a very plausible view of fast and rich society in Athens."

+ — Ath 1912,2:344 S 28 370w

"It is the habit of judicious teachers of history to suggest, request, or command, as the need may be, to their advanced classes the reading of some historical novel. Now appears 'The street of the flute-player,' an ideal book for this purpose of history teachers."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 F 19 '13 450w

"It is a vivid and glowing story, rich in historical verisimilitude and pulsating with passion."

+ Ind 74:925 Ap 24 '13 70w

"Readers who like modern sentiment and sentimentality in a classical setting, and are not disturbed by inaccuracies, will probably find the book enjoyable. But even these, we fancy, will find a good deal to skip."

+ — Nation 96:361 Ap 10 '13 200w

"The best and strongest work Mr. Stacpoole has yet done is this story of ancient Athens."

+ N Y Times 18:66 F 9 '13 280w

"A carefully-wrought-out story."

+ Outlook 103:372 F 15 '13 60w

"To speak plainly, Mr. Stacpoole has approached his task without reverence, and he has given us a picture in which all the details are marked with a sharp pen. The past, stripped of its mysteries, is no more than an incomplete example of the present. There was no real need to place this story in Athens, for almost all of it might have been written of any town of to-day about which there still lingers a little of the grace of some of the days before yesterday."

+ — Sat R 114:462 O 12 '12 770w

"It is a painstaking piece of work and presents to the mind a picture that many tomes of dry history are incapable of calling up."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 7 '13 320w

STAMPER, CHARLES WILLIAM. King Edward as I knew him (Eng title, What I know). Il *$2 Dodd 13-15230

Mr. Stamper who writes this memoir of King Edward was the king's "motor expert." He had charge of all the royal cars and always occupied a seat by the chauffeur when the king rode abroad. He held this post for the last five years of the king's life, and was almost daily in the royal presence. He writes of the king as he knew him in this personal and informal capacity.

"The book is unique among royal memoirs, full of touches of human nature for a future Macaulay." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 24 '13 500w

"As a work of unconscious humor, this deserves more than casual notice. Seldom has the innocent funkeyism which doth hedge about a king more quaintly recorded itself."

+ Nation 97:484 N 20 '13 580w

"Though Mr. Stamper perforce writes largely of trivialities and gives with unnecessary particularity the details of the King's itinerary, he has contributed a good deal to the world's knowledge of the individuality of a man called to one of the most exalted positions."

+ — N Y Times 18:511 O 5 '13 1350w

"There is a tinge of the pathetic in a narrative of this kind that places it out beyond the category of mere servants' gossip and sycophancy." Filson Young.

+ — Sat R 115:742 Je 14 '13 1600w

"Such a book as this has a difficult course to steer between the Scylla of indiscretion and the Charybdis of snobbery. But Mr. Stamper has succeeded in avoiding both the one and the other."

+ Spec 110:849 My 17 '13 630w

STANDING, PERCY CROSS. Guerilla leaders of the world, from Charette to De Wet. Il *$1.75 Houghton (Eng ed 13-7796)

In choosing his guerilla heroes the author "limits himself to modern times, beginning with the Vendeeans and Andreas Hofer, including Bolivar, Garibaldi, Schamyl, Abd el Kader and some Confederate commanders, and ending with De Wet and Delarey in the Boer war. The stories read as though they were intended for youth; they are exciting enough to suit older readers also."—N Y Sun

+ A L A Bkl 10:64 O '13

Ath 1912,2:656 N 30 70w

"The author has not been entirely without prejudice in his selection and treatment of his matter, especially in his accounts of the Confederate characters, and the Boer leaders, but his descriptions are lively and the quotations from other authors interesting and appropriate."

+ — Boston Transcript p25 Ap 23 '13 370w

STANDING, PERCY CROSS—Continued.

"Pictures and maps are added to help the reader in a comprehensive understanding of an intensely interesting subject."

+ Lit D 47:774 O 25 '13 250w

"Sketches that are slight but readable. The author's literary style is marred by an unfortunate addiction to italics and marks of exclamation."

+ — Nation 97:61 J1 17 '13 200w

+ N Y Sun p5 Ap 5 '13 80w

N Y Times 18:258 Ap 27 '13 500w

+ — Spec 110:sup694 Ap 26 '13 120w

STANLEY, CAROLINE (ABBOT) (MRS. ELISHA STANLEY). Master of "The Oaks." il *$1.25 Revell 13-314

The story of a man's efforts to live down his past. When a boy, the hero of the story "takes a small sum of money from a bank in which he has an ill-paid position, knowing that a check is on the way which will more than cover the amount. Mails are delayed for several days by a washout, and the technical theft is discovered. The authorities refuse to consider the special conditions, and proceed to make an example of the poor wretch. He breaks jail, acquires money, begins life anew, makes a respectable place for himself, and is about to marry the girl of his heart, when his crime comes to light." (Nation) He pays the penalty to the full, returns to serve out his sentence and in the end is rewarded by finding that his lady's loyalty has stood even so severe a test.

"The story is well worth reading. Sad in parts, the story shows always a saving sense of humor, and leaves one with the feeling of hope."

+ Ind 74.63 Ja 2 '13 320w

Nation 95:459 N 14 '12 200w

"Wholesome and charming people, a pleasing style, and a story of many interwoven interests combine to make Mrs. Stanley's book one of the best American novels of the last twelve-month."

+ N Y Times 17:742 D 1 '12 30w

STANLEY, CAROLINE (ABBOT) (MRS. ELISHA STANLEY). Their Christmas golden wedding. il *50c (7c) Crowell 13-18721

Two old people, who have been separated for a year, after forty-nine years of happy wedded life, overturn the plans of their well-meaning children and return to their old home to celebrate their golden wedding. They find the old house vacant, open it up, rekindle the fires, and invite the children in to celebrate with them, making it quite clear that they are both determined and able to care for one another for the rest of their lives.

STANWOOD, EDWARD. History of the presidency from 1897 to 1909. *$1.75 Houghton 12-23681

This work, a sequel to an earlier volume, begins with McKinley's first administration. "All but a few pages of the volume are devoted to the records of party conventions, to reproductions of party platforms and to the statement of political issues. . . . [In a final chapter, 'Evolution of the presidency'] Mr. Stanwood makes a clear statement of the manner in which the presidential power has increased, first with respect to appointments to office, second with respect to vetoes of acts of Congress, and finally with respect to the initiation of legislation in Congress and its passage under influence and pressure from the White house." (Springfield Republican)

"One lays down Mr. Stanwood's volume, however, with the feeling that the writer has not only failed to grasp, or at least to express, the most obvious significance of Mr. Roosevelt's second administration, but that in one vital respect he has misinterpreted it." William MacDonald.

+ — Am Hist R 18:607 Ap '13 750w

A L A Bkl 9:204 Ja '13

"Of special interest to the political scientist, as distinguished from the historian, is the last of the five chapters of the book, which deals with the evolution of the presidential office."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:124 D '12 150w

"The book will serve as a source book for all times, as the platforms and pronouncements of each political party are given in full. Because of its illuminating analysis of the growth in party influence and methods and in presidential power, it will be of value and interest alike to future historians and to contemporary writers in political science."

+ Ann Am Acad 47:284 My '13 230w

"A valuable feature of this book as an historical record will be found in its inclusion of the party platforms for the period covered—with those of 1912 to boot—and of tables of statistics of popular and electoral votes, etc."

+ Ind 73:1010 O 31 '12 1350w

"The work is characteristically free from any bias which might vitiate its value. On the whole, the author is quite consistent in his treatment of the subject-matter. The book is well written and satisfies an important demand."

+ — J Pol Econ 21:173 F '13 450w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:169 Mr '13 170w

"Mr. Stanwood is an alarmist; but to say that his alarm is wholly without reason is another matter."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 N 28 '12 1050w

STARKWEATHER, AMELIA MINERVA. Leaves from the city beautiful. *$1.25 Sherman, French & co. 13-1580

A group of "Hymns that have been set to music" composes one of the sections in this collection of verse. Many of the other poems are of a devotional nature also. With the poems by Mrs. Starkweather are included a number written for special occasions by her husband, Jacob F. Starkweather.

"Much allowance must be made for the good intentions and the helpful spirit in which the lines were written; but at the same time, the fact is to be borne in mind that it is not the road to Parnassus that is paved with good intentions. The good feeling, however, that pervades the verse shields it from any fault-finding criticism. No doubt it will continue in its more permanent form, 'to entertain and to edify' those for whom it was obligingly written."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Ja 29 '13 200w

"The work is that of a student and lover of humankind. Its appeal is to the vivacious boy and girl as well as to the reflective student of middle age; and humor touched with seriousness accomplishes effects here and there that neither of these alone could attain. It is altogether the kind of verse which is ever welcome—the resultant of an earnest soul's reaction upon wholesome experience—and is sure to find a welcome in the hearts of its many readers."

+ Chaut 70:239 Ap '13 100w

STATHAM, HENRY HEATHCOTE. Short critical history of architecture. il *$3.75 Scribner 12-29420

"The characteristic of his work is the treatment of architecture as a continuous development, which the reader is able to follow without a break from one country to another." (Ath) "To a brief introduction succeeds the first chapter dealing with 'Architecture before the great Greek period,' and then follow chapters entitled 'Greece and Rome: the great columnar styles,' 'Domed styles and the Byzantine type,' 'From Romanesque to Gothic,' 'The Saracenic interlude,' 'The Gothic period,' 'From the renaissance to modern times.' The work is completed by a useful glossary of terms." (Boston Transcript)

"The 580 illustrations are specially valuable and well reproduced."

+ A L A Bkl 9:337 Ap '13

"Will be welcomed by the student no less than the general reader. Mr. Statham's work is needed to bridge the gap between Ferguson's monumental history and the textbooks."

+ Ath 1912,2:789 D 28 500w

"Mr. Statham's work is so excellent in quality in the main that we cannot help regretting the existence of occasional lapses of dignity in his volume. Mr. Statham's book can hardly fail to excite lively controversy where mooted points are concerned, but it is distinct addition to the literature of architecture and as such may be heartily welcomed."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Ja 1 '13 700w

"Will certainly prove to be a very useful book. It is excellent as a well illustrated single volume giving a general account of the whole course of architecture from remote beginnings to the high buildings of New York."

W. R. L.
+ — Eng Hist R 28:204 Ja '13 450w

"Is in the main a trustworthy, intelligent, and (with occasional lapses) a well-written compendium."

+ — Nation 97:248 S 11 '13 700w

N Y Times 18:114 Mr 2 '13 100w

Reviewed by C. H. C. Baker.

Sat R 115:10 Ja 4 '13 1300w

"Taken as a whole, the book is astonishingly free from inaccuracy or prejudice, and as a readable text-book has a value it would be difficult to exaggerate."

+ — Spec 110:sup689 Ap 26 '13 650w

STEBBINS, CYRIL ADELBERT. Principles of agriculture through the school and the home garden. il *$1 Macmillan 13-17959

A textbook for teachers to use in the four upper grades, offered in the hope that it may be a means of uniting school and community life. Its aim is to teach principles and a knowledge of processes, not technical matter.

STEEDMAN, AMY. Our island saints. il 2 *$2.50 Putnam (Eng ed W13-39)

The saints referred to in the title are those of England. "Miss Steedman tells the stories of the youth of twelve good men and women, beginning with St. Alban and ending with St. Hugh of Lincoln." (Spec)

"A tendency to excess in the way of gorgeousness is an infirmity which should be watched. Miss Steedman is a little prone thereto, also to a certain quaint omniscience which allows her in 'Our island saints,' to speak of events as taking place hundreds of years ago on a certain bright June day 'when the hill was starred with flowers' or 'the white clouds scudded in ever-changing shapes.' At the same time it is precisely this faculty for creating an atmosphere of actuality which gives an author the chance of attracting children, to whom dates and pedigrees convey nothing."

+ — Ath 1912,2:sup497 O 26 120w

+ Ind 73:1367 D 12 '12 23w

"Miss Steedman has a notable gift for entertaining the young."

+ Int Studio 48:265 Ja '13 50w

+ Lit D 45:1076 D 7 '12 70w

+ N Y Times 17:758 D 8 '12 50w

"The pictures by M. D. Spooner have a kind of spiritual prettiness and tender charm most suitable to the subject-matter. It is altogether a delightful gift-book, and would be an excellent choice for young girls."

+ Sat R 114:sup5 D 7 '12 100w

"Though we have here no very exciting adventures, there is plenty to interest thoughtful children."

+ Spec 109:sup936 D 7 '12 80w

STEEGMANN, MARY G. Bianca Cappello. il 10 *$2.50 (2½c) Norman, Remington & co.

An illuminating sketch of a woman who may be called a typical woman of the Italian renaissance—a type of what a clever and rather unscrupulous woman could become and achieve when spurred by necessity and ambition. Bianca Cappello was a Venetian by family and birth, yet it is in Florence that her life is traced,—a life outlined against a background of heroic virtue and stupendous vice.

"The author seems to have acquainted herself with most of what has been written about the Medici and Bianca Cappello, and to have allowed her imagination to play round the facts pretty freely. The book is written in an easy and casual style."

+ — Ath 1913,1:695 Je 28 170w

"Miss Steegmann's deep research, her enthusiasm and candor have resulted in a biography of rare excellence and fascination."

+ Boston Transcript p25 O 29 '13 430w

+ Nation 97:466 N 13 '13 170w

"Miss Steegmann's study of her materials has been thorough and practical, her book is well and agreeably written, giving an excellent picture of the two cities, Venice and Florence, which shared between them the romantic adventures of Bianca Capello's life, and describing those adventures in the right spirit, not without a touch of pity for the 'beautiful evil thing.'"

+ Spec 111:sup492 O 4 '13 670w

STEEVES, HARRISON ROSS. Learned societies and English literary scholarship in Great Britain and the United States. (Columbia univ. studies in English and comparative literature) *$1.50 (2½c) Lemcke 13-20130

A bibliography with an introduction expanded into the following chapters: The field; The Elizabethan assembly of the antiquaries; The seventeenth century; The eighteenth century; Nineteenth century book clubs and general publishing societies; Philological and text societies; American societies and clubs.

+ Ath 1913,2:624 N 29 90w

STEEVES, HARRISON ROSS, and RISTINE, FRANK HUMPHREY. Representative essays in modern thought. *$1.50 (½c) Am. bk. 13-2477

"These essays are intended primarily for use in freshman composition courses. . . . The scheme of the book is in general accord with a relatively new but already prominent tendency away from the 'model' fallacy, and from the old-fashioned teaching of 'rhetoric,' in favor of distinct stress on 'ideas.'" (Nation) Matthew Arnold's "Sweetness and light"; Huxley's "Science and culture"; William James's "The will to believe"; John Stuart Mill's "On the liberty of thought and discussion" are some of the essays included.

"They are too advanced for the generality of freshmen, but as a whole the collection will be useful in libraries used by students."

+ A L A Bkl 9:446 Je '13

"A great many readers outside the classroom should welcome a volume which embraces so much material of the first importance, gathered from such scattered sources."

+ Dial 54:387 My 1 '13 170w

"The selections are good. The explanatory notes are helpful and intelligent. The book is a success."

+ Educ R 46:204 S '13 150w

Ind 75:331 Ag 7 '13 100w

"The essays are for the most part eccentric rather than central, bizarre, rather than pure.

STEEVES, H. R., and RISTINE, F. H.—Cont. In quest of literature that is 'irritating' in effect, the editors have succeeded only too well."

— Nation 96:467 My 8 '13 320w

STEFAN-GRUENFELDT, PAUL. Gustav Mahler; tr. from the German by T. E. Clark. *$2 Schirmer 13-12287

The author writes with ardent admiration for Mahler and his work. "A full account of the master's life is given, and a full analysis, down to his Eighth symphony, of his compositions, partly technical, partly spiritual, philosophical, aesthetic, and psychological. It seems impossible that any aspect of Mahler's significance for the modern world can have been overlooked." (N Y Times)

"Will be of interest to music students and amateurs of orchestral production and of stage craft, but hardly to general readers. The work is strongly partisan and shows distinctly at times the rough edges of translation."

+ A L A Bkl 10:109 N '13

"The author writes with enthusiasm as well as critical insight."

+ Nation 97:442 N 6 '13.750w

"Mr. Stefan's treatise is one of great value to those who are anxiously studying the bewildering tendencies of the modern art of music, and wish to know where we really stand in the flux and reflux of this uncharted sea."

+ N Y Times 18:497 S 28 '13 300w

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR. My life with the Eskimo. il *$4 Macmillan 13-24327

An account of the arctic expedition of 1908 to 1912, which took Mr. Stefánsson into the Dolphin and Union straits region where he discovered the hitherto unknown race of "blond" Eskimos. "The volume is filled with all manner of intimate detail which will not fail to hold the attention of the most blasé reader. . . . Dr. Stefánsson reserves his discoveries for scientific bulletins, and offers here the history of his expedition in a vigorous, telling style to readers most of whom, he always remembers, have never seen an ice pack." (N Y Times)

Ath 1913,2:sup397 O 11 50w

"Though no north poles are encountered, the chronicle gives ample proof that other interesting things are not lacking in those distant latitudes."

+ Dial 55:479 D 1 '13 250w

"The narrative, although simple, is often diffuse, showing a lack of system in the plan and scope. There is no preface, no chapter heading or summary of contents; and a fore-note says that Mr. Stefánsson, called away to the Far North, had not been able to read the final proofs."

+ N Y Sun p10 N 15 '13 1550w

"Entertaining and instructive."

+ N Y Sun p28 N 29 '13 40w

"As a whole, 'My life with the Eskimo' is the most important book of its kind published for many years, rivaled only, perhaps, by the account of Mr. Savage-Landor's adventures at the other end of the globe."

+ N Y Times 18:704 N 30 '13 3400w

STELZLE, REV. CHARLES. American social and religious conditions. il *$1 Revell 13-1088

"The book is the outcome, in a way, of the recent Men and religion movement and of the surveys it made in seventy principal cities, of which Mr. Stelzle had charge." (N Y Times) "In this volume, as in all his writings, he promotes this junction of religious with other social forces. He exhibits the various factors of the social movement, and the proper function of the Church as the social agency whose co-operation they call for. The problems of city life and of country life, of the immigrant, the Negro, the Indian, the Spanish-American in our southwest, in Porto Rico, in Cuba, and of our 'new frontier' in the west and south, are presented in detail with the facts both tabulated and diagrammed and a reckoning of the religious as well as the social factors. Then come the demands of modern efficiency and a unified programme for the churches' advance to meet them." (Outlook)

"A broad-minded, constructive survey of present conditions."

+ A L A Bkl 9:337 Ap '13

+ Ind 74:420 F 20 '13 60w

"Inspiringly broad-minded is Charles Stelzle's survey of 'American religious and social conditions.' Especially up-to-date is it in its author's conception of the qualifying word 'religious.' Half a century ago it would not have been thought to have any religion in it."

+ N Y Times 18:4 Ja 5 '13 200w

"An ideal manual for the continuation of the Men and religion forward movement in promoting the evolution of a better social order on constructive and Christian lines."

+ Outlook 103:93 Ja 11 '13 200w

STEPHENS, JAMES. Crock of gold. *$1.25 (2c) Macmillan 12-27198

It is in the night time that the Leprecauns go about from house to house clipping little pieces from people's money, till, bit by bit, they get together a crock of gold; a Leprecaun has to have a crock of gold in order to ransom himself should he ever be captured by the men folks. Now it was just because the Philosopher of Colla Doraca told Meehaw MacMurrachu where the crock of gold was to be found and because Meehaw MacMurrachu stole it all that the trouble began. It was because of this that the children of the Philosopher were whisked into the underground cave by the Leprecaun, that Caitilin Ni Murrachu was lured away by the great god Pan, that the Thin Woman of Inis Magrath made the long journey to find Angus Og who with the help of the Shee made all right again.

"Though it is not a novel, nor a fairy-tale, nor quite an allegory, 'The crock of gold' partakes of all these forms, and rises above them as a work of art."

+ Ath 1912,2:448 O 19 50w

"Mr. Stephens has produced a remarkably fine and attractive work of art."

+ Ath 1912,2:473 O 26 400w

"There is no book in the world in the least like it, and probably there will never be another, which is the best of reasons for making the acquaintance of this one before it is out of print."

+ Atlan 112:699 N '13 120w

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 1200w

"Mr. Stephens's book is best enjoyed as a bit of sophisticated faëry, characteristically whimsical. Next time, however, we shall hope to find something simpler and perhaps even more coherent."

+ Ind 74:539 Mr 6 '13 250w

Nation 96:619 Je 19 '13 400w

"A thoroughly delightful book of a very uncommon sort."

+ N Y Sun p3 Ja 18 '13 300w

"Mr. Stephens's work as his 'Mary, Mary,' has already testified, is full of sweetness and of whimsicality, of sympathy and tenderness and sly satire, of merriment and of poetry. We may or may not look seriously for symbolic meanings in 'The crock of gold,' but we cannot help finding the book's elfin charm."

+ N Y Times 18:21 Ja 19 '13 400w

"Whimsical is exactly the word for this delightful fantasia of men, gods, and fairies. Its fault on the side of thought-suggestion is that it has a little too much subtlety to reach a large audience."

+ Outlook 103:319 F 8 '13 400w

"Of the mystery and the wisdom of his book this little can be said: to his humour we have given the only possible tribute of the laughter of pure delight."

+ Sat R 114:sup711 D 7 '12 800w

"While we think that the book as a whole has certain obvious defects, we desire to refer again, in conclusion, to its charm and humour. They are qualities which to some extent compensate us for the defects."

+ — Spec 110:453 Mr 15 '13 900w

"It is decidedly a book for everyone to read who wants something new in fiction and something very richly worth while."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 24 '13 220w

STEPHENS, JAMES. Here are ladies. *$1.25
12 (2c) Macmillan 13-22511

Here is nonsense—some of it very amusing, some of it a little heart touching, and much of it very wise. The author evidences a fondness for trilogies and writes of: Three heavy husbands; Three women who wept; Three angry people; Three young wives; Three lovers who lost; Three happy places. There are other single sketches, too, and an occasional bit of verse, and in a final series, "There is a tavern in the town," an old gentleman discourses learnedly and at length on many subjects much after the manner of that delectable philosopher in "The crock of gold."

"Mr. Stephens is the possessor of an individual style, a quaint angle of vision, and a humour all his own. These qualities are well marked in this volume; but they show to less advantage in short sketches than in his earlier comparatively long narratives. Once or twice indeed, he drops lamentably into cheap witticism."

+ — Ath 1913,2:557 N 15 150w

"Perhaps the real charm and strength of the book lie in the fact that it is a man's book; a book free of the drawing-room conventions, decent or indecent, which now obsess our fiction; a book with the free and hearty voice of one honest man speaking to another in his shop or at his club."

+ Nation 97:563 D 11 '13 570w

"The most charming thing about Mr. Stephens is his way of saying things. You are continually running across bits of description or philosophy that you want to take out and keep just for the joy of the wording." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ N Y Times 18:641 N 23 '13 900w

"In the present volume there are fun, fancy, philosophy, and sometimes the tragic note, combined with a de Maupassant quality of tense, dramatic characterization which condenses a whole life-story into a few pages and makes the characters live human beings."

+ Outlook 105:763 D 6 '13 270w

"Cocks of gold are not to be found beneath every bush, but there is much of the precious metal in the new book, and not a line in it which need discourage those who have believed in the author's good future."

+ — Sat R 116:591 N 8 '13 780w

"Mr. James Stephens's new volume marks a considerable advance on 'The crock of gold,' the short story, or fantasia being a much better vehicle for his peculiar and remarkable talent than the continuous narrative. But whatever his medium or his mood, there is one constant factor in all of Mr. Stephens's work, one quality which endures unchanged the wildest variations of tragedy and comedy—his admirable control of the English tongue."

+ Spec 111:767 N 8 '13 750w

STEPHENSON, ANDREW. History of Roman law, with a commentary on the Institutes of Gaius and Justinian. *$3 (2c)
Little 12-22265

"This volume is the outcome of a series of lectures given to advanced college students who were specializing in history. It . . . aims to give, in a clear, analytical manner, the origin and development of Roman law in such compass as can be mastered by well trained students in a two-hour course running throughout the year." (Preface) Contents: Part 1, Book 1, From the founding of Rome to the twelve tables—451 B. C.; Book 2, From the twelve tables to the empire—451-30 B. C.; Book 3, From the beginning of the empire to the death of Justinian, 30 B. C.—565 A. D.; Part 2, The institutes of Gaius and Justinian: Book 1, The law of persons; Book 2, The law of things.

STEVENS, ELLEN YALE. Guide to the Montessori method. 11 *$1 (2c) Stokes 13-5656

The author writes after a long period of study of the Montessori method and principles. This study included a visit to Rome where she had "the advantages of personal conferences with Dr. Montessori and the best exponents of her method, and also of extended visits to all the schools in Rome where her methods have been introduced." Of her reason for adding yet another to the many books on the subject already published Miss Stevens says, "In none of them have I found such a testing of these theories and methods by the principles of modern child psychology as to me seems necessary for an accurate estimate of their value." (Preface)

"An excellent work for teachers, giving a fuller account and perhaps a more accurate estimate than Smith and other earlier books."

+ A L A Bkl 9:446 Je '13

"This book does not add a great deal to our knowledge of Dr. Montessori but it does seem to be a rather more accurate estimate of her and her work than its predecessors."

+ Boston Transcript p25 Ap 9 '13 170w

"While not so much of a guide as some groping teacher or mother might desire, the book does treat of the approved procedure in the use of the Montessori material and traces the steps in development to be looked for according to this theory. It will therefore be of use to those desirous of some more definite instruction along this line." A. E. Moore.

+ — Educ R 46:396 N '13 700w

+ N Y Times 18:253 Ap 27 '13 2770w

R of Rs 47:765 Je '13 30w

STEVENS, ETHEL STEFANA. Long engagement. *$1.25 Doran 12-20641

"A young Englishman is privately engaged to a very charming girl living in his own little English village. Because of inadequate finances, and because of three dependent sisters, Dominick Eliaby has been unable to claim Melody. Years have passed, they are outgrowing the early romantic atmosphere, and there still seems little hope of a 'sensible' marriage. An unexpected event threatens to separate them permanently, and it is only through this threatened loss that they force themselves to risk marriage with a slender bank account."—Boston Transcript

"A good story, interesting, realistic and well written, and affording a good illustration of the harm done to society by the dependent woman."

+ A L A Bkl 9:456 Je '13 *

"Miss Stevens's latest novel does not fulfill the promise of 'The veil'; but, in literary craftsmanship, in coherence and power of construction, it is an improvement upon her more recent work. As the story deals with everyday English life, no original or striking situations could be looked for, but the author might have imagined a less hackneyed dénouement. The minor characters are well and sufficiently sketched. The style is terse and vivid, with a tendency at times towards the colloquial."

+ — Ath 1912,2:90 J1 27 180w

"As a story, 'The long engagement' is exceptionally interesting and well written, and the fact that it is slightly unconvincing detracts but little from the pleasure derived from reading it."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 14 '13 270w

Nation 97:144 Ag 14 '13 300w

STEVENS, ETHEL STEFANA—Continued.

"The people are carefully drawn, the women with humor and little kindness. The book is very well written and is full of bright things; it will be enjoyed by the reader even if he is somewhat provoked by it."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Ap 26 '13 200w

"Some people will call it dull reading, but there is matter in it to charm those who have the time and the wish to follow patiently."

+ — Sat R 114:370 S 21 '12 700w

STEVENS, ETHEL STEFANA. My Sudan year. il *$3.50 Doran A13-1171

"It is a graphic account of sojourns and journeyings in that vast territory with which the names of Gen. Gordon and Lord Kitchener are inseparably linked. While it does not go into statistics and is in no sense a blue book, it gives much valuable and well-digested information as to what the British government is attempting in the Sudan and how it is succeeding. . . . While very much of the book is given to picturesque description of the people of the Sudan, their customs and traditions, its references to the success of the British administration are important. . . . One of Miss Stevens's most interesting chapters is devoted to 'Sudanese songs and singers.' Various of the native songs are given in rhymed or metrical translations."—Springfield Republican

+ A L A Bkl 9:447 Je '13

"The book is interesting and one who reads will find it difficult to lay it aside."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 5 '13 500w

"The tone of Miss Stevens's whole book marks her as an experienced writer and observer, who knows how to see and what is worth seeing and can tell the story of it worthily."

+ Lit D 46:906 Ap 19 '13 280w

"The book has no index or map."

+ — Nation 96:364 Ap 10 '13 650w

"Miss Stevens gives a remarkably graphic picture of the country. Everything that she saw interested her, and the thousand and one anecdotes and bits of detail, with which she constantly enlivens her account, are all, no matter how trivial, significant and help the reader to fill out the picture and understand the situation. They are full of humor, too, and there is many a good laugh in the book."

+ N Y Times 18:120 Mr 2 '13 1500w

+ R of Rs 47:509 Ap '13 50w

"Of facts there are few, of reasoning or history almost nothing; but there is a great deal of local colour, cleverly manipulated, and a great deal of narrow observation and keen insight, and Miss Stevens has simply written down her impressions as they came to her."

+ — Spec 109:sup789 N 16 '12 170w

"One of the most interesting of recent books of travel."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 6 '13 1450w

STEVENS, WILLIAM SPRING. ed. Industrial combinations and trusts. *$2 (1c) Macmillan 13-1033

This work is a source book of original documents, reports, and other material relating to the trusts. In preparing the volume the editor has had two purposes in mind. "The first was to design a volume that should place within the reach of the students in courses in Trusts in our colleges and universities material of which much is . . . difficult of access or else altogether unavailable. The second purpose of the editor was the collection of such a set of materials as would afford the ordinary reader . . . a fair knowledge at first hand of the historical development of the trust movement in the United States, and a thorough comprehension of those problems in regard to them that the country is facing today." (Preface)

"Read along with general expositions of the questions arising out of industrial combinations, these reprints will prove illuminating, a corrective in many cases, giving an intimacy essential to a clear perception of the nature of the problems arising in connection with modern large-scale businesses." C. C. A.

+ Am Econ R 3:394 Je '13 250w

"A well selected compilation."

+ A L A Bkl 9:389 My '13

"A valuable volume of source material."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:125 F '13 120w

"Will prove a valuable aid to students of industrial affairs."

+ Ann Am Acad 46:199 Mr '13 200w

"An excellently arranged and carefully annotated series of extracts."

+ Ath 1913,1:187 F 15 50w

"The book has been carefully edited and ought to be of value not only for class instruction but also to the general reader."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 130w

"The value of such a volume depends chiefly on the character of the selections chosen, and it may at once be said that in general this task has been well performed." C. W. Wright.

+ — Dial 54:460 Je 1 '13 420w

"If the volume as a compilation is open to any criticism, it is on the ground that the compiler's notes are too brief and infrequent, for where they do appear they add significance to the documents reprinted. So useful is the matter that the book contains that it would be ungrateful to complain that something else might have been included."

+ — Elec World 61:465 Mr 1 '13 280w

"The reader will keep the book near at hand, in company with his dictionary, his 'Statesman's year book,' his Poor's 'Manual,' and other works of frequent reference."

+ Nation 97:415 O 30 '13 270w

"An extremely valuable book. The compilation has been made with strict impartiality."

+ N Y Times 18:100 F 23 '13 100w

"An immense amount of practical information has been packed into this volume. It is a book for the lawyer, the legislator, and the newspaper man rather than for the ordinary reader."

+ Outlook 103:278 F 1 '13 100w

R of Rs 47:504 Ap '13 70w

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT. The destroyer. il *$1.30 Dodd 13-20821

This detective story "deals with a problem of international politics, and the romance is constructed on the fact that Germany changed her attitude in regard to the Moroccan situation after the destruction of the French battleship 'La Liberté.'" (Ind) "It becomes certain . . . that 'La Liberté' has been sunk by an agent of Germany, the inventor of a sort of wireless fatal to all powder magazines. That he is caught, the invention converted to the use of France, and the forts of Strassburg only spared because the operator, the sole possessor of his secret, dies just at the crucial moment, may be disclosed to the reader without telling him too much. For the main interest of the story revolves about the pursuit of the criminal." (Nation)

"A story that holds the reader puzzled and perplexed from beginning to conclusion."

+ Ind 76:95 O 9 '13 70w

"He has taken an incident well suited to a mystery story. Unfortunately, the mystery is not long hidden."

+ — Nation 97:360 O 16 '13 230w

"Mr. Stevenson has produced an exciting story."

+ N Y Sun p3 O 4 '13 110w

"A clever and rapidly moving tale."

+ N Y Times 18:519 O 5 '13 600w

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT. Gloved hand. il $1.30 Dodd 13-5687

"Who murdered Worthington Vaughan, the multi-millionaire who has established in his household the priests of an Eastern religion and has become a convert to their faith? It must be one of the two or three people who had exclusive opportunity and sufficient motive, and Mr. Stevenson shows how possible it is for the burden of suspicion and guilt to be thrown upon a wholly innocent man." (Boston Transcript) "The author retains in this tale of mystery the central characters of his rather successful story, 'The Boule cabinet,'—Lester, the middle-aged lawyer, and Godfrey, the reporter, who was formerly a member of the New York detective bureau." (Nation) This story was published in the Popular magazine under the title of "The mind master."

"The interest is well sustained."

+ A L A Bkl 9:457 Je '13 *

"Without a doubt, Mr. Stevenson has mastered the making and the writing of the detective story. Yet with all its merits 'The gloved hand' has one conspicuous fault—its length. His title, moreover, is good, but in one way it is unfortunate, for it gives the reader an early clue to the solution of the mystery."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 2 '13 250w

+ Nation 96:361 Ap 10 '13 220w

"It is a well done piece of work of its kind."

+ N Y Sun p3 Mr 22 '13 150w

N Y Times 18:326 Je 1 '13 230w

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT, comp. Home book of verse, American and English, 1580-1912; with an appendix containing a few well-known poems in other languages. $$.50 Holt 12-24754

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"The very thin paper is an objection for library use."

+ A L A Bkl 9:204 Ja '13

"The home book of verse is, in sum, an achievement both new and useful, and, it is to be hoped, unique; for although one such compendium may be a valuable convenience, a second must be at best superfluous. Mr. Stevenson has probably succeeded as well as any one man could do." Brian Hooker.

+ Bookm 37:86 Mr. '13 1150w

"In a new edition of this book we trust that many of the biographical notes will be corrected and amended, for many are obviously wrong. All in all this is a book that every lover of poetry will want." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p25 D 4 '12 1300w

"A splendid collection of poetry and verse."

+ Cath World 96:532 Ja '13 630w

"Here is the lyric work of eleven generations of the English-speaking race. Thoughts, passions, deeds of uncounted myriads which have found embodiment in words of winged song are crowded between the covers of one book. A certain lack of proportion is a more serious fault of the book." C. L. Moore.

+ Dial 54:15 Ja 1 '13 1350w

Lit D 45:1149 D 14 '12 430w

"There is no other collection of poetry so comprehensive and so compact." Joyce Kilmer.

+ N Y Times 18:29 Ja 26 '13 1400w

Outlook 102:866 D 21 '12 150w

STEVENSON, GEORGE. Topham's folly. $1.30 Lane 13-3753

"The folly of which Mr. Topham was guilty was the folly of being wicked. He looked upon that which did not belong to him and desired it for himself. So, by crooked, underhand ways he deprived the rightful inheritors of their fortune and himself waxed prosperous and influential. . . . Its scene is rural England of perhaps half a century ago, and the story that it tells wanders on from one generation to the next, chronicling the lives of more or less commonplace people for the sake of a single figure of tragic interest who stands out prominently and holds the attention until, after her death, the lawyer's thievery usurps her place."—N Y Times

"This book is based on the solid and fair foundation of good portraiture. Every one of a large circle of county-town folk introduced is easily distinguishable and not easily forgotten."

+ Ath 1913,1:129 F 1 100w

"Lost opportunities combine to make 'Topham's folly' a most exasperating story. The author, overflowing with ideas, situations and problems, has made use of them lavishly and haphazardly. Mr. Stevenson's style, unfortunately, is not of the best and frequently it lapses from commonplaceness into downright ignorance of all the rules of English composition."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 29 '13 180w

"A remarkably well written book."

+ N Y Sun p3 F 15 '13 120w

"It is a better story, less conventional, and told with more distinction than are most of the modern English novels."

+ N Y Times 18:76 F 16 '13 180w

"Mr. Stevenson has not written a great tale, but he has come astonishingly near it in scattered passages."

+ Sat R 115:180 F 8 '13 900w

STEVENSON, JOHN. Boy in the country. il $1.40 Longmans

"We find recorded the doings and surroundings of the author when an eleven-year-old boy visiting a country village in old Gaelic-Irish Antrim. . . . He has tried to express the fullness of this boyhood time, and as a result the book is a combination of child sketches, Irish country sketches, nature sketches, human and moral sketches, told with the loving familiarity of retrospection."—Boston Transcript

"Town-dwellers by 'force majeure' will find this a refreshing book. There are many digressions, some of which fit but badly into the whole, and in consequence are tiresome. But one, a page-long paragraph on the 'appearance of words,' is picturesque enough to justify its existence."

+ Ath 1912,2:554 N 9 120w

"Because of the slight suspense maintained through the different phases of the boy's visit by the story interest the sketches are absorbingly self-sufficient."

+ Boston Transcript p27 D 18 '12 450w

"His English is of the first water, and the Scotch-Irish of his characters is delicious. Here is good reading."

+ Nation 96:158 F 13 '13 200w

STEWART, CHARLES DAVID. Finerty of the sand-house. 75c (3c) Century 13-7115

"This is the same Finerty whose adventures in 'The fugitive blacksmith' won their due meed of laughter. He is night keeper of the sand house and coal chutes in the Memphis railroad yards, and he loves to talk. To the firemen, brakemen, and others who gather at the sand house when they are off duty Finerty likes to expound his ideas about things in general and to relate the queer happenings in which he has had part." (N Y Times) The eight sketches that make up the contents are: Finerty holds the meeting for the candidate; The ferry tale; The irregular boarder; The oxen that ran away; Finerty on presidents; Finerty on woman's rights; The mystery of McGinnis; Finerty feels sad.

+ A L A Bkl 9:401 My '13

"He pictures droll characters and amusing episodes with a fine sense of humor which marks him as a most interesting fellow."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 15 '13 330w

"They are clever little stories to read aloud."

+ Lit D 46:900 Ap 19 '13 100w

"He is not so generously endowed with Irish humor as are some other characters who have helped to make the world more joyous. But every now and then it gurgles richly in his talk or, when you least expect it, there will be a flash of real Irish wit."

STEWART, CHARLES DAVID—Continued.

+ N Y Times 18:218 Ap 13 '13 250w

+ Outlook 103:779 Ap 5 '13 30w

"A blithely humorous little book with many a good laugh between its covers."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 380w

STEWART, ELIHU. Down the Mackenzie and up the Yukon in 1906. il *$1.50 Lane 13-35658

"Mr. Stewart's long journey on Canadian waters was made in 1906, when he started from Edmonton, the capital of Alberta and went as far north as Fort McPherson before he returned by the Yukon river to the Pacific and ended his travels at Vancouver. . . . The first part of the book is based on a report made by the author, as superintendent of forestry, to the Canadian government; and the second contains chapters on climate, soil, minerals, timber, and other subjects."—Ath

+ A L A Bk 10:28 S '13

"Mr. Stewart has no pretension to literary style, but his book gives a striking picture of the terrible loneliness of many of the places he visited. [The second part] seems to be in the nature of padding."

+ Ath 1913:1:95 Ja 25 250w

"So little has been written about sub-arctic Canada that E. Stewart's 'Down the Mackenzie and up the Yukon' is a welcome addition to travel literature, especially as it is written in a pleasingly direct style and is fully illustrated by reproductions of photographs of that unfamiliar land." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 21 '13 400w

"The account is plentifully illustrated with photographs, nearly all of them excellent, some of them very beautiful. A comprehensive map is attached to the last page, and serves to make clear in the reader's mind the geographical situations which his early training and subsequent neglect have left hazy. The book is worth much for its compactness and brevity of statement, for its clear divisions and specific sub-headings."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 320w

"A very readable book, and one that adds something of value to the scanty literature of this remote region." L. J. Burpee.

+ Dial 54:345 Ap 16 '13 370w

+ Nation 96:477 My 8 '13 300w

"The narrative has the directness and some of the dryness of a government report."

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 8 '13 120w

"A very good description of an important portion of the sub-arctic region of Canada."

+ N Y Times 18:258 Ap 27 '13 100w

"His book is in some ways crude, but it is sincere and interesting."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 320w

STIGAND, CHAUNCY HUGH. Hunting the elephant in Africa. il *$2.50 (2½c) Macmillan 13-21126

A book of hunting adventures to which Theodore Roosevelt contributes an introduction. "Capt. Stigand is not primarily a professional elephant hunter . . . but an army officer, explorer, and field naturalist, who hunts elephants or other big game occasionally, as the spirit and opportunity suggest. The elephant hardly more than justifies his place of honor in the title, since above half the chapters deal either with other forms of hunting or with the natives, the natural features of the country, and various other topics naturally suggested to a writer of Capt. Stigand's keen powers of observation. The closing chapter is a spirited attack upon the theory of protective coloration in insects." (Nation)

+ Ath 1913,2:sup397 O 11 30w

"A book worth reading by anyone desirous of increasing one's knowledge of the world and the people who inhabit it. One lays it down with pleasure gained from its direct and unaffected style, with a new knowledge of certain parts of Africa. Captain Stigand is interesting because he writes of what he knows."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 13 '13 700w

+ Nation 97:514 N 27 '13 180w

"A delightful and readable account."

+ N Y Sun p4 O 25 '13 190w

"Without the slightest hint of self-consciousness he relates conquests that are startling indeed, and his language simple and direct, makes the volumes eminently readable."

+ N Y Times 13:728 D 7 '13 310w

"The book is well worth while as a contribution to our knowledge of plant and animal life in Africa. The much-mooted question of 'protective coloration,' in particular is treated in a sensible and moderate fashion."

+ Outlook 105:764 D 6 '13 110w

STILES, GEORGE KEAN. Dragoman. il *$1.30 (1½c) Harper 13-2575

"An Englishman born in Egypt, who can look like a real 'native' when it pleases his purposes; a beautiful young American woman almost alone in the terrible country of the 'Blue Nile'; some villains, Egyptian and otherwise; a wonderful green emerald; a theft, and a Moslem prayer for vengeance on British rule—these are the persons and the elements that go to make up the adventurous story of 'The dragoman.'" (N Y Times) John Harrison Randall was leaning over the railing of his Nile houseboat when he first caught sight of Elizabeth Hilken on board the "Zarguppa." Her beauty was of that sort that "all men acknowledge and which no woman can be brought to understand," and without asking further questions John Harrison Randall adopts his native disguise and follows her down into the Blue Nile country, where he is so fortunate as to save her life and bring her back to civilization.

"The whole theme, setting and incident are audacious; and the highest praise that can be bestowed is that for the most part the author succeeds in carrying conviction, thanks to an obvious knowledge of native manners and customs." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:83 Mr '13 600w

"There is abundant action after the complication of characters is cleared and when the slowly developing romance appears real interest is aroused."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 12 '13 350w

"A piece of crude literary carpentry, but it contains a story." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:148 S 1 '13 250w

Ind 74:990 My 1 '13 130w

Nation 96:232 Mr 6 '13 330w

"The book shows talent, notwithstanding the jerkiness of the narrative."

+ N Y Sun p4 Ja 25 '13 120w

"The dragoman" is not well written, but it has 'action'; its story never halts from mysterious beginning to triumphant end. Its action is its principal recommendation."

+ N Y Times 18:40 Ja 26 '13 170w

+ Outlook 103:323 F 8 '13 50w

STIRLING, MRS. ANNA MARIA DIANA WILHELMINA (PICKERING), comp. Letter-bag of Lady Elizabeth Spencer-Stanhope; comp. from the Cannon hall papers. 1806-73. 2v *$10 Lane 13-16134

The pages of these volumes "give several new glimpses of the early events of Queen Victoria's reign. . . . The letters of which it is composed, with the brightly written connecting narrative by which they are held together, give a fascinating picture of social life during two generations." (Boston Transcript) The letters of Cuthbert Collingwood who was with Nelson at Trafalgar and the diaries of young John Stanhope who, traveling on the continent, was made a prisoner of Bonaparte, are features of the first volume. The second volume is chiefly concerned with the wooing of Coke of Norfolk's daughter by this same John Spencer-Stanhope, master of Cannon hall, and her letters to her husband. It is mainly of a domestic character. But it provides many amusing side-lights on Yorkshire life and character." (Ath)

"Mrs. Stirling's comments and explanations are at least as interesting as the letters of her forbears. Without them this correspondence would lack the coherence and intelligibility necessary for the general reader. As a rule Mrs. Stirling's discretion is great; she has, for instance, wisely watered down the story of the Holkham tenant-farmer and the olives; but in some cases, it strikes us, she might have used the blue pencil a little more freely, for there are passages of gossip in the letters of the Stanhope ladies which are valueless in themselves, and, whether true or not, may cause pain to the descendants of the personages referred to."

+ — Ath 1912,2:615 N 23 1300w

"The charm of her book consists in the alluring picture it gives of the intimate life of an aristocratic county family in the early half of the nineteenth century." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 14 '12 370w

"Readers of this work enjoy in effect a series of epistolary week-ends at the town and country houses of an English family of high social standing, and therefore well worth visiting; meeting any number of interesting, and in some cases really distinguished, people as the hours pass." J: K. Bangs.

+ Lit D 46:1131 My 17 '13 2100w

+ Nation 56:620 Je 19 '13 800w

"Upon the whole the book is a chronicle of small beer, but perhaps worth while for readers of abundant leisure."

+ — N Y Sun p8 My 10 '13 1800w

"To the lovers of innocent gossip, it will make an irresistible appeal; but there is more than mere gossip in these handsome volumes."

+ N Y Times 18:356 Je 15 '13 950w

+ — Outlook 104:120 My 17 '13 150w

"We maintain that the contents of Lady Elizabeth's letter-bag could easily have been compressed into a single volume and that everyone from the editor downwards would have gained by the compression. It is a pity, too, that the portrait illustrations are not of the quality that Mrs. Stirling's other books had led us to expect."

+ — Sat R 116:175 Ag 9 '13 1250w

+ Spec 110:sup685 Ap 26 '13 1650w

STOBART, JOHN CLARKE. Grandeur that was Rome: a survey of Roman culture and civilization. 11 $7.50 Lippincott

(Eng ed A13-499)

"Mr. Stobart makes plain his thought that it is not the fall of Rome which must be regarded as the cardinal point in Roman history. What our fathers called decay was, the author thinks, really progress. The change from republic to empire was necessary in the process of its evolution. The change, he believes, was an upward step in liberty, for all but a few hundreds of Roman nobles. Following this thought, in six brilliant chapters Mr. Stobart sketches the beginnings of Rome, including considerations of its constitution, religion, and law; its conquests and vast territorial growth; the last century of the republic; the birth and career of Augustus and Rome under the emperor; and, lastly, the stupendous growth of the empire with its system of education, its brilliant literature, its art, law, philosophy and religion. . . . The illustrations are numerous, far from conventional, and very beautiful." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 9:389 My '13

"Perhaps the best feature in his book is the independent attitude he maintains, never bound to swear by any master. When we get deeper into the book we find that Mr. Stobart's main object is a panegyric of Augustus as the greatest political genius that Rome, or perhaps the world, ever produced. We do not like the exaltation of Augustus at the expense of Julius Caesar, whom he judges harshly, and as we think, underrates."

+ — Ath 1913,1:86 Ja 25 1400w

"Like his previous volume there is not a dull line in Mr. Stobart's latest work. He had not, in some respects, so brilliant a theme as in his Greece, but he has invested it with his own peculiar charm; and he makes most prominent his theme of Rome in its grandeur, and not, like so many of his predecessors, Rome in its decline and fall."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 5 '13 600w

"This sumptuous volume, notwithstanding its tone of 'parti pris,' may possibly be placed at the head of the list as 'best general work' on ancient Rome." J. R. Smith.

+ Dial 54:499 Je 16 '13 1500w

"The bibliography is the only really inadequate piece of work in the volume. As a review of the broad features of Roman history . . . the work is satisfying."

+ — Lit D 46:1023 My 3 '13 370w

"Mr. Stobart is too violent in his prejudices, whether for or against, and too ungaurded in his language, to serve well the interests of the careful seeker after truth."

— Nation 97:264 S 18 '13 800w

"Mr. Stobart's book makes its appeal not so much to the publicist as to the general reader. Its excellent illustrations give it an attraction not to be despised, and its rapid survey of Roman history is remarkably free from inaccuracies which too often disfigure such books."

+ Sat R 115:619 My 17 '13 700w

"Mr. Stobart proceeds to paint a picture in his own way, which may fairly be said to be that of a very vigorous 'impressionist.' He selects what appeals to his own mind, devoting, for example, a third of the book to 'Augustus' and 'Augustan Rome,' and neglects the rest, so that the last four centuries of the Empire are packed into an 'Epilogue' of a dozen pages; but whatever appeals to him does so with a force and clearness that are reflected in his narrative."

+ — Spec 110:497 Mr 22 '13 750w

STOCK, RALPH. Confessions of a tenderfoot. 7 11 $2.75 Holt A13-1383

"The 'tenderfoot' of this narrative landed at Maple Creek in 1901, with a full Canadian outfit, including a six-shooter, combination pocket-knife, and a youthful idea of his own importance with which he had escaped from a City office. He learnt his first lesson when he offered a tip to a 'pard' who gave him a hand with his luggage, and his education continues to the end of the story, by which time he has travelled over a large part of the world, and settled down as a pineapple farmer in Queensland."—Ath

"The unfailing good humor and naiveté add to the interest of the narrative, which appeals to the same class of readers as Franck's 'Vagabond journey.'"

+ A L A Bkl 10:28 S '13 +

"He gives amusing accounts of his experiences in a variety of strange occupations. The book is attractive, written in a popular style, and illustrated with a large number of photographs."

+ Ath 1913,1:590 My 31 150w

"His story was well worth putting into book form."

+ Dial 55:26 Jl 1 '13 250w

STOCK, RALPH—Continued.

"It is a very interesting tale, happily too unvarnished to tempt any other young man to find his place in the world by the same method."

+ Nation 97:191 Ag 28 '13 420w

"It is a sincere and good-humored narrative, for the author never grows bitter against the buffets of fortune. The experiences are such as any young fellow starting out by himself may encounter; they are told simply and naturally, with no striving for effect, so that the book is extremely interesting and entertaining."

+ N Y Sun p3 My 31 '13 180w

"The volume is full of valuable information for any one who contemplates settling in the countries which Mr. Stock visited."

+ N Y Times 18:405 Jl 20 '13 800w

"Mr. Stock has published a patently unvarnished but an extremely readable and good-humored account of his wanderings."

+ Outlook 104:344 Je 14 '13 100w

+ Sat R 116:22 Jl 5 '13 130w

"The illustrations in this book, reproduced from his own work, are excellent both for their technical qualities and for the art which can reveal a characteristic beauty in a Canadian hay 'sweep' at work, as well as in the surf of the South Pacific sea."

+ Spec 110:1065 Je 21 '13 450w

"The business of cattle ranching and also of lumbering in the northern Pacific states is doubtless familiar to most American readers, but Mr. Stock had individual adventure enough to give his narrative a fresh interest, while he has an unusually good descriptive pen."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 29 '13 320w

STOCK, RALPH. Marama. il *$1.25 (2½c) Little 13-22515

A story of the Fiji islands. Marama Thurston, educated in an English school where she is a favorite and a leader, does not know until she returns to her home in the Pacific that she is half caste. In her reaction from the shock of the discovery she discards her European garb for native garments and tries to cast off her European culture as well. She dresses and lives like a native but at heart she is white, as Templeton, the only white man on the island and Miss Halliday, the shrewd English novelist who takes her back to England, both realize.

"A clever story."

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 1 '13 200w

"A lively and interesting story; its crudities leave an impression of sincerity, and he shows some understanding of native character and sympathy for it."

+ — N Y Sun p3 O 4 '13 150w

"There are many tense passages and dramatic situations and the background of the Fijian islands is wrought into the story with vivid realism. The author has erred artistically in not making the girl a few years older and giving her a wider experience."

+ — N Y Times 18:585 O 26 '13 300w

STOKES, RALPH S. G., and others. Text-book of Rand metallurgical practice. 2v il ea
*$6.50 Lippincott (Eng ed A13-1126)

v. 1. "This is the only book that may be considered as distinctly a Rand product, and it will be conceded that no district is better adapted to furnish the latest and best information concerning this process which was brought to its first successful issue and received its greatest commercial development in this great South African gold field." (Engin N) "Mr. Stokes writes of the general conditions on the Rand, geology, labor and economic relations; J. E. Thomas handles sorting and breaking the ore; G. O. Smart, stamp milling; W. R. Dowling, tube milling; J. E. Thomas, treatment of sands; H. A. White, slime treatment; E. H. Johnson, precipitation, clean-up and smelting; A. M. Johnston, assaying and testing plants; W. A. Caldecott, chemistry of the cyanide process." (Engin Rec)

v. 2. "The second volume of this work is by Mr. C. O. Schmitt, and consists of two sections—'The design and construction of reduction plant' and 'The transport of material.' . . . The first section deals in a systematic manner with the reduction plant used on the Rand, taking in order the breaking plant, stamp mill, tube mill, sand plant, slime plant, and precipitation plant and the author has covered this ground very thoroughly, giving much useful information. . . . In the second section of the book the plant for the transport of material is fully described, the methods of handling ore, dry sand, dry slime, pulp and sand residue being given."—Nature

"As a whole the book will be found not only useful but practically indispensable to the cyanide man." F. W. Traphagen.

+ Engin N 68:316 Ag 15 '12 2250w (Review of v 1)

"A most valuable book, both practical and scientific, comprehensive and accurate. The writing is in particularly good style and gives a clean, snap-shot picture of Rand metallurgical practice of to-day."

+ Engin Rec 66:648 D 7 '12 180w (Review of v 1)

"The book can be thoroughly recommended."

+ Nature 91:82 Mr 27 '13 450w (Review of v 2)

STRACHEY, RAY. Frances Willard: her life and work; with an introd. by Lady Henry Somerset. il *$1.50 Revell 13-13982

"The story of the childhood of the great reformer, her education and quest for 'culture,' her longing for independence of both thought and deed, her experiences as a teacher, her work for Northwestern university, her crusade against intemperance and her organization of temperance work, her work for woman's suffrage, for religion and for prohibition, her efforts to cleanse the body politic, her work for temperance in England is told with a brevity and cogency wholly admirable."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 10:110 N '13

"It is a worthy addition to American biographic literature."

+ Bib World 42:322 N '13 100w

"As sane as it is sympathetic this 'appreciation from an outsider' will take an authoritative place among the many books written upon the life and work of Frances Willard."

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 25 '13 370w

+ Lit D 46:1393 Je 21 '13 300w

"None can read this Memoir without a new reverence for its subject, and a resolution, however faltering, to 'follow the Gleam,' which led her so surely to the heights of character and of achievement."

+ — N Y Times 18:288 My 11 '13 900w

"On the whole, the balance is well and truly held, and if there is no attempt at a deep analysis of Miss Willard's self, neither is the development of her character ever lost in a maze of personal admiration."

+ Spec 110:sup128 Ja 25 '13 450w

STRAHAN, JAMES. Book of Job interpreted. *$3 Scribner 13-35741

"Scholars as well as general readers were in the mind of the author when he prepared his interpretation of the Book of Job. The Massoretic text with the aid of the ancient versions formed the basis of his exposition. The introduction presents a sane modern view of the Book of Job. The text of the British revised version is printed at the head of each chapter, with its full marginal notes. The author then gives us an interpretation which is ethical, archaeological, and in part exegetical. The literary beauty is pointed out, as the author unfolds the line of argument or the thought that runs through the words. The hortatory lessons are left to the good sense of the student."—Bib World

"The value of the work is in its appreciative sympathy with Job's state of mind and its clear and thoughtful exposition of the various attitudes toward suffering represented in this great masterpiece of literature. The volume is well worth a place in the great library of interpretation that has grown up around the Book of Job."

+ + Am J Theol 17:467 J1 '13 120w

"Treats the poem from a sane modern standpoint, primarily for the general reader."

+ A L A Bkl 10:64 O '13

"Mr. Strahan's exposition will be warmly welcomed by many. The style is lucid and attractive, the scholarship praiseworthy, and the author's sympathy with his subject of indubitable quality. Among the drawbacks of a more or less serious kind in the volume is a tendency noticeable here and there to overstrain points of evidence."

+ — Ath 1913,1:373 Ap 5 450w

"The best feature of the book is its appeal to the popular reader. Scholars will find little to claim their attention."

+ Bib World 42:63 J1 '13 140w

"The introduction to this commentary is a masterpiece in conciseness and in comprehensiveness, and the commentary, both in arrangement and in matter, is most admirable."

+ + Boston Transcript p4 My 1 '13 470w

"Written in popular style, its interpretations are judicious, and the leading religious ideas of the book are set forth clearly and sympathetically. The English reader can hardly find a better guide than Strahan to the understanding of the greatest of the old Hebrew poetical works."

+ + Nation 97:148 Ag 14 '13 100w

"Mr. Strahan's introduction and comment on the text are quite admirable. We are not wholly convinced, however, by all the arguments for a late date for this book."

+ — Sat R 116:336 S 13 '13 1000w

"This is a book for the plain man, and he cannot but appreciate it."

+ Spec 111:658 O 25 '13 400w

STRAUS, OSCAR SOLOMON. American spirit. 11 *$2 (3c) Century 13-9159

The book is made up of a collection of "essays and speeches written and delivered by Mr. Straus on various occasions of the last decade: the subjects are different aspects of our commerce, diplomacy, tolerance—all elements of the less tangible thing called the spirit of the United States. . . . With a fortunate regard for the link between history and the present and between the present and the future, Mr. Straus has enlightened such subjects as the growth of our foreign commerce, the relations between commerce and labor the humanitarian aspect of diplomacy as shown within and outside the Monroe doctrine, the problem of naturalized citizenship and the development of the religious policy of the country."—Boston Transcript

"While they are mostly brief and contain little that is new, they are stimulating and full of interest as the expressions of an authority on diplomacy and a keenly interested student of American life and institutions."

+ A L A Bkl 9:447 Je '13

"Whether the reader of this book is able or not to agree entirely with its author's plan of realizing social justice in our national life, or with his conclusions as to our international relations, he cannot fail to be instructed and stimulated by the cogent thought and crisp expression of its distinguished and scholarly author." W. I. Hull.

+ — Ann Am Acad 48:289 J1 '13 300w

"The essays contain valuable and timely discussions from an unbiased and well-informed point of view: the book is distinctly a 'vital message' to anyone desirous of learning about the United States. Written, as they were originally, with no reference to each other, the essays show a certain amount of repetition and requoteing, but aside from this they are singularly economical and well adapted to the purpose of the book as a whole."

+ — Boston Transcript p12 My 5 '13 600w

"One can read these essays with pleasure and without exasperation whether or not he agrees with all or any of the opinions and historical statements set forth by the author in so amiable a way."

+ — Chaut 71:116 J1 5 '13 330w

"Will be welcomed by those who have at heart the best expression of our national hopes and fears, problems and ideals."

+ Dial 55:27 J1 1 '13 220w

"The book is interesting and inspiring, and has in it much information not elsewhere available to the average student."

+ J Pol Econ 21:880 N '13 120w

+ Lit D 47:690 O 18 '13 280w

"Mr. Straus has made a very interesting volume of these collected papers, all the more so that each of them bears the mark of the time which originally called it forth."

+ N Y Times 18:261 My 4 '13 950w

"The volume would be worth reading if for nothing else than the initial chapter on 'The American spirit.' The book inexcusably lacks an index."

+ — Outlook 104:121 My 17 '13 550w

R of Rs 48:631 N '13 50w

"Taken as a whole the book is well worth reading, though its value rests not on originality but on its serviceable and humane philosophy." W. E. Weyl.

+ — Survey 30:374 Je 14 '13 270w

STRAYER, GEORGE DRAYTON, and THORNDIKE, EDWARD LEE. Educational administration: quantitative studies. 11 *$2 Macmillan 13-6712

"It is the purpose of this book to enable students of education to learn some of the methods and results of recent scientific studies of school administration. . . . The selections quoted or summarized . . . are chosen from the work that has been done at Teachers college, Columbia university in the application of quantitative methods to administrative problems." (Preface) The five parts into which the work is divided treat of; Studies of the students; Studies of the teaching staff; Studies of the organization of schools and courses of study; Means of measuring educational products; School finance. Many statistical tables are presented thruout the volume.

"The volume has been prepared specially for students, as a convenient source book, but it will be equally valuable to superintendents and supervisors making original studies for the improvement of their schools."

+ A L A Bkl 9:447 Je '13

"A remarkably thorough study. Although the actual conclusions drawn by the authors will not apply in England owing to the different conditions, the book should suggest similar lines of research."

+ Ath 1913,1:670 Je 21 50w

Chaut 71:117 J1 5 '13 150w

"If future investigators will study other questions involved in the administration of schools as accurately and as impartially as the authors of this volume, we shall, in a few years, be able to form convictions rather than opinions." F. A. Fitzpatrick.

+ Educ R 46:395 N '13 500w

Reviewed by J. F. Bobbitt.

+ El School T 14:93 O '13 530w

+ Ind 75:340 Ag 7 '13 130w

"A useful textbook."

+ N Y Times 18:275 My 4 '13 80w

R of Rs 47:764 Je '13 30w

STREET, JULIAN LEONARD. Goldfish. 11 *70c Lane 12-23926

"It is a pretty little story about a goldfish and a small boy and an able and active cat. Perhaps the cat had as much to do with it as the goldfish had, though the fish had a speaking part in the drama, and the cat was merely among those present, but between them the small boy got what he wanted for Christmas, which was a big brother 'with lots and lots of teeth.' There are several unusually good page pictures in color by Eugenie Wireman."—N Y Times

STREET, JULIAN LEONARD—Continued.

"A deliciously amusing little story precisely the right length to read before bedtime."
Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:457 D '12 100w

+ N Y Times 17:693 N 24 '12 130w

STREET, JULIAN LEONARD. Welcome to our city. Il *$1 Lane 13-11528

"This is a collection of four papers, previously published and all written in the same vein of satiric humor. The author assumes that he is playing host to a stranger in New York and 'shows him the sights,' at the same time keeping up a running commentary which reveals an appreciation and lively contempt for the foibles and gullibility of the New York spender. It is the gay life of New York that the stranger sees, and the system by which he is separated from his money, first, last and all the time."—Lit D

"All is shown up with fervor, without preaching, but with an implied lesson which all who visit Manhattan might well take to heart."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 18 '13 370w

"The illustrations are apropos, and the pages of the little book are alive with a sparkling and witty spirit. The reader will get many a laugh from this little volume; he will also get other things worth while if his mind is alert."

+ Lit D 47:486 S 20 '13 270w

+ N Y Sun p4 My 31 '13 70w

"The stories are exceptionally well told and amusing and, in addition to entertaining readers who have first hand knowledge of the things and conditions described, will no doubt appeal to many others who hope to visit the metropolis and see for themselves."

+ N Y Sun p12 Je 14 '13 70w

"This first paper is by far the best of the four, and the one of them having enough spontaneity to make it well worth preserving in book form."

+ N Y Times 18:416 J1 27 '13 280w

STREIGHTOFF, FRANK HATCH. Distribution of incomes in the United States. (Columbia
univ. studies in history, economics, and public law, v. 52, no. 2) *$2 Longmans
13-2340

"This essay attempts a comprehensive summary and critical analysis of the statistical material bearing on the subject of its title. A small amount of space is given to introductory general considerations. The sources of information are next reviewed. Previous treatment of the same subject, especially by Spahr and Nearing, is discussed and criticised. A chapter on The distribution of wages occupies one third of the available space. About one fifth as much is given to Incomes from property. The essay concludes with two suggestions to the Census bureau. A useful bibliography is appended."—Am Econ R

"More detailed statistical and theoretical analysis and a bolder forcing of conclusions from the data would be justified, and, indeed, will not cease to be necessary after more and better material is available. The reviewer feels so strongly that we need a quantitative theory of economic distribution and that the interest of such an essay as this is chiefly as a step towards such a development, that he may appear not to be duly appreciative of what has been done. The book should, doubtless, be appraised from a less exacting viewpoint. As a critical compilation of income statistics it is unquestionably an eminently valuable piece of work." G. P. Watkins.

+ Am Econ R 3:440 Je '13 650w

"Chapter six on the Distribution of wages is a splendid piece of statistical work; so much cannot be said for chapter seven on Incomes from property. Despite the author's apology for using such inconsequential data, he shoots far beyond the mark in his attempted conclusions. The statistical work of the book, with a few exceptions, is able. Tables are well constructed, and inferences are just."

+ — Ann Am Acad 46:200 Mr '13 230w
Ath 1913,1:357 Mr 29 150w

"The writer has performed a useful piece of work clearly and thoroughly."

+ Cath World 97:548 J1 '13 230w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. By the open sea; auth. tr. by Ellie Schleussner. *$1.25
Huebsch (Eng ed 13-17630)

"For the most part the novel is not about the sea nor about the heroine, Miss Marie, around whose character the author weaves a very unlovely web of insinuations. It is about August Strindberg, his whims, and his warped ambitions, his distorted views at their most twisted and vehement stage. Axel Borg is Strindberg."—N Y Times

"This is not a pretty story; it is not great, though the materials of greatness are present. The main impression which it makes is one of huge waste of precious matter."

+ Nat 97:409 O 30 '13 280w

"The book is at best a tangle. As showing the amateur, the commonplace, ineffectual side of Strindberg, it is valuable. As a novel it is unsatisfactory. Its confusion arises out of the confusion in the writer's own mind. It is only in the closing chapters, which quite break away from the former interest which has endeavored to hold the book together, that there is a flash of that strange imaginative power, coupled with a pitiless faithfulness to things as he viewed them, that makes up the best of Strindberg's work."

+ N Y Times 18:496 S 28 '13 950w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Creditors. Pariah; tr.
from the Swedish, with introd. by Edwin Björkman. Authorized ed *75c (3½c) Scribner 12-25595

In "Creditors," the first of these two plays, there are three characters—a woman and two men, one of them her present husband, one the husband she has but lately divorced. That in love women take all and give nothing is the play's theme. The second play pictures a meeting between two criminals which develops into a duel between intellect and cunning—a favorite motif with Strindberg.

"The student of life must ever find the entertainment satisfactory when a big man like Strindberg gives the world what is coming to it,—and more. Even though the beating may seem undeserved, it is impossible to withhold admiration for the honesty and courage behind the blows. Strindberg is big, but not big enough. He is courageous, but singularly fearful about the pain in the world. Without aiming at being philosophical, I should call him an extreme Hedonist." T: P. Beyer.

+ Dial 54:52 Ja 16 '13 500w

"The impression becomes certain, as more and more of his plays are brought out in English, that Strindberg, though reputed in his own land to be a creator of great and subtle emotions, never truly understood of what great, genuine, downright feeling consists. His ability to plan dramatic situations and to turn them inside out by the play of ingenious reasoning and a very alert fancy we have never questioned. But these qualities, which should remain auxiliary, are not in themselves sufficient to make characters appear human. Strindberg's characters are like Dr. Johnson's women—wiggle waggle!"

+ Nation 96:88 Ja 23 '13 650w

"Each in one act, they are of his most tense and intense dramatic style. Both plays, like all of his realistic division, are masterful portrayals of atypical cases." E: Goodman.

+ N Y Times 17:710 D 1 '12 700w

"The only conclusions to be drawn from these plays wherein criminals, wantons, weaklings, meet is that too unrelieved a view of the degradation of life is as also as the most evasive idealism. Life has at least moments of relief from horror."

— No Am 197:286 F '13 250w

Outlook 103:46 Ja 4 '13 270w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. In midsummer days, and other tales; tr. by Ellie Schleussner. *$1.25 McBride, Nast & co. 13-10116

"Here are fairy tales and fables and slight thumb-box affairs of things and people. Here is the lighter humor which Strindberg was supposed to be without. . . . Some of the little sketches are very sad and some of them are very vague, but all are as the author has said at the close of one of them, very edifying stories."—N Y Times

"A series of short stories, which, in spite of certain qualities obviously derived from introspection, have a childish simplicity and pleasantly recall Hans Andersen."

+ Ath 1913:1:642 Je 14 80w

"They show Strindberg, not as a ruthless lunatic let loose among the devices of realism, as some would believe, but as an artist who could deal in pastels and delicate etchings, as well as in lurid sunsets and conflagrations."

+ N Y Times 18:629 N 16 '13 130w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. The inferno; tr. by Claud Field. *$1.25 (2½c) Putnam A13-926

The third of Strindberg's quasi-autobiographical works, "The confession of a fool," and "Legends" being the other two. It is a human document of pathological interest. It reveals a mind as surely afflicted with paranoia as Balzac's Balthazar in "The quest of the absolute." The period covered is that in which Strindberg plunged into scientific speculations and experimentation—a period of impaired health that gave rise to a morbid, abnormal mental state.

"The book offers many striking and characteristic scenes, handled in a manner no less characteristic. These depend almost entirely on visual elements, and lack almost entirely those fugitive ardours which give charm to some of the pages of 'Legends.' The translation in several places seems unnecessarily 'sear'd and tedious,' and, besides, lapses into odd words such as 'awoken' and 'an Augustine nun.'"

+ — Ath 1912:2:779 D 28 850w

Nation 96:419 Ap 24 '13 400w

"His insane suspicions, his morbid superstitions, detailed with pitiful minuteness and pitiable egotism, furnish neither a fit subject for art nor a fair picture of life. Strindberg's mind, exposed like the flayed body of Marsyas to public view, is not a pleasant nor a profitable thing to gaze upon."

— Outlook 104:37 My 3 '13 70w

Sat R 115:747 Je 14 '13 10w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Lucky Pehr; tr. from Swedish by Velma Swanston Howard. il *$1.50 (7c) Stewart & Kidd 13-1303

This five act drama is an allegory representing the youth, brought up in total ignorance of life, who is sent out into the world to learn the vanity of riches and the hollowness of power. He learns that life is not what he dreamed it. "It is a desert, but a desert that has its flowers; it is a stormy sea, but one that has its ports by verdant isles."

"The play is a most artistic blending of humor, grotesqueness, mysticism and philosophy, appealing to all ages and at the same time entertaining and edifying."

+ Chaut 70:355 My '13 120w

"Lucky Pehr" is not unpleasant reading, but it contains no large or vital truth—except perhaps the incidental one that happiness comes from striving rather than wishing." T: P. Beyer.

+ — Dial 54:54 Ja 16 '13 80w

"This mad piece of symbolism is a challenge to the translator, yet Mrs. Velma Swanston Howard has succeeded fairly well except with the verse."

+ — Ind 74:767 Ap 3 '13 40w

"The plan of the play was such as to bring out some of Strindberg's best talents, especially his capacity for highly fanciful details."

+ Nation 96:450 My 1 '13 230w

"'Lucky Pehr' clothes cynicism in real entertainment instead of in gloom. And it has its surprises. Can this be August Strindberg, who ends his drama so sweetly on the note of the woman-soul, leading upward and on?"

+ N Y Times 18:31 Ja 26 '13 600w

Outlook 103:232 Ja 25 '13 180w

"It is easy to understand the popularity of the play. In narration it is animated and its total revelation is pleasant and heartening. It has the brisk vitality of 'Peer Gynt,' and resembles it in other ways, though it teaches the reverse of Peer's egotism. Moreover, the author's treatment is such as to make the moral simple effective, without a trace of the saccharine or any suggestion of sermonizing."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 650w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Married; auth. tr. by Ellie Schleussner. *$1.40 (1½c) Luce, J. W. A13-1623

The volume contains "nineteen short stories, supplemented by the well-known one-act tragedy, 'Creditors.' They were originally issued in two parts under a Swedish title for which the better English equivalent is the word 'Marriage,' and they are the product of a period of several years of Strindberg's literary activities. They attempt to deal with a certain number of varying cases of marital experience, and they are not at all reticent about its more intimate phases."—Boston Transcript

"His stories are shrewd, vigorous, brilliant and undeniably veracious, but they are not the whole of truth, the whole of sex, or the whole of life. He apparently claims that they are and that we should look upon the world through his own narrow peephole. As a whole the translation is effective, although once in a while it strikes the sensitive eye with an obtrusive example of queer English." E. F. E.

— + Boston Transcript p20 J1 9 '13 1000w

"With but few exceptions, the stories are most unpleasant and, worse, are anything but convincing, remote possibilities being singled out to do service for the typical. Yet throughout the volume the reader will be struck with Strindberg's keen observation and his instinct for the picturesque. All the elements making for stories of great charm and power are present, save a wholesome outlook."

— + Nation 97:60 J1 17 '13 150w

"Just a little more, and this might have been a fine, even a great book—a clarion cry and not a hysterical scream. For there is power in it, a hatred of shams and hypocrisies that, guided by a stronger larger spirit, might have made it a noteworthy contribution to modern literature. But 'the little less, and what worlds away!'" L. M. F.

— + N Y Times 18:365 Je 15 '13 480w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Plays: Comrades; Facing death; Pariah; Easter; tr. by Edith and Warner Oland. *$1.50 (4c) Luce, J. W. 13-13543

"Comrades," a satirical four-act play, written in Strindberg's most cynical vein; Facing death and Pariah, two one-act plays alike bitter in tone, and Easter, the symbolical little drama of hope, one of the few of its kind written by the Swedish dramatist, make up the contents of this volume.

Ath 1913:2:188 Ag 23 300w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

STRINDBERG, AUGUST—Continued.

"'Comrades' and 'Facing death' are not significant works, both being written in the author's most cynical style."

— Nation 96:239 Mr 6 '13 350w

"A glowing foreword by the translators strikes rather too high a key in praise; the reader feels a distinct fall of mood as he proceeds from the preface to the plays. For in three of them at least it is a weak and snarling world into which he is introduced, a place of general hatred and incompetence, the world of a man whose vision is clouded by a spiritual cataract. There is a lyric quality to 'Easter,' and it is the only one which you are glad to have read for its own sake, and not simply because of the art in conveying personality, or the sinister skill of revealing hidden corruption that makes the force of the others." H. H.

+ — N Y Times 18:257 Ap 27 '13 600w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Plays: Third series; 12 tr. by Edwin Björkman. *$1.50 (3c) Scribner 13-21327

"The collection of plays contained in this volume is unusually representative, giving what might be called a cross-section of Strindberg's development as a dramatist from his naturalistic revolt in the middle eighties, to his final arrival at resigned mysticism and Swedenborgian symbolism." (Introduction) The six plays included in the volume are: Swanwhite; Simoon; Debit and credit; Advent; The thunderstorm; After the fire.

Ath 1913,2:603 N 22 520w

"Mr. Björkman has tried faithfully to keep to the rhythm and swing of the original. This is a dangerous thing to do, and while he should be praised for a fair measure of success it cannot be denied that the obscurity of some passages in the original has grown a little more obscure through his Englishing of them." J. Marchand.

+ — Bookm 38:435 D '13 500w

"There is more than one opportunity offered in this latest series of translations to flash the facets of a genius too long considered one-sided. One hardly recognizes 'the mad Swede' in the pretty fairy spectacle 'Swanwhite.'"

+ N Y Times 18:629 N 16 '13 920w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Red room; auth. tr. 12 by Ellie Schleussner. *$1.25 Putnam 13-22849

Another autobiographical novel. "The hero, Arvid Falk, a journalist, of course, Strindberg, here represented as an idealist who undergoes a series of crushing disillusion. Every phase of Swedish society is satirized, the author finding embodiments of the Seven Deadly Sins. Respectability is proved to be a sham under which the banker, the publisher, the clergy, carry on their corrupt practices. The contrast with this picture of wretched time-serving is furnished by the occupants of the Red room of a restaurant, where gather artists of all sorts struggling by their wits to eke out an existence. That most of them fail argues not their incompetence, but the brutality of the world." (Nation)

"Strindberg has done no more masterly character-drawing than in the figures of the nine or ten men who use the Red room. The translation is well done, and deserves a word of special praise for the descriptions of nature, of days and seasons, which in this book are perhaps, even for Strindberg, unusually delicate, vivid, and well-determined."

+ Ath 1913,2:249 S 13 550w

"What it describes is so intensely local that it cannot possibly seem even humanly interesting elsewhere. And yet through it all walk some human beings pictured with all Strindberg's pitiless power, very much alive amid surroundings that make them what they are. But somehow,—this is where Strindberg disappoints us again, his people are, after all, not alive enough to make us want to know their surroundings better." J. Marchand.

— + Bookm 38:435 D '13 380w

"Some of the sketches have undeniable keenness, for Strindberg always saw concretely."

+ Nation 97:486 N 20 '13 230w

"'Red room' has been called satire, and excellent satire at that. It isn't. It is the alleviation, by way of print, of Strindberg's personal grudges against the institutions and the individuals who embittered his early life, quite without that larger humorous thrust which lifts genuine satire above the level of little personalities. The redeeming feature of the book is the Red room coterie."

— + N Y Times 18:629 N 16 '13 850w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Son of a servant; tr. by Claud Field; with an introd. by H: Vacher-Burch. 11 *$1.25 (2½c) Putnam 13-11633

An intimate and revealing piece of autobiography. A better understanding of Strindberg's contradictory nature will result from a reading of this story of his childhood and boyhood. The pessimism of his later years and the distorted view of human nature evidenced in all his work had their foundation in these early years in which hunger and fear were his first recognized sensations.

Reviewed by J. Marchand.

— + Bookm 38:436 D '13 700w

"The story of Strindberg's boyhood is here presented in a none too adequate translation." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Je 18 '13 1200w
Nation 97:59 Jl 17 '13 550w

"For the sympathetic and impartial reader it will explain many of his unattractive and even repellent qualities."

+ Outlook 105:98 S 13 '13 380w

+ R of Rs 48:117 Jl '13 600w

Sat R 115:747 Je 14 '13 10w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Zones of the spirit; 7 with an introd. by Arthur Babilotte; tr. by Claud Field. *$1.25 (2c) Putnam 13-9556

This is a translation of Strindberg's last work, "Das blau buch," written after his return to the Christian faith which followed his years of agnosticism. It is called in the sub-title "a book of thoughts," and is made up of short sketches, a page or more in length, on many phases of life, religion and morality. While the prevailing pessimism of the author's life was evidently not wholly eradicated, it was much modified, and the general tone of this book is hopeful.

Ath 1913,1:355 Mr 29 110w

"As a curiosity of literature, Strindberg as a whole and the Strindberg revealed in this volume cannot be overlooked, but to make him the subject of critical panegyric is futile." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '13 450w

Nation 97:59 Jl 17 '13 230w

"Altogether it is rather a study of the mind of August Strindberg in relation to his earlier autobiographical novels, 'The inferno' and 'The son of a servant,' than on its own merits that the 'Zones of the spirit' will be read."

+ — N Y Times 18:413 Jl 27 '13 250w

"Always unconventional, often impetuous, occasionally hasty and extreme, 'The blue book' is well worth this translation."

+ — Outlook 104:634 Jl 19 '13 150w

Sat R 115:747 Je 14 '13 10w

STRINGER, ARTHUR JOHN ARBUTHNOTT. 2 The shadow. *$1.25 (2c) Century 13-1899

Unlike the ordinary detective story this tale has no complications nor mysteries. It is a simple tale following out a single theme. It is the story of a man-hunt, with Never-fall Blake on the track of Connie Binhart, confidence man and crook. Sent out on a false clue in order that he may be railroaded out of the service, Blake tracks Binhart over the world. He finds himself on the right trail in Chicago, follows his man to the west, to the Far East, to South America, comes up with him twice to lose him again. He follows him to New York to learn there that his place in the department has been filled. He is a back-number but the finding of Binhart has become the obsession of his life. Unofficially he still tracks him down. Even as an old man, a seller of glue, known as "Batty" Blake the obsession still holds him, and at last, tho the Binhart case has been long forgotten in the police world, he wins. Never-fail Blake gets his man.

"Not a very agreeable story, but engrossing and ingenious."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:300 Mr '13

"One of those striking stories in which the psychology is as penetrating and accurate as the incident is exciting and varied."

+ Atlan 112:696 N '13 180w

"The shadow" is a man's book. We read to the end with no yawn of boredom, and yet with the feeling that within a near future it will be difficult to remember what we have read."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '13 180w

+ — Nation 96:129 F 6 '13 250w

"The shadow" is excellent reading, both as an able detective story and a 'human document'; it proved Mr. Stringer an able manipulator both of a 'crime yarn' and a subjective situation."

+ N Y Times 18:51 F 2 '13 250w

Outlook 103:323 F 8 '13 70w

"It is an entertaining story but not its author's best."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 17 '13 280w

STRONG, REV. JOSIAH. Our world; the new world-life. $1 (1½c) Doubleday 13-10998

This is the first of a series of four volumes each of which is to treat of "our world" from a new point of view. Although in this volume "Dr. Strong's theme is world-wide and his discussion is of the progress, the problems, and the ideals of the whole world, it is all of peculiar and immediate application to our own country. In his opinion humanity has been advancing so rapidly on its spiritual side during the last generation or two, and has been so occupied with its wonderful material development, that it has failed to harmonize the two phases of its growth. Consequently there is maladjustment in its affairs, and it is this maladjustment that is responsible for the discords and the sinister promises of modern life. The emergence of the altruistic spirit into social life and the developments of modern knowledge demand, he says, a new world-ideal." (N Y Times)

+ A L A Bkl 10:110 N '13 ✕

"The book is no mere tract, but an honest and manly reckoning with the world as it is, with all the possibilities that science is opening out to humanity." Wallace Rice.

+ Dial 55:115 Ag 16 '13 330w

"No man can read the book without seeing the new world-movement going on before his very eyes. Print, paper, binding are good; and a complete index enables one to find any topic easily."

+ Lit D 47:182 Ag 2 '13 650w

N Y Sun p14 Je 14 '13 100w

"A very readable and stimulating survey of modern conditions."

+ N Y Times 18:402 Jl 20 '13 550w

"Dr. Strong deals with his subject as a statesman as well as a prophet, and has added a most important supplement to the library of recent volumes in our social problems and perils."

+ Outlook 104:1009 Ag 30 '13 220w

R of Rs 48:246 Ag '13 140w

STRONG, ROWLAND. Sensations of Paris. II $2.50 (4½c) McBride, Nast & Co. (Eng ed A12-1702)

The spirit of the boulevard, The panorama and colour of Paris, The movement of Paris, The shadows of Paris, A Parisian holiday-making, The voice of Paris—these are some of the phases of life in his chosen city dwelt on by the author. "He notes meticulously the thousand details that go to make up her atmosphere: the lucent colours, the all-pervasive smell of cooking . . . the countless noises—from the note of the nightingale in convent gardens to the vicious hooting of tramcars, and the vibrating quality of the Parisian voice, that makes London seem silent by comparison." (Ath)

"Finely written and discriminating study. It is hardly too much to say that he has achieved the difficult task of showing us a Paris that is almost new."

+ Ath 1912,2:337 S 28 350w

"Rowland Strong succeeds in interesting any one already prejudiced in favor of the panorama of boulevards and alleys."

+ Ind 73:1431 D 19 '12 50w

"Mr. Strong writes smoothly and vigorously, and often with a certain eloquence."

+ N Y Times 18:378 Je 29 '13 270w

"Mr. Rowland Strong knows his Paris as thoroughly as a foreign journalist who has spent many years of his life there and has known its most eminent men personally can be expected to do."

+ Sat R 115:34 Ja 18 '13 350w

STUDIES in the history of religions; ed. by D: Gordon Lyon and G: Foot Moore. $2.50 (1½c) Macmillan 12-25968

The papers making up the contents of this volume are contributed by the pupils, colleagues and friends of Professor Crawford Howell Toy, founder of the Harvard club for the study of the history of religions, and the volume is published in his honor. Some of the papers are: English witchcraft and James the First, by G: L. Kittredge; Buddhist and Christian parallels, by J. Estlin Carpenter; The liver as the seat of the soul, by Morris Jastrow, jr.; The Sikh religion, by Maurice Bloomfield Yahweh before Moses, by G: Aaron Barton. Karl Budde of Marburg university contributes a paper in German on Der schluss des buches Hosea.

"Contains some sixteen valuable and interesting essays by some of the foremost American scholars in Oriental and other departments of the history of religion."

+ Am Hist R 18:411 Ja '13 150w

"The writers of the papers in this memorial volume are mostly scholars of reputation; and their work for the most part is worthy of them, and of our honored friend. Several of these papers are of unusual merit." C. A. Briggs.

+ Am J Theol 17:259 Ap '13 700w

"Will have wide circulation and do good service in the cause for which it stands."

+ Bib World 42:62 Jl '13 250w

"Brilliant studies."

+ Ind 74:1447 Je 26 '13 330w

+ Nation 95:524 D 5 '12 200w

"With the exception of this one translation the essays are in the main profound studies in religious history, with abundant notes and references. The general style is bright and readable and the material is so arranged that the average reader will not fail to perceive the logical sequence of the deductions. As a whole it is a worthy and noble gift alone not to the mind who inspired it but to the general public as well."

+ R of Rs 47:506 Ap '13 500w

STUDLEY, J. T. Journal of a sporting nomad. II $3.50 Lane 12-22052

The author's sporting career began in Newfoundland with six close-range shots at a

STUDLEY, J. T.—Continued.

caribou, which walked calmly off unscathed when the fusillade was over. Seven chapters are given to Africa, where he went in 1894 as private secretary to Sir Claude Macdonald, and came into contact with about all the varieties of big game for which that land is famed. In 1896 he accepted an invitation to accompany Sir Martin Conway to Spitzbergen, where whale, seal, and reindeer were the chief objects of interest; the voyage was varied by a visit to the ill-fated Andrée and his balloon, at Danes Ghat, where he spent two months. Several pages are given to a detailed account of the balloonist's outfit and operations. Visits to the Florida Tarpon region, different parts of Canada, and Alaska are also described."—Nation

"A pleasantly written book of sport and travel."

+ Ath 1912,1:651 Je 8 270w

"The author can draw a heavier percentage of conclusion from given premises than the trained naturalist would sanction, but in his various wanderings he has picked up much that is interesting, nevertheless."

+ — Nation 96:36 Ja 9 '13 380w

"His manner of writing is simple and straitforward, and his descriptions are graphic."

+ Outlook 102:694 N 23 '12 50w

SULLIVAN, MARY. Court masques of James I; their influence on Shakespeare and the public theatres. $2.50 Putnam 13-11712

The author's "demonstration consists in a carefully documented exposition of the peculiar importance of the court masques in the international politics of the days of Elizabeth and the Stuarts and of rather an inadequate discussion of the extent to which Shakespeare, Ben Jonson and other playwrights, poets or actors, were called upon to assist the personages of the court in presenting the masques."—Springfield Republican

+ Boston Transcript p18 J1 23 '13 550w

"Possibly the book is too sternly academic, and presupposes too much knowledge of masques to make it attractive to the general reader; but the student of drama will appreciate very warmly this contribution to dramatic criticism."

+ Dial 55:87 Ag 1 '13 400w

"Miss Sullivan's study is timely and authoritative."

+ Ind 75:48 J1 3 '13 200w

"There is a great deal of interesting matter in this book."

+ — Nation 96:649 Je 26 '13 1250w

"Miss Sullivan is to be congratulated upon the patience and scholarship which she has shown in rescuing from oblivion the wealth of data from which this new and fuller view of Shakespeare is derived."

+ N Y Times 18:269 My 4 '13 1150w

+ — Springfield Republican p5 My 22 '13 1350w

SULLIVAN, THOMAS RUSSELL. Boston, new and old. il $7.50 Houghton 12-27607

To accompany the pictures by Lester Hornby of Boston's buildings, squares, and streets, Mr. Sullivan "explains brightly and briefly the changes which have come over the city with the years, together with the customs which have remained the same." (Nation) The title may, however, prove misleading for it is a comparatively modern Boston that the author describes thruout. "Of the Boston before the civil war and in the horse car days he can have no memories. Mr. Hornby has drawn daintily, a Boston of fairyland, picturesque bits and atmospheric effects, with just enough of famous buildings to give his pictures a place and a name. He has caught the poetic moods of the Boston of to-day." (N Y Sun)

"Delightful and mellow book." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:571 Ja '13 800w

"'Boston new and old' is a book to treasure not merely because of its beauty or because it is a Riverside press limited edition. Unlike many of its kind, it is for use as well as for adornment, and in Mr. Sullivan's text and Mr. Hornby's pictures it possesses a present interest and a lasting value." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p24 D 4 '12 920w

"To Bostonians, Mr. Hornby's present work should bring delight, for, without in any way disguising his subject, he has seized upon the things which residents of Boston like to think make it different from the rest of the world."

+ Nation 95:535 D 5 '12 300w

"It is a book for the modern Bostonian and for strangers alone: they will feel the fascination without the regrets."

+ N Y Sun p 9 N 30 '12 180w

+ N Y Sun p 24 N 30 '12 1150w

"Will greatly entertain Bostonians and ex-Bostonians, and others who, for various reasons, are interested in the Bay state metropolis."

+ N Y Times 17:797 D 29 '12 90w

"Yet though the text, despite its charm, is a little disappointing, the book as a whole, with its delightful illustrations, is one to be treasured."

+ — Springfield Republican p 5 D 26 '12 400w

SUTHERLAND, JAMES. Adventures of an elephant hunter. il $2.25 Macmillan A13-858

The author is a professional ivory hunter. "Having kept an unbroken diary for many years, he has fortunately been persuaded to describe a series of episodes in the professional life which he has adopted after a somewhat chequered early career. Besides elephant stories, Mr. Sutherland has something to say about lions, leopards, snakes, dogs, and the natives he has come in contact with. Most of his elephant-hunting has been done in German and Portuguese East Africa." (Spec) "Mr. Sutherland avers that the laws constantly being made for the protection of big game make it seem certain that there will be a decided increase, which would prove a serious calamity in his mind, in that it would give a great impetus to the propagation of the deadly tse-tse fly, which follows big game. . . . The matter reduces itself to the simple question whether Africa is going to serve as a colony for surplus European populations, or as a collection of big game preserves." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 9:390 My '13

"As for the adventures or stories which form the separate chapters, they are full of incident and danger, and graphically told."

+ Ath 1912,2:552 N 9 370w

"The book is written simply and with a certain story-telling genius that makes it interesting reading."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 7 '12 640w

"The zoologist will find much novel information in the book."

+ Ind 75:394 Ag 14 '13 400w

Nation 97:151 Ag 14 '13 450w

"It contains much valuable information about the superstitions and social organisation of the natives, as well as harrowing descriptions of intertribal raids, throwing a lurid light on the life of uncivilised man." R. I. P.

+ Nature 91:297 My 22 '13 220w

"For his book he has chosen out of his long experience nearly half a hundred incidents of especial interest and excitement, and tells them in a direct, vigorous manner."

+ N Y Times 18:39 Ja 26 '13 250w

+ R of Rs 47:378 Mr '13 40w

"Full of the most thrilling adventures, very well and modestly told."

+ Sat R 115:212 F 15 '13 400w

"A plain, vivid, modest, and businesslike style in which he tells of some of the most amazing adventures with elephants that have ever been published."

+ Spec 109:sup932 D 7 '12 400w

SUTRO, ALFRED. Five little plays. *$1 Brentano's

The scenes and themes of the short plays range from the drawing room and the triangular love tangle to the slums and starvation. The titles are "The man in the stalls," "A marriage has been arranged," "The man on the kerb," "The open door," and "The bracelet."

"All characteristic of their author in ingenuity of invention and fluency of dialogue, but none of them suggests the sincerity of purpose and inevitability of consequence which constitute the essence of true drama. They give the impression of imaginative sketches—sometimes very clever sketches—not of transcripts from actual life. In spite of a certain superficial plausibility, the action of the puppets is too clearly governed, not by nature or circumstance, but by managerial preordination."

— + Nation 96:213 F 27 '13 480w

"It is in Mr. Sutro's compromise with Mrs. Grundy that his chief fault lies. The plays may therefore be, and probably were, successful on the boards. And between the boards they may serve to provide drawing rooms with plays that are certainly above the average amateur non-entity and yet in keeping with the average amateur ethics. But bound for serious artistic consideration, because of this compromise, they must fail." E. G.

— + N Y Times 17:569 O 13 '12 1300w

SUTTON, WILLIAM SENECA. Problems in modern education: addresses and essays. *$1.35 (2½c) Sherman, French & co. 13-6711

A group of addresses delivered on various occasions by the author, who is dean of the department of education in the University of Texas. The subjects are: The attitude of the man of science toward educational criticism; Some contributions of the nineteenth century to educational progress; Herbert Spencer's individuality as manifested in his educational thinking; The determining factors of the curriculum of the secondary school; Unification of college degrees; The department of education in colleges and universities; Contributions of William Torrey Harris to the development of education in America; Club women and the development of educational public opinion; Education of the modern woman; Christian education in the 20th century; Some fundamental educational principles applied to the work of the Sunday school; The education of the southern negro.

"Contains no new word, but clearly expresses the best thought of all modern educators."

+ Boston Transcript p12 My 5 '13 150w

"To read these essays is to feel the pulse of the best modern thinkers in the educational world."

+ Chaut 71:116 J1 5 '13 150w

Ind 75:341 Ag 7 '13 50w

+ R of Rs 47:764 Je '13 50w

SWEETSER, KATE DICKINSON. Book of Indian braves. Il *$1.50 (3c) Harper 13-20777

A series of biographical sketches of famous Indians who have figured in our country's history. Contents: Powhatan: emperor of thirty tribes; Osceola: war-chief of the Seminoles; Sequoyah: the Cherokee Cadmus; King Philip: hero of the Wampanoags; Joseph: patriot of the Nez Percés; Sitting Bull: medicine-man of the Sioux; Pontiac: conspirator of the Ottawas.

"This handsome volume is a delightful series of life pictures of the few historic American Indians whose fame has spread beyond their own tribe or times. The stories are picturesque and dramatic as well as excellent history."

+ Ind 76:458 D 4 '13 60w

N Y Sun p8 O 11 '13 50w

+ N Y Times 18:520 O 5 '13 50w

+ R of Rs 48:637 N '13 30w

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 16 '13 180w

SWEETSER, KATE DICKINSON. Ten girls from history. Il $2 Duffield 12-27182

"Possibly four from the ten of these life stories might be familiar beforehand to the average reader, and because of their familiarity, Jeanne d'Arc, Victoria, Jenny Lind, and Lady Jane Grey, will prove the most interesting." (Lit D) The other girls who are less known are: Sally Wister: a girl of the American revolution; Cofachiqui: an Indian princess of historic legend; Eliza Lucas: a girl planter of the 15th century; Gentle Annie: a daughter of the regiment; Madeleine de Verchères: the heroine of Castle Dangerous; Adrienne de Lafayette: a young patriot's wife.

Reviewed by M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1366 D 12 '12 50w

+ Lit D 45:1083 D 7 '12 80w

"Accuracy of historic fact has been the author's commendable aim, luckily, she has likewise treated her characters as human beings, something which cannot be said for most writers of biography for children."

+ Nation 95:540 D 5 '12 70w

"The sketches would have been much better if the author were less enthusiastic over trivial matters."

— N Y Sun p6 D 14 '12 80w

"As a species of biographical, historical handling 'Ten girls from history,' is to be commended."

+ N Y Times 17:748 D 1 '12 50w

SWIFT, JONATHAN. Correspondence; ed. by F. Elrington Ball; with an introd. by J. H. Bernard. v 3 Il *$3.50 Macmillan (Eng ed 11-5542)

"The third volume of Swift's correspondence, written from 1718 to 1727, shows how Swift bore the smash-up of the Tory party at the death of Queen Anne, the flight and attainder of Bolingbroke, the impeachment of Oxford, and his own banishment to the deanery of S. Patrick's." (Sat R) "The letters to the Earls of Oxford, father and son, Bolingbroke, Prior, Pope, Arbuthnot, Sheridan, Chetwode, Tickell, Lord Carteret, Mrs. Howard, Stopford, with Vanessa's, form two-thirds of the whole correspondence in this volume. . . . The illustrations include excellent photographs of Vanessa's house at Celbridge by Miss Irene Falkner, and of its grounds and 'Vanessa's bridge' by Mr. T. J. Westropp; and others, no less admirable, of Gaultown house and Loughgall manor by Messrs. Shaw and Allison." (Ath)

A L A Bk1 9:253 F '13

"Dr. Ball's editing, masterly from the first, only gains in its sure and easy command of the immense store of biographical and historical materials which he has collected from all available sources, and his notes form an encyclopædia of accurate information on all persons and subjects connected with the letters. It would need a microscopic eye to detect even trivial slips."

+ Ath 1912,1:645 Je 8 1600w

N Y Times 17:407 J1 7 '12 100w

"If an editor has anything to tell you in a footnote—and some of Dr. Ball's notes are excellent—he is justified in interrupting the voyage of your eye. But to drag your eye to the bottom of a page and to break the chain of attention merely to inform you that if you will turn back to a previous page, or if you will get and ransack a previous volume, you will learn what you will learn, is an editorial outrage for which Dr. Ball deserves to be thrown out of window, and would be, were it not for the sake of the dear Dean."

SWIFT, JONATHAN—Continued.

+ — Sat R 114:114 J1 27 '12 1550w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. George Gissing, a critical study. *$2.50 Kennerley (Eng ed 13-3726)

"A critical study of the work of Gissing as a novelist. 'Writing himself as a professional novelist, Mr. Swinnerton lays it down that experience and imagination are the two master qualities requisite for the writing of novels. 'Gissing, when he could draw upon his experience, revealed his true insight; but his imagination had been stultified by much reading, and his experience was so small and so shrinking as to be useless when it stood up to his ambitions.' As a social philosopher, he has no faith in Gissing. . . . Leaving the negative and destructive side, which he does with an ill-concealed reluctance, Mr. Swinnerton admits that Gissing's strength lies primarily in the judgment he displays in his analyses of situation, in his portraits of women . . . and in his resolute defiance of low standards of work."—N Y Times

"Written with discrimination and insight." G: Middleton.

+ Bookm 36:655 F '13 1000w

"Let it be admitted at the outset and emphatically that Mr. Swinnerton is no commonplace writer, and that his pages contain many clever 'aperçus' and many penetrating literary distinctions. We must insist also that whatever reservation we have in our admiration of his treatise is not due to the fact that his criticism follows the judicial rather than the sympathetic method."

+ — Nation 96:257 Mr 13 '13 850w

"If this were a mere literary appreciation it would be less significant than it actually is. But Mr. Frank Swinnerton is an apprentice in a school of fiction which regards the objective methods and quasi-realism of Gissing and his period very much askance. Mr. Swinnerton's critical logic and frugal bestowal of commendation upon Gissing as critic and man of letters only shook me a little, I must confess." T: Seccombe.

+ — N Y Times 17:753 D 8 '12 2000w

"It is difficult to criticize good criticism, and for a long time I have read no criticism in English so distinguished and admirable as Mr. Frank Swinnerton's study of George Gissing. It is a model for such monographs. I see again as I read this scholarly, intellectual, unhappy, weakly dignified and intensely pathetic being as I knew him in his life! I find little in Mr. Swinnerton's estimates from which I can dissent, and nothing to which I can object." H. G. Wells.

+ N Y Times 18:9 Ja 12 '13 170w

"We do not understand, indeed, why Mr. Swinnerton should have laboured to go in critical detail through all Gissing's books and characters."

— Sat R 115:402 Mr 29 '13 250w

"A very clear and intelligent treatment of a difficult subject."

+ Spec 109:861 N 23 '12 550w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Happy family. *$1.25 Doran 12-24483

This British novelist "tells the story of an English suburban middle-class family, the old grandmother, the hardworking father, the spoiled, petulant, selfish, shallow mother, and the three girls and two boys who make up this 'happy family.' The fortunes of all are followed in an intensely personal manner, and every character in the book we have met somewhere in our own experience. Offsetting the travesty of this 'home' of the 'happy family' is another home, where the atmosphere, thanks to a whimsical, cultured tender-hearted woman at its head, is very different. The contrast and the 'magical touch of love' form interesting reading."—N Y Times

"The hopeless lack of continuity—in fact of any scheme of existence—in lower-class suburbia is graphically and consequently painfully, limned."

+ — Ath 1912,2:218 Ag 31 100w

"A powerful novel." F. A. G.

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 20 '13 650w

"In 'the quiet relentlessness of its analysis the story is akin to Mr. Bennett's 'Old wives' tale.'"

+ Nation 97:78 J1 24 '13 370w

+ N Y Times 18:225 Ap 13 '13 120w

"Mr. Swinnerton's style is controlled, ironic, sometimes vivid, always unemotional. His novel commands attention as a production of exceptional ability and intelligence." L. M. F.

+ — N Y Times 18:271 My 4 '13 550w

"Will interest those who can stand the italics and the phonetic spelling of the conversations."

+ — Spec 109:458 S 28 '12 30w

SYNGE, M. B. Book of discovery. 1l *$2.50 Putnam (Eng ed 13-12323)

"What might be called a history of the world from one point of view is set out here in simple language. The early ideals of the geography of the world are explained, and we pass on to the classical travellers such as Herodotus, Alexander, and Caesar, and the topographers Ptolemy and Pliny. Then follow the movements of the Vikings, the early pilgrims and their contemporaries, until we come to the explorations which were chronicled in languages still spoken. . . . At the last come the regions of which we still know so little, Tibet . . . and the North and South poles."—Spec

"His story of discovery is well planned and ably carried out, but the special excellence of the book lies in the large number of illustrations, facsimiles of the whole or part of ancient maps, drawings of ancient ships, portraits of early navigators, views of famous places, and a series of maps showing on the same scale the way in which the little world of Homer grew into the world of to-day. The book should be of great service in making geography attractive to young readers."

+ Ath 1912,2:591 N 16 120w

"We thank Mr. Synge for his concise, accurate and inspiring story of the great fore-runners of history, the men who dared to face tempest, cold, heat and death, that the dry land and the flowing sea might be for their fellows the theatres for the acting the drama of Life." S. A.

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 8 '13 1100w

"Interesting to boys and girls alike."

+ Int Studio 48:265 Ja '13 80w

+ N Y Times 17:788 D 22 '12 70w

"The book is thus full of interest and stimulus to adventure. It is profusely illustrated with portraits and scenes taken from all kinds of sources. To older readers perhaps the most interesting reproductions will be those of the old maps, figured and plain from the earliest rudiments of cartography."

+ Spec 109:sup940 D 7 '12 230w

SYMPHER, WILBUR OWEN. Handbook of English for engineers. *$1.50 (1½c) Scott 13-1625

This handbook is designed to meet the needs of advanced classes of engineering students who have had one year of the usual college work in composition. The five chapters treat of: The general problems of engineering writing; Mechanical details common to the various forms of technical writing; Business letters; Reports; Articles for technical journals. Appendices give directions for the correction of proof; examples of faulty sentence structure; words often misspelled, etc. There is also a bibliography and the volume is indexed.

"The last chapter of the book, in short, is likely to be least satisfactory to both student and practicing engineer. It is subject to one other criticism, which applies more or less throughout the book. Of the 85 pages which this chapter contains, some 75 are devoted to examples. In a book which purports to be a handbook, such copious use of illustrative material would be justifiable only if it were elsewhere scarce. But that the author, in a field where so much pioneer work remains to be done, has occasionally missed the right path, is easily condoned. The book should prove useful in higher engineering classes, and doubtless will find a place on the reference shelves of many progressive engineers." H. P. Breitenbach.

+ — Engin N 69:539 Mr 13 '13 850w

"Young engineers, and in fact many of the older members of the profession, will profit by a careful reading of the book. It contains much sound advice."

+ Engin Rec 67:363 Mr 29 '13 530w

"The book is the best of its kind that has yet appeared. Mr. Sypherd's book will attract many technical students where conventional text-books might fail."

+ Ind 75:331 Ag 7 '13 120w

"The book is a meritorious production, and practicing engineers, especially the younger ones, will find it a reference work of distinct value."

+ Indust Engin 13:226 My '13 250w

T

TABER, EDWARD MARTIN. Stowe notes, letters and verses. il *$3.50 Houghton 13-12625

The author of these sketches is Edward Martin Taber, the landscape painter, who died in 1896. "Exiled from New York for his health in 1887, after a European tour and other excursions in quest of bodily strength, he took up his abode at Stowe, in northern Vermont, and there remained until within a few months of his death. His notes and self-communings, made there and elsewhere, with selections from his letters and verses, and sketches from his ready pencil, are now brought together. Like that earlier naturalist, poet, and recluse, Thoreau, Taber shows in his writings the most intimate and loving intercourse with nature." (Dial)

"The descriptions of mountain and sky, woods and wild life, wonderfully exact and full of color, betoken an exquisite perception and a soul rarely sensitive to beauty."

+ A L A Bkl 10:64 O '13

"Fine feeling and quick sympathies show in the work of both pen and pencil in this volume."

+ Dial 55:24 Jl 1 '13 400w

"It is the record of a soul of rare delicacy. A spirit of gentleness and charm."

+ Ind 75:274 Jl 31 '13 180w

"Taber's works are likely to be read and carried in the bosom by those who love work that is done neither for money nor renown, but rather for sheer love of the subject of art and pencil."

+ Lit D 47:432 S 13 '13 650w

Reviewed by Norman Foerster.

+ Nation 97:118 Ag 7 '13 2750w

"The text is sound and wholesome, purely 'American' in the pleasantest connotation, an interesting record of an ambitious and gifted young man's life. The descriptions of weather and scenery are reproductions rather than descriptions; this unusual power is the prime merit of the full year's diary. There is almost too much of the painter's appreciation of colors; in a literary sense it is overdone. The pencil drawings of flowers are delightful in their dainty accuracy and finish."

+ — N Y Sun p11 Je 7 '13 1050w

"His highly developed gift for accuracy of observation, together with a certain delicate strain of moralizing, places Mr. Taber, naturally, in that school of writers to which Gilbert White in England and Henry D. Thoreau in this country gave the first fine impulse. A warmer, more human personality glows, perhaps, in these 'Stowe notes' than one usually discovers either in White or Thoreau."

+ N Y Times 18:372 Je 22 '13 200w

"Must take its place among the most charming nature books this country has produced."

+ N Y Times 18:373 Je 22 '13 1100w

+ N Y Times 18:674 N 30 '13 350w

"The simplicity and directness of Taber's descriptive writing make these notes peculiarly attractive with nature-lovers."

+ R of Rs 48:251 Ag '13 100w

"This is one of the books of the year and of many years, in fact, a most likely candidate for a permanent place among the masterpieces of American literature. It is in every way a remarkable book, a genuine windfall and treasure-trove to the lovers of the best things in literature."

+ + Springfield Republican p5 S 4 '13 1700w

TABER, SUSAN. Unexpected affinities: a serious comedy. *$1.25 Duffield 13-6728

"The scene is laid in New York city, with the members of two families as its chief characters. The two daughters of one family, one of them married, are much in the limelight, while two men, cousins, represent the other. One of these men is the husband of the married daughter, while the other is at first inclined to flirt with his cousin's wife, but later discovers a very real passion for her sister, an entirely different sort of girl. . . . The book gets a strong flavor of things that are much in the air just now from one of its characters who, in the beginning, is a selfish and rather bored social favorite, having more money than is good for him. He becomes interested in theories of social betterment and, being practical minded, sets to work to put some of them into operation. And these things bring him to the realization of an 'unexpected affinity.'" — N Y Times

"It is a good but not a brilliant story, and we suspect in it a purpose that does not altogether fail to convince. The characters are well drawn, and the circumstances and situations in which they are placed are woven with realistic touches. Never exciting, it manages to hold the interest."

+ Boston Transcript p10 My 1 '13 270w

"We managed to read this novel through to the end, although there was not a character in it that we would desire to number among our acquaintances."

+ Cath World 98:397 D '13 140w

+ Nation 96:547 My 29 '13 230w

"There are good bits of character drawing in this rather clumsily constructed story."

+ — N Y Sun p4 Ap 5 '13 100w

"The character portrayal is remarkably strong, clear, and striking."

+ N Y Times 18:227 Ap 13 '13 300w

TABOR, GRACE. Making a bulb garden. (House and garden making books) il *50c (5½c) McBride, Nast & co. 12-26718

The available material; Designing a garden for bulbs; Soil and culture; Ailments and troubles, are the titles of the four chapters, and a list of bulbs, arranged according to the month for blooming, completes the book. The illustrations showing how to plant in order to get the best results add to the book's value and attractiveness.

TABOR, GRACE. Making a garden to bloom this year. (House and garden making books) il $50c (5½c) McBride, Nast & co. 12-13055

An exceedingly practical little manual describing the kind of plants, annuals and perennials, that will give results the first season, with suggestions for their culture and care. Part one considers The kind of garden; Color and its combinations; Culture. Part two takes up The kinds of plants.

TABOR, GRACE. Making the grounds attractive with shrubbery. (House and garden making books) il $50c (6½c) McBride, Nast & co. 12-12034

The most valuable feature of this little book is the Comparative list of shrubs, beginning with those which flower in March and April and ending with those which bloom in late fall, followed by a list of the evergreen shrubs. The other chapters discuss: What is shrubbery for; The various kinds of shrubbery; Selecting and grouping; Planting and general care.

TABOR, GRACE. Old-fashioned gardening. il $2 (3½c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-1669

The old-fashioned gardens of America are those of the colonists, Cavalier and Puritan, Dutch and Spanish. The author has gathered together much historical material and her book is illustrated with photographs of the few fine specimens of colonial gardens that remain to us. In one chapter she describes the president's gardens; of these the gardens of Mount Vernon and Monticello are of first interest.

"A book any garden-lover will enjoy, and a practical aid to any one trying to construct an old-time garden."

+ A L A Bkl 9:390 My '13

+ Lit D 46:656 Mr 22 '13 250w

+ Nation 96:373 Ap 10 '13 750w

"A work of unusual erudition in its line. It is an interesting book."

+ N Y Sun p3 F 15 '13 120w

"Delightfully written and pleasantly instructive."

+ N Y Times 18:177 Mr 30 '13 400w

+ Outlook 103:501 Mr 1 '13 70w

TABOR, GRACE. Suburban gardens. (Outing handbooks) il $70c (3½c) Outing pub. 13-11508

A helpful handbook for the suburbanite, full of useful, practical advice and suggestions about garden planning. The esthetic is combined with the practical point of view; utilitarian ideas guide and beauty follows to adorn. The author maintains that neither element need be sacrificed if the relationship is understood and kept true. Chapters: Position and plan of the house; Designing a garden; Grades, levels, and contours; Walks, paths and garden entrances; Garden accessories and ornaments; Vines; Trees and their purpose; Shrubby; Flowers; The place that is started; General culture.

"Will interest owners of suburban homes, especially if they agree with the author that, while there should of course be flowers in abundance, these ought never to crowd out the edible plants."

+ Nation 97:84 Jl 24 '13 250w

TAGGART, MARION AMES. Six girls grown up. il $1.50 (2c) Wilde 12-21314

The six girls have been growing up all thru the volumes of this pleasant series. In this, the seventh volume, "Penny" the youngest of the sisters blossoms into grown-up young womanhood.

"'Six girls grown up' exhibits no abatement of Miss Taggart's sweetness and light, which is mixed with decided strength of character." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1372 D 12 '12 30w

"The 'home spirit' in this newest volume is just as fresh, as jolly, as sweet as it was in volume one. Miss Taggart, like Miss Alcott, gives us warmth of sentiment mingled with true girlish effervescence, and her heroines grow from book to book."

+ Lit D 45:1081 D 7 '12 100w

+ N Y Times 17:748 D 1 '12 50w

TAGORE, RABINDRANATH. Crescent moon: 12 child poems. il $1.25 (15c) Macmillan 13-26171

Poems of child life translated by their author from the original Bengali. Eight quaint pictures in color are used as illustrations.

Ath 1913,2:sup435 O 18 12w

"It is a book of 'child-poems' prettily rendered into English."

+ Nation 97:541 D 4 '13 70w

TAGORE, RABINDRANATH. The gardener. 12 $1.25 (9c) Macmillan 13-23431

A group of poems translated from the Bengali in which they were written into rhythmic English prose. The author says, "The translations are not always literal—the originals being sometimes abridged and sometimes paraphrased." "Lyrics of love and life," he calls them.

Ath 1913,2:sup435 O 18 40w

"Beautiful as many of the lyrics are, his prose style has, we think, something in it not quite appropriate to these slender and more familiar themes."

+ — Ath 1913,2:485 N 1 450w

"They are pretty and gentle and shot through occasionally with deeper meanings."

+ Nation 97:485 N 20 '13 420w

"A series of semi-metrical musings suggestive of a cross between the Song of Solomon and the Divan of Hafiz; both wing clipped."

+ N Y Sun p26 N 29 '13 80w

"Rabindranath Tagore's verse is poetry stripped of the superficialities of race and personality down to the naked soul of man; a poetry that has gained through much discarding."

+ N Y Times 18:712 N 30 '13 1250w

TAGORE, RABINDRANATH. Gitanjali; with 12 an introd. by W. B. Yeats. $1.40 Macmillan 13-11970

"Song offerings" is the English rendition of the title of this work. The poems represent the later work of the Indian poet and reflect the spirit of a later period of his life. "The themes are not of men and women, of streets and the rushing life of cities, but of splendor in nature, of divine love and spiritual beauty." (N Y Times)

"Mr. Tagore's translations are of trance-like beauty; their negation of movement and colour, and the deliberate flavourlessness of their simplicity are appropriate to the vein of essentially Oriental mysticism which supplies throughout the poet's inspiration."

+ Ath 1912,2:583 N 16 430w

"His verse has a serenity which is one of the lessons most needed by the restless peoples of the West."

+ Ath 1913,1:382 Ap 5 80w

"This poetry is so closely in contact with the fundamental things of life that its thought and even its imagery have a universal significance." T. W. Rolleston.

+ Hibbert J 11:692 Ap '13 1100w

"Forget Mr. Yeats, forget that this is the supreme event of literature, and you will find in the 'Gitanjali' a true flower of the autumn of romance, with hints of the everlasting faith."

+ — Nation 96:500 My 15 '13 1400w

"The translation from the Bengali to the English has been done by the poet himself, and is no small part of the whole achievement, which is undoubtedly one of genius."

+ N Y Times 18:671 N 30 '13 350w

"The 'Gitanjali' or 'Song offerings' are wonderful in their way, though Mr. Yeats's introduction is perhaps written in too hyperbolic a strain."

+ — Spec 110:279 F 15 '13 70w

TAGORE, RABINDRANATH. Sadhana, the realisation of life. *$1.25 (3½c) Macmillan 13-24809

The book contains a number of the lectures which have been delivered by their author in London and elsewhere in England. They represent an attempt to interpret to the occidental mind the philosophy of the Upanishads. The lectures included in the collection deal with: The relation of the individual to the universe; Soul consciousness; The problem of evil; The problem of self; Realisation in love; Realisation in action; The realisation of beauty; The realisation of the infinite.

Ath 1913,2:sup398 O 11 20w

Ath 1913,2:621 N 29 90w

"We have here merely another illustration of the modern, rather flabby mysticism which is crusading over the world."

— Nation 97:541 D 4 '13 250w

TAIT, REV. THOMAS. How to train the speaking voice. *$1 Doran

A little manual on the art of speaking. The author "explains, briefly and clearly, the rudimentary principles of the art, and tells how to practice and profit by them. His directions concerning the proper pose of the speaker, the management of the breath, the production of the vowel sounds, the study of emphasis and intonation, and the avoidance of vulgarisms and slovenliness are clear and pertinent. On the necessity of prolonged and intelligent study of passages of prose or poetry before any attempt is made to speak them aloud he is particularly emphatic and judicious. He realizes, as many professed teachers of elocution do not, that a full and sympathetic comprehension of an author's meaning is as essential to competent vocal interpretation as technical skill in utterance." (Nation)

"A useful and clearly written manual."

+ Ath 1912,2:523 N 2 20w

+ Dial 54:513 Je 16 '13 140w

"He has nothing new to say on the subject, of course, but the advice that he gives is generally sound, and is set down in plain language."

+ Nation 97:85 J1 24 '13 480w

TALBOT, FREDERICK A. Steamship conquest of the world. (Conquests of science ser.) il *$1.50 Lippincott 12-29973

"One branch of the tremendous material development of recent years is graphically and convincingly set forth in this profusely illustrated volume which deals with the modern steamship. Everything connected with the subject—the planning, construction, equipment, ornamentation, launching, provisioning, management, and protection of the great liners, the routes they follow, the dangers they run, the records they have made, the care taken to chart the sea, and keep the ocean clear of dangerous wreckage, together with other kindred matters—has been gone into thoroughly." —Cath World

"A useful though ephemeral collection of information, woven together in the author's fairly interesting, journalistic style."

+ A L A Bkl 9:253 F '13

"The arrangement of the book is rather haphazard, and we notice some inaccuracies in the descriptions of shipyard work, while we do not agree with the suggestion, that the oil steamer is the safest vessel afloat."

+ — Ath 1912,2:691 D 7 150w

"Comprehensive volume." F. L. W.

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Ja 22 '13 700w

"A great amount of varied information is given to the reader, not in a technical, dry way, but plainly and entertainingly, with many anecdotes and excellent illustrations, that make this story of modern progress a delightful bit of instructive reading."

+ Cath World 96:693 F '13 110w

"The book is not wholly free from typographical errors. A useful and entertaining work."

+ — Nation 96:213 F 27 '13 380w

N Y Times 17:788 D 22 '12 60w

TALBOT, MARION. House sanitation. il *80c (3c) Whitcomb & B. 12-24765

This book takes the place of a little manual on "Home sanitation" published in 1883 under the direction of Mrs. Ellen H. Richards and a group of young college women. Mrs. Richards had urged a revision of that work before her death but the present editor believed that "it would be more truly in accord with Mrs. Richards's scientific and progressive spirit to re-write the book. This she has done . . . endeavoring to replace outworn theories and useless practices with such modern views and practical suggestions as will best help the progressive housekeeper in her efforts to maintain her household in health and physical efficiency with the least expenditure of money, time and strength." (Preface)

+ A L A Bkl 9:205 Ja '13

"The viewpoint is throughout thoroughly sound and up-to-date and this little book of 116 pages ought to do notable service in the cause of public health education." C.-E. A. Winslow.

+ Science ns38:705 N 14 '13 780w

TALBOT, P. AMAURY. In the shadow of the bush. il *$5 Doran A13-919

A British official of Southern Nigeria has made an intimate study of the Ekoi people of that region. "The contents are comprehensive, dealing in especial chapters (thirty-one in number) with religion, clubs, and societies, jujus (fetishes), women, birth customs, ordeal, divination, witchcraft, funeral ceremonies, ghosts, life in peace and war, art, records, government, and folk-lore. But lest the list of chapters mislead, let it be said here that almost every page of the book gives matter that is of first-rate importance for the study of primitive religion and folk-lore." (Lit D) "He adds a short grammar of the language, vocabularies of six tribes, and many of the script signs with interpretations. There is a map of the district, made from his surveys, together with 123 illustrations, some showing scenes of remarkable beauty, and an excellent index." (Nation)

+ A L A Bkl 9:391 My '13

"The book will appeal to many readers beyond those immediately concerned with African administration."

+ Ath 1912,2:685 D 7 380w

"Apart from such collections of data as Frazer's 'Golden bough,' the reviewer has not found a volume so rich as this, and so absorbingly interesting, since the issue of Cushing's 'Zuni tales.' Teachers of primitive psychology, and especially of comparative religion, might almost adopt it as a text-book, so fully is it fitted to perform this task. The publishers, too, have risen to their opportunity, and hardly a single typographical error has been noted."

+ — Lit D 46:786 Ap 5 '13 550w

"A remarkable contribution to our knowledge and appreciation of an African race, the Ekoi of Southern Nigeria."

+ Nation 96:366 Ap 10 '13 320w

"A fascinating volume full of direct and irresistible appeal." W. W. Skeat.

+ Nature 91:426 Je 26 '13 200w

N Y Times 18:88 F 16 '13 150w

TALBOT, P. AMAURY—Continued.

"Mr. Talbot's volume is, so far as we know, the only adequate description of certain of the Nigerian tribes. For the general reader the book would have gained by condensation."

+ — Outlook 103:780 Ap 5 '13 60w

+ R of Rs 47:509 Ap '13 30w

+ Sat R 115:85 Ja 18 '13 100w

"A remarkable study, at once vividly interesting and valuable from the point of view of ethnology. The one criticism to be made is that the book is not provided with a general map of Africa locating Nigeria."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 100w

TALLENTYRE, S. G., pseud. (E. V. HALL).

² Life of Mirabeau; 1st. Am ed reprinted from 2d English ed il $3.50 Putnam

Voltaire, the subject of an earlier biography by the author is pronounced "the last great influence of the old order," Mirabeau, the subject of the present book, "the first of the new." She presents him as "a soldier, publicist, States-prisoner, pamphleteer, statesman and plagiarist who is, in sum, one of the vital forces of a vital age." (Ind)

"Mr. Tallentyre's keen sense for the dramatic, his pleasing style, and a fair amount of patience and scholarly-mindedness in weighing and sifting evidence, has given us a very readable book. While he does not hesitate to disclose the shortcomings of his hero, we often detect the pleading of an advocate rather than the impartial historian." W: E. Lingelbach.

+ — Ann Am Acad 47:312 My '13 450w

"This study is sympathetic, arresting, and—almost inevitably—dramatic."

+ Ind 73:1500 D 26 '12 170w

"The opportunity for a fine study of the subject was unique, but the difficulty of that subject was also unusual. The result is not so well proportioned nor always so clear as one could wish."

— Outlook 102:736 N 30 '12 80w

"It is a readable story this."

+ R of Rs 46:758 D '12 100w

TALLING, MARSHALL P. Science of spiritual life. $1.50 Revell 13-1164

"Dr. Talling undertakes the rewriting of theology from the point of view of science and by scientific method. His thought is based upon the conception that creation is not finished, and that God is still at work in the material universe." (Bib World) "The real key to the book is found in the following paragraph, taken from the first chapter: 'Change is essential to progress; and progress is the significance of life. At no point can life, or the universe stand still. Wherefore the old ideas of a completed creation and a static universe, in which earlier theological thought forms were cast, must yield to the newer idea of a continuous creation and an eternally progressive universe.'" (Boston Transcript)

"His book will prove stimulating and helpful to those of his readers whose thought already has been shaped in churchly circles, and yet is open to further development. The volume has the merit of terse, graphic writing." E. W. Lyman.

+ Am J Theol 17:644 O '13 480w

"Altogether the volume is interesting as an illustration of independent thinking which will serve well to mediate the point of view of modern science to those who wish to think theology through in its terms. In this particular, however, however much one may feel that certain questions are not fully answered, the book will be of real help."

+ — Bib World 14:288 Ap '13 320w

"We think the title of the book is somewhat misleading, as science, in this country, is confined to the field of phenomena. The author, however, has done a good work, a work that is needed at present. He realizes the great influence science has had upon our theological thinking, and he is conscious that to many science is a word to conjure with. And as he has written a book for a popular clientele he has shown wisdom in using a terminology that will command attention though it may be lacking in exactness."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Ja 1 '13 280w
N Y Times 17:702 D 1 '12 70w

TARBELL, IDA MINERVA. Business of being a woman. $1.25 (4c) Macmillan 12-24007

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

+ A L A Bkl 9:205 Ja '13 ✕

"The book is well written, is short and to the point, and thoroughly worth reading."

+ Ann Am Acad 46:201 Mr '13 140w

"For the great mass of women she has a message of inestimable value, and with a literary ancestry which includes books of repute on political and biographical subjects, she knows well how to deliver it."

+ Ath 1913:1:88 Ja 25 150w

"The message of this book is a most wholesome one. It is based on wide observation, profound historical learning, and sound reasoning."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 21 '12 550w

"Miss Tarbell's little volume contains more valuable wisdom to the page than anything yet written on the subject in this country. Her book is rational, broad-minded, and helpful; it diffuses common-sense, but common-sense irradiated with the ideal." C. A. P. Comer.

+ Dial 54:175 Mr 1 '13 200w

"Miss Tarbell's argument, 'The business of being a woman,' takes the conservative side of the suffrage controversy, and a slightly contemptuous tone in speaking of the modern woman as the 'Uneasy woman.' The passages of the book that deal with the importance of domestic life are sensible and not to be controverted."

+ — Ind 74:536 Mr 6 '13 170w

"Miss Tarbell writes from the standpoint of a mind well-stocked and well-ventilated, and her argument for the distinctiveness and dignity of woman's business is an appeal to woman's intelligence."

+ Nation 96:123 F 6 '13 80w

+ Outlook 103:45 Ja 4 '13 220w

"A sane and sensible discussion it is, without the special pleading which mars much of the modern suffrage or antisuffrage argumentative literature."

+ Springfield Republican p5 D 26 '12 600w

Reviewed by Katharine Anthony.

Survey 29:906 Mr 29 '13 220w

TARDE, GABRIEL. Penal philosophy; tr. from the 4th French ed. by Rapelje Howell; with an editorial preface by E. Lindsey, and an introd. by Robert H. Gault. (Modern criminal science ser.) $5 Little 12-27951

"In this work the author sets forth his views with respect to three matters. To use his own words, there is in the first place 'an attempt to reconcile moral responsibility with determinism, the human conscience with science, which the conception of free will seemed to have separated with an unsurmountable gulf'; in the second place, 'an explanation of the criminal side of societies,' and, finally, 'a pointing out of a few legislative and penitentiary reforms.'" — N Y Times

Reviewed by C. R. Henderson.

+ Am J Soc 19:266 S '13 520w

"A work of great interest and value." J: E. Oster.

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:513 Ag '13 550w

"The English of the translation is involved and in many places lacks clearness and definiteness making it somewhat difficult reading. The book on the whole is a valuable commentary on the modern school of criminology and should be read by everyone who desires familiarity with the leaders of modern thought in this field." J. P. Lichtenberger.

+ Ann Am Acad 46:228 Mr '13 550w

"The work is for the specialist or special student, primarily, though it is not too technical in its language or treatment to be available for any layman who has need to consult it."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 200w

"There is probably no other volume published in recent years that will serve to show how unsettled are the views of students of the various sciences relating to the criminal and his treatment. Yet there is an immense amount of information in this volume, and the author has done much to upset all of Lombroso's theories."

+ Cath World 96:835 Mr '13 420w

Reviewed by C. R. Henderson.

+ Dial 55:261 O 1 '13 1600w

"Probably the most scientific and complete presentation of that subject."

+ Educ R 46:92 Je '13, 50w

"He speaks with recognized authority and his massive volume, formidable to take up, is very difficult to lay down. He is calm, alert, almost chatty in his easy style, and his translator understands his spirit." I. H. Brainerd.

+ Ind 75:40 J1 3 '13 950w

"In spite of the diffuseness which arose doubtless from the wealth of the author's learning, experience, and imagination, it is so far the most readable and interesting of the series, besides offering the most comprehensive treatment of the subject of crime."

+ Nation 96:420 Ap 24 '13 650w

"A work constructed on these lines by a writer of Prof. Tarde's standing necessarily appeals to psychologists, sociologists, and criminologists."

+ N Y Times 18:2 Ja 5 '13 150w

"There are a multitude of good things scattered through Professor Tarde's book, keen observation, terse epigrams, shrewd remarks; but, alas! we have to add that they require a deal of looking for, and the average reader is likely to miss them and to put down the volume in absolute weariness before he has had the patience to appreciate its ability. But when the professor emerges from metaphysics and returns to the earth and practical problems, he writes what is valuable, and thoroughly justifies the American committee in having chosen out his work for translation."

+ Sat R 115:777 Je 21 '13 650w

"Tarde's 'Penal philosophy' is particularly sympathetic, as the German phrase has it, for American social workers interested in delinquency." O. F. Lewis.

+ Survey 29:822 Mr 8 '13 300w

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. The flirt. ii *$1.25
* (2c) Doubleday 13-4422

The flirt is the younger of two sisters. Flirtatiousness, however, seems a mild term to apply to her insatiable acquisitiveness where masculine creatures were concerned,—an acquisitiveness highly intensified when the man in question appeared as the property of some other girl. She breaks one girl's engagement, drives one man to suicide, causes the murder of another, leads another into a swindle that loses him his fortune. She marries in the end the most stupid and unpromising of her suitors, leaving the really worthy one to recover his senses and marry her sister whom he should have appreciated in the beginning.

"This is light stuff, though skilfully and amusingly written."

+ Ath 1913,2:181 Ag 23 50w

"An unusually vivid and brilliant piece of work."

+ Atlan 112:693 N '13 450w

"A story which the present reviewer has read with genuine enjoyment,—a good deal more enjoyment than was furnished by some of Mr. Tarkington's earlier volumes. Mr. Tarkington's theatrical instinct led him astray. On the stage you can do this very thing; you can introduce a piece of roguery so barefaced that the audience instantly scents the trick, yet complacently accepts the credulity of the victims in the play,—because the audience hears them told and sees them believe. But in a book it is a different matter. Mr. Tarkington never can wholly resist a touch of melodrama in his climaxes. And while he has in the main escaped the taint of the new flamboyance, yet its influence is felt in a certain pervading exaggeration." F. T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:81 Mr '13 1000w

"Mr. Tarkington has sought to unite the airy grace of 'Monsieur Beaucaire' with the Hoosier homeliness of 'The gentleman from Indiana.' Unfortunately, however, the two styles are so mingled that the story, its scenes and its characters are continuously farcical." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 19 '13 400w

"A more unconvincing piece of fiction we have not often read." W. M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:462 Je 1 '13 330w

"The story opens most promisingly, but after visibly weakening, dies of inanition."

+ Ind 74:1305 Je 5 '13 120w

"The excellence of the story lies in its style rather than its matter."

+ Nation 96:416 Ap 24 '13 300w

"It is, by no means a pleasant book to read, but it will gratify those with a taste for 'strong' fiction. We prefer Mr. Tarkington when he writes of France."

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 15 '13 370w

"It is certain that to begin the book is to finish it. We quarrel with it, but we read it. Thus it fulfills the first duty of fiction—only Mr. Tarkington could do so much better an' he would."

+ N Y Times 18:294 My 18 '13 220w

"There is a good bad boy in the book and the liar's sister is wholesome, but the plot is yellow and unconvincing."

+ Outlook 103:779 Ap 5 '13 50w

"Despite the generally depressing character of the book, 'The flirt' is worth while."

+ R of Rs 47:630 My '13 70w

"The suggestions of the better work which Mr. Tarkington could and ought to have done with his theme are so obvious and irritating as to make the book actually less satisfying for leisure reading than some which lack altogether its infrequent merit."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 750w

TAUBMAN-GOLDIE, VALENTINE FRANCIS.

* Declension of Henry D'Albiac. *$1.25 Stokes 13-1309

"A serious, yet light-handed satire on the follies and pretensions of smart society in present-day England. The hero of the title is a young Frenchman who is making a protracted stay in London and at various English country houses, and incidentally is betrothed to one of the leading beauties of the current season." (Bookm) His awakening to a sense of the girl's shallowness comes after his rescue of an ardent young suffragette from the hands of the London police.

"The story is written with ease and with a certain dry incisive wit that enlivens it delightfully, but it falls as a whole. I do not profess to state what the human quality is, nor how to get it as a literary effect. Each author must have his own definition and his own recipe, but it is as well demonstrated as the law of gravitation that the human quality is the one thing that cannot be omitted from a novel."

+ Atlan 112:689 N '13 650w

"It is all excellent comedy, and it carries a number of wise and salutary lessons with it." F. T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:539 J1 '13 300w

TAUBMAN-GOLDIE, V. F.—Continued.

"Many readers will relish the clever character sketches, satire, snap in dialog and good humored atmosphere of the book."
+ Ind 74:989 My 1 '13 80w

TAYLER, JOHN LIONEL. Nature of woman.
* $1.25 Dutton (Enged A13-593)

"Without prejudice, from the standpoint of a biologist and sociologist, the author has presented, with comment, the views of all the important writers on the subject from Dante down to Westermarck." (Boston Transcript)
"The conclusions of the author . . . are: that woman, not being merely a female man, but of different aptitudes, has her own proper sphere and direction of development; that her specialty is motherhood—not merely the physical fact, but also the ennobling influences involved; that the married woman should not work in factories, etc., but should be economically dependent on the man, as he is domestically dependent on her; and that a standard marriageable wage should be secured to the male worker. The book closes with a reprint of W. C. Roscoe's article, 'Woman,' in the National review for October, 1858. In this pioneer essay, 'every argument of real strength for and against the woman's movement, that has been used in the fifty odd years that followed its publication, will be found summarised.'" (Nature)

Ath 1913.1:88 Ja 25 230w

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 2 '13 500w

Nature 90:695 F 27 '13 150w

"The view of woman's nature Prof. Tayler sets forth is distinctly pertinent to the broad discussion which has developed through the agitation for woman suffrage."

+ N Y Times 18:175 Mr 30 '13 1000w

TAYLOR, F. NOEL. Main drainage of towns.
³ il *$4.50 Lippincott (Enged 13-10056)

"The author treats mainly of the design and construction of sewers and sewage-disposal works. As the book has been written from the standpoint of an English engineer, English units and terms are used throughout." (Engin N) Contents: Maps, plans, sections and preliminary arrangements; Principles of hydraulics and hydrostatics; Practical calculations; Practical construction; Trenches and tunnels; Forms and ventilation of sewers; Storm overflows, Sea outfall manholes, tank sewers, manholes, lampholes, flushing tanks and gullies; Pumping sewage; House drainage; Theoretical side of sewage disposal; Sewage disposal works; Special construction; Appendices.

"That the author has spent a large amount of time in the preparation of the book is evident, but it is greatly to be regretted that much of the subject matter is not well presented. The book contains many statements with which experienced engineers will not agree, others which are open to question and still others which are incorrect. In conclusion it may be said that the book should be read with great caution, especially by a young and inexperienced engineer. That there is something of value in the book cannot be denied, but it is equally true that there is much in the book which is of little or no value." J: H. Gregory.

+ Engin N 69:331 F 13 '13 900w

"The author has collected a great deal of useful information in regard to main drainage work, together with a large number of plans, tables, &c., which must have entailed considerable labour. On the other hand, the value of the book is very seriously impaired by the careless way in which it is written, the errors in composition being in many cases so serious as to render the meaning of the text obscure. The book contains sufficient material for the production of a useful work on the subject of main drainage providing the matter is carefully edited, but as published it certainly cannot be recommended." E. A.

+ Nature 90:133 O 3 '12 250w

TAYLOR, F. NOEL. Small water supplies. il
* $2 Van Nostrand (Enged Agr13-145)

"A practical treatise on the sources, storage and distribution of water for domestic uses in small villages, farms and estates. There are chapters on the properties of water and sources of supply, wells and well sinking, flow of water in channels and pipes, pumping, and storage and distribution."—Elec World

"It is written throughout in a simple, direct style and covers its field."

+ Elec World 60:1160 N 30 '12 60w

"While there is little in Mr. Taylor's book which an engineer is not supposed to be acquainted with, or at least could find in other works in his library on hydraulics and engineering construction, it does give in concise form the parts of those subjects of most value to the builder of a small water-works system. Indeed the book is not written for engineers only, but for estate agents and owners of country property."

+ Engin N 69:814 Ap 17 '13 270w

"An addition of considerable importance to the literature on watersupply. As would be expected, it is elementary in several respects, and frequently incomplete to a marked degree, but nevertheless will prove useful to the designer of small water-works. The engineer and sanitarian of wide experience will take pointed issue with the author on numerous statements appearing in the book, and its greatest weakness lies in the author's endeavor to cover in a limited number of pages the multitudinous array of technical details which water supply problems in general involve."

+ Engin Rec 66:675 D 14 '12 120w

TAYLOR, GEORGE ROBERT STIRLING.
² Story of Canterbury. il *$1.75 Dutton

12-17063

This volume in the "Mediaeval towns" series has for its subject one of the oldest and most picturesque of English cities. The book is at once a history and a description of the cathedral and its environs. In tracing the history of Canterbury from the days before Augustine to the present the author emphasizes thruout its importance as the centre of English Christianity. To the modern pilgrim visiting Canterbury this volume "may be heartily recommended as a companion infinitely to be preferred even to the comfortable work of Herr Baedeker." (N Y Times)

+ A L A Bkl 9:166 D '12

"The story of the evolution of Canterbury is told with some spirit and with general accuracy, though the writer lacks, we think, the power to appreciate the best side of the mediaeval church. The long chapter styled 'The itinerary of Canterbury' is not free from slips."

+ Ath 1912.2:244 S 7 280w

"It will serve as refresher and touch-up of memories not less aptly than as companion upon the spot. Not that the volume is a guide book. Far from it. It is a storehouse of the history of the city and the cathedral." H. I. B.

+ N Y Times 17:388 Je 23 '12 1850w

TAYLOR, HENRY C. What a salesman should know. (Practical ser.) *75c (4½c) Browne & Howell 13-21667

The author realizes that it is impossible to lay down a certain set of rules that every salesman can follow; he believes, however, that out of his years of experience he is able to offer some practical advice to which all may listen with profit. In his ten chapters he considers: The foundation; Buying versus selling; Approaching a customer; Making a sample display; Entertaining customers; Writing the firm, keeping appointments, etc.; Mileage books, excess baggage, tipping, etc.; Improving spare time; Keeping a personal record of sales; Concentration.

"Every man, whether selling on the road or in the store, will find some useful hints in 'What a salesman should know' and many valuable suggestions."

+ Boston Transcript p12 D 8 '13 150w

"An experienced and successful business man tenders sound practical advice which should be very helpful to young commercial men desirous of making themselves valuable to their employers."

+ N Y Times 18:526 O 12 '13 50w

TAYLOR, JOSHUA. Art of golf. il *$1.25 Outing pub. (Eng ed A13-1408)

Designed to help the average player improve his game, the text is supplemented by photographs of positions taken in actual play. "The one novelty of the volume is a chapter on the 'Evolution of the bunker.' This is contributed by J. H. Taylor, formerly open champion, and traces the successive theories of golf hazards." (Nation)

"A book of hints for the average player which strikes us as likely to be really useful. The book is not badly written, but it might have been improved by the revision of an expert in writing."

+ Ath 1912,2:62 J1 20 100w

"About his book there is nothing distinctive, unless it be a homely directness of style in making plain his sound and approved views of the game."

+ Nation 96:419 Ap 24 '13 150w

N Y Sun p8 Ap 5 '13 50w

"The book is thoroughly practical and contains a great deal of valuable instruction and advice."

+ N Y Times 18:283 My 11 '13 70w

TAYLOR, MARY IMLAY. Long way. *$1.25
(2c) Little 13-10989

The devotion of one sister for another is the theme of this story. To shield her beautiful, vain, and selfish sister, Rachel Leven consents to marry a man whom she does not love and who does not love her. The "long way" is the way of the transgressor and it is trodden not only by Eva who pays well for her selfishness but by Rachel as well, who comes to feel that she has sinned in her act of deception. Asphy, too, Eva's husband, and Belhaven, the man Rachel marries, both help to pay the inevitable price.

"The best part of the story is in the background of Washington society life it pictures."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 18 '13 320w

"Strange manners must prevail in Washington society if 'The long way' is in any way a picture of it. The characters are all apparently steeped in the traditions of cheap melodrama."

+ N Y Sun p4 My 10 '13 120w

TAYLOR, WILLIAM GEORGE LANGWORTHY.
12 Credit system. il *$2.25 (1½c) Macmillan
13-25067

"This book is designed as a contribution toward an articulated and consistent explanation of the financial happenings of prosperity, crisis, depression, price-level, interest, capital and correlated branches, developed from a fundamental conception of credit and money, and from a biological view of social activity." (Introduction) The subject is treated in five parts under the following headings: First principles; Capital; High and low prices; The lesson of history; Credit and society.

"The book is a thorough presentation of what credit is, what it does, and how it works. And the answers to the questions cover a much larger field than the reader is apt to expect. The influence upon not only the commercial life of man, but his moral and social life is clearly set forth in this book."

+ Boston Transcript p11 D 6 '13 200w

TCHEKHOV, ANTON PAVLOVITCH. The kiss,
1 and other stories; tr. from the Russian by
R. E. C. Long. *$1.50 (2c) Scribner
(Eng ed 11-7265)

"The present volume of short stories by Anton Tchekhoff, chosen from nearly three hundred, is an attempt to bridge a gap in international literary relations, all the more marked because of the rapid growth both at home and in western Europe of Tchekhoff's fame as a short-story writer and playwright." (Translator's note) The stories are: The kiss; Verotchka; On trial; The mass for the dead; The privy councillor; The runaway; The reed; La Cigale; The head gardener's tale; Oysters; Women; Woe; Zinotchka; The princess; The muzhiks.

"We have Tchekhov here in a book of short stories that are decadent without even a morbid interest, cheaply pessimistic, without even sincerity, and frankly futile without even a literary beauty to urge the dear old 'art for art's sake' excuse."

+ Cath World 96:683 F '13 200w

"They are remarkable works of art, faithful pictures of common occurrences in life, told without a word of comment, for their tragedy and poetry lie in the facts themselves."

+ N Y Sun p 7 D 7 '12 110w

"How did Tchekhoff's work ever cross the Atlantic, untouched as it is by the passion, the energy, and the resurgent willfulness of the modern spirit? There never was a flesh-and-blood excuse for making Tchekhoff a literary emigré; and it is not conceivable that we shall ever place his work in that great company of foreign art that we have naturalized because it is racy of nature." Felix Gren-don.

+ N Y Times 18:14 Ja 12 '13 1700w

"Each sketch is a Meissonier, so minute and so sure are the touches. As with most Russian literature, there is here the continual note of analysis, of introspection, of self-examination. But there is also in each sketch the evidence of art, of high art."

+ Outlook 102: 865 D 21 '12 80w

TEARLE, CHRISTIAN. Pilgrim from Chicago.
12 il *$2.50 Longmans

"A former volume, 'Rambles with an American,' recorded certain literary pilgrimages undertaken between the author and a supposititious American, Mr. James C. Fairfield of Chicago, U. S. A. The author himself is a dweller in that ancient sanctuary of law and celibacy, the Temple. Here we are to imagine Mr. Fairfield . . . looking up the Templar, and inciting him to new expeditions in the field of literary topography." (N Y Times) "Mr. Fairfield's knowledge is threefold. He is exceedingly well versed in history, in literature and in topography. He knows the streets of London, not only at the present time, but can tell as far as history or literature permit us to know just what were the fortunes of the streets in each age, and, whenever possible, the date of the building of the street. He has a complete visualization of his London." (Boston Transcript)

"We welcome back to print Christian Tearle and his real or imaginary friend Mr. James C. Fairfield of Chicago. They are topographers of the right sort. The illustrations, particularly those taken from old prints, are judiciously chosen, and the postscripts in verse innocuous."

+ Ath 1913,2:412 O 18 650w

"So fascinating did we find the 'Rambles,' that we are more than delighted to chance upon the new book which relates the further adventure of the gentleman." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 11 '13 530w

"It is generous in Mr. Tearle to attribute to our fellow-countryman so much of the lore which, from his vantage-point at Gray's Inn, he has been able to amass." H. W. Boynton.

+ N Y Times 18:639 N 23 '13 570w

TEMPLE, SIR RICHARD. Letters and character sketches from the House of Commons; ed. by Sir R. Carnac Temple. $3.50 Dutton

An account of the people and proceedings in the House of Commons in 1886 and 1887 told in a series of letters and sketches. "The writer, a member of Parliament from 1886 to 1895, discusses debates, giving liberal and salient quotations and results; and follows them with character sketches of the men most active at the time. There are more than a hundred of these sketches, which constitute something like an intimate who's who, and there are one hundred and ten of the letters relating to the famous debates in Commons." (Boston Transcript)

"Lacks the brightness of Dr. Farquharson's pages. It is one of the dullest productions of its class. There is much information that is out of date and useless, besides information that never at any time had real value. Some of the character-sketches are admirable, and those of Gladstone and Mr. Chamberlain are especially good."

— + Ath 1912,2:548 N 9 300w

"The work is a novel and valuable one." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p20 J1 2 '13 1150w

"In spite, however, of Sir Richard Temple's lack of understanding of the modern trend of civilization and his characterizations of the beginnings of social legislation . . . the volume is well worth reading. It gives a most living picture of Parliament at work and a student would get an admirable idea of the life and activities of the British Parliament from its pages."

+ — Ind 75:510 Ag 28 '13 170w

"These pages serve to give a very vivid picture of men and events at an interesting period of parliamentary history."

+ Nation 97:82 J1 24 '13 430w

"Sir Richard Temple has told of [distinguished Parliamentarians] with naïveté and from the purely party point of view, but what he has to say has the merit of being the absolutely frank impressions, recorded at the moment, of the opening scenes of the great Home rule drama on a keenly interested and well-informed mind."

+ N Y Times 18:419 Ag 3 '13 1300w

"All Sir Richard Temple's character-sketches of his contemporaries, friends and foes alike, are marked by the same indiscriminate praise, and are therefore, however amiable, quite worthless. Nevertheless to some future historian this careful and painstaking record of the happenings of two eventful years (1885-7) may be useful."

— + Sat R 114:739 D 14 '12 530w

TENNANT, REV. FREDERICK ROBERT. ¹⁰ Concept of sin. $1.35 Putnam A13-1655

This is Dr. Tennant's third work on the subject of sin. "Believing that it is desirable in the interests of both of clear thinking and of practical godliness that we should have 'a well-defined and clear-cut conception of sin,' he seeks to justify the concept of sin with which he himself works, and which he thinks all Christian theologians and moralists would do well to adopt." (Hibbert J) "The trouble has been that many theologians and moralists have confused the idea of sin by treating it as an abstraction. Abstractions are always unreal. And the sense of sin has decayed because sin has been defined in an abstract way, and men feeling its unreality have ignored it. . . . When we define sin in a concrete way and in a way that personal responsibility will be seen to be real and not a mystery that must be taken on faith, there will be no indications of the decay of the sense of sin. This is what the author of this volume has done." (Boston Transcript)

Ath 1912,2:725 D 14 30w

"He has done his work well."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '13 570w

"The work of definition, however, and above all the task of getting one's definitions accepted, is no easy one; and Dr. Tennant is to be congratulated on the skill, the persistence, and the courage with which he faces the problem. It is so easy to prove what we desire, if we select our definitions. But one cannot help feeling that the writer of this book does violence to the continuity of the mental life by too absolute a severance of the will from other conative experiences, and also from that principle, or life, or undeveloped selfhood, which only comes to clear consciousness at a later stage, but which exists in germ from the beginning." H. H. Scullard.

+ — Hibbert J 11:910 J1 '13 1300w

"He makes a good point in showing that modern psychology is prevented from grasping the meaning of sin and moral accountability by a blind adherence to an objective standpoint, but his analysis of the subjective, or personal, standpoint—'psychic' in his own term—leaves something to be desired."

+ — Nation 97:78 J1 24 '13 100w

TENNYSON, CHARLES. Cambridge from ¹² within. il $3 (7c) Jacobs A13-2139

A love for Cambridge life marks every page of this volume. Only one knowing it intimately could unfold such memories of its dons and other well known characters, its work and play hours, its colleges, or discuss so charmingly "certain Cambridge customs." An illuminating chapter deals with the inevitable comparison with Oxford. The nineteen full page plates in sepia or color are the work of Harry Morley.

"We commend Mr. Tennyson for describing University life as it is, and not as it should be. He writes in a style not unworthy of the name he bears."

+ Ath 1913,1:241 Mr 1 1400w

"'Cambridge from within' has the personal and reminiscent quality that can raise chronicle and description out of the bleak category of guide-book literature and make the writer's pages glow with something of the warmth and color of life."

+ Dial 55:487 D 1 '13 170w

"The illustrations after drawings in colour and in sepia by Mr. Morley are very good and he succeeds admirably in getting the atmosphere of the subject."

+ Int Studio 49:255 My '13 70w

"A charming volume, which exhibits much sympathetic insight and perceptive humour, and has moreover the great merit of being written in an equable and mellow style of real distinction." A. C. Benson.

+ Sat R 115:297 Mr 8 '13 1500w

TERMAN, LEWIS MADISON. Teacher's health: ⁷ a study in the hygiene of an occupation. (Riverside educ. monographs) *60c Houghton 13-1433

"It is not a matter of mere personal concern to the profession that the teacher's health is here considered; rather as a factor in school efficiency. Medical inspection of schools is partial so long as it takes no notice of teachers, for 'the health of the child is intricately related to that of its teacher.' There is a subtler way in which weak lungs and neurasthenia among the half million teachers who are molding the intellect and character of twenty million children in this country may affect the development of those children. . . . Nowadays we are coming to know how much personality is shaped by physical and mental health."—Survey

"Accurate in its treatment and up to date."

+ A L A Bkl 9:391 My '13 +

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 13 '13 170w

Reviewed by W. D. Lane.

+ Survey 30:68 Ap 12 '13 200w

TERRELL, DOROTHY A BECKETT. Sister-in-chief. il *$1.25 Cassell 12-29135

"The story deals with English country folk, and is concerned mainly with the joys and sorrows of a motherless family of eight, consisting of an impecunious clergyman and his three girls and four boys. The sister-in-chief referred to in the title is the father's mainstay, his housekeeper, and confidant. She is a delightful person, patient, capable, and economical, and she does her work faithfully and well. Her love affair, which runs all through the book, is very interesting; everybody who makes her acquaintance will be glad when he comes to the story of her wedding day."—N Y Times

+ A L A Bkl 9:211 Ja '13 ✕
Ath 1912,2:sup498 O 26 70w

"The prize-winner is not exclusively a book for girls, for anybody would enjoy it who has a liking for quiet, simple tales about men, women, and children of the everyday human sort, who live ordinary, unexciting, gentle lives."

+ N Y Times 17:722 D 1 '12 200w

"For girls nothing could be more cheerful and wholesome."

+ Spec 109:sup787 N 16 '12 80w

THANET, OCTAVE, pseud. (ALICE FRENCH).
* Step on the stair. *50c (10½c) Bobbs 13-6077

In this short story the author makes one of those ventures into the unknown which attempt to discover something of what is beyond death. The experience related is that of an eminent surgeon who, after a period on the other side, is permitted to return to life to finish his work. It is his mother who meets him on the other side, who tells him that the next life is merely a step on the stair, and that there are other stairs to follow, each a little higher than the last.

Nation 96:620 Je 19 '13 230w

N Y Sun p6 Mr 29 '13 16w

"The little story is written with much skill. Artistically, its author has never done a better thing."

+ N Y Times 18:383 Je 29 '13 170w

THOMAS, EDWARD. Algernon Charles Swinburne: a critical study. *$2.50 Kennerley (Eng ed W13-14)

With this study of Swinburne another volume is added to that admirable series of critical studies that Mr. Kennerley is bringing out in this country. The author's attitude toward his subject is calm and impartial—an attitude which the ordinary reader finds difficult to maintain in relation to Swinburne. "Either he is intoxicated, or else he is under a determination not to be so; and, neither condition being favourable to receptivity, the essential quality of the author eludes him. Mr. Thomas emerges clear-headed and imperturbable from the ordeal. . . . Mr. Thomas's analysis of Swinburne's vocabulary, of the instincts which brought his words and thoughts into their places, is a brilliant piece of work, and might be called the backbone of his essay." (Ath)

"This is a notable piece of criticism, and it is a pity that a certain casualness of style and arrangement has left it less telling than it might have been. What Mr. Thomas does not observe, or at least does not bring out sufficiently, is the curious fact that Swinburne, with all his concentration upon the music of words, and in spite of his unsurpassed control of the rhythmical material they provide, does not rank, to the more musical ear, as a pre-eminently musical singer."

+ — Ath 1912,2:684 D 7 700w

"This is in many respects the most important study of Swinburne's character and poetry that has appeared since his death. Mr. Thomas has not permitted his expert knowledge, his zeal of study, to submerge him in the amiable mists of the special pleader, nor has he been tempted to the opposite extreme of a conscious iconoclasm. He merely seems to give to Swinburne's character and powers the clear outline which has been lacking." H. W. B.

+ N Y Times 17:796 D 29 '12 1100w

"The construction of the book is as loose as the sentence structure, and it is quite evident that in writing of the personal characteristics of his subject the author failed to consult authoritative sources. The book has the merit of being a thorough and patient study of the complete works. The study, while careful and well intentioned, fails in any wise to lead its readers to one of the greatest minds of our era; and the great book upon the life, the personality, the genius of Swinburne is still unwritten."

— + No Am 197:281 F '13 1100w

"Mr. Thomas' book is everywhere marked by good sense. The chronological method he has adopted, though perhaps not the best, philosophically speaking, for such a poet as Swinburne, undoubtedly makes these pages a valuable companion to consecutive study of the poet's work."

+ Sat R 115:426 Ap 5 '13 1350w

"Mr. Thomas's study upon Swinburne is of the class which it is usual to describe as 'suggestive and stimulating.' That is to say, it is pleasantly written and not difficult to read, but is not distinguished for closeness of thought or for clarity of arrangement."

+ — Spec 110:sup131 Ja 25 '13 350w

THOMAS, EDWARD. Icknield way. il *$2.75 Dutton

The author gives an account of a ten days' tramp thru rural England. "One of the most interesting English roads . . . is the Icknield way. Two roads claim the name: one, greatly of Roman origin running north and south through Worcestershire and Warwickshire; the other following the windings of the chalk hills through East Anglia and along the Chilterns—to the Downs and Wessex. It is the latter road which is regarded as 'canonical,' and along which we journey, fortunate in route and guide. The story of the pilgrimage is prefaced by two fascinating chapters: one, relating to English roads and footpaths, and the other giving the story, as related in history, myth and tradition of the Icknield way." (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Thomas has an acute and cultivated mind and an attractive style, and makes many happy observations on the road. Mr. Collins's pictures give an excellent idea of the broad expanses of country beneath the wall of the Downs."

+ Ath 1913,1:454 Ap 26 700w

"Mr. Thomas is one of those rare travellers who having eyes see, and having ears hear, and the power of making his readers see the lovely country through which the Icknield way runs."

+ Boston Transcript p20 Jl 2 '13 380w

"What one likes best about Mr. Edward Thomas's book for pedestrians is its admirable restraint, its freedom from 'gush,' its scholar's preference for the under-statement to the over-statement."

+ Dial 55:25 Jl 1 '13 400w

"A painstaking and leisurely study of one of England's oldest roads, with a little too much pedestrianism, perhaps, but relieved by a fresh and vigorous choice of words."

+ Ind 75:452 Ag 21 '13 50w

"Borrow could make this sort of thing extraordinarily fascinating but Mr. Thomas, although a confessed Borrowian, is by no means a Borrow."

— Nation 97:215 S 4 '13 200w

"Rather spoiled as an open air book by the topographical details [the author] enters into, and as an antiquarian investigation by the multitude of personal digressions and rhapsodies."

THOMAS, EDWARD—Continued.
sodies and the reluctance to decide on the evidence. It will be hard reading for either class of readers that it will attract."

— N Y Sun p3 My 31 '13 230w

"A very honest, useful, and pleasant volume. Mr. Thomas constructs it in a scholarly, temperate, workmanlike fashion, with just that added touch of personality and imagination which makes it a book instead of a mere compilation of the stipulated number of thousand words."

+ Spec 110:1064 Je 21 '13 630w

THOMAS, ROWLAND. Fatima. il *$1.35 (2c)
11 Little 13-20207

A fanciful romance of the Nile valley. Fatima, who was "the most beautiful creature, and quite, quite the cleverest creature that ever was" is married to Ali the fool. She dreams dreams, of a world in which her beauty and her cleverness would be given their due, but in time learns to see the advantages in having a simple husband; for a clever man would be uncomfortable to live with, a wise man too set in his own ways, a sentimental man too unstable, a handsome man would grow unhandsome, while a fool is "in all things a very perfect husband, and a great comfort to have in the house."

"Let it be said at once that 'Fatima,' the latest production of Rowland Thomas, is a pure joy, a gem of the first water. It is a story written with the brush of a poster artist against a background of desert sands and crumbling pyramids. It is an act out of a farce comedy, and it is at the same time a parable on the wisdom of wives, a portable monograph on matrimony." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 38:314 N '13 430w

"A good story."

+ — Ind 76:39 O 2 '13 100w

"The story is fanciful, unlike the average run of fiction, and related with a quiet drollery often very amusing."

+ N Y Times 18:485 S 21 '13 230w

THOMAS, WILLIAM S. Trails and tramps in Alaska and Newfoundland. il *$2 Putnam
13-10846

The author is one of those hunters with the camera who bring home collections of films and plates as trophies of the chase. It is of such hunting adventures that he writes. "With the record wayfarings in Alaska and Newfoundland, and papers on a rabbit hunt with ferrets, a coon hunt, the charms of wood life in the springtime and an essay pleading in general terms for better legislative protection for bird life, it will be seen that Mr. Thomas's book does not suffer from lack of topical variety." (N Y Sun)

+ A L A Bkl 10:110 N '13

+ — Ath 1913:1:695 Je 28 30w

"It is an entertaining volume about little-traveled regions."

+ Ind 74:1306 Je 5 '13 30w

"A really delightful addition to outdoor literature."

+ Nation 97:127 Ag 7 '13 180w

"William S. Thomas spins a lively yarn excellently supplemented with a series of nearly 150 illustrations reproduced from original photographs. The volume is, however, much more than the mere diary of a huntsman; there is a good deal of honest observation and reporting of facts of interest and value concerning the present day Alaska and its people, and a modest indulgence of a bent for open air philosophizing."

+ N Y Sun p9 My 10 '13 1450w

N Y Times 18:344 Je 8 '13 70w

THOMPSON, CARL WILLIAM, and WARBER, GUSTAV PAUL. Social and economic survey of a rural township in southern Minnesota. (Studies in economics, no. 1) il pa $1 Univ. of Minn. 13-10945

"This is a highly intensive study of a rural township. The data have mostly been gathered first hand from 136 families in a territory of 36 square miles. The facts gathered corroborate a number of prevalent beliefs." (J Pol Econ) "On the purely economic side appears the prosperity so prevalent in the Mississippi valley. The tendencies of farm organization have been those even more widely known in much of Europe as well as America—especially a decline in grain raising and an increase both in the number of cattle, chiefly of milch-cows, and their value per head. The roads are not exceptionally bad; there are successful farmers' creameries and elevators, and mutual insurance; the credit situation is satisfactory. But the intellectual life is palpably deficient." (Am Econ R)

"The Minnesota survey appears to have been well planned and intelligently carried out, though the report suffers from crudeness in the use of English." A. P. Winston.

+ — Am Econ R 3:910 D '13 520w

J Pol Econ 21:782 O '13 240w

THOMPSON, FRANCIS. Works. 3v v 1-2, *$3.50; v 3, *$2 Scribner (Eng ed 13-35659)

Two volumes of poems and one of prose make up this edition of Francis Thompson's work. The essay on Shelley is reprinted in the third volume, together with Health and holiness; Paganism old and new; Form and formalism; essays on Crashaw, Milton, Robert Louis Stevenson, and other papers.

"For the small library 'Selected poems,' and the essay, 'Shelley,' would be sufficient."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:29 S '13

"This excellent edition, which includes three portraits, is essential to lovers of the poet, because it gives some new and admirable pieces recently published."

+ Ath 1913:1:650 Je 14 50w

"The strength and rarity of his genius lie in his power of combining with a high sense of art a great deal of human passion. He was not too much excited by life to care about art. He constructed verse instead of merely collecting the over flow of his feelings."

+ + Ath 1913:1:666 Je 21 1350w

"This inadequate notice gives but the slightest indication of the riches in these three volumes of poetry and prose, which are distinctly the work of a genius, who while he will never grow popular, will as time goes, be more widely accepted as one of the great poets of the latter half of the nineteenth century." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p24 S 17 '13 950w

"Mr. Meynell is to be thanked for executing so well a task of piety."

+ Nation 97:214 S 4 '13 270w

"Technical excellence, melody, apt phrasing, brave imagery—why point these out? The poems exist—that is the main thing, and there is nothing for the critic to do but to read and to give thanks." Joyce Kilmer.

+ + N Y Times 18:405 JI 20 '13 1050w

"No one can read these high thoughts clad in lovely words without the honest conviction that Thompson was a poet of genius, and that in our time has been produced work that has an assured place among the richest treasures of English letters."

+ N Y Times 18:671 N 30 '13 360w

+ R of Rs 48:508 O '13 700w

"The real answer to critics who object that Thompson loses himself in 'conceits' is that Thompson is spontaneously a singer. Undoubtedly we hear in his song echoes of Wordsworth and of Crashaw. So do we hear in Shakespeare the mighty line of Marlowe; in Beethoven the progressions of Haydn and Mozart. Francis Thompson sings in his proper voice. Inspiration makes of his instrument the 'swift messenger of thought.'"

+ + Sat R 115:811 Je 28 '13 1350w

"It is not easy to feel entirely satisfied that Thompson's lack of originality in style is always compensated by the strength of his feeling, for there is occasionally a suggestion of straining and affectation in his mysticism."

+ - Spec 110:1021 Je 14 '13 250w

"The thought and the richly-inventive vocabulary make much of Thompson's poetry appeal to the mind and ring to the ear like the splendid music of that great church of which he was so fervent and idealistic a son."

+ + Springfield Republican p5 Ag 14 '13 2050w

THOMPSON, HAROLD STUART. Sub-alpine plants. il *$3 Dutton

"Mr. Thompson makes the sub-Alpine region begin where the vine is no longer cultivated and end at 5,000 feet. There are, of course, few purely sub-alpine species." (Spec) "The introductory part of the book consists of six chapters containing much information with regard to the habitats, the collection, and the preservation of alpine plants. There are also some very useful hints on the cultivation of alpine, an interesting account of some of the alpine gardens recently established in Switzerland, and a comparison of the Swiss and British floras." (Nature)

"An excellent book."

+ Ath 1912,2:123 Ag 3 100w

"The usefulness of the book to the amateur botanist is not impaired by the fact that the sequence of plant families used is one that has had no scientific sanction for twenty years, but it would have been desirable to adopt the newer method. While the book is obviously not for professional botanists, the author's amateur constituency has the right to expect correctness of statement. However, the general excellence of the work as a handbook of the sub-alpine region of Switzerland, together with the beautifully colored plates, which help materially in determining the most critical species, more than atones for minor shortcomings."

+ - Nation 95:571 D 12 '12 480w

"Both the descriptions and the notes concerning the habitats of the plants are good."

+ Nature 89:655 Ag 29 '12 150w

+ N Y Times 17:541 S 29 '12 30w

"His knowledge of botany is sound. It is a great misfortune that he has not arranged his figures systematically. The perfect handbook for the alpine English tourist still remains to be compiled."

+ - Spec 109:sup480 O 5 '12 280w

THOMPSON, SLASON, ed. Railway library, 1911. 3d ser 50c Bureau of railway news and statistics, Chicago

"This third series of the 'Railway library,' following the general scheme of its predecessors, is a collection of papers and addresses relating to railways and published mainly within the year. This volume deals for the most part with the questions of government ownership and of present railway efficiency. The report of the Securities commission is included, as is Professor Swain's report on the valuation of the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. The first report of the Interstate commerce commission is reproduced. Two papers are retrospective of early conditions of railway-building in Great Britain and the United States."—J Pol Econ

"Mr. Slason Thompson, the railway statistician, has done a public service in compiling this volume. The very low price at which the book is issued and the number of valuable papers which it contains should secure for it a wide circulation."

+ Engin N 68:934 N 14 '12 300w

J Pol Econ 21:96 Ja '13 100w

THOMPSON, VANCE, ed. Life of Ethelbert Nevin, from his letters and his wife's memories. il *$2.75 (5c) Boston music co. 13-24140

A beautiful book commemorating the short life of this American composer, who was born in 1862 and died in 1901. It is both a personal record and an account of Nevin's work and professional career. Many of his letters, to his friends, his mother, his wife, and to his little son and daughter, are given as part of the text.

"Mr. Thompson has performed his task with good taste and a sympathy that never becomes mawkish. He relates the history of the various Nevin compositions in a way that will interest musicians, yet not too technically for the general reader. To a great extent the letters are left to tell their own story, and a very human and attractive story it is."

+ N Y Times 18:718 D 7 '13 1000w

THOMSON, GILBERT. Modern sanitary engineering. Pt 1. House drainage. (Glasgow textbooks of civil engineering) *$3 Van Nostrand

"The book deals exclusively with the problem of house drainage and discusses in detail the general features governing each individual problem." (Engin Rec) Some of the chapters are: Site and surroundings of the house, General principles of drainage design, Gradient of drains, Flushing cisterns and pipes, Designing a system of drainage, Sanitary inspections, and Sewage disposal for isolated houses.

"The author covers his subject well, and is fairly up to date. The book is worthy of a place in the libraries of those who have to deal with the important problem of house drainage."

+ Engin Rec 67:452 Ap 19 '13 180w

"The facts are well put, clearly expressed and concisely dealt with in a handy, well-illustrated volume."

+ Nature 90:485 Ja 2 '13 70w

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR, and GEDDES, PATRICK. Problems of sex. (New tracts for the times) *50c Moffat 12-40676

This is the third number in a series of booklets published under the auspices of the National council of public morals in London with the title "New tracts for the times." The authors are biologists and they approach the subject from the biological viewpoint. "In simple, direct language they set forth some of the biological, social and psychological aspects of sex evolution and their significance in modern life." (Ind)

A L A Bkl 9:120 N '12

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 29 '13 100w

"It is worth much to have this candid and salutary presentation, for a just and fearless comprehension of these vital facts and relationships of sex must lie at the basis of any effective movement toward race regeneration."

+ Ind 73:441 Ag 22 '12 280w

"The little book is of universal interest, and deserves wide attention. The chapters on adolescence are especially to be commended. They are sane, temperate, wholesome, and remarkable for their insistence upon the spiritual uplift that you, with proper guidance, may receive at that time."

+ N Y Times 17:464 Ag 25 '12 200w

THORBURN, THOMAS JAMES. Jesus the Christ: historical or mythical? *$2.50 Scribner (Eng ed A13-515)

"An attempt to trace the development of the disbelief in the historical Jesus from Strauss and Bauer to Mr. J. M. Robertson, Prof. W. B. Smith, and particularly Prof. Drews, to whose 'Die Christusmythe' this book is a reply."—Ath

Ath 1912,2:725 D 14 30w

Bib World 41:214 Mr '13 270w

THORBURN, THOMAS JAMES—Continued.

"The author is able, careful, and fair."
 + Boston Transcript p24 Ap 16 '13 550w
 + Ind 74:652 Mr 20 '13 450w

"This reply is to be commended as an impersonal, candid, and painstaking examination of the evidence upon which Drews builds his theory, especially of the mythological elements which Robertson professes to find in the gospels."

+ Nation 96:212 F 27 '13 300w
 Outlook 103:373 F 15 '13 150w

THORKELSON, HALSTEN JOSEPH BERFORD. Air compression and transmission. il $2 McGraw 13-8970

The book is the outcome of a number of years of class work with college students. "The fifteen chapters into which the book is divided include more or less complete discussions of such topics as fundamental definitions, the thermodynamics of air compression and expansion, air at pressures below the atmosphere and at low pressures above the atmosphere, piston compressors, the several efficiencies of air compressors, multi-stage, turbo and hydraulic compressors, the effects of altitude, air measurement and transmission, and the selection and care of compressors. Three appendices present tables of common and hyperbolic logarithms and a brief discussion of hygrometry." (Engin N)

"The treatment of some of the subjects is excellent and of others is entirely inadequate. The discussions of volumetric efficiency and efficiency of compression, of multi-stage compression and much of the discussion of the thermodynamics of air are well presented; the treatment of the chapters devoted to valves and valve-gears, types of compressors, governors and unloading devices, and on air transmission, reheating, after-cooling, etc., leave much to be desired." C. R. Richards.

+ Engin N 70:330 Ag 14 '13 370w

"The book undoubtedly serves its purpose quite satisfactorily in the author's own classes, when it is in all probability supplemented by lectures, but taken by itself it is difficult to properly state its function."

+ Engin Rec 68:83 Jl 19 '13 300w

THOROLD, ALGAR LABOUCHERE. Life of Henry Labouchere. il $4.50 Putnam 13-25364

"Mr. Thorold is a nephew of the dead journalist and lived in intimate relation with him for the last ten years of his life. He has had access to Labouchere's correspondence with Gladstone, Lord Morley, Sir William Harcourt, Parnell, Lord Randolph Churchill, Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman, and King Edward VII. Labouchere played an important rôle in the political and social life of his time, his activities in connection with the Parnell commission being of particular interest."—N Y Times

"As a contribution to the history of our times the book will have its uses. Its value, however, is materially depreciated by the omission of many letters alluded to without which a good deal of the correspondence remains more or less in cipher. It is unfortunate that publishers ordain, or the public expects, that regulation biographies should contain 500 pages and weigh not less than 3 lb. A better Index would have improved it, and the proofs should have been read by some one familiar with the names of the people who move to and fro on the stage of the story."

+ Ath 1913,2:409 O 18 3300w

"It would be unjust to Mr. Thorold's book to leave the impression that its interest is limited to politics." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 25 '13 300w

"This is a book of varied and sustained interest, but somehow fails to be completely satisfying. The work is full and conscientious, though occasionally marred by carelessness; it is quite without hero-worship or family pride;

but it is a thing of sections and glances rather than a consistent and unified whole. But so, too, was Labouchere."

+ Nation 97:564 D 11 '13 1000w

N Y Times 18:620 N 9 '13 200w

"A most acceptable 'Life.'"

+ N Y Times 18:733 D 14 '13 1100w

"It is with no want of appreciation of Mr. Thorold's care and skill in arranging his materials, or of his humorous and sensible comments, that we pronounce the most valuable parts of this volume to be the correspondence between Mr. Labouchere and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain on the Home rule bill in 1886."

+ Sat R 116:557 N 1 '13 1550w

"The greatest compliment which the public can pay to an author is to read his books. It cannot be doubted that this compliment will be paid to Mr. Thorold. Even making due allowance for the apocryphal nature of some of the reminiscences recorded by Mr. Thorold, the life of a man so many-sided as Henry Labouchere affords every element for the achievement of ephemeral biographical fame." C.

+ Spec 111:716 N 1 '13 2000w

THORPE, SIR THOMAS EDWARD. Seine from Havre to Paris. il $4 Macmillan A13-1988

The yachting trip described in this book "was a leisurely one, forty days being consumed in the 230-mile run up the deep, winding river from the ocean to the final anchorage near the Suresnes bridge, almost beneath the shade of the trees in the Bois de Boulogne. Interspersed with amusing personal experiences are historical reminiscences of the famous towns, cathedrals, and other noteworthy places along the river, many of which figure prominently in the early history of France."—N Y Times

"There have been many books on boating on the Seine, and some of the older are more interesting than the present, which is a little overloaded with historical matter. In his illustrations the author has been fortunate."

+ Ath 1913,2:36 Jl 12 230w

"Sir Edward's description of the charming towns and villages, castles and abbeys, by which the Seine flows, is sympathetic and readable."

+ Nation 97:464 N 13 '13 220w

"The book bears upon it the stamp of a labour of love; to any reader who is attached to France, attracted by river navigation, or even generally interested in the picturesque in scenery or architecture, it will make exquisitely pleasant reading."

+ Nature 92:234 O 23 '13 250w

"The pen-and-ink sketches by Olive Branson add to the attractiveness of the volume."

+ N Y Times 18:635 N 16 '13 270w

"An excellent guide-book to the country through which the river flows."

+ Spec 111:106 Jl 19 '13 200w

THORPE, SIR THOMAS EDWARD, and others.

Dictionary of applied chemistry; rev. ed. v 1-4 il ea $13.50 Longmans 12-9914

A revised edition of a standard work, originally published in three volumes, now appearing in five. "The new edition is both revised and enlarged, and the five volumes . . . constitute, as the editor says, practically a new book. The scope of the work has also been extended so as to include articles on important topics that are not strictly those of applied chemistry." (Nature)

+ A L A Bkl 10:84 O '13 (Review of v 1-4)

"The student will find all the latest information available clearly set out with much detail. A word of praise is due to the general excellence of production, for the clearness both of type and diagrams leaves nothing to be desired."

+ Ath 1912,1:171 Ja 20 120w (Review of v 1)

"It is a matter of regret that more pains have not been taken in some contributions to describe the most recent methods of chemical manufacture instead of wasting valuable space on obsolete historical plant. A judicious suppression of irrelevant matter might have reduced the size and price of the volumes."

+ — Ath 1912,2:787 D 28 250w (Review of v 2 and 3)

"This volume is an important addition to the chemist's bookshelves, and maintains the high standard of excellence set up in previous issues, the needs of both the student and the industrial chemist being well catered for."

+ — Ath 1913,1:627 Je 7 130w (Review of v 4)

+ Nature 89:162 Ag 18 '12 900w (Review of v 1)

"There are few deficiencies apparent on first acquaintance with the dictionary, and in the presence of so much that is admirable, hypercriticism may be deprecated. The inequality in length of the various articles is probably one of the most difficult questions which come before the editor in relation to such a work as this." W. A. T.

+ — Nature 91:6 Mr 6 '13 650w (Review of v 2 and 3)

"After reading those subjects in which I myself am more particularly interested, I have formed the opinion that the new edition of the dictionary will supplant the old one, not merely because it brings the subject-matter up-to-date, but also because it is a higher-class production." J. W. Mellor.

+ — Nature 91:604 Ag 14 '13 550w (Review of v 4)

THROOP, LUCY ABBOT. Furnishing the home of good taste. il *$2 (4½c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-343

The great periods of furniture making are described, not from the standpoint of the collector, but from that of the home maker. "The author begins with a discussion of the first principles in interior decoration and makes a brief, concise, and illuminating survey of the distinguishing features of the leading historic periods of art which have been evolved from Egypt and Greece. In this way the reader is given a standard of good taste. He is then shown how to apply this standard to modern products and how to adapt the principles of the historic periods to present-day needs." (N Y Times)

+ A L A Bkl 9:338 Ap '13

"The book will supply a distinct need among those who would like to know the whys and wherefores of good taste and who seek to base their choice of walls, furniture, and room decorations upon real knowledge."

+ N Y Times 18:130 Mr 9 '13 170w

THURSTON, ERNEST TEMPLE. Open window. il *$1.35 (3½c) Appleton 13-13537

"The open window" contains somewhat sentimental rhapsodies on country delights woven into a form that is half calendar and half story. The narrative, which is one of simple pathos, moves chronologically through the months of spring and summer into the days of autumn." (Ath) "It consists of the journal, or rather intermittent note-book, of an elderly clergyman who has recently been transferred from an East end parsonage to a country rectory, together with his wife and daughter." (Sat R)

"It will have a very limited appeal."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:37 S '13

+ Ath 1913,1:489 My 3 50w

"The style of the book is not flawless. But there is a certain quiet charm about the book. It rings true and one learns a good deal about English bird-life. It is a book for a sleepy summer Sunday afternoon, to nod over. It has occasional touches of exceedingly quiet British humor, but most wholesome and pleasing."

+ — Boston Transcript p18 Jl 23 '13 250w

Nation 97:311 O 2 '13 250w

"Abounds in happy philosophy, delicate touches of sentiment and descriptions of nature."

+ N Y Sun p12 Je 14 '13 30w

"The plot of this book, if plot it can be called, is of the simplest and slenderest, but through it all there breathes the delicate, wistful fragrance of the old-fashioned flowers and of lives old-fashioned perhaps as lavender, but fully as strong and sweet. We are glad to know [the vicar] and to count him among the many friends to be made in books. Mr. Thurston has a right to feel proud of his creation. A word must be said for the drawings by Charles Robinson, which harmonize so admirably with the text. They are a pleasure in themselves, apart from the fact that they really illustrate the book—an occurrence all too unusual." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 18:453 Ag 31 '13 700w

"The volume is illustrated throughout by a series of Mr. Charles Robinson's delicate drawings in black-and-white, which succeed better in representing birds than in presenting parsons or other people. Wherever Mr. Robinson's imagination has got the better of Mr. Temple Thurston's observations, the result is delightful; but he has not succeeded in effecting this very often, and on the whole we are not surprised."

+ — Sat R 115:589 My 10 '13 650w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Jl 24 '13 170w

THURSTON, ERNEST TEMPLE. Richard Furlong. il *$1.35 (1½c) Appleton 13-20753

A story of the world-old fight of immortal genius against starvation and discouragement and failure. Richard Furlong, a country lad, with the audacious courage of youth, comes up to London, with a bundle of sketches under his arm, twelve pounds in his pocket. The story that follows is one of his upstrivings toward success; it is also the story of the little cockney girl who doesn't begin to understand his art or his aspirations, but who loves him and is willing to give all that she has to further his advancement. The story is a continuation of that begun in "The antagonists."

"The characters stand out clearly and freshly, some of them not without reminiscence of Dickens."

+ — Ath 1913,2:310 S 27 400w

"The best and most encouraging thing about the narrative of Richard Furlong, is the simple and direct desire on the part of the author to tell the truth about his characters."

+ N Y Times 18:614 N 9 '13 1200w

Sat R 116:401 S 27 '13 60w

THURSTON, IDA TREADWELL (MARION THORNE, pseud.). Scout master of Troop 5. il *$1 Revell 12-25842

"This is avowedly a story of admiration for the Boy scout movement. There are many more like it. . . . The author has thoroughly absorbed the 'manual' of the official organization, and there are several heroes to deal with: one a newsboy, the other a son of some rich man, and two brothers of different types, besides the scout master who solves stupendous 'boy' problems in wonderful ways."—Lit D

"Touches on many things from slums to camps, in a most readable manner." Hildergarde Hawthorne

+ Bookm 36:580 Ja '13 30w

"If there is one fault in the book, it is that the 'movement' accomplishes too much reformation in its 288 pages. But despite Mrs. Thurston's over-zealousness, there is a refreshing manliness in the writing, an understanding of boy condition and temperament."

+ — Lit D 45:1081 D 7 '12 170w

+ — Nation 95:568 D 12 '12 20w

THWING, CHARLES FRANKLIN, and THWING, MRS. CARRIE FRANCES (BUTLER). The family: an historical and social study; rev. and enl. ed. *$1.60 (2½c) Lothrop 13-2039

A revised and enlarged edition of a standard work published first in 1886. The important changes made for this edition consist of: the enlargement of Chapter 3 on "The family in the first Christian centuries"; the revision of chapter 11 on "The family destroyed," in order to include the more recent facts and statistics respecting the decline of the family; the inclusion of a new chapter on "The family under a socialized society." The bibliography appended to the first edition is reprinted together with a supplementary list containing the best recent references.

"I have called attention to the deficiencies in the revision because they indicate pretty important defect in what is otherwise a very valuable volume. It is to be regretted that the author did not see his way clear really to rewrite the book. As it stands, it is a marked improvement over the older editions, and deserves a wide audience." Carl Kelsey.

+ — Ann Am Acad 47:313 My '13 380w

"The book has an excellent bibliography, but the index might well be enlarged."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 320w

"Tested by several years of use, the soundness and permanency of its historical parts in particular are generally accepted."

+ Dial 54:349 Ap 16 '13 100w

"It is the work of careful thinkers, and the result of many years of observation, study and teaching. That is all the recommendation it needs."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 13 '13 450w

"Thwing's 'The family' has been for a generation so exclusively the one book combining for the general reader historical and social data, scholarly and practical purpose, that this revised and enlarged edition renders a public service." Graham Taylor.

+ Survey 30:68 Ap 12 '13 100w

TILBY, A. WYATT. Australasia, 1688-1911. *$1.50 (1c) Houghton (Eng ed 13-965)

Volume five in the "English people overseas." Based upon original materials rescued from old newspaper files, forgotten pamphlets, and records of travelers the narrative follows the history and circumstances attending the growth and national development of England's colonies in Australia and New Zealand, with emphasis upon the divergence from the parent people.

"The book is written with vigour, and the sardonic comments in the footnotes attract attention."

+ Ath 1912,2:727 D 14 120w

TILLSON, GEORGE WILLIAM. Street pavements and paving materials. 2d ed il *$4 Wiley 12-23083

This volume is a manual of city pavements, dealing with the methods and materials of their construction. "Two new chapters appear: 'Concrete pavements' and 'The protection of pavements.' Of the 30 pages on concrete pavements over half are occupied by a reprint of the American society of civil engineers' specifications for Portland cement and much of what is left consists of extracts from the specifications and trade circulars of promoters of proprietary concrete pavements. The chapter (28 pages) on protecting pavements, while also composed largely of reprinted matter, is a valuable addition to the book. The new edition contains 119 pages more than did the first one, including the space occupied by 37 additional illustrations." (Engin N)

+ A L A Bkl 9:355 Ap '13

"As to the thoroughness of revision, the author seems to have been uncommonly faithful, particularly in major particulars."

+ Engin N 69:138 Ja 16 '13 250w

TIMBIE, WILLIAM HENRY. Essentials of electricity. il *$1.25 Wiley 13-1100

"An elementary textbook of applied electricity suitable for the use of wiremen, electric artisans and all who desire to acquaint themselves with the fundamental principles of electricity without the use of mathematics beyond simple arithmetic. The book is divided into nine chapters on the following subjects: Ohm's law, simple electric circuits, combinations of series and parallel systems, electric power, wire and wiring systems, generators and motors, locating and correcting 'troubles,' batteries, wiring diagrams. A number of easy numerical problems for solution are scattered throughout the work."—Elec World

"A good book for the industrial student and workman."

+ A L A Bkl 9:447 Je '13

Elec World 61:844 Ap 19 '13 100w

"The ideas are clear and unmistakable; their presentation is perhaps the nearest approach that a technical work can have to imaginative writing. On account of these characteristics, the book ought admirably to suit its intended readers—aspiring workmen in the electrical industries. There are a few peculiarities in the inclusion of subjects, and a number of very evident omissions."

+ — Engin N 70:139 Jl 17 '13 570w

"The work contains much of value to the electrical workman and should likewise prove of interest to the non-electrical engineer."

+ Engin Rec 67:703 Je 21 '13 180w

"The student who faithfully calculates all the problems included in the various chapters will have a good working knowledge of elementary electricity."

+ Indust Engin 13:226 My '13 200w

TIMIRJAZEV, KLEMENT ARKADIJEVIC. Life of the plant; tr. by Anna Chéréméteff. *$2.50 Longmans Agr12-1436

A translation from the seventh Russian edition of a work which appeared first in 1878. "The book is neither a text-book nor a special treatise, but a simple account of the more fundamental life processes of the plant told in a way calculated to make them interesting if not 'popular.' . . . After a particularly good discussion of the relation of botanical science to society, one chapter each is devoted to the cell, the seed, the root, the leaf, the stem, growth, the flower, plants and animals and the origin of organic form. This latter chapter is distinctly pro-Darwin." (Science)

"These lectures are likely to be successful also in English, for the rendering is clear and easy to read, and the exposition of the author himself is admirably simple and lucid. Written several years ago, his book is not up to date in some respects, but it is none the worse for that so far as the ordinary reader is concerned."

+ Ath 1912,1:474 Ap 27 80w

"As the ripe thought of an exceptional man, the book may be read by the intelligent farmer with much profit."

+ Nation 95:438 N 7 '12 130w

"The book will be of great service to teachers, in showing, for instance, what a lot can be made of relatively simple experiments; in showing, too, how a certain restraint and severity in the process of intellectual construction leads in the end to a very vivid picture of the living plant. In one respect we confess our disappointment that Prof. Timiriazoff should have seen fit to lend the weight of his authority to the side of the mechanistic biologists, and should have thought it necessary to refer to 'Neovitalism' as a 'morbid outgrowth.'"

+ — Nature 89:394 Je 20 '12 470w

"For the specialist the translation has been too long delayed, and even for the general reader there are many views which should be modified in order to give as accurate as possible a notion of what the plant really does. On the other hand, it must be confessed that Professor Timiriazeff has presented the subject in such an attractive form that its very readability is a strong point in favor of the book." G. T. M.

— + Science ns36:560 O 25 '12 450w

TINAYRE, MME. MARCELLE. Madeleine at her mirror, auth. tr. by Winifred Stephens. *$1.25 Lane 13-19902

"This 'is not a novel,' the author explains, 'but a collection of impressions, of dreams, and of memories, in which fiction mingles with fact.' . . . The narrator is a well-to-do widow of thirty-five, the mother of two children, and the possessor of town and country houses. Parisian fashions, entertaining, the importunities of lovers, the splendor of spring and autumn in the country, foreign politics, apartment-hunting for relatives, together with a slight concern over advancing age [are] a few of the topics chosen."—Nation

+ Ath 1913:2:253 S 13 50w

"An altogether satisfactory volume, the charm of which lingers behind it like an elusive perfume." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 38:313 N '13 200w

"Mme. Tinayre contrives, seemingly through sheer artlessness, to create scenes which are almost faultless in technique."

+ Nation 97:336 O 9 '13 220w

"The book is excellently rendered in this authorized translation."

+ N Y Times 18:684 N 30 '13 650w

"The sketches are not without delicacy, but rarely penetrate below the surface."

+ — Spec 111:875 N 22 '13 20w

TIPPING, H. AVRAY, ed. English homes of the early renaissance. il *$15 Scribner

This "is one of those fully illustrated folios reprinted from Country life. Dwellings built about the year 1600 or earlier are the theme. Few of these, of course, show Renaissance features in any proper sense of the word. They are in the main excellent survivals of the charming Tudor style, and many have kept their original fittings. Perhaps the most remarkable are Breccles Hall, Burford Priory, the Charterhouse, Cobham Hall. We may mention as well, besides Owpen Manor and Stoneyhurst College, those remarkable half-timbered structures Broughton Hall and Hall i' th' Wood, near Bolton." (Nation) There are nearly three hundred illustrations of houses and their gardens.

"It would take a page to give an adequate idea of the richness of material here collected. Taken in connection with the three volumes previously published and the three volumes, 'Gardens old and new' (all with photographs by Charles Latham) it completes a survey of the finest homes of England."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 300w

"To gain a clear insight into the style known as early Renaissance, a study of all of the forty-three places dealt with in this volume is essential. And the reader will be well repaid; for, added to the wealth of architectural lore here offered, are interesting bits from the life-stories of the notable men and women who lived within these walls and an abundance of those curious village traditions with which all history is intimately connected."

+ Dial 54:422 My 16 '13 400w

"The text appeals to such as value the sentiment and picturesqueness of English country life. The abundant plates of large scale will be suggestive to architects and decorators."

+ Nation 96:243 Mr 6 '13 130w

"A very good idea is conveyed of the nature and characteristics of the country homes built in England in the hundred years that ended with the outbreak of the civil war in 1642."

+ N Y Times 18:116 Mr 2 '13 80w

TOLMAN, WILLIAM HOWE, and GUTHRIE, ADELAIDE WOOD. Hygiene for the worker; ed. by C. Ward Crampton. (Crampton's hygiene ser.) il *50c (1c) Am. bk. 12-24602

This book which is the second volume of a two-book elementary school series is especially designed for industrial high school classes or for continuation and night schools. There are chapters on: Applying for a position; Preparing for the day's work; Suitable clothing; Alcohol and tobacco; Hygiene of the workroom; Fatigue; After hours; Occupational dangers; Seasonal hygiene; Tuberculosis.

"Sensible and simply written little work."

+ A L A Bkl 9:333 Ap '13 *

"It should be of material benefit to workers young and old."

+ Cath World 98:118 O '13 60w

"It contains much useful information both as to the regulation of normal life and also as to how to act in an emergency. It is easy to read and is well illustrated. In our opinion too much stress is laid on what the worker should expect from his employer and too little on what an employer should expect from his employee."

+ — Elec World 61:948 My 3 '13 130w

"There are here combined in a single small, attractive, readable and readily understandable volume a mass of helpful instruction and suggestions. Employers would do well to distribute the book by the thousand among their employees young and old. The return would be manifold through increased efficiency of employees, besides which a public service would be rendered by contributing to the great health educational movement of the day."

+ Engin N 68:1120 D 12 '13 130w

"Superintendents of large plants could well afford to place this book in the hands of all their employees."

+ Engin Rec 67:222 F 22 '13 100w

"It will be useful in schools and for home reading."

+ Ind 75:344 Ag 7 '13 100w

"This little volume is of distinct value to the young man or woman just beginning his or her life work."

+ Indust Engin 13:128 Mr '13 120w

J Pol Econ 21:678 Jl '13 80w

+ Lit D 46:658 Mr 22 '13 180w

"The book is sensible and clear."

+ Outlook 102:866 D 21 '12 80w

"The presentation is interesting and the information seems to be in general accurate, although some rather dogmatic statements are found." G: L. Meylan.

+ — School R 21:502 S '13 220w

"The book seeks to show the worker what he has a right to demand, and to give him a standard by which he can judge of the conditions in his place of work. This book is a very valuable addition to the literature on hygiene, which so far has had nothing of a popular nature devoted to the hygiene of occupation." Alice Hamilton, M. D.

+ Survey 29:481 Ja 11 '13 200w

TOLMAN, WILLIAM HOWE, and KENDALL, LEONARD BULLOCK. Safety: methods for preventing occupational and other accidents and diseases. il *$3 (3c) Harper 13-13981

This "is a handbook of practical information for everyone interested in industry. It shows how big business can be good business, in surrounding the workers with the adequate safeguards to protect them at work and in promoting the essentials of shop hygiene . . . The book proves the author's contention that 50 per cent of industrial accidents are preventable." (Introduction) The book is divided into four parts: General conditions; Danger zones; Industrial hygiene; Social welfare.

TOLMAN, W: H., and KENDALL, L. B.

—Continued.

"The only comprehensive work written in English. Of interest to managers, employees, students and those of the public who are working for the promotion of the general welfare."

+ A L A Bkl 10:111 N '13

"The data will be found of much value to companies planning additional safety measures and welfare work; with all their far-reaching influence for good. The illustrations lend much of interest to the work and the very complete index adds to its usefulness."

+ Elec World 62:759 O 11 '13 200w

"The chief criticism of the book is that of inferior classification and arrangement of its contents. The book as a whole, while of much interest and value, leaves the reader with a well defined sense of disappointment—a feeling that as the acknowledged leader of the movement for industrial safety in this country, preparing the first comprehensive work on the subject in the English language, Mr. Tolman has scarcely made the most of his opportunity." R. R. Potter.

+ — Engin N 70:790 O 16 '13 1050w

"Were it more largely used and supported, and this book more widely read, there would be much less trouble over the complicated operations of workmen's compensation acts and much more happiness and health for all American people."

+ — Lit D 47:775 O 25 '13 250w

"It is a valuable and interesting book."

+ N Y Sun p5 Je 21 '13 80w

"It is the only comprehensive book on safety that has yet appeared in English."

+ N Y Sun p8 Je 21 '13 50w

N Y Times 18:454 Ag 31 '13 200w

"A book which ought to be in the hands of every one interested in instituting new methods for preventing accidents and disease."

+ Outlook 104:720 Jl 26 '13 200w

+ R of Rs 48:379 S '13 200w

TOMLINSON, EVERETT TITSWORTH. Boy sailors of 1812. (War of 1812 ser.) il $1.25
(1½c) Lothrop 13-17250

A story of Perry's victory of Lake Erie in 1813, made timely by the centennial of the great victory. It is a stirring, patriotic tale based upon the most authentic facts concerning Perry's achievement.

"It is typical Tomlinson stuff, which means that it is essentially readable; and Perry's qualities as man and commander are so emphasized as to make emulation of them the first desire of the young reader." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:319 N '13 70w

"Everett T. Tomlinson has the happy faculty of combining historical facts with fiction in a fashion which is simple, readable and acceptable to young readers."

+ Boston Transcript p24 S 24 '13 350w

"It affords wholesome and informing as well as entrancing reading for young Americans."

+ Ind 76:458 D 4 '13 60w

Reviewed by Joyce Kilmer.

+ N Y Times 18:533 O 12 '13 50w

TOMLINSON, H. M. Sea and the jungle. il $2.50
Dutton A13-1172

"In an easy, off-hand way, the author has given the public, in the pages of his book, a record of such observations as he could make on a tramp steamer going from Swansea, Wales, to the falls of San Antonio, on the Madeira river, two thousand miles up the Amazon and its tributary." (Boston Transcript) "Somewhat in the manner of Mr. Joseph Conrad he tells his story, interweaving as he proceeds the yarns spun on shipboard by one and another of his mates. The voyage into that density of luxuriant tropical growth appears to have been undertaken to ascertain the feasibility of opening a route for freight boats in connection with a new railway line projected by some daring capitalists, and having its location near the boundary line between Brazil and Bolivia." (Dial)

"Lacks an index and table of contents."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:448 Je '13

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 520w

Dial 54:348 Ap 16 '13 270w

Ind 74:1450 Je 26 '13 100w

"Though we could have done without the sea part of his story, interesting though it is, not to have had the jungle part would have been a great loss."

+ — N Y Times 18:161 Mr 23 '13 1250w

"Just the sort of book to read after finishing Mr. Caspar Whitney's 'The flowing road.'"

+ Outlook 103:823 Ap 12 '13 70w

"His account of the voyage and of what he saw in the jungle is a refreshing departure in travel literature."

+ Sat R 115:85 Ja 18 '13 150w

"The author is continually making us think that he might have written a book that would endure, and as often making us feel that he has not."

+ — Spec 110:619 Ap 12 '13 1800w

TOMPKINS, JULIET WILBOR. Ever after. il
$1.20 (2c) Doubleday 13-10540

This is the story of Lucy who had money and of Dana who had none; and they thought—like simple children—that it would make no difference; for Dana had genius and felt that his contribution to the family assets would quite counterbalance his wife's gift of mere wealth. But it did make differences; Dana was generous, while Lucy—she inherited it from her New England grandfather, and couldn't help it—was plain stingy. The working out of their problem makes a pretty comedy that ends happily, as it should.

+ A L A Bkl 10:37 S '13

"There is always a bright sanity and a breezy unexpectedness about this writer's work, frankly produced for the domestic journals as it is, that carry it to a wider audience."

+ Atlan 112:697 N '13 70w

"To an unbiased reader, the author's attitude seems decidedly unfair; it is distinctly over partial to the man." F. T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 38:60 S '13 650w

"The plot is choppy constructed, the characters are mediocre."

— Boston Transcript p18 Jl 23 '13 200w

+ — Nation 97:101 Jl 31 '13 250w

"The description of Boston people and Boston ways is very funny, but the author does not play fair in making her California spendthrift reform and develop sense; he should have been as incorrigible as his wife. The artist colony is fairly interesting, but we do not care much for the musical prodigy."

+ — N Y Sun p4 My 31 '13 150w

"It is a slight little story, but Miss Tompkins's light and skillful touch, her sense of humor and the ease with which she depicts character make the reading of it an enjoyable hour."

+ N Y Times 18:502 S 28 '13 170w

TORDAY, EMIL. Camp and tramp in African wilder. il $3.50 Lippincott A13-2452

"A most entertaining account of seven years spent in various parts of the Congo region. Mr. Torday was in the government service, and also did valuable ethnographical work; here he tells of his travels and his dealings with white men and black and the wild beasts of the country." (Sat R) "Like other Europeans, Mr. Torday despised the Africans when he had his first contact with them; but after he had come to know them well he esteemed and loved them." (N Y Times) Forty-five illustrations and a map complete the volume.

"He appears to have been able to speak many of the native languages; and, although his book does not pretend to be a serious contribution to science, it contains a great many anthropological notes of interest. His admirable photographs of the black people deserve the highest praise."

+ Ath 1913,2:211 F 22 750w

"As a record of travel and experience it is exceedingly entertaining. The chapter in which he gives the fruits of his experience in suggestions to other white men in Africa's hinterland is very valuable."

+ Lit D 46:904 Ap 19 '13 330w

Nation 96:602 Je 12 '13 270w

"Its value is in the exposition it makes of the mental, moral and physical qualities of the native population."

+ N Y Times 18:168 Mr 23 '13 1200w

"All who are interested in Africa, and others too, should read this book; it will set them thinking. There are many most useful wrinkles for the traveller."

+ Sat R 115:338 Mr 15 '13 250w

TORRELLE, ELLEN. Plant and animal children, how they grow. il $1; school ed *50c Heath 12-29441

No better means of presenting to children the physical facts of life could be found than that chosen by the author of this little book. Her aim has been "to make clear the ideas of evolution, heredity, variation, effect of environment, and the evolution of sex, without once mentioning these names." (Preface) It is not at all a book on sex hygiene but would serve as an excellent basis for such instruction.

"The text is scientifically accurate, yet interesting and easy for children to understand, and the illustrations are helpful."

+ A L A Bkl 9:405 My '13

+ Chaut 71:237 Ag 16 '13 130w

"It is wise to approach sex hygiene by way of biology, and the simple reproductive processes of animals and plants can readily lead up to a knowledge of the matter in man, but such a detailed biological approach as presented here is not essential, and the book in the hands of an ordinary teacher must lead to a mere memorizing of unintelligible materials instead of natural inductions from the child's observations." E. R. Downing.

+ El School T 14:187 D '13 400w

"Will be useful in some homes and schools where simple biological reading is wanted as a preliminary to sex-instruction."

+ Ind 75:343 Ag 7 '13 30w

TORREY, BRADFORD. Field-days in California. il $1.50 (3c) Houghton 13-1989

"The essays tell us about the author's first condor and first water-ouzel, his 'exciting forenoon' with a yellow-legged plover, the happy issue of an unsuccessful hunt, a walking tour in the Yosemite, the attractions of a California beach, a visit to the redwood grove near Santa Cruz, and other things well worth reading about in Mr. Torrey's genial fresh-air-and-sunshine style. One of his chapters, of a bookish sort, for a change, enlarges on the pleasures of reading a check-list, and will appeal to the man of books."—Dial

+ A L A Bkl 9:339 Ap '13

"Lovers of nature will appreciate this book, as they have everything its author has written."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 230w

"His friends and admirers will prize the little volume."

+ Dial 54:149 F 16 '13 250w

"It is full of fascinating ornithological incidents told with scientific truthfulness and great charm of expression."

+ Ind 74:1301 Je 5 '13 250w

"One may dip into its pages anywhere and find oneself in leisurely, amiable conversation with a man of gentle spirit, wide intelligence, and keen powers of observation, who is constantly finding fresh springs in life."

+ Lit D 46:1138 My 17 '13 100w

"It is by no means a superfluous addition to Mr. Torrey's work; though inferior to some of his earlier books in firmness of style, it is at the same time clearly superior in vivacity and mellow wisdom."

+ Nation 96:264 Mr 13 '13 650w

N Y Sun p8 F 8 '13 80w

+ N Y Times 18:84 F 16 '13 50w

"It takes a mind of distinction to impart interest to description such as he gives us in this volume, but his love of nature has enabled him to give some of this distinction to his text."

+ R of Rs 47:377 Mr '13 130w

TOWER, CHARLES. Along Germany's river of romance, the Moselle. il $2.75 McBride, Nast & co.

In the series of books devoted to the romantic rivers of various countries, Mr. Tower writes of the Moselle as Germany's river of romance. "Unlike the more famous Rhine, into which the Moselle flows at Coblenz, the river has no heavy barge traffic and no factories to mar its natural beauty. In the spring of the year it reaches the maximum of its beauty. The Moselle has its share of ruins, ancient castellated towers, legends and records of martial deeds, all of which are described." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 38:386 D '13 240w

"Charming and graphic pen pictures." C. E. Hesselgrave.

+ Ind 76:509 D 11 '13 40w

"The book shows a breadth of reading which is exceptional, but the learning does not detract from its brilliancy."

+ Lit D 47:698 O 18 '13 150w

"The volume may doubtless influence more than one tourist in the future to seek out the beauties of the Moselle country."

+ N Y Times 18:635 N 16 '13 250w

+ Outlook 105:328 O 11 '13 70w

TOWER, CHARLES. Germany of to-day. *50c (1c) Holt 13-22521

"This is not so much a criticism of the spirit of modern Germany as a careful account of her constitution, her administration, her commerce, and her arts." (Spec) Contents: Kaiser, Bundesrath, Reichstag, and state-parliaments; The executive, chancellor and bureaucracy, police, law courts; The functions of empire; Between the state and the individual; German education; The organisation of industry; Agricultural Germany; Castes and classes; Intellectual life. The volume is number 72 in the "Home university library."

"In an early chapter Mr. Tower deals with the Executive, the powers of the Chancellor, and police and law courts; and, so far as we have tested him, he is thoroughly accurate, and always interesting. The bibliography is not adequate."

+ Ath 1913,2:109 Ag 2 300w

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 11 '13 180w

Nation 97:486 N 20 '13 40w

"It will give to its readers a sound basis of fact which they will find most useful in endeavouring to appreciate more imaginative works upon the same subject."

+ Spec 111:149 Jl 26 '13 70w

TOWNSEND, CHARLES WENDELL. Sand dunes and salt marshes. il $2 Estes 13-15302

"'Sand dunes and salt marshes' is exactly what its title intimates, namely, an astonishingly detailed and exhaustive description of the flora, fauna, topography and geology of the common sandy seashore. The book seems 'astonishing' because there turns out to be so much of great interest in such an apparently commonplace or barren subject." (Springfield Republican) "Scientific names are relegated to the index, where they appear in parentheses after the more familiar unscientific designations. Illustrations, chiefly from the author's photographs, are supplied to the number of ninety-four." (Dial)

TOWNSEND, CHARLES WENDELL—Cont.

+ A L A Bkl 10:151 D '13

"The book, though distinctly personal and anecdotal in its appeal, should become a handbook for all lovers of the shore and sea. It contains information and food for thought for the botanist, the geologist, the student of bird and animal life." W. P.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '13 380w

"His observations are recorded in a style attractive to general readers and by no means repellent to the specialist."

+ Dial 55:153 S 1 '13 400w

"The whole volume abounds with desirable and intensely interesting information presented with contagious enthusiasm. The photographic illustrations are beautiful, and add much to the charm of the book, but even without them a powerful fascination would be exerted on the reader."

+ Lit D 47:692 O 18 '13 150w

Nation 97:545 D 4 '13 100w

"The work is one which will commend itself to the lover or owner of seaside sand-scapes anywhere, as well as to the amateur or trained geologist and naturalist."

+ Springfield Republican p5 S 11 '13 370w

TRASK, MRS. KATE (NICHOLS) (KATRINA TRASK). In the vanguard. *$1.25 (7½c) Macmillan 13-7114

In a play in three acts Mrs. Trask presents the case for universal peace. From an enemy dying on the battlefield Philip Gordon, a private, who, for valor on the field, has won promotion, learns the essential truth that war is only legalized murder. He throws up his commission, leaves the army, goes home in disgrace to be met with jeers and insults. Two people only, a wise old man and the young girl who loves him, understand, for they see with him the dawning of a new day.

"The characters hardly live and the workmanship is sometimes crude, but the argument is clearly and convincingly presented."

+ A L A Bkl 9:448 Je '13

"With its doggerel and weak diction, as a play this tract against war is impossible, but it may well be read for some fine ideas and sane argument."

+ Ath 1913,1:552 My 17 30w

"The play fails, because the plot is too slight. The setting and the working out are artistic, and the management of the characters, and the rural scene are exceedingly well done."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '13 500w

"It is very effective as a reading play, and no one who once begins it will put it aside until the last page is read."

+ Ind 75:160 J1 17 '13 250w

"It is a pretty, sentimental story, written in places with no little vigor and eloquence, but it is not well suited either in expression or form, for stage representation."

+ Nation 97:18 J1 3 '13 300w

"Mrs. Trask has had to make her sacrifices of play construction, but she has made them well and wisely. There is, of course, the almost inevitable obstruction of the dramatic traffic by argument, but the argument is clean cut and alive, and in the climactic scene of the second act it is excellently dramatized. To be sure, the characters often become mere animated premises and conclusions, but they never obstruct, and after all the chief interest is not in the development of character but of an abstract idea."

+ N Y Times 18:189 Ap 6 '13 950w

"Mrs. Trask believes apparently without reservation or qualification, that war, at any time or place, and for any reason, is both needless and wrong, and this large contention she expresses through the mouths of the personages in her play with a sincerity, an eloquence, and a skill that earn for her serious attention from thoughtful students of this enormously complex and difficult subject. Only when by clear implication she declares war so bad that nothing is worse can she with any plausibility be charged with refusal to see things as they are and with letting what ought to be blind her to what is." F. C. M.

+ N Y Times 18:213 Ap 13 '13 1000w

+ No Am 198:430 S '13 300w

"An effective, dramatic presentation of the horrors of war."

+ Outlook 104:72 My 10 '13 50w

"A finely motivated little play intended to serve in the propaganda of peace and the abolition of war."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 10 '13 280w

TRAVERS, JEROME DUNSTAN. Travers' golf book. il *$2 (6c) Macmillan 13-12319

Mr. Travers, three times amateur champion of the United States, describes in this book his own methods of play. He says: "I have laid particular stress upon the points that I consider to be of greatest importance, and have striven to make each golf picture with its accompanying text a golf lesson in itself. . . . The book is written for the novice as well as for the man who is more or less expert." Carefully posed photographs, unusually clear and distinct, accompany the text.

"Not necessary except in a large collection. It is not for the beginner and has good things buried in a mass of uninteresting material."

+ A L A Bkl 10:29 S '13

"He writes with commendable clearness, though many may not be able to afford the 'hours of faithful study' he has devoted to various shots."

+ Ath 1913,2:109 Ag 2 200w

"The illustrations from photographs and the occasional diagrams are of decided practical value."

+ Ind 74:1450 Je 26 '13 50w

"It is the thrusting forward of the personal equation which gives his book unusual interest indeed, but deprives it of the right to be regarded as an all-round and thoroughly sound treatise on golf."

+ Nation 96:646 Je 26 '13 200w

"This book will prove interesting reading to all golfers, and especially to those who aim at being champions."

+ Nature 91:632 Ag 21 '13 100w

"Smartly written and contains more intimate matter than the usual descriptions of clubs, stances, and plays."

+ N Y Times 18:388 J1 6 '13 220w

"His book is helpful to the golfer more in the few definite points that Mr. Travers shows are essential to his play than in the general theory of the game and its whys and wherefores, into which other writers here and abroad have gone elaborately."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 17 '13 500w

TRAWICK, ARCADIOUS MCSWAIN. City church and its social mission. 60c (1½c) Assn. press 13-15192

A handbook for church workers who are interested in the social extension activities of the church. The chapters are: The city church and family life; The city church and public care of children; The city church and the problem of charity; The city church and the labor problem; The city church and social vice; The city church and other religious agencies.

TREE, HERBERT BEERBOHM. Thoughts and after-thoughts. *$1.50 (2c) Funk W13-84

"In these collected papers Sir Herbert Tree shows no disposition to limit himself to his own special subject. On the contrary, he writes most amusingly upon many very different things, such as trade unions, the value of a university education, boy scouts, and the correct pronunciation of English. Not unnaturally, however, most readers will turn rather to the pages in which he defends at considerable length his own peculiar methods of stage-production in general, and especially of Shakespearean production."—Spec

"His analysis of the part and speeches of Hamlet is eminently reasonable and, except that his glosses are a trifle too sentimental, is often really illuminating. While he deserves, and by the forcefulness with which he presents his thoughts demands, a hearing on Shakespearean topics amid which he is at home, Sir Herbert is not so happy when he talks at large about the drama, and this or that vogue or celebrity."

+ — Ath 1913,2:46 J1 12 1350w

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 18 '13 500w

+ Lit D 47:957 N 15 '13 280w

"This is a clever, witty, and entertaining book, but it is also disingenuous, because, in maintaining its particular thesis, it studiously ignores, or misrepresents, the chief argument of its opponents."

+ — Nation 97:545 D 4 '13 1000w

+ N Y Sun p12 O 25 '13 1850w

"He has an alert mind and an engaging style, and he views human foibles with genial tolerance."

+ N Y Times 18:412 J1 27 '13 150w

"A pleasant book this to take up at any time for polite entertainment and profit, and full of the genial personality of its author."

+ N Y Times 18:509 O 5 '13 970w

"It is hard to feel uncharitable towards an actor-manager who can polish his epigrams and his style to such good effect as does Sir Herbert Tree."

+ Spec 111:65 J1 12 '13 370w

TREVELYAN, GEORGE MACAULAY. Life of John Bright, il *$4.50 Houghton 13-15882

"The life of John Bright" can hardly fail to possess a dual interest apart from its value as a contribution to the political history of England, for not only was Bright a tribune after the type of Lincoln, but it should be remembered that he espoused the cause of the North in the civil war. . . . On a broader view, however, the biography is of unique interest for the picture it gives of a man who, despite his immersion in politics, preserved an honorable and unsullied character all through his career." (Je 14) "Three great milestones—yes, four—mark the life of John Bright as set forth by this writer. These were the Corn-law agitation, the war in the Crimea, the civil war in the United States, and the struggle for the franchise for English working men. Mr. Trevelyan does not devote much space to the life of his subject prior to his entrance upon public life." (J1 16)—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 10:64 O '13 +

"Mr. Trevelyan expresses his views with candour. If at various points his admiration of his hero runs to excess, that exaggeration can be easily discounted; so long as we get the living, speaking John Bright whom many still remember well, we shall be ungrateful indeed if we quarrel with a staring patch of colour here and there."

+ — Ath 1913,1:609 Je 7 1450w

"Mr. Trevelyan's book is not only valuable as a biography; it will prove to be of great service for the study of nineteenth-century history as a text- and source-book."

+ Bib World 42:320 N '13 250w

"The final authority, perhaps, so far as any biography can be final." E: Fuller.

+ Bookm 38:67 S '13 700w

Reviewed by H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 14 '13 800w

"Two or three 'lives' of John Bright have appeared during the past few years, but none have been so elaborate and thorough as this. The entire 'life' is not a biography, but a history in which the personality of John Bright is so tumultuously interwoven as to give light and color to the whole." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p18 J1 16 '13 1600w

"Scholarly in its design and painstaking in its execution, rich in pertinent quotations from Bright's speeches and letters, well illustrated and carefully indexed, the book is about all that could be asked for in a biography of the Quaker statesman." P. F. Bicknell.

+ Dial 55:139 S 1 '13 2000w

"In this short compass Mr. Trevelyan has succeeded in painting a portrait which is as acceptable to the admirers of John Bright in the United States as it is to his fellow countrymen in England."

+ Ind 75:506 Ag 28 '13 1750w

"Valuable and most satisfactory record of the life of a good and great man." E. S. Nadal.

+ Lit D 47:583 O 4 '13 2400w

"A rich and repaying book."

+ Nation 97:99 J1 31 '13 2000w

"Does not satisfy Englishmen of radical tendencies."

+ N Y Times 18:396 J1 13 '13 200w

"If George Macaulay Trevelyan had entitled his work 'John Bright and his times,' practically every criticism which could have been leveled at it would have been disarmed. It would have then been realized that he was writing the history of England, in his own delightful style, with especial reference to Bright, and that he was selecting for exposition just those incidents in which that great parliamentary figure played a leading part. But when Mr. Trevelyan proclaims that he is writing 'The life of John Bright' the reader cannot help feeling disappointed."

+ — N Y Times 18:403 J1 20 '13 1800w

"An extraordinarily useful book."

+ N Y Times 18:672 N 30 '13 370w

"It was not in Mr. Trevelyan's power to write a true biography of Bright. Of this he was conscious himself, and because of it he has committed a serious blunder. The failing of the biographer is the virtue of the historian, and where Mr. Trevelyan has least understood his subject he has made historical comments. If these comments are intended to suggest the final place of Bright in history they fall far short of the mark."

+ — Sat R 115:812 Je 28 '13 1500w

"At once good to read, compact, and comprehensive. The reader need not expect, however, to find quite the exhilarating quickness or the glowing sense of life which distinguished Mr. Trevelyan's books on the struggle for Italian unity."

+ Spec 110:927 My 31 '13 1450w

Spec 110:970 Je 7 '13 1550w

"A better qualified biographer of Bright could scarcely have been chosen, unless John Morley could have undertaken it. One is tempted now and again to wish that the reading of a certain book might be required by law of each of the self-fancied statesmen who sit in our national and state legislatures. Such a book is this life of Bright."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 J1 24 '13 1100w

TREVES, SIR FREDERICK. Land that is desolate, il *$3 Dutton 13-35191

An account of a winter journey thru Palestine. The author chose winter as the time for his pilgrimage in order that he might avoid both the heat of summer and the tourists who infest the country in the spring. He describes Jaffa, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Tiberias, Damascus, the Garden of Gethsemane and the Dead sea. "The book is full of the most vivid photographic writing, equally effective whether the author is describing the reek of crowded cities, the desolation of some stony upland, or the rocky valleys, where here and there a white monastery hangs. . . . Nor does Sir Frederick rely solely on the powers of the eye. He knows the value of a picturesque quotation, and Maundeville and the Arabian nights tide him over many an awkward strait. His knowledge of Bible story, too, is apt and sufficient." (Spec)

TREVES, SIR FREDERICK—Continued.

"The author has a reverent spirit but a thoroughly disillusioned mind, and his questioning attitude toward the shrines and sacred places and his generally critical attitude will disturb some readers. The photographic reproductions are remarkably fine."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:339 Ap '13

"The style of the book is vivacious, sometimes to the verge of flippancy. Mark Twain in 'The innocents abroad' performed the jester in the Holy Land to admiration. Sir Frederick Treves is much too weighty to attempt such pranks, and cannot be so easily forgiven."

+ — Ath 1912,2:777 D 28 650w

"Sir Frederick Treves, though obviously often depressed by or indignant with things he finds in the Holy Land, has the happy knack of making what he writes interesting."

+ — Sat R 115:53 Ja 18 '13 200w

"Now and then he throws a light of true imagination on the familiar theme, but too often, alas! he is seduced into jocularity. One may perhaps dismiss these lapses as an infection of the Cockney spirit, the vulgarity of which has already, it is to be feared, done the most sacred and most storied of earth's kingdoms irreparable injury. If the weakness is forgotten, we can give Sir Frederick sincere thanks for some excellent writing, lively, picturesque, well-arranged, not overburdened with learning, but with the necessary leaven of fact well digested and tactfully disposed—a happy sublimation of the guide-book, in which enthusiasm has briskly done the work of industry."

+ — Spec 110:66 Ja 11 '13 450w

TRICKER, WILLIAM. Making a water garden.
10 il *50c (9c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-3261

Full instruction according to up-to-date methods for solving the problem of the water garden, including selection of site, construction of basin, and choice of plants.

"The size of this tiny volume does not allow full consideration of the subject, but in its limits it is excellent."

+ — Nation 96:482 My 8 '13 150w

N Y Sun p5 Mr 15 '13 20w

"[Its subject is] presented in an authoritative manner with many useful suggestions."

+ — N Y Times 18:267 My 4 '13 30w

TRIDON, ANDRÉ. New unionism. *$1 (2c)
8 Huebsch 13-17017

The new unionism is defined by the author as, "labor's endeavor to free itself from the existing forms of organization and improve upon them." He discusses the manifestations of this new movement in different parts of the world—Industrialism in the United States, Syndicalism in England, Revolutionary syndicalism in France, Localism, or Anarcho-socialism in Germany. One chapter is devoted to Australia, New Zealand and South Africa; another to a number of the smaller countries, Chile, British Columbia, Holland, Japan, Scandinavia, Switzerland. A final chapter considers The influence of the new unionism on modern thought.

+ — A L A Bkl 10:111 N '13

"Mr. Tridon gives a clear exposition of the philosophy and practice of syndicalism, its history and its present status all over the world. His account of the movement might be looked at as a valuable handbook, supplementing the works of Simkhovitch, Spargo, John Graham Brooks, and other writers, who do not apply so thoroughly the doctrine to the concrete experience of the agitation that is daily taking place."

+ — Boston Transcript p19 Jl 23 '13 600w

+ — Ind 75:509 Ag 28 '13 170w

N Y Times 18:289 My 11 '13 100w

+ — N Y Times 18:557 O 19 '13 700w

"A vigorous exposition."

+ — R of Rs 48:119 Jl '13 120w

"Superficial book." L: Levine.

— Survey 31:166 N 8 '13 180w

TRITES, WILLIAM BUDD. Barbara Gwynne.
(Eng title, Life) *$1.25 Duffield 13-6736

"Barbara and her Jerome, beginning life in the same village, diversely achieve fame and fortune. She becomes a queen of the stage, he becomes a capitalist." Barbara prefers a physician, who through his experiments, loses his life. "The skill with which is indicated the slow convergence of Jerome and Barbara towards a union at which we do not actually assist, but which we discern to be inevitable and vaguely right—all this gives freshness to the familiar types." (Nation)

"'Barbara Gwynne' should have come to a period in the penultimate chapter." R: B. Glaenzer.

+ — Bookm 37:570 Jl '13 550w

"'Barbara Gwynne' is a much more consistent and straightforward book [than 'John Cave']. That Mr. Trites is a writer of certain power is unquestioned. So far, however, he is a writer more of possibility than of actual accomplishment." H. E. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 16 '13 500w

+ — Ind 74:983 My 1 '13 480w

"Like so many of his school, this writer is a trifle conscious of his merit in giving spades their right name. Crude sex, sordidness, squalor, fascinate him overmuch. But of the essential sincerity of his intent there is no doubt."

+ — Nation 96:499 My 15 '13 220w

"Neither book recommends itself to those in search of diversion."

— Springfield Republican p5 My 22 '13 200w

TRITES, WILLIAM BUDD. John Cave. *$1.25
6 Duffield 13-6735

"The hero of 'John Cave' is a reporter, an incurable dipsomaniac, who returns to drink, in spite of all his native cleverness and the aid of many friends to buoy him up." (Boston Transcript) Two women are at times factors in his upward and downward lurches. The first is an opium fiend but capable of inspiring Cave. The other is a society girl, who after marrying him and sustaining him for a time in success, leaves him and then Cave goes on his final debauch."

"Successful in his delineation of man, the author becomes unconvincing—in his first novel—when woman is the subject." R: B. Glaenzer.

+ — Bookm 37:568 Jl '13 1350w

"In both books there are passages of shockingly bad writing, both books reveal a curiously exaggerated bitterness towards things American, both books end unpleasantly, both books have for protagonists morbid people and both books lack even a suggestion of a broad, tolerant comic spirit. Yet both books contain passages of unusual power and both disclose a writer of strong penetration and insight into the weaker aspects of human nature." H. E. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 16 '13 900w

"In his qualities, as in his failings, Mr. Trites stands out apart from native contemporaries. Each of the present volumes has true distinction, contrasted with the banal rank and file on the bookshelf of our recent fiction. Mr. Trites is telling in description, apt in his thumb-nail sketches; he fails in the effort to paint full-length portraits. Fortunately he is already too competent, too honest an artist to be treated with condescending tenderness or delicacy."

+ — Ind 74:983 My 1 '13 480w

+ — Nation 96:499 My 15 '13 600w

"The story is not cheerful."

— N Y Sun p7 My 3 '13 1100w

"Inexorable, indeed, and depressing, yet Mr. Trites is a literary newcomer that must be reckoned with. For style alone 'John Cave' would be notable. It is a powerful realistic story, and one that stands out conspicuously in the fiction of to-day."

+ — N Y Times 18:249 Ap 27 '13 950w

"Its subject is not a pleasant one. The story is told with a powerful, realistic directness which suggests the Russian masters in its pessimism and the French in its artistry of style."

+ — R of Rs 47:762 Je '13 100w

"The author seems to be aiming at a style of realism popular with some French writers which he would interlard with Dickensian character portraiture. He succeeds in a measure and then falls into gross excesses that are crude caricature, untruthful to American types and conditions. There are evidences of creative power in picturing this man's repellant character, but his career is taken as a means of presenting a misrepresentation, on the whole, of American newspaperdom and unfavorably comparing popular institutions with those of another country."

— Springfield Republican p5 My 22 '13 200w

TROELTSCH, ERNST. Protestantism and progress; tr. by W: Montgomery. (Crown theological lib.) *$1.50 Putnam 13-7320

"An historical study of the relation of Protestantism to the modern world, the author's personal religious view being excluded." (Ath) "The understanding of the present is the goal of all historical study. He analyzes the 'modern world,' by which he means the world of to-day, to discover what are its essential characteristics, how far these characteristics are traceable to Protestant influence, and how far the Early Protestantism of Luther and Calvin and Zwingli has itself been transformed with the progress of the world." (Nation)

Ath 1912,2:622 N 23 20w

"A noteworthy study." G. B. Smith.

+ Bib World 41:212 Mr '13 1250w

Boston Transcript p23 F 5 '13 380w

"Profound and scholarly essay."

+ Ind 75:578 S 4 '13 100w

"Whether one agrees or not with his conclusions, one cannot fail to enjoy the scholarly insight and discriminating nicety with which he traces the shading differences between different conceptions of religion."

+ Nation 96:477 My 8 '13 450w

TROUTBECK, G. E. Stories from Italian history retold for children. il *$1.30 Stokes (Eng ed A12-172)

Miss Troutbeck begins with the invasion of Italy by Attila, and takes occasion to relate something of the story of Venice. Attila destroyed Aquileia, and the refugees from Aquileia founded Venice. Next we are told about Theodoric the Ostrogoth, followed by 'St Benedict' and the 'Story of the iron crown.' A chapter on the 'Popes and emperors' does something to explain the complicated problems of Italian politics. There is a specially interesting chapter on 'Some great captains,' Sir John Hawkwood being first on the list."—Spec

"They will interest children of thirteen and older, but in many libraries will be more useful in the adult than in the children's collection."

+ A L A Bkl 9:216 Ja '13.

"The book is well illustrated." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1366 D 12 '12 50w

"A good book to put into a juvenile library. The stories are attractively written and well illustrated."

+ N Y Times 17:773 D 15 '12 20w

+ Spec 107:1129 D 23 '11 100w

TROWBRIDGE, ADA WILSON. Home school; with an introd. by Randall J. Condon. (Riverside educational monographs) *60c Houghton 13-15924

"The home school,' whose story Mrs. Trowbridge tells in this book . . . is a part of the school system of Providence, R. I., but its application of the principles of domestic science trains the girl by making her work at what she wants to learn in a homelike environment and not in a school house laboratory."—Chaut

A L A Bkl 10:29 S '13

Boston Transcript p18 Ag 6 '13 100w

+ Chaut 72:142 O 18 '13 330w

TURNBULL, MARGARET, ed. W. A. G.'s tale. il *$1 (6c) Houghton 13-4352

W. A. G. is a little boy who tells with artless simplicity of his summer in an artist colony. Auntie Edith with whom he lives is an artist. Auntie May, her friend who lives with her too, writes stories when she is not playing wild Indian with the little boy. Uncle Burt is a soldier in the Philippines who comes home on sick leave to marry Auntie May. Besides these grown up matters W. A. G.'s tale is concerned with the boy's own adventures. It tells how he was left alone on an island; how he slid down a rope in the early morning and ran away; and how he was lost and found again.

+ A L A Bkl 9:401 My '13

"This is a wholesome little tale that youngsters will enjoy."

+ Bookm 37:340 My '13 400w

"If the story is by a small boy—and it might well be, except for a few more mature expressions—it is a remarkable performance! If it is written by the editor, Margaret Turnbull, it is also a remarkable performance."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 280w

N Y Sun p4 F 22 '13 50w

"The book is intended primarily for the amusement of children, but like 'Peter Pan,' it is a juvenile work that will please grown-ups quite as much as little ones."

+ N Y Times 18:291 My 11 '13 130w

"He has fun in writing the story and other boys will have fun in reading it."

+ Outlook 103:596 Mr 15 '13 50w

TURPIN, EDNA HENRY LEE. Happy Acres. il *$1.25 (2c) Macmillan 13-19500

A story that follows "Honey Sweet" a book by this author published in 1911. Anne Lewis, the little lady who shared with her rag doll, "Honey Sweet," the honors of heroine of that book, reappears in this story. She goes down to Virginia to visit relatives who are strange to her and finds there a whole village full of cousins who make her one of themselves and give her a very happy time.

"Sure to captivate girls of ten or eleven years." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:445 D '13 120w

Reviewed by W: S. Braithwaite.

+ Boston Transcript p26 N 26 '13 50w

"Its charm lies in the pleasing picture presented of southern people and southern country."

+ N Y Sun p3 O 4 '13 70w

"A pretty wholesome story for little girls."

+ N Y Times 18:606 N 9 '13 100w

TURQUET-MILNES, G. Influence of Baudelaire in France and England. *$2.50 Dutton (Eng ed A13-929)

The author analyzes the "Baudelairean spirit" under three heads: (1) The faculty of self-analysis and self-torment in love; (2) Pursuit of sensation at any cost with its inevitable consequences; perversity and madness on the one hand, mysticism on the other; and (3) Moral anarchy, overwhelming pessimism and terrible solitude of the soul. "Baudelaire was a partial cause and shaping force in the movement that, decadent or not, is the literary

TURQUET-MILNES, G.—Continued.
movement typical of the latter part of the nineteenth century." (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Turquet-Milnes writes with vigour, and has filled more than half his book with illustrative quotations; but his case is a poor one at its best."

— + Ath 1913.1:128 F 1 350w

"Mr. Turquet-Milnes's study interprets intelligently both the man and his work."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 600w

Reviewed by W. B. Blake.

— Ind 74:516 Mr 6 '13 20w

"It must be said that he knows his Baudelaire, that he has pretty clearly defined the Baudelarian spirit, has traced it through a wide range of French and English writers, and has exhibited a good deal of tact in the comparison of ideas and the choice of illustrations. Though far from profound, he is tolerably precise, and he shows a French neatness and brevity in making his points."

+ Nation 97:12 Jl 3 '13 900w

"This interesting volume is disappointing in a measure. The author is thoroughly master of his subject, but he assumes the attitude of the writer of a doctors' dissertation, that he has a thesis to develop. This leads him to regard Baudelaire as a psychological phenomenon in literature whose origins must be sought and whose later development must be explained; a process which leaves out of consideration the natural evolution of writers of importance and allows of much fanciful and more or less plausible sophistry. The author's argument is ingenious enough, all the same, he gives information about authors little known to the English public, save by name, and above all he quotes very freely from Baudelaire, a poet worth knowing."

— + N Y Sun p13 Ap 19 '13 350w

"Though Mr. Milnes's study manifests depth of scholarship and conviction, and though he has presented his case lucidly and sincerely, the book has some annoying weaknesses."

+ — N Y Times 18:437 Ag 17 '13 1000w

"As a thorough sympathetic study of a complicated movement whose outcrochings have gone far and in many directions, Mr. Milnes's book is deserving of attention."

+ N Y Times 18:668 N 30 '13 250w

"We cannot help feeling that the 'Baudelarian spirit' is almost ridden to death in these pages. His criticisms are sometimes of interest, though we are never convinced of their profundity."

— + Spec 110:545 Mr 29 '13 170w

TWEEDIE, ETHEL BRILLIANA (HARLEY)
¹² (MRS. ALEC TWEEDIE). America as I saw it; or, America revisited. il *$3 (2½c)
Macmillan 13-21754

Based upon observations and notes made in 1900-1901, 1904 and 1912, this conversational description of American life and peculiarities is penetrating and generally fair. Her travels extended from Boston to St. Louis, Niagara to El Paso and in many of the large cities she was entertained in the private homes of our distinguished citizens, and in Washington was a guest in the White House and the embassies. The author claims that it is "just a woman's impressions of a vast country and a vast people, steering a great huge ship, manned by many nationalities, out of a sea of prejudices and conventionalities—steering her for a harbour of her own making."

"The author's merits are not those of the literary writer. Her staccato style succeeds in bringing home in vivid flashes her own rapid impressions of America and its people. It is possible that there is more to be learnt on that subject in a short time from this book than from others which have real claims to literary pretensions."

+ — Ath 1913.2:521 N 8 600w

Reviewed by H. C. Shelley.

— Boston Transcript p9 O 25 '13 170w

"Frank and entertaining volume." C: E Hesselgrave.

+ Ind 76:511 D 11 '13 70w

"It is the society reporter let loose with instructions to be as sprightly as she can that we meet in Mrs. Alec-Tweedie's 'America as I saw it.'"

— N Y Sun p5 O 25 '13 180w

"Mrs. Alec-Tweedie has a happy faculty for telling about what she sees in a most amusing and often pertinent fashion."

+ N Y Times 18:691 N 30 '13 1100w

TWEEDIE, ETHEL BRILLIANA (HARLEY)
¹ (MRS. ALEC TWEEDIE). Thirteen years of a busy woman's life. il *$4 Lane 12-29124

"Mrs. Alex Tweedie is a Londoner by birth, and the account here given of her early life shows that the necessity of earning her living only arose about sixteen years ago. Luckily, by education and temperament she was well equipped for it." (Spec) This volume records "her account of her various travels in quest of book-material, of the hardships and bodily dangers she has faced, of the illustrious persons she has met, and a great variety of other matters such as a bright and observant woman knows how to make the most of in a narrative of the kind she has so entertainingly written." (Dial)

+ A L A Bkl 9:206 Ja '13

"Will be greatly enjoyed by those who like to read of real life strenuously lived by energetic people."

+ Dial 53:389 N 16 '12 280w

"Her hurried writing is necessarily superficial. In America there will be many quietly amused smiles at her good-natured and quite inaccurate reports of us and our country. The chapter on women nowadays is sensible and attractive."

+ — Outlook 102: 819 D 14 '12 230w

"Would have been all the better for more of that care and literary finish to which only the highest journalism can give leisure or space. The book is full of entertaining stories and scenes painted with dash and colour."

+ — Spec 109:sup933 D 7 '12 500w

TYLER, MASON WHITING, Recollections of the civil war; ed. by W: S. Tyler. il *$2.50
(2c) Putnam 13-139

This "is a detailed narrative of Col. Tyler's service as private and officer from his enlistment in July, 1862, to his wounding on March 25, 1865. His regiment was the 37th Massachusetts, and he was at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, and Petersburg. He also served under Sheridan in the Valley campaign, and during the draft riots was transferred to New York city." (Ind) "The story is told in a continuous autobiographical narrative up to the arrival of his corps at Petersburg in mid-June of 1864. The rest of it is in the form of excerpts from diary and letters, with an explanatory description of the progress of the war, by the Rev. Calvin Stebbins, heading each chapter. For Col. Tyler died in 1907, before he had finished his manuscript." (N Y Times)

"So far as the book purports to be a history it does not invite special comment. But there can be no question of the real value and importance of the personal reminiscences and the picture they give of the inner life and struggles of the great army."

+ Am Hist R 18:845 Jl '13 420w

"It gives a good idea of how the soldiers lived, what they thought of their leaders and how little they knew of their own movements."

+ A L A Bkl 10:29 S '13

+ Ath 1913.1:431 Ap 19 120w

"We know of no book of reminiscences by a civilian officer more satisfying than this. The chapters, full of detail, on the Wilderness and Spottsylvania are worthy of a place on the shelf of the tactician."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 12 '13 650w

"Careful and sincere work."

+ Ind 74:473 F 27 '13 150w

Nation 96:577 Je 5 '13 130w

"The greater portion of the book was written in after life, when the author had consulted books and authorities, had revised his judgments and in his mature years had decided what to say and what to leave unsaid. It is in substance a criticism of men and operations, the kind of book of which there is a superabundance. The letters and diaries, on the other hand, which the editor was obliged to draw upon, are first hand evidence, written at the time, the living testimony of which we cannot have too much."

+ N Y Sun p4 F 1 '13 150w

"The book is a welcome addition to those volumes that have already told the story of that wonderful war from the personal standpoint."

+ N Y Times 18:84 F 16 '13 180w

"Aside from its local interest, this narrative is entitled to high rank among the innumerable records of personal experiences in the war with the South."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 13 '13 1250w

TYNDALE, WALTER. Artist in Egypt. il *$5
Doran A13-865

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"Let us linger lovingly with a painter-man who gives us delightful reading in 'An artist in Egypt' and many pictures bathed in burning sunlight and gorgeous Oriental colours. Full of true character and life are they, also, and set against a background minutely faithful in architectural detail." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:526 Ja '13 400w

"Unlike many of his fellow-artists, Mr. Tyndale knows how to write as well as paint, and his spicy record of personal impressions and experiences is decidedly worth while for its own sake. But the pictures are still better."

+ Dial 53:496 D 16 '12 180w

"Of the numerous books on Egypt which have appeared during recent years none have given us more pleasure than Mr. Tyndale's latest work. If we have any fault to find with this engaging volume it is that the writer should have introduced the gruesome details connected with the story of the Princess Zohra, and with the death of Abbas; or the vivid description of the horrors of the 'dancing dervishes' and other barbaric practices which have now almost disappeared. These are not pleasant reading and seem out of place in such a delightful book."

+ Int Studio 48:174 D '12 270w

"The color work is remarkably well done, and each of the pictures has charm. The text contains the observations of the writer upon a multitude of subjects and places, taken from a careful notebook of impressions."

+ Nation 95:569 D 12 '12 170w

"Walter Tyndale makes a double hit in his big and beautiful book, showing good work with both pen and brush. What he has written might easily stand alone, unsupported by illustrations, and his large color pictures are so artistic and charming that if they were in a volume by themselves the absence of descriptive matter would not be at all distressing."

+ N Y Times 18:84 F 16 '13 180w

+ Outlook 103:500 Mr 1 '13 50w

TYNDALE, WALTER. Artist in Italy. il *$5
Doran

"The author modestly says in his preface that the volume is little more than a painter's record of the places he visited while in search of material for his professional work. . . . The volume deals mostly with Venice and the hill-towns of Tuscany, the chapters on Siena forming perhaps the most enjoyable part of the book."—Int Studio

"The most attractive feature of this book is furnished by the illustrations. The portion of the book which deals with Italian art is the least happy."

+ Ath 1913,2:565 N 15 400w

"His pictures are notable and well-produced." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 38:389 D '13 130w

"The twenty-six plates in colour, though mostly dealing with a theme which, from an artist's point of view, is somewhat hackneyed, are sympathetically treated, while the letterpress is bright and interesting."

+ Int Studio 51:169 D '13 200w

"The places to be depicted are selected with good judgment, and painted with happy skill."

+ Nation 97:534 D 4 '13 100w

"His text has caught the joy and romance of the road and his pictures have caught the tawiness of the sun bleached Italian towns."

+ N Y Sun p27 N 29 '13 50w

"The author-artist talks intimately, sometimes learnedly, and always with grace and humor."

+ N Y Times 18:701 N 30 '13 100w

"Like Mr. Tyndale's other books, this is well worth any one's while."

+ Outlook 105:764 D 6 '13 60w

"He has an irritating trick, when he has picked out his little piece of masonry and street for reproduction, of placing a contadina or bambino conspicuously for local colour, and the human form he photographs not well."

+ Sat R 116:sup12 O 11 '13 230w

"Possibly on account of the horrors of the three-colour process, we decidedly prefer the letterpress to the pictures. It seems strange that one so obviously appreciative of the history, romance, and art of Italy should represent her cities in so commonplace a manner."

+ Spec 111:sup6:3 N 1 '13 50w

TYRRELL, REV. GEORGE. Autobiography and 2 life of George Tyrrell, by M. D. Petre. 2v
il *$6 Longmans A13-193

"George Henry Tyrrell, one of the great apostles of modernism, was an English Roman Catholic, born a Protestant. He matriculated at that stronghold of Protestantism, Trinity college, Dublin, in 1878, and two years later joined the Roman Catholic church and entered the order of Jesuits." (Lit D) The present work "falls into two parts, an autobiography bringing the story of Tyrrell's life down to the year 1884, and a history of the circumstances leading to its tragic close, told by his friend, Miss Petre. Each portion has an interest of its own which will appeal to different readers according to their bent. Of the autobiography the editor remarks in her preface that it has more affinity with the 'Confessions' of St. Augustine than with the 'Apologia' of Cardinal Newman, being written not 'for self-justification in the eyes of the world, but for self-accusation in the eyes of himself and another.'" (Spec)

+ A L A Bkl 10:30 S '13

"George Tyrrell is so interesting to us, not because of anything specially remarkable in his life, or character, or opinions, but because he, more than any other Irishman (or Englishman) of his day, represents that special phase of thought in religion with which the twentieth century was inaugurated."

+ Ath 1912,2:509 N 2 2200w

"Frank, amusing, and pathetic autobiography." G: Hodges.

+ Atlan 111:510 Ap '13 1500w

"In the searching and remarkable self-analysis contained in the first of these volumes, the inevitable difficulties attending such a task become plainly apparent. It is highly abstract and bears the reflex of later thought. The two volumes—the first the autobiography, the second Miss Petre's addition—form one continuous whole." H: C. Corrance.

TYRRELL, GEORGE—Continued.

+ Hibbert J 11:441 Ja '13 1750w

"Two volumes so thoroughly and conscientiously prepared are a worthy monument to the man and his work. Both are in fact human documents of the highest interest to all students of the religious problems of our time. The autobiography on its literary merits alone is entitled to rank with the great masterpieces of the art—with the Confessions of St. Augustine and Rousseau." James Walker.

+ Hibbert J 11:445 Ja '13 2150w

"The autobiography is a somewhat commonplace account of family life in which the affectionate nature of Tyrrell is revealed."

+ — Lit D 46:140 Ja '13 400w

"To write the life of such a man was no easy task, and Miss Petre has done her work well."

+ Nation 96:388 Ap 17 '13 1650w

"That the revelation of his character is a fascinating study is undeniable, but it may be gravely doubted whether it will do service either to his memory or his cause, even though its publication was, plainly, in accordance with his own wishes, and was carried out by the most devoted of his friends." R. H. Benson.

+ N Y Times 18:190 Ap 6 '13 1950w

+ N Y Times 18:673 N 30 '13 250w

"These two volumes are highly valuable both for their personal charm and for their story of struggle between the modern and the mediæval spirit."

+ Outlook 103:321 F 8 '13 480w

"The life of George Tyrrell is one of the most profoundly interesting books that have appeared for a long time, not excepting Cardinal Newman's 'Life,' for the problems dealt with here are more alive than those in Mr. Ward's book could be. It is in reality two books in one. The first volume is an autobiography, and as a psychological study is deeply valuable. The second volume is the tragic story of Tyrrell's life told with exquisitely good taste by Miss Petre."

+ Sat R 114:771 D 21 '12 1850w

"Fascinating book."

+ Spec 109:1065 D 21 '12 1450w

TYRRELL, HENRY GRATTAN. Artistic bridge design. Il $3 Clark, M. C. 12-22340

"This is a systematic treatise on the design of modern bridges according to esthetic principles, and is the development of a series of articles contributed by the author to The American architect, in 1901. Its purpose is to stimulate American engineers in the preparation of bridge designs which are at once architecturally meritorious, in harmony with their surroundings, and economical in cost. To this end the various types of constructions are examined and the suitability of each assessed. Line and half-tone illustrations are freely used in giving examples of approved American and foreign structures."—Indust Engin

"A semi-technical discussion, useful for designing engineers, but also well fitted to give the general reader a good idea of what has been done in this country and abroad to make bridges works of art instead of blots on the landscape."

+ A L A Bkl 9:339 Ap '13

"Unfortunately, as in at least one other of the author's books reviewed in these columns, the figures are not denoted by captions, so that it takes some searching through the text to discover what each one is intended to illustrate. Just how much can be done by categorical statements of what is beautiful and what is ugly, we would not attempt to state, but we feel sure that any engineer who reads such books as this one of Mr. Tyrrell's and at the same time conscientiously studies the photographs and drawings of beautiful designs which Mr. Tyrrell gives and which can be found elsewhere will arrive at a better appreciation of what lines and form an artistic bridge should have."

+ — Engin N 68:933 N 14 '12 600w

"Should prove of decided value both to the bridge architect and designing engineer."

+ Engin Rec 67:452 Ap 19 '13 280w

Indust Engin 12:210 N '12 110w

TYRRELL, HENRY GRATTAN. Engineering of shops and factories. Il *$4 McGraw 12-27836

"The author begins with the relation of the engineer to factory design, and gives standard rates of charging. He discusses questions of location and general layout, and gives in detail a report on a proposed bridge shop. The factors of the structural design, and the types and details of the design itself, are then entered into; here wood, steel and concrete as main materials, and the components such as foundations, floors, partitions and roofs, are treated. Certain special building types and special structures (bins, chimneys, tanks) are discussed separately. Individual chapters on heating, lighting, water-supply, fire protection, air washing, sewerage and cranes, follow. . . . Some concluding chapters, giving (among other things) sample estimates, weight tables of steel sheds, and the inevitable discussion of 'welfare' features, should also be noted."—Engin N

"The present book is strongest on the structural design of factory buildings. It contains also some chapters on location and planning, and on certain items of equipment, such as heating and lighting, air washing, sewerage, etc. But in examining these chapters it becomes evident that the subjects are not the author's own, and that in compiling he has missed completeness and in many instances correctness. This no doubt reduces the value of the book. The selection of illustrations is affected somewhat as is the text, the structural-steel field being greatly favored and many other subjects represented poorly in quantity or nature of illustrations."

+ — Engin N 69:335 F 13 '13 400w

"The work is developed naturally and logically and each subject receives ample attention. While much of the material may be found elsewhere, the author has handled it in a fresh and original way, showing a wide and intimate knowledge of his ground. At the same time there is much that is new, and the book reflects the most recent and advanced ideas in this class of work."

+ Engin Rec 67:138 F 1 '13 750w

U

UNDERHILL, EVELYN. Mystic way. *$3.50
10 Dutton A13-2174

"Miss Underhill's thesis is that Christianity represents in its primitive purity a new type of mysticism differing from the Oriental, the Neoplatonic, and the Mahomedan. . . . To make her thesis good, she has to show that Jesus himself, Paul, and the unknown author of the Fourth gospel were veritable mystics, and that their records are records of mystical experience which can be checked up against later and fuller records from more detailed and verifiable sources. Her task is necessarily one of conjecture and interpretation, and its success will depend very largely upon the disposition which the higher critics are likely to make of some of her sources."—Dial

"A suggestive, scholarly work."

+ A L A Bkl 10:151 D '13

"A fresh testimony to Miss Underhill's ability and power. It is marked by penetrating insight and is full of suggestion. Altogether, this is a remarkable book, though it leaves us challenging many of its positions and unsatisfied on several points."

+ — Ath 1913,1:461 Ap 26 850w

Dial 55:152 S 1 '13 450w

"Those who have had, even in the smallest degree, something of the vision which brings humanity into touch with the eternal will be thankful to Miss Underhill for her sane, scholarly treatment of her subject, a treatment which brings the life and teachings of Jesus into a more direct relation with modern science and civilization than any attempt at higher criticism which regards the letter and omits the spirit could effect."

+ Ind 75:575 S 4 '13 380w

"There is much that is of interest, much that is of value in 'The mystic way.'"

+ N Y Times 18:412 J1 27 '13 700w

"Her book contains much that is of interest and value."

+ N Y Times 18:677 N 30 '13 200w

"Copiously quoting from the great mystics, she has so fused their testimony with her own consciousness that her volume is a rare but noble type of modern religious experience."

+ Outlook 105:450 O 25 '13 250w

"Miss Underhill's brilliant, and suggestive book, which exhibits, it may be said, fine and distinguished literary qualities of word and phrase, does bring out most clearly the immense vitality and continuity of the mystical spirit."

+ Sat R 116:303 S 6 '13 1150w

"A remarkable book, but it should have been shorter."

+ — Spec 111:387 S 13 '13 500w

UNDERWOOD, F. M. United Italy. il $3.50
Doran (Eng ed 13-7539)

A history of Italy since 1870 with a discussion of present conditions and problems. "Statesmen of no nation, with the possible exception of the United States, ever had such momentous problems to solve as Italy's patriots, who have evolved a nation of security and independence from the tyranny, misgovernment and betrayal by rulers of a generation ago. . . . Mr. Underwood, who has lived in Italy for years and has associated with Italians of all classes, emphasizes the belief that the most serious problem, and the most difficult as well, is that of raising the southern part of the country to the same level of civilization and prosperity, as the north." (Boston Transcript)

"Deals with Italy since 1870 in a way calculated to give the reader a satisfactory understanding of present-day conditions."

+ Am Hist R 13:428 Ja '13 20w

"It covers much the same ground as Garland's 'New Italy' in a less scholarly but simpler manner and has the advantage of being more closely to date. Unfortunately it is much more expensive while briefer in content."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:391 My '13

"Though this book is interestingly written and presents material not elsewhere easily obtainable in English, it does not satisfy one who asks for an account of the foundations of Italian life."

+ — Ann Am Acad 49:248 S '13 250w

"A useful and welcome addition to the rapidly increasing number of books intended to enlighten the public concerning the new Italy that has arisen during the last half-century."

+ Ath 1912,2:440 O 19 1300w

Boston Transcript p7 D 21 '12 600w

Lit D 46:652 Mr 22 '13 400w

"It is quite the best popular book on this subject in English. Mr. Underwood has taken pains to inform himself; he has judgment and he is fair."

+ Nation 96:367 Ap 10 '13 200w

"The book has many shortcomings, for it is difficult to generalize or invariably to pick out what is important in current events, but every one who has tried to find out what happened last year or five years ago will appreciate the amount and the quality of the information about Italy, her public men and her political affairs that the author has brought together."

+ — N Y Sun p4 D 21 '12 80w

"Mr. Underwood lost himself in the details of his subject and he brings his readers through to the end with only a confused idea of a great variety of troubles through which the nation has been fighting its way for the fifty years of its existence. The author, however, succeeds in making rather clear the principal internal difficulties and outside entanglements which hampered the kingdom's earlier years, and he presents many interesting facts concerning past and present conditions."

+ — N Y Times 18:65 F 9 '13 170w

+ — Outlook 103:144 Ja 18 '13 400w

"If regarded as a manual for students scurrying through 'contemporary history,' 'United Italy' may be of use with its lists of leading Italian statesmen and its statistics as to increase of customs, railways, etc., but as a history it is too much disconnected in its treatment of the subject to be of value. The book is on the whole quite a good specimen of what we classify as 'the slightly superfluous' book on long-suffering Italy."

+ — Sat R 114:740 D 14 '12 750w

"If books were welcomed according to the need there was for them Mr. Underwood's 'United Italy' would meet with a most cordial reception. Tried by the standard of judgment set by the author this book seems to fulfil its purpose well enough. To Crispi Mr. Underwood does but scant justice, and this is all the more regrettable since the memory of this the greatest Italian statesman since Cavour, has been under a cloud for years, and it is time that his name should be vindicated. It seems hard to take Mr. Underwood to task for not doing the impossible, for it is clearly impossible to describe the history of a nation during thirty eventful years in some three hundred and fifty pages. We incline to think that his object would have been more surely reached had he confined his attention to those channels of activity which seemed to him to represent most characteristically the advance of Italian thought from 1870 to the present day."

+ — Spec 110:63 Ja 11 '13 1700w

UNDERWOOD, JOHN JASPER. Alaska, an empire in the making. il $2 Dodd 13-10558

"The need of a reliable and comprehensive book dealing with Alaska and its resources, its attractions for homeseeker, investor, and tourist has long been felt. Ignorance concerning the territory, so dense as to be almost impenetrable, prevails through the States. . . . So that Mr. Underwood's volume is welcomed by Alaskans generally. His information is accurate and his statements reliable. He has treated of a variety of phases of his subjects. His book describes all the principal places of the Territory as well as its industries, its climate, its natives, its rivers and mountains. Its attractions to the tourist are set forth as well as the advantages it offers to seekers of homes. There are reminiscences of early days and a history of the Territory from the time of its discovery. The author has kept controversial matter out of his book though one who reads it cannot avoid the conclusion that there must be merit back of the contention of Alaskans that their land has not been fairly treated."—N Y Times

+ — A L A Bkl 10:152 D '13

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '13 700w

"The portrayal is in journalistic style, and the facts are marshalled in effective and often startling array, with a completeness and scope that make the book a veritable up-to-date encyclopædia of things Alaskan."

+ Dial 55:119 Ag 16 '13 230w

Lit D 47:588 O 4 '13 200w

UNDERWOOD, JOHN JASPER—Continued.

"The book cannot serve as a source of trustworthy information, and it is noticeably tintured here and there with an anti-conservation bias."

— Nation 97:82 J1 24 '13 270w

N Y Sun p16 S 27 '13 730w

"The writer has a rambling, rather inconsequential style of writing that makes delightfully entertaining his pictures of Alaska and Alaskans. He is just as apt as not to drift idly off from a description of some of the towns along the Inland Passage into half a dozen pages of Indian superstitions and legends or to drop carelessly a humorous story or a personal anecdote into the middle of a chapter of perfectly serious reading. But this does not detract from the serious value of the work; in fact, it rather adds to it. Serious reading is too likely to be dry reading, and it is seldom that we find an author who is able to garnish his statistics with humor in such a way as to keep up interest without concealing his purpose."

+ N Y Times 18:325 Je 1 '13 700w

"Mr. Underwood's volume is to be recommended. It is a book written by one who for years has lived in the country he describes. The sometimes jerky style noticeable in the statistical pages is generally absent from those recording more personal impressions."

+ Outlook 104:393 Je 21 '13 150w

Spec 111:427 S 20 '13 160w

UNDERWOOD, RUTH. Living legacy. il *$1.35
2 (1c) Winston 12-28408

The theme of the story is the old one of the man of middle age who falls in love with his young ward. John Brown is but thirty-four, however, when an older friend, dying, leaves in his charge, the sixteen year old girl who finds a place in his heart. Very soon he learns that his feeling for her is not paternal, but the girl's awakening to consciousness of the bond between them is more gradual. The story gives a picture of Philadelphia life, and something of the modern religious controversy in which new movements come into conflict with old beliefs—with the Quaker faith in this case—finds expression in the story.

"A love story chiefly interesting because of its delightful picture of Quaker life in Philadelphia."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 1 '13 100w

"A novel of much quiet charm. In its clean, healthy presentment of life lies the appeal."

+ Ind 73:1322 D 5 '12 80w

"Some parts of 'A living legacy' are charming, some are didactic and rather crude."

+ N Y Sun p14 N 23 '12 120w

"A highly moral and absolutely non-exciting tale of Philadelphia life."

— N Y Times 18:70 F 9 '13 120w

UPTON, GEORGE PUTNAM. In music land.
12 il *$1.25 (3½c) Browne & Howell 13-24501

A book for children. By means of a dozen or more "fireside stories" the author conducts a group of children into the land of music. The lives of the great composers make up the content of the greater number of the stories. One deals with the origin of the notes; one with music forms; and one with the orchestral instruments.

"The 'Postlude' is eloquent, and surely should do much to banish from the youthful mind the tendency to regard the study of music as drudgery, or, at best, a mere frill to more serious pursuits. Many quaint illustrations by Mr. James Bloomfield help to make this volume a particularly choice gift for all, young or old, who seek elementary musical knowledge."

+ Dial 55:364 N 1 '13 330w

USHER, ROLAND GREENE. Pan-Germanism.
5 *$1.75 Houghton 13-4358

"Pan-Germanism is in the first instance a defensive movement for self-preservation, for escaping the pressure of France and Russia, both bent on Germany's destruction. It is, in the second place, an offensive movement directed against England, its object the conquest of the English possessions in the Mediterranean and in Asia. Germany expects thus to obtain an outlet for her surplus population and manufactures and to create an empire as little vulnerable politically, economically, or strategically as any the world has yet seen." This is Prof. Usher's general description of the movement which is the subject of his remarkable study.—N Y Times

"While the reader may quarrel with Dr. Usher's dogmatic manner and with many of his sweeping assertions, he will at the same time, frankly confess that he has never read a more fascinating introduction to the study of present European diplomacy." C: G. Fenwick.

+ — Am Pol Sci R 7:515 Ag '13 900w

"Accepting some limitations, the student of international affairs will find this book of absorbing interest."

+ Ann Am Acad 49:248 S '13 370w

"We feel sure that Dr. Usher wishes well to England, but it is sometimes necessary to pray to be saved from one's friends, and a book such as this, which will attract attention abroad, cannot improve, and may possibly embitter, our relations with Germany. It is, therefore, necessary to deal with some of the author's fallacies and mistakes."

— Ath 1913:1:457 Ap 26 1000w

Reviewed by F: A. Ogg.

Dial 55:410 N 16 '13 1600w

"His book reads to us as if it were based on information given by the newspaper press, untempered with that personal knowledge and contact which are essential. The book is without an index."

— Educ R 46:206 S '13 70w

"Prof. Usher's book may be thrilling history or thrilling romance, but in either case it is thrilling."

+ Ind 74:764 Ap 3 '13 550w

Lit D 47:480 S 20 '13 200w

"A mass of dogmatism and prognostication."

— Nation 96:523 My 22 '13 1100w

"Prof. Usher's book is one of great value. Nowhere else can a student of modern history find a more comprehensive and searching account, or a more acute analysis of the history of the past quarter of a century and of the actual situation."

+ N Y Times 18:137 Mr 16 '13 1000w

"Professor Usher writes with a brilliant, trenchant style that illuminates the entire international situation."

+ R of Rs 47:636 My '13 300w

"Although Mr. Usher has undertaken to present Pan-Germanism from the German point of view, we cannot discover any evidence, internal or external, of a close personal acquaintance with Germany and Germans. His work appears to be rather that of a man who has made a close study of the literature of his subject."

+ Spec 110:806 My 10 '13 1900w

"Whether or not we are willing to agree with the conclusions or even the premises of Mr. Usher's book, he has given us a deep and comprehensive study of international relations and presented his arguments in clear, concise style, taking due advantage of the somewhat romantic and highly psychological side of the situation. He may possibly be accused of over-drawing his picture or of taking a morbid view of the severity of the struggle for race superiority."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 1150w

V

VACHELL, HORACE ANNESLEY. Bunch
grass. $1.20 Doran A13-477

"The connecting link for the short stories... is that the people they tell of have to do, in one way or another, with a ranch belonging to two young Englishmen in the arid part of California." (N Y Sun) "The stories are brief little sketches: 'Alethea-Belle' is a picturesque character-study, and 'The Dumbles' throws light on a family tragedy; 'Dennis' is dramatic and not a little horrible; 'Mary,' and 'Gloriana' have their share of pathos." (N Y Times)

"Country, people, encounters with horse and cattle thieves, epidemics, stranded fellow-Englishmen, etc., are drawn very realistically and with considerable humor and insight."

+ A L A Bkl 9:301 Mr '13 *

"One or two of the tales, as the author himself freely admits, are obviously due to a 'prentice hand, but the general level of the work is excellent."

+ Ath 1912,2:549 N 9 200w

"Character, as well as incident, humor as well as pathos, pervade these stories, and they will make an emphatically valuable addition to the many books already in existence about the place and its people. The point of view of the Englishman who was not bound to the country for life gives them a distinct novelty." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 5 '13 160w

"There is not a superlatively well-told tale in the lot; nothing to enhance the repute as an artist in fiction of the author of 'The Hill' and 'The face of clay.'"

+ Nation 96:443 My 1 '13 400w

"They are bright, readable tales, of general human interest, some perhaps peculiar to the locality, but most of them such as might have happened anywhere else."

+ N Y Sun p3 F 1 '13 120w

"In all the stories there is real feeling and real individuality. Not all of the twenty little tales reflect the ranch life of the time; but every one has its vivid character study."

+ N Y Times 18:86 F 16 '13 270w

"There is humour, a rather easy and obvious humour in several; indeed, there is enough humour for a saving grace in most of them. There is an effective touch of sentiment in more than one—in 'Alethea-Belle' for instance and 'Dennis'—and there is none that is not readable. But in their execution they suffer from a self-consciousness of which one cannot but be aware."

+ Sat R 115:23 Ja 4 '13 300w

VACHELL, HORACE ANNESLEY. Jelf's: a comedy in four acts. $1 Doran A12-1753

A play that has had a successful run in London. "The hero is a young rancher who, suddenly finding himself at the head of an old-established conservative private bank in London, proceeds to use it as a means of winning a fashionable bride and cutting a figure in the ranks of the idle rich. After recklessly courting ruin by identifying himself with all manner of financial reprobates, he receives the support of the Bank of England and triumphs in every way. Manifestly the play owes most of the notice it has obtained to a scene between the hero, his betrothed, and a secret lover of the latter, in which the question of marriage and the mutual responsibilities of the contracting parties are discussed with frankness and a large measure of common sense." (Nation)

+ A L A Bkl 9:254 F '13

"In the printed text it is possible to note better than could be done during the stage representation how natural is the dialogue, and how full it is of apt colloquialisms and correct slang."

+ Ath 1912,2:352 S 28 120w

"Judged by the printed copy it is not easy to account for the favorable critical comment it has procured from some generally fastidious judges. Considered as a whole, it belongs to a very common order of semi-sensational drama with a conventional, if fairly interesting, story and personages who, although they have long been accepted as actualities in the theatre, are but faint reflections of their living prototypes."

+ Nation 96:41 Ja 9 '13 220w

"Jelf's' is comedy; it is, with its blameless, ranch-trained, somewhat roughened hero, its despicable villain, and its London 'bookie' who takes it into his head to save the hero's bank, artificial comedy. To recommend it the play has cleverness, characterization, and interest; it is exactly as readable as a good novelette."

+ N Y Times 17:729 D 1 '12 370w

VAIZEY, JESSIE (BELL) (MRS. GEORGE DE HORNE VAIZEY). Unknown lover. $1.35 (1½c) Putnam 13-11536

For eight years a brother and sister had lived together without friction, then the rift came: Katharine longed to see the world but felt that her duty kept her tied to her brother who needed her. Martin, after eight years of devotion to the memory of a young wife, found a new interest in life, but felt that to marry again would be an unfaithfulness to the sister who had a right to share his home. So each plays out the comedy of sacrificing self for the sake of the other until Grizel, the girl whom Martin loves and Jim Blair, Katharine's "unknown lover" in India, take a hand in their own interests.

"An entertaining story."

+ A L A Bkl 10:118 N '13 *

"The strained relations which arise after the lapse of time, when a brother and sister who have arranged to live together come to desire a change, and are fearful of disturbing each other, are cleverly handled. The author has a keen eye for details of dress and personal appearance."

+ Ath 1913,1:382 Ap 5 100w

Boston Transcript p20 Jl 2 '13 200w

Nation 97:211 S 4 '13 230w

"A pleasantly told if somewhat artificial love tale. The end is unexpectedly satisfactory."

+ N Y Sun p3 Je 7 '13 210w

"For Grizel and for the sparkling story which holds her Mrs. Valzey cannot fail to have the thanks of all her readers."

+ N Y Times 18:427 Ag 10 '13 230w

"If not a very subtle piece of work, the story is eminently readable."

+ Spec 110:848 My 17 '13 180w

VALENTINE, CARO SYRON (MYRA VALENTINE NORYS, pseud.). Beginner in poultry. il $1.50 (1½c) Macmillan 12-21941

"The zest and profit of poultry growing" is the subtitle which the author gives to her book and her first chapter is an essay on kindness to dumb animals and on sympathy as the first requisite for success in poultry raising. Her book is addressed primarily to the amateur rather than to the professional poultry-man and her advice is to begin on a modest scale and grow slowly. Better to begin with a few hens in a dry goods box than to erect expensive buildings and acquire a lot of expensive supplies before you know the real necessities of the work. The latter course too often means failure.

"The author has imagination, enthusiasm, and a wide knowledge of the subject and its literature."

+ A L A Bkl 9:254 F '13

VALENTINE, CARO SYRON—Continued.

"An American book dealing with the subject in exhaustive fashion by an author thoroughly conversant with her subject."

+ Ath 1912,2:483 O 26 20w

Ind 73:905 O 17 '12 30w

"By the time the 'beginner' has read this book he might well think himself something more than a beginner. Perhaps the author's other book, 'How to keep hens at a profit,' should be read first. The present volume is rather for the library or student; it does not cater for the exhibitor. Its value is rather to the thinker, and he who thinks is he who rules."

+ Nature 90:486 Ja 2 '13 300w

VALLANCE, AYMER. Old colleges of Oxford; their architectural history illustrated and described. il *$35 Scribner

"As the title of his work indicates, Mr. Vallance is more concerned with the architectural than the literary renown of Oxford, and has brought to bear on his subject a wealth of knowledge and refined taste. He traces the development of the college from its germ in the hall and shows that even the quadrangle was not at first an essential part of such a structure. All this, too is copiously illustrated by more than two hundred beautiful illustrations carefully chosen for their architectural and artistic value. While writing mainly in the sober style of the historian Mr. Vallance waxes eloquent in dilating upon the enduring charm of the famous university city."—Boston Transcript

"Perhaps the chief value of the book lies in its lavish reproduction of detail."

+ Ath 1912,2:696 D 7 1150w

Reviewed by H. C. Shelley.

Boston Transcript p9 Ja 4 '13 220w

"There are books aplenty about Oxford, but none that gives just the record of the growth of the college buildings which is to be found in this volume by Mr. Vallance. And it is a book most desirable to have. We recommend the book as a whole for the interest of its text and the beauty of its manufacture."

+ Nation 96:532 My 22 '13 950w

"It is probably the most exhaustive work on the architecture of the Oxford colleges ever produced. To those who love the past—and who, nowadays, is not 'temporis acti' a lover?—this book is a treasure casket of the wonders that only the past gives us." L. C.

+ N Y Times 18:303 My 18 '13 800w

"Mr. Vallance has written probably the most exhaustive work upon the architecture of the Oxford colleges that has ever been produced."

+ N Y Times 18:675 N 30 '13 550w

"These illustrations are the feature which will make the book a joy to all, whether they care for the architectural history or not."

+ Spec 109:sup938 D 7 '12 330w

VAN ANTWERP, WILLIAM CLARKSON. Stock exchange from within. il *$1.50 Doubleday 13-2034

"Mr. Van Antwerp's sketch of the origin, nature, and functions of the stock exchange is written primarily as a reply to outside attacks on the methods of that institution, especially in the recent Pujo committee hearings. Since the author is at present a member of the board of governors, it is actually a view 'from within.' It is not, however, an unqualified panegyric on the methods and practices which surround that interesting institution, for it points out faults as well as virtues." (Nation) "It has also a chapter making comparisons between the New York stock exchange and those of London and Paris, on the relations of banks to the exchange, on panics in general, and especially the financial crisis of 1907." (Outlook)

Reviewed by H. C. Emery.

+ Am Econ R 3:917 D '13 670w

"A clear, unbiased description."

+ A L A Bkl 9:391 My '13

Ath 1913,2:179 Ag 23 80w

"It is without the bias of the trader seeking business, and it has the solid foundation of actual fact illuminated by years of experience on the floor of that hiving battleground of billions." I. F. Marcossou.

+ Bookm 37:450 Je '13 1000w

+ Boston Transcript p23 Mr 26 '13 950w

"A volume in defense of the stock exchange has at least the merit of novelty. And this one has the two additional pleas in its favor, that it is written in an enthusiastic, and at times even brilliant, style, sprinkled with apt literary allusions, and amusing stories and epigrams, and also that it is a challenge to the sweeping indictments against this institution made at times without sufficient proof."

+ Cath World 97:256 My '13 180w

"All those who are interested in investments and in business enterprises of magnitude will find it useful and suggestive."

+ Elec World 61:689 Mr 29 '13 250w

"This book is timely. It is written in an entertaining style and a large part of it is devoted to the recording of reminiscences and incidents which have little relation to the serious discussion of economic problems."

+ Engin N 69:317 Ap 17 '13 180w

"The author's numerous references make the work a guide to a library of authorities."

+ Ind 74:1449 Je 26 '13 650w

"A work worthy of the institution in whose defense it is written."

+ J Pol Econ 21:667 Jl '13 500w

"For a work written without pretence of scientific investigation, this contains considerable reference and citation to the more formal literature on the topics concerned, and its historical dates and references are generally accurate."

+ Nation 96:208 F 27 '13 650w

"He has written an interesting and very readable book."

+ N Y Sun p7 F 15 '13 100w

"Perhaps the most intimate book on the stock exchange and its workings that has ever been produced. The strength of the author was put into the chapters bearing on the functions of the exchanges of every country, with especial reference to the wisdom of allowing them to regulate themselves rather than to interfere with their functions by laws which, often attempted, have never worked as their enactors desired."

+ N Y Times 18:89 F 23 '13 650w

Outlook 103:601 Mr 1 '13 70w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:561 S '13 350w

+ Spec 111:526 O 4 '13 170w

"A pleasing and lucid explanation of a very complicated question."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 21 '13 500w

VAN BUREN, EVELYN. Pippin. il *$1.50 (2c) Century 13-6336

This story of the London streets has two heroines—Pippin the girl who has been a pick-pocket from childhood, but who now wants to be "straight," and Miss Lawrence, the American actress stranded and alone in a strange land. Chance throws the two together first and then their common need holds them so. Both are seeking "engagements;" both face privation and want; together they struggle to meet the rent of the little room in Jubilee court. Then success comes to them, and each finds happiness, Pippin with her "Dandy" and Leonora with Mr. Charles Browne, who comes to London from Goshen, Indiana, on Pippin's invitation.

"We enjoyed the reading of it; but we quite earnestly recommend that the author confine her next effort to her own native town, her street, and, preferably, her own back yard." F. T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:338 My '13 220w

"The book is full of cheerful humor."

+ Ind 74:990 My 1 '13 70w

"The book is full of humor and full of hopefulness—it is as hopeful and breezy as Pippin herself. And Pippin is almost quaint enough and real enough and strongly flavored enough to have stepped out of one of Dickens's pages. The matter-of-fact, cheerful and confident way in which she goes about her task of self-reformation makes a very engaging tale."

+ N Y Times 18:152 Mr 16 '13 250w

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 27 '13 270w

VANCE, LOUIS JOSEPH. Day of days. ll *$1.25
(2c) Little 13-2840

The action of this extravaganza takes place in eighteen hours. P. Sybarite, an insignificant little clerk, has, thru the condescending generosity of a rich relative, been able to entertain three of his boarding-house friends at a theatre party. The play is "Kismet," and it is while walking home with Miss Molly Lessing and fancifully imagining the idea of the play as applied to himself, that the first incident in what proves to be his day of days occurs. He sees Molly whisked away in a taxi-cab, follows after, and before morning has accomplished many things and has learned that Molly Lessing, whom he is to marry, is Marian Blessington the missing heiress.

"One of the best and liveliest stories Mr. Vance has written. Sensation piles upon sensation in a most startling and yet always perfectly logical manner. The story is one that must be enjoyed by anyone who wishes to be kept thoroughly awake for a few hours."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 21 '13 280w

"It may not be literature, but the reader who starts in with this book is in no danger of falling asleep over it."

+ N Y Sun p3 F 15 '13 120w

"Will undoubtedly be a leader for popularity for light, entertaining vacation reading."

+ N Y Sun p14 Je 14 '13 50w

"The author rightly calls it 'an extravaganza.' But, without pretending or attempting to make it anything more, he has put into it a great deal of skill, humor, and imagination."

+ N Y Times 18:177 Mr 30 '13 250w

"For purely unadulterated, exaggerated adventure and slangy humor 'The day of days' commends itself to the discriminating. The story is highly diverting."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Mr 13 '13 300w

VANCE, LOUIS JOSEPH. Joan Thursday. ll
*$1.30 (1c) Little 13-20209

Mr. Vance's new novel is a realistic study of the rise of a young and attractive shop girl in the theatrical profession. Wearing of her sordid home conditions, Joan runs away, determined to succeed on the stage. She finds an opening on a "four-a-day" vaudeville circuit and after a variety of experiences finds herself established on Broadway—a success. Joan is a girl possessed in the beginning of the finer instincts, and it seems for a time that, under the influence of John Matthias, they are to triumph, but she weakens, and the end of the story is disappointing in that Joan's success is won only at the expense of her better nature.

"Though painstaking, it seems to us near dullness. We like the author better in his lighter work; in this book his sense of humour is dormant for long intervals."

+ Ath 1913.2:557 N 15 40w

"His latest book shows many carelessnesses, much slovenliness of style, much of the melodramatic touch of his former efforts, but it is a book which will make its way on something better than mere sensationalism. It is the portrait of a woman which deserves a place on the line with some of the best in fiction's great art gallery." G. I. Colbron.

+ Bookm 38:300 N '13 700w

"Mr. Vance would have done better had he continuously centered our attention upon Joan Thursday. He makes a mistake in shifting his point of view. Aside from this, his novel is well constructed, offering as a whole promise that Mr. Vance has made no mistake in joining the ranks of the realists." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 20 '13 700w

"One of the best of Mr. Vance's productions."

+ Ind 76:39 O 2 '13 130w

"The type of Joan Thursday is common enough, and this re-study of it is so skillfully done that the lover of realism, in the best sense, will not be likely to dismiss it as 'unpleasant.'"

+ Nation 97:336 O 9 '13 270w

N Y Sun p16 N 8 '13 1500w

"The present book is merely an attempt to satisfy the increasing appetite for 'strong' fiction, in which the duel of sex is the predominating theme."

+ N Y Times 18:494 S 28 '13 380w

"In execution and ambition this novel marks a positive advance in the author's work."

+ Outlook 105:280 O 4 '13 70w

"An unusually absorbing tale."

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 16 '13 270w

VAN DYKE, HARRY WESTON. Through South America; introd. by J. Barrett. ll
*$2 (2c) Crowell 12-25277

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"If the author has been 'through South America,' his book does not show it. If his book is purely a compilation, it is poorly done except for some of the historical sketches. With books so much superior readily available, it is hard to find an excuse for a volume of this sort." W. S. Tower.

+ Ann Am Acad 47:314 My '13 450w

Reviewed by Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:528 Ja '13 420w

"A volume whose scope, accuracy and charm compel admiration. Mr. Van Dyke has made original researches whose results are embodied here and can be found nowhere else in English, while he has had access to the rich stores of the Pan American Union."

+ Chaut 69:116 D '12 150w

"Though he by no means catches the spirit of such a book as Mr. Arthur Ruhl's 'The other Americans,' or imparts the thrill of new discoveries conveyed in Mr. Bingham's 'Across South America' (which latter title, by the way, is a serious omission in Mr. Van Dyke's bibliography), he does succeed in bringing home to us a pleasantly agreeable picture of life and nature in South America." Julian Park.

+ Dial 53:446 D 1 '12 230w

"Is excellent in every way, and we recommend it to those who are anxious to be well informed in regard to men and things in South America."

+ Educ R 45:209 F '13 80w

+ J Pol Econ 21:280 Mr '13 70w

"The book has interest not only for the tourist; a study of its historical and economic material will broaden the outlook of the stay-at-homes."

+ Lit D 45:1133 D 14 '12 220w

"The book is agreeably written, and none the less so because it contains few statistics and no politics, being chiefly devoted to descriptions of scenery and of towns, with some incidental remarks on the resources of each region and on the life of the people."

+ Nation 96:86 Ja 23 '13 230w

+ N Y Times 18:27 Ja 19 '13 80w

"Is valuable first of all to the reader who wants to get a broad view of present conditions. In the second place, the reader who wants to know about some one country in particular will find that country described in as much detail as is possible as to scenery, cities, people, social life, industry, commercial and economic aspects. In the third place, the business man with an eye to South American VAN DYKE, HARRY WESTON—Continued. trade should find this a volume to his taste, for in it Mr. Van Dyke lays stress on the commercial relations between the two Americas."

+ Outlook 103:322 F 8 '13 150w

"Thanks to the large number of publications now available on the subject, Harry Weston Van Dyke, in 'Through South America,' has shown how one may write an acceptable book about countries which apparently he has never visited. An historical sketch covering 133 pages is followed by a description of each of the ten republics and of the Guianas. A list of books, also, is provided, which is remarkable chiefly for the alphabetical distortions of its titles. Since the book is a compilation expanded from a series of articles prepared for reading circles, it would hardly be fair to treat it as a work of serious character either in form or in content."

— Pol Sci Q 28:177 Mr '13 130w

R of Rs 47:377 Mr '13 70w

"To what have been mere names he gives an individuality and charm which makes the reader yearn to see these little-known and little-visited countries and cities."

+ Springfield Republican p6 D 12 '12 800w

"The author nowhere gets below the surface. Unless the reader has a capacity for remembering many unrelated facts, he will know but little more about South America when he finishes the book than when he began." W. S. Tower.

— Yale R ns2:789 J1 '13 350w

VANE, GEORGE. Love dream. *. $1.25 Lane

13-7887

The author's "theme is the folly of the man who hunts after the ideal woman, the man who is 'often misled by the arch of a beautiful wing-like brow, or the delicate curve of a lip,' and who sooner or later awakes to find that realized ideals are prone to have feet of clay."

First the father and then the son, because he is the son of his father, has to learn the bitter lesson that the pursuit of the ideal may be the quest of a chimera. But there is a happy ending for the hero and stern justice is duly meted out upon the evil-doers. (Boston Transcript)

"An excellent example of that type of fiction which, by reason of a full-bodied story, triumphs over certain crudities of workmanship." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 14 '12 330w

"There are deep passions; there are battle, murder and sudden death; and it all seems as unreal as a moving picture play. Yet it whies away a quiet hour not boreomously."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Mr 12 '13 370w

N Y Times 18:145 Mr 16 '13 170w

VAN GOGH, VINCENT. Letters of a post-impressionist; tr. and ed. by Anthony M. Ludovici. il $2 Houghton

13-35400

"Van Gogh died more than twenty years ago and his claim to be considered a great painter is now scarcely disputed by anyone acquainted with his work. . . . These letters reveal a man of painstaking habits and almost pedestrian mind. He is seen to be deeply interested in the technical side of his art, and to be for ever getting assistance from the example of the old masters (especially of the Dutch school), for whom his admiration was unbounded." (Spec) "The introductory essay by the translator analyzes his technique and his peculiarities and describes many of his pictures." (Boston Transcript)

"Admirably edited and well translated sections from Van Gogh's letters."

+ A L A Bkl 9:448 Je '13

"The letters are not witty or discursive, and make no general appeal. But for those who have felt and appreciated the passion in Van Gogh's painting the simplicity and directness of his letters will verify the spirit that they have found in his pictures. The Preface is unfortunately written in a tone of complacent superiority. His translation of the letters is excellent."

+ — Ath 1912:2:764 D 21 650w

"His criticisms of other artists are full of suggestiveness and his views can scarcely fail to be helpful to all painters. Often there are flashes of a dry humor." N. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 F 8 '13 1350w

"After standing puzzled before the canvases of Vincent van Gogh one may turn with pleasure to a clearer understanding of the man as revealed in his letters."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '13 380w

"There are several reasons why people interested in art should read these letters. They are (and it is in this respect, I take it, that they are most important) a real means of learning about something in the world of art at present which otherwise we should have small chance of knowing." E: E. Hale.

+ Dial 54:455 Je 1 '13 3400w

+ Int Studio 50:164 Ag '13 180w

"There has been so much controversy and criticism of post-impressionism recently that these letters are especially pertinent. And they should have the serious consideration of all art lovers, regardless of prejudices."

+ Lit D 47:702 O 18 '13 430w

Nation 96:344 Ap 3 '13 450w

"The correspondence of Vincent Van Gogh with his family and friends is of greater importance than such collections are usually, because the editors have selected chiefly such passages as contain the painter's expressions of opinion about his art and about pictures and artists. It gives the right kind of information about an artist and a form of art that are exciting curiosity at present and, in some people, admiration."

+ N Y Sun p3 Mr 1 '13 130w

+ N Y Times 18:673 N 30 '13 300w

"The greater part of the letters, which have been somewhat stiffly translated, will not be of much interest except to painters, but anyone who reads them through will be rewarded by making the acquaintance of a sympathetic personage."

+ — Spec 110:sup132 Ja 25 '13 350w

VAN KLEECK, MARY. Artificial flower makers. il $1.50 (2½c) Survey associates

13-11646

This book, describing the results of an investigation into the flower making industry in New York, is the second of a series of such studies issued by the Committee on woman's work of the Russell Sage foundation. This particular trade was chosen because it offers "a concrete illustration of large industrial problems—seasonal work, child labor, lack of skill, the home-work system—which are common to many occupations in many communities." (Preface) The chapters are as follows: The artificial flower trade; Workers in the shops; The seasons and unemployment; Wages and home responsibilities; A group of home workers; The flower trade and the law; The artificial flower trade in Paris; The training of flower makers; Summary.

A L A Bkl 10:65 O '13

"Miss van Kleeck's information was gained directly from the workers and her book shows very careful research."

+ Boston Transcript p18 J1 30 '13 170w

N Y Times 18:468 S 14 '13 220w

"On the whole the book is an effective contribution to the literature, whose purpose is to set forth 'how the other half lives.'"

+ Pol Sci Q 28:558 S '13 170w

"The impression of photographic accuracy which this book leaves with the reader is proof of the thoroughness and precision with which the investigation was conducted. No sensational high-lights blur the report with unfairness and 'muckraking,' yet no detail is left undeveloped." M. L. Chamberlain.

+ Survey 30:436 Je 28 '13 550w

VAN KLEECK, MARY. Women in the book-binding trade; introd. by H. R. Seager. il $1.50 (2½c) Survey associates 13-3075

The book records the results of an investigation made by the Committee on women's work of the Russell Sage foundation. The field of bookbinding was chosen for investigation because it "presents in miniature most of the problems which confront women wage earners." The study "sheds much light upon the chaotic conditions in the trade, the absence of standards of wages, hours and sanitary conditions. It reveals the defenseless position of the workers, so far as New York state is concerned, in the absence of a workmen's compensation law, a statutory closing hour at night, and a minimum wage law. There are enlightening instances of the results, in human suffering, of this absence of needed legislative safe-guards." (Survey)

"The book is a model of construction, well organized, well written, and well supplemented by charts and tables. The chapter on women's work in the binderies emphasizes rather too much the changes in the processes instead of presenting a description from which the reader may visualize the activities of the workers, and may understand the requirements made of them. The tables show great care in preparation, but the headings are often too elaborate." S. M. Kingsbury.

+ Am Econ R 3:667 S '13 350w

Reviewed by Lucile Eaves.

+ Am J Soc 19:247 S '13 750w

"A thorough study."

+ A L A Bkl 9:448 Je '13

"The book is well worth the consideration of every one who is interested in the industrial activity of women."

+ Ann Am Acad 47:286 My '13 180w

"The investigation by the committee of the Foundation has been thorough and systematic."

+ Boston Transcript p25 Ap 16 '13 350w

+ J Pol Econ 21:878 N '13 250w

"It is an extremely interesting book, for the trade is a curiously complex one and the problems of employment are extraordinarily varied, so that in this trade alone nearly all social and economic questions have to be answered."

+ N Y Sun p3 Mr 1 '13 80w

N Y Times 18:260 Ap 27 '13 150w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:558 S '13 150w

"This significance of the bookbinding trade in New York city, as the occasion of our national position at the rear of the procession of the nations, is not made clear, although the Williams decision is dealt with in chapter VII and the international agreement of the European nations is briefly mentioned in passing. The book itself loses in weight in consequence. It needlessly appears to be merely a local study of a somewhat localized industry. These reservations being made, it remains an initial contribution in the field in which such study is urgently needed, and will afford good ammunition for the advocates of protective legislation." Florence Kelley.

+ Survey 29:395 D 28 '12 650w

"Most interesting and readable of recent volumes on women in industry."

+ Survey 29:799 Mr 1 '13 550w

VAN LOAN, CHARLES EMMETT. Inside the ropes. il $1.25 (1½c) Small 13-6737

The character of the eleven stories in this volume is disclosed by the title; all are stories of the prize ring. The titles are: Out for the stuff; Battling Pete's last engagement; Art and the dollar; The Leadville blacksmith; The legs of Freckles; The supreme bumper degree; The sparring partner; Garrity's champion; The heart of the gallery; Mr. Joseph Eagan, amateur; Tony.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 14 '13 200w

+ N Y Sun p4 My 3 '13 50w

"Nearly all of the tales are better done, told with more dash and go and with better art as well, than were the baseball stories."

+ N Y Times 18:410 Jl 27 '13 200w

VAN LOAN, CHARLES EMMETT. Lucky seventh. il $1.25 (2c) Small 13-9243

These are all stories of the big league, stories of base-ball by one who knows the game. There are nine stories in the group with titles as follows: The Mexican marvel; The good old wagon; For revenue only; The bachelor benedict; "Butterfly" Boggs; pitcher; Will a duck swim? Crossed "signs"; Won off the diamond; The pitch-out.

"The stories that make up the contents of these two volumes are each one a perfect jewel of their kind, and certainly claim the right to be regarded for their literary merit as well as for the insight and familiarity they reveal of the author's knowledge of baseball and prize-fighting."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 14 '13 200w

"The stories are interesting."

+ N Y Sun p4 My 3 '13 50w

"Fans of all kinds will revel in this volume, which will fall in interest only for the benighted few who care nothing about our national game. They constitute a fairly liberal education alike in baseball matters and slang."

+ N Y Times 18:568 O 19 '13 150w

VAN MILLINGEN, ALEXANDER, and TRAQUAIR, RAMSAY. Byzantine churches in Constantinople; their history and architecture. il $9.50 Macmillan 13-463

"Enriched with numerous plans, reproductions of buildings as a whole, and of characteristic details of their structure, it gives an exhaustive description of the evolution of the Byzantine style of ecclesiastical architecture with many most interesting accounts of notable events connected with the surviving examples of it." (Int Studio) "All the Byzantine churches are described, planned, and photographed, so that the specialist and layman alike will find the volume attractive from their several points of view. The principal part of the architectural work has fallen to Mr. Ramsay Traquair, who also contributes a valuable introductory chapter on the principles and development of the Byzantine art of building. Mr. W. S. George's chief share is the planning of St. Irene . . . Mr. A. E. Henderson has contributed admirable plans of SS. Sergius and Bacchus, and St. Mary Panachrantos, with drawings and photographs of other churches." (Eng Hist R)

"Attractively illustrated and presents much interesting information."

+ Am Hist R 18:852 Jl '13 30w

"We must first be allowed a word of regret that the author has omitted Santa Sophia from his record. With this exception we have nothing but praise and gratitude for this splendid volume. The text itself is written in a clear and modest style, full of references to authority, interesting anecdote, sympathy and spirit from beginning to end. Its value is much increased by an excellent chapter at the beginning by Mr. Traquair, and by the lucid summary and classification, with suggested dates, at the end."

+ Ath 1912, 2:482 O 26 1000w

"A book of great interest and of permanent value." O. M. Dalton.

+ Eng Hist R 28:352 Ap '13 1400w

"The one drawback militating against the full acceptance of the scholarly writer's conclusions is that he does not do full justice to the originality of the style under discussion, for he asserts that the various schemes in which the churches of the Byzantine empire were planned were all derived from the three main types that prevailed in the Roman world in the early fifth century, namely, the basilican, the octagonal, and the cruciform."

VAN MILLINGEN, A., and TRAQUAIR R.

—Continued.

+ — Int Studio 48:349 F '13 330w

"The churches of Constantinople' is indeed confessedly a book for the ecclesiologist. It is inconceivable that it should appeal to any wide public. But within these limits it is excellent. It strikes us as an advance, in accuracy and completeness, on the same author's work upon the walls of the city. More elaborate monographs may perhaps be written on individual churches, but it is not probable that any better general survey will see the light. Professor Van Millingen has finished a monument more durable than some of the buildings which he describes are likely to be."

+ Spec 110:668 Ap 19 '13 1400w

VAN PELT, JOHN VREDENBURGH. Essentials of composition as applied to art. il *$1.75 (3c) Macmillan 13-20143

A second edition of a work published in 1902 with the title "Discussion of composition." In this edition the author has recognized the new methods of building which have developed within the last decade.

"This new edition will be welcomed by all who are genuinely interested in the construction and decoration of modern buildings."

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 29 '13 370w

"The book is full of information to architect or layman."

+ Int Studio 51:sup141 D '13 120w

VAN SAANEN, MARIE LOUISE. Wild grapes. il *$1.35 Moffat 13-13533

"That there is a boundary line where the duty which a man owes to his wife ends and the duty which he owes to himself begins is the tenet upheld in 'Wild grapes.' David Ghent has treated his wife more like a spoiled child than a responsible human being, indulging all her whims, bearing every burden himself, exacting nothing and forgiving to the very utmost. But at the last he rebels."—N Y Times

Reviewed by Malcolm Lee.

+ — Bookm 37:575 J1 '13 1050w

"For a book that is filled with the coarseness and hopeless vulgarity of such drab people as Lucia Ghent, née Earle, and her mother, the story manages to hold the reader's interest with a sort of fascination, however morbid and unwholesome."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Je 18 '13 220w

"What this indictment of one form of American married life has to do with the picturesque beginning we cannot make out."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Je 7 '13 150w

"The first part of the book when David is endeavoring to make his way in the world and before his marriage, is rather the best. It is when the author really gets to work upon her thesis that the book becomes somewhat commonplace. The style is uneven; usually fair, occasionally so bad that we can hardly believe certain phrases to be other than proof-readers' mistakes."

+ — N Y Times 18:438 Ag 17 '13 250w

VAN VORST, MARIE. His love story. il *$1.20 (3c) Bobbs 13-10991

This is the story of the love of a young French officer of cavalry for a beautiful American heiress; and it is also the story of the devotion of a dog for his master. When after a skirmish with natives on the edge of the desert Captain Sabron is kept captive, wounded and at the point of death, it is the girl, with the aid of the dog, who rescues him and brings him back to life.

"A very pretty and original little love story."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 13 '13 150w

"A trifle excellently done."

+ Nation 97:14 J1 3 '13 170w

"A pleasant, if saccharine tale."

+ — N Y Sun p4 My 31 '13 120w

"Just the thing to read when lying in a hammock on an idle summer day."

+ N Y Times 18:438 Ag 17 '13 250w

VARDON, HARRY. How to play golf. il *$2.7 (4½c) Jacobs A13-356

A book by the author of "The complete golfer" intended as a supplement to that work. Changes and new developments in the game within recent years has called forth this new work. There are numerous illustrations from photographs illustrating various grips, swings and drives.

Ath 1912,2:342 S 28 30w

R of Rs 47:380 Mr '13 30w

VASARI, GIORGIO. Lives of the most eminent painters, sculptors and architects; newly tr. by Gaston Du C. De Vere. 10v il ea *$7 Macmillan 12-24295

This translation of Vasari's great work will be complete in 10 volumes. Well printed, with beautiful plates in both monochrome and color, and edited with only such notes as are essential to an understanding of the text, this is perhaps the most excellent English edition yet issued. "Students who do not know Italian can with its aid go straight to what will ever remain a true fountainhead of information concerning the early renaissance." (Int Studio)

v. 1. Cimabue, Giotto, Orcagna, and the Pisani are among the early painters whose lives are treated in this first volume.

v. 2. The period covered is that which preceded the golden age of Italian art—the period before Michael Angelo.

v. 3. The volume covers the period from Piero della Francesca to Verrocchio and Mantegna.

"The first issue of the new Vasari is very satisfactory, and should ensure an extensive public for the remaining nine volumes."

+ Ath 1912,1:540 My 11 150w (Review of v 1)

"The chief features of this handsome quarto edition of Vasari's standard work are the wise selection of its illustrations and the excellence of their reproduction."

+ Ath 1912,2:453 O 19 100w (Review of v 2)

+ Ath 1912,2:789 D 28 70w (Review of v 3)

+ Ath 1913,1:549 My 17 150w (Review of v 4)

"Newly translated by an accomplished scholar with a consummate knowledge of the language in which it is written, who has preserved the letter as well as the spirit of the original text far better than certain of his predecessors, admirably printed and enriched with a great number of excellent illustrations that form a pictorial record of the evolution of Italian renaissance art, the publication when the ten volumes into which it is to be divided are all issued will indeed merit an honoured place in every connoisseur's library."

+ Int Studio 47:170 Ag '12 250w (Review of v 1)

"The second volume well maintains the high level of excellence of the first, the fine printing and the beautiful plates, some in monochrome, others in colour, giving to it a distinction as great as that of its predecessor."

+ Int Studio 48:177 D '12 270w (Review of v 2)

"The general level of excellence of the illustrations in this truly noble edition is extremely high."

+ Int Studio 50:164 Ag '13 300w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"These first three volumes are a notable and scholarly production. The monochrome plates are admirable and well chosen; the colour plates are, as usual, a mistake."

+ — Sat R 115:58 Ja 11 '13 200w (Review of v 1-3)

"It is amazing that a scholar taking in hand so serious a work as the translation of the whole of Vasari should allow his labours to be defaced by these three-colour process illustrations," which merely travesty the original pictures."

+ — Spec 108:sup1021 Je 29 '12 230w (Review of v 1)

+ — Spec 110:sup129 Ja 25 '13 80w (Review of v 2 and 3)

VAUGHAN, REV. BERNARD. Socialism from the Christian standpoint, ten conferences. il *$1.50 (2c) Macmillan 12-27952

Six of the papers contained in this volume were delivered as sermons in St. Patrick's cathedral of New York city during the Lent of 1912. The remaining four have been added to complete and round out the subject. Father Vaughan, who sees in socialism a menace to Christianity and civilization, discusses in these ten "conferences": Socialism in its relation to the papacy; the state; the individual; the family; religion; Socialism and the Christian socialists; Socialism and the rights of ownership; Socialism and the duties of ownership; Socialism and its promises; Socialism and social reformation.

Reviewed by A. W. Small.

+ — Am J Soc 18:808 My '13 500w

"He says much well and truly, but more subtly and sophistically, about the resources of the Catholic church for healing all the real ills in human society. But after all he does not understand, or if he understands he artfully conceals, the gist of the whole matter." A. W. Small.

+ — Am J Theol 17:317 Ap '13 500w

"While it does not offer a large contribution to the discussion, many sections are worth consideration, and as a whole it will appeal to Catholic readers."

+ A L A Bkl 9:392 My '13

"It should rank as one of the best attacks against the theory of socialism." Alexander Fleisher.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:269 Jl '13 80w

"A better title for Father Vaughan's interesting work would have been 'Socialism from the Roman Catholic standpoint.'"

+ — Ath 1913:190 Ja 25 650w

"On the whole, it cannot be said that this book offers any large contribution to the discussion of socialism. But many sentences and passages occur which are worth considering by men of all schools."

+ — Bib World 41:215 Mr '13 320w

Boston Transcript p9 Ja 4 '13 330w

"For the general reader, at any rate, this book is the most satisfactory that has yet been produced on this subject. It is especially commendable for its moderation and its winning tone. Very few assertions are made which are not susceptible of proof, and there is not a single rancorous statement in all its pages. One serious defect of the book is the great number of citations which are not accompanied by exact references to author, work, or page."

+ — Cath World 96:674 F '13 500w

"A strange combination of a rigid adherence to the old natural rights philosophy, the advocacy of Jesuit teachings, the frequent and unwarranted use of slang, and the extended glorification of the church fathers. In no way can the book be looked upon as a contribution to the literature of socialism."

— Dial 54:250 Mr 16 '13 350w

Reviewed by C. R. Henderson.

J Pol Econ 21:664 Jl '13 350w

"Father Vaughan is an admirable disputant. He is eminently fair, if sometimes severe; he knows how to command attention. It is only occasionally that the critical and constructive faculties are so equally yoked as in these essays, or 'conferences,' as Father Vaughan prefers to term them."

+ — Nation 96:442 My 1 '13 700w

"Any voice like Father Vaughan's raised up in vigorous protest and pointing out in convincing accents the dangers and the remedies should be welcomed by the American public as a valuable personal contribution toward maintaining the stability of our highest national ideals." J. J. Daly.

+ N Y Times 18:122 Mr 9 '13 450w

Outlook 103:373 F 15 '13 120w

R of Rs 47:121 Ja '13 130w

Sat R 116:242 Ag 23 '13 1100w

Springfield Republican p5 Je 5 '13 1000w

VENABLE, MARY. Interpretation of piano music. $1.25 (2c) Ditson 13-7501

"The prime object of the work here offered to the student is to assist him in acquiring a correct understanding of the visible language of music; to gather the significance of the abbreviated modes of a notation which must be rightly interpreted by the mind before the music can be conveyed to the ear by means of the mechanism of the pianoforte. Very little attention has been given to the subject in printed publications, and these pages are intended to set forth the principles involved, in a way that is not merely of theoretic interest but is also of practical value."—Preface

"The book should prove of real value to the thoro piano student."

+ Ind 75:275 Jl 31 '13 50w

+ Nation 96:483 My 8 '13 550w

VERMILYE, KATE JORDAN. Creeping tides. il *$1.30 (1½c) Little 13-35388

Greenwich village, a little-known corner of Greater New York, furnishes the setting for this story. To one of its sheltered streets drift two of life's derelicts—a man once dismissed in dishonor from the British army, and a woman whose secret past holds a prison sentence and an escape and whose present is shadowed by fear of detection. The meeting of the two fugitives, their growing love for one another, with the creeping in of the tides that bring the hidden things of the past back into the present are the matters told in the first part of the narrative. Then come the events that bring about reinstatement in the army for one, and honorable pardon for the other, with happiness for both.

"An unusual and well written story, which all kinds of readers will enjoy."

+ A L A Bkl 9:457 Je '13 *

"A distinctly readable story."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '13 220w

"If somewhat over-harrowing there is also sweetness and charm and genuine pathos."

+ Chaut 71:115 Jl 5 '13 150w

"The end is clear clap-trap. The first part of story is told so agreeably however, and the impending calamity is handled so skillfully that the reader will read on to the finish in spite of the author's more careless workmanship. She has the knack of making her people interesting; the humbler characters the reader will enjoy."

+ — N Y Sun p3 My 10 '13 200w

N Y Times 18:304 My 18 '13 70w

"The book is of the kind that we know as 'summer reading' pleasantly written, with the mystery well sustained, and the reader's interest not often permitted to flag."

+ N Y Times 18:481 S 21 '13 150w

"It is a story that appeals strongly to the sympathies and the unfolding of its dramatic plot will be followed with deep interest."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 12 '13 270w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Harper's air-craft book. (Harper's practical books for boys) il *$1 Harper 13-19522

The keynote of this book, according to the introduction, is practicality. "The author's purpose has been to furnish a book on aircraft not only accurate, but simpler and more comprehensive than anything which he has been able to find on the subject." The six parts into which the book is divided are headed: Why the aeroplane flies; Model aeroplanes and fliers; Gliders, or non-propelled aeroplanes; The modern aeroplane; Hydroaeroplanes and flying-boats; Uses of the aeroplane.

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT —Continued.

"A clear, elementary treatment for older boys. Fully illustrated by diagrams and badly-reproduced halftones."

+ A L A Bkl 10:164 D '13

"Comprehensive diagrams and plans make the text extremely lucid." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:322 N '13 60w

"The most readable and complete handbook of its kind yet published."

+ Ind 76:458 D 4 '13 100w

+ N Y Times 18:520 O 5 '13 250w

+ Outlook 105:330 O 11 '13 40w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Harper's book for young naturalists. 1l *$1.50 (2c) Harper 13-10523

This book for boys is primarily a manual for the collector of specimens. Recognizing the instinct for collecting that is inherent, in some measure, in every boy's nature, the author believes in directing it toward an interest in natural objects. His book "is written for boys who are interested in out-of-doors life and out-of-doors work, and who are anxious and willing to learn all they can of nature's wonders, animate or inanimate, and who collect or want to collect something of value and interest in an intelligent way." (Introduction) He believes in boys' learning to do things for themselves and gives directions for the making of cases and other appliances for which the young collector will find need.

+ A L A Bkl 10:76 O '13

"Excellent volume in which all boys will delight."

+ Chaut 71:238 Ag 16 '13 170w

"If 'Harper's book for young naturalists' does not send boys out into the fields and woods in search of birds' eggs, bugs, flowers and other things, which should be its natural effect, it will at any rate be very useful to boys who have already the collecting taste."

+ N Y Sun p4 My 17 '13 120w

+ N Y Times 18:304 My 18 '13 110w

+ N Y Times 18:371 Je 22 '13 320w

"Practical information for boy collectors. All told simply and clearly with excellent pictures."

+ Outlook 104:343 Je 14 '13 40w

VICTORIA, QUEEN OF GREAT BRITAIN.

¹ Girlhood of Queen Victoria: a selection from Her Majesty's diaries between the years 1832 and 1840; ed. with an introd. by Viscount Esher. 2v 1l *$9 Longmans 13-7900

"The present collection begins at the age of thirteen and ends at twenty with her engagement to Prince Albert. It consists of the notes of a young girl, very simple, frank, and ingenuous, not specially well-educated in the conventional sense, but full of eager curiosity about the world and its ways." (Spec) "Yet it is a great romance here unfolded, of a simple and unpretentious child, without apparent talents at the time, whose distinction from other English children lay chiefly in the fortunate accident of her birth, slowly taking on the qualifications necessary to the great position she was to occupy, and steadily blossoming into the woman who was later to stamp herself forever upon the history of her people. . . . It is not merely her own life, the stages of her own education, that are set forth, but a section of all English life of her time." (Boston Transcript)

"The value [of these volumes] consists in the additional evidence which they afford, from an unusual source, of much that has already appeared in other forms." C. E. Fryer.

+ Am Hist R 18:808 Jl '13 650w

"The interest of these volumes as their editor happily points out, is mainly that of character."

+ Ath 1912,2:545 N 9 1850w

Reviewed by Edward Fuller.

+ Bookm 36:673 F '13 950w

"The charm in these pages [lies in] their unaffected and unflinching revelation of a mind. Moreover, it is a mind in itself worth knowing from its beginnings. Lord Esher's editorial handling of these journals is admirable—discreet and yet fearlessly critical." B. K.

+ Boston Transcript p23 D 18 '12 3250w

"Lord Esher has admirably performed his task as editor: his general introduction is thoughtful and pleasantly written, his short prefaces to the chapters into which the diaries are divided prepare the reader to find what is most noteworthy in each of them, his footnotes are concise and sufficient and the discretion which he has used in selection is unimpeachable." W. H.

+ Eng Hist R 28:406 Ap '13 470w

"This diary of Queen Victoria's girlhood will make a great many friends for the Queen." E. S. Nadal.

+ Lit D 46:1015 My 3 '13 2600w

"It is the young queen's almost Boswellian portraiture of her Prime Minister which gives her journal of these years its distinct charm."

+ Nation 96:81 Ja 23 '13 2000w

"This is even more interesting as a reflex of the English life and the court surroundings than were Queen Victoria's letters, published some five years ago."

+ Outlook 103:45 Ja 4 '13 180w

"We have never read anything more human or feminine than the present diaries of Majesty in its teens, so transparently straightforward, so naive, lively, and girlish."

+ Sat R 114: 645 N 23 '12 1300w

"The book is one which the English nation will be glad to possess, for it presents an aspect of the life of Queen Victoria which is now too little remembered, and which is full of interest both on historical and on human grounds. It is amply illustrated and owes much to the editing of Lord Esher, who provides prefatory notes to the different chapters and a useful and discriminating introduction."

+ Spec 109: 904 N 30 '12 1700w

"It is possible for one to understand more accurately the matured personality of man or woman if one understands first the boy or girl from which either grew. This is especially true of Queen Victoria, and in that fact lies the real value of these two interesting volumes."

+ Springfield Republican p5 D 19 '12 1500w

VIEBIG, CLARA COHN. (C. VIEBIG, pseud.)

^a Son of his mother. *$1.25 Lane 13-7851

"A study of a peasant boy, adopted when a baby by a man and woman of wealth and culture who carefully concealed the truth about his origin until it was too late. Childless, they had both longed for children, but in thus striving to remedy their condition they not only found a cure worse than the disease, but ended by feeling that they had actually done the boy a great wrong in not leaving him to starve with his brothers and sisters and fierce, poverty-stricken mother."—N Y Times

+ Ath 1913,1:544 My 17 150w

"This is a book which makes one think, and it certainly deserved a more careful and idiomatic translation." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:537 Jl '13 500w

"A well composed and interesting novel as well as a singularly clear presentation of the problem. The author narrates the story with characteristic German compactness of ideas, and thereby gives the action a mildly dramatic finish; the tone is at the same time vivid and thoughtful. As a study of adolescent psychology with side lights on heredity, the character of Wolfgang is very nearly a triumph—a brilliant, true, picture, heightened by fairness and sympathy."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 24 '13 450w
N Y Sun p7 Je 21 '13 950w

"The minor characters are not especially interesting, and, though the boy Wolfgang is fairly well drawn, Käte's husband is only a shadow. There are some good bits of description in the book, which would be greatly improved by being cut to a third of its present length. The theme furnishes possibilities which this novel by no means fulfils."

— + N Y Times 18:279 My 11 '13 380w

VILLIERS-STUART, GERALD. White shrine.
*$1.25 (1½c) McClurg

A story of life in Bohemian London, with glimpses into the more settled and well-ordered realms of existence in country houses. The heroine is Etheria Vaughan, author of "The hoarded memory," a novel that in spite of its sweet simplicity becomes a best-seller. Under the influence of David Waldorfe, a picturesque knave in artist's clothing, Etheria writes a sensational tale, "The villain," which, after the addition of certain salacious touches by Waldorfe, is published anonymously, to become town talk. The unmasking of Waldorfe is brought about by Kenniston, Etheria's straightforward and unromantic lover.

"The author has selected a sordid theme, and we do not think his handling of it altogether justifies his work. We do not find the boldness of characterization, and delicacy and restraint in treatment, needed for such a subject, while the theatrical atmosphere and a somewhat cynical style make an unpleasant effect on us."

— Ath 1912,1:162 F 10 54w

"A convincing, clever, witty and fascinating romance. The story might have easily degenerated into a burlesque. On the contrary it is romantic and yet sincere; it is frank in its treatment of risque episodes and yet it is on the whole a worthy and an unusual novel."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 21 '13 330w

VINCENT, LEON HENRY. Dandies and men
12 of letters. ll *$3 Houghton 13-22103

The sketch of Beau Brummel that opens this collection of twelve essays is followed by "portraits in prose of Count Alfred d'Orsay, Lord Byron, Samuel Rogers, Thomas Moore, Thomas Hope, William Beckford, Thomas Love Peacock, Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe, Benjamin Disraeli, Bulwer-Lytton and Henry Crabb Robinson. Several of these are characterized in the table of contents by an apt phrase, Rogers being referred to as 'A giver of breakfasts,' Moore as 'A regency satirist,' Sharpe as 'A virtuoso of the old school,' and Robinson as 'A successful bachelor.'" (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Vincent knows his authorities, and draws liberally upon them, and the result, combined with his own skill in portraiture, is a fine series of character studies."

+ Boston Transcript p25 O 15 '13 930w

"A strong sense of justice and a perception of the humorous are markedly useful assets in Mr. Vincent's business as a critic."

+ Chaut 72:206 N 8 '13 70w

"The book is of that informal, intimate, anecdotal sort that seldom fails to entertain. A resplendent binding is appropriately provided for these followers of fashion."

+ Dial 55:486 D 1 '13 160w

"Mr. Vincent has caught the fine aroma of the times he writes about, he has given us a book full of delicate humor and charm."

+ Ind 76:315 N 13 '13 370w

+ Nation 97:463 N 13 '13 250w

"It is a curious assortment, but most of the notices will be of interest to the general public."

+ N Y Sun p5 O 18 '13 90w

"The reader who delights in an informal, airy touch upon the surface of literary and court life will be grateful to Mr. Vincent for this agreeable galaxy." Thomas Walsh.

+ — N Y Times 18:712 N 30 1350w

VINEBERG, SOLOMON. Provincial and local
5 taxation in Canada. (Columbia univ. studies in history, economics and public law, v. 52, no. 1, whole no. 128) *$2; pa *$1.50
Longmans 12-15937

"Dr. Vineberg has broken new ground. This monograph is the first attempt to present a comprehensive survey of the systems of local and provincial taxation in force in the Dominion. The scope of the task, the variety of details in the different provinces, and the lack of secondary material have made it necessary to deal with the subject only in outline." (Am Econ R) "Each topic is analyzed on a basis of the natural and necessary relation between the social and economic conditions of the locality and the actual administration of the method cited." (Ann Am Acad)

"As an introduction to the field it is an excellent piece of work, concise, well-arranged, lucid, and balanced in judgment. While there may be room for difference of opinion on some points of constructive criticism, there is no question of the service Dr. Vineberg has afforded students of taxation by the comprehensive description and balanced comment which mark his work." O. D. Skelton.

+ — Am Econ R 3:156 Mr '13 800w

"The author of this contribution on the revenue problems of Canada has combined three very essential factors of analysis in his review. The historical background is clearly presented; the practical results of definite experiences are specifically shown; and in addition the author has given us the benefit of his own personal criticisms and suggestions." C. L. Selter.

+ Ann Am Acad 45:287 Ja '13 320w

"The monograph is a scholarly and creditable piece of work and should be of interest to all students of taxation."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ja 18 '13 200w

VINOGRADOV, PAVEL GAVEILOVICH, ed.
12 Oxford studies in social and legal history.
v 3 *$4.15 Oxford

v. 3. Two monographs make up this volume. "In the first monograph, 'The estates of the archbishop and chapter of St. André of Bordeaux under English rule,' Miss E. C. Lodge, on the basis of careful researches in the archives of Bordeaux, describes the economic organization of certain lands in the Bordelais. This was part of the region which the English acquired through the marriage of Henry II to Eleanor of Aquitaine and which they kept until 1453. . . . In the second monograph, 'One hundred years of poor law administration in a Warwickshire village,' Mr. A. W. Ashby begins with an excellent history of the economic structure of the village of Tysoe from the time of the Domesday survey down to 1796, when Enclosure commissioners readjusted the holdings by throwing scattered strips together." (Nation)

"Both of these monographs represent the highest type of intensive local study, in which antiquarian erudition is not allowed to obscure the relation of the subject to the general historical problems involved. In each case there is a distinct gain from the limitation of the field of research. Mr. Ashby has shown great skill in bringing out the relations of the parish to the general issues but he seldom draws precise conclusions from his material though all his facts are rich in suggestions." A. P. Usher.

+ + — Ann Am Acad 47:315 My '13 700w

"Two enclosure maps add to the usefulness of a valuable and brightly written study." James Tait.

+ Eng Hist R 28:794 O '13 1100w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

VINOGRADOV, P. G., ed. — Continued.

"Two monographs of rather more general interest than those in the earlier volume."

+ Nation 96:502 My 15 '13 670w

VIZETELLY, ERNEST ALFRED (LE PETIT

HOMME ROUGE, pseud.). Republican

France; 1870-1912; her presidents, statesmen, policy, vicissitudes and social life. 11

*$4 (2c) Small (Eng ed 13-3680)

The author of this history of forty-two years of the French republic, altho an Englishman, was a resident of France at the time that republic was proclaimed. His book is autobiographical in tone and, while he tells the story of the republic in a connected narrative, he gives much space to the lives of the men of the period. Of his purpose the author says, "I have tried to show the nation rising from the depths of disaster . . . to show the republican idea—limited, at first, to a portion of the population, —spreading gradually through the country, and developing into something far beyond what some of the most prominent founders of the régime would have thought either likely or advisable."

"A work by an Englishman who displays a remarkable understanding of French institutions and French life."

+ Am Hist R 18:861 Jl '13 30w

A L A Bkl 9:449 Je '13

"It is most diverting reading."

+ Ath 1912,2:623 N 23 150w

"The author is fair in statement, careful about his facts, not giving them as such when he is not sure, his diction is simple and he is in sympathy with his subject. So his book makes intensely interesting reading; and it is the best history of the third republic from its foundation to the present with which we are acquainted."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 15 '13 380w

"Some of his narrations, such as those on the rise of Boulanger and the Dreyfus affair, are very informing; but at times he descends to excessive detail and indulges in trivialities that scarcely deserve mention in a serious history. His portraits of French statesmen, with many of whom he was personally acquainted, are generally interesting."

+ — Dial 54:306 Ap 1 '13 550w

"While strictly and conscientiously accurate he writes as if he were detailing the memoirs of some lady of fashion in the reign of Francis I—that is, he has a keen eye and the lightness of touch which enable him to group his incidents in the most dramatic and attractive way. We must look upon this work as presenting a faithful and vivid picture of France as it has been since the battle of Sedan."

+ Lit D 46:596 Mr 15 '13 120w

"While the chief value of Mr. Vizetelly's book is in the wealth of concrete incident through which the age receives its form and pressure, the narrative also reveals to the discerning eye, though without bringing them into sharp relief, the persistent issues of French politics."

+ Nation 96:416 Ap 24 '13 1500w

"It has throughout the effect of a volume of memoirs. Its history is that of the camera, not the brush. The book runs on a pretty even keel between the Scylla of incompatibility of temperament as between him who writes and them he writes of and the Charybdis of a treacherously enthusiastic sympathy."

+ N Y Sun p5 F 22 '13 2600w

"Will be valuable as a book of biographical reference. Although here again the lack of logical proportion may be censured, the impressions and observations which distort it will particularly appeal to the impressionable reader who cares more for the poetry of history than for its science." W. L.

+ — N Y Times 18:137 Mr 16 '13 2050w

"The present volume is to be commended first of all because it is written from a French rather than from a foreign point of view."

+ Outlook 104:963 Ag 23 '13 400w

"A fascinating book. The special value of the volume lies in the light it throws upon the complexion of the successive ministries through the history of the republic." J. T. Shotwell.

+ Pol Sci Q 23:543 S '13 420w

+ R of Rs 47:506 Ap '13 180w

"Mr. Vizetelly's review of its achievements is encyclopædic in its thoroughness."

+ Spec 110:sup1093 Je 28 '13 150w

VOLUNTAS Del. *$1.60 Macmillan A13-1656

"Our author, without giving adherence to any one party in the Christian church, comes much nearer to Orthodoxy than do many of those who yet call themselves Christians. He maintains not only that God is and that He is good, but that He became incarnate in a sense so far-reaching as to startle the most convinced. We are not interested to analyse the arguments by which he arrives at these conclusions; it is with his deductions from them that we propose to concern ourselves; for it is these deductions which form the most original and thought-provoking portion of the book."—Spec

"While a scientific atmosphere is apparent throughout the book, the author frequently fails in precision of scientific statement, and things assumed are later stated as facts. Viewed in the large, the book is healthfully stimulating to the imagination and of value in this period of transition although the reader needs to be able to winnow the chaff from the wheat."

+ — Am J Theol 17:151 Ja '13 320w

"Much of a writer's force and ability in handling his medium of expression depends upon the conscious mastery of his own thought. The anonymous author thus gives one the impression that he is leading the way over what to him are well known paths of thought."

+ Ind 73:1081 N 7 '12 110w

"The author of 'Pro Christo et ecclesiâ' is too well known to need our praise. He is always sure of a large audience. His last book, however, will make, we think, a more circumscribed appeal than his previous ones, because it is more definitely theological, less discursive, and more closely argued. A large number of religious-minded people find it dull to read arguments in proof of that of which they are already convinced; a large number more have convinced themselves that no proof of that which they long to be assured of will ever be found; only a small number remain who can find delight in the present volume."

+ — Spec 108:669 Ap 27 '12 1450w

W

WADE, (MRS.) MARY HAZELTON (BLANCH-ARD). Dolls of many lands. 11 $1 (3½c) Wilde 13-26560

A group of stories for little readers. Each doll describes something of the life in the country from which it comes. There are stories of Japanese, Eskimo, Dutch, English, Parisian, Korean, Persian, Egyptian, and Indian dolls.

+ N Y Times 18:631 N 16 '13 140w

WADSWORTH, C., Jr. Primary battery ignition. 11 *50c Van Nostrand 12-27989

"A practical guide to the automobile driver as to the electrical connections used on the ordinary battery ignition car and as to the nature of the troubles which are likely to be experienced with the apparatus. A table of common ignition troubles and remedies appears on the last page and will be of help to an inexperienced driver. The book outlines the principles of induction-coil ignition and the methods of installing, testing and replacing batteries."—Elec World

"It will appeal to a large number of men who operate either their own or other persons' cars."

+ Elec World 61:740 Ap 5 '13 100w

"The interests of gas-engine operators would have been better consulted if there had been a section of small and portable storage batteries—with a corresponding change of title. Of particular service is the matter on the constant use of voltmeter and ammeter in the ignition circuits to secure constant indication of battery condition. The most of the illustrations are very excellent, though a few are very poor."

+ — Engin N 68:1119 D 12 '12 130w

WAGNER, HERMENEGILD. With the victorious Bulgarians; with an introd. by I. E. Gueshoff. il *$3 Houghton 13-3854

"More than half of his volume is taken up with a survey of recent history, of the events leading to the war, with accounts of the Bulgarian people and of the organization of the Bulgarian army; the rest of the book describes the operations the author followed down to the armistice. The book is illustrated with useful maps and with many portraits and other pictures." (N Y Sun) "But what he tells us was often not what he saw, only what he had been told. He was not always allowed to telegraph the things he saw; and what the newspapers received was an account of what the Bulgarians wished us to believe had happened. He now frankly confesses that 'in the majority of cases I was only the intermediary in sending on information obtained from others,' and that 'the censorship would not permit any news to be sent about reverses or defeats of the Bulgarian troops.'" (Ath)

"In many respects it is the best account so far written, though a less personal and hardly as readable a narrative as Ashmead-Bartlett."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:449 Je '13

"His analysis of the causes of the war is good, even though he under-estimates the economic reasons." B: Marsh.

+ — Ann Am Acad 48:290 J1 '13 400w

"To some extent we must look on his account as prejudiced; but, even so, it is of interest."

+ — Ath 1913,1:149 F 8 1200w

Cath World 97:106 Ap '13 230w

Reviewed by P. F. Bicknell.

Dial 54:410 My 16 '13 280w

Reviewed by G: Marvin.

Ind 74:1390 Je 19 '13 50w

Lit D 46:1386 Je 21 '13 450w

"Yet, with so many reservations to make, Lieut. Wagner's narrative is easily the most satisfactory account of the war as a whole; and this, not only because his story, after all disputed points have been cancelled, presents a faithful picture of the campaign in Thrace in its broad aspects. His knowledge of the people and the country is of the most intimate nature. The book is a condensed encyclopædia of Bulgarian history, biography, and politics. Wagner's analysis of the historical forces that brought about the conflict, and of the strategic and political factors that determined its course, is excellent. His book will have permanent value for the student of Balkan affairs in the future. It is also eminently readable."

+ — Nation 96:307 Mr 27 '13 900w

N Y Sun p4 Mr 8 '13 250w

"Whatever those whom he beat may say, Lieut. Wagner stood out 'facile princeps' among the newspaper men on the Bulgarian side, and his present work will take an equally high rank for its clear description of the developments of a campaign the results of which are still in the future."

+ N Y Times 18:121 Mr 9 '13 950w

+ Outlook 104:117 My 17 '13 30w

+ R of Rs 47:506 Ap '13 170w

"There is a good deal of interest about the history of Bulgaria and the origins of the war, and a good deal quoted from other authorities, but hardly anything that could make us feel that we were seeing through the eyes of a man who beheld one of the most astonishing campaigns in history. The whole thing is provokingly flat compared with the work of Major James who professes to have seen very much less."

— + Spec 110:234 F 8 '13 500w

"While the opening chapters are somewhat lacking in forceful, direct statement and are ill-constructed to attract and fix attention, the quality of the narrative steadily improves. It gives a clearer idea of the manner in which the war was brought to a head and carried on than has yet been obtainable. Its maps of military operations are models of what such maps should be. While Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett's charges are serious, the whole manner, style and care with which the Austrian lieutenant writes, make an exceedingly strong argument for his entire credibility, except in matters in which his sources of information or even his personal observation rather than his integrity may have been at fault."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Mr 20 '13 1900w

WAGNER, RICHARD. Opera & drama; tr. by Edwin Evans, sr. 2v il *$4 Scribner A13-1423

A translation of Wagner's "Oper und drama," published some sixty years ago. The translator has made the text more usable by the addition of section titles, sub-titles, chapter headings, and paragraph numbers. He has also supplied an index.

"The rendering is for the most part excellent."

+ — Ath 1913,1:474 Ap 26 230w

N Y Sun p5 Mr 22 '13 100w

"Mr. Evans's work is of great value. It is not likely ever to need doing again."

+ N Y Times 18:326 Je 1 '13 350w

WAGNER, RICHARD. Story of Bayreuth, as told in the Bayreuth letters of Richard Wagner. il *$2.50 Small 12-26213

"In the present volume we have an account of Wagner in Bayreuth as told in his letters, translated and cleverly edited by Caroline V. Kerr. The book is eminently practical, for it resumes the autobiographical story about where the recently published autobiography left it. We are specially informed concerning the origin and development of the Bayreuth festival idea, the preliminary rehearsals, the first festival, and in particular about that music-drama, 'Parsifal,' which, more than any other, we associate with Bayreuth."—Outlook

"Convenient for reference in larger libraries, though the greater part of the material can be found in the biographies."

+ A L A Bkl 9:392 My '13

+ Ath 1913,1:474 Ap 26 130w

"The connecting passages are excellent, and the series of letters becomes a consistent history. It is here that Miss Kerr has done some of her best work, and she converts epistles written to various persons into a genuine chapter of autobiography." L: J. Block.

+ Dial 54:232 Mr 16 '13 1600w

"A work which will rank high as a reference book for such Wagnerian enthusiasts as desire to see what the Bayreuth master had to contend with before the height of his ambition was realized."

+ Ind 74:826 Ap 10 '13 100w

"It is a book which every collector of Wagneriana should have in his library."

+ Nation 95: 546 D 5 '12 200w

"The letters reveal 'the master and his life work' with an intimacy that is vivid in its charm and make the work a fitting addition to the recently published autobiography. The glimpses of his home life and the interpolations that bridge the gaps in the correspondence add much to an understanding of the man who was at once poet, dramatist, musician and composer."

WAGNER, RICHARD—Continued.

+ N Y Sun p 27 N 30 '12 350w

"It puts the material in convenient shape for Wagner students who cannot read German."

+ N Y Sun p 8 D 7 '12 70w

"The importance of the volume, like its interest, goes without saying. It is the 'first-hand' story of the master passion of Wagner's life."

+ N Y Times 18:5 Ja 5 '13 700w

"As for the English of Mr. Evans's translation, it is to be praised as an admirable version of a difficult original. The translation is free, yet closely reproduces the meaning of the German, and it is in idiomatic English, not in Anglicized German."

+ N Y Times 18:583 O 26 '13 250w

"We wish that the book were more worth while in the side-lights thrown upon the characters of a number of Wagner's contemporaries."

+ Outlook 102: 866 D 21 '12 150w

R of Rs 47:249 F '13 130w

"Opera and drama, in whole or in parts, has been translated many times, but Mr. Edwin Evans' attempt is the most successful so far made. It renders the German—the very German German—of Wagner quite adequately, and is at the same time English. Wagner wrote so much that we have learnt of late to scoff a little at his theorisings, but no serious musical student can hope to get along without a knowledge of this, his most important work."

+ Sat R 116:88 J1 19 '13 250w

WAITT, ISABEL WOODMAN. What-shall-I do girl. il $1.25 Page 13-3667

The author "pictures Joy Kent, a girl of average talent, suddenly thrown on her own resources, and her appeal to her classmates for a story of their experiences and their advice as to a career." (Boston Transcript) The volume is largely made up of the replies from a newspaper worker, milliner, social helper, telegrapher, shop girl, chorus girl, beauty specialist, nurse, librarian, besides teachers of schools, dancing and music.

"In writing the replies, Mrs. Waitt shows no little versatility and much practical perspicacity. It is probable that many girls who are about to enter 'the wonderful world,' as Joy Kent calls it, may find some valuable suggestions in these bright and chatty letters from successful young women. The whole story is in a spirit of good nature, and doubtless will be helpful to girls who have difficulty in deciding what to do."

+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 8 '13 350w

"There is little that is helpful in any of the letters."

— N Y Sun p5 Mr 8 '13 120w

"The replies are by no means conclusively favorable, and a rather humorous turn is found in the outcome."

+ Outlook 103:823 Ap 12 '13 120w

WALDRAM, PERCY J. Principles of structural mechanics. il $3 Van Nostrand

"This book, written primarily for architectural draftsmen, is designed to give, in simplest possible terms, such an explanation of the fundamental principles of the mechanics of structures as will enable its readers to apply their formulæ and graphic methods in an intelligent and discriminating manner, and to all ordinary problems, whether of the usual routine type or not. The book . . . is divided into six main divisions, the titles of which indicate very clearly the scope of the work: Leverage and graphic statics; Beams and girders; Walls and foundations; Roofs; Arches and domes; and Columns and shoring."—Engin Rec

"Considered as a whole, the book puts forth the fundamental principles in a nonmathematical way and is suited to the readers for whom it is intended. The technically trained engineer, however, could not gain much information from it. The author's style is very diffuse and not always clear, and it appears that the book could easily have been compressed into half the number of pages." L: E. Moore.

+ Engin N 68:1123 D 12 '12 650w

"As an effort to present the elements of mechanics in its simplest form the book is a distinctly valuable contribution and will doubtless have a wide range of usefulness."

+ Engin Rec 67:308 Mr 15 '13 650w

WALFORD, LUCY BETHIA (COLQUHOUN)
² MRS. ALFRED SAUNDERS WALFORD. Memories of Victorian London. $3.50 Longmans

"Mrs. Walford has already published her 'Recollections,' but these 'Memories' are none the less welcome on that account. They concern a London which is fast becoming remote—the London which was submerged by the crinoline in 1864, and which bedecked itself with bunting for the Diamond jubilee of 1897—and they present interesting people as they appeared in the freedom of after-dinner conversation." (Ath) Coventry, Patmore, Ruskin, Carlyle, Browning, George Eliot, Lawrence Oliphant and many others appear prominently in these pages.

+ A L A Bkl 9:449 Je '13

"In some instances Mrs. Walford has allowed her sense of the incongruous and ridiculous to run away with her."

+ Ath 1912:2:548 N 9 950w

+ Dial 54:148 F 16 '13 320w

"What we like best about it is a pervading atmosphere in which one is made to feel himself for the time dwelling in the very best of the social life that Victorian England possessed."

+ Lit D 46:245 F 1 '13 120w

"Principally in the earlier chapters there are a few arid passages and some anecdotes that seem hardly worth recording; but these are amply atoned for by much that fascinates."

+ Nation 96:209 F 27 '13 500w

"There is nothing very penetrating in Mrs. Walford's reminiscences, and there is nothing very intimate. She never analyzes; she simply comments and records. She is 'chatty' to a fault. She is far more absorbed in repeating a story that a famous poet told about somebody's aunt than in drawing a portrait of the famous poet. More than half of Mrs. Walford's book is excellent. The rest is mostly insignificant."

+ N Y Times 18:13 Ja 12 '13 1050w

"The kind of irresponsible narrative of recollections that flits agreeably from anecdote to incident may not be a very high type of biography, but it certainly provides more rational entertainment than inferior fiction."

+ Outlook 103:140 Ja 18 '13 1300w

+ Spec 110:sup694 Ap 26 '13 170w

WALISZEWSKI, KAZIMIERZ. Paul I of Russia, son of Catherine the Great. il $4 Lippincott (Eng ed 13-12245)

An attempt to interpret the life of Paul I of Russia, the son of Catherine the Great. "The author owing to his education and constant environment is able to present a picture of the daily life of the Czar, of his entourage, and of local government that would be impossible from the pen of a foreigner. The chapters on European affairs also throw many side lights on the history of those days, when all the courts of the continent were bent on keeping the Corsican in order." (N Y Times)

"An excellent account of Paul I. The book throws a good deal of light on the Anglo-Russian relations of the period. It is a translation from the French, and, though good enough as such, lacks that freedom and spontaneity of style without which reading is seldom easy, and hardly ever pleasant."

+ Ath 1913:1:357 Mr 29 170w

+ Eng Hist R 28:820 O '13 70w

"The best authorities appear to have been consulted by the author of this fascinating monograph. The only regret we feel in reading it is that the author has not stuck to the epic method of relating an incident clearly and with assurance, but sometimes conscientiously qualifies his narrative with the introduction of various versions, from which as a judicial writer he should have picked the most authentic. When he does use his own judgment the result is brilliant."

+ — Lit D 46:1132 My 17 '13 1200w

"A work of scholarly value. His tone is temperate and impartial."

+ Nation 96:646 Je 26 '13 280w

"A character study of much charm and importance."

+ N Y Times 18:278 My 11 '13 950w

+ — Sat R 115:333 Mr 15 '13 1200w

"Mr. Walliszwski has written a book which does much to clear up the mysteries which hang about this enigmatic, mean, and tragic figure."

+ Spec 110:sup1091 Je 28 '13 600w

WALLACE, ALFRED RUSSEL. Social environment and moral progress. il *$1.25 Funk 13-11399

"The main theme of Dr. Wallace's book is not so much a discussion of racial evolution as it is an analysis of existing moral and social conditions in the civilized world to-day. In his review of these conditions Dr. Wallace brings forward statistics on such subjects as alcoholism, suicide, personal immorality, &c., from which he argues that moral degradation is on the increase. He believes that this retrograde tendency is mainly due to four causes—the competitive system under which we live, to be cured by universal co-operation; economic antagonism, cured by economic brotherhood; monopoly by a few of the means of existence, to be remedied by freedom of access to land and capital, and social injustice, to be supplanted by equality of opportunity."—N Y Times

"A work of high importance as the utterance of the foremost living scientist, but marred by a certain haziness in its definition of moral progress, and containing many statements inadequately proved."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:449 Je '13

"The book deserves careful reading." Carl Kelsey.

+ Ann Am Acad 49:255 S '13 300w

"We are glad of the opportunity afforded to read in a succinct form the views of a master of science on 'Selection,' 'Heredity,' and 'Environment,' and there is some straight speaking which we commend to those who should, from the position they hold, be leaders."

+ — Ath 1913,1:381 Ap 5 330w

"As a treatise, it bears the marks of hurried preparation; and if it came from the pen of an unknown writer, instead of from the distinguished hand of Darwin's evolutionary co-discoverer and colleague, it would hardly have commanded the attention it has received."

+ — Bib World 42:318 N '13 480w

Reviewed by H: C. Shelley.

Boston Transcript p9 Ap 12 '13 200w

+ — Cath World 97:545 Jl '13 1000w

"The book is depressing on account of its low estimate of present intellectual and moral achievement." S. C. Schmucker.

+ — Chaut 71:237 Ag 16 '13 350w

"Perhaps we have faintly suggested something of the book's unique significance in correlating the seemingly diverse paths of biological and economic progress,—in lending the sanction of science to the struggle for freedom which millions of men and women are carrying forward throughout the world. It comes with an authority too high to be impugned; it conveys a message of too grave import to be ignored. Not to read and earnestly ponder such a message is little short of a sin against the future." W. R. Browne.

+ Dial 54:412 My 16 '13 1650w

"It would be a capital book for discussion, page by page, in college classes in ethics."

+ Educ R 46:421 N '13 60w

Lit D 47:542 S 27 '13 650w

"Written with all his old-time vigor and eloquence."

+ N Y Times 18:263 My 4 '13 1050w

Outlook 104:345 Je 14 '13 150w

Pol Sci Q 28:565 S '13 250w

+ R of Rs 48:118 Jl '13 550w

Spec 110:544 Mr 29 '13 250w

"Upon the whole it seems that Dr. Wallace gives too little credit to modern society while not infrequent points in his argument might be taken to support the counter proposition that there has after all been moral and intellectual progress. Yet whether or not his declarations are to be accepted as a whole, the study is a remarkably stimulating examination of the life of mankind."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Je 5 '13 850w

"A meaty little volume provocative of thought."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 20w

WALLACE, DILLON. Wilderness castaways. 10 il *$1.25 (2c) McClurg 13-18715

A wholesome story for boys chronicling the adventures of a pampered New York youth and a sailor lad who stray away from a hunting party in the sub-Arctic regions and who fight for their lives amid peril and hardship thruout a frigid northern winter. The regenerating influence of the experience upon the New Yorker commends the lively tale to all young boys.

"Interesting and gives a good idea of northern Canada."

+ A L A Bkl 10:165 D '13 +

"A very pleasantly written narrative."

+ Ind 76:357 N 20 '13 40w

"This is a real 'boy's story,' full of vigor, excitement, and interesting facts. It holds up manliness and courage in attractive light."

+ Lit D 47:827 N 1 '13 200w

"It is good wholesome reading matter for the average boy, and informative to a considerable degree, for Mr. Wallace knows his Labrador even as Kipling knows his sea."

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 9 '13 200w

WALLACE, EDNA KINGSLEY. Quest of the dream. *$1.50 Putnam 13-20822

A story told in letters. Most of the letters are written by Doria French in St. Paul to David Hartnell in New York; later by Doria French in New York to her friend, Barbara West, in St. Paul. Some of them, however, at the beginning of the series, are written by Doria French to a mythical being called John, who represents "abstract man." To him she writes the things she can not say to David, the concrete man.

"The book will entertain readers who enjoy an orgy of introspection."

+ — Ath 1913,2:592 N 22 50w

"In spite of its faults, however, the book presents a readable story which will appeal to many lovers of temperate romance." Wells Hastings.

+ — Bookm 38:306 N '13 530w

"From the manner in which the volume is printed and boxed it appears to be intended for a 'gift book,' but it is to be hoped that no one will confound it with the sentimental inanities which so often pass under that title."

+ N Y Times 18:566 O 19 '13 300w

WALLACE, ELIZABETH. Mark Twain and the Happy island. il *$1 (5½c) McClurg 13-8381

The author met Mark Twain on one of his last visits to Bermuda and became one of his fast friends, as the letters printed in the vol-

WALLACE, ELIZABETH—Continued.

exume attest. Her picture of Mr. Clemens's last days is delightful chiefly for its revelation of a lovable side of his nature in his relations with children. Speaking of Miss Wallace's book in his brief note of introduction, Albert Bigelow Paine says that "the world will be the better and Mark Twain's memory the sweeter for these gentle chapters."

+ A L A Bkl 9:450 Je '13

"To be admitted into intimacy with Mark Twain is scarcely less a pleasure to us than it was to Miss Wallace." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '13 1250w

"Gracefully and tenderly written and beautifully illustrated volume."

+ Dial 54:424 My 16 '13 180w

+ Ind 74:1307 Je 5 '13 100w

Nation 96:646 Je 26 '13 200w

"The little book presents the gentler side of the humorist's old age very sympathetically."

+ N Y Sun p4 My 3 '13 100w

"The charm of this little tribute to his memory lies in its sincerity and lack of affectation."

+ N Y Times 18:268 My 4 '13 400w

"Altogether it is, as Mr. Paine suggests, a charming addition to the literature concerning the great humorist and humanist."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 15 '13 180w

WALLACE, HAROLD FRANK. Big game of central and western China. Il *$4 Duffield (Eng ed Agri3-1677)

"This is the work of a scientific naturalist, as well as of an enthusiastic hunter, a man who heard the call of the wild and can prefer the untamed hillside and the untracked forest to the land disfigured by cultivation. . . . The route of the author's journey was from Shanghai and civilized eastern China, up to Omsk, with its semibarbarous tribes. Strange people, strange beasts, and strange scenes are described with the graphic style of a practised and graceful pen. The book breaks distinctly new ground, is profusely illustrated, and furnished with maps. There are several appendices showing field measurements, an estimate of expenses and tables of stages and distances."—Lit D

+ A L A Bkl 10:65 O '13

"The volume is pleasant to read, and for its bulk light in hand; the type is admirable, and the illustrations are of great merit."

+ Ath 1913,1:465 Ap 26 480w

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 20 '13 650w

+ Lit D 47:584 O 4 '13 180w

"The remarkable ability of the author to detach his mind from the excitement of slaughter of the animals to a comprehensive consideration of the environment is an example which a host of writers upon sport might follow. It gives to the volume an interest which holds almost any type of reader, while the careful, detailed observations of the animals themselves make the book a valuable addition to science."

+ — Nation 97:415 O 30 '13 630w

"His detailed accounts of stalkings after little-known animals, and his technical descriptions of the prey, will be absorbing to the fellow-devotees of the far trail. His casual comments on Chinese conditions and characteristics make the book worth while from the point of view of the general reader."

+ N Y Times 18:483 S 21 '13 400w

"One of the most fascinating of recent books of hunting. Mr. Wallace has rather unusual descriptive powers, and his writing is so strikingly good for a book of this character that it is a pity he could not have given it sufficient attention in the proofreading to correct a few slips in grammar and some slovenly sentences. Mr. Wallace is both entertaining in his narration of picturesque incidents and careful in his notes of natural history."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ag 7 '13 500w

WALLIN, JOHN EDWARD WALLACE. Experimental studies of mental defectives. Il $1.25 Warwick & York 13-4152

"This is number 7 of the Educational psychology monographs and gives the results of mental and physical tests applied to a colony of 333 epileptics. It throws added light upon our knowledge of the epileptic mind, but the chief interest of the book to the general psychologist and educator will undoubtedly be its accurate and critical study of the Binet-Simon tests. . . . Scattered throughout the work are 26 tables giving all the figures upon which the author bases his conclusions."—J Philos

Educ R 46:93 Je '13 30w

"The whole book is a decided step towards a clearer understanding of the requirements of the long-desired mental measuring rod." Rudolf Pitner.

+ J Philos 10:358 Je 19 '13 550w

"The book is a distinct contribution to the literature of the subject and it is to be hoped that the author's example in testing out large numbers of abnormals of different kinds and then publishing the results will be followed." Alexander Johnson.

+ Survey 30:68 Ap 12 '13 480w

WALLING, WILLIAM ENGLISH. Larger aspects of socialism. *$1.50 (1½c) Macmillan 13-8293

"Socialism can be approached equally well from two opposite directions. It may be treated either as a social movement that aims to build up a new civilization, or as a new civilization that is gradually being embodied in a social movement. In my 'Socialism as it is' I followed the first method and discussed the economic and political features of socialism exclusively; in the present volume I shall proceed in the reverse direction and deal exclusively with its larger aspects, its intellectual and spiritual side."—Preface

Reviewed by J: C. Kennedy.

+ — Am J Soc 19:384 N '13 1150w

+ — A L A Bkl 10:152 D '13

"This book is exceptionally suggestive and interesting." Alexander Fleisher.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:269 J1 '13 100w

"Scholarly and consistent 'Larger aspects of socialism' is invaluable, even when it is most certainly wrong." H. E. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p18 Ag 27 '13 1250w

Hibbert J 12:209 O '13 200w

"It has a special value in the wide range of its quotation and comment."

+ — Ind 75:576 S 4 '13 570w

+ — Lit D 47:705 O 18 '13 200w

"To our thinking it is as a clear-sighted observer and honest chronicler of what he has seen rather than as a philosopher that Mr. Walling best serves the community, and one 'Socialism as it is' is worth a dozen of its immediate successors."

+ — Nation 97:358 O 16 '13 1050w

+ Pol Sci Q 28:557 S '13 200w

+ R of Rs 48:119 J1 '13 130w

"For the second time William English Walling has made a notable contribution to the literature of socialism." M. B. Sumner.

+ Survey 30:310 My 31 '13 500w

WALPOLE, HUGH. Fortitude. *$1.40 Doran 13-5068

The author "tells us the story of one Peter Westcott from childhood to maturity, taking us from the grim home in Cornwall to a disreputable Devonshire school, and on to a boarding-house in Bloomsbury, to poverty in the East End, to success in literature, to love and marriage, and at last to a catastrophe by which most would mark the end. Here, however, there is more to come. Peter is going back to the struggle, for the circle of life is not completed, and for all the author's apparent pessimism we do not yet know whether he would call that circle vicious."—Sat R

"A powerful and unusual romance."

+ A L A Bkl 10:37 S '13 ✚

"A certain strain of originality, manifesting itself rather in atmosphere than in character or incident, distinguishes this novel. The peculiar quality—half grim, half-gorgeous—of the Cornish landscape which serves as a background and the strange influences emanating from it, are conveyed with unusual freshness and vigour. The narrative is varied and interesting, but we should prefer less discussion of such subjects as genius and the artist's mission."

+ — Ath 1913,1:129 F 1 110w

+ — Atian 112:695 N '13 600w

"In his description of Peter Westcott's second novel, Mr. Walpole could not have been more exact had he been describing his own. 'It was amazingly unequal. There were places in it that had no kind of life at all; at times Peter appeared to have beheld his scenes and characters through a mist, to have been dragged right away from any kind of vision of the book, to have written wildly, blindly.' 'Fortitude' is indeed 'amazingly unequal,' but it is at the same time amazingly indicative of better things from its author."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '13 350w

"This aversion to over-explicitness, together with an unconscious habit of imitative enthusiasm, makes bewildering reading for one who entertains no great partiality for the amorphous."

— Nation 97:35 JI 10 '13 500w

"'Fortitude' is a book into which the writer has put much passionate intensity of thought and conviction. Whatever faults it may have, they are not those of insincerity, weakness, nor poverty of mind or heart. It has not been written for a reward. It is the expression of a man who needs to express himself through fiction, who is a born writer, not a person who happens to produce books for a livelihood. It is a book difficult to sum up. Extraordinarily uneven, sometimes inspiring, more often depressing, it remains fascinating. 'A prelude to adventure' was a greater artistic success than this book, more coherent and complete. But 'Fortitude' is the bigger, the more human of the two." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ + — N Y Times 18:339 Je 8 '13 950w

"The novel has strong character-drawing—the people of Cornwall, especially, seem real—and it has also humor, pathos, cruelty, passion, love, and sacrifice."

+ Outlook 104:260 My 31 '13 200w

"His new novel is interesting, both because it places him definitely in the ranks of those writers from whom something good may be expected and because its design marks a reaction towards the methods of a past generation. Nothing could be finer than the early chapters, which show the desolate years of childhood and the joys and terrors of those first excursions which the boy made into his little world. Some of this may have been written from experience, some from pure inspiration, but none of it is conscious invention. It is in the middle of the book that the narrative sags. We fear that Mr. Walpole is a student of humanity who at times cannot see beyond the space lighted by his lamp."

— + Sat R 115:241 F 22 '13 750w

"The story improves greatly after the protracted and gruesome prologue, but the art of omission is not one of Mr. Walpole's merits. He does not recognize that strong language does not make strong situations, and that there is no special virtue in testing the strength of a reader's stomach. Those who survive the squalors and horrors of the first hundred pages will be rewarded by the scenes in the Bloomsbury boarding-house—quite the best thing in this singularly unequal work. The story is very long, and would have gained greatly by retrenchment and reticence. But in its crude way it makes for righteousness; it exalts the nobility of friendship and exhibits the beauty of self-sacrifice, and its shining moments atone for much that is gratuitously unpleasant and depressing."

— + Spec 110:543 Mr 29 '13 1100w

WALSH, JAMES JOSEPH. Modern progress and history. 1l *$2 Fordham univ. 12-25618

"In this collection of addresses, delivered on many occasions, it is the aim of Dr. Walsh to compare the old with the new in the arts and sciences. Despite the fact that we have made wonderful progress in many ways, he thinks that in literature, painting, sculpture and architecture we are retrogressive, and since we have made no progress in the arts it would be a surprise if education alone represented a climax of progress in our time." (Boston Transcript) "The really important problems with which men are occupied now, he maintains, have again and again presented themselves in past ages, and whenever humanity has grappled with them seriously they have been settled about as well as at any other time, even our own. History shows no steadily rising line of inevitable evolutionary progress. There have been cycles of achievement, ups and downs of accomplishment, and at the present time we are very far from occupying one of the high points in the curve of human advance." (Nation)

+ A L A Bkl 9:450 Je '13

Boston Transcript p22 Ja 15 '13 420w

"The volume is erudite, interesting and at times amusing."

+ Cath World 96:685 F '13 70w

"Attractively written and delightfully printed."

+ Educ R 46:92 Je '13 50w

— + Nation 96:447 My 1 '13 380w

WALSH, WILLIAM SHEPARD (WILLIAM SHEPARD, pseud.). Handy book of curious information. *$3.50 Lippincott 13-19475

"This is a new volume in Mr. Walsh's series of 'Handy books,' previous issues of which have dealt with popular customs and literary curiosities. This tells of strange incidents connected with men and animals, queer natural phenomena, odd statistics, and much else. . . . Mr. Walsh ranges far and wide. His information is not cyclopaedic, but out-of-the-way, strange, or entertaining."—Outlook

"Probably [one of] the most readable and useful books of this type."

+ A L A Bkl 10:111 N '13 ✚

"The book is full of anecdote and humor and might be read from cover to cover with real entertainment to the reader."

+ Ind 76:267 N 6 '13 130w

"The book will often help readers out when the encyclopædias fail, if they have the luck to think of the titles under which the author has stored his knowledge."

+ — N Y Sun p5 O 4 '13 100w

+ Outlook 105:450 O 25 '13 70w

WALTER, HERBERT EUGENE. Genetics: an introduction to the study of heredity. 1l *$1.50 (2½c) Macmillan 13-1954

The center of biological interest, according to the author, has shifted from the origin of species to the origin of the individual. The study of the origin of the individual is the subject matter of genetics. Carriers of the heritage, Variation, Mutation, The inheritance of acquired characters, Reversion to old types, and The determination of sex, are some of the subjects discussed. The relation of these matters to the modern eugenics movement is taken up in the final chapters. The application to man, and Human conservation.

"The social worker will be fully repaid for the time spent in reading this simple treatise on a most important and difficult subject." Carol Aronovici.

+ Am J Soc 18:847 My '13 350w

WALTER, HERBERT EUGENE—Continued.

"A well balanced, conservative and accurate text on eugenics."

+ A L A Bkl 9:451 Je '13

"This is to be rated as one of the very best books in this field."

+ Ann Am Acad 49:249 S '13 130w

+ Ath 1913,1:498 My 3 80w

Educ R 46:91 Je '13 30w

"The chapters on application to man and human conservation are full of popular interest."

+ Ind 75:343 Ag 7 '13 50w

+ J Pol Econ 21:678 Jl '13 100w

"The book fulfils a timely purpose."

+ Nation 96:368 Ap 10 '13 550w

"As a tale to be told the book cannot be judged a success. It gives one the impression of lecture notes carefully taken and displayed under appropriate labels. The book will doubtless be found of use by the student who wishes to 'get up' the subject for examination in the shortest time."

+ Nature 91:292 My 22 '13 250w

N Y Times 18:255 Ap 27 '13 100w

"He has written a volume which should interest any one who takes the problems of human life at all seriously."

+ Outlook 104:304 Je 7 '13 350w

"On the whole, the book is a valuable contribution to our literature on heredity and will be of great service to those who, while unable to study eugenics exhaustively, still feel that they must know the general theories on the subject." Alexander Johnson.

+ Survey 30:220 My 10 '13 300w

WALTON, PERRY. Story of textiles. Il *$3 J: S. Lawrence, 87 Franklin st., Boston 13-200

The author "goes back to the beginnings of the making of cloth, takes a bird's-eye view of its development in the four quarters of the earth, through the earlier eras of civilization, and finally recounts with considerable detail the history of the making of textiles in modern Europe and particularly in modern America. He chronicles the violent opposition of the populace to the introduction of machinery."—N Y Times

"A comprehensive and interesting volume."

+ A L A Bkl 9:451 Je '13

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '13 130w

"The subject is broad and the treatment leads to a mass of technical knowledge and scientific details, interwoven with which, however, are countless interesting revelations calculated to charm any reader."

+ Lit D 46:476 Mr 1 '13 270w

"A very interesting book. The best part of the book, however, is the story of the struggle to make the southern states take up the cultivation of cotton and of the hard fight the first manufacturers in the United States had to establish their industries and to make them pay, with the subsequent inventions, improvements and developments. That is a tale fully as exciting as stories of battle or politics which ought to be told in much greater detail."

+ N Y Sun p5 Ja 4 '13 180w

"Comprehensive and frequently entertaining book."

+ N Y Times 18:66 F 9 '13 230w

WARD, REV. BERNARD. Eve of Catholic emancipation. 3v v 3 Il *$3.75 Longmans (12-40015)

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

+ A L A Bkl 9:451 Je '13 (Review of v 3)

"An expectant public has not been kept long waiting for the conclusion of this important history; nor is Mgr. Ward's third volume of smaller interest, in any respect, than its predecessors."

+ Ath 1912,2:469 O 26 700w (Review of v 3)

"Monsignor Ward in his 'Dawn of the Catholic revival' (two vols.), and his 'Eve of Catholic emancipation' (three vols.), has given us a most interesting and valuable history of the Catholic church in England from 1781 to 1830. He has accomplished a most difficult task in a manner that argues well for his accurate scholarship, his perfect candor and his impartial judgment."

+ Cath World 96:545 Ja '13 1050w (Review of v 3)

+ Eng Hist R 28:200 Ja '13 350w (Review of v 3)

+ Nation 95:594 D 19 '12 350w (Review of v 3)

"Having a pleasant style and much cosmopolitan information, he has written a book both good to read and useful to study."

+ Sat R 115:398 Mr 29 '13 1500w (Review of v 3)

WARD, CYRIL. Royal gardens. Il *$5 Longmans A12-1699

"The principal features of this volume are the reproductions in color of water-color paintings by the author. There are thirty-two of these most skilful reproductions of exquisite paintings. Beginning with the daffodils at Windsor castle, and the spring flowering shrubs at Bagshot park, the chapters are so arranged as to present a full garden year. They end with the chrysanthemums at Claremont and the autumn flowers at Sandringham. About one hundred and seventy pages of text describe the gardens and their history. In most cases there is also an article by the head gardener."—Boston Transcript

"All the drawings are reproduced unusually well for the three-colour process."

+ Ath 1912,2:453 O 19 320w

+ Boston Transcript p25 D 4 '12 180w

"A beautiful book, and full of interest."

+ N Y Times 17:599 O 13 '12 120w

"The two-and-thirty plates which enrich this fine volume are from the brush of the author, and contain passages of great delicacy and beauty. But we doubt whether they have not suffered in reproduction. Notwithstanding minor defects, we congratulate him both as author and artist on the production of a remarkable and desirable volume."

+ Sat R 114:803 D 28 '12 850w

"The letterpress contains an introduction which shows a knowledge of the old gardening books, such as Parkinson's, but it also contains some valueless verbosity. Lists of trees planted by royal personages are also rather superfluous. But the notes on design will be useful for those who are studying principles with a view to laying out large gardens, and there is much special knowledge in the chapters written by the respective head gardeners."

+ Spec 109:sup684 N 2 '12 300w

WARD, EDWARD JOSHUA, ed. Social center. (National municipal league ser.) *$1.50 (1½c) Appleton 13-7494

Mr. Ward advocates the use of school buildings as social centers. The erection of buildings especially for that purpose is unnecessary, and such buildings are too apt to fail of their purpose for the people have not the same sense of ownership that they feel for the public school building. First he advocates their use as voting places; after this he urges the claims of public lecture centers; music centers; recreation centers, and so on. To these chapters other experts have contributed. On the title-page Mr. Ward is ranked as editor, but he is substantially author of the volume.

A L A Bkl 9:451 Je '13

Reviewed by F. D. Tyson.

+ Ann Am Acad 48:291 Jl '13 280w

+ Boston Transcript p12 Ap 29 '13 250w

"Firmly based on practical experiment and verified results, with the broadest recognition of sound psychological and sociological principles, the work is one whose value will not be questioned by those interested in community betterment."

+ Chaut 71:173 J1 26 '13 280w

"Deserves a wide circulation."

+ Engin N 69:1255 Je 12 '13 270w

"Most of the chapters appear to have been written by Mr. Ward, while those embodying papers or addresses made by others have substantial introductions, apparently from his pen. And that pen, it must be said, whether or not it be his, is one of singular clarity and vigor, much given to pithy and picturesque expression."

+ N Y Times 18:299 My 18 '13 900w

"An extremely useful and suggestive little book."

+ R of Rs 47:637 My '13 130w

"For all who want to help make any of the institutions of our community life serve democracy in the highest degree, this book will prove indispensable." G. R. Taylor.

+ Survey 30:503 J1 12 '13 250w

WARD, JOHN SEBASTIAN MARLOWE.
Brasses. (Cambridge manuals of science and literature) il *40c (1½c) Putnam

13-5645

A recent awakening of interest in monumental brasses has led to the preparation of this little handbook in the hope that it will give the ordinary reader "a fair idea of the classes into which they may most readily be grouped, and at the same time furnish him with such essential details as will enable him to distinguish instinctively the salient points of the subject. . . . The arrangement of the chapters is into periods corresponding with those of history." (Preface)

+ A L A Bkl 9:392 My '13

"This is an accurate and comprehensive small handbook on an interesting branch of English monumental history."

+ Ath 1912,2:385 O 5 80w

"A compact, lucid account of British monumental brasses."

+ N Y Sun p5 D 14 '12 130w

WARD, MARY AUGUSTA (ARNOLD) (MRS.
THOMAS HUMPHRY WARD). Coryston family. il *$1.35 (1½c) Harper 13-21739

A story of an English family of three sons and a daughter ruled by their mother, a woman of indomitable will. The Coryston estates have been left in trust in Lady Coryston's hands and when her oldest son deserts the conservative political principles of the family, she disinherits him. The younger son, Arthur, whom she makes her heir, falls in love with the daughter of her enemy—a political enemy, for Lady Coryston is preeminently a politician—and she is on the point of disinheriting him when this love story comes to its own disastrous conclusion. The most pleasing thread of narrative in the book is the story of Marcia, who breaks away from family traditions and marries a young scholar who has been engaged in cataloging the family library. Lady Coryston's final breakdown and reconciliation with her sons are the touching incidents in the final chapters.

A L A Bkl 10:119 N '13

"Among the adjectives which offer themselves to the critic who would qualify this novel the most obviously appropriate is 'well-balanced.'"

+ Ath 1913,2:382 O 11 300w

"A notable book, and like the others that can be called the best of Mrs. Ward's books, it is a notable contribution to the intimate history of an important decade." E. T. Guernsey.

+ Bookm 38:428 D '13 700w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett.

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 13 '13 1650w

"It is long since Mrs. Ward has given us so good a story."

+ Ind 76:457 D 4 '13 370w

"Mrs. Ward's voice sounds always fainter and farther away; presently we shall begin to believe it an echo, and not a voice at all. No doubt, the English world which she portrays does still exist, but its existence is a survival; and of her own art she retains little more than the familiar technique."

+ Nation 97:482 N 20 '13 480w

"We have found it difficult to feel very sorry for anybody in this political and tragical tale."

+ N Y Sun p13 N 15 '13 570w

"The whole novel is admirably balanced, a difficult achievement where there are several characters of almost equal importance. In this, as in character drawing and naturalness of plot, it is a very much better book than 'The mating of Lydia,' and one which deserves to rank with its author's best work."

+ N Y Times 18:563 O 19 '13 1200w

"The Coryston family" has dignity and a strong situation, although the final chapters are not altogether conclusive or well knit together."

+ Outlook 105:572 N 15 '13 150w

"Skillfully told, with characteristic ease of style, it lacks one thing—inspiration. It is machine-made. It never stirs the pulses or arouses genuine emotion."

+ Sat R 116:sup8 O 11 '13 600w

"While 'The Coryston family' exhibits all Mrs. Humphry Ward's eloquence in argument and skill in the presentation of her characters, she has come nearer to the direct portraiture of living personages than in any of her previous novels. In a sense the plot may be said to have been already ready-made to the hand, and in spite of skillful adaptations and inversions this fact bars the claim of the book to be regarded as a work of first-rate creative imagination."

+ Spec 111:616 O 18 '13 800w

WARD, MARY AUGUSTA (ARNOLD) (MRS.
THOMAS HUMPHRY WARD). Mating of Lydia. il *$1.35 (1c) Doubleday 13-6253

Mrs. Ward's latest story is essentially a love story; it deals with no problem, unless it be the problem of wealth and the responsibilities that go with it. Lydia, the heroine is made to hesitate, not so much between two suitors, altho there are two, as between her desire for independence and her love for Faversham. Later she hesitates between that love and her disapproval of Faversham's course in accepting the favor and bounty of Edward Melrose, the miserly collector of art treasures of Threlfall Tower. As Melrose's agent, Faversham is restrained in his every attempt to improve the wretched condition of the tenants on the estate; under the circumstances Lydia holds him jointly responsible for those conditions, and their marriage becomes possible only when Faversham, at a personal sacrifice, throws off the thralldom of wealth.

"Because of the unreality of the main character the whole story suffers; its chief interest is as a study of the attitude toward wealth of different sorts of people."

+ A L A Bkl 9:402 My '13

"Mrs. Ward's power of interesting readers at once thoughtful and domesticated shows no sign of diminution in this somewhat sensational novel. Mrs. Ward has, at any rate, avoided the imputation of confounding a novel with a tract."

+ Ath 1913,1:308 Mr 15 350w

"A charming love-story, expertly told."

+ Atlan 112:696 N '13 80w

"While it helps to pass an hour or two agreeably, it may all be safely and easily forgotten quite promptly." F. T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 37:443 Je '13 550w

"Regarded as a whole the book is stimulating and refreshing, serious work, but not too serious for entertainment." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p25 Ap 9 '13 430w

"It is good not only as to texture and finish of detail, but also as to the elaboration of the plot, which rises steadily to a climax of absorbing interest." W. M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:465 Je 1 '13 650w

WARD, MARY AUGUSTA—Continued.

"There is a something about her stories different from others—a smoothness of narration, a logical development of plot, and a completeness of detail that closely approach perfection."

+ Lit D 46:898 Ap 19 '13 230w

N Y Sun p39 Ap 5 '13 900w

"Yet in spite of its many merits, the more thoughtful will find this novel just a little disappointing. Its ending is too much in accord with the conventions of romance to harmonize with the deeper social note. For, though everything did indeed 'turn out for the best,' was not that happy result due rather to the author's determined interference than to the natural course of events?" L. M. F.

+ — N Y Times 18:200 Ap 6 '13 330w

"The picture of English country life is pleasing; the current of narrative runs smoothly; the book ends a trifle conventionally but agreeably."

+ Outlook 104:36 My 3 '13 280w

"All these story people are real in Mrs. Ward's best style, and the movement of the novel is natural and smooth."

+ R of Rs 47:629 My '13 200w

"For Mrs. Ward's skill in combining a love-story with a discussion on the duties of a rural landlord we have the greatest admiration. The one subject is never allowed to eclipse the other, for they are bound together in such a manner that we cannot follow them apart. Moreover, we think that the author's touch is somewhat lighter than of old, for though Lydia is quite a serious young person the joy of life is in her, and there are signs that it will develop rather than decrease with marriage and maturity."

+ Sat R 115:334 Mr 15 '13 750w

"Mrs. Humphry Ward's new and very interesting novel forcibly illustrates a curious experience to which all novelists are liable. They show a marked and perfectly natural predilection for one or more characters, and emphasize that predilection in the title; yet in spite of this obvious preference, the interest of the reader is arrested and riveted by some other figure, whose personality dominates the canvas and eclipses those to whom the 'beaux rôles' are assigned."

+ — Spec 110:454 Mr 15 '13 1900w

"It is not at all to be ranked with Mrs. Ward's more serious studies of modern English life. Although upon no higher intellectual plane than that least savory of Mrs. Ward's writings, 'The mating of Lydia' has at all events the merit of entire compliance with the requirements of the 'pure food and drugs act.' To borrow again from the phraseology of the kitchen, the plot—though one hates to say it of Mrs. Ward—is hardly more than half-baked and the whole mixture is a little raw and lumpy, though appetizing in flavor and temptingly served."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 Ap 10 '13 330w

WARDE, FREDERICK B. Fools of Shakespeare. il *$1.25 (3c) McBride, Nast & co. 13-23641

Mr. Warde writes of the Shakespearean fools and clowns from the point of view of an actor, and there are many interesting notes thruout his chapters on the interpreters of these characters on the stage. The contents follows: The fool in life and literature; Yorick; Touchstone; Trinculo in "The tempest"; Feste in "Twelfth night"; Launcelot Gobbo; Citizen in "Julius Caesar"; The clown in "Antony and Cleopatra"; The grave-diggers in "Hamlet"; Launce and Speed in "Two gentlemen from Verona"; The fool in "King Lear."

"Pleasant little sketches." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p25 N 19 '13 950w

"His discussion has point and suggestiveness."

+ Outlook 105:762 D 6 '13 130w

WARE, FABIAN ARTHUR GOULSTONE.

Worker and his country. *$1.40 Longmans (Eng ed 13-13527)

A study of the present defective social order based on observations in England and other countries, especially France and Germany. "The author first pictures as it appears to him, the failure of representative government to accomplish what has been hoped for from it by the proletariat. . . . The next step beyond the nation in the evolution of the association of mankind would be internationalism. 'Representative government which has resulted from the abortive attempt to achieve democracy only represents a stage, an experiment, a groping to find the human order toward which mankind has been given an overpowering impetus in the last century and a quarter.'" (J Pol Econ) "Mr. Ware analyzes the new patriotism, which is becoming class conscious rather than nationally conscious. He feels that there has developed a new idealism which will in the end make us all one international family in fact, although national lines may still be continued." (Ann Am Acad)

"Strikingly forceful and original but not always clear nor convincing."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:111 N '13

Reviewed by Alexander Fleisher.

Ann Am Acad 48:269 Jl '13 70w

"It is startling, even in these days of carelessness, to come across a book so badly produced as this is. Where the views expressed are obviously the outcome of careful investigation of matters from the inside, we find much that merits commendation."

+ — Ath 1912:2:624 N 23 110w

"The book is striking, not to say startling, in its force and originality, and presents, it is believed, a view of the labor movement which merits the serious consideration not only of England but of all civilized nations."

+ J Pol Econ 21:665 Jl '13 770w

Reviewed by E. A. Bradford.

+ N Y Times 18:153; 169 Mr 23; 30 '13 1800w

"Mr. Ware is disappointing and depressing in this work. He seems obsessed by the modern French pseudo-philosophy of syndicalism, and offers little more than a shrill indictment of our existing social system."

— Sat R 115:527 Ap 26 '13 780w

Spec 110:499 Mr 22 '13 700w

WARNE, FRANK JULIAN. Immigrant invasion. il *$2.50 (3½c) Dodd 13-6286

The author has not attempted to write an exhaustive treatise on the subject. "A hundred aspects of immigration are not touched upon at all. . . . But on the wider aspects of the problem, upon the relation of immigration to labor, for instance, Dr. Warne speaks with authority and supports his contentions with an array of facts drawn from every-day experience, of opinions quoted from statesmen, labor-leaders, and investigators, that leave the reader with a new sense of the vitality of the subject." (N Y Times) Dr. Warne earnestly advocates restriction of immigration and points out that the real question is no longer whether there shall be restriction, but what kind of restriction it shall be.

"The especial interest and value of Dr. Warne's book lies in the detailed exposition he has given of the economic history of immigration, not simply as an isolated current, but in its relation to the general economic development of the country." K. H. Claghorn.

+ Am Econ R 3:686 S '13 380w

Reviewed by E. W. Burgess.

+ Am J Soc 19:111 Jl '13 200w

"A more popular work than Fairchild's both in matter and style."

+ A L A Bkl 9:452 Je '13

+ — Chaut 71:30 Je 7 '13 250w

"The bibliography which is appended, is so scant and haphazard as to be of small worth."

F: A. Ogg.

+ Dial 55:206 S 16 '13 750w

"This is one of the best volumes that has yet appeared which deals comprehensively with the problem."

+ Ind 74:1399 Je 19 '13 550w

Nation 97:339 O 9 '13 180w

"Dr. Warne has rendered a public service by writing 'The immigrant invasion.' It is the sort of book that today is news, and to-morrow will be history." H. M. B.

+ N Y Times 18:213 Ap 13 '13 1950w

"His pages bristle with statistics, yet his book is truly readable; for we constantly meet either interesting and authoritative confirmation of what is generally regarded as true, or, not infrequently, hitherto unconsidered aspects of the immigration problem. Throughout, the book is characterized by common sense, moderation, balanced judgment."

+ No Am 197:718 My '13 550w

"The book is a storehouse of valuable information, but it is also a work of interpretation and stimulus to action. The results of Dr. Warne's studies are, in some cases, put into concentrated form through diagrams."

+ Outlook 103:865 Ap 19 '13 380w

+ R of Rs 47:637 My '13 100w

"An admirable companion piece to Dr. Hourwich's 'Immigration and labor.'" K. H. Clag-horn.

+ Survey 30:373 Je 14 '13 650w

WARNER, HERMANN JACKSON. New letters of an idle man. ed. by G. E. Woodberry. $1.50 Houghton

A new series of letters of travel to follow "European years," a like collection from the same pen published last year. "The picture we get of Mr. Warner from these letters is of a man of somewhat Horatian taste and Horatian ease. His idea of life is culture, a Sabine farm (or if not a farm a particularly good hotel), the modern equivalent of Falernian wine, and cigars. He has no warm feeling for the man who never enjoys his glass or appreciates the aroma of Cuban leaf." (Spec)

"These 'Letters' justify their publication on the whole, though we cannot rise to the heights of enthusiasm attained by their editor, Mr. Woodberry."

+ Ath 1913,2:177 Ag 23 800w

"The writer is the same companionable soul, the same lover of ease and good living, and as far gone in indolence and pipes as in the earlier volume. But he is always a wide reader, and he comments shrewdly and fearlessly on what he reads. The 'New letters' will not disappoint the lover of epistolary literature."

+ Dial 55:310 O 16 '13 330w

"Your reviewer has found the crusty flavor of these letters agreeable, and could have got along with a smaller supply."

+ Nation 97:364 O 16 '13 300w

+ N Y Times 18:505 S 28 '13 60w

"The letters are engaging to read and many of the judgments are sound and admirably expressed. The observation is always interesting."

+ Spec 111:463 S 27 '13 1500w

WARREN, GEORGE FREDERICK. Farm management. (Rural text-book ser.) il $1.75 (1c) Macmillan 13-6748

The term "farm management" as used in the title is defined as "the science of the organization and management of a farm enterprise for the purpose of securing the greatest continuous profit." Some of the subjects considered in the various chapters as described by their titles are: Shall I be a farmer? Types of farming; Intensive and extensive farming; Maintaining the fertility of the land; Size of farms; Farm labor; Farm equipment; Crop-planting systems; Marketing farm products; Farm records and accounts.

A L A Bk1 10:30 S '13 ✱

+ Ath 1913,1:548 My 17 100w

"The book should prove valuable to the practical farmer and should afford him much interesting data to work upon. Its conservative, practical tone may well prove to be a good antidote to the flood of superficial literature that has recently been published on the general subject of agriculture."

+ J Pol Econ 21:680 Jl '13 320w

"An interesting and suggestive, but also a very trustworthy book."

+ Nation 97:236 S 11 '13 100w

"For those who are working in the fields, both for living and for profit and those contemplating such a step, the book provides a wealth of information. The illustrations are of additional interest to the volume."

+ N Y Times 18:333 Je 1 '13 130w

WARREN, MAUDE LAVINIA (RADFORD). Main road. il $1.35 (1c) Harper 13-21017

The record of a woman's journey from a sentimental girlhood to a sane and well-balanced maturity. Janet Bellamy reared as, in her father's opinion, a sheltered daughter should be, faces life with ideals imbibed from romantic novels. It is inevitable that she must be hurt in the process of learning what real life is. A childhood on a Wisconsin farm, four years in the University of Chicago, a period in the home of a wealthy cousin, a later period in a social settlement, are the stages into which Janet's journey toward full self-realization is divided.

"A story, whose excellent craftsmanship must be admitted even by those who either openly or secretly confess but a lukewarm interest in the emotional processes by which Janet 'found herself,' and her dream of 'the beloved,' which from girlhood she had dreamed, came true."

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 22 '13 300w

"Apparently the author has been reading some of the literature about sex and has felt obliged to keep the word in mind in writing her story; the reader need not feel alarmed, however, for the thing appears in no part of it. The unfortunate heroine is not a living being, but merely a type, and therefore sexless in spite of all the talk."

+ N Y Sun p3 N 29 '13 300w

"The book would be better if the author had not, at the end, dealt out happiness quite so lavishly, but it is always interesting, and often illuminating."

+ N Y Times 18:642 N 23 '13 270w

WASHBURN, STANLEY. Nogi: a man against the background of a great war. il $1 (4½c) Holt 13-3673

The book is not a biography of General Nogi; the author does not go back of 1904, the year in which his acquaintance with the man began. He pictures Nogi, whom he calls "the most consistent idealist I ever knew," in two aspects, as the iron soldier, and as the gentle friend. His last chapter is a plea for an understanding of the final act of the old Samurai, an act wholly in keeping with Japanese ideals. He says of Nogi that "he was the consistent embodiment of that idea of the Buddhist religion which leads each soul to pray for ultimate absorption into Nirvana, the intangible divine. Nogi . . . was the exemplification of this idea, and his death was a vindication of it."

+ A L A Bk1 9:452 Je '13

"Is the third book by this rising young writer, and distinctly his best, so far. The subject-matter strengthens and sobers the dash and idiomatic freshness which mark the previous narratives of the author's picturesque experience. One of the best things in the book is the way the writer, while recognizing the western ethics which frown upon suicide under all circumstances, justifies Nogi's ending from the oriental point of view."

+ Bellman 14:342 Mr 15 '13 1250w

WASHBURN, STANLEY—Continued.

"Though the oriental mind is held to be a closed book to the westerner, the author has succeeded in presenting a very real and human and attractive character, as well as a noble one, in this brief sketch of a great Japanese military commander."

+ Dial 54:421 My 16 '13 330w

+ Nation 96:236 Mr 6 '13 450w

"It is an inspiring little book, written with sincere enthusiasm."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 1 '13 90w

+ N Y Sun p13 Ap 5 '13 350w

"Mr. Washburn in his little brochure has made plain the hold that such a man can gain over those who know him well."

+ N Y Times 18:179 Mr 30 '13 570w

"Any one who reads the volume cannot help but feel that the portrait lives."

+ Outlook 104:39 My 3 '13 180w

+ R of Rs 47:507 Ap '13 50w

+ Spec 110:503 Mr 22 '13 220w

"Written in the unstudied, spontaneous style of a man who has come to feel a big love for his subject, the little volume breathes an atmosphere of fervent and heartfelt appreciation and paints the old warrior in touching, and, at times, pathetic colors."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 8 '13 370w

WATNEY, CHARLES, and LITTLE, JAMES

¹² A. Industrial warfare. *$2 Dutton
(Eng ed 13-335)

A work giving "in twenty-five chapters and fifteen appendices the essential facts regarding the 'Issues and personalities' of nearly every phase of the labor movement. Eleven chapters are devoted to special industries or classes of workers, as 'Cotton and weaving trades,' 'General labourers,' 'Women workers,' and others to 'Labour organization,' 'Syndicalism,' 'Minimum wage,' 'Remedies,' 'Profit sharing.' The book is purely descriptive and matter-of-fact throughout, a detached position being successfully maintained by the authors. Even in the chapter on 'Suggested remedies' they do not have a special panacea but report faithfully the respective standpoints of employers, workers, and public."—Am J Soc

"A very useful compendium on labor legislation and conditions in Great Britain during the past few years. Very sketchy in places and sometimes not clear." F. H. Hankins.

+ Am J Soc 19:267 S '13 530w

"Though it is not possible to credit the authors with far vision or deep insight, we congratulate them on having collected a large amount of fact which should be of great use to the general public."

+ Ath 1912:2413 O 12 100w

"Notwithstanding its condensation, the information contained in its pages is arranged in readable fashion and is given in a pleasantly detached objective style, free, so far as one can see, from personal prejudice."

+ Nation 97:359 O 16 '13 600w

N Y Times 18:324 My 25 '13 120w

+ N Y Times 18:558 O 19 '13 500w

WATSON, FREDERICK. Shallows. *$1.35 Dutton

The time of the story is the year 1752. Bonnie Prince Charlie is its hero. "He makes a last futile journey to England, only to be betrayed, and to slip away unpursued to the continent. But from Paris went with him and his companion, a young girl, Ethlenn Murdoch, returning to her home in Scotland after six years in a convent in Paris. After the prince has left England, the interest centres in Ethlenn."

There are glimpses of Paris to enjoy, of Edinburgh and Stirling; but this is a story with an atmosphere of mystery and gloom. . . . It is a story of a doomed house, and a lost cause: the fall of the House of Murdoch, and the failure of the Stuarts." (Boston Transcript)

"A good, stirring story."

+ Ath 1913,2:229 S 6 60w

Boston Transcript p6 O 8 '13 210w

"Mr. Watson's temper is judicial, his feeling aloof, and his method realistic. His grim tale is softened by no rose-colored lights. But there is not a little charm in the telling of it, while in literary feeling and artistic insight it is not to be compared with the ordinary gilded and perfumed historical romance."

+ N Y Times 18:711 N 30 '13 200w

Spec 111:661 O 25 '13 30w

WATSON, GEORGE CATCHPOLE. Farm poultry. ii *$1.50 (2½c) Macmillan 12-23461

A revised and enlarged edition of one of the numbers in the Rural science series which was published first in 1901. The work is designed for the farmer and amateur poultry raiser.

"It is a sane and safe book for the beginner, covering every side of the subject in a reliable and practical manner."

+ Ind 73:1431 D 19 '12 50w

WATSON, JOHN. Interpretation of religious experience: the Gifford lectures delivered in the University of Glasgow in the years 1910-12. 2v *$6 Macmillan (Engd 13-1170)

"This book is an attempt to establish religion on a firm metaphysical basis." (Int J Ethics) "In the first part Prof. Watson deals with the development of Greek religion and theology, and with primitive Christianity and its exponents, and, after treating of Origen, Aquinas, and Dante, passes to modern philosophers. The second part is constructive, and discusses such subjects as faith, knowledge and mythology, naturalism and evolution, evil and its atonement, and the invisible church and immortality." (Ath)

"Good reading for one who is pleased with a consistent exposition and defense of a definite philosophical standpoint, whether that be his own or not. There are some valuable discussions in the historical volume, but it is in the second volume that interest centers from the point of view of this review. And yet here, too, a large part of the discussion is critical, rather than constructive." D. C. Macintosh.

+ Am J Theol 17:312 Ap '13 1300w

"A scholarly study."

+ A L A Bkl 9:393 My '13

Ath 1912,2:411 O 12 130w

"The style of the lectures is admirably clear, and, though they will be of no use to those who cannot bring philosophy to their aid, they will help those who must have a rational explanation of things which belong to the Faith."

+ Ath 1912,2:550 N 9 500w

"Those who are accustomed to the method of historical interpretation generally current today will feel that Prof. Watson's historical survey of the interpretation of religious experience is scarcely in touch with the real movements of human society. His sole concern is to give critical epistemological expositions of certain leading types of religious philosophy. His lectures constitute a timely contribution to the understanding of one of the great problems of modern theology. Whether this problem can be solved by so exclusive a use of epistemological dialectic is another question."

+ Bib World 41:287 Ap '13 500w

"Interspersed with the exposition is much acute criticism." G. D. Hicks.

+ Hibbert J 11:653 Ap '13 600w

"The fatal objection to his philosophical thinking seems to me to be his failure to grasp the meaning of law and causality. The problem which Professor Watson attacks is, I think, one of growing interest to people at the present time, and, though I cannot pretend myself to feel satisfied with the solution which he offers, I am sure that this book will be of interest to all whose minds are occupied with the effort to find some rational justification for faith." K. Costelloe.

+ — Int J Ethics 23:349 Ap '13 2050w

"In spite of inadequacies, these volumes remain a notable and significant reminder of the continued vitality amongst us of the Hegelian tradition." G. P. Adams.

+ — J Philos 10:466 Ag 14 '13 1150w

"To the true Hegelian, in this mad, sad century, Professor Watson's uncompromising volumes will doubtless be as rivers of water in a dry place and the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. But to the unregenerate its value will be chiefly historical, in the sense that it puts Hegelianism into modern terms and restates it in the light of some of the newer problems."

+ — Nation 96:364 Ap 10 '13 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Leuba.

Psychol Bull 10:120 Mr 15 '13 200w

WATSON, REV. JOHN (IAN MACLAREN, pseud.). Books and bookmen, and other essays. $1.25 Doran 12-28400

Four essays make up the contents of this volume; Books and bookmen; Humour: an analysis; Robert Burns; and The Waverly novels. The personal note is prominent in each. "Your Scotchman, like your Frenchman, knows how to chat. He doesn't relapse into a condition of watching his own wheels go 'round, as the Englishman is apt to, and he isn't afraid of being arrested for vagrancy if he loiters by the way, as the American is; he just chats. Robert Louis Stevenson and Andrew Lang are examples. . . . And now the mantle of the famous chatters of Scotland—considerably cut down, to be sure, in the interests of a good fit, but still quite recognizable—has fallen upon the shoulders of Ian MacLaren." (N Y Times)

"This is a delightful essay. Our chief complaint is that the little book is too short."

+ Ath 1912:2:523 N 2 70w

"The whole book is an example of the all too common contemporary practice of making, by judicious choice of type and paper, a volume which should normally consist of a hundred pages look like one of three hundred, and sell for a corresponding price. The real worth of the book, as has already appeared, is in its appeal to those who have known the genial Ian MacLaren or heard him, and who will be glad of any memorial of his personality." R. M. Alden.

+ — Dial 54:182 Mr 1 '13 430w

"In the first essay he draws a rather too long comparison between dipsomania and bibliomania, which is nevertheless amusing to the end because of the quiet but hearty enjoyment of the author. In the essays on Burns and Scott there is little acute thinking and no fundamental characteristics, but a winning enthusiasm for the fine emotional qualities in the work of his fellow-countrymen."

+ — Nation 95:619 D 26 '12 300w

"'Books and bookmen,' which gives its title to the book, is the best of the brief papers, perhaps, because in it the author is less meditatively a Scotchman than in the others, and his essentially Scotch qualities have a freer swing. Apart from small faults, however, the essay on Burns is good reading. For the man who has not acquired the mental quick-lunch habit, who still has a weakness for the old-fashioned virtues of kindness and courage and honesty, who loves books and human nature in reasonable proportions, and who has a leisurely sense of humor, we could suggest no better gift than Dr. MacLaren's pleasant book of causeries." H. M. E.

+ — N Y Times 17:760 D 8 '12 1050w

WATSON, WILLIAM. Muse in exile: poems. $1.25 Lane 13-7868

"This latest volume of Mr. Watson's contains a number of poems, and a paper on 'The poet's place in the scheme of life,' an address delivered in various parts of America.

In this the author puts forward a plea for a more intelligent criticism of poetry, and a more definite analysis of the qualities in the work of poets, living and dead." (Ath) The themes of the poems "vary from very personal expressions of marital felicity, to patriotism, liberalism, glimpses of nature, and addresses to famous friends." (Boston Transcript)

"Of the pieces included in this volume it is possible to say that, if they do not, perhaps, show Mr. Watson quite at his best, all have his characteristic touch."

+ Ath 1913:1:380 Ap 5 150w

Reviewed by W. S. Braithwaite.

— Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '13 1500w

"Mr. Watson's volume, as a whole, contributes considerably to our pleasure, although it contains nothing comparable to the noble pieces upon which his reputation is so firmly based." W. M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:210 S 16 '13 500w

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Watson has so uncomplimentary and so erroneous an opinion of the age in which he lives, but he utters his views with such grace and artistry that they deserve attention."

+ — Lit D 46:962 Ap 26 '13 650w

"It is comforting to be able to say that 'The muse in exile' is far from being Mr. Watson's best."

— N Y Sun p14 Ap 26 '13 700w

"It is an undercurrent of pessimism that renders this latest volume of verse from Mr. Watson disappointing."

+ — N Y Times 18:253 Ap 27 '13 1150w

"There is little magic either of meter or matter in this latest volume of William Watson's. It is a long road he has traveled from his unforgettable sonnets to the unforgivable verses that make up so large a part of this book."

— Outlook 104:72 My 10 '13 130w

"Mr. William Watson's latest book of verse is scarcely an addition to the pure, clear notes of Watsonian music with which we are familiar. Although there is little of the imperial mastery of harmonious utterance so praised by Mr. Watson, in this book, as analysis and criticism of life, as rhymed aphorism, as thought profound and often felicitous of expression, it has dignity and worth."

— + R of Rs 47:759 Je '13 150w

"Mr. Watson has no message for the modern world. He repeats, with varying degrees of accomplishment, echoes of an old tale."

— Sat R 115:459 Ap 12 '13 1000w

"In the present collection there are a few things which are scarcely equal to much of what their author has given us in the past, yet the majority of these pages show evidence of undiminished vigour and ability."

+ — Spec 110:759 My 3 '13 600w

"There is too much of the discordant note of the poet at individual outs with the world rather than the broader theme of impersonal reform, to which, however, Mr. Watson devotes some fine passages."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 My 15 '13 1300w

WATT, FRANCIS. Edinburgh and the Lothians. 11 $3.50 Stokes (Eng ed 13-15876)

"Naturally it is with Midlothian that the present volume chiefly deals, touching especially on the historic buildings and the literary and art associations of the Scottish capital. The remaining ten of the book's twenty-nine chapters take the reader to such historic places as Hawthornden, Roslin, Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick, and Tantallon castle. The artist has chosen some of the most interesting scenes for his brush, giving us pleading glimpses of Holyrood and Arthur's Seat, Edinburgh castle from Greyfriars churchyard, Roslin chapel, Linlithgow palace from the Loch, Tantallon castle, and other memorable buildings and picturesque views."—Dial

WATT, FRANCIS—Continued.

"A dozen charming illustrations in colour by Walter Dexter are the best feature of this book. The text goes over the familiar ground without adding anything novel, and with little charm of style."

+ — Ath 1912, 1: 465 Ap 27 160w

"Another agreeable and useful volume about Edinburgh and the surrounding country. A map of the Lothians would have been an acceptable addition to this excellent and attractive volume."

+ — Dial 53: 496 D 16 '12 220w

+ Nation 96:363 Ap 10 '13 330w

+ N Y Times 17: 689 N 24 '12 180w

"A native of East Lothian, a scholar and a pundit, Mr. Watt knows more of tradition and of history than Stevenson did; and he writes in the afternoon of life when Stevenson himself is become one of the silent figures which haunt the northern metropolis, and when 'The Scots observer' is part of the literary annals of Edinburgh."

+ Sat R 114: 273 Ag 31 '12 500w

"A delightful book for a rainy night. A study of the book would add greatly to the pleasure of a visit to the city and its surroundings, whose wealth of historic and literary associations, Mr. Watt has recalled most alluringly."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 24 '13 330w

WATTS, MRS. MARY S. (FRASER-TYTLER). George Frederic Watts. 3v il $*10 Doran (Eng ed 13-6347)

"Mrs. Watts' 'Annals of an artist's life,' in two stately volumes, are accompanied by a third containing Watts's writings, published and unpublished. The text is supplemented by thirty-nine finely-executed photogravure plates—portraits of Watts, photographs of his homes, reproductions of his work, etc." (Dial) "All through, however, Mrs. Watts has endeavored to let her husband occupy the centre of the picture, and succeeds so admirably that the dominant impression left by her volume is that of the artist's own lofty personality." (Boston Transcript)

"Her work has a peculiar interest despite its excess of detail and lack of definiteness as to dates and events."

+ — A L A Bk 9:393 My '13

"Her volumes will be a standard work of reference for future writers upon this great artist."

+ Ath 1912,2:735 D 14 1200w

Reviewed by H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 14 '12 900w

"Mrs. Watts tells her story in a somewhat fragmentary and disjointed fashion, but in spite of that defect her pages are alive with the influence of their subject, and when we close them we have gained perhaps a clearer and more exact understanding of the man and his ideals than if the biography had been written by a better trained mind and a more expert hand." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '13 1150w

"Throughout Mrs. Watts has acquitted herself well, in what we can readily believe was a task of much difficulty and delicacy. We can point to no graver faults than a haziness of chronology, and an indefiniteness in the use of pronouns." W. R. Browne.

+ — Dial 54:11 Ja 1 '13 2800w

Reviewed by W. H. Low.

+ Lit D 46:584 Mr 15 '13 3300w

"The tone of her biography is excellent; she preserves many sayings that one would be sorry to miss; she gives the general sense of that purposeful yet carefully sheltered life, of the coming and going of brave men and fair women, of an atmosphere of cheerful reverence and love. And yet the picture is sadly obscured by the details. Nor can Watts himself be said to be interesting through so many pages."

+ — Nation 97:173 Ag 21 '13 1750w

+ N Y Sun p13 F 1 '13 4200w

"One wishes the biographer had dwelt more upon these friendships which formed so essential a part of his life. Yet Mrs. Watts in most cases scarcely more than mentions their existence—never analyzes. Herein lies the chief fault of her record as a serious study. Altogether the three volumes constitute a work which no votary of Watts can well afford to miss. The illustrations and reproductions scattered through them are excellent, while all the other mechanical details are so satisfactory that one almost forgives the crudity of the covers. Whether Watts himself could have forgiven that, though, is more doubtful." Louis Baury.

+ — N Y Times 18:28 Ja 19 '13 2100w

"Altogether they constitute a work which no admirer of Watts and no student of art during the last century can afford to miss."

+ N Y Times 18:674 N 30 '13 350w

"The great value of this biography is not so much that it includes a readable story of an interesting and kindly personality with many reminiscences of his friendships with the best men of his times, as that it does also, and really for the first time, make clear the artist's own view of his art."

+ Outlook 103:92 Ja 11 '13 950w

+ R of Rs 47:381 Mr '13 170w

"We owe to the author many indispensable touches that are essential to an intimate conception of Watts." C. H. C. Baker.

+ — Sat R 115:391 Mr 29 '13 1150w

"Mrs. Watts has told the story of her husband's life and work, and she has done it in a manner that is adequate, simple and dignified."

+ Spec 111:178 Ag 2 '13 1400w

"Mrs. Watts has performed her large task with marked ability, dignity and good taste."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ja 23 '13 2700w

WATTS, MARY STANBERY. Van Cleve. $*1.35 12 (1c) Macmillan 13-21744

This is a work of realistic fiction of the highest type—a story of Ohio in the nineties. It is a study of a decayed family of gentlefolk of the old southern stock, of which the grandson, Van Cleve Kendrick, the least picturesque of all its members, is the saving grace. Van Cleve is unpicturesque, unromantic and plodding; he goes to work at eighteen, sticks to his job and makes money. He is accounted "close" and hard and unsympathetic, but he proves capable of a high act of knight-errantry, a loyal friendship and a life-long and devoted love. The brief period of the Spanish American war is brilliantly pictured.

"An interesting and unusual story. Will have a more general appeal than the author's earlier works."

+ — A L A Bk 10:119 N '13 ✦

"Taken on its merits, 'Van Cleve' may be summed up as a piece of sterling character study and a somewhat disappointing story." F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 38:417 D '13 630w

"There is nothing supercilious in saying that Mrs. Watts's novels are very American, deliciously American, at times so amusingly American as to make any reader, whether he lives in Maine or California, or anywhere between chuckle and chuckle again with delight." E. L. P.

+ — Boston Transcript p8 O 18 '13 1000w

"Mrs. Watts is so good a craftsman that her new novel, slight of plot and simple in characterization, has something very human and very real about it all."

+ Ind 76:138 O 16 '13 320w

"It is rather as the appreciative historian of Ohio manners than as a searching analyst of character or an inventor of absorbingly interesting events that Mrs. Watts excels."

+ — Nation 97:482 N 20 '13 300w

"The story holds the reader's attention, but it is the surroundings and the manner of telling that give distinction to Mrs. Watts's stories. In 'Van Cleve' we notice signs of haste in the composition of the story and occasionally in the English."

+ — N Y Sun p3 O 18 '13 300w

"Sequels, of course, are abominations. But it seems a pity that such firmly drawn characters should live between the covers of but one novel. Thackeray's delightful method of writing the story of the children of the chief figures of a previous novel, or of making his hero, grown old, a shrewd observer of the lives of the new generation, could surely be used by Mrs. Watts, and she is one of the very few writers now living who creates people in whom the reader can feel a deep personal interest." Joyce Kilmer.

+ + N Y Times 18:559 O 19 '13 980w

"Mrs. Watts's realism is the sort that American literature needs. She is not morbid, not sordid-minded, not obsessed with a sense of the weaknesses and wickednesses of humanity. She describes the people that we know, she writes of the life about her with keen enjoyment and accurate observation. And she knows how to tell a story."

+ N Y Times 18:666 N 30 '13 210w

"Mrs. Watts has a familiar, cheerful way of taking her readers into her confidence, and she so avoids the sins of 'fine writing' and melodramatic effects that her art is as easy as it is subtle. The humor is quiet, but pervading and persuasive. Altogether the book is in ripeness and mellowness the best of the three excellent novels which Mrs. Watts has to her credit, and it may be added that all three are entitled to a place of honor in American fiction of this century."

+ + Outlook 105:571 N 15 '13 250w

WAVELL, A. J. B. Modern pilgrim in Mecca, and a siege in Sanaa. il $2.80 (2c) Small (Eng ed A13-256)

A book describing a journey to Mecca taken by an Englishman who disguised himself as a native. "The author takes his readers by way of Beyrout to Damascus, up the Hedjaz railway, Medina, to Yembo, Jiddah, to Mecca, where the pilgrimage is described in a remarkable chapter; in the latter part of the book there is a glimpse of Young Turkey and the Yemen, a visit to Hodeidah, from there to Sanaa, an account of the siege of Sanaa, and the traveler's perilous escape and capture by the fanatic hordes." (Boston Transcript)

"He is a close and shrewd observer, and possesses the gift of graphic description and a keen sense of humor."

+ A L A Bkl 10:30 S '13

"The author would perhaps have been wiser to limit his book to this astonishingly graphic, remorselessly unromantic, and often unseasonably humorous description of his pilgrimage. With its intimate sketches of his companions and acquaintances, and its constant evidence of close and shrewd observation of all details, it makes a full and fascinating book by itself."

+ — Ath 1912:2:511 N 2 2300w

"Mr. Wavell's book is so full of startling experiences and exhaustive information, we follow him so compellingly through those strange lands of the Moslem and the Turk, that we can do no more than to recommend it as one of the most interesting and fascinating travel-books that has come to our notice for some time. The whole book is full of significance because it makes the reader realize, through all adventures and excitements of disguise and travel, the vastness of Ottoman influence."

+ Boston Transcript p25 Ap 30 '13 350w

+ Lit D 47:588 O 4 '13 150w

+ — Nation 97:365 O 16 '13 250w

N Y Sun p4 My 3 '13 280w

"A most entertaining narrative."

+ N Y Times 18:296 My 18 '13 700w

"The book is of special interest in its revelation of the Turkish character."

+ Outlook 104:343 Je 14 '13 70w

R of Rs 48:122 J1 '13 50w

"The book deserves far more than the passing word of praise and admiration which is all we can here bestow upon it."

+ Sat R 115:20 Ja 4 '13 600w

WEALE, WILLIAM HENRY JAMES, and BROCKWELL, MAURICE W. Van Eycks and their art. il $4 Lane 13-5644

A condensed and revised edition of a costly work issued in 1908. "Mr. Brockwell states an effort has been made to separate all the paintings into more clearly-defined groups. Here, then, the reader will find a systematic classification of pictures of doubtful authenticity and of copies, variants, derivatives, and imitations. The scheme of the book as rearranged includes an admirable biography of the Van Eycks, a plan of the Great Polyptych, a list of paintings, and an elaborate catalogue raisonné. One addition, too, is of extreme value, namely the appendix which gives a list of pictures sold by public auction from 1662 to 1912. . . . The book is copiously illustrated by admirable half-tone reproductions from photographs." (Boston Transcript) "All alterations and revisions have not only been approved but actually supervised by Mr. Weale." (Spec)

A L A Bkl 9:467 Je '13

"Altogether the book is one which no student of the subject can afford to neglect."

+ Ath 1912:2:298 D 7 80w

"That this new and cheaper edition is also an improvement on the first will be readily admitted by all who were somewhat confused by the arrangement of the earlier book." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 14 '12 370w

"The manual is a model of self-sacrificing, laborious and accurate investigation and cannot fail to be of the greatest utility to all students of art."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 9 '13 370w

+ Int Studio 49:257 My '13 150w

"Generally, Mr. Brockwell's editorial judgment has been excellent, and through his pains a standard work assumes a more convenient and useful form."

+ Nation 96:374 Ap 10 '13 350w

+ N Y Sun p4 F 15 '13 100w

"The book might well be in the library of any one interested in the developments of painting. It is a work to appeal, however, to the student rather than to the general reader. It has been thoroughly done."

+ Outlook 103:500 Mr 1 '13 50w

+ Sat R 115:370 Mr 22 '13 150w

+ Spec 110:sup129 Ja 25 '13 230w

"The present edition, with its many fine illustrations, will prove a valuable and interesting reference book. It is a scholarly and carefully documented authority for the student of art rather than in any degree a general appreciation cast in attractive literary form."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 20 '13 150w

WEAVER, EDWARD EBENEZER. Mind and health, with an examination of some systems of divine healing; with an introd. by G. Stanley Hall. $2 (1½c) Macmillan 13-5006

The author has made a study of the psychological laws that influence health and an investigation into the methods of healing practiced by various religious bodies. Among the movements of this kind considered are Christian science, the Emmanuel movement, Dowism, the Christian alliance. There are chapters on What constitutes a valid religious system of healing and How the church may heal.

WEAVER, EDWARD EBENEZER—Continued.
In his introduction Dr. Hall commends the author's fair and open attitude of mind.

"Of value to all students of psychology or psychotherapy and of interest to many readers."

+ A L A Bkl 9:452 Je '13

"In view of the growing popularity of systems of non-medical healing the book is of general interest."

+ Ath 1913,1:439 Ap 19 50w

"We wish that this book might be extensively read by ministers—and so that it might displace the worthless trash that is so widely distributed and read."

+ Bib World 42:124 Ag '13 130w

Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 350w

"Originally begun as a dissertation, the book has many of the earmarks of its origin and of a development in which quotations and cards of reference seem to have swamped the writer at certain points. Its completed form would be much improved by the omission of many quotations or some form of marked concentration."

+ — Nation 97:244 S 11 '13 1450w

"Mr. Weaver's fundamental assumption, then, is: Be good (or get some one to make you good) and you won't be ill. It is a defect of his book, however, that he does not convince the reader of the truth of the assumption."

— Nature 92:2 S 4 '13 200w

N Y Times 18:181 Mr 30 '13 150w

"The volume is both critical and constructive."

+ Outlook 104:1011 Ag 30 '13 180w

"It is running no hazard to say of the whole book that this is the most comprehensive and well-balanced treatment of religious psychotherapy, from the sympathetic viewpoint, that has thus far appeared." J. W. Buckham.

+ — Yale R ns3:203 O '13 700w

WEBB, WALTER LORING. Economics of railroad construction. 2d ed il $2.50 Wiley 12-25457

The main divisions of this volume deal with financial and legal elements in the economics of railroad construction; the operating elements of the problem; the physical elements of the problem. This second edition corrects errors of the first, has rewritten chapters on operating expenses, distances, curvature and grade, has revised and enlarged diagrams and tables, new tables and up-to-date data in many sections.

"An excellent, condensed treatment of the subject."

+ A L A Bkl 9:355 Ap '13

+ Ann Am Acad 49:250 S '13 150w

Reviewed by W. W. Colpitts.

+ Engin N 69:813 Ap 17 '13 120w

"Mr. Webb's book is written in a clear style, is well arranged, is convenient in size, and deals in a broad manner with the most important economic and operating subjects on which the young railroad engineer should be informed. The book is strongest in its treatment of engineering and maintenance. With respect to operation and legislation the author is not so well at home. It is evident that in the work of revision Mr. Webb has overlooked the important changes in the power of the Interstate commerce commission. Altogether, however, minor inaccuracies, and the frequent use of 1904 prices and statistics when those for later periods are available, detract but slightly from the value of the volume. It should well serve its purpose as a text book for engineering students."

+ — Engin Rec 67:452 Ap 19 '13 550w

WEBBER, GEORGE D. Best motor routes through Europe. il $2 McBride, Nast & co. 13-3256

"Provided with maps, halftones, photographs, and a store of suggestions well mingled with enthusiasm, printed in large, clear type, with the names of the places emphasized in black-faced letters. Mr. Webber's 'practical guide for the automobilist touring continental Europe,' as the secondary title calls it, perfectly fulfils its promise." (Boston Transcript) "The tour he describes is a long and interesting one, though by no means exhaustive. He goes from Havre to Paris, through western France to the Pyrenees, through the south of France, Switzerland, the Italian lake country and Tyrol as far as Vienna; thence back through southern Germany to Strasburg and Paris again. He describes also various side trips and alternative routes." (N Y Sun)

"Convenient in form and arrangement and well indexed."

+ A L A Bkl 10:112 N '13

"The book has two uses. It subverts the imagination of the majority of us who have no cars and no possibilities of a motor trip abroad; and it makes the way of the luxurious and lucky easy."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '13 450w

"His general remarks will be instructive and valuable to all who think of motoring abroad."

+ N Y Sun p3 F 15 '13 150w

N Y Times 18:238 Ap 20 '13 80w

WEBSTER, HENRY KITCHELL. Ghost girl. il $1.25 Appleton 13-1901

"Add together a painter with the tastes of a Sherlock Holmes, a pleasant appearing physician who masks a cold sinister heart and brain under his smile and plausibility, a pretty girl with a double, a rich elderly aunt with a tendency towards delusions, stir in an element of mystery and spice with the supernatural and you have the concoction known as 'The ghost girl,' which is Mr. Webster's 1913 effort."—Boston Transcript

"As light fiction it is interesting. The almost complete absence of mawkish love scenes is refreshing."

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 8 '13 180w

"A capital story of its kind. There is more life in the people than is usual in mystery tales and the plot is ingenious."

+ — N Y Sun p3 F 1 '13 180w

"A clever and well-written story is this of Mr. Webster's."

+ N Y Times 18:76 F 16 '13 170w

WEBSTER, HUTTON. Ancient history. il $1.50 12 Heath 13-10578

"The book gives a sketch of the history of mankind from the earliest times until the year 814 A. D." (N Y Times) "It draws liberally from the wealth of information which recent excavations in Oriental and classical lands have made available. Of the 639 pages of text, fully 300 are given to describing manners, institutions, art, literature, and other phases of civilization. Archaeology is explained, both as to methods and as to results, and there is a wholesome critical spirit in the treatment of tradition, whether it be Oriental, Hebraic, or classic." (Nation)

"It is written in readable style; the character sketches are specially good, the annotated bibliography is well chosen and the maps and illustrations are useful."

+ A L A Bkl 10:112 N '13 ✕

"Although decked out with all the latest adornments of modern text-book writing, it follows the conventional line of treatment, and dissects ancient civilization rather than fuses it into a vivid whole."

— Ind 75:335 Ag 7 '13 50w

"If we must have in one textbook all that the author has felt impelled to treat in this book, probably no better distribution of space could be made; but it is a question if the pupil would not have a more vivid, and consequently a more permanent, mental picture of what he is expected to know if the subject-matter were taken in smaller assignments treated on a larger scale."

+ — Nation 97:236 S 11 '13 280w

"Although this is primarily a textbook for schools and colleges, it is written in such an interesting style that the average layman—even one not usually interested in history—can read it with the greatest interest and pleasure. One cannot help feeling that Prof. Webster has unduly slighted early Egyptian history."

+ — N Y Times 18:594 N 2 '13 200w

WEDMORE, SIR FREDERICK. Memories.
1 *$2.50 Doran (Eng ed 13-622)

Sir Frederick Wedmore who came into at least casual touch with the great men of the middle and late nineteenth century writes of them here in a series of gossip reminiscences. "There are glimpses of the eccentric and fascinating Lord Houghton and his famous breakfasts; of the connoisseur, Henry Vaughan; of Swinburne, Tennyson, one or two of the pre-Raphaelites and, in general, mid-Victorian and later celebrities." (N Y Times) "One seems to have been moving in a world of acquaintances—of great acquaintances it is true, but one begins to tire of the brisk nod and the brief interchange of gossip, courtesy, and anecdote. . . . Yet the author moves easily enough in the world to which he introduces us, and it is a world worth moving in." (Spec)

"Instead of sharply focusing the features of the figure he is portraying, he more frequently presents to us a softened outline seen through the veil of the narrator's temperament."

+ Ath 1912, 2: 244 S 7 310w

"The trouble with Mr. Wedmore's memories is that they are so slight as to make them hardly worth while. The slips are trifling matters, to which only a criticaster would call attention, if they did not indicate the condescending frame of mind which makes many an Englishman think that accuracy is of no great importance when things American are concerned. If a book from this country spoke of a novel called 'Kenelm Chillybly,' a writer named 'H. D. Wells,' and a place called 'Hammer Smith,' we fear that the Saturday Review, for instance, would find therein text for a sermon on the slipshod methods of the Yankees."

+ — Boston Transcript p26 D 18 '12 430w

"His 'Memories' will be enjoyed by all who take delight in the cultured expression of a mind stored with the remembrance of cheerful yesterdays."

+ Dial 54:62 Ja 16 '13 230w

"The book possesses the compelling charm of a truthful narrative."

+ Lit D 46:352 F 15 '13 150w

"Is disappointing in a way which is not uncommon in English memoirs. The author is content to tell us that he saw or met any number of famous persons; occasionally he describes them or states what impression they made on him, but generally he limits himself to trivial or irrelevant matters, assuming that his readers know as much about the celebrity as himself. His 'Memories' are little more than a list of names."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Ja 11 '13 120w

"It would seem that his 'Memories' should be replete with interest. As a matter of fact, they are for the most part singularly stodgy and prosaic. Doubtless the blame for this impression lies partly with Mr. Wedmore's style. However, for those who have the patience and the requisite interest in casual mémoires, there is not a little in the book to entertain and amuse."

+ — N Y Times 17: 787 D 22 '12 800w

"Great names dignify every chapter of Sir Fredrick Wedmore's neatly and fluently written volume. Apt description and discrete reminiscence blossom on every page. Never was a book easier to read. Never did memory run a course more evenly pleasant. Yet when the last page is turned one feels a certain dissatisfaction, a disappointment that the pleasure of reading has left so light a mark upon the mind. But, indeed, even where the touch is lightest and least satisfying, where the reader seems always on the verge, but never in the grip, of solid interest, there is sure to be something which one is glad to see on paper, something that will add its grain to the great cumulus out of which true history is fashioned."

+ — Spec 109: sup 680 N 2 '12 780w

WEDMORE, SIR FREDERICK. Painters and painting. (Home university library of modern knowledge) il *50c (1c) Holt 13-7762

In his preface the author expresses a hope that his book may "be found not quite wanting in interest by those who know, and not quite wanting in utility, besides, by those who do not know, about pictorial art." His book is admirably adapted to meet both ends. While not a full history of art, it touches at least on all the great schools, from the Primitives to the Impressionists, and thus serves the purpose of a book of information. At the same time, written with a style that is in itself pleasing, and with a liberal exercise of that personal preference which the author believes permissible in the story of an art, its chapters have the attractiveness of a series of essays.

+ A L A Bkl 9:453 Je '13

"As a review of the history of painting from the Italian Primitives to the Impressionists, the volume appears a little disconnected and haphazard; yet, when we refer to the Index which is a valuable feature of the volume, we find that there are few painters of note throughout the ages to whom the author has not devoted at least a word or two. The pages are studded with many gems of criticism."

+ — Ath 1913, 1:226 F 22 230w

"A condensed but thoroughly interesting little book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '13 180w

"The little book is a handy general guide to modern painting."

+ N Y Sun p5 Mr 22 '13 50w

+ N Y Times 18:372 Je 22 '13 650w

WEED, CLARENCE MOORES. Seeing nature
1 first. il *$2 (3½c) Lippincott 13-9139

Just as Americans have long been urged to see their own country before wandering in other lands, so here home stayers are encouraged to look to the humble beauties of nature that are near at hand before turning their eyes to wonders further afield. Under the headings Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter, the author presents four groups of sketches, attractively illustrated with drawings and photographs.

+ A L A Bkl 10:31 S '13

+ Chaut 72:61 S 20 '13 270w

"An unusually attractive and well-written as well as soundly instructive volume. Numerous and excellent illustrations from photographs and from drawings by Mr. W. I. Beecroft, enrich the volume."

+ Dial 54:467 Je 1 '13 400w

"A child or a grown-up will learn much from it that it would be a delight to know. The information given can be trusted."

+ Ind 74:1348 Je 12 '13 100w

"The book reminds one strongly of Mr. Schmucker's 'Under the open sky.' Both are delightful."

+ Lit D 46:1396 Je 21 '13 100w

"One of the attractive books of the year."

+ N Y Times 18:348 Je 8 '13 220w

R of Rs 48:381 S '13 80w

WEEKS, ARLAND DEYETT. Education of
° to-morrow. *$1.25 (3c) Sturgis & Walton
13-10562

Professor M. V. O'Shea who writes the introduction to this book says of it that it "should assist our people whether laymen or teachers, to see more clearly than they have done heretofore the fundamental principles in view of which the problems of studies and of methods of teaching must be solved. . . . [The author] has analysed the situations in which the typical individual is placed, which determine the types of knowledge which he must acquire in order that he may successfully solve the problems presented in every day life." In the three parts into which his book is divided Dr. Weeks discusses: Kinds of knowledge; The diffusion of knowledge; The making of the curriculum.

"It offers some constructive changes in curricula, but is more valuable for its concrete suggestions than for anything else."

+ A L A Bkl 10:31 S '13

"Every teacher who believes that education means nurture, upbringing, i. e., life itself in miniature, must protest against Prof. Weeks's persistent identification of education or knowledge with information." L. P. Chamberlayne.

— Chaut 72:237 N 22 '13 330w

Educ R 46:314 O '13 150w

Reviewed by J. F. Bobbitt.

EI School T 14:140 N '13 330w

Ind 75:341 Ag 7 '13 50w

"The volume is of interest to all who are engaged in the business of training the young, while laymen will find it thought provoking and full of ideas."

+ N Y Times 18:393 Jl 13 '13 400w

WEEKS, JOHN H. Among Congo cannibals.
° Il *$3.50 Lippincott 13-35192

Mr. Weeks has been a British missionary in Congo since 1881. His book "deals fully, and on the whole sympathetically, with many aspects of the native character, and compresses into the smallest space one of the clearest indictments of the Leopoldian administration of the Congo, and one of the most telling apologies for the occasional savage native on-slaughts upon inoffensive white men in that region." (Ath)

"Admirably supplements Hilton Simpson's 'Land and peoples of the Kasai.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:340 Ap '13

"This book will be welcomed both by the students of aboriginal customs and by those especially interested in the Congo peoples. The photographs are generally excellent, but the map is poor."

+ Ath 1912,2:722 D 14 1550w

"It is not all 'preachy,' but is colored by a real sympathy with the people, neither emphasizing nor glossing over their defects of character and manners."

+ Lit D 45:1133 D 14 '12 180w

"The best and most trustworthy account of the natives of Central Africa with which we are familiar. Excellent map."

+ Nation 96:63 Ja 16 '13 350w

+ Sat R 115:85 Ja 18 '13 100w

WEEKS, RUTH MARY. People's school; a ° study in vocational training. (Riverside educational monographs) *60c Houghton
12-16597

"The chapter headings show the ground covered. In 'The hand of iron' the author shows how the problems have been complicated by the giving of the skill of industry over to the machine, and the making of the resulting unskilled man but a slave to the machine; she then indicates the educational solution. In 'The public school' and 'The school for the plainman' she shows the lack of democratic fairness in our educational scheme as it now stands and points out the things that are needed for the democratic 'square deal' in education. Other chapter headings are self-explanatory: Trade education and the woman; In the country; Trade education and organized labor; Foreign trade schools; American experiments; The type of trade school needed in the United States; Choosing a vocation. Carefully selected bibliographies of French, German, Swiss, English, and American literature on the topic are appended." (School R)

+ A L A Bkl 9:166 D '12

"A notable study in vocational training."

+ N Y Times 17:478 S 1 '12 180w

"This little book is a valuable contribution to the discussion of vocational education, since it presents so many aspects of the situation in such compact form and vigorous, stimulating style. The author looks at the problems from the large, sociological, human welfare viewpoint, and shows in good perspective the various social contacts and relationships. The author writes apparently with full understanding of the situation derived from observation and investigation, and certainly with intensity of conviction and forcefulness of expression. The book ought to be very widely read. It is a type of which we need more." J. F. Bobbitt.

+ School R 21:281 Ap 13 330w

WEIMER, HERMANN. Way to the heart of ° the pupil; auth. tr. by J. Remsen Bishop,
Adolph Niederpruem. *60c (1½c) Macmillan
13-10561

Pestalozzi is to this German writer the ideal teacher. The book is a plea for a readjustment of personal relationships between teacher and pupil, and for an abandonment of mechanical methods in teaching. Contents: The teachers' and the pupils' needs; The influence of personality; The power of love; Patience and confidence; A glance at Pestalozzi; The punishing power of the teacher; School and appearances; Uniformity and individuality; School and home; Efforts toward reform and the assuming of responsibility.

"We cannot unreservedly agree with all Dr. Weimer's contentions, nor, needless to say, are all of his ideals capable of immediate fulfillment. But they point the way to a better understanding between teacher and child, which cannot fail to be of lasting benefit to both."

+ — Ath 1913,2:110 Ag 2 100w

"The truths and ideals set forth in the chapters on 'The influence of personality,' 'The power of love,' 'School and home,' 'Patience and confidence,' are inspiring and ought to be taken seriously by as many parents and teachers as can read them."

+ Chaut 72:77 S 27 '13 280w

"No reader can fail to be impressed by the sympathetic tone of the author. Parents like to have their children in school pervaded by such a personality." J. H. Tufts.

+ EI School T 14:189 D '13 150w

WEITENKAMPF, FRANK. American graphic art. Il *$2.75 (3c) Holt 12-24575

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"These fifteen chapters contain an extraordinary amount of information."

+ A L A Bkl 9:254 F '13

"There is a distinct place for Mr. Weitenkamp's book which is an invaluable repository of facts, most conveniently arranged, and will hereafter be found indispensable for all who essay to write, historically or critically, on the same subject or any aspect of it." Cleveland Palmer.

+ Bookm 36:453 D '12 1350w

"It is a large field to try to cover in a single volume, but what has been done within that limit appears to have been well done. The present volume will be prized by print lovers."

+ Dial 53:498 D 16 '12 370w

Reviewed by W. A. Bradley.

Ind 73:1347 D 12 '12 170w

"One welcomes the information he is able to pack into one volume, but also longs for more breadth of critical vision, more enthusiasm of appreciation."

+ — Lit D 45:1145 D 14 '12 320w

"F. Weitenkamp's writing on the graphic art always has the qualities that befit a distinguished public official—sane conservatism in taste, accurate scholarship, and a kind of robust good sense."

+ — Nation 95:574 D 12 '12 180w

+ Outlook 102:863 D 21 '12 200w

+ R of Rs 47:253 F '13 100w

"The present work is a handbook of American reproductive art, very complete, and clear and brief as the subject matter will allow. It is copiously illustrated with plates well calculated to elucidate the text, and fully indexed. It will certainly be of service to the seeker for information." Huc-Mazelet Luquens.

+ Yale R ns2:581 Ap '13 650w

WELCH, ALICE KEMP. Of six mediaeval women, to which is added A note on mediaeval gardens. 1l $2.75 Macmillan 13-10675

This book "has for its heroines a tenth-century nun whose avocation was playwriting, a 'grand dame' of the twelfth century, who wrote rimed romances, a thirteenth-century mystic, a fourteenth-century patroness of art and her kind, a fifteenth-century feminist poet, and Agnes Sorel."—Ind

"Mrs. Kemp-Welch writes easily, but with little sense of style, and shows a regrettable fondness for pseudo-archaic phrases like 'adown the centuries.' Occasionally she displays a curious 'naïveté.'"

+ — Ath 1913,1:280 Mr 8 250w

"Mrs. Alice Kemp-Welch is a keen and capable student of the past, bringing certain long-dead members of her sex back to life with remarkable skill, considering the very meagre data at her command. The author's desire to make a heroine and a world-power of Agnes Sorel, the amiable mistress of Charles VII, has prompted some inferences to which the facts have not led other historians, and in general this chapter seems the least satisfactory of all."

+ Dial 54:469 Je 1 '13 300w

"Pleasantly-written papers." C. L. K.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:824 O '13 250w

"There is a note on mediæval gardens which like the other chapters, is richly illustrated from books of hours; so that even if the author had not acquitted herself as handsomely as she has, the book would be well worth owning."

+ Ind 74:1150 My 22 '13 100w

"Of such books as [this] it is a little difficult to determine the purpose, romantic or otherwise. Apart from its pseudo-biographical tone, the book is pleasantly written, and it is not lacking in interest of a kind. The statement of facts . . . seems careful, yet the facts are much colored with sentiment, and often the author seems to yield somewhat to the natural tendency to exaggerate the importance or dignity of her subject."

+ — No Am 197:720 My '13 300w

WELLS, AMOS RUSSEL. Ideal adult class in the Sunday-school: a manual of the principles and methods. *50c (1½c) Pilgrim press 12-28367

"The fourteen chapters which make up this book were originally articles contributed to Sunday school journals of several denominations. They are now put in this connected form so that those who are interested in this comparatively new movement, known as the adult class, may understand the new problems which it has brought into existence, and may be able to meet them." (Boston Transcript) Some of the subjects discussed are: The home study of the class; Various teaching methods; The social work of the class; The school relations of the class; The denominational relations of the class; The spiritual work of the class.

"It will pay all who are interested in the adult class in the Sunday school to read carefully the discussions and solutions of those problems found in this book."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 8 '13 120w

"A small volume well stored with workable plans and methods for organizing and sustaining 'The ideal adult class in the Sunday school.'"

+ Ind 74:319 F 6 '13 30w

WELLS, CAROLYN. Maxwell mystery. 1l $1.25 (2c) Lippincott 13-6733

A murder mystery in which two beautiful young women seem to be involved forms the basis for this plot. "Philip Maxwell has a house party at the home of his wealthy uncle with whom he lives, and whose heir he is, a party made up of fascinating young people and including even a 'belted Earl.' On the night of the big dance, Philip is found murdered and in such circumstances that almost every one in the house comes under more or less suspicion. The tracing of clues gives opportunity for the development of detective and erotic elements. The reader has a chance to make brilliant deductions for himself before the perpetrator of the crime is tracked and punished." (Lit D)

"Outside of the plot, this is a commonplace detective story."

+ — Ind 75:100 Jl 10 '13 50w

"This is a pleasant, but rather conventional detective story."

+ — Lit D 46:900 Ap 19 '13 180w

"When all possible suspected persons are run to earth, the author calls in her intuitive detective, who at once employs knowledge that has been withheld from the reader to fix the guilt on a person he could not have suspected. That hardly seems fair treatment. The other faults in the story are that the motive is too slight and that the author, having dragged in an English nobleman with an honored historical name, seems utterly at sea as to the proper manner of addressing him or of speaking of him."

— N Y Sun p4 Mr 29 '13 150w

"Of course, a story by Miss Carolyn Wells is cleverly written, and equally of course a reader is not likely to lay it aside until it is finished, but the almost impossible murderer and the inadequacy of motive make 'The Maxwell mystery' less than convincing and convincingness is an essential quality in a detective story."

+ — N Y Times 18:278 My 11 '13 130w

"It is unfortunate that in going from one field to the other she left her sense of humor behind her."

— Outlook 104:37 My 3 '13 50w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Discovery of the future. *60c (7c) Huebsch

This is a reprint of a lecture delivered at the Royal Institution of London. The author presents "a forecast of the future of the human race derived, so he tells us, from what history and the research of scientists reveal of the past. According to Mr. Wells, both past and future are founded on certain irrefragable laws which, if understood, should yield results that would enable mankind to look ahead with certainty into the hazy vista of the coming years, as well as into the 'backward abyss of time.'" (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Alexander Fleisher.

Ann Am Acad 48:270 Jl '13 50w

"We can see no special reason for their reissue, for it is below Mr. Wells's standard of suggestive and stimulating writing."

— Ath 1913,2:495 N 1 40w

"In this little book the prophecy is so alluringly stated that science cannot but consider seriously that discovery of the future which it predicts." W. S. B.

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE—Continued.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '13 850w

"The unbiased and speculative reader will be fascinated by his manner of presenting [certain] suggestions to our candid consideration."

+ Dial 54:424 My 16 '13 170w

"An interesting little volume."

+ N Y Times 18:153 Mr 23 '13 320w

"A very keen analysis of the attitude of thinking men of today towards the problems of the future."

+ R of Rs 48:120 Jl '13 180w

"The value of the publication is out of proportion to its size. Here is the abundant Wells literature of the last two decades in a compact and highly concentrated extract form. And this means, as every lover of this English author will know at once, a wealth of suggestive speculation and stimulating idealism." J: H. Holmes.

+ Survey 30:248 My 17 '13 350w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Floor games. 11
1 *$1 Small 12-25591

"The jolliest indoor games for boys and girls demand a floor," says Mr. Wells, "and the home that has no floor upon which games may be played falls so far short of happiness." "One may build cities on a floor, erect hills across dictionaries, and run engines into the realms of other rooms!" (Lit D). Mr. Wells describes in detail "the games that he has worked out with his children, hoping that they will be of help to parents and others who are under bonds to make children happy." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 9:255 F '13

"Is brimful of ideas in toys and how to play with them."

+ Ath 1911, 2: 731 D 9 170w

"It is a good book, and children will like it, and like the games." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36: 461 D '12 70w

Boston Transcript p22 N 20 '12 200w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73: 1371 D 12 '12 100w

"Let all fathers buy this book and see how an author has played with his own sons; read it, first for its agreeable manner and then for the suggestions."

+ Lit D 45: 1081 D 7 '12 110w

"A book that deserves a wide sale, not only because of its jolly spirit, but because of the field opened up for the 'mere man' in the nursery."

+ Nation 95: 540 D 5 '12 90w

"A pleasant little book."

+ N Y Sun p 7 N 2 '12 120w

"All dour parents should read Mr. Wells's book, whether they approve of his novels and his philosophy or not." H. I. Brock.

+ N Y Times 18:5 Ja 5 '13 2400w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Little wars. 11
12 *$1.20 (7c) Small 13-25751

Mr. Wells has evolved the old pastime, playing with toy soldiers, into a scientific game. "It is like a game of chess, with rules for each move, but more dramatic, an engrossing game for an afternoon and evening. In an appendix Mr. Wells shows how with further developments it may become a real Kriegspiel." (N Y Times)

"The chief drawback of the book is that it seems too dispassionate and artificial, and it is hard to believe that children 'take an increasingly responsible share in the operations.'"

— Ath 1913,2:181 Ag 23 70w

"If ever the bromide about 'Why didn't we have such books when I was young?' is justified, here is the proper place for it." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 38:442 D '13 230w

Reviewed by W: S. Braithwaite.

Boston Transcript p26 N 26 '13 30w

"Peace-loving parents will frown upon H. G. Wells for writing 'Little wars,' but we personally cannot but delight in the science of warfare which he has reduced to terms of the nursery floor."

+ Nation 97:543 D 4 '13 110w

"An attractive book."

+ N Y Times 18:615 N 9 '13 430w

"Mr. Wells describes his new game and sets out its rules so attractively that his readers will find it hard indeed not to hurry out to the toy-shop round the corner, raise the necessary levies, and fall down forthwith upon hands and knees to emulate his achievements in the Battle of Hook's farm."

+ Spec 111:262 Ag 16 '13 250w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Passionate
12 friends. 11 *$1.35 (1c) Harper 13-22757

This is, briefly, the story of two men and one woman; the second woman who enters the story and whom Stephen Stratton marries is of negligible importance. It is the story of the early attachment of Stephen and Lady Mary Christian; of her marriage with Martin Justin; of the later meeting of Stephen and Mary, with the old love flaming into passion; of Justin's discovery of their love, and Lady Mary's suicide. This story is written down by Stephen Stratton, in middle life, for his son—but with the story he writes of other matters, of the labor problem, of social adjustments, of world unity, and of the relations of men and women.

"There are serious and thought provoking discussions . . . which will be interesting to thoughtful readers generally."

+ A L A Bkl 10:158 D '13

"The number of mixed metaphors in the book is eloquent of non-revision. Mr. Wells the social rebel and reformer, Mr. Wells the storyteller, are with us in their prime, but Mr. Wells the artist has not developed."

+ — Ath 1913,2:248 S 13 1300w

"The passionate friends' is obviously intended for serious, reflective reading, and whether it be read in a mood of approval or antagonism, it is useless to deny its power as a study of moral problems. And as a story, its human vigor, its genuine sentiment, its pathos, its reality, is unquestionable." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p24 N 5 '13 1300w

"Mr. Wells is but another victim, more intelligent than some others, of that passing belief that somehow happiness is to result for humanity from setting the emotions free of restraint rather than from deliberate adjustment of the individual to the responsibilities imposed upon him."

— + Nation 97:537 D 4 '13 650w

"A hopeful book, it is also a helpful book in that it crystalizes into definite phrases many thoughts that are moving, often in but a nebulous form, through the minds of intelligent men and women. More definite in many ways than 'Marriage,' it is also far shorter than that remarkable book, to which it may in one sense be regarded as a companion. An absorbingly interesting and very stimulating novel, among the leading works of fiction published this year, is 'The passionate friends.'" L. M. Field.

+ — N Y Times 18:593 N 2 '13 1000w

Reviewed by F. M. Colby.

+ — No Am 198:718 N '13 1550w

"The people of this book are continually talking and thinking, sometimes they even act, but never for a moment do they live. Mr. Wells, having found that the novel is the best vehicle for propagating his ideas, has no right to show open contempt for the novel-reading public as he has done here. A third of his space would have sufficed for the story he has to tell."

— Sat R 116:339 S 13 '13 820w

WELPTON, W. P. Primary artisan education.
12 *$1.25 Longmans E13-1451

An English work on industrial education. "Elementary" is the word we should use in

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

this country to designate the school period covered by "primary." The author would begin vocational training at the age of eleven, and would "subdivide his 'Upper school' (11-14) into (1) primary artisan classes for boys entering the unskilled and skilled manual occupations; (2) classes with a commercial bias for those who will become small clerks or traders." (Ath)

A L A Bkl 10:65 O '13

+ Ath 1913,2:5 Jl 5 180w

"Notwithstanding the excellence of the appeal, the author is perhaps a little too prolific in ideas drawn from psychology, ethics, and hygiene and his expression is often more copious than lucid. It would seem to be a fault also that he does not point to more concrete and promising experiments." S: T. Dutton.

+ Educ R 46:406 N '13 440w

WENTWORTH, PATRICIA (MRS. G. F. DILLON). Fire within. $*1.35 (2½c) Putnam 13-16999

A story in which psychic phenomena play an important part. A young country doctor is moved by the appeals of a woman whom he loves, altho she is married to another, to violate his sense of professional honor. Shamed, he sinks into mental depression; sleep deserts him; he becomes a physical wreck. His morbid passion for Mary cannot be shaken off, but he marries Elizabeth, her sister, influenced by the calm tranquility of her presence that exerts a quieting influence on his overwrought nerves. Elizabeth makes him whole again, but it is in a strange dream state that he first learns to love her, forgetting Mary.

"An uninteresting and weakly written story."

— Ath 1913,1:671 Je 21 30w

"The author does not succeed in keeping even the illusion of actual life."

— Boston Transcript p11 O 31 '13 370w

"This present book is a disappointment after the sustained power, the strength, and fire of the earlier tales. To bring about her climax she has depended upon a trick, a condition that in itself flouts belief, and is more likely to arouse the mirth of the cynical than engage the sympathy of the credulous. Otherwise the story deserves much praise, especially for the sure quick touch with which the characters are created."

— N Y Times 18:601 N 2 '13 200w

WERNER, CARL. Bringing up the boy. Il $*1 (9½c) Dodd 13-6287

A little book of advice for fathers and mothers on the mental and moral training of boys. The chapter titles are: From baby to boy; The simplicity of discipline; As the twig is bent; A talk at Christmas time; The dynasty of the dime novel; The sin of sex secrecy; The weed and the winecup; Out into the world.

"Mr. Werner's 'message' . . . would be of more value if he were not so sure that all boys are alike and that his method represents the ultima thule of wisdom for their upbringings. Whether or not one agrees with his views about the ruler and the dime novel, his little book is stimulating and suggestive and will at least do for any parent that most helpful thing, make him think about his problems."

+ N Y Times 18:291 My 11 '13 320w

WESSELHOEFF, MRS. LILY (ELIZABETH) FOSTER (POPE). Laddie, the master of the house. Il $*1.20 (3½c) Little 13-21030

"The story of a dog, Laddie, and his companions, three Scotch collies. . . They guarded the children, Dobby and Joe, protected the animals and fowls on the farm, and won the well-earned confidence and esteem of their human friends. They belonged, also, to the Bark and Whine Club, made up of various dogs in the neighborhood, where they told interesting stories of their lives."—Boston Transcript

Reviewed by M. C. Anderson.

Bookm 38:321 N '13 40w

"A very clever story." W: S. Braithwaite.

+ Boston Transcript p26 N 26 '13 70w

"Related in a manner that children will enjoy thoroughly."

+ N Y Sun p9 O 11 '13 60w

"A good story."

+ N Y Times 18:640 N 23 '13 50w

WEST, PAUL CLARENDON. Just boy. Il $*1.20 Doran 12-24813

The hero is a small boy who tells his experiences in a series of letters. "Some of the letters, Mr. West says, are real letters, written more than thirty years ago about real persons and real incidents, and now appear in their original forms, with all their bad spelling and bad punctuation preserved." (N Y Times)

"The truthfulness of the portrayal is as convincing as its humorousness, as almost any parent will readily bear witness."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 7 '12 150w

Lit D 45:1085 D 7 '12 50w

"Anybody who likes boys will enjoy Mr. West's book."

+ N Y Times 17:767 D 8 '12 80w

WESTERMANN, WILLIAM LINN. Story of the ancient nations. (Twentieth century textbooks) Il $*1.50 Appleton 12-21671

The author tells the stories of ancient Egypt, western Asia, Greece and Rome. "A great amount of new material for the history of the ancient world has come to light of recent years—probably more than for any other section of history—and this the author has sought to make available for high school uses." (Dial)

+ A L A Bkl 9:167 D '12

"He has made an admirable text-book, equipped with all the needful apparatus."

+ Dial 53:250 O 1 '12 80w

+ Ind 75:335 Ag 7 '13 230w

WESTON, JESSIE LAIDLAY. Romance, vision and satire. $*1.25 Houghton 12-24640

A translation of the English alliterative poems of the fourteenth century in the original metres. The volume "contains complete translations of 'Sir Gawain and the green knight,' 'The adventures of Arthur at the Tarn Wadeling,' and 'Pearl'—also renderings of parts of the alliterative 'Morte Arthure,' 'Cleanness,' 'Patience,' and 'Piers plowman.' . . . The term 'original metres' is accurate only for the poems in stanzas. The last four poems in the list just given are all written in the old alliterative line, but Miss Weston has translated 'Piers plowman' in Morris's 'Sigurd' metre, and the rest in decasyllabic couplets." (Nation)

"The notes are very slight and the majority of the poems are not 'rendered in the original meters,' as stated on the title-page."

+ A L A Bkl 9:393 My '13

"The increasing number of readers who enjoy these romances will feel an obligation to Miss Weston and to her publishers for making accessible in such charming form these relics of a bygone age." A. C. L. Brown.

+ Dial 55:17 Jl 1 '13 800w

"Will find a ready welcome among students of our older literature. The book should prove very useful as parallel reading in courses which aim at giving a general survey of English literature."

+ Nation 95:570 D 12 '12 370w

"Miss Weston deserves praise for her skill in handling the translations."

+ R of Rs 46:752 D '12 130w

WESTRUP, MARGARET (MRS. W. SYDNEY STACEY). Tide marks. $*1.35 (1c) Macmillan 13-21294

An austere scholarly father and a gypsy mother endow Philippa, the heroine of this story, with her contradictory heritage. The mother's dying word, is a prayer that the girl may never know the curse of love, and Philippa grows up remembering it, and resolved never to give her heart away. She reckons, however, without taking into account the depth of her own emotional nature, and love when it does come to her is like a great wave that wipes out all the little tide marks of other experiences. The scenes of the story are laid in London and Cornwall.

WESTRUP, MARGARET—Continued.

"The tale makes up in entertainment what it lacks in possibilities and continuity."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:158 D '13

"In this novel we find the gentle art of creating unnecessary miseries carried to a perfection rare either in fiction or in real life."

+ — Ath 1913,2:253 S 13 100w

"The author has not been very happy in the many loose ends which she has left to her plot, but the love story and the thread of the evolution of Philippa are complete."

+ — Boston Transcript p10 N 17 '13 300w

"The story reads like a patchwork of rather clever essays in various styles, which do not harmonize and some of which had better be left alone."

+ — N Y Sun p3 N 15 '13 150w

"There are some very amusing passages in this novel. And Philippa, the heroine, is rather an attractive creature in spite of her many follies."

+ — Spec 111:768 N 8 '13 170w

WESTRUP, WILLIAM. The debt. *$1.35 (1c)
Crowell 13-35660

The story of a young man from the veldt who comes into Johannesburg, determined to see the gay life of the town. He sees instead its sordidness and deceit and experiences a longing for the old free life of the open, more poignant and compelling than was ever the call of the town. He is not free to go back, however; the debts contracted in the first weeks of his desire to see life, hold him. The title is open to two interpretations. It may refer to this tangible debt, or it may—and this is probably the right interpretation—signify the debt incurred by Frank Lensford when young Ryan saved his life in one of the branches of the Vaal river.

A L A Bkl 10:38 S '13

"This South African story is written with an almost melodramatic eye for possibilities in the way of poetic justice. A thoughtful sketch is given of a narrow suburban family . . . but there are other unimportant characters which seem unnecessary."

+ — Ath 1912,2:447 O 10 100w

"Save for the beginning and the end Mr. Westrup's tale is the conventional novel of British middle class life."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Ap 5 '13 150w

"The debt' is an interesting book—and something more."

+ N Y Times 18:233 Ap 20 '13 400w

WEYGANDT, CORNELIUS. Irish plays and playwrights. 11 *$2 Houghton 13-2333

"In its pages is given a summary of what has happened in Irish letters and on the Irish stage as a result of the Celtic renaissance, and in them he preserves a straightforward and mildly critical record of the work of Yeats, George Moore, George W. Russell, Lady Gregory, J. M. Synge, and other representatives of the movement, introducing the chapters in which their work is discussed with a brief preliminary survey of its beginnings and a statement of the players and their plays, their audiences and their art."—Boston Transcript

"A very useful volume for the student."

+ A L A Bkl 9:394 My '13

"In this survey over-specialization in the subsection of innumerable plays to microscopical examination has made the author present superficial distinctions as all-important. Taken separately, his later chapters form admirable summaries, especially that on Synge, but collectively they clash."

+ — Ath 1913,1:260 Mr 1 180w

"A valuable reference volume which will be of especial use to the student of the modern drama." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p25 Mr 12 '13 800w

"Mr. Weygandt has put us deeply in his debt for a study of the Irish plays at once exact and interesting, dramatic and carefully proportioned." E. K. Dunton.

+ Dial 54:335 Ap 16 '13 1400w

"A book at once comprehensive and, to anyone with some prior knowledge of the field, interesting: a volume which brings together more valuable material, from the historical standpoint, than any other dealing with the subject; a volume which is most sensible and balanced as a literary appreciation. There was a place for just this book, which is deficient only in color and distinction of style." W. B. Blake.

+ Ind 74:515 Mr 6 '13 500w

"Much of Mr. Weygandt's space is given to biographies of the Irish dramatists—Yeats, Synge, Martyn, Lady Gregory, and others of lesser note—with synopses of many of their plays. This review is well done, constituting a compact and convenient summary."

+ Nation 96:398 Ap 17 '13 800w

"It will suffice excellently as a 'review book' for the reader who would like to get his impressions straightened out so that he may tuck the whole subject away, neatly and unobtrusively, in a corner of his mind."

+ — N Y Sun p16 My 3 '13 200w

"Mr. Weygandt has three qualifications for writing about the present generation of Irish dramatists—he is informed, he is enthusiastic, and he is not Irish. The blemishes of Mr. Weygandt's book are few, they are the results of enthusiasm and a lack of perspective inevitable in dealing with contemporary writers. Whatever may be the final judgment of the world on the real work of the Irish writers now so prominent, it is good to know them with the aid of Mr. Weygandt's comprehensive and entertaining study." Joyce Kilmer.

+ — N Y Times 18:115 Mr 2 '13 1100w

+ N Y Times 18:668 N 30 '13 300w

"In his comment upon individual writers, as well as in his treatment of the school as a whole, he has been distinctly successful."

+ Outlook 104:121 My 17 '13 70w

R of Rs 47:633 My '13 500w

WHARTON, MRS. EDITH NEWBOLD
" (JONES). Custom of the country. *$1.35 (1c)
Scribner 13-22207

Another novel growing out of Mrs. Wharton's shrewd study of types common to modern America's society world. The author's theme is that it is the custom of the country for men not to let their wives share in the real business of life; that it is normal for a man to work hard for a woman, but quite abnormal not to care to tell her anything about it; that women do not take an interest in the work of men because men do not take enough interest in them. The central figure, a selfish, ambitious, uncultivated woman, about whom the theme is elaborated is, naturally, an unpleasant individual to follow thru the six hundred pages of the book. Yet the portrayal is masterly and most artistic.

"It is to be devoutly hoped that the title is a libel."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:159 D '13

"Mrs. Wharton's latest work is no mere entertaining story. It is a courageous and at the same time sympathetic study of Americans."

+ Ath 1913,2:554 N 15 700w

"Mrs. Wharton has painted Undine Spragg with an unsparing mercilessness that almost makes the reader wince. It is a splendid and memorable piece of work, a portrait to form a worthy contrast to the equally unforgettable one of Lily Bart." F: T. Cooper.

+ Bookm 38:416 D '13 300w

"To say that there is none of the distinction in this novel that has characterized Mrs. Wharton's previous work would be inaccurate and unjust. But it emerges so infrequently that it is easily overlooked or forgotten in the midst of the trivialities and unrealities that make up the bulk of the story. She seems to be writing to startle rather than to entertain, to slander rather than to describe faithfully, to hyperbolize rather than to convince." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p8 O 18 '13 1050w

Ind 76:313 N 13 '13 450w

"With all its amenity of manner, 'The custom of the country' has a sharply satirical tone. The heroine is a mere monster of vulgarity. A caricature does not remain interesting to the length of six hundred pages." H. W. B.

+ Nation 97:404 O 30 '13 2000w

"It is interesting to see Mrs. Wharton emerge from her own sphere, but in this case there is a distinct loss of art, whatever effect her warning may have."

+ N Y Sun p3 O 18 '13 730w

"The theme of the spoils, utterly selfish woman is of course no new one, but it has rarely been developed in a manner so skillful, so delicate, and so completely ruthless." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times 18:557 O 19 '13 1550w

"There is nothing so charming in 'The custom of the country' as the rich and tender landscape background of 'The valley of decision,' but with how much more energy the characters move!"

+ N Y Times 18:596 N 2 '13 400w

+ N Y Times 18:664 N 30 '13 280w

+ Outlook 105:571 N 15 '13 370w

"Brilliantly written, it should be read as a parable."

+ Sat R 116:658 N 22 '13 500w

WHEELER, HOMER JAY. Manures and fertilizers. (Rural text-book ser.) il *$1.60 Macmillan 13-18778

An agricultural text book which aims at conciseness and thoroughness. It provides for the needs of the graduate student, likewise the student in agricultural colleges, teachers and intelligent men who are interested in the scientific phases of modern farming. The work is authoritative and up to date.

WHELOCK, JOHN HALL. Belovéd adventure. *$1.50 Sherman, French & co. 12-25812

A second volume of poetry by a writer whose claim to recognition among modern poets was established by his first book, "The human fantasy." "Mr. Wheelock's poetry is clear, revealing and full of that high realism which is the color of life. He has something of the vision which uplifts sensuality, and enough of the realist's passion to save mysticism from itself, and humanize it." (N Y Times)

Ath 1913,2:627 N 29 50w

"Aside from a few bits, the book is a dreary waste of incongruous platitudes, maudlin self pity and melodramatic effort to manufacture sentiment of which the author has little or no conception."

+ Chaut 69:239 Ja '13 300w

"Gauzy fancies and nebulous ideas abound in his collection, but we rarely find in it either clear-cut thought or lyric rapture. Moreover, Mr. Wheelock's verses are somewhat freer in form than is permissible to anyone not an approved master." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 54:245 Mr 16 '13 250w

"John Hall Wheelock's 'The human fantasy,' contained verse of distinction and charm, but this new volume shows a decided increase in power and range."

+ Lit D 45:966 N 23 '12 220w

"One feels that a judicious blue-penciling would have improved the newer and bulkier collection, particularly the love-songs and lyrics in the manner of Heine or the mood of Symons, in which Mr. Wheelock is least successful; and that the omission of such adolescent verse as 'Twilight and dawn' and 'Parting in spring' would have strengthened his offering. As it is, they set the others in bolder relief. 'Moonlight night,' for instance, is one of several that stand out with eloquent imagery and nobility of utterance." L: Untermeyer.

+ N Y Times 17:800 D 29 '12 1000w

"His poems are delightful to read, not alone for the poetic faultlessness of phrase and rhythms, but also for the lavishness of inspiration and the uplift of high idealism."

+ R of Rs 47:373 Mr '13 170w

WHELPLEY, JAMES DAVENPORT. Trade of the world. il *$2 (2c) Century 13-24128

The author finds that it is trade that is bringing all nations into closer touch and revolutionizing the politics of the world. "Contained within the history of trading," he says "lie all the romance and adventure of the sea and the frontier, the horrors of war, the privations and sufferings of exploration, the rise or fall of nations; in brief, the story of civilization and of barbarism." Contents: Trade strategy; The commercial strength of Great Britain; Germany's foreign trade; The trade of France; Belgium, the balance wheel of trade; Austria-Hungary—the European enigma; Italy's economic outlook; The trade of northern Africa; Japan's commercial crisis; The trade of China; The trade of Russia; Progressive Argentina; If Canada were to annex the United States; The foreign trade of the United States.

"A first-hand, readable study showing keen insight into the commercial policies and possibilities of the great nations."

+ A L A Bkl 10:152 D '13

"Mr. WHELPLEY's book is timely and useful—doubtless it will always be timely, excepting that its figures may be changed as the battle for trade goes on. The remarkable thing about this book is its comprehensiveness." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 27 '13 820w

"It would have been easy to make such a volume too encyclopaedic and too statistical. But Mr. WHELPLEY has known how to set forth his facts in a way to appeal to the ordinary reader."

+ Outlook 105:812 D 13 '13 90w

"Mr. WHELPLEY has written a fascinating volume. He uses facts and figures to paint a picture of magnitude and appeal."

+ R of Rs 48:635 N '13 120w

WHETHAM, WILLIAM CECIL DAMPIER, and WHETHAM, MRS. CATHERINE DURNING (HOLT). Introduction to eugenics. pa *35c Macmillan (Eng ed 12-17062)

"This little volume is calculated better to create popular interest in the subject of eugenics than to serve as a scientific introduction. The first chapter is devoted to a brief history of the eugenics movement with particular reference to the work of Galton and Mendel. Chapter two is devoted to a discussion of Racial qualities which are most easily susceptible of examination in the light of modern theories of heredity, such as susceptibility to disease, the inheritance of mental defects and of ability. Methods and materials of research are treated in the third chapter with a brief discussion of results obtained. Chapter four, on The construction of society, lays special emphasis upon the biological element in the history of mankind and upon the effects of environment as a selective agency."—Ann Am Acad

"For readers unfamiliar with the material of the science there is much to stimulate interest and to create a desire for further inquiry. For those already interested the treatment will seem fragmentary and disconnected. The bibliography contained in the appendix is utterly insufficient to give any adequate knowledge of sources."

WHETHAM, W: C. D. and C. D. —Continued.

+ Ann Am Acad 45:272 Ja '13 180w

"This volume should form a useful introduction to the study of eugenics, and should go far towards spreading eugenic ideas." E. H. J. S.

+ Nature 89:263 My 16 '12 70w

WHETHAM, WILLIAM CECIL DAMPIER, and WHETHAM, MRS. CATHERINE DURN-
ING. Science and the human mind. *$1.60
Longmans 13-35271

"It is a brief, vivid, crowded history of the rise of scientific thought in relation to other kingdoms of thought; its gradual deliverance from the conditions of dogmatic theology; its influences, reactions, and interactions—all the way from the Chaldaeans and Babylonians to Mr. Balfour, William James and Bergson." (Spec) "The work consists of an Introduction, and of six chapters on Science in the ancient world, The mediaeval mind, The renaissance and its achievement, The physics of the nineteenth century, The coming of evolution, and The last stage; of a good bibliography (pp. 287-296), and of a full index." (Science)

"An admirably readable yet trustworthy work, in which dogmatism and partisanship are avoided."

+ A L A Bkl 9:394 My '13

"The book is clearly written, but there is a tendency to make the facts fit the theory in the matter of race and culture."

+ Ath 1912:2:629 N 23 100w

+ Dial 54:423 My 16 '13 250w

"Speaking of the work as a whole, one may say that it cannot fail to interest students of the history of science, that many of its later paragraphs are, as we should expect from the authors of 'Recent developments of physical science,' really illuminating, and that the questions which should be answered in such a treatise have been seen with exceptional keenness and clearness. For the rest, it is vitiated in many parts by the authors' lack of acquaintance with the nature and scope of philosophy, and by a certain animus against the whole temper of the middle ages, which renders a long chapter on the mediæval mind and many references scattered up and down the book highly untrustworthy both in fact and in generalisation." J: G. Vance.

+ — Hibbert J 11:923 Jl '13 2400w

"An admirably readable yet trustworthy popular-science book, and it is to be hoped that it will circulate widely." J. A. H.

+ Nature 90:696 F 27 '13 250w

"The authors have done their work well, not only in the comprehensiveness of their matter, but in the direct, compact, and forceful style, not without an occasional gleam of humor, in which it is clothed."

+ N Y Times 18:53 F 2 '13 280w

"It is obvious, of course, that a field so vast can not be covered satisfactorily in a single volume of moderate size. Accepting this limitation as inevitable, and setting aside criticisms which, unmindful of it, one might pass readily, it may be said at once that the effort is remarkably successful. Indeed, I am unacquainted with a better book, particularly in the matter of unexpected suggestiveness (towards the close notably), of equal or briefer compass. The blots are few. Here and there, especially in the Introduction and on the last pages, the authors permit themselves to be betrayed into what I take the liberty to call silly remarks about philosophy and metaphysics. So, once more, I say the book is thoroughly worth while." R. M. Wenley.

+ Science ns37:529 Ap 4 '13 700w

"A notable book, and well worthy of close study."

+ Spec 110:362 Mr 1 '13 100w

WHICHER, GEORGE MEASON, and WHICH-
ER, GEORGE FRISBIE. On the Tibur road: a freshman's Horace. 2d ed *$1
Princeton univ. press 12-29338

This little book of translations, paraphrases, and parodies is the joint work of a New York professor and an Amherst undergraduate—father and son. "That not all of [the verses] were written in the first college year, will be easily inferred; but the critically inclined who conclude that all might have been, will not quarrel with our subtitle." (Preface) This is a second edition, revised with new introductory verses by Ellis Parker Butler.

Reviewed by W: A. Bradley.

+ Bookm 37:199 Ap '13 150w

"The little volume is a real addition to Horatian literature."

+ Boston Transcript p18 D 24 '12 600w
(Review of 2d ed)

"The ballades and rondeaux are beautifully done, and the humorous and frivolous parts are less exuberant and more chastened than such paraphrases often are. One could wish the book were twice as long as it is." A. W. Hodgman.

+ Class J 8:44 O '12 370w (Review of 1st ed)

"Some of those that are translations are done as nearly in Horatian meter as rhymes will allow, and are in good taste, while in others which give Horatian tone to modern events or situation is not a little real humor. It is a fair addition to the library of Flacciana."

+ Ind 72:154 Ja 18 '12 100w (Review of 1st ed)

"Contains verses chiefly noteworthy for the skill with which they are turned and for their frequent and delightful humor."

+ Lit D 46:151 Ja 18 '13 350w (Review 2d ed)

+ N Y Times 17:133 Mr 10 '12 120w (Review of 1st ed)

WHIPPLE, EDWIN PERCY. Charles Dickens:
the man and his work. 2v fl *$7.50 Houghton 12-14482

"The series of introductions supplied by E. P. Whipple to a well-known American edition of Dickens nearly forty years ago have now been brought together in two small and beautifully-printed volumes as the latest title in the Riverside press editions. Mr. Arlo Bates contributes an excellent introduction dealing with Whipple personally as well as critically; and each volume contains a photogravure portrait and engraved vignette title-page. . . . The edition to be sold is limited to five hundred copies."—Dial

"Devout Dickensians everywhere will be glad to have these brilliant studies in such compact and handsome form."

+ Dial 53:56 Jl 16 '12 100w

"Whipple's admirable essay on Dickens and his books well deserved a rescue from the forgetfulness into which it seemed well-nigh to have fallen."

+ Lit D 45:148 D 14 '12 100w

"Whipple's 'Life' is not one of personalia, though it draws on Forster for fact; it is strictly one of appreciation. On the first reading it is evident, by occasional repetitions, that it is a compilation of separate introductions. It touches lightly, but sufficiently, on the events in Dickens's life; it presents interesting data concerning Dickens in America. In other words, the re-reading of this re-issue will serve as a renewal of an old love."

+ N Y Times 17:507 S 15 '12 1100w

Springfield Republican p5 O 2 '13 550w

WHITAKER, HERMAN. Mystery of the bar-ranca. *$1.25 (2c) Harper 13-2378

The scene is laid in Mexico where two young American engineers are attempting to operate a copper mine in spite of native opposition.

"The feeling of the upper class toward Americans, their understanding of the peons, the attitude of the peons toward their masters and toward the hated 'gringos'—all these are involved in the machinery of the story, help to provide its action, its mystery, and even its plot." (N Y Times)

"Aside from the charm of its story, 'The mystery of the barranca' contains a great deal of useful information as to Mexico's customs, manners, and traditional antipathies."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 350w

+ Ind 75:395 Ag 14 '13 320w

"It is to be regretted that the traditional Mexican treachery and violence are retained in this tale. The plot is clumsy and conventional; the descriptions are all that make the book worth reading."

+ N Y Sun p3 F 15 '13 110w

"It is a good story, and its local color and its insight into the nature of the various classes of Mexicans are revealing. The author evidently knows the region thoroughly and understands its people. Considering who the latter are, his just estimate of them is worth nothing."

+ N Y Times 18:103 F 23 '13 250w

"The tale is rather highly colored, and hardly equals 'The planter.'"

+ Outlook 103:502 Mr 1 '13 70w

WHITE, ANDREW DICKSON. First Hague conference. 55c World peace foundation

In this small volume of 123 pages are reprinted the chapters from Mr. White's 'Autobiography' which describe the first Hague conference, at which he was president of the American delegation.

"These chapters form such a frank and intimate record of Dr. White's experience at the Hague in 1899 that they furnish a very valuable source of our knowledge of the inside workings of the conference, more particularly of the part played by Germany and the United States." A. S. Hershey.

+ Ann Am Acad 49:256 S '13 100w

"To read the diary is like watching the process of crystallization in a saturated solution."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 200w

Reviewed by Hamilton Holt.

+ Ind 74:1040 My 8 '13 170w

"The pages in which Mr. White's work is described . . . should be read by every one who would understand the difficulties in the way of bringing about one of the greatest triumphs of present-day civilization."

+ Outlook 104:1009 Ag 30 '13 220w

WHITE, CHARLES ELMER. Successful houses and how to build them. il *$2 Macmillan

12-22293

Altho written by an architect this book on successful house building takes the viewpoint of the house owner. "The book covers a wide range of houses, both large and small. Instructions are given for the entire operation of building, and the book also contains chapters on outdoor accessories." (Ath)

"The best all-round work yet published for the person who contemplates building a home."

+ A L A Bkl 9:207 Ja '13 *

"The text is concise and well arranged and gives a large amount of valuable information. A valuable feature of the work is the large number of illustrations used to bring out the points discussed in the several chapters."

+ Ann Am Acad 47:286 My '13 100w

Ath 1912,2:485 O 26 30w

"A layman about to build can surely obtain from it a number of pointers which would materially assist him in his own design and in his study of the architect's plans and the builders' execution. If the reader does not assume a complete knowledge of architecture after his reading of the book, we think that he will be much benefited and that not only will his house be better suited to his needs, but he will prove a more acceptable client to those who serve him."

+ Engin N 68:1119 D 12 '12 380w

WHITE, HORACE. Life of Lyman Trumbull. 12 il *$3 Houghton 13-21524

Lyman Trumbull, the subject of this biography was United States senator from Illinois from 1855 to 1873. He was the author of the thirteenth amendment and of the Freedman's bureau of Civil rights bills, and was one of the seven senators who prevented the impeachment of President Johnson. "The materials of this volume are drawn mainly from Dr. White's intimate personal knowledge, the public record of Trumbull's speeches in Congress during his three terms as senator from Illinois, and several thousand letters to him, now in the Library of Congress." (Outlook)

"The letters and excerpts of speeches included are an important contribution to source material."

+ A L A Bkl 10:152 D '13

"Trumbull is fortunate indeed in his biographer." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 13 '13 1050w

"Many a well-informed reader will lay down this volume not merely with a new store of knowledge concerning Lyman Trumbull but with a broader and surer grasp of the essential facts and philosophy of the war and reconstruction period than he had ever before possessed." W. H. Johnson.

+ Dial 55:353 N 1 '13 1150w

"Mr. White is weak as a historian, since he has not followed closely the contributions which others have made to the history of reconstruction, and sometimes omits matters that would clear up his own story. But his original contribution is nearly as valuable as the facts on Trumbull, and his book will rank as one of the primary memoirs for certain phases of the period."

+ Ind 76:264 N 6 '13 300w

"After reading the book, interesting as it is, we find ourselves wishing we knew more about the man, Lyman Trumbull."

+ Lit D 47:1014 N 22 '13 1900w

"Opinions will differ regarding the method which Mr. White has pursued. He has certainly written a good many pages in which Trumbull does not appear at all, and his use of the Trumbull letters suggests that the importance of the collection may not be in proportion to its bulk; but he at least makes clear throughout the part which Trumbull played, and adds to American political biography a notable and welcome contribution."

+ Nation 97:461 N 13 '13 1050w

+ N Y Sun p6 N 15 '13 1750w

"The portrait Mr. White has drawn is a very attractive one, and not the less so that it is frankly a labor of love—which does not prevent it being discriminating and impartial. The value of Mr. White's volume is greatly enhanced by his own intimate knowledge of the period in the affairs of which he bore an active part."

+ N Y Times 18:621 N 16 '13 1000w

"A valuable source book."

+ Outlook 105:811 D 13 '13 400w

"An important and serviceable biography."

+ R of Rs 48:632 N '13 170w

WHITE, JOHN WILLIAMS. Verse of Greek comedy. *$4 Macmillan 12-25139

"This volume investigates the origin, nature, relation, and development of the Greek poets and their remote and shadowy predecessors along the coast of Asia, the islands of the Aegean and the continent. The principles of this scientific investigation, Professor White states, must proceed in the main from Aristoxenus, Aristides, Hellodorus and Hepaestion. The application of certain laws of rhythm (laid down by these masters) to the comic poets, is recorded in the second and fourteenth chapters of this work. The fifteenth chapter treats of the origin of the forms of Greek poetry. The theories of ancient and modern Greek scholars and metricists are discussed with great simplicity and directness considering the amount of technique involved."—R of Rs

WHITE, JOHN WILLIAMS—Continued.

"Few men living today have the knowledge of ancient classical Greek literature and language, and also the necessary patient industry to produce such a work as this."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 8 '13 280w

"One of the most serious pieces of work yet put to the credit of American scholarship. Its value to the worker in this field is quite independent of the degree of his adhesion to the disputable first principles which it assumes, illustrates, or seeks to establish." Paul Shorey.

+ Class Philol 8:99 Ja '13 2700w

"Deserves the attention of every student who feels that the metrical structure of Greek poetry had a closer connection with song and dance than has the metrical structure of modern melic and dramatic verse. To the student of manners and ceremonial his pages are more interesting than they look."

+ Ind 74:871 Ap 17 '13 320w

"Too much importance seems to be attached to Hephæstion. This author does not reveal any acquaintance with Aristoxenus, as he treats all the metres known to him and yet gives no hint of that 'irrationality' which Aristoxenus fully explains. There are several other matters concerning which the views expressed seem open to question."

+ Nation 96:391 Ap 17 '13 900w

"While this book is primarily for the student who reads Greek with facility the student of rhythms who is unfamiliar with the dead languages, will find much to repay his study in this learned work."

+ R of Rs 47:252 F '13 200w

"The book is a notable contribution to American scholarship, and is printed in a style befitting its quality."

+ Springfield Republican p7 D 12 '12 1650w

WHITE, PERCY. Ashes and sparks. *$1.25 (1½c) Putnam

A story of modern London life involving the conflict between progress and conservatism. Dulcie Ellice, daughter of a typically conservative house that has been founded on a patent medicine industry of which the family is now ashamed, turns militant suffragette. She addresses open meetings in the park, is sent to jail, and joins in a hunger strike. The attitude of the horrified family and the unperturbed serenity of the girl are described alike impartially by the mild and humble kinsman who tells the story.

"The writer obviously with striking fidelity, tells the story of the movement of the suffragettes. He takes the conservative side, but nevertheless is quite fair in presenting all phases. There is a dry humor about it all that is as clever as it is entertaining."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 230w

"The book is entertaining enough but it is pretty frivolous jesting about matters that are very serious to most people."

+ N Y Sun p3 My 3 '13 130w

"It is the character of the timid, devoted hanger-on who tells the story, a very incarnation of standpointism, instinctively opposed to change of any kind, which lifts 'Ashes and sparks' a trifle above the level of the commonplace, and makes one feel that Mr. White may do better work some day. The book would have been improved by radical cutting and the omission of such phrases as 'an honest evening conservative journal.'"

+ N Y Times 13:101 F 23 '13 150w

WHITE, SAMUEL ALEXANDER. Empery. *$1.25 Outing pub. 13-4987

"From the moment when Bruce Dunvegan, chief trader at Oxford house and loyal servant of 'The honorable, the Hudson's bay company,' makes his first appearance until the identity of Gaspard Foillet is revealed on the very last page, the narrative moves with a swing and a rush. . . . The book tells of more than one stiff fight, some waged with human antagonists; others with the awful cold of the northern wilderness or the treacherous currents of its swift-flowing rivers."—N Y Times

"For libraries that need many adventure stories. Readable but improbable and exaggerated."

+ A L A Bkl 10:72 O '13

"There is much lawless but purposeless violence, considerable stupid villainy and some love. Some descriptions of outdoor life are pretty and a few characters are picturesque, but the author does not seem to know what to do with them after he has fashioned them."

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 22 '13 80w

"A most exciting story"

+ N Y Times 13:241 Ap 20 '13 300w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. African camp fires. il *$1.50 (2c) Doubleday 13-35733

Intimately and sympathetically, as he wrote of "The forest" and of "The mountains" of his own country, so Stewart Edward White writes here of the lesser known African wilds. This is an account of his second expedition into Africa and it forms a companion volume to "The land of footprints," the record of his first journey. The story of the expedition is told in six parts headed as follows: To the island of war; The Shimba hills; Nairobi; A lion hunt on Kapiti; The Tsavo river; In Masailand.

+ A L A Bkl 10: 66 O '13 +

"Mr. White has given us another sound and interesting book." Churchill Williams.

+ Bookm 38:297 N '13 850w

"A broad knowledge of ethnology and natural history, together with a facile pen, transform what to the ordinary reader are abstract and uninteresting studies into themes that hold the attention fixedly."

+ Ind 75:748 S 25 '13 100w

+ N Y Times 13:505 S 28 '13 50w

"Certainly a book to be read in connection with Mr. Roosevelt's 'African game trails.'"

+ Outlook 105:328 O 11 '13 200w

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 2 '13 400w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. Gold. il *$1.35 (1c) Doubleday 13-21296

The forty-miners of this story make their way to the land of golden promise by the Panama route. They are modest in their expectations; if they can pick up a hatful of gold a day their desires will be quite satisfied. They do make the fortune they have come seeking, altho not in the easy manner they had believed possible. They make it and lose it, and, undaunted, start in again, foreseeing the splendid future of the country to which they have been attracted by the glittering bait—gold. The actors are four young men who form a partnership and loyally stand by one another thru ups and downs. The author has not spoiled a perfectly good tale of adventure by the introduction of an adventurous love story.

"It is hardly a novel; rather a vivid and picturesque account of the spirit, conditions and life of those rough and adventurous times."

+ A L A Bkl 10:199 N '13

"There is a subtle charm, altogether enviable to others who may have tried to do the same thing and failed, in the way Mr. White hands his readers a great deal of solid, useful knowledge so that they swallow it down as if enjoying the most purely imaginative fiction." J. Marchand.

+ Bookm 38:429 D '13 680w

"The picture of Panama as well as San Francisco of those mad days that Mr. White paints is amazingly vivid."

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 22 '13 320w

+ Ind 76:265 N 6 '13 110w

"The pictures are true—or at least bring with them the conviction of truth. And even in the most exciting passages one must note the lack of the forced and artificial technique that prescribes 'dramatic plot' and 'sex element' and 'artistic balance' and all the rest of the cut-and-dried components of the novel-maker's rule of three."

+ Nation 97:482 N 20 '13 200w

N Y Sun p3 N 15 '13 150w

"A capital piece of work."

+ Outlook 105:450 O 25 '13 80w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. Land of foot-prints. il *$1.50 Doubleday 12-24842

Stewart Edward White's promised account of his last year's hunting expedition to east Africa. Like all his books of the out-of-doors it has individuality. "In the opening chapter he expresses some strong and diverting opinions about books of travel, hunting, and adventure, and explains that his aim is to write such an account of his year in Africa as will bring his readers close to the real face and personality of the country and will enable them to see and understand that portion of the continent and the experiences of hunters therein exactly as they are. Consequently, many as are the travel and hunting adventure books that have come out of Africa, Mr. White's is not like any of them." (N Y Times)

"Unique among the many African travel-books, not only for its very informal style but for its emphasis on the personal side of the adventures and recognition of the native attendants, in whom Mr. White became interested."

+ A L A Bkl 9: 167 D '12 ✕

"He has the gift of effective selection, and does not put his memories on paper in the haphazard and hotchpotch style which is becoming increasingly common."

+ Ath 1913:1:695 Je 28 70w

Boston Transcript p6 D 21 '12 350w

"He has an eye for what is really important and interesting, the ability to tell what he sees and the vocabulary that modern readers can understand with least difficulty. It is the most intelligible account we have yet read of a trip that is becoming almost as commonplace as the voyage around the world."

+ N Y Sun p 6 N 16 '12 180w

"Like everything that he writes when he goes out to interview nature in her lair, and does not cumber himself with a story which is merely a distraction to him and an irritation to the reader, it is full of vivid pictures, racy with the flavor of the land, and carries much accurate and interesting information."

+ N Y Times 17: 673 N 17 '12 320w

"He has written a notable book, and has given a fresh proof, if one were necessary, that the fact that many first-class books about hunting in a given region already exist in no way means that there is not ample room for another first-class book. The account of some of his adventures with lion and buffalo is thrilling, and, moreover, it is so written as to give a real and satisfactory idea of just what it was that happened, and, without either understatement or exaggeration, of what might have happened if the powder had not been straight." Theodore Roosevelt.

+ Outlook 102: 714 N 30 '12 1150w

Spec 111:386 S 13 '13 450w

WHITECHURCH, VICTOR L. Downland corner. *$1.30 Holt 13-35274

"The scene of the fifteen brief sketches included is a nameless and very primitive remote village in some part of the downlands of England. . . . There is scarcely anything that can be called a story; these essays are like deft and unpretentious pencil-sketches, setting off in outline, with sympathy and humor, the habits of life and mind of these sturdy people of the hinterland."—N Y Times

+ A L A Bkl 9:402 My '13

"Each of Mr. Whitechurch's sketches in 'A downland corner' is brief and compact with human peculiarities." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p25 Ap 30 '13 550w

"Mr. Whitechurch . . . has given us in the present little book one of those delightful studies in quaintness which we take to the heart, carry in the pocket, and steal off with to some pleasant nook either in spring or summer." S. O'S.

+ N Y Times 18:232 Ap 20 '13 550w

"A group of a dozen or more brief stories, sometimes character sketches rather than stories renders faithfully and with intimate charm the village life, its quaint people, and what the author calls, in the local diction, its 'orkadness.'"

+ Outlook 103:734 Mr 29 '13 90w

"The sketches are excellently done."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 24 '13 170w

WHITEHORN, ALAN LESLIE. Wonder tales from old Japan. il *$1.25 Stokes

(Enged W12-39)

"Japanese students seated with Mr. Whitehorn around the 'fire box,' used to tell him these stories which he later embellished at will." (Ind) "Magical tales are they, the place of the familiar 'fairies' of the Occident being taken by the dragons, goblins and other superhuman powers of the Orient. Rarely curious are these wonder stories told for centuries to the children of old Nippon, possessing the delicate charm which is the heritage of all art in that far land, and instinct with the teaching of gentleness and courtesy. Kindness to every living creature is the spirit which inspires these stories." (Boston Transcript)

"Would have been more satisfactory had the translator been content with a less ejaculatory method of narration, and a somewhat closer following of legends."

—Ath 1911,2:517 O 28 150w

"No better book of its kind could be selected to delight the heart of a child than this collection of stories from the folk-lore of Japan."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 21 '12 270w

"The folk element is strong in this book, and offers plentiful suggestion for the story-teller's use." M. J. Moses.

+ Ind 73:1367 D 12 '12 80w

WHITEHOUSE, JOHN HOWARD, ed. Problems of boy life; with an introd. by Rt. Rev. J. Percival. *10s 6d King (P. S.) and son, London E13-45

"This book is a compilation of articles by a number of specialists, and confines itself largely to the problems of labor and education. In the earlier chapters it discusses the wide gap existing between the educational system and trade life. That this gap, plus the increasing subdivision of labor, the instability of industry, and the difficulty of controlling these factors, is reducing most labor to the level of common unskilled labor is clearly shown. The writers discover that in England conditions are very much like those observed by investigators in the United States. . . . In the middle of the book we find a chapter on 'The boy criminal,' which, while valuable as an independent chapter, is not closely related to the remainder of the book, and somewhat destroys its unity. The later chapters deal with measures of reform, 'The poor law' and the 'Administration of child care by the board of guardians,' which are criticized because of relative inefficiency. Emphasis, however, is placed upon the new program in the public schools. . . .

WHITEHOUSE, JOHN HOWARD, ed.—Cont.
The last two chapters deal respectively with parliamentary inquiries into the problems of boy life, and compulsory attendance laws in various countries. These chapters should really be regarded as appendices, the former being especially valuable because of its summaries of the results of inquiries by numerous committees into various aspects of the boy problem.—Am J Soc

"The book does not deal with important boy problems, such as that of recreation, physical condition, and moral standards, and therefore is not an inclusive discussion of the subject. However, it does give a clear idea of the industrial difficulties of the boy in England, and has in it many suggestions for the American reader. The book, being a compilation, is not pervaded with a uniform style, but on the whole is written in interesting English. The American reader regrets that it does not cover more completely the various aspects of boy life." G: B. Mangold.

+ — Am J Soc 18:406 N '12 700w

"This is a valuable, but not on the whole a well-composed volume; overlapping occurs, especially between chaps. 2 and 3, and the sequence of chapters—a difficult matter, no doubt—is not such as to make the reader's progress entirely smooth."

+ — Ath 1912:196 Ja 27 500w

"This is a very acceptable book of short studies. Its eighteen articles by a dozen different writers make a useful handbook on a large number of questions connected with the right treatment of boys—a treatment which will turn them into sound men and citizens." O. P. Eckhard.

+ Int J Ethics 23:248 Ja '13 500w

"Some of the studies are little more than boiled-down Blue-books—these will be useful for the composition of politicians' speeches. Others are short essays by acknowledged experts—these are worth reading for themselves. The authors are keenly interested in their subject, and any attempt to stir up public opinion on questions like the labour, or crime, or trading of boys deserves to be encouraged."

+ — Sat R 113:594 My 11 '12 1000w

"Although the volume which Mr. Whitehouse has edited on the 'Problems of boy life' contains many interesting chapters, there is always a certain amount of disappointment in a book made up of a series of essays by different writers. Of necessity there is much overlapping, while at the same time it is not easy to secure a coherent purpose throughout. Mr. Whitehouse, however, has evidently done his best, for there is a general unity of idea running through the volume."

+ — Spec 109:651 O 26 '12 1000w

WHITMAN, STEPHEN FRENCH. Isle of life.
* $1.35 (1c) Scribner 13-3811

The singularly repellent hero of this story is a disciple of Nietzsche. Repulsed by a young woman who has attracted him, he seizes her in his arms and springs overboard from the deck of a Mediterranean steamer. He swims with her to a small island off the coast of Sicily; but once there he abandons the methods of the man of the stone age and gives her her freedom in the little native settlement to which they have come. In a cholera epidemic and a native uprising he proves himself to be all of a hero, and she too, in coming in contact with the elemental forces of birth and death, develops unexpected qualities. Given an opportunity to take up again her old life she chooses to return to the island to become the wife of her once hated captor.

"It cannot be claimed for Mr. Whitman that he has hit upon anything essentially new, although he has succeeded through novelty of setting in giving the illusion of freshness to material that has seen much service." F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 37:206 Ap '13 320w

"It must be said that the story, as a story, turns out to be much better than the opening chapters have led us to anticipate." W: M. Payne.

+ — Dial 54:463 Je 1 '13 300w

"An unusually strong piece of literary work, forceful, picturesque and with a most novel theme."

+ Ind 75:574 S 4 '13 150w

"A rather lurid and melodramatic but well-told romance."

+ — Lit D 46:784 Ap 5 '13 200w

"Wild as the story is, it is told with a good deal of imaginative vigor and skill. Constructively, it shows a marked advance over the author's first novel, 'Predestined,' and it is much less unwholesome in substance."

+ — Nation 96:443 My 1 '13 400w

"An unusually well written book. There is much discussion of the one man and one woman theory of love, but the description of the island and its people is poetic, the author has studied his Sicilians well, and he keeps his readers interested."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Mr 8 '13 200w

"A novel that is at once ingenious, deeply thoughtful, and highly exciting. In its intellectual interest, its stimulus to thought, the book stands far above the general run of fiction. Its interest and appeal, however, are more intellectual than emotional. The heroine is distinctly unsatisfactory. But the hero is one of the most interesting creations that American fiction has evolved in a long time. The problem that he presents goes down into some of the profoundest depths of human nature and his solution of it is distinctly of the twentieth century."

+ — N Y Times 18:117 Mr 2 '13 950w

+ Outlook 103:733 Mr 29 '13 200w

"Mr. Whitman's second book fully sustains his reputation for literary work and well-built structure."

+ R of Rs 47:762 Je '13 170w

WHITNEY, CASPAR. Flowing road. il. *$3
1 Lippincott 12-24864

"Caspar Whitney's new book, 'The flowing road,' tells of what he saw while adventuring on the great rivers of South America. It deals with his experiences during five overland and river expeditions, mostly made by canoe—whence the title—which carried him through little-known regions of Brazil, Venezuela, and Argentina, though they included also some sojourning in large cities. . . . The book has over fifty illustrations from photographs by the author."—N Y Times

"Though detailed, it gives a vivid picture, if written in an informal, spontaneous manner, and is well illustrated by the author's photographs. Likely to prove one of the most popular books on South America among people who wish information, not mere entertainment."

+ A L A Bkl 9: 167 D '12

"The author, an American, has much of interest to say, but a somewhat unattractive way of saying it. He experienced difficulty in photography owing to the climate, but has produced a very fair collection of pictures; the map, however, is neither clear nor adequate."

+ — Ath 1912, 2: 623 N 23 110w

"The book shows throughout an endeavor to put things interestingly." Algernon Tassin.

+ Bookm 36:528 Ja '13 350w

"His book teems with information about the physical features of the country, and the various forms of life—plant and animal alike—that are to be met in it. Moreover, he tells his story, with all its wealth of detail, in an interesting way—one that maintains its grip to the very end."

+ Cath World 96: 407 D '12 140w

Reviewed by Julian Park.

+ Dial 53: 445 D 1 '12 250w

"Full of entertainment and instruction."

+ Ind 74:204 Ja 23 '13 20w

"Those who love new scenes delineated by a hand of masterly certainty should read this book, making use at the same time of the excellent map which completes the many illustrations of the work."

+ Lit D 45:1133 D 14 '12 230w

"Though the author is not a skilled zoölogist, and even less of a botanist, he has a first-rate traveller's eye, and is able to catch and describe details, as well as to present the general effect of the scenery through which he passes. He is a good observer of men as well as of beasts, and gives a life-like notion of the sorts of people, nearly all half-breeds of some kind or other, whom the traveller meets in the out-of-the-way parts of South America."

+ Nation 96:10 Ja 2 '13 1200w

"Full of facts of interest both to the naturalist and the geographer. A really valuable contribution to many branches of knowledge." R. I. P.

+ Nature 92:294 N 6 '13 220w

N Y Times 17: 609 O 20 '12 160w

"It is extremely instructive as to a little-known . . . region of the world."

+ Outlook 103:322 F 8 '13 430w

"Altogether Mr. Whitney has succeeded in finding out a great deal about the continent and its inhabitants that will be wholly new to most of his North American readers."

+ R of Rs 46: 753 D '12 350w

"It is only by much courtesy that it can be regarded as scientific in any sense. But in spite of this, it is a book full of interest for everyone who knows, or wishes to know, about the ups and downs of canoe travel in the thinly populated and little-known regions of the upper Rio Negro, or for the matter of that, on any of the rivers that empty into the Amazon. It is a pity that the book is not supplied with better maps." J. C. Branner.

+ Science ns37:151 Ja 24 '13 1200w

Springfield Republican p5 O 31 '12 800w

WHITON, JAMES MORRIS, ed. Getting together: essays by friends in council on the regulative ideas of religious thought. *$1.50 (2½c) Sturgis & Walton 13-13564

Representatives of eight different religious denominations contribute to the contents of this volume. "Aiming simply at exposition of fundamental principles, these essays set aside the secondary questions of inferential theology and theological method. . . . Each essayist has freely developed from his own point of view the thesis of his choice from the series of propositions agreed to by all." (Preface) The ultimate reality; Humanity the interpreter of deity; Transcendence and immanence; The natural and the supernatural; Incarnation; Revelation; and Redemption, are some of the subjects considered.

Am J Theol 17:657 O '13 400w

+ A L A Bkl 10:112 N '13

"We cannot express our appreciation of what the writers have accomplished better than by saying that through their manner of putting into words those tendencies of thought which are bringing back religion into daily life, the writers have assuredly made themselves agents towards that fulfilment."

+ Ath 1913,2:201 Ag 30 630w

"We regard this work as particularly valuable and interesting because it deals with the foundations of belief."

+ Lit D 47:688 O 18 '13 200w

N Y Times 18:505 S 28 '13 220w

WHITTLES, THOMAS DAVIS. Parish of the pines: the story of Frank Higgins, the lumberjacks' sky pilot. il *$1 Revell 13-315

"An account not so much of the life as of the work of the Rev. Frank E. Higgins among the lumbermen of Minnesota. . . . The story has much to do with open air life; it describes the work and the life of the lumbermen, and incidentally the author tells stories of what Mr. Higgins did in one case and another. It contains more exciting adventure than most fiction, for the missionary is a man of muscle and does not hesitate to use it when necessary."—N Y Sun

Boston Transcript p22 Ja 22 '13 300w

N Y Sun p6 N 16 '12 170w

WHYMPER, R. Cocoa and chocolate; their chemistry and manufacture. il *$5 Blakiston (Enged 12-3804)

Mr. Whympers "divides his subject-matter into three parts, dealing first with the botany and cultivation of the plant and the preparation of the beans, then with the manufacture of cocoa preparations, including chocolate and lastly with the chemistry of cocoa. . . . The book is well produced and the illustrations of plantation scenes and of machinery are very good."—Nature

"Though nearly everything that Mr. Whympers says in the first of these three parts is sound, this portion of the book, merely on account of its brevity, is scarcely up to the standard of the other parts. The manufacturing processes are described clearly and concisely, and the changes in composition occurring at each stage of manufacture are carefully and thoroughly discussed."

+ Nature 90:357 N 28 '12 320w

"The food chemist will find in this work a vast amount of important and interesting technologic and analytic data. The book is a timely and valuable contribution to the literature of an important topic." H: Leffmann.

+ Science ns36:29 J1 5 '12 750w

WICKS, PEMBROKE. Truth about home rule; with a preface by the Rt. Hon. Sir Edward Carson. il *$1.25 (2c) Small 13-14345

"Mr. Wicks takes up the nationalist claims, as well as the counter claims of the manufacturing northeast, and makes a strong case for the opposition against home rule. He contends that the nationalist agitation is inconsistent and reactionary. That the peace, progress and prosperity of Ireland is not the whole purpose of their fight; he shows that they have persistently obstructed the Unionist governments in their efforts to fully realize these conditions. 'The phrase "home rule,"' says Mr. Wicks, 'has been used indiscriminately to indicate a variety of forms of government. . . . The final chapter is given to an examination of the Home rule bill of 1912, and its effect as a working constitution for the government of Ireland. The text of the bill and an outline of its financial provisions is added in appendix to the volume.'—Boston Transcript

"Strong though intensely partisan."

+ A L A Bkl 10:153 D '13

Boston Transcript p19 Ag 20 '13 600w

"With its statements and conclusions no doubt many will quarrel; its style as a piece of literature it is hardly in order to consider, but the auspices under which it is published make it well worth consideration as setting forth the point of view of one of the chief factions in the great home rule fight."

+ N Y Times 18:427 Ag 10 '13 1000w

R of Rs 48:378 S '13 130w

"The great merit of the book is its brevity."

+ Sat R 115:750 Je 14 '13 600w

+ Spec 111:29 J1 5 '13 50w

WICKSTEED, REV. PHILIP HENRY. Dante and Aquinas; being the substance of the Jowett lectures of 1911. *$2 Dutton

A book devoted to two famous men of the middle ages, Dante, the poet, and Thomas

WICKSTEED, PHILIP HENRY.—Continued.
Aquinas, the theologian. "Mr. Wicksteed's text brings out the significance of Dante's work in the direction of philosophy and theology, and describes the scholastic philosophy of Aquinas. In doing this the author makes interesting digressions into Greek philosophy, into Christian Neoplatonism, and into the later transformations of the philosophy of Aristotle." (Outlook)

"In any summary account, such as this book is, of a system of thought elaborated after centuries of discussion, there are of necessity phrases and sentences open to criticism, but we can recommend it as a disinterested and popular treatment of the scholastic philosophy of Aquinas."

+ — Ath 1913,1:463 Ap 26 450w

"It is an extremely valuable book for those who would go into the theological and philosophical study of the 'Divine comedy.' It is not meant for the beginner. Sometimes the author's style is involved." N. H. D.

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 1100w

+ — Nation 97:408 O 30 '13 2400w

"A valuable contribution." T. Walsh.

+ N Y Times 18:434 Ag 17 '13 1000w

+ N Y Times 18:677 N 30 '13 250w

"Mr. Wicksteed's style might have been somewhat more captivating; his book, because of this lack, will hardly appeal to the ordinary reader. But it will appeal to the thoughtful reader."

+ — Outlook 104:720 Jl 26 '13 130w

+ Spec 111:sup494 O 4 '13 1400w

WIERNIK, PETER. History of the Jews in America. il $1.50 Jewish press pub. 12-25267

A history of the Jews in America from the time of its discovery to the present. "Such closely related matters as the repressive laws in Europe, the recent persecutions in Russia and the history of the Zionist movement are also included, adding much to the general interest and value of the work. The chapters are grouped in seven parts: 'The Spanish and Portuguese period,' 'The Dutch and English colonial period,' 'The revolution and the period of expansion,' 'The second or German period of immigration,' 'The civil war and the formative period,' 'The third or Russian period of immigration,' and 'The 20th century, present conditions.'" (Springfield Republican)

+ A L A Bkl 9:395 My '13

+ Ath 1912,2:688 D 7 30w

"The volume well fulfils its author's intentions, though the non-Jewish reader would gladly exchange a mass of biographical details (with portraits) of modern worthies for more information about the Jews in the seventeenth century in Brazil and Surinam." H. E. E.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:413 Ap '13 60w

"A useful and valuable work, and is the first attempt at a comprehensive, consecutive treatment of the subject. Frankly, then, the historian writes as a comparatively recent Russian Jewish immigrant, with Russian-American Jews as his main proposed public, and not the least value of the book is his accurate knowledge and description of this section of our population and its history, which substantially no other writer has even attempted to treat heretofore."

+ — Ind 74:823 Ap 10 '13 950w

"It is a story that should be read by those who are not Jews even more than the Jews themselves."

+ N Y Sun p4 D 14 '12 130w

+ N Y Times 17:799 D 29 '12 100w

R of Rs 47:376 Mr '13 60w

"The author has traced American Jewish history from its somewhat apocryphal beginnings in the old world down to the present time, and shows that he has diligently searched the records to make his study as complete as possible within the space to be filled. The book, however, is remarkably complete, considering the limitless possibilities in its subject."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 N 28 '12 750w

WIGGIN, KATE DOUGLAS (SMITH) (MRS. GEORGE CHRISTOPHER RIGGS). Story of Waitstill Baxter. il $1.30 (1½c) Houghton 13-21262

A love story of the Saco country made familiar by "Rose of the river" and other stories. Waitstill, left motherless at fourteen, is given charge of her little step-sister, Patty, and made housekeeper of her father's house. For her father, grim, domineering, unsympathetic, and unjust, she has little love, but she patiently endures her hard life. Only when the little sister, rebelling against the barrenness of their lot, takes fate in her own hands and runs away to be married, does Waitstill find courage to defy her father's will, and further to give thought to her own happiness by listening to the call of her own lover.

+ A L A Bkl 10:119 N '13 +

"This novel is written with the author's usual humour, and sympathy with her characters in her country."

+ Ath 1913,2:454 O 25 50w

Ind 76:138 O 16 '13 220w

"The story is not deep, but engrossing and amusing."

+ Lit D 47:954 N 15 '13 250w

"This story is not without its strokes of wit. But on the whole, this is less enlivening than other books from the same pen. We somehow miss the effect of graceful spontaneity, the secret of which we have always regarded as this author's own particular magic."

+ — Nation 97:410 O 30 '13 370w

"It is the most careful piece of work Mrs. Wiggin has undertaken and it is very well done. There are plenty of anachronisms, to be sure, especially in character, for the particular date she has selected, but there is nothing that is far out of place."

+ — N Y Sun p3 O 11 '13 300w

Reviewed by Stephenson Browne.

+ N Y Times 18:411 Jl 27 '13 130w

"This novel has all the cheerfulness one associates with the name of its author, and if it is sometimes a little too 'sweet,' it will probably be none the less popular on that account." L. M. F.

+ — N Y Times 18:518 O 5 '13 800w

+ Outlook 105:449 O 25 '13 300w

+ Spec 111:829 N 15 '13 30w

WIGHT, JOHN GREEN, comp. and ed. Literary brevities. $1.50 Heath 13-13542

"Within the compass of some 450 closely printed pages Professor Wight has gathered an innumerable quantity of literary allusions, quotations, etc., ranging from a half-dozen lines to a dozen or more pages. These are classified under such headings as Love, Idiosyncrasies, Education, Fools, Insults, Statesmanship, and the like, the whole forming a kind of scrap book so arranged as to be of practical value for ready reference."—Boston Transcript

"The work displays wide reading on the part of the compiler."

+ Boston Transcript p24 O 1 '13 140w

"For purposes of quotation or as a personal stimulant the book should be at every reader's elbow."

+ Chaut 72:125 O 11 '13 60w

"The volume has a good index."

+ N Y Times 18:583 O 26 '13 120w

WILDING, ANTHONY F. On the court and off. il $1.50 Doubleday A13-2358

This book by the world's champion tennis player "gives a brief account of the ways in which the author gained his proficiency and offers a certain amount . . . of practical advice, illustrated by photographs, as to how various strokes should be made. It also gives interesting reminiscences—here, however, Mr.

Wilding is distinctly too modest—of famous contests and players, while most engaging of all are Mr. Wilding's recollections of having been taught the game by his father, an athletic Englishman of the traditional school who took his sports with him to New Zealand and there brought up his children as children should be. . . . First and last an excellent notion is to be had from this book of Mr. Wilding's style of playing." (Springfield Republican)

"An exciting and instructive book, written with zest and without pretentiousness. The chapters devoted to unfolding the art of successful play are stimulating, and those retelling the reminiscences of the champion himself of the keenest of interest."

+ Ath 1912,1:465 Ap 27 70w

Nation 97:106 J1 31 '13 250w

"Undoubtedly will help a reasonably proficient player to improve his game considerably."

+ N Y Times 18:276 My 4 '13 50w

"What he has written is, of course, authoritative. Much of it is sufficiently detailed, even sufficiently technical, to satisfy the student and expert. But the feature of the book, its unaffectedness and simplicity, is distinctive of that very popularity which makes a tennis court equally typical of the modest suburb and of fashionable Newport, the delight of the busy man who plays inexpertly on holidays, and the man of leisure with plenty of time to excel at the game."

+ N Y Times 18:401 J1 20 '13 1550w

"Mr. Wilding, though a Cambridge man, does not pretend to any literary art, though his style is frank and very agreeable. Nor while his book is a very desirable addition to tennis literature has he written the thoroughly fundamental book on the game that ought to be written some day, and the nearest approach to which is that in which the famous Doherty brothers collaborated some 10 years ago."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 7 '13 1250w

WILE, FREDERIC WILLIAM. Men around the Kaiser. il $1.75 Lippincott (Eng ed A13-1895)

A group of thirty-one biographical sketches of men prominent in affairs in Germany. "Mr. Wile writes alike of statesmen such as Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg and Admiral von Tirpitz; of commercial men such as Herr Ballin, of the Hamburg-America line, and Dr. Krupp von Bohlen, head of the famous arsenal at Essen; of Dr. von Heydebrand, the agrarian leader; of Herr Bebel, the social-democrat; of Herr Reinhardt, of Herr Hauptmann, and Dr. Strauss." (Spec)

"Interesting to the general public."

+ A L A Bkl 10:112 N '13 *

"Mr. Wile has written a very readable book, but he deals in superlatives, and the general impression to be derived from his volume is that each of the 'men around the Kaiser' is 'the greatest German of the twentieth century.'"

+ Ath 1913,1:669 Je 21 280w

"It is a valuable book that will give to American readers new ideas of the men who help or hinder the Kaiser." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p18 J1 30 '13 1050w

"One receives a vivid impression of the real strength and eminence of Germany. The addition, however, of a scholar—as Harnack, for example—and of a theologian or ecclesiastical magnate would round out the representative character of the book still further."

+ Lit D 47:480 S 20 '13 170w

"Such a book as this is of real value to all who are interested in German affairs and derives a certain authority from the position held by Mr. Wile at Berlin."

+ N Y Times 18:378 Je 29 '13 1300w

+ Outlook 104:768 Ag 2 '13 380w

"Vividly-told series of sketches."

+ R of Rs 48:321 S '13 1200w

"Mr. Wile not only has knowledge of his subject—he has been the 'Daily mail' correspondent in Berlin for seven years—but he can write about it in an interesting way, and a cheerful flow of anecdotes helps to enliven without detracting from the usefulness of these biographical sketches."

+ Spec 110:980 Je 7 '13 170w

WILE, IRA SOLOMON. Sex education. *$1 3 Duffield 12-23485

"Starting with the conviction that sexual education should be carried on in the home rather than in the school, Dr. Wile has explicitly the purpose of assisting parents to banish the difficulties and to suggest a program for developing a course of instruction. . . . Childhood is regarded as divided into the age of mythology, the age of chivalry, and the age of civic awakening. By adapting the instruction to the characteristics of these periods, it is possible to build up a progressive system of teachings in regard to the sexual constitution, and of appeals for sexual purity. . . . There is a final chapter on terminology of reproductive organs and a two-page bibliography of rather non-technical works in regard to sex."—Am J Soc

"His explicit purpose is much hampered by the repeated intrusion of mere statements of the necessity of sexual education, and by the resulting paucity of details in regard to the course of instruction. His program, even as far as outlined, can be carried out only by parents who have a considerable knowledge of 'child-study' and physiology, and for such parents his outline would not be of great value." E. H. Sutherland.

— Am J Soc 18:576 Ja '13 230w

"Clear, direct chapters, within the comprehension of the average adult."

+ A L A Bkl 9:207 Ja '13

+ Hibbert J 12:212 O '13 20w

"The language is untechnical and the presentation judicious."

+ Ind 74:320 F 6 '13 60w

"A useful, direct little volume."

+ R of Rs 47:381 Mr '13 20w

"His purpose is sincere, his facts are scientific, his style is lucid." O. G. Cocks.

+ Survey 29:907 Mr 29 '13 250w

WILKINSON, ALBERT EDMUND. Modern strawberry growing. (Garden library) il $1.10 (2½c) Doubleday 13-4437

The subject of strawberry culture is treated thoroly and in a very practical manner. The home gardener and the professional will find the book of value. There are chapters on: Selection of site; Manuring and fitting; Marking and planting; Insects, diseases, and spraying; Picking, packing, and marketing; Mulching, renovating the old bed; Winter forcing; Propagation; Scoring and judging; Costs, yields, and profits; Strawberries for the home; Alpine strawberries; Fall-bearing strawberries; What is the American strawberry? Varieties for special purposes.

"A manual which covers the whole subject in a popular but thoroughly practical way."

+ A L A Bkl 9:395 My '13 *

+ Nation 96:554 My 29 '13 300w

"It is a practical manual that tells the novice what to do, from the selection and preparation of the ground to the marketing of the fruit. Like all such books, it awakes hopes of great wealth from a small investment, for it is the normal, unhindered development that is described, and the checks from disease, weather and insects take up much less room than they do in real life."

+ N Y Sun p8 F 22 '13 110w

"Everything one needs to know about strawberry culture may be found in this book."

+ N Y Times 18:238 Ap 20 '13 50w

WILLCOCK, JOHN. Life of Sir Henry Vane
 "the Younger, statesman and mystic (1613-1662). *10s St. Catherine press, London
 13-12316

A biography of Sir Henry Vane who is associated with the history of America thru his appointment in 1636 as governor of the colony of Massachusetts bay. "That Vane was a remarkable, though never a great man does not require argument. Dr. Willcock brings into full relief the various phases of his many-sided nature: his precocity of talent; his subtlety and resource in diplomacy, with his doctrinaire and unyielding political theory; his controversial power; his admirable capacity as the official responsible for the navy, and his general ineffectiveness as a leader of men." (Ath)

"To say that it is, perhaps, the best of Vane's longer biographies is not very high praise, and we may well believe it is far from the last word. Vane often seems in these pages as elusive as he appeared to many of his contemporaries. This, with the unqualified acceptance of the worst possible view of Charles I, the almost casual treatment of foreign, especially French, affairs, notably the characterization of Mazarin, the Fronde, and Cromwell's relations with Condé and the Huguenots, and their like, give the book at times an air of superficiality which tends to obscure its better qualities and its not inconsiderable real value." W. C. Abbott.

+ — Am Hist R 19:148 O '13 870w

"Dr. Willcock's narrative is clear and often forcible, his historical background is satisfactory, and the literary quality of his work sufficiently attractive."

+ Ath 1913,1:456 Ap 26 1100w

"A new and careful biography." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '13 1600w

"His life of Vane is by far the best that has yet been produced."

+ — Nation 97:242 S 11 '13 700w

"Dr. Willcock is a frankly partisan historian. For example, he suppresses in his account of Cromwell's doings in Ireland all mention of the hideous massacres perpetrated by him, and denies that Laud died for the Church of England on the plea that he was accused of being an innovator! The present work seldom lifts itself out of the regular Whig ruts."

— Sat R 115:813 Je 28 '13 800w

"Valuable and judicious work."

+ Spec 110:1119 Je 28 '13 1100w

"Mr. Willcock is a careful and interesting historian, occasionally inclined in his style—with his references to 'the muse of history' and his use of the editorial 'we'—to what, for want of a better term, may be called the old school. But he is not for that reason either dry or unduly prejudiced."

+ — Springfield Republican p4 Ap 24 '13 1600w

WILLCOCKS, MARY PATRICIA. Will to live
 " (Eng title, Power behind). *$1.35 (1c) Macmillan 13-19499

Sophie Revel, the heroine of this novel, a girl of French birth, is adopted when a child by an English country doctor. She learns only shortly before his death that she is not his daughter, and afterwards finding life impossible with the woman she had supposed her mother, and towards whom she has felt always a secret antagonism, becomes a dependent in a patriarchal house—that of the Botterills of Hele. Her secret marriage with Moysey Botterill, the birth of her child, her husband's sudden death are events that follow rapidly in this second period of her life. In the third she is called upon to give up her own right to her son that he may be reared as a Botterill. Her second marriage with a doctor many years older than herself follows. Thru all these varying experiences Sophie is moved by her will to live—and to live fully and nobly in spite of circumstances.

"The actions of the characters in this story seem to be decided rather by the exigencies of plot than by inherent probability. For the rest, it is a tolerably well-written novel, which would be improved were the central figure more consistent."

+ — Ath 1913,2:134 Ag 9 80w

"Whatever fault one may be inclined to find with much both of the matter and the manner of Miss Willcock's new book, it must be admitted that it is not commonplace either in spirit or point of view."

+ — N Y Times 18:600 N 2 '13 970w

"Whatever may be thought of the theories concerning modern life which Miss Willcock appears to wish to ventilate in this novel, no one can deny the painstaking care with which her work has been done."

+ — Spec 111:287 Ag 23 '13 230w

WILLIAM FREDERICK VICTOR AUGUST
 1 ERNST. From my hunting day-book. 1l
 *$2 Doran 12-29974

"In about a dozen slender chapters, illustrated with excellent amateur snapshots, the German Crown Prince has published some 'Pages taken from the hunting diary of a man who loves open-air sport.' . . . There are short accounts of various days after elephants in Ceylon; tigers, pigs and black-buck in India; ibex in the King of Italy's famous preserve; roe-deer in Silesia; and chamois in the forest of Bregenz. . . . To the English reader no part of the book will prove more entertaining than the two short chapters on grouse. Here the manners and customs of a Scottish castle, the gardenias for the button-hole, and the costumes of the women are touched on with amusing freshness."—Spec

"A direct, unaffected style and a spirit of true, sportsmanship characterize these 'unadorned little sketches.'"

+ A L A Bkl 9:255 F '13

"These sketches are translated by Mr. J. E. Hodder Williams satisfactorily, and make pleasant reading. The illustrations deserve praise, and are mounted on board securely bound by a strip of cotton in a manner which might with advantage be followed in other books. The type is excellent, and the margins are ample."

+ Ath 1912, 2: 376 O 5 300w

"The few infelicities of expression serious enough to annoy are clearly the work of the translator."

+ — Nation 95: 618 D 26 '12 370w

"The occasional baldness of the English must be naturally attributed to the translator and not to the royal author who, however, describes his exploits with all the zest and simplicity of a schoolboy."

+ — Spec 109: 604 O 19 '12 380w

"Interesting for two reasons. As a modest, direct, but upon the whole too condensed record of hunting experiments in India, Ceylon, and various European forests and wilds, of which many a reader would have been glad to hear more, this book, with its excellent illustrations, some of which appear to be reproduced from photographs by the Crown Princess, is qualified to stand fairly well upon its merits, aside from the special interest of its authorship. As for its reflection of the personality and character of the future German ruler, it is decidedly pleasing."

+ — Springfield Republican p 5 N 28 '12 400w

WILLIAMS, ALICE LAIDLAW. Sunday sup-
 2 pers. 1l *$1 Duffield 12-25580

A book of recipes for the chafing dish with a series of menus for every Sunday night in the year.

+ Ind 74:153 Ja 16 '13 50w

Nation 96:625 Je 19 '13 80w

+ N Y Sun p5 Ja 4 '13 70w

WILLIAMS, ARCHIBALD. How to make things. il *$1.20 Sully & Kleinteich

In this book the author "tells the 'just how' of making many things of interest to the young mechanic, toys, articles of use in the workshop and around the home, etc. His purpose in the preparation of this book has been two-fold, to teach the boy that there is more real fun to be derived from things which are his own handiwork, and to show him how it is possible for him to make articles which to buy ready made might be beyond his means."—Springfield Republican.

"An instructive book. Some of the drawings are unsatisfactory."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:165 D '13

"One of the most complete things of its kind we've seen." M. C. Anderson.

+ Bookm 33:322 N '13 40w

"The directions are so clear that most boys with mechanical bent and possessed of the rudiments of manual training can follow them successfully."

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 9 '13 120w

WILLIAMS, DANIEL R. Odyssey of the Philippine commission. il *$1.75 (2c) McClurg 13-21269

"With the exception of the final chapter, the story here told of the trip of the Philippine commission to Manila, and the fragmentary account of its early work in the islands, are taken almost literally from letters written home at the time. For this reason some of the conclusions reached are doubtless subject to correction when judged by events. It is hoped however, that this fault will be more than offset by the fact that such letters seek to portray a situation in the making, with something of the spontaneity which ever comes from a passing judgment." (Prefatory note) The author was secretary to one of the commissioners.

"The chief value of the volume is in showing how the acquisition of the Philippines struck a contemporary, but the closing chapter, 'Twelve years later,' gives the matured views of the author and shows the great progress made under the American regime."

+ Ind 76:220 O 30 '13 120w

"A book of some historical importance."

+ N Y Sun p4 O 4 '13 130w

"It is all written in an entertaining style, and scattered through the pages are innumerable experiences and observations that, while perhaps of small import in themselves, throw much light upon racial and individual characteristics among the Filipinos and upon conditions in the islands."

+ N Y Times 18:605 N 9 '13 370w

R of Rs 48:635 N '13 50w

WILLIAMS, EDWARD HUNTINGTON. Walled city. il *$1 (4c) Funk 13-10949

A book which "describes with fidelity to detail the every-day life of the prisoner in an institution such as Matteawan. While the narrative shows the inevitable grimness of life behind the 'walls,' it relates humorous incidents sufficient to persuade the reader that this life is not all grey even to the insane, nor is it devoid of cheerful optimism. Considerable information is given concerning the type of insane known as 'paranoiacs.'"—R of Rs

"The popular misconception as to the treatment, environment, and daily life of the inmates of institutions for the criminal insane renders Dr. Williams's new book of particular value."

+ N Y Times 18:464 S 7 '13 650w

R of Rs 48:505 O '13 100w

WILLIAMS, JOHN SHARP. Thomas Jefferson. *$1.50 Columbia univ. press 13-9744

The book contains the lectures delivered by Senator Williams at Columbia university on the Blumenthal foundation. It is "essentially a study of those acts and opinions of the third president of the United States of which we are still feeling the effect, and the personal side of Jefferson's life is therefore entirely omitted, except in so far as his personality has a direct bearing on what he accomplished. . . . The book has no time to waste on Jefferson's boyhood, but plunges directly into an account of the man's effective activity for the cause of American independence. . . . All the emphasis in Mr. Williams's book is laid upon Jefferson's common sense and his devotion to his conception of the rights of man, which, in the last analysis, was but an application of common sense to American conditions." (Springfield Republican)

Ath 1913,2:sup641 N 29 100w

"By the time the last of the three hundred odd pages is reached it is apparent that the author has completed an exceedingly well-balanced analysis of his subject, the permanent influences of Jefferson on American institutions, and that he has accomplished his object better, perhaps, than if he had been at more pains to explore some of those byways toward which he points, without attempting to follow."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '13 1200w

"Rather hastily assembled and popularly written lectures."

+ — Dial 55:214 S 16 '13 470w

"Of more than usual interest."

+ Educ R 46:313 O '13 70w

"We cannot think that John Sharp Williams's lectures will add much to his reputation. There is one redeeming feature, however: the volume is dedicated, with rare delicacy of humor, to 'my wife's mother-in-law.'"

— + Nation 97:60 JI 17 '13 220w

+ N Y Times 18:345 Je 8 '13 700w

"More valuable to the special student than interesting to the general reader."

+ Outlook 104:531 JI 5 '13 20w

"Mr. Williams has produced a work of solid historical value, without literary pretensions, it is true, but readable in the extreme and unusually well worth the reading. Furthermore, he has made his point convincingly."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 14 '13 1600w

WILLIAMS, MARTHA MCCULLOCH. Harper's household handbook. *$1 (3c) Harper 13-5090

A book described on its title page as "A guide to easy ways of doing woman's work." It is filled with useful suggestions as to the best ways of doing everyday tasks and directions for the meeting of emergencies. The chapter headings are: Wash-day wisdom, nursing and sick-room; Inside a room; Equipment and renovators; China, glass and furniture; Making whole; Making and making over; Remedying spots, stains and tarnish; Food; Choosing and keeping; House plants, window-boxes, cut flowers; Disinfectants, insects, insecticides; Care of pets; In emergencies.

+ A L A Bkl 10:153 D '13

"To say that it is invaluable is not to say too much about its usefulness."

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '13 80w

"A convenient little volume."

+ Chaut 71:61 Je 21 '13 50w

"It is full of useful suggestions on a multitude of matters that have to be dealt with every day."

+ N Y Sun p4 Mr 15 '13 70w

N Y Times 18:291 My 11 '13 50w

WILLIAMSON, CHARLES NORRIS, and WILLIAMSON, MRS. ALICE MURIEL (LIVINGSTON). Port of adventure. (Eng title, Love pirate) il *$1.35 (1c) Doubleday 13-8761

The meeting of heroine and hero in New York and the journey to California by way of New Orleans form the introduction to the real action of the story which begins with the automobile trip thru California. She is the Princess di Sereno, traveling thru America as Mrs. May.

WILLIAMSON, C. N. and A. M.—Continued. He, the hero, is Nick Hilliard, a native Californian who has made money in oil. Their romance is interrupted by the machinations of two particularly cat-like women but it arrives at its happy-end, nevertheless.

"The book is brightly written, and the dialogue provides some amusing Americanisms; but the descriptions of scenery familiar in this type of book are occasionally tedious."

+ — Ath 1913,1:282 Mr 8 100w

"It is safe to say that 'The port of adventure,' with its romantic exaggeration and its excesses of sentiment will be as cordially received as was 'The lightning conductor,' 'My friend the chauffeur,' or any one of the twenty other novels that have followed them at frequent intervals." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p24 Ap 30 '13 270w

"There seems little need for the disreputable Italian husband who practices aviation out of sight or for the sharp tongued, disagreeable British authoress. The two lovers might just as well have motored through California undisturbed."

— N Y Sun p3 Ap 26 '13 170w

"Their word pictures of southern California, San Francisco, the Yosemite valley, the big trees, are eloquent and poetic, glowing with color, full of imagery, and remarkably faithful to the originals. They are exactly such accounts of the beauties of their state as the people of California read with keenest satisfaction and enjoyment, while former tourists through that region will find in them warmth enough to relight the fires of their own memories. The Williamsons ought to have remembered, when they came to the climax of their love story, the old adage about the brevity of the step between the sublime and the ridiculous, and realized that the space is no greater between the romantic and the ridiculous."

+ — N Y Times 18:286 My 11 '13 500w

"To be perfectly frank, we like the setting better than the story. The latter is melodramatic and not convincing."

+ — Outlook 104:118 My 17 '13 70w

"A pleasant story."

+ Spec 110:663 Ap 19 '13 30w

"The reader will have a good word for it with the closing of the book."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 28 '13 200w

WILLIAMSON, MARGARET. John and Betty's² Scotch history visit. il $1.25 (2c) Lothrop 12-21159

In an earlier story by the author, John and Betty, two American children, make a visit to England and learn much of English history. In the present story they are taken on a like journey thru Scotland. After witnessing the coronation of George V in London they start for the highlands in company with two young English friends and their mother.

"Told in an interesting, vivacious manner."

+ A L A Bkl 9:216 Ja '13 ✖

"A happy mixture of travel, history and story." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:582 Ja '13 20w

"One of those ambitious attempts to sugar-coat an historical pill, but we are of the opinion that it is much easier to study out of a real study book than to be given such a sugar-coated nothing as this." M. J. Moses.

— Ind 73:1366 D 12 '12 50w

"The more cumbersome mechanism of the Rollo stories is employed."

— N Y Sun p10 N 30 '12 30w

WILLSIE, MRS. HONORÉ MCCUE. Heart of¹¹ the desert (Kut-le of the desert). il $1.25 (2c) Stokes 13-19325

A story in which "race antagonism overcome by the power of love furnishes the theme and the Arizona desert the background. . . . A delicately reared girl of the East, semi-invalid and generally helpless, is kidnapped by a full blood Apache, who is likewise a Yale graduate and engineer on a big irrigation ditch. Pursuit by her friends, one of whom is a long-time lover, follows. . . . The happy ending is anticipated long before the story is finished. The Indian proves quite the perfect gentleman, with a white man's heart under his red skin, and succeeds in winning his captive's admiration, and finally her love during their wild flight, to say nothing of restoring her to perfect health through enforced living in the open."

— Springfield Republican

"The author has attempted to paint the lure of the American desert with the fascination which attaches to the portrayal of the African desert in 'The garden of Allah.' In a part she has succeeded, for her picture of nature does appeal."

+ — Boston Transcript p24 O 22 '13 270w

"A book with which one may pass a few idle hours very agreeably, and not unprofitably."

+ N Y Times 18:503 S 28 '13 230w

R of Rs 48:504 O '13 70w

"It is a readable if not wholly convincing tale, and it is quite evident that the author has herself been under the spell of the desert, for her descriptions ring true."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 O 9 '13 200w

WILLSON, BECKLES. Quebec: the Laurentian¹² province. il $3 Stokes (Eng ed 13-12592)

"Perhaps the most important characteristic of this book on Quebec is the sympathetic and impartial examination of the relations of the English and French elements in the province, or the Quebecers and Quebecois, as the author calls them. . . . The agricultural and commercial possibilities of the province are well brought out, while its history and literature are treated fully and sympathetically."—Ath

"A clear, concise, enthusiastic account."

+ A L A Bkl 10:113 N '13

+ Ath 1913,1:217 F 22 80w

"A most delightful volume." E: Salmon.

+ Sat R 115:480 Ap 19 '13 1450w

WILM, EMIL CARL. Problem of religion.² $1.25 (3c) Pilgrim press 12-25969

In this work the author has attempted "to trace out . . . the natural implications of our common and our scientific experience with a view to seeing what justification could be given for a religious conception of the world, independently of revelation, or of any other cabalistic sources of religious truth." (Preface) After an introductory chapter in which he analyzes the present condition of religious unrest the author considers: The nature of religion and its relation to philosophy; Materialism and idealism; The scientific view of nature; The value of life; The shadow of death; Religion and morality; Religion of the future.

Reviewed by D. C. Macintosh.

+ — Am J Theol 17:310 Ap '13 900w

"The book is the outcome of wide reading and clear thinking and reveals an attractive individuality of expression."

+ Ind 74:320 F 6 '13 50w

"Particularly interesting is the chapter in which he discusses the question, Is mankind progressing in morality?—while his defense of optimism as a rational philosophy is lucid, well reasoned and inspiring."

+ N Y Times 17:730 D 1 '12 150w

"An exceedingly interesting and clear presentation of a difficult subject."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 27 '13 500w

WILSON, H. MACLEAN, and CALVERT,¹² HARRY THORNTON. Text-book on trade waste waters. il $5 Lippincott (Eng ed 13-15595)

"The authors state that their object has been to present in 'concise form material which has been gathered in many years' experience of the working of the Rivers pollutions acts, and that they have sought to do this by so describing trade processes 'as to show the origin and nature of polluting waste liquids' and 'the means which have been found useful in their purification. After the historical and legal review . . . the authors take up in succession wastes from the coal trade, gas manufacture, brewing and distilling industries, leather, paper, textile and miscellaneous trades. . . . Bibliographies at the end of each chapter are valuable features of the volume.'—Engin N

"The best book on the subject so far."

+ A L A Bkl 10:113 N '13

"The value of the book would have been increased had more been given in the way of experiment and practice elsewhere, and had there been more in the nature of general summary and conclusions."

+ — Engin N 70:788 O 16 '13 350w

"For students of waste-disposal processes, officials and others who have to do with river cleaning and sewage-disposal problems the book can be highly recommended. It is written clearly and what it lacks in detail is made up by its breadth of view and its continual suggestiveness, which make it valuable to the experienced designing engineer or operator."

+ Engin Rec 68:306 S 13 '13 520w

"The authors are to be congratulated upon having produced a work which was urgently required, and will be as useful to the manufacturers as to sanitary authorities and their officials."

+ Nature 92:91 S 25 '13 520w

WILSON, HARRY LEON. Bunker Bean. II
2 *$1.25 (2c) Doubleday 13-1150

This is a story that might be called a burlesque or might be called a farce if, in reading it, one were not overcome with the suspicion that it may be a very human story after all. Its hero, Bunker Bean, does a number of startling and unusual things, one of them being the purchase of an Egyptian mummy supposed to have been himself in one of his previous incarnations. Indeed there are moments when the reader is inclined to feel with his employer and prospective father-in-law that he isn't sure "how many kinds of a perfectly swear-word fool he is." It is with relief that one sees that modern and wholly capable young woman, Chubbins, known here as "the flapper," take him in charge.

"There are certain things in this fantastic book that may be honestly commended, in spite of its obvious absurdities and its somewhat forced humour. In the first place, Mr. Wilson has a rather big thought to express, a theme which, if by no means new, he has at last found a new way of expressing: 'As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.' The chief trouble is that the figures in the story are too grotesque, too suggestive of comic valentines, to be taken seriously." F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 37:79 Mr '13 1350w

"This is an entertaining novel, full of clever conversations, ridiculous situations and witty character sketches. These are indescribable and must be found by the reader, who will enjoy himself hugely, and rejoice in having read one of the season's best bits of light fiction."

+ Ind 75:212 J1 24 '13 650w

"Hidden under the boisterous fun, which is often tiresome, are a story that is serious enough, an original and fanciful idea that is carried out artistically and shrewd and accurate observation of life. The chief objection we find to it, though, is that the buffoonery disguises unusually fine work."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Ja 25 '13 300w

"A tale so human, so funny, so irresistible, that it is difficult to do justice to it except by harsh comparison. For 'Bunker Bean,' a light and purposeless and cheery tale for an hour's amusement, is written with a skill, observation, and honest character analysis that our 'light fiction' usually lacks. 'Bunker Bean' is clever, spontaneous, inimitable; its slight plot is original; its love story is delightful; its conversation is joyously real; its merry philosophy is altogether sound. Without a hint of a purpose or a problem or a 'serious consideration' 'Bunker Bean' is worth reading; it is a slight piece of work, granted—but it is well done."

+ N Y Times 18:48 F 2 '13 270w

WILSON, JOHN FLEMING. Tad Sheldon, boy
10 scout. II *$1 (2c) Sturgis & Walton 13-12495

This is a group of stories well adapted to meet the taste of boys of about twelve years. Tad Sheldon is a scout leader, a manly, courageous lad, and the nine stories that make up the volume's contents all relate adventures of himself and members of his patrol. The Pacific coast region furnishes the scene of the stories.

"The tone is good and the stories read well."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:76 O '13

WILSON, PHILIP. Beginnings of modern Ireland. *$3.25 (3½c) Norman, Remington & co. A13-1879

A story, drawn from first hand sources, of the conquest of Ireland during the reign of Henry VIII and his three successors. The narrative is generously interspersed with extracts from official and other contemporary documents which aid the reader in forming independent judgments. Chapters: Lordship of Ireland; Geraldine revolt; Irish church; Geraldine league; Kingdom of Ireland; Reformation; Plantation of Leix and Offaly.

"A few corrections might be made, but we have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Wilson's book is one of great value—a fair and judicial statement of the facts of the English re-conquest of Ireland."

+ — Ath 1912,2:468 O 26 800w

"The entire work should form a valued addition upon the subject of Ireland."

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 25 '13 220w

"His style is clear and pointed, and the introduction, in which he expatiates on Irish history at large, puts an individual point of view with spirit. Perhaps one may detect a hint of the slightly superior attitude of the British museum student."

+ Sat R 115:145 F 1 '13 1000w

WILSON, THEODORE PERCIVAL CAMERON.
11 Friendly enemy. *$1.25 Putnam (Eng ed 13-4355)

"The majority of the scenes are in the East end of London, whose insistent 'call' young Bill Wilder hears while on board the ship Grace of God, in Brixham harbor, whither he had been sent by the superintendent of an East end boys' club, in order to give the boy 'a chance.' Back to London Bill goes eagerly, and once more is absorbed into the hideous maelstrom of slum life. But his experience at Brixham has unconsciously changed his view. London is not the same to this gamin, into whose heart at birth had been fused imagination and its insatiable unrest. The book is an extraordinarily keen study of individuality, of heredity and environment and of that irresistible force, which men call fate, destiny, Providence and circumstance, as their belief or unbelief dictates. The descriptions of life in the East end are grimly realistic."—Boston Transcript

Ath 1913,1:98 Ja 25 50w

"It would seem incredible that anyone could read this dramatic story unmoved, so pulsing with life is it—that life of the slums which social workers of different beliefs are striving in their different ways to uplift."

+ Boston Transcript p18 Ag 13 '13 370w

"The story is full of tender interest, pathos and humor."

+ N Y Sun p15 Je 14 '13 50w

"This story of Bill Wilder and his friends and foes does arrest attention, despite its obvious defects. 'The friendly enemy' is a novel which will stimulate thought, the more perhaps because its writer simply points out the truths he has seen, points them out with vigor and earnestness, and leaves the reader to draw his own conclusions." L. M. F.

WILSON, T. P. C.—Continued.

+ — N Y Times 18:472 S 14 '13 630w

WILSON, WARREN HUGH. Evolution of the country community. *$1.25 (2½c) Pilgrim press 13-1085

The author, who terms this book "a study in religious sociology," expresses in it his belief that the country church must be a factor in the social uplift of a country community. "Although he believes that a country church should be inspirational he makes clear the fact that the church cannot succeed unless it enters into the whole life of the farm, economic and otherwise. . . . Dr. Wilson follows Professor Ross of Purdue in his definition of the four types of farmers—the pioneer, the land farmer, the exploiter, and the husbandman. The writer very happily shows that in many communities the evolution has proceeded so irregularly that all the four types of farmers are now living side by side, and that their four sides may be contending for mastery." (Survey)

"This volume should appear in any select list of books on real rural problems." C. R. Henderson.

+ Am J Soc 19:101 Jl '13 150w

+ A L A Bkl 9:395 My '13 +

Bib World 42:63 Jl '13 200w

N Y Times 18:117 Mr 2 '13 230w

"A book that should be in the library of every country minister, every country teacher, every man or woman who is in any degree a leader in country life."

+ Outlook 104:306 Je 7 '13 250w

"As a clear and well-proportioned statement, characterized by ample knowledge, careful statement and good temper, the book is valuable." W. D. Foster.

+ Survey 30:145 Ap 26 '13 600w

WILSON, WOODROW. Mere literature. *$5 Houghton

"The essays are 'Mere literature,' first published in the 'Atlantic' in 1893; 'The author himself,' which had already appeared in the same magazine; and 'On an author's choice of company,' published in the 'Century' in 1896. The edition is limited to 550 copies. The book is a tall, thin octavo, printed on hand-made paper, and bound uncut in dark paper boards, with cloth back and gold title—a fittingly handsome form."—Nation

"They form an addition to the Riverside press editions of notable writings."

+ Lit D 46:1142 My 17 '13 100w

Nation 96:395 Ap 17 '13 80w

"If the remarkable career of the author gives to the essays a peculiar interest, they have also an intrinsic interest which quite justifies their reproduction in the handsome form in which the Houghton Mifflin company present them."

+ N Y Times 18:245 Ap 27 '13 1000w

"The essays are 'mere literature,' dealing in a genial, penetrating, thought-provoking way with conditions in the republic of letters."

+ Outlook 104:37 My 3 '13 400w

WILSON, WOODROW. New freedom; a call for the emancipation of the generous energies of a people. *$1 Doubleday 13-3076

This is a collection of the "more suggestive portions" of many campaign speeches "put together in their right sequence" by Mr. W. B. Hale. "The first half of the volume, roughly, is made up of what may be termed the philosophy, the theory of Mr. Wilson with regard to the public life of his country. The second includes more of definite discussion of measures proposed, or opposed, in the canvass of last year." (N Y Times)

A L A Bkl 9:396 My '13

"This is a book which would be worth reading even if it were not the work of the President of the United States." B. M. Anderson, jr.

+ Ann Am Acad 49:257 S '13 620w

"The addresses reveal a breadth and depth, an absence of party spirit as well as invective, which lift them far above the average of political oratory in this country."

+ Ath 1913,1:213 F 22 950w

"With all his scholarship and restraint, both of which stamp these speeches, President Wilson as he appears in the addresses blends a portion of the spirit of the Hebrew prophets with that of Abraham Lincoln."

+ Dial 54:466 Je 1 '13 550w

Ind 74:591 Mr 13 '13 300w

"It is not easy clearly to characterize the quality of these speeches. Perhaps naïveté is the word that best fits it. They are the expression of a mind deeply moved by facts and conditions quite novel to it and imperatively demanding treatment which it is not quite prepared to give."

+ — N Y Times 18:105 Mr 2 '13 900w

"The series of campaign speeches are quite readable, for they are pitched in a low, persuasive, rational key, very different from the screech-note of most American politicians." A. A. Baumann.

+ Sat R 115:515 Ap 26 '13 1450w

"The 'easy-going' sentences turn out to be good, sound, hard-bitten English with a grateful use of metaphor. There is nothing from the first page to the last that a man of letters might not be content to have written, even though he had had leisure to co-ordinate his arguments and turn his phrases."

+ Spec 110:313 F 22 '13 1650w

"It is a brilliantly lucid, good-tempered and yet vigorous exposition of the economic and political changes which have resulted from the evolution of modern industrial society, and particularly through the creation as a business instrument of the corporation or trust, displacing the individual or partnership and the more direct relations possible in other days. He who reads 'The new freedom' without gaining from it a sense at least of the task of leadership which confronts Gov. Wilson, will read it to indifferent purpose."

+ Springfield Republican p5 F 27 '13 900w

"Inspiring little volume."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 20w

WINDHAM, WILLIAM. Windham papers; with an introd. by the Earl of Rosebery. 2v *$10 (5c) Small (Eng ed 13-10062)

The "Windham papers" presented here are selected from the collection in the British museum. William Windham, their author, a member of Pitt's first cabinet, is "one of the few English statesmen of the late eighteenth century whose life should appeal to American readers, for his first appearance as a public speaker was at a meeting called to raise a subscription toward the cost of the American war, a project which he stoutly opposed. His other claims on the notice of the general reader include the fact that he was at Eton with Fox, was the intimate friend and pupil of Burke, and had such close relations with Dr. Johnson that he was one of the few who watched by his deathbed to the last." (Boston Transcript)

"The Windham papers' not only give an excellent picture of William Windham but also throw new light on the relations between England and France during the French revolution."

+ Am Hist R 18:650 Ap '13 40w

"Somehow, we lay down these volumes with the feeling that, in spite of Lord Rosebery's illuminating Introduction, there is something wanting. We should have liked a more liberal citation of Windham's strangely introspective Diary published in 1866, particularly during his later years; some passages from his speeches; and, above all, the opinions of his contemporaries like Lord Holland and Miss Burney."

+ — Ath 1913,1:85 Ja 25 1550w

Reviewed by H: C. Shelley.

Boston Transcript p5 F 1 '13 370w

+ Dial 55:311 O 16 '13 470w

"Of the value of the collection there can be no doubt. It presents the most complete account now obtainable of a man of singular interest." J. H. Rose.

+ Eng Hist R 28:577 J1 '13 480w

"We can not speak too highly of the introduction. It is free from exaggeration and sets forth with masterly taste a character and reputation which still survive after the lapse of a hundred years of change and development in English society and politics."

+ Lit D 46:1134 My 17 '13 470w

+ Nation 97:237 S 11 '13 1400w

+ N Y Times 18:305 My 18 '13 1350w

+ Outlook 104:262 My 31 '13 350w

"These two stout volumes of his correspondence are of real value for the fresh light they throw on English party politics, and on English life generally, a hundred years ago; and they especially appeal to us because they include several letters of Canning to Windham. 'The Windham papers' were indeed far better worth publishing than ninety per cent. of the works, serious and flippant, that are brought out to-day."

+ Sat R 115:114 Ja 25 '13 1250w

"The 'Windham letters' will be of more interest to the student than to the seeker of amusement, for they are in truth rather dull and disjointed. The letters from Burke on public affairs are among the best in these volumes. There are many excellent letters from Malone, and George III, and Mrs. Crowe, but to our mind the best are from Cobbett, whose muscular English is refreshing among more formal styles."

+ Spec 110:448 Mr 15 '13 1400w

WING, HENRY HIRAM. Milk and its products. (Rural science ser.) fl $1.50 (1½c)
Macmillan 13-1668

A new edition of a work published in 1897. "In addition to making such changes as are necessary to bring the body of the work up-to-date, it has seemed well to add chapters on dairy cattle and the production of milk, on certified milk, and on ice-cream manufacture. Brief directions for simple bacteriological determinations have also been added." (Preface to new ed.)

+ A L A Bkl 9:356 Ap '13

"The book is so nearly complete that it is difficult to recall any practical thing relating to the production of milk or the productions of milk that is not concisely considered in this excellent work. The work is a practical and reliable handbook for dairymen and dairy students."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 21 '13 220w

"Brings the mass of valuable information about that staple food up to date."

+ Ind 74:420 F 20 '13 40w

R of Rs 48:379 S '13 50w

WINGFIELD-STRATFORD, ESMÉ C. History of English patriotism. 2v il $7.50 Lane

In this work the author "endeavors to show how everything of value that nations in general, and the English nation in particular, have at any time achieved 'has been the direct outcome of the common feeling upon which patriotism is built.' In two bulky illustrated volumes this author passes in review the great fervid moments of British history, such as the defeat of the Armada and the enthusiasm against Napoleon, and points out that only at such times do Shakespeares and Turners emerge."—R of Rs

"Mr. Wingfield-Stratford has read widely, and in unexpected places, though possibly not very deeply. Except for a tendency to wander off into economic history, he keeps himself fairly well in hand. In a word, he is to be heartily congratulated. Twenty years hence he may write a wiser book than this, but it will not be so brilliant."

+ — Ath 1913,1:422 Ap 19 420w

"Mr. Wingfield-Stratford's achievement is comparable with that of Lecky, for his book is largely planned, deals with the inner life of a people, marshals a bewildering array of facts, and bears eloquent testimony to an unusually wide and multifarious course of reading. It is, in short, one of those meaty books which appear only at long intervals." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 19 '13 970w

"Any one who cares to read the criticisms passed by an independent mind on a large number of Englishmen (and some foreigners) of the most various kinds will find these volumes stimulating and suggestive." R.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:825 O '13 330w

"The author writes with point and enthusiasm. He is no narrow islander, but has broad views, is philanthropic and statesmanlike. His judgments are likely to be acceptable to, and accepted by, citizens of many nations."

+ Lit D 47:880 N 8 '13 350w

"Some of the difficulties of writing a history of patriotism are fully acknowledged by Mr. Wingfield-Stratford. But such is the inspiration of his subject that he passes lightly over them and plunges into the midst of his programme without much hesitation, and it may be said truthfully that something of his own enthusiasm takes possession of the reader. Not infrequently so strong are his partisan prejudices that the work sinks to the level of a Primrose league pamphlet." W: L. Bevan.

+ — — N Y Times 18:715 N 30 '13 1750w

"Mr. Wingfield-Stratford writes very entertainingly and makes out a good argument for his thesis."

+ R of Rs 48:630 N '13 100w

"There is perhaps a little too much disposition to treat minor symptoms as of too great importance."

+ — Sat R 115:685 My 31 '13 1500w

WINSTANLEY, DENYS ARTHUR. Lord Chatham and the Whig opposition. $2.25 Putnam A13-826

"The section of eighteenth-century political history which Mr. Winstanley has chosen for his monograph is one of the romances of our constitutional chronicle, and as important as it is interesting. It stretches, roughly speaking, from July 1766 to the summer of 1771, from the formation of Grafton's ministry, with Chatham in command, to Lord North's most conclusive Parliamentary victory. It saw the triumph of 'personal' government and the rout of the Whig devotees of the party system." (Spec) His "main thesis . . . is the need for a strong party connexion." (Eng Hist R)

"A word of praise is due the author's estimates of public men. Though he sometimes needlessly repeats himself, his judgment of his characters is wonderfully well balanced, and even Townshend's behavior receives a measure of justification." T. W. Riker.

+ — Am Hist R 19:149 O '13 550w

"A very careful and well-informed study of an intricate period of English history. Admirable though Mr. Winstanley's book is, we wish that he had thrown his eye further back over English history. To the hasty reader he may convey the idea that Chatham's construction of a ministry on the principle of 'men and not measures' was a new and startling thing."

+ — Ath 1912,2:514 N 2 700w

WINSTANLEY, DENYS ARTHUR—Continued.

"Mr. Winstanley has his point of view, which he not only maintains with plausibility, but with such fairness and such abundant references, that any one disagreeing with him can but gain from reading him. No history which is alive, as his is, can fail to awake contention, and for that very reason becomes stimulating." Pasil Williams.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:168 Ja '13 1050w

"Mr. Winstanley's book is no mere réchauffé of other men's work. He has examined afresh the original authorities with diligence and insight; more particularly he utilises as it had not been utilised before the Newcastle correspondence in the British museum and other manuscript sources. And he has built up a narrative of great interest and historical value."

+ Sat R 116:178 Ag 9 '13 1150w

"Mr. Winstanley has used his mss. authorities judiciously and skilfully, and he steers his way with ease among the tortuous intrigues of the period. He is a spirited and graceful writer, and we shall welcome from him further studies in eighteenth-century politics. Our only criticism is that he seems to overstate occasionally the importance of the issues at stake. Mr. Winstanley's book is well worth the study of everyone who cares to watch the slow and difficult growth of our constitutional forms."

+ — Spec 109:1103 D 28 '12 1850w

WINTER, IRVAH LESTER. Public speaking; principles and practice. *$2 (2½c) Macmillan 12-22921

Descriptive note in December, 1912.

"An excellent text."

+ A L A Bkl 9:256 F '13 *

Ath 1912,2:730 D 14 100w

"It will be seen that here is a coherent and comprehensive scheme, affording a vehicle for every department of speaking except the technically dramatic. The selections, too, are for the most part substantial, unhackneyed and of literary merit." Algernon Tassin.

+ Educ R 45:103 Ja '13 480w

+ Ind 75:332 Ag 7 '13 50w

Nation 96:503 My 15 '13 80w

"If there is any virtue in printed directions, it would add greatly to the general happiness if this book were to be studied by some thousands of lecturers, preachers, politicians, statesmen, and other varieties of men and women who speak from public platforms."

+ N Y Times 17:638 N 3 '12 170w

WINTER, NEVIN OTTO. Poland of to-day and yesterday. il *$3 Page 13-21031

The author opens his book with a survey of the Polish history. "The rest of the book describes the notable places in what was once Poland—Posen and the German share, Lemberg and the Austrian portion, Warsaw and Russian Poland, Cracow and so forth, all illustrated with fine photographs. There are chapters on the Polish Jew and on the Poles in America." (N Y Sun)

"A capital book and very informing."

+ Boston Transcript p11 D 4 '13 400w

"Some suggestion for a method of pronouncing the many proper names the author brings in would improve the book."

+ — N Y Sun p4 O 25 '13 130w

"The appendices are interesting and valuable, and the book as a whole is a worthy addition to Mr. Winter's list of publications."

+ — Outlook 105:599 N 15 '13 60w

WINTER, NEVIN OTTO. Russian empire of to-day and yesterday. il *$3 Page 13-7791

This volume includes "accounts of the physical charms, the past and present history, the people, customs, and development of the Russian country and inhabitants. A map, profuse illustrations, and a careful and complete analysis of all desirable details give instructive as well as pleasurable reading."—Lit D

"The most comprehensive of recent books on Russia, but it lacks the literary quality and deep insight of Baring's 'Russian people.'"

+ — A L A Bkl 10:66 O '13

"A sound, carefully written book like this, giving a critical study of the country and its peoples, with a review of its history and a survey of its social, political, religious and economic conditions, has a distinct value."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 2 '13 400w

"His style shows a woeful lack of training. The description is quite devoid of enthusiasm and as a rule is most matter-of-fact. Yet it must be conceded that Mr. Winter has a fairly good sense of proportion, and has well marshaled his masses of facts. He has travelled widely in European Russia, and knows well the country as it appears to-day." C. S. North-up.

+ — — Dial 55:204 S 16 '13 350w

"Exhaustive and comprehensive work."

+ Lit D 47:586 O 4 '13 230w

"This seems a well-balanced book. It is disappointing, perhaps, in not impressing the reader with more of a note of authority and in not saying the last word concerning many a Russian problem. But we welcome its avoidance of the over-eulogistic text of certain books on Russia, as well as the over-pessimistic text of others."

+ — Outlook 104:345 Je 14 '13 130w

"The reader who seeks what passes as a 'general knowledge' of Russia will find Mr. Winter's book a convenient source of information. But the book cannot be compared in literary quality, clearness of analysis, or in appeal to the serious reader, with 'The Russian people,' by Maurice Baring."

+ — Springfield Republican p5 My 1 '13 430w

WINTER, WILLIAM. Tyrone Power. il *$1.25 13-7947

This is the first volume of the "Lives of the players" series. "Mr. Winter follows Mr. Power from year to year of his career, up to the actor's withdrawal from William Faversham's company a few months ago." (Springfield Republican) He "predicts that this player will soon be recognized as one of the foremost interpreters of the classic drama upon the English-speaking stage." (Nation)

"It has only a limited appeal."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:31 S '13

"The book is well written."

+ Ind 74:1401 Je 19 '13 50w

Nation 96:450 My 1 '13 280w

+ N Y Times 18:476 S 14 '13 30w

"In the main one cannot but conclude that Mr. Power, as actor and man, was worthy of so sympathetic and entertaining a study. The book will repay reading for all classes of playgoers."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 29 '13 500w

WINTER, WILLIAM. Wallet of time. 2v il *$10 13-21466

A book of combined theatrical reminiscences and dramatic criticisms. "In it Mr. Winter surveys the entire period of American action from the fifties of the nineteenth century through the first decade of the twentieth century; that is, from his own boyhood till he had passed his seventieth year. His dramatic personae reach from the elder Booth, the elder Wallack, John Brougham, Edwin Forrest, George Holland and Charlotte Cushman to Mary Anderson, E. H. Sothern, Julia Marlowe, Mrs. Fiske and David Warfield." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 10: 153 D '13

"No more complete and comprehensive record of its kind has ever been prepared, and no record of the stage has ever come from a more practical hand, from a more observant eye, or a more keenly critical mind. Although Mr. Winter has written many books, this is unquestionably his magnum opus." E. F. E.

+ + Boston Transcript p7 O 8 '13 1000w

"Mr. Winter's well-known heartiness of commendation for what he approves, and uncompromising censure for what he disapproves, are to be met with in abundance in his comprehensive 'Wallet.'" P. F. Bicknell.

+ Dial 55:350 N 1 '13 1350w

"Not every reader will agree with all of Mr. Winter's estimates of the players whom he celebrates, but even those who differ from him will admire the analytical skill and descriptive power with which he supports his opinions. And his intimate acquaintance with the theatrical world enables him to flavor his biographies with the attractive spice of personal reminiscence."

+ Nation 97:417 O 30 '13 1300w

"There are moreover not only criticism and biography in 'The wallet of time.' Comment is there in abundance, comment of the emphatic and caustic kind of which the author is a master. So unusual is its style to-day that it comes with the freshness and elegance of the eighteenth century satirists."

+ N Y Sun p23 O 11 '13 2000w

"William Winter's most important contribution to the history of the stage."

+ N Y Times 18:476 S 14 '13 60w

"Mr. Winter's characteristically incisive style, makes 'The wallet of time' as fascinating as a bundle of yellowed letters from old friends. The work contains a remarkable series of illustrations made from rare old prints and photographs, most of them from Mr. Winter's own collection."

+ N Y Times 18:579 O 26 '13 800w

"Mr. Winter is extremely happy in painting portraits."

+ Outlook 105:597 N 15 '13 570w

WINTON, GEORGE BEVERLY. Mexico today. 12 il 50c Missionary educ. movement 13-16826

"A compact volume of information about Mexican history and the social, political, and religious conditions in Mexico to-day, with emphasis, as is not unnatural, on the missionary interests and the attempt to carry on a Protestant movement in Mexico." (Outlook) "Chapter headings are: The country and people; Political evolution; Religions, ancient and modern; Social and moral inheritances; The intellectual awakening during the nineteenth century; The protestant movement." (Bib World)

"No one who wishes to understand economic, political, and religious problems in Mexico can afford to neglect this book."

+ Bib World 42:249 O '13 500w

+ Outlook 104:874 Ag 16 '13 60w

WISE, BERNHARD RINGROSE. Making of 12 the Australian commonwealth, 1883-1900. $2.50 Longmans

"This book is, as the preface states, a 'record by an eyewitness of the making of the commonwealth during the critical period from 1883 to 1900.' It is mainly a record of the progress and final triumph of the federation movement in the mother state of New South Wales, 'the pivotal colony of the Australian group,' as the author terms it. The struggle in Victoria and in Tasmania is relegated to appendices. The real battle of Australian federation was fought in New South Wales, which had stood aloof from the Federal council of Australasia. Mr. Wise has, therefore, rightly concentrated attention upon the ebb and flow of the movement in this one state."—Spec

"Students of history will be interested in observing the same forces at work in producing the United States of Australia as were effective in giving rise to the United States of America."

+ N Y Times 18:627 N 16 '13 330w

"Mr. Wise writes with the advantage of having been behind the scenes in some of the negotiations. Even with this advantage it can hardly be said that he adds very much to what is already known."

+ — Sat R 116:562 N 1 '13 180w

"The merit of the book—and it is a high merit—is that the author has combined intimate personal knowledge with, it need hardly be said of Mr. Wise, great literary ability. He has made a story which is well worth telling, but which might easily be at once confusing and dull, very clear and very interesting. On the other hand, he is too much concerned with pointing out and emphasizing the inconsistencies of the present distinguished High commissioner of the commonwealth."

+ — Spec 111:sup792 N 15 '13 1600w

WITHERS, HARTLEY. Money-changing. $*1.75 10 Dutton 13-9235

"Mr. Withers calls his present volume an introduction to foreign exchange, and an introduction it is in the sense that it does not go as minutely into the practice of the subject as a work like Mr. Clare's, or into the theory as Lord Goschen's classic treatise. But for the ordinary man he sheds a welcome light upon the work of what the author calls 'the unconscious practical jokers who have in the course of years composed the medley of confusion represented by the table of exchanges.' Better still, he correlates city practice with fundamental economic laws. He shows how it is all based upon the fact that international trade is an exchange of goods and services between the different peoples of the world. The vagaries of exchange rates may have many occult subsidiary causes, but they all can be reduced in the last resort to the law of supply and demand."—Spec

"While 'Money-changing' is a well-executed and entirely praiseworthy effort to give the exchanges a popular and not over-lengthy explanation, it seems to the reviewer its claims to the first attention of the student are not quite so good as those of the books of Clare and Escher." A. C. Whitaker.

+ — Am Econ R 3:940 D '13 570w

"It is clear, devoid of puzzling technicalities, and at times even amusing. Bagehot himself could not have written a plainer exposition."

+ Ath 1913,1:403 Ap 12 60w

"Sound economic training and shrewd common-sense enable the author to navigate treacherous seas with ease, and to calm the fears of timid souls. The chief merit of the work is that it makes it easier for us to recognize landmarks when we encounter them in the future."

+ Nation 97:291 S 25 '13 280w

"The book is very readable; it should clear up confused ideas in the mind of the general public, as well as instruct the student of economics."

+ N Y Sun p5 My 31 '13 70w

"An excellent exposition."

+ N Y Times 18:426 Ag 10 '13 50w

"One of Mr. Withers' most attractive gifts is his humour. It is not that he makes jokes, but that through all his argument there is an undercurrent of pleasantry, which makes it at once agreeable to read and uncommonly effective."

+ Spec 110:972 Je 7 '13 1400w

WITHERSPOON, JOHN. Lectures on moral philosophy; ed. by V. Lansing Collins. $1.50 Princeton univ. press

The first of a series of reprints of works of early American philosophers which are to be issued under the direction of the American philosophical association. John Witherspoon, the author of this first number, one of the signers of the Declaration of independence and president of Princeton, was, as a philosopher, a disciple of the Scotch school of "common sense" philosophy represented by Reid which, thru Witherspoon's influence, supplanted Berkeleyan idealism as the current philosophy in America.

WITHERSPOON, JOHN—Continued.

+ Educ R 44:211 S '12 70w

+ Ind 73:209 J1 25 '12 100w

"The value of the work is of course almost entirely historical. Both the editorial work and the printing are excellent." A. L. Jones.

+ J Philos 10:221 Ap 10 '13 350w

+ Nation 95:489 N 21 '12 500w

WOLLASTON, ALEXANDER FREDERICK

¹ RICHMOND. Pygmies and Papuans; the stone age to-day in Dutch New Guinea; with appendices by W. R. Ogilvie-Grant, A. C. Haddon, and Sidney H. Ray. il *$4 (4½c) Sturgis & Walton (Enged 12-24198)

An account of an expedition sent out in 1910 by the British ornithologists' union to explore the unknown range of Snow mountains in Dutch New Guinea. The Royal geographical society joined in the enterprise so its interests and purposes were wide in range. This book which is, in a sense, the official account of the expedition has to do largely with the primitive people of the land. "The country that we visited was quite unknown to Europeans, and the native races with whom we came in contact were living in so primitive a state that the second title of this book [The stone age to, day in Dutch New Guinea] is literally true." (Preface)

"The book will be interesting to any one enjoying such narratives and has decided value for naturalists, geographers and anthropologists."

+ A L A Bkl 9:396 My '13

"One supreme merit of Mr. Wollaston's book is that it is absolutely frank."

+ Ath 1912, 1: 701 Je 22 1100w

"The enterprise fell by its own weight, and a book a quarter the size and cost would have amply sufficed to tell the uneventful story."

— + Ind 74:419 F 20 '13 200w

Nation 96:548 My 29 '13 1000w

+ Nature 89: 557 Ag 1 '12 620w

WOMER, PARLEY PAUL. Church and the labor conflict. *$1.50 (3c) Macmillan

13-12239

The literature dealing with the church and labor is too apt to be characterized by "a vague and more or less unprofitable generality" according to the author, who hopes in his book to supply the needed concreteness. The subjects taken up in his chapters are: The class character of the labor conflict; Inevitable change foreshadowed; The industrial issue and the church; The beginning of another reformation; What the church should contribute; The question of justice for the wage-earners; Other claims of justice; The protection of the wage-earning woman and child; The question of the open or closed shop; Labor's appeal to violence; The establishment of labor courts; and The new social order and the rise of a true catholic church.

+ A L A Bkl 10:66 O '13

"Mr. Womer, unfortunately, early in his work gives us good cause to doubt the strength of his vision. The author is also rather prone to adopt the attitude of an apologist on behalf of the church. [Yet] we do not wish to deter any from reading a book we consider most useful as a general summing-up of the position under discussion."

+ — Ath 1913, 2:128 Ag 9 650w

"This is one of the sanest and best instructed books called forth by the great social awakening now sweeping through the churches. No minister or thoughtful layman who is looking for light on the social problem as related to religion can fail to receive much benefit from a careful study of its contents."

+ + Bib World 42:123 Ag '13 180w

"The book is timely, as it shows how both laborer and capitalist have ignored altogether too much the fundamental principles of morality in the attempt to solve their problems."

+ Boston Transcript p20 J1 2 '13 420w

"The questions are discussed in a clear and simple style which makes the book suitable for the general reader."

+ J Pol Econ 21:783 O '13 280w

N Y Times 18:451 Ag 31 '13 80w

"A scholarly discussion."

+ Pol Sci Q 28:568 S '13 150w

WOOD, CAROLYN DOUGLASS. Animals: their relation and use to man. il 60c (1c) Ginn 13-846

The chapters of this book present a series of animal lessons, prepared as part of a course in nature study. Finding that children are naturally most interested in the familiar animals, the author has adopted their point of view and has worked from the common domestic animals, the horse, the cow, the dog, to the study of their wild kin. Her study of vertebrates includes lessons on herbivorous animals, carnivorous animals, rodents, birds, reptiles and amphibians, insects and worms are taken up under invertebrate life.

"Will be a useful reference book and interesting for general reading."

+ A L A Bkl 10:76 O '13

"Altogether, the book is well fitted to give intelligent youth a start in nature study."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 22 '13 200w

WOOD, T. MARTIN. George du Maurier, the satirist of the Victorians. il *$2.50 (6½) McBride, Nast & co. 13-25028

This is primarily a study of the phases of du Maurier's artistic career, although it deals also with his life, personality and literary work. The opening chapter reviews the "World of du Maurier." There are many illustrations, all reproductions of du Maurier's work, some being from his private sketch book.

"In dealing with the art and personality of George du Maurier Mr. Martin Wood shows himself as sympathetic towards the one as towards the other; revealing at the same time a critical discrimination in either case which does him infinite credit, and adds considerably to the value of his book. He never allows his sympathy to run riot, as happens in so many works of biography, even avowedly critical biography. Had the arrangement of the material been equally good, the book might have stood as an almost perfect example of biographical criticism."

+ — Ath 1913, 1:440 Ap 19 700w

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 1 '13 700w

"This is not merely a book of reproduction and quotation; it has sound critical value. With true insight Mr. Wood interprets Du Maurier's mental and social attitude as expressed in his art, and analyses the spirit of his pictorial satire, showing its scope and its limitations."

+ Int Studio 49:341 Je '13 370w

"But if Mr. Wood hardly does justice to du Maurier's 'world,' we think his criticism of du Maurier's art is just and valuable."

+ — Spec 110:717 Ap 26 '13 1250w

WOOD, THOMAS BARLOW. Story of a loaf of bread. il *40c (1½c) Putnam 13-5541

In this volume of the "Cambridge manuals of science and literature" the author outlines the various occupations concerned in the making of a loaf of bread beginning with the planting of the wheat. The chapter titles are: Wheat-growing; Marketing; The quality of wheat; The quality of wheat from the miller's point of view; Baking; The composition of bread; Concerning different kinds of bread.

"The book is not without considerable interest and value to the general reader. For the serious student of agricultural economics or industrial and mechanical science, however, it contains little that is new."

+ — Nation 97:441 N 6 '13 170w

WOOD, WALTER. Battleship. il *$4 Dutton
1 (Eng ed 13-1027)

"The present work, being intended for the general reader, contains little of a technical character. It tells of the development and administration of the Royal navy, from its official establishment in 1512; and in the earlier chapters we find interesting descriptions of many noteworthy vessels of the past, to which are added notes of historical interest." (Ath.) "Most of the volume is devoted to the days of oak and canvas, while the period of steam is covered more briefly because most readers know the story of the modern ship. The writer shows how the various ships have been built, how they have been developed, how the men live and fight, and he gives many incidental narratives that are very interesting." (Boston Transcript) Frank H. Mason furnishes 103 illustrations, eight of which are in colors.

"In tracing the evolution of the super-Dreadnought the author, unfortunately, makes little mention of the important strategical causes which led to the adoption of the line-of-battle-ship as a class distinct from her lighter and faster sisters. The chapters dealing with modern naval armaments and machinery contain some interesting data, but the book as a whole lacks coherency."

+ — Ath 1912, 2: 307 S 21 300w

"It is a volume to read for entertainment and to keep for reference, for it is, perhaps, the only volume devoted solely to the battleship." F. L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p26 D 18 '12 950w

"His scholarly and handsome volume supplies a real want. Its pages, are alive with interesting facts, and its many illustrations are appropriate and helpful to an understanding of the subjects discussed."

+ Dial 53: 502 D 16 '12 200w

Ind 75:213 J1 24 '13 370w

"Avowedly prepared for the general public and not for the technical student, this book is well worth reading, for its story of the growth of the battleship from the Henry Grace à Dieu to the Orion, last year's most formidable addition to the British fleet."

+ — Nation 96:135 F 6 '13 400w

"No harm would have resulted if the writer had possessed a larger acquaintance with shipbuilding technology and naval history. The treatment of many matters is characterized by a lack of proportion and of due sense of their relative importance. Speeches in Parliament which can claim little permanent interest are reproduced at considerable length in the form of quotations. Official reports and documents are drawn upon, but not digested. An author may reasonably be expected to take more trouble in dealing with his facts than is displayed again and again in this volume. Still, it is probable that, as it stands, a considerable number of readers, especially boys and girls, may be interested in the volume, and it may serve a useful purpose in leading people to extend their studies of naval history in other directions."

— + Spec 109: 650 O 26 '12 350w

WOOD, WALTER. Children's play and its 12 place in education. *$1.25 Duffield
(Eng ed E13-1682)

A work by an English author on play and its importance in the child's development. Teachers, educational authorities, and playground directors will find it useful. "So-called play theories, past and present, are explained in detail and an appendix deals exclusively with the Montessori system." (Boston Transcript)

"This little book should be in the hands, not only of the teachers, but also of the education officers of England. Mr. Wood discusses the various theories of play, their limitations and advantages, in a lucid manner, and, apart from his knowledge, his sympathy alone would be a sufficient warrant for the book."

+ Ath 1913,1:590 My 31 70w

"One of the most interesting chapters in the book deals with the playground movement in the United States."

+ Boston Transcript p24 S 17 '13 70w

N Y Sun p6 S 27 '13 50w

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 16 '13 320w

WOOD, WILLIAM. In the heart of old Canada.
12 $1.50 Briggs

"The author must have traversed the early history of his beloved Canada with slow steps, for the minutiae of history have come under his notice. In a series of twelve papers, here collected in one volume, he throws light on salient events and episodes of three centuries, a cycle of Canadian history of great romance." — Boston Transcript

"The book is written in an interesting, but rather excited manner."

+ — Ath 1913,2:416 O 18 100w

"The pages given to La Mere Marie, under the title, 'An Ursuline epic,' are perhaps the most interesting in the book." S. A.

+ Boston Transcript p11 D 4 '13 670w

Ind 76:512 D 11 '13 40w

WOODBURN, JAMES ALBERT. Life of Thaddeus Stevens. il *$2.50 Bobbs 13-8104

"Now that the thought of this generation has been turned to the stirring events of [the civil war] period by the observance of many semi-centennial anniversaries, it is fitting that the statesmanship of the period, as well as the military leadership, should be properly recognized. Stevens, in his day, was known as the Great Commoner, and there was much in his career that warranted such a characterization." (R of Rs) "The author is in thorough sympathy with the Reconstruction policy which Thaddeus Stevens represented and did much to force upon the country." (Outlook)

"The great lack is a study of Stevens the tactician. The makeup of the book is unimpressive, and the index is valueless." C. R. Fish.

+ — Am Hist R 19:177 O '13 550w

"Will not replace McCall's 'Life,' but certainly will supplement it."

+ A L A Bkl 10:113 N '13

"Is of interest not only as a biography of one of the most important congressional leaders of his time, but also as a study in American political history during a period of marked congressional dominance."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:479 Ag '13 50w

"It is undoubtedly the best life of Stevens we have, and one in which a picture of the political conflict is sketched with admirable and convincing skill."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '13 550w

"Prof. Woodburn tells the story well."

+ Ind 75:393 Ag 14 '13 750w

"It is not likely that any fuller or better life of Stevens will be written than that which lies before us." W: A. Dunning.

+ Lit D 47:253 Ag 16 '13 1250w

"A work of great merit, valuable because of its admirable biography of a very remarkable and very interesting man, and also because of its intelligent survey of the political history of America in the civil war and reconstruction periods."

+ N Y Times 18:321 My 25 '13 1200w

"This would be a better book if it were a third shorter."

+ — Outlook 104:532 J1 5 '13 130w

R of Rs 48:118 J1 '13 170w

WOODRUFF, CHARLES EVELEIGH, and DANKS, WILLIAM. Memorials of the cathedral and priory of Christ in Canterbury.
il *$5 Dutton 12-29382

"As is well known, the history of Canterbury falls into two great divisions: first, its existence as a Benedictine church and convent from early Saxon days down to the six-

WOODRUFF, C. E., and DANKS, W.—*Cont.*teenth century; second, its conversion by Henry VIII into a secular foundation with dean and canons, which remains the régime of to-day. To accomplish the author's purpose, it has accordingly been necessary to confine the range of view strictly to the church and its custodians, namely, the prior and convent before, and the dean and canons after, the 'reformation' of the sixteenth century. From this aspect it is remarkable how the priors loom and the archbishops dwindle. . . . So in this deeply interesting narrative we read more of Ernulf, Conrad, Eastry, Chillenden, Goldstone, and Sellenge than of even Becket, Stephen, Langton, Rich, Chichele, Cranmer, Pole, Laud, and Juxon."—Dial

"A most valuable and scholarly study. The most exhaustive work on a single church we have."

+ A L A Bkl 9:396 My '13

"The sections in this book to be specially commended are those which deal with the interior life of the monastery, the library, and the early stained-glass windows. The Index is lacking in fullness, and occasionally in accuracy."

+ Ath 1912,2:663 N 30 250w

"Most scholarly and valuable work."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 21 '12 600w

"It would be difficult to conceive of a more exhaustive history of any building. Our two writers have collaborated with marked success." J. R. Smith.

+ Dial 53:494 D 16 '12 480w

"A most readable and entertaining book, as well as a complete history of the metropolitan church of England and a full account of its architectural development."

+ Ind 75:44 J1 3 '13 650w

"The present volume seems to us to be a scholarly and readable account both of the historic events connected with Canterbury and the architectural features of the Gothic structure."

+ Lit D 46:649 Mr 22 '13 550w

"The book is, on the whole, a retelling of the story already known to us from the treatises of Willis and the graphic pages of Dean Stanley. One is inclined to feel that for the general reader the volume ought to have been differently proportioned."

+ Nation 96:420 Ap 24 '13 470w

+ N Y Sun p6 D 7 '12 80w

+ N Y Times 17:799 D 29 '12 80w

"A most valuable and scholarly study of the cathedral and its history."

+ Spec 110:69 Ja 11 '13 80w

WOODS, FREDERICK ADAMS. Influence of monarchs. II *$2 (2c) Macmillan 13-12241

That "heredity is the master key of history" is the author's thesis. "Only very rarely," he says, "has a nation progressed in its political and economic aspects, save under the leadership of a strong sovereign." The monarchs of fourteen European countries from the beginning of the 10th century to the French revolution are the subjects who furnish him with his material for study. The history of every reign or period is matched against the personality of the sovereign.

+ A L A Bkl 10:67 O '13

"With all its good intentions, Dr. Woods's volume comes, we fear, within Mr. Bryce's definition of labours which end by proving the obvious."

+ Ath 1913,2:56 J1 19 600w

"The book is of peculiar interest, since so much of the theorizing of modern times has been in favor of the cause of environment versus heredity." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p20 J1 9 '13 1500w

"This volume has a definite interest for students of biology, of government, and of the new science of historical measurement—historiometry."

+ Chaut 71:203 Ag 2 '13 230w

"The book is instructively interesting throughout."

+ Dial 55:118 Ag 16 '13 370w

"While we cannot wholly endorse the author's method nor accept his conclusions, we strongly advise the historian to read this book."

+ Nation 97:341 O 9 '13 1400w

"The author has built an elaborate and fantastic structure on wholly insufficient foundations."

+ N Y Sun p4 Je 21 '13 130w

N Y Times 18:365 Je 15 '13 250w

N Y Times 18:428 Ag 10 '13 700w

"An interesting review of European history, even if it accomplishes nothing else." C. B. Davenport.

+ N Y Times 18:662 N 30 '13 1350w

"Dr. Woods's volume is a scholarly work. Parts of the book could be read with profit by young students of history, but most of the text is not so popular in style. A particularly interesting feature of the volume is the first of the three appendices, in which the various countries are graded according to the sovereign."

+ Outlook 104:721 J1 26 '13 250w

"A really new contribution to the science of history."

+ R of Rs 48:377 S '13 120w

"An unusual and brilliant book. It would be impossible to do justice to Dr. Woods's historical theory without referring to the exceedingly interesting discussion of heredity in royalty with which he accompanies and supports it."

+ Springfield Republican p5 J1 17 '13 1750w

WOODS, LITCHFIELD. Superman in being. *$1.35 (1½c) Crowell

An eccentric blind historian who openly avows himself a superman is the central figure of this novel. The other important characters are the girl, called by the professor "Eyes" in acknowledgment of her services to him, and a young man of middle class upbringing and intellectual aspirations who falls in love with her. The girl has been for six years under the influence of the strange blind man and the effect of this contact on her character makes an interesting psychological study.

"The author leads up, by way of much—overmuch—intellectual scintillation, to a conclusion which leaves us impressed by his cleverness, but cheated of our hopes so far as Prof. Snaggs is concerned. He remains a bizarre, malignant creature, of whose reality we can never quite be convinced, but whose personality is not easily effaced from the memory."

+ Ath 1912,1:439 Ap 20 120w

"The author happily has pursued just the right course to make the portrayal impressive; not only are we involuntarily affected by this creative faith in the professor, but the firm insistence upon his unchanging eccentricity leaves us wondering whether his superhumanity was a reality or a pose. 'A superman in being' would gain forcefulness from a literary revision of details with special reference to overworked words."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 21 '13 370w

"Besides being a superman, the Professor is a terrible bore."

+ Nation 97:123 Ag 7 '13 250w

"A skit kept up for over 300 pages is pretty dull reading."

+ N Y Sun p3 Je 14 '13 170w

"We started by taking a violent dislike to this author and ended by liking him and his book immensely. If we had thrown the volume into the fire, as we were greatly tempted to do after a perusal of the first eighty pages, we would have missed a delightful evening's (and night's) entertainment."

+ — N Y Times 17:481 S 8 '12 600w

"Considered as a first novel, Mr. Woods's book is decidedly clever. The characters are presented clearly, and there is considerable insight shown in the portrayal of Richard Den-sumbe's sense of honor and innate moral cowardice, his perplexities and weaknesses. Unfortunately, the book belies its title; Prof. Snaggs is a 'superman' only in his own opinion, and in his ability to discourse at inordinate length."

+ — N Y Times 18:264 My 4 '13 150w

"The study of the blind professor is a clever 'tour de force.' Those with whom he plays, with outrage or self-sacrifice, are incredibly spiritless people of straw."

— + Spec 109:137 JI 27 '12 28w

WOODWARD, CALVIN MILTON. Rational and applied mechanics. il $4 C. M. Woodward, 3013 Hawthorne blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

13-2559

"This treatise, by a well-known instructor of long and successful experience, has been prepared primarily for students entering upon their second collegiate year. The arrangement of the subject-matter is along lines which have been found in practice to give satisfactory results, and the illustrative problems included deal as far as possible with everyday matters familiar to students."—Indust Engin

"The treatise is an excellent one, well arranged and well written. It is a good book and so thought out in its developments as to render the presentation of the various theoretical developments easy to grasp, by joining them closely to the range of experience already familiar to the student and by making rather intricate and abstruse principles appear reasonable to his relatively untutored apprehension. Having gladly conceded all this, the reviewer must claim the privilege of all teachers to disagree with the author as to the general idea underlying his book, respecting the field which such a book should be designed to fill." H. T. Eddy.

+ — Engin N 69:810 Ap 17 '13 800w

"The lifetime of experience and the more than local fame of the author for singular facility in giving lucid explanations of difficult theorems are strikingly apparent in this new work. The book is almost unique in the wide range of subjects treated with originality."

+ Engin Rec 67:363 Mr 29 '13 250w

"The author's many years of acquaintance with the workings of youthful minds has enabled him to anticipate their difficulties in comprehension, not only by making every step reasonable and every demonstration intelligible, but by doing these things in an extremely interesting manner."

+ Indust Engin 13:271 Je '13 130w

WOODWORTH, ROBERT SESSIONS. Care of the body. *$1.50 (2c) Macmillan 12-23732

"This book is intended chiefly for the young man, and is founded on the belief that an intelligent man, without technical knowledge of medicine, and without excessive attention to the care of his health, can still do much to keep himself in good condition." (Preface) There are chapters devoted to: The science of health; The blood; The circulation; Breathing; Food; Digestion; Wastes and their removal; Diet; Bodily heat, etc., and the book in general will be of value to others outside the limited class for which it is primarily intended.

"One of the best of the many books on hygiene for the general public. There is a good chapter on disease and the action of bacteria."

+ A L A Bkl 9:397 My '13 +

"The author goes into his subject with great directness and practicality, and his style is attractive enough to make the book interesting to the general reader."

+ Educ R 45:534 My '13 50w

Ind 75:216 JI 24 '13 30w

"The young man who wishes to keep himself in good physical and mental condition will find some useful instruction and advice in this book."

+ N Y Times 17:686 N 24 '12 70w

WOOLLEY, EDWARD MOTT. Addison Broadhurst, master merchant. *$1.25 (2c) Doubleday 13-8905

"Mr. Woolley narrates in some detail the business career of a man who has learned how to profit by failures and false beginnings. By a series of ventures, founded upon hard-earned knowledge, a young country boy becomes the successful head of a successful department store—and the sum of his experiences gives to the reader an unusually searching view of the foundation and growth of a great business. That actual achievement will result from permanent application, and that the goddess of opportunity seldom knocks at the door but once, is the double moral of the tale."—Boston Transcript

"Not sentimental or priggish but full of common sense and a realization of the difficulties of life."

+ A L A Bkl 10:72 O '13

"Primarily a business narrative, yet it is, at the same time, a revelation of character. Even the slight touch of arrogance, so surely present in a man of the master merchant type, is admirably conveyed."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Je 25 '13 130w

"Fictitious business is as futile as fictitious politics."

— N Y Sun p4 Ap 26 '13 100w

"The story is glibly and breezily told, but is in no way remarkable."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Je 19 '13 150w

WOOLLEY, EDWARD MOTT. Cub reporter. il *$1 (2c) Stokes 13-18957

A stirring newspaper story in which fires, riots and other exciting incidents figure. "Dent Lockwood's struggle to 'make good' on the 'New York morning sentinel' is an uphill one. Inexperience and some pretty bad luck almost succeed in defeating him, but pluck and perseverance triumph in the end and after some severe rebuffs we leave him graduated from a 'cub' to a member of the regular staff." (Boston Transcript)

+ A L A Bkl 10:72 O '13 +

"A capital story, one which will be as interesting for its accurate picture of the life on a 'metropolitan daily' to the outsider as it will be to those to whom it is a matter of daily routine."

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 20 '13 150w

+ Ind 76:357 N 20 '13 30w

WOOLLEY, EDWARD MOTT. Donald Kirk, the morning Record copy-boy. il *$1.20 (2½c) Little 12-22554

Many exciting adventures fall to the lot of Donald Kirk, the morning Record copy boy. Altho circumstances have denied the boy an education his ambition has not been thwarted. He is determined to become a reporter, and the story shows how in winning that goal his steadiness, reliability and integrity aided him, and how his practice in writing imaginary newspaper stories stood him in good stead in a crisis.

"Full of firsthand counsel and good stories to boot." Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:581 Ja '13 110w

WOOLLEY, EDWARD MOTT. Donald Kirk, the morning Record correspondent. il *$1.20 (3c) Little 13-20206

This is a continuation of the story of 'Donald Kirk, the morning Record copy boy.' With the help of his friend Ordway of the

WOOLLEY, EDWARD MOTT—Continued.
Record staff, Donald is able to realize his ambition of gaining an education. This story is the narrative of his adventures at Larchwood academy where he acts as the Record's official correspondent.

"The newspaper incidents are subsidiary and are of the kind that will have to be unlearned quickly by boys who intend to become reporters."

— N Y Sun p9 O 11 '13 40w

"A good school story."

+ N Y Times 18:520 O 5 '13 70w

WORSFOLD, WILLIAM BASIL. Union of South Africa. *$3 Little (Eng ed 13-933)

The author "gives a detailed and painstaking account of the country and its history. Its physical characteristics, the native races, the Semitic occupations, European colonization and British rule are considered in the first part of the book, an account of the government of the union takes up the second part, and the third is devoted to Rhodesia and the native territories. There are many page illustrations from photographs. The volume is an issue in the 'All red' series, which deals with the component parts of the British empire."—N Y Times

"A very comprehensive, scholarly and readable survey of the country."

+ A L A Bkl 9:397 My '13 ✚

"Mr. Worsfold has given us one of the best written analyses of South African conditions. It is one of the most valuable of recent books on the British overseas possessions." C. L. Jones.

+ Ann Am Acad 47:318 My '13 450w

"Mr. Worsfold has undertaken to study his subject from every point of view and has managed to convey more information about it than is to be found in any other single volume with which the reviewer is acquainted. The book is, unfortunately, rather carelessly printed."

+ — J Pol Econ 21:575 Je '13 150w

"It is more comprehensive and serviceable than any book of its kind. The material has been collected with care, and the story is told with great clearness."

+ Nation 95:615 D 26 '12 1150w

N Y Times 17:637 N 3 '12 220w

"The tone throughout is judicious and impartial. The result is a work both readable and authoritative." W. R. Shepherd.

+ Pol Sci Q 28:530 S '13 680w

"Handbook we suppose we must call it, but this handbook is literature. Here—admirably full and lucid in arrangement—is all you can conceivably want to know about South Africa; but, therewithal, is what you may more easily want than find—information dispensed by a scholar, with a scholar's economy and sense of words, and the cunning of a man of letters."

+ Sat R 114:802 D 28 '12 1500w

WORSHAM, JOHN H. One of Jackson's foot cavalry. *$2 Neale 13-729

"It was the twenty-first regiment, Virginia Infantry, that by its steady, compact, and rapid marching won the name of Jackson's Foot cavalry. It formed a part of the famous Second brigade, which saw some of the hardest service of the entire war, in the brilliant Valley campaign, the memorable and sanguinary Seven Days' campaign, and the Maryland campaign." (Dial) Private Worsham "tells what the men in the ranks did when not marching or fighting or sleeping, and what they did when they were in battle, or on the march, or in bivouac." (Boston Transcript)

"It has been a long time since anything so thoroughly interesting and instructive has come from 'the other side.' It will make a most welcome gift book to a soldier friend, or, in fact, to any person who loves to read about the war of the states."

+ Boston Transcript p22 Ja 1 '13 300w

"The whole story of this campaigning with Jackson is well told."

+ Dial 54:147 F 16 '13 320w

"The book will bear reading, tho it can hardly be called history, or, except in spots, the material out of which history is made. It is personal and partisan, and a fair sample of a type of southern product which is too common."

+ — Ind 74:589 Mr 13 '13 220w

"These personal narratives, especially those on the Confederate side, are always welcome, for they provide first hand evidence."

+ N Y Sun p4 D 21 '12 100w

"The humorous aspects of civil war campaigning on the Confederate side are well brought out in this book."

+ R of Rs 47:251 F '13 50w

WORSLEY, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Theology of the Church of England. (Great Christian theologies) *$2.25 Dutton

"This volume is one of a series dealing with the great Christian theologies. The series is not written primarily from a controversial point of view, but, rather, offers critical expositions. The book under notice deals with the theology of the Church of England, and aims at expounding the teaching of that church on all doctrinal matters. In order that the reader may arrive at an understanding of the principles of this teaching, the author first traces, clearly and briefly, the history of the Book of common prayer and that of the Thirty-nine articles."—Ath

Am J Theol 17:490 Jl '13 200w

"Though of particular interest to churchmen, this thoughtful work merits the attention of all serious-minded readers."

+ Ath 1913,1:157 F 8 110w

"The series will be a welcome addition to theological literature, and this particular volume ably sets forth the theology of the Church of England, and most of it will hold good for the theology of the Protestant Episcopal church of America."

+ Boston Transcript p24 Ap 16 '13 420w

"The depth and originality of this treatment may be judged by the statement: 'These quotations need no comment; they demonstrate with perfect clearness the teaching of the church on the subject.'"

— Nation 97:212 S 4 '13 250w

N Y Times 18:311 My 25 '13 80w

Outlook 104:344 Je 14 '13 120w

WREN, PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER. Dew and mildew. *$1.35 Longmans A13-1211

These "are essentially true stories, the author says, so that they give reliable portrayals of Indian life, customs, manners, and morals. Several of them deal with educational matters in which the author is especially interested; others touch upon the relations between the natives and their British rulers. Of the latter class is a group of stories in which one 'William Tom Buggin, Esquire, M. P. for Jewsditch,' is the central character; these stories are in the nature of a protest against the sort of work that was done by Keir Hardie when he visited India several years ago and delivered addresses provocative of discontent with the government."—N Y Times

"The semi-detachment of Mr. Wren's stories in 'Dew and mildew' is apt to be a little bewildering; he seems to have hesitated between a novel and a collection of short stories, and finally to have fallen between the two, giving the novel, if anything, a slight preference. Humour and shrewd characterization of natives are Mr. Wren's strong points, and he can describe a fight with no little vigour. Altogether, it is a well-written, interesting book, which would have been vastly improved if Mr. Wren had frankly made it a novel and deleted the excrescences."

+ — Ath 1912,2:549 N 9 170w

"Few stories dealing with the hybrid Anglo-Indian civilization, as virile, as compelling, as instinct with life, as these have appeared since 'Plain tales from the hills.' Their one drawback is the condescension with which the Briton especially is prone to view all people and all civilizations not his own."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Ja 22 '13 350w

"Striking stories."

+ Nation 96:232 Mr 6 '13 400w

+ N Y Times 18:64 F 9 '13 140w

WRENCH, GUY THÉODORE. Lord Lister; his life and work. il *$4.50 Stokes 13-35825

A popular biography of Lord Lister, the English surgeon to whom credit for the introduction of antiseptic practice in surgery is due. "Dr. Wrench's biography of Lister is confined almost entirely to the great surgeon's public work, but it includes an intimate description of hospital conditions just prior to the Listerian age and at the beginning of the new era that any medical historian will find it difficult to surpass in either style or thoroughness of observation. The biographer also supplies details of Lister's family history." (N Y Times)

"Interesting from the scientific rather than the biographical standpoint."

+ A L A Bkl 10:114 N '13

"Dr. Wrench's book is a eulogy and popular account of the work of Lord Lister, with headlines somewhat more florid than is quite in keeping with the simplicity of Lister's character. It is, however, a good and useful book, and Dr. Wrench has done well in his endeavor to teach the general reader the main points in Lister's life and teaching."

+ — Ath 1913,2:212 Ag 30 600w

"An important contribution to the romance of medical science." H: C. Shelley.

+ Boston Transcript p9 S 27 '13 600w

"The story of this modest English Quaker, whose prominent characteristics were simplicity and boldness, should be known by all those who are grateful to the benefactors of the race."

+ Boston Transcript p25 N 26 '13 370w

"The book is very well made, and the few typographical errors which have attracted our attention are not serious."

+ Nation 97:488 N 20 '13 2900w

"The life of Lister, as given to us by Dr. Wrench, is not a book intended for the medical profession alone, although all physicians and medical students would do well to read it. It is a record of an evolutionary process in modern civilization and as such is commended to the world community." V. B. Thorne, M. D.

+ N Y Times 18:509 O 5 '13 1100w

"We find neither too much nor too little in Dr. Wrench's exposition of the discovery itself in a popular yet serious and exact scientific spirit. But we are doubtful about some parts of his book. He treats the opposition to Lister as being due to some special perversity of the medical profession, to jealousy and hatred. It would have been more in accordance with the philosophy on which he rather plagues himself to have represented it as the invariable stage in all new discoveries."

+ — Sat R 116:302 S 6 '13 1450w

"The book, on the whole, will do good service. But it has many faults, and they are faults which might easily have been avoided."

+ — Spec 111:420 S 20 '13 1300w

WRIGHT, GEORGE FREDERICK. Origin and antiquity of man. *$2 Bibliothecca sacra co. 12-23728

"As an introduction Professor Wright discusses the origin and antiquity of the earth. He inclines toward a very moderate estimate of the length of geologic time and hence of the human period, which began when man became a tool-user." (Science) His own summary of the main theme is that "the antiquity of man cannot be less than 10,000, it need not be more than 15,000 years. Eight thousand years of pre-historic times is ample to account for all known facts relating to his development. Whether he was a mere scientific 'sport' or was assisted in his pre-eminence by divine intervention is a question of philosophy. That it was by divine intervention will be the verdict of most sane and candid minds."

"Glacial geology has been for several years a special study with Dr. Wright, so that he speaks with authority and due deliberation. We are hardly disposed to accept views which, in many cases, border on the old catastrophic philosophy."

+ — Ath 1913,1:471 Ap 26 350w

+ — Ind 74:701 Mr 27 '13 330w

+ Nature 92:161 O 9 '13 520w

N Y Times 17:656 N 10 '12 120w

N Y Times 18:460 S 7 '13 350w

"The store of varied information he has brought together imparts a well-sustained interest in his elaborate discussion."

+ Outlook 102:735 N 30 '12 300w

"The work has the welcome merit of an engaging style, possessing to a degree the charm of the author's personality." G: G. MacCurdy.

+ — Science ns37:305 F 21 '13 750w

"Despite apprehensions aroused by the title or any of the chapter headings, the book is popular in style, and will hold the attention of the reader on any page to which he opens, while an orderly perusal of the volume is sure to earn for it the appellation of the romance of science."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ap 17 '13 330w

WRIGHT, HAROLD BELL. The yesterdays. 1 il *$1.30 (2c) Book supply co. 12-20794

The story of the development of a man and woman—they are nameless thruout the book—thru what the author calls the thirteen 'truly great things of life: Dreams, Occupation, Knowledge, Ignorance, Religion, Tradition, Temptation, Life, Death, Failure, Success, Love, Memories. The two characters—the man and the woman—had been boy and girl playmates; then their ways separate and they know no more of one another; yet to each childhood memories and ideals remain guiding influences in all of life's crises. And at the end they meet again to find in one another the realization of all their dreams.

+ Chaut 72:28 S 6 '13 270w

"Scarcely fiction, but rather a vaguely personalized sermon upon the intimate affairs of mind and heart and soul that are common to all the sons and daughters of men, Mr. Wright's new book will probably appeal strongly to the immense audience that is always waiting for his work. There is much sentiment in the book, and now and then the homely, everyday affairs and situations of life are invested with a certain degree of mildly poetic charm."

+ — N Y Times 17:491 S 8 '12 300w

WRIGHT, MRS. MABEL (OSGOOD). Stranger at the gate. il *$1.25 (3c) Macmillan 13-24118

The story of a man who, in his eager struggle for wealth and position, has forgotten the father and mother in the old home, neglected his wife, and allowed himself to become a stranger to his own children. How on Christmas eve he is awakened to his own folly, and how the family, are all happily reunited, is the substance of Mrs. Wright's narrative.

"Mrs. Wright has many readers. It is unnecessary to tell them of her methods. To some the circumstances of her novels are a little too obviously contrived, the conversations a trifle over hortatory. There is a pill to be swallowed, but always it is pleasantly coated. In other words, Mrs. Wright is not simply telling a story, she is sounding a warning and preaching a lesson. She warns and preaches in friendly and pleasant fashion, however, and the Christmas setting and homely character drawing of 'The stranger at the gate' are considerable attractions."

WRIGHT, MABEL (OSGOOD)—Continued.

+ — Boston Transcript p12 D 8 '13 180w

WRIGHT, RICHARDSON LITTLE, and DIGBY, GEORGE BASSETT. Through Siberia; an empire in the making. il $2 McBride, Nast & co. 13-7643

The authors "travelled—not always together—by railway, by boat and sledge and tarantass into remote parts of the country wherever their interest or their curiosity led them. They enjoyed the advantages of seeing most of the institutions of the land, even to the risk of becoming familiar with its prison life, for one of them appears to have made his way without the protection of a passport. Their work is largely descriptive, and it abounds in adventure and incident to maintain the interest of the reader. The illustrations are numerous. They consist of photographs of the people in groups, of city streets and buildings, of winter scenes and of battlefields. The travellers ended their journey, where thousands of Russian soldiers ended their lives, at Port Arthur."—Boston Transcript

+ A L A Bkl 10:32 S '13

"The whole forms a curious blend, mere trivialities being interspersed with shrewd and interesting observations; the style in American journalese—loose, lively, and often picturesque."

+ — Ath 1913,2:453 O 25 180w

+ Boston Transcript p12 Ap 29 '13 430w

"The book is readable."

+ N Y Sun p6 Ap 19 '13 80w

"The volume is so replete with human interest and thrilling personal incidents, that the facts and statistics become immensely readable. The pictures are vivid and startling, indeed, to many readers. 'Through Siberia,' will be more interesting than a novel." Shaemas O'Sheel.

+ N Y Times 18:235 Ap 20 '13 950w

+ Outlook 104:307 Je 7 '13 100w

"Among the most interesting and informing of recent books of travel."

+ Springfield Republican p5 My 22 '13 1150w

WRIGHT, WALTER PAGE. New gardening. il $2 Doubleday A13-1212

"Mr. Wright regards gardening in its ultimate sense as an ameliorating and broadening influence in the lives of the discontented and unhappy. . . . [He] touches on nearly every branch of horticulture in his usual workmanlike manner, and, as his title suggests, puts forward a different treatment and more judicious employment of familiar things." (Ath) "The service rendered by Mr. Wright is that of acquainting the reader with new kinds of flowers, fruit and vegetables, and with new methods of treatment and cultivation." (N Y Sun)

"An attractive volume which shows not only a rare appreciation of the working of the subject, but also sympathy with its less tangible and wider aspects."

+ Ath 1912,2:147 Ap 10 320w

"From various indications, such as the term vegetable marrow, we suspect that the book is a British product, in which case differences of climate must be taken into account."

+ — N Y Sun p5 Mr 22 '13 130w

WRIOTHESLEY, WILLIAM, pseud. The ambassador. $1.25 Doran 13-12434

"Though all the people in 'The ambassador' belong to the diplomatic corps and the scene at the outset is Berlin, the story has nothing to do with diplomacy. It is made up of scenes in society and sprightly conversations. . . . So far as there is a plot it consists in the successful efforts of a conceited and unmannerly German prince to win the affections of an English girl."—N Y Sun

"A smart reflection of contemporary life."

+ Ath 1913,1:494 My 3 20w

"The book is poorly written and seems to have no excuse for being—other than the stringing together of semi-scandalous anecdotes and bits of rather unconvincing sentiment. Not a single character is worth recollection, except, perhaps, the little boy Paul, who is as precocious a child as one may find anywhere."

— + Boston Transcript p20 Jl 2 '13 120w

"Hardly seems to fulfil the promise of 'fascinating.'"

— Lit D 47:692 O 18 '13 200w

"After the reader has finished the book he may well ask himself, What is it all about?"

+ — N Y Sun p3 Je 23 '13 200w

N Y Times 18:352 Je 15 '13 1400w

"Some reason and excuse does probably exist for every book that is written, but it would not be particularly easy to justify 'The ambassador.' The author has some knowledge of what happens behind the scenes in diplomatic circles, but he has ill-used his opportunities, and, whilst imitating many features of the continental novel of society, he has failed to gain their effect, for in place of passions he has given us a few poor flirtations."

— Sat R 115:651 My 24 '13 730w

WUNDT, WILLIAM MAX. Introduction to psychology; tr. by Rudolf Pintner. *90c Macmillan (Eng ed A13-796)

"This is a popular introduction to the Wundtian psychology. It is translated from the second edition of the work which has had such a remarkable success in Germany. The author begins with metronome-experiments, showing the scope of consciousness and its 'rhythmical' nature, with the difference between apprehension and apperception. He then proceeds to differentiate sensation and idea (simple and complex awarenesses), giving his own and rather unusual meaning to the latter word, which with most writers means a complex that does not arise from direct outward impressions. . . . From this we go on to association and feeling, and the growth of abstract concepts from concrete ones—perceptions. The last chapter deals with the 'laws of psychic life,' holding close to psycho-physical parallelism (which truly needs emphasising, in view of Bergson's ably urged heresies in 'Matière et mémoire'), and admonishing metaphysics to base itself on facts and to beware of abstractions."—Nature

+ A L A Bkl 9:453 Je '13

"The treatment of attention calls for special notice by its lucidity and clearness."

+ Ath 1912,2:86 Jl 27 80w

+ Ind 75:338 Ag 7 '13 50w

"A very condensed, delightfully written account of mental phenomena from the point of view of their actuality and of the creative resultants of all psychical combinations." J: Warbeke.

+ J Philos 10:359 Je 19 '13 300w

"Notwithstanding the brevity of treatment, the author has managed with great skill to present to the reader some of the most important psychological problems in a simple and lucid form. The book is an addition to our psychological literature, even for those who do not follow its author in all the positions he maintains."

+ Nation 96:470 My 8 '13 80w

"Prof. Wundt and his translators are to be thanked. In this volume they give us the best elementary book of its size and kind that exists in English." J. A. H.

+ Nature 90:216 O 24 '12 180w

N Y Times 18:108 Mr 2 '13 80w

Figures in parenthesis following price indicate cost per 1000 words

"Though one may doubt whether this psychophysical method is likely in the long run to avoid the irrelevancies to which it is obviously so much prone, there can be no question of the ability which Professor Wundt displays in handling his material."

+ — Spec 109:sup488 O 5 '12 150w

WYER, SAMUEL S. Regulation, valuation and depreciation of public utilities. 1l *$5 Sears & Simpson co. 13-2871

"This work is a concise compilation of the economic, engineering and legal facts relating to the respective rights of the public and of the owners of the various agencies which furnish the public with gas, electricity, water, heating, transportation, communication, and other related facilities. The author has endeavored to present his argument in a strictly impartial manner, and he fortifies it with upwards of 700 citations from treatises, technical journals, proceedings of engineering societies, government publications and court reports, in which the opinions of experts and judicial decisions are embodied."—Indust Engin

"For the most part the volume has been carefully and well prepared and serves its purpose excellently." John Bauer.

+ — Am Econ R 3:926 D '13 300w

"A convenient and useful handbook of reference."

+ Am Pol Sci R 7:286 My '13 20w

"To the engineer, the banker or the public utility owner, who is required to deal with these problems, the work will be of great assistance, and should find a welcome place in his reference library."

+ Ann Am Acad 48:267 J1 '13 120w

"To most engineers the chief value of the book will lie in the classified citations of and references to authorities. Most of the remainder of its contents, save some of the diagrams and tables, might have been omitted with little loss to no one and considerable reduction in the size and cost of the book. Finally, the author's skill in condensation, in arrangement and in the preparation of diagrams deserves commendation, as does the work of the publisher."

+ — Engin N 70:787 O 16 '13 660w

Indust Engin 13:270 Je '13 180w

+ J Pol Econ 21:676 J1 '13 150w

"Contains a remarkable fund of information on the subject that is rapidly coming into prominence both within and without the engineering profession."

+ R of Rs 48:381 S '13 130w

WYLIE, IDA ALENA ROSS. Daughter of 'Brahma. *$1.30 (1½c) Bobbs 12-18062

The story of a young Englishman, born in India, who falls in love with a Brahman priestess as he sees her before her altar. Winning her love in return he tears her from her shrine, marries her, and takes her to England where he is called suddenly to assume a title. Altho he has stood ready to risk all for love, he fails in the cold unsympathetic atmosphere of England to live up to his promises. The Hindu bride, looked on as an outcast by his people, pales and droops, and finally returns to her own country; there to die.

"The Anglo-Indian life is cleverly drawn and gives the book an interest for educated readers which its fictional merit could not."

+ — A L A Bkl 9:402 My '13

"Miss Wylie has written with some power on an unhackneyed theme; it is, therefore, unfortunate that her book is marred in places by too great a tax on probability. The author has, however, the gift of characterization, and her contrasts are deftly drawn."

+ — Ath 1912,2:63 J1 20 '70w

"If 'A daughter of Brahma' has fallen short of being a really 'big' book, it is not because the author has attempted too much for him, but because he lacks the power which is given to only a few—the power that can turn realism into reality."

+ — Boston Transcript p22 Mr 26 '13 550w

"A narrative of original plot and absorbing interest." W: M. Payne.

+ Dial 55:23 J1 1 '13 430w

"Decidedly 'The daughter of Brahma' is of the stuff that dreams are made of. It fulfills at least one function of the novel, that of holding the attention, but neither its characters nor its plot bear analysis."

+ — N Y Times 18:163 Mr 23 '13 270w

"The English reader will find it hard to fathom exactly why Sarasvati, the heroine of this book, should have been called 'The daughter of Brahma' and elevated to the rank of a demi-goddess. The book as a whole, however, is well worth reading. The life of Anglo-Indians is cleverly drawn, and a more clearly realized portrait is given of Sarasvati herself than is usual with English descriptions of high-caste natives."

+ — Spec 109:343 S 7 '12 150w

WYLLARDE, DOLF. Career of Beauty Darling. *$1.30 Lane 12-25067

"This story adds to the numerous novels dealing with the drab side of musical comedy." (Ath) "A founding on a doorstep, Beauty is adopted by a commonplace woman who keeps her until she is 14; at that age the girl is victimized by a strolling artist and runs away to go on the stage. For the rest of her life she drifts carelessly from one man to another, without thought and without passion, tossed about until the day of her death." (N Y Times)

"There is nothing very fresh or distinguished about it."

— Ath 1912,2:626 N 23 20w

"Dolf Wyllarde has her faults and her limitations. Is a better piece of work than 'Frank Danby's' kindred novel, in so far as it leaves the impression of literal truth." F: T. Cooper.

+ — Bookm 36:564 Ja '13 420w

"The story of her life and death is sordid and ugly enough. That it has in it much of sober truth is impossible to deny; in its very lack of contrast, of suggestion, in its unrelieved and purposeless grossness, it is probably a sufficiently ordinary tale. 'The career of Beauty Darling,' offers a fairly good treatment of a theme that ought to be—and that has been before this—handled much more than 'fairly' well."

+ — N Y Times 17:692 N 24 '12 250w

WYLLARDE, DOLF. Youth will be served. 12 *$1.30 Lane 13-21254

"The declared subject of Dolf Wyllarde's new novel is the inevitable sacrifice of the older to the younger generation. . . . The story tells of an English officer's young wife sent home with her baby from South Africa, because unable to endure the climate; and of the nineteen subsequent years, more than half of which were spent away from the hero-husband much older than herself."—N Y Times

"A lively story, which lacks something of the irregular power at times manifested in the author's earlier work, but has, on the other hand, a more healthy tone."

+ — Ath 1913,2:316 S 27 150w

"Nothing happens in this novel. But then a great deal might have happened; and since the spice of life is in its hopes and fears, there is ample defence in logic and common-sense for the story-teller who adopts the plan of making his story thrilling by not having any."

+ Nation 97:538 D 4 '13 370w

"It is cleverly written, and throws interesting light upon the long separations which are all in the day's work to a nation whose drum-beat is heard around the world; but few of its characters command sympathy, and it is not pleasant reading. There is a note of resistance to everything that militates against the imperious claim of personal happiness—a note too often dominant in the fiction of the day, and always to its artistic as well as its ethical loss."

WYLLARDE, DOLF—Continued.

— + N Y Times 18:635 N 16 '13 230w

"There is a good deal of clear and clever writing in this tale."

+ Sat R 116:401 S 27 '13 50w

Y

YARD, ROBERT STERLING. The publisher.
20 *$1 (4c) Houghton 13-19323

A peep behind the scenes of the publishing house, into the very heart of the prime spirit of that institution, is offered to the public in these pages. Giving the path of roses a wide berth of necessity the book publisher follows a hard and thorny path beset by a confusion of knotty problems. How the shrewd publisher solves or fails to solve the problems relating to the selecting, manufacturing, exploiting and selling of his books is interestingly and entertainingly told with emphasis on the nice balancing of commercial interests with those bearing upon the cause of progress.

"Interesting and entertaining."

+ A L A Bkl 10:114 N '13

"It is doubtful if any more human, more personal, more entertaining book has been written upon this subject. It is fascinatingly intimate, genial and truthful." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 4 '13 1300w

"On the whole, Mr. Yard shows in a very attractive light the business that, as far as large and sure profits are concerned, might not unreasonably be considered the worst business in the world, but that is the only business in the world to the born publisher."

+ Dial 55:214 S 16 '13 370w

"Generally informing and always entertaining, the manner of the book is journalistic and undistinguished."

+ Nation 97:339 O 9 '13 470w

+ N Y Times 18:500 S 28 '13 420w

"He ought to know a good book, for he certainly has written one; his little volume is crisp in style, often conversational in form, and, as Eugene Field used to say, 'pointed as a tack.'"

+ Outlook 105:152 S 20 '13 120w

"Mr. Yard knows whereof he speaks—or writes—and he writes well."

+ R of Rs 48:637 N '13 60w

"An agreeable mixture of cynicism and sound sense makes Robert Sterling Yard's brief discussion of 'The publisher' a very readable and enlightening book."

+ Springfield Republican p5 O 16 '13 400w

YATES, LUCY H. Gardener and the cook. il
*$1.25 McBride, Nast & co. A13-763

The author has achieved a "cheerful combination. The successful raising of vegetables is not the end of the matter. It is the successful cooking of them that tells the story, and many a healthy vegetable has become an indigestible dish by the time it reaches the table. How to bring in harmony both the raising and the preparation of these garden foods is the prime object of this book."—N Y Times

"We are so impressed by Miss Yates's sobriety of statement, transparent sanity, knowledge and insight, that we place implicit faith in her directions for the growing of succulent herbs and fruits, and the preparation of delightful dishes. Her book is refined, and illumined by the flavour of humour and alert writing."

+ Ath 1912,1:227 F 24 50w

"This little book is attractive in more ways than one. [It] should be a help to many a young housekeeper towards bettering things in her own home."

+ Nature 89:111 Ap 4 '12 250w

"The author gives a breezy description of her agricultural experiences. For those who have facilities for making home-brewed wines some excellent suggestions are given. The dainty line illustrations are an added attraction to the book."

+ N Y Times 18:267 My 4 '13 150w

YOCUM, ALBERT DUNCAN. Culture, discipline and democracy $1.25 Sower 13-5654

A discussion of the issue between education as a means to culture and education as a preparation for life. One of the conclusions of the author is "that in the curriculum of the future the present status of required and elective subjects will be largely reversed, and the basis of education will be literature, history, sociology, civics, and economics, while mathematics (outside of simple arithmetic) and foreign languages will be treated simply as preparations for a specialty." (Nation)

"It is a really admirable work, but it is perhaps too calm in its closely reasoned argument to attract the attention it deserves." C: L. Moore.

+ Dial 55:395 N 16 '13 550w

"Some of his studies in problems of relative worth are particularly interesting and suggestive."

+ Educ R 46:422 N '13 60w

"It looks as if the writer were a victim of that presupposition which underlies most of the talk about 'education for life'—namely, that even an educated mind can discover nothing for itself, and that one can neither cook nor vote without a special course in cooking or voting."

+ Nation 97:315 O 2 '13 210w

YOUNG, E. H. Yonder. *$1.20 Doran A13-478
A13-478

"The story deals with two families. In the one are Edward Webb, with his refined spirit struggling against uncongenial occupation, and his adored child, Theresa; in the other, Clara Rutherford, mothering her weak and drunken husband and their strong-willed boy, Alexander. . . Theresa . . . brings suffering to herself and others through letting her imagination rule her instead of serving her, as her father had warned her. He longs to bring Alexander into her life, for there is a fine friendship between the older man and the lad. This hope is finally fulfilled only by the death of the one father at the hands of the other."—Spec

A L A Bkl 9:301 Mr '13

"This love-story could have been condensed with advantage, and the writing is occasionally too ornate; but the author has a vivid imagination, and knows how to create atmosphere. The three central figures are sympathetically drawn, the heroine being particularly human."

+ Ath 1912,2:90 J1 27 40w

"As a story it cannot be said to fail, for the interest is continuous, but it is in the revelation of the connection between nature and human character that the strength of the novel consists. The most careless reader must recognize the beauty of the nature setting; must perceive that the description charms rather than the tale itself. It is by no means an ordinary tale, and the characterizations, even when they may not fully appeal to us, are well wrought and are not unconvincing."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 26 '13 170w

"The one serious weakness of the story is the conclusion: here are signs of crudity and immaturity."

+ Nation 96:232 Ja 6 '13 130w

N Y Sun p5 Mr 1 '13 550w

"The sympathy, the tolerance, with which the story is told make it rather an unusual novel. Yet there is often in its telling a waste of words."

+ — N Y Times 18:39 Ja 26 '13 200w

"There are faults in this book, faults of form and proportion, that may be born in and kneaded out of the best of novelists; but there are also the signs of genius, obviously innate, that the most cultivated stylist could not assume. Even if the fable of this fine novel were a little thing, which it is not, the literary quality of the writing would engage sympathy; no moral subtlety seems too delicate to be conveyed by the author's art, and a real love for nature gleams through her descriptions of scenery. We cannot doubt that E. H. Young will contribute work of which lovers of English fiction must take account."

+ — Sat R 114:209 Ag 17 '12 700w

"This is a serious piece of good work, and if the strain is sometimes over-wrought it is relieved by the realized atmosphere of mountains and winds. The suggestion of supernatural will power exercised by the Rutherford's neighbour, Janet, does not aid a story which is too good and too well told to need any such device."

+ — Spec 109:415 S 21 '12 180w

YOUNG, F. E. MILLS. Myles Calthorpe, I. D. 12 B. $1.25 Lane

"I. D. B. stands for a South African degree of sinister standing—illicit diamond buyer. However, this is not a tale with a crook for a hero. Myles Calthorpe is the old-fashioned young gentleman who sacrifices himself for the woman he loves. As of old, the sacrifice is a mistaken one. Her brother is the real criminal. . . . Three years of penal servitude leave him still obstinate in his self-immolation. He is persuaded to take another name, and has made a place for himself in a new community, when the girl turns up and exposes him as an ex-convict. In the end the brother confesses, and the pair are brought together."—Nation

"Unusually well told."

+ Ath 1913.1:251 Mr 1 30w

"A very attractive and interesting romance is carried to an unnecessarily sordid and distressing ending."

+ — Boston Transcript p20 Jl 2 '13 200w

"A queer element of anti-climax is injected into the story at the last moment. It is unsafe to graft a sprout of realism on purely sentimental stock, and the casual nature of the experiment fatally slackens the grip of the main narrative upon the not too keen sympathies of the reader."

+ — Nation 97:385 O 23 '13 170w

"The story is told by jerks in a series of episodes; the minor characters are lifelike and natural. The young man and the young woman with their long drawn out love story are attractive, and the improbabilities are of little account owing to the mechanical character of the story."

+ — N Y Sun p3 Je 14 '13 130w

"The high-spirited heroine, her weak brother, the noble Myles are well and clearly drawn."

+ — N Y Times 18:503 S 28 '13 130w

YOUNG, JESSE BOWMAN. Battle of Gettysburg. il $2 (2c) Harper 13-13217

The author of this "comprehensive narrative" was a participant in the battle, serving as an officer in one of the Pennsylvania regiments. "For a dozen years after the war he resided in or near Gettysburg, and in performing his duties as a 'circuit-rider' became familiar with every village, mountain, and road in the neighborhood. Add to this a life-long interest in the subject, and a vast amount of reading, and it is evident that the author is unusually well equipped to write about the battle of Gettysburg." (Bookm) The book is divided into three parts. The first gives a Preliminary survey; the second, The narrative of the battle; the third describes The opposing armies, giving brief personal memoranda, statistics, illustrative data, and comments.

+ A L A Bkl 10:67 O '13

"A book indeed which will have a permanent value." A. M. Chase.

+ Bookm 37:566 Jl '13 330w

"The book is impartial. Although the author was a Union soldier, the intervening fifty years have removed all bitterness; and he gives full credit to the Confederates at all times. The author has the literary gift and this with the fact that he took part in the battle causes him to write with a style that commands attention. To this must be added the fact that the book shows evidence of scholarly research. In short the book is worthy of its great theme—the battle of Gettysburg."

+ Boston Transcript p23 Je 25 '13 670w

+ Ind 95:746 S 25 '13 100w

"Of the numerous books about Gettysburg which the recent anniversary of the battle has called out, this, for the lay reader, the most readable and generally satisfactory."

+ Nation 97:171 Ag 21 '13 150w

N Y Sun p8 Je 21 '13 140w

"Mr. Young is by no means a Napier or a Kinglake or a Carlyle as a painter of battle pieces. Half or so of his volume is for the general reader negligible, being devoted to personal commemorations. Still, in spite of defects with not all of which the writer is fairly chargeable, this is perhaps as good an account of the entire operations as is to be had."

+ — N Y Sun p9 Je 28 '13 1250w

N Y Times 18:376 Je 22 '13 130w

"The extraordinary thing is that [Mr. Young] has succeeded in assimilating all his materials, and instead of making a book out of them, has presented an interpretation which owes something to them, but more to his own constructive insight. The reader will turn from this volume with a clear and consistent impression of a crucial or as Mr. Young is fond of saying, 'pivotal' episode in our history as a nation." H. W. Boynton.

+ N Y Times 18:377 Je 29 '13 1800w

"The author has made a true nexus of his facts, and his carefully-thought out opinions as well as his fresh assembling of material give his narrative historic value. Comprehensiveness, clearness, human interest, and the indefinable power which is the reflex of the author's own personality and point of view—these are qualities that make 'The battle of Gettysburg' not only a valuable source of information, but a book to be read for its own sake."

+ + No Am 198:139 Jl '13 530w

"Comprehensive and exhaustive study."

+ Outlook 104:577 Jl 12 '13 200w

+ R of Rs 48:251 Ag '13 120w

YOUNG, MARTHA. Behind the dark pines. 2 il $1.50 (3c) Appleton 12-23715

A collection of negro folk tales, told in dialect as "Mammy" told them to a group of southern children. Brer Rabbit, Miss Mocking bird, Brer Coon, Brer Possum and others appear in the tales which in title as in substance bear a resemblance to the stories of Uncle Remus. Some of them are: Why Miss Rabbit never got married; Brer Rabbit goes looking for trouble; Brer Possum outwits Brer Lion; How Brer Rabbit got in the water and out again.

"The dialect is good and the stories have a considerable background of folklore. They are briefer and simpler than the inimitable Uncle Remus tales."

+ A L A Bkl 9:305 Mr '13

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne.

+ Bookm 36:458 D '12 30w

"Fifty-five stories, full of amusing incident and sprinkled with snatches of verse, all in unmistakable darkey dialect, are told in the best manner of old Mammy. Mr. J. M. Conde's numerous drawings show a lively appreciation of the comic element in these stories, and invite to a nearer acquaintance with the text."

YOUNG, MARTHA—Continued.

+ Dial 53:504 D 16 '12 100w

"They will be of great value to the folklore people. They should prove popular in the nursery, too, for all children love Brer Rabbit and his kin, only they will have to be read aloud."

+ N Y Sun p15 N 23 '12 100w

"The author is a past expert in Negro dialect, and a good story-teller besides."

+ Outlook 103:47 Ja 4 '13 50w

YOUNGHUSBAND, SIR FRANCIS EDWARD.

¹⁰ Within; thoughts during convalescence.

*$1.50 Duffield

"Somewhat in the manner of Mr. A. C. Benson's analysis and description of his two years' struggle with nervous prostration . . . this victim of an almost complete physical collapse paints his sufferings in a few strong and telling strokes, and then proceeds to deduce the moral, so far as it seems to him to be deducible. Like Mr. Benson, he too emerges from the soul-trying experience with strong convictions of an eternal something not ourselves; or, rather, in the present instance this undying principle is felt to be an impersonal force of which we are a part, while with Mr. Benson it takes the form of an external personal deity. The force as conceived by Sir Francis Younghusband, however, is not blind and purposeless, but intelligently striving to perfect itself."—Dial

"We have read the book with the interest due to its autobiographical and serious contents. Its chief blemish is scientific dogmatism."

+ — Ath 1912,2:448 O 19 250w

"The writer's clear and readable style is marred by a few imperfections, due evidently to insufficient care."

+ — Dial 55:88 Ag 1 '13 370w

"A sincere and courageous book." T. W. Rolleston.

+ Hibbert J 11:689 Ap '13 1850w

"Though the theme is a somewhat tremendous one, the treatment is modest and unpedantic; and though some of the views expressed may seem to many readers, even in these days, extremely radical, few into whose hands the book is likely to fall will find it other than delightful reading, so well written is it, on the whole, so fine and even-tempered in tone."

+ Nation 97:215 S 4 '13 300w

"The book is so absolutely honest and straightforward and vibrantly sincere that it must appeal strongly to all who feel that 'nihili humani' is alien to them, and especially to all those who have revolted from a too parochial Sunday-school conception of Deity."

+ Springfield Republican p5 Ag 7 '13 300w

YOUNGHUSBAND, HELEN AUGUSTA (MAG-⁸ NIAC), lady, Marie Antoinette, her early youth (1770-1774).

*$5 Macmillan 13-5430

"In this volume Lady Younghusband treats of the four years 1770-1774. Her chief object, she says, is 'to unravel a nebulous if highly attractive personality, and to replace by a human being the kind of lay-figure which overmuch indiscriminate reading had tended to produce.' Use has been made of memoirs of the period, and of the elaborate historical study by French authors which in its original form occupies many times the space of this volume. Portraits of the subject of the book in her youth and other reproductions of old pictures and facsimiles add to the special interest."—Outlook

"The author cares so much for the men and women whose lives even momentarily touched that of her heroine that her work might have borne a wider title. Her account of many of these people is not subsidiary and secondary, but primary. Authors are entitled to fix the limits of their work, yet we cannot help thinking that by beginning her biography in 1770 Lady Younghusband cuts herself off—or at least her readers—from a complete understanding of her subject."

+ — Ath 1913,1:123 F 1 930w

"Lady Younghusband has collected and studied carefully, has caught and preserved rarely the spirit of the material translated, and has presented her data in a manner both dignified and agreeable. In her sketches of many of the famous personages of that far-off day, they live once more—an illusion strengthened by the portrait illustrations."

+ Boston Transcript p22 F 5 '13 370w

+ — Dial 54:468 Je 1 '13 350w

"Though the book is somewhat discursive and contains nothing that will be new to scholars, it provides a convenient summary of the sources and is greatly superior in scholarship to most of the biographies of French heroes and heroines with which our lending libraries are stocked." G. P. G.

+ — Eng Hist R 28:402 Ap '13 400w

"The book is made up of so many facts, quoted letters, and interesting circumstances that the author seems at times a trifle vague and obscure, but it is written studiously and with a sympathetic appreciation that helps the reader to understand some of the puzzling traits afterward exhibited by Marie-Antoinette during her reign."

+ — Lit D 46:350 F 15 '13 230w

"Lady Younghusband understands her subject and writes entertainingly with many interesting though irrelevant anecdotes and reflections of her own; and she succeeds in making Marie-Antoinette a very definite human being of real flesh and blood."

+ Nation 96:528 My 22 '13 250w

"Lady Younghusband writes in an easy, unconventional manner, and makes an interesting narrative, besides adding appreciably to the not altogether harmonious conception of Marie Antoinette's personality which history and tradition have formed."

+ Outlook 103:320 F 8 '13 150w

"Lady Younghusband's study of the first four years of Marie Antoinette's married life is not only a work of labour and research, of insight and imagination, but also of love."

+ Sat R 115:118 Ja 25 '13 1000w

"Lady Younghusband's book on Marie-Antoinette has real merit, and will probably be read with enjoyment by a large public; yet it is rather difficult to say in what its undeniable attraction consists. It is very long, very full of often unnecessary detail; the author has exercised little of that choice which, as has been so truly said, 'makes the artist.' And in spite of all the stories, all the descriptions, letters, quotations, she hardly succeeds in painting a clear and lifelike portrait of the Dauphine. The writing, too, is a little involved, and the translations from the letters of Maria Theresa, Mercy-Argenteau, and Marie-Antoinette herself are not always entirely successful. And yet, with these defects, the book has the indefinable quality of charm, perhaps to be best explained by the spirit in which it was written."

+ — Spec 110:322 F 22 '13 600w

Z

ZEYNEB, hanum. Turkish woman's European impressions; ed. and with an introd. by Grace Ellison. *$1.75 Lippincott

13-15337

"Zeyneb Hanoum is said to have been the heroine of Pierre Loti's 'Les désenchantées.' This lady has now written a book in which she tells us about the life of the harem in Turkey, and relates her experiences after leaving it." (Outlook) "The author and her sister have for six years enjoyed all the blessings of European civilization in France, Switzerland, England and Italy. The younger sister married; but the elder, after mature reflection upon the conditions of woman's life in the West, judged them wholly inferior to those she had been used to in Turkey, and returned with thankfulness to the peaceful seclusion of the veiled life." (Ath)

"Interesting in itself but adds little to our general information."

+ — A L A Bkl 10:32 S '13

"The reminiscences of her earlier life in Turkey are full of a gentle sweetness, except when she recalls the tyranny of Abdul-i-Hamid, for which she finds no parallel in Western Europe but that of Mr. Lloyd George."

+ — Ath 1913,1:350 Mr 29 750w

"Mighty interesting reading."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 2 '13 400w

+ — Chaut 72:106 O 4 '13 230w

Ind 75:47 J1 3 '13 70w

+ Lit D 47:700 O 18 '13 220w

"Read in sequence, the letters present a very human and a very pathetic story."

+ Nation 97:103 J1 31 '13 500w

"An interesting volume. Not only are these letters replete with much quaint and curious comment on Occidental civilization, but they tell in a fragmentary way the pitiful little story of disillusionment which ended with the return of Zeyneb to Turkish life."

+ N Y Times 18:264 My 4 '13 850w

"In the Occident as in the Orient she seems both discontented and disenchanted. Hence, though the book is readable, the reader may become impatient. He may even think that the volume might have been condensed with profit."

+ — Outlook 104:72 My 10 '13 80w

"The letters are exceedingly good reading, and the point of view is so utterly foreign that it is hard to believe that it is nothing but a literary pose."

+ — Spec 110:833 My 17 '13 1800w

ZIWET, ALEXANDER, and FIELD, PETER.
Introduction to analytical mechanics.
*$1.60 Macmillan 12-8818

The book "covers the rectilinear motion of a point, translation and rotation, the curvilinear motion of a point, velocities and accelerations in the rigid body, relative motion, mass and density, moments and centers of mass, momentum, force and energy, statics of the particle and of the rigid body, the theory of attractive forces, motion of a free particle and of a particle under constraint, the equations of motion of a free rigid body, moments of inertia and principal axes, the motions of a rigid body with a fixed axis and with a fixed point, relative motion and the motion of a system of particles."—Engin Rec

"A thorough work, although, perhaps, too entirely theoretical for any but the advanced students of English schools."

+ — Ath 1912,1:537 My 11 30w

"This volume is based upon the larger work of Ziwet on theoretical mechanics, omitting applications to engineering. No knowledge of differential equations is presupposed. The high praise which the larger treatise has received is equally merited by this. It would seem that a work like this would be more useful and acceptable to all classes of students if it included at least a few pointed allusions to practical cases and striking illustrations of the principles presented." Robert Fletcher.

+ — Engin N 67:1149 Je 13 '12 600w

"A book which will be welcomed by the earnest student and the instructor who receives well-trained classes."

+ Engin Rec 66:675 D 14 '12 270w

ZWINGLI, ULRICH. Latin works and the correspondence of Huldreich Zwingli, the reformer of German Switzerland; together with selections from his German works in English translation, by H: Preble, Walter Lichtenstein, Lawrence A. McLouth, and G: W. Gilmore; ed. by S: Macauley Jackson. v 1 *$2 Putnam 12-23956

This is the initial volume of the first translation of Zwingli's work to appear in English. "This volume, and those yet to come, are based on the fourth edition—that of Egli and Finsler—of Zwingli's works now appearing in 'Corpus reformatorum,' from the German press, next to Melancthon and Calvin in the series, and to comprise several volumes. There will be included all the Latin treatises, all letters by or to Zwingli, material from his German writings including the First and Second Disputations, but probably not Commentaries on the Bible. This volume covers the period 1510-1522. It is prefaced by an original life of Zwingli by Myconius, written in Latin in 1532 and the first life ever written." (Lit D)

"The labors of editor and translators must be highly commended." J. M. Vincent.

+ Am Hist R 18:621 Ap '13 500w

+ Am J Theol 17:325 Ap '13 200w

Ath 1912,2:623 N 23 80w

+ — Eng Hist R 28:608 J1 '13 320w

+ Lit D 45:808 N 2 '12 300w

"The translation of the Latin writings is by Mr. Henry Preble, that of the German works by Dr. Walter Lichtenstein and Prof. L. A. McLouth. Their work is excellently done, with due regard alike to fidelity to the original and to correct and idiomatic English. The editor's contribution shows that meticulous care in details which we have learned to expect from Dr. Jackson. It is matter for congratulation that we are now to have in English a worthy presentation of the writings of a man whose appeal to the modern spirit is as direct as Luther's and is often much more in the temper of our approach to the problems not only of practical religion but of national honor."

+ Nation 95:570 D 12 '12 270w

Outlook 102:779 D 7 '12 130w

Subject and Title Index

To Author Entries, January—December, 1913

- Ability to converse. Bligh, S. M. (Mr '13)
Abysmal brute. London, J. (Jl '13)
- Accounting.
 Klein, J. J. Elements of accounting. (D '13)
Across the Andes. Post, C. J. (My '13)
Across unknown South America. Landor, A. H.: S. (D '13)
- Actors and actresses
 Macready, W. C. Diaries of William Charles Macready, 1833-1851. (Ja '13)
 Winter, W. Wallet of time. (D '13)
Addison Broadhurst, master merchant. Woolley, E.: M. (N '13)
Adnam's orchard. Grand, S. (Mr '13)
- Adolescence
 Andrews, C. B. Introduction to the study of adolescent education. (Ja '13)
Advance of woman. Christie, J. J. (F '13)
- Adventure and adventurers
 Booth, W. S., ed. Wonderful escapes by Americans. (D '13)
Adventures of a newspaper man. Dilnot, F. (D '13)
Adventures of an elephant hunter. Sutherland, J. (F '13)
Adventures of Captain O'Shea. Paine, R. D. (N '13)
Adventures of Dr. Whitty. Hannay, J. O. (Ag '13)
Adventures of Johnny Chuck. Burgess, T. W. (D '13)
Adventures of Miss Gregory. Gibbon, P. (My '13)
Adventures of Reddy Fox. Burgess, T. W. (D '13)
- Adventurous Simplicissimus. Grimmelshausen, H. J. C. v. (D '13)
- Advertising
 Cherington, P. T. Advertising as a business force. (Jl '13)
 MacGregor, T. D. Two thousand points for financial advertising. (Mr '13)
 Parsons, F. A. Principles of advertising arrangement. (Ag '13)
- Aeronautics
 Hayward, C. B. Practical aeronautics. (Ja '13)
- Aeroplanes
 Verrill, A. H. Harper's aircraft book. (D '13)
- Affair of state. Snaith, J. C. (My '13)
- Africa
 Melland, F. H., and Cholmeley, E.: H. Through the heart of Africa. (F '13)
 Powell, E. A. Last frontier. (Ja '13)
- Africa, Central
 Alexander, B. Boyd Alexander's last journey. (Mr '13)
 Gouldsbury, C. African year. (Je '13)
 Torday, E. Camp and tramp in African wilds. (My '13)
- Africa, East
 Boyes, J. E. White king in East Africa. (Ja '13)
 Cranworth, B. F. G. Colony in the making. (S '13)
 White, S. E. African camp fires. (O '13)
- Africa, North
 Bullard, A. Barbary coast. (D '13)
 Edwards, M. B. Betham-. In French-Africa. (Ap '13)
 Grant, C. F. and L. African shores of the Mediterranean. (Ja '13)
- Africa, West
 Harris, J. H. Dawn in darkest Africa. (Mr '13)
 Milligan, R. H. Fetish folk of West Africa. (Ap '13)
- African camp fires. White, S. E. (O '13)
African shores of the Mediterranean. Grant, C. F. and L. (Ja '13)
African year. Gouldsbury, C. (Je '13)
After all. Cholmondeley, M. (D '13)
Age of the earth. Holmes, A. (S '13)
- Agriculture
 Cato, M. P. Roman farm management. (S '13)
 Clute, W. N. Agronomy. (My '13)
 Hunt, T. F. Young farmer. (Ap '13)
 Stebbins, C. A. Principles of agriculture. (O '13)
 Warren, G. F. Farm management. (Jl '13)
- England
 Prothero, R. E. English farming, past and present. (Je '13)
- United States
 Anderson, F. I. Farmer of to-morrow. (Jl '13)
- Agriculture, Cooperative
 Powell, G. H. Cooperation in agriculture. (Je '13)
 Agronomy, Clute, W. N. (My '13)
 Air compression and transmission. Thorkelson, H. J. B. (S '13)
 Air pilot. Parrish, R. (Je '13)
 Aladdin from Broadway. Isham, F. S. (O '13)
- Alaska
 Thomas, W. S. Trails and tramps in Alaska and Newfoundland. (Jl '13)
 Underwood, J. J. Alaska. (Jl '13)
- Alcibiades, 450?-404 B. C.
 Plutarch. Nicias and Alcibiades. (F '13)
- Alcohol, Physiological effect of Partridge, G. E. Studies in the psychology of intemperance. (F '13)
- Aldrich plan in the light of modern banking.
 Bendix, L. (Jl '13)
- Algeria
 Devereux, R., pseud. Aspects of Algeria. (Ja '13)
- All about ships. Dorling, T. (Ja '13)
All manner of folk. Jackson, H. (Ja '13)
All the days of my life. Barr, A. E. (Ag '13)
Along France's river of romance: the Loire.
 Goldring, D. (D '13)
Along Germany's river of romance, the Moselle.
 Tower, C. (D '13)
Along Spain's river of romance. Slater, E. (Ja '13)
- Along the road. Benson, A. C. (Ap '13)
- Alpine plants
 Flemwell, G. Flower fields of Alpine Switzerland. (Ja '13)
- Alpine studies. Coolidge, W.: A. B. (Ja '13)
- Alps
 Coolidge, W.: A. B. Alpine studies. (Ja '13)
 Davidson, L. M. Gates of the Dolomites. (Ja '13)
- Alternating-current machinery. Esty, W.: (My '13)
- Amateur gentleman. Farnol, J. (Ap '13)
Ambassadress. Wriothsley, W.: pseud. (Ag '13)
Ambition of Mark Truitt. Miller, H.: R. (Jl '13)
- America
 Anghiera, P. M. d'. De orbe novo. (My '13)
 America as I saw it. Tweedie, E. B. (D '13)
 American beginnings in Europe. Gordy, W. F. (Mr '13)
 American business encyclopædia and legal adviser. Long, J. D., and others. (N '13)
 American child. McCracken, E. (My '13)
 American city government. Beard, C.: A. (Ja '13)
 American graphic art. Weitenkampf, F. (Mr '13)

- American ideals, character and life. Mable, H. W. (D '13)
- American literature
Long, W: J. American literature. (D '13)
Macy, J: A. Spirit of American literature. (Ap '13)
- American machinist grinding book. Colvin, F. H., and Stanley, F. A. (Ap '13)
- American Mediterranean. Bonsal, S. (Ja '13)
- American nobility. Favre de Coulevain, Mlle. (My '13)
- American occupation of the Philippines. Blount, J. H. (Ja '13)
- American patriotism. Münsterberg, H. (Je '13)
- American railroad economics. Sakolski, A. M. (D '13)
- American social and religious conditions. Stelzle, C. (F '13)
- American spirit. Straus, O. S. (Je '13)
- American syndicalism. Brooks, J: G. (Jl '13)
- American telegraph practice. McNicol, D. (D '13)
- Americans. Schoonmaker, E. D. (S '13)
- Americans and others. Reppler, A. (Mr '13)
- Americans in Panama. Scott, W: R. (F '13)
- Among Congo cannibals. Weeks, J: H. (F '13)
- Among famous books. Kelman, J: (Je '13)
- Among my books. Harrison, F: (F '13)
- Analyses of the railroad corporations whose bonds are a legal investment for Massachusetts savings banks. Old Colony trust co. (O '13)
- Ancient art and ritual. Harrison, J. E. (D '13)
- Ancient Babylonia. Johns, C. H. W. (Ag '13)
- Ancient Egyptian legends. Murray, M. A. (Je '13)
- Ancient Greece. Cotterill, H: B. (D '13)
- Ancient history. Webster, H. (D '13)
- Ancient history of the near East. Hall, H. R. H. (D '13)
- Ancient stained and painted glass. Eden, F: S. (O '13)
- Andrew the Glad. Daviess, M. T. (F '13)
- Anglo-Saxon race
Knox, M. V. Religious life of the Anglo-Saxon race. (O '13)
- Animal husbandry for schools. Harper, M. W. (O '13)
- Animals
Wood, C. D. Animals. (My '13)
- Animals, Habits and behavior of Cram, W: E. More little beasts of field and wood. (Jl '13)
Mitchell, P: C. Childhood of animals. (O '13)
Pycraft, W. P. Infancy of animals. (Mr '13)
Roberts, C: G. D. Feet of the furtive. (Ap '13)
- Anna Borden's career. Münsterberg, M. A. A. (D '13)
- Annals of Fleet street. Chancellor, E. B. (Ja '13)
- Annals of the Emperor Charles V. Gómara, F. L. de. (Ag '13)
- Annals of the Strand. Chancellor, E. B. (Ja '13)
- Anne of Austria, queen consort of Louis XIII, king of France, 1601-1666
Freer, M. W. Married life of Anne of Austria. (Ag '13)
- Anne, actress. Sager, J. G. (N '13)
- Anthropology
Munro, R. Paleolithic man and terramara settlements in Europe. (F '13)
- Aphorisms
Björkman, E. Gleams. (Ja '13)
- Apostles' creed
Briggs, C: A. Fundamental Christian faith. (Jl '13)
Kunze, J. Apostles' creed and the New Testament. (O '13)
postles' creed and the New Testament. Kunze, J. (O '13)
- Applied socialism. Spargo, J: (Jl '13)
- April Panhasard. Coxon, M. (Ag '13)
- Arabia
Wavell, A. J. B. Modern pilgrim in Mecca. (Je '13)
- Arachnida
Comstock, J: H. Spider book. (Ja '13)
- Arbitration, International
Butler, N: M. International mind. (Ja '13)
- Architecture
Statham, H: H. Short critical history of architecture. (F '13)
- Architecture, Byzantine
Jackson, T: G. Byzantine and Romanesque architecture. (Ag '13)
- Architecture, Domestic
Adams, M. B., ed. Modern cottage architecture. (Ja '13)
Butterfield, W: H., and Tuttle, H. W. Book of house plans. (Je '13)
Embury, A. Dutch colonial house. (Ag '13)
Hooper, C: E. Reclaiming the old house. (Ag '13)
Tipping, H. A., ed. English homes of the early renaissance. (My '13)
White, C: E. Successful houses and how to build them. (F '13)
- Architecture, Greek
Goodyear, W: H. Greek refinements. (Ap '13)
- Architecture, Romanesque
Jackson, T: G. Byzantine and Romanesque architecture. (Ag '13)
- Arctic regions
Greely, A. W. True tales of Arctic heroism in the new world. (Ja '13)
Mikkelsen, E. Lost in the Arctic. (Ap '13)
Stefánsson, V. My life with the Eskimo. (D '13)
- Are the planets inhabited? Maunder, E: W. (Je '13)
- Argyle case. Hornblow, A. (O '13)
- Around the end. Barbour, R. H: (D '13)
- Around-the-world cook book. Barroll, M. L. H. (N '13)
- Art
Art museums and schools. (My '13)
Caffin, C: H. Art for life's sake. (Ag '13)
Carter, H. New spirit in drama and art. (O '13)
Cortissoz, R. Art and common sense. (N '13)
De Forest, J. B. Short history of art. (D '13)
Dieulafoy, M. A. Art in Spain and Portugal. (D '13)
Dow, A. W. Theory and practice of teaching art. (Je '13)
Henderson, H. W. Art treasures of Washington. (Ja '13)
Heyl, C: C. Art of the Uffizi palace and the Florence academy. (Ja '13)
Poore, H: R. Conception of art. (S '13)
Rodin, A. Art. (Ja '13)
- Art, Ancient
Harrison, J. E. Ancient art and ritual. (D '13)
- Art, Egyptian
Maspero, G. C. C. Art in Egypt. (Mr '13)
Maspero, G. C. C. Egyptian art. (D '13)
- Art, Greek
Powers, H. H. Message of Greek art. (O '13)
- Art, Primitive
Spearing, H. G. Childhood of art. (Ap '13)
Art and common sense. Cortissoz, R. (N '13)
- Art and craft of garden making. Mawson, T: H. (Ap '13)
- Art for life's sake. Caffin, C: H. (Ag '13)
- Art in Egypt. Maspero, G. C. C. (Mr '13)
- Art of entertaining. Glover, E. H. (O '13)
- Art of golf. Taylor, J. (Je '13)
- Art of the Uffizi palace and the Florence academy. Heyl, C: C. (Ja '13)
- Art of the Wallace collection. Shelley, H: C. (S '13)
- Art treasures of Washington. Henderson, H. W. (Ja '13)
- Artificial flower makers. Van Kleeck, M. (S '13)
- Artist in Egypt. Tyndale, W. (Mr '13)
- Artist in Italy. Tyndale, W. (D '13)
- Artistic bridge design. Tyrrell, H: G. (My '13)
- Artists, British
Rowbotham, F. J. Story-lives of our great artists. (F '13)

Artists, French

- Courbet, G. Gustave Courbet. (Jl '13)
 Manet, E. Edouard Manet. (My '13)
 Puvis de Chavannes, P. Puvis de Chavannes. (Ap '13)

Artists, Italian

- Vasari, G. Lives of the most eminent painters, sculptors and architects. (F '13)
 As he was born. Gallon, T. (F '13)
 Ashes and sparks. White, P. (Ap '13)
 Aspects of Algeria. Devereux, R., pseud. (Ja '13)
 Aspects of home rule. Balfour, A. J. (F '13)
 Aspects of the Irish question. Brooks, S. (Ja '13)
 Asphalt construction for pavements and highways. Richardson, C. (Ag '13)
 Assurance of immortality. Fosdick, H. E. (D '13)

Astronomy

- Jacoby, H. Astronomy. (N '13)
 At Prior Park. Dobson, A. (F '13)

Atlantic states

- Bell, M. V. Journey to Ohio in 1810. (Ja '13)

Atmosphere

- Berry, A. J. Atmosphere. (N '13)
 Attractive way. Grenfell, W. T. (D '13)
 Auburn and freckles. Marsh, M. L. (N '13)

Auditing

- Montgomery, R. H. Auditing, theory and practice. (Ap '13)

Augustine, St., of Canterbury, d. 604

- Howorth, H. H. Saint Augustine of Canterbury. (Je '13)

Austen, Jane, 1775-1817

- Austen-Leigh, W. and R. A. Jane Austen. (Ag '13)
 Cornish, F. W. Jane Austen. (D '13)

Australasia

- Tilby, A. W. Australasia, 1688-1911. (O '13)

Australla

- Searcy, A. By flood and field. (My '13)
 Wise, B. R. Making of the Australian commonwealth. (D '13)

Austria

- Baker, J. Austria. (My '13)
 Clark, F. E. Old homes of new Americans. (Ap '13)

Court and courtiers

- Lamszus, W. Human slaughter-house. (Jl '13)
 Larisch von Moennich, M. L. E. My past. (Jl '13)
 Authority of religious experience. Slaterry, C. L. (F '13)

Authors, American

- Pickett, L. C. Literary hearthstones of Dixie. (F '13)

Authors, English

- Vincent, L. H. Dandies and men of letters. (D '13)

Authors, French

- Babbitt, I. Masters of modern French criticism. (F '13)

Authorship

- Manly, J. M., and Powell, J. A. Manual for writers. (D '13)
 Autobiography of a working woman. Popp, A. (Ag '13)
 Autobiography of an individualist. Fagan, J. O. (Ja '13)

Automobiles

- Page, V. W. Modern gasoline automobile. (Mr '13)
 Average man. Benson, R. H. (N '13)
 Awakening of the desert. Birge, J. C. (Jl '13)

Babylonia

- Johns, C. H. W. Ancient Babylonia. (Ag '13)
 Bachelors' buttons. Burke, E. (Je '13)
 Back home. Cobb, I. S. (Ja '13)
 Baconian heresy. Robertson, J. M. (Jl '13)

Bacteriology

- Buchanan, E. D. and R. E. Household bacteriology. (Je '13)

Balkan war, 1912-1913

- Ashmead-Bartlett, E. and S. With the Turks in Thrace. (Ap '13)
 Buxton, N. E. With the Bulgarian staff. (Je '13)
 Campbell, C. Balkan war drama. (Ap '13)
 Gibbs, P., and Grant, B. Balkan war. (Mr '13)
 James, L. With the conquered Turk. (Ap '13)
 Wagner, H. With the victorious Bulgarians. (Ap '13)
 Ballads weird and wonderful. Choep, R. P., ed. (Ja '13)

Banks and banking

- Bendix, L. Aldrich plan in the light of modern banking. (Jl '13)

Baptists

- Brown, L. F. Political activities of the Baptists, and Fifth monarchy men in England during the interregnum. (Ag '13)
 Barbara. Askew, A. J. de C. and C. A. C. (Ag '13)

Barbara Gwynne. Trites, W. B. (Je '13)Barbary coast. Bullard, A. (D '13)*Barn doors and byways. Eaton, W. P. (D '13)*Barrows, Samuel June, 1845-1909*Barrows, I. C. Sunny life. (Jl '13)*Barry Wynn. Barton, G. (Mr '13)*Baseball*How to play baseball. (Ap '13)*Battle of Gettysburg. Young, J. B. (Ag '13)*Battles*Atteridge, A. H. Famous modern battles. (D '13)*Battleship. Wood, W. (Ja '13)*Baudelaire, Charles, 1821-1867*Turquet-Milnes, G. Influence of Baudelaire in France and England. (My '13)*Bavaria*Court and courtiers*Larisch von Moennich, M. L. E. My past. (Jl '13)*Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli, 1st earl of, 1804-1881*Monypenny, W. F. Life of Benjamin Disraeli. (Ja '13)*Beard birds. Beard, A. B. (Ja '13)*Beatrice of Denewood. Knipe, E. and A. A. (N '13)*Beavers

- Mills, E. A. In beaver world. (My '13)
 Because of Jane. Buckrose, Mrs. J. E. (D '13)
 Bedrock. Diggs, A. L. (Je '13)
 Bee, the princess of the dwarfs. France, A. (Ja '13)

BeesMaeterlinck, M. Life of the bee. (F '13)*Beets and beet sugar

- Blakey, R. G. United States beet-sugar industry and the tariff. (Ja '13)
 Beginner in poultry. Valentine, C. S. (F '13)
 Beginnings of modern Ireland. Willson, P. (O '13)

Beginnings of San Francisco. Eldredge, Z. S. (My '13)Behind the beyond. Leacock, S. B. (D '13)*Behind the dark pines. Young, M. (F '13)*Being*Hermance, W. E. Unorthodox conception of being. (Je '13)*Belgium

- Griffis, W. E. Belgium. (Ja '13)
 Belief in immortality and the worship of the dead. Frazer, J. G. (O '13)
 Beloved adventure. Wheelock, J. H. (F '13)
 Bend in the road. De Weese, T. A. (Je '13)
 Bendish. Hewlett, M. H. (N '13)

Bergson, Henri Louis, 1859-

- Columbia univ. Library. Contribution to a bibliography of Henri Bergson. (My '13)
 Dodson, G. R. Bergson and the modern spirit. (N '13)

Hermann, E. Eucken and Bergson. (Ap '13)Kitchin, D. B. Bergson for beginners. (D '13)*Le Roy, E. L. E. J. New philosophy of Henri Bergson. (Jl '13)

Bermuda Islands

Redman, J. L. Isles in summer seas. (Ag '13)
 Best motor routes through Europe. Webber, G.: D. (My '13)

Best of a bad job. Duncan, N. (Ja '13)

Best stories in the world. Masson, T.: L., comp. (D '13)

Best stories to tell to children. Bryant, S. C. (Ja '13)

Beyond the old frontier. Grinnell, G.: B. (N '13)

Bible. WholeAbout the Bible

Elliott, G.: Biblical criticism and preaching. (My '13)

Peloubet, F. N., and Adams, A. D., eds. International Bible dictionary. (F '13)

Bible. Old TestamentAbout the Old Testament

Eiselen, F.: C. Christian view of the Old Testament. (Mr '13)

Mitchell, H. G. Ethics of the Old Testament. (F '13)

Moore, G.: F. Literature of the Old Testament. (Jl '13)

Criticism, interpretation, etc.

Gray, G. B. Critical introduction to the Old Testament. (S '13)

History

Hodges, G.: Classbook of Old Testament history. (D '13)

Parts of the Old TestamentMinor prophets

Mitchell, H. G., and others. Critical and exegetical commentary on Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi and Jonah. (F '13)

Ezra

Batten, L.: W. Critical and exegetical commentary on the books of Ezra and Nehemiah. (N '13)

Nehemiah

Batten, L.: W. Critical and exegetical commentary on the books of Ezra and Nehemiah. (N '13)

Job

Strahan, J. Book of Job interpreted. (S '13)

Bible. New TestamentAbout the New Testament

Lester, C.: S. Historic Jesus. (Ap '13)

Moffat, J. Theology of the gospels. (Ap '13)

Souter, A. Text and canon of the New Testament. (My '13)

History, Literary

Milligan, G.: New Testament documents. (D '13)

Parts of the New TestamentGospels

Holdsworth, W.: W. Gospel origins. (O '13)

St. Luke

Hayes, D. A. Most beautiful book ever written. (D '13)

Thessalonians

Frame, J. E. Critical and exegetical commentary on the Epistles of St. Paul to the Thessalonians. (Ja '13)

St John—Epistles

Brooke, A. E. Critical and exegetical commentary on the Johannine epistles. (F '13)

Bible classes

Wells, A. R. Ideal adult class in the Sunday-school. (Mr '13)

Bible that was lost and is found. Bigelow, J.: (Mr '13)

Biblical and theological studies. Princeton theological seminary. (F '13)

Biblical criticism and preaching. Elliott, G.: (My '13)

Big book of fables. Jerrold, W. C., comp. (F '13)

Big game of central and western China. Wallace, H. F. (N '13)

Biography

Mathews, B. Splendid quest. (D '13)

Biology

Hartog, M. M. Problems of life and reproduction. (Ap '13)

Birds

Beard, A. B. Beard birds. (Ja '13)

Laing, H. M. Out with the birds. (Jl '13)

Bishop's purse. Moffett, C., and Herford, O. (My '13)

Bismarck-Schönhausen, Karl Otto Eduard Leopold, fürst von, 1815-1898

Ashley, A. Social policy of Bismarck. (Je '13)

Bismya

Banks, E. J. Bismya. (Ja '13)

Black brotherhood and some of its sisters. Garrold, R.: P. (Ja '13)

Blackfeet Indian stories. Grinnell, G.: B. (O '13)

Blake, William, 1757-1827

Russell, A. G.: B. Engravings of William Blake. (My '13)

Blindness of virtue. Hamilton, C. (Ag '13)

Blue-bird weather. Chambers, R. W.: (Ja '13)

Bobbie, general manager. Prouty, O. H. (Ap '13)

Bonds

Chamberlain, L. Work of the bond house. (My '13)

Book of annuals. Saylor, H.: H. (N '13)

Book of beggars. Adams, W. D. (F '13)

Book of comfort. Miller, J. R. (Mr '13)

Book of delight. Abrahams, I. (Ap '13)

Book of discovery. Synge, M. B. (F '13)

Book of Evelyn. Bonner, G. (O '13)

Book of fairy-tale bears. Johnson, C. (N '13)

Book of hand-woven coverlets. Obenchain, E. C. (Ja '13)

Book of house plans. Butterfield, W.: H., and Tuttle, H. W. (Je '13)

Book of Indian braves. Sweetser, K. D. (N '13)

Book of Job interpreted. Strahan, J. (S '13)

Book of winter sports. Dier, J. C., ed. (Ja '13)

Book of woodcraft and Indian lore. Seton, E. T. (F '13)

Books and reading

Gray, W. F., ed. Books that count. (Mr '13)

Harrison, F.: Among my books. (F '13)

Olcott, F. J. Children's reading. (Ja '13)

Watson, J.: Books and bookmen. (Mr '13)

Booth, Rev. William, 1829-1912

Railton, G.: S. Authoritative life of General William Booth, founder of the Salvation army. (Mr '13)

Bordeaux

Vinogradov, P. G., ed. Oxford studies in social and legal history. (D '13)

Borgia family

Fyvie, J.: Story of the Borgias. (Ap '13)

Garner, J.: L. Caesar Borgia. (Ja '13)

Boston, Massachusetts

Sullivan, T.: R. Boston, new and old. (Ja '13)

Botany

Britton, N. L., and Brown, A. Illustrated flora of the northern United States, Canada and the British possessions. (D '13)

Ganong, W.: F. Living plant. (Jl '13)

Knight, A. E., and Steep, E.: Popular botany. (S '13)

Sargent, F.: L. Plants and their uses. (S '13)

Timirjazev, K. A. Life of the plant. (F '13)

History

Arber, A. Herbals. (S '13)

Oliver, F. W., ed. Makers of British botany. (D '13)

Juvenile and popular literature

Torelle, E. Plant and animal children. (Je '13)

Switzerland

Thompson, H. S. Sub-alpine plants. (F '13)

Both sides of 100 public questions briefly debated. Shurter, E. D., and Taylor, C. C. (Je '13)

- Boundaries and landmarks. Mulford, A. C. (F '13)
- Bountiful hour. Fox, M. (F '13)
- Boy and the Sunday school. Alexander, J; L. (N '13)
- Boy in the country. Stevenson, J. (Ap '13)
- Boy sailors of 1812. Tomlinson, E. T. (O '13)
- Boy scouts
 Baden-Powell, R. S. S. Boy scouts beyond the seas. (N '13)
 Cave, E: Boy scout's hike book. (D '13)
- Boys
 Alexander, J: L. Boy and the Sunday school. (N '13)
 Bartow, H. E. Our boy. (N '13)
 Hyde, W: D. Quest of the best. (D '13)
 Kirtley, J. S: That boy of yours. (My '13)
 McKeever, W: A. Training the boy. (My '13)
 Werner, C. Bringing up the boy. (Jl '13)
 Whitehouse, J: H., ed. Problems of boy life. (F '13)
- Boys and girls. Foley, J. W: (D '13)
- Boys' book of modern marvels. Clarke, C: J. L. (Ja '13)
- Boy's book of new inventions. Maule, H. E: (F '13)
- Boys' make-at-home things. Bailey, C. S. and M. E. (Ap '13)
- Boy's playbook of science. Pepper, J: H: (F '13)
- Brass faces. McEvoy, C: (Jl '13)
- Brasses
 Ward, J. S. M. Brasses. (F '13)
- Brave deeds of revolutionary soldiers. Duncan, R. B. (D '13)
- Bravest of the brave. Atteridge, A. H. (F '13)
- Bread
 Wood, T: B. Story of a loaf of bread. (N '13)
- Brewing. Chapman, A. C. (Mr '13)
- Bridge whist
 Foster, R. F: Royal auction bridge. (Ja '13)
- Bridges
 Tyrrell, H: G. Artistic bridge design. (My '13)
- Bright, John, 1811-1889
 Trevelyan, G. M. Life of John Bright. (Ag '13)
- Bringing up the boy. Werner, C. (Jl '13)
- British and American eloquence. Fulton, R. I. and Trueblood, T: C. (My '13)
- British in Paris
 Boutet de Monvel, R. Eminent English men and women in Paris. (Jl '13)
- British invasion of Maryland, 1812-1815. Marine, W: M. (O '13)
- British pictures and their painters. Lucas, E: V. (My '13)
- British radicalism, 1791-1797. Hall, W. P. (Ap '13)
- British social politics. Hayes, C. H., comp. (My '13)
- Brittany
 McBride, R. M. Little book of Brittany. (Jl '13)
- Broken arcs. Figgis, D. (Ja '13)
- Broken halo. Barclay, F. L. (D '13)
- Bronx (borough)
 Jenkins, S. Story of the Bronx. (Ja '13)
- Browning, Robert, 1812-1889
 Clarke, H. A. Browning and his century. (Mr '13)
 Moxom, P. S. Two masters, Browning and Turgenev. (F '13)
- Browns. Buckrose, Mrs. J. E. (Mr '13)
- Bubbles of the foam. Bain, F. W: (Ja '13)
- Buccaneers. Seitz, D. C. (F '13)
- Bugles of Gettysburg. Pickett, L. C. (Jl '13)
- Building stones
 Eckel, E. C. Building stones and clays. (F '13)
 Rles, H. Building stones and clay-products. (F '13)
- Bunch grass. Vachell, H. A. (Mr '13)
- Bunch of little thieves. Greenberg, D: S. (S '13)
- Bunker Bean. Wilson, H. L. (F '13)
- Burden of a woman. Pryce, R: (Ap '13)
- Burgundy
 Allen, P. Burgundy. (Ja '13)
- Burke, Edmund, 1729?-1797
 MacCunn, J: Political philosophy of Burke. (N '13)
- Burma
 Dautremere, J. Burma under British rule. (S '13)
- Burney, Frances (Mme. D'Arblay) 1752-1840
 Hill, C. Fanny Burney at the court of Queen Charlotte. (F '13)
- Burning question. Litchfield, G. D. (Ap '13)
- Business
 Brisco, N. A. Economics of business. (Ag '13)
 Long, J: D., and others. American business encyclopædia and legal adviser. (N '13)
 Marden, O. S. Progressive business man. (N '13)
 Redfield, W: C. New industrial day. (Ja '13)
 Rose, W: G. Success in business. (My '13)
- Bibliography
 Business book bureau. What to read on business. (Mr '13)
 Business of being a woman. Tarbell, I. M. (Mr '13)
 Business of insurance. Dunham, H. P., ed. (My '13)
 Business of life. Chambers, R. W: (N '13)
 Business of mining. Hoskin, A. J. (F '13)
 Business organization and combination. Haney, L: H: (D '13)
 Bust of Lincoln. Dwyer, J. F. (Ja '13)
 Busy time in Mexico. Pollard, H. B. C. (Ag '13)
- Bute, John Stuart, earl of, 1718-1792
 Lovat-Fraser, J. A. John Stuart, earl of Bute. (Ap '13)
- By flood and field. Searcy, A. (My '13)
- By-paths in collecting. Robie, V. (Ja '13)
- By the open sea. Strindberg, A. (D '13)
- Byron, George Gordon Noel Byron, 6th baron, 1788-1824
 Fuess, C. M. Lord Byron as a satirist in verse. (Mr '13)
 Mayne, E. C. Byron. (F '13)
- Byzantine and Romanesque architecture. Jackson, T: G. (Ag '13)
- Byzantine churches in Constantinople. Van Millingen, A., and Traquair, R. (Je '13)
- California
 Chase, J. S. California coast trails. (My '13)
 Johnson, A. T. California. (Ag '13)
 Norton, H: K. Story of California. (S '13)
 Saunders, C: F. Under the sky in California. (Ag '13)
 Torrey, B. Field-days in California. (Ap '13)
 Call of the Cumberlands. Buck, C: N. (N '13)
 Calling the tune. McCarthy, J. H. (O '13)
- Calvin, John, 1509-1564
 Penning, L. Life and times of Calvin. (O '13)
- Cambridge university
 Tennyson, C. Cambridge from within. (D '13)
- Camp and tramp in African wilds. Torday, E. (My '13)
- Camp Brave Pine. Comstock, H. T. (N '13)
- Campaigns of a war correspondent. Prior, M. (F '13)
- Camping
 Marks, J. A. Vacation camping for girls. (O '13)
- Camping on western trails. Gregor, E. R. (N '13)
- Canada
 Adams, J. Ten thousand miles through Canada. (Ja '13)
 Clarke, J: M. Heart of Gaspé. (N '13)
 Douglas, J. New England and New France. (D '13)
 Durham, J: G. L. Lord Durham's report on the affairs of British North America. (My '13)
 Goodrich, J. K. Coming Canada. (D '13)
 Leith, C: K. and A. T. Summer and winter on Hudson bay. (Ag '13)
 Stewart, E. Down the Mackenzie and up the Yukon in 1906. (My '13)
 Wood, W: In the heart of old Canada. (D '13)

- Candid adventurer. Ladd, A. C. (My '13)
Candid history of the Jesuits. McCabe, J. (D '13)
Candy-making revolutionized. Hall, M. E. (Mr '13)
Canterbury, England
 Taylor, G.: R. S. Story of Canterbury. (F '13)
Canterbury cathedral
 Woodruff, C. E., and Banks, W.: Memorials of the cathedral and priory of Christ in Canterbury. (F '13)
Capers, Ellison, 1837-1908
 Capers, W. B. Soldier-bishop, Ellison Capers. (Ap '13)
Capital punishment
 Fanning, C. E., comp. Selected articles on capital punishment. (O '13)
Capitalization. Lyon, W. H. (D '13)
Cappello, Bianca, 1548-1587
 Steegmann, M. G. Bianca Cappello. (O '13)
Caravan tales. Hauff, W. (F '13)
Care of the body. Woodworth, R. S. (Jl '13)
Career of Beauty Darling. Wyllarde, D. (F '13)
Caribbean sea
 Bonsal, S. American Mediterranean. (Ja '13)
Carmen Sylva. Loti, P. (Ja '13)
Carolina mountains. Morley, M. W. (D '13)
Case for woman suffrage. Franklin, M. L. (Jl '13)
Case of Jennie Brice. Rinehart, M. R. (Ap '13)
Castiglione, Virginia (Oldoini) contessa di, d. 1899
 Loliée, F.: A. Romance of a favourite. (F '13)
Castles
 Evans, H. A. Castles of England and Wales. (Ja '13)
 Shelley, H.: C. Royal castles of England. (D '13)
Catch-my-pal. Patterson, R. J. (Je '13)
Catfish. Marriott, C.: (Je '13)
Cathedrals
 Atkinson, T.: D. English and Welsh cathedrals. (Ja '13)
 Bond, F. Cathedrals of England and Wales. (F '13)
 Bumpus, T.: F. Cathedrals of southern France. (D '13)
 Kimball, K. F. English cathedral journey. (Je '13)
Cellini, Benvenuto, 1500-1571.
 Cust, R. H.: H. Benvenuto Cellini. (Ja '13)
Cement
 Cochran, J. Treatise on cement specifications. (My '13)
Central America
 James, W. L. Mulberry tree. (D '13)
 Putnam, G.: P. Southland of North America. (Jl '13)
Certainty and justice. Coudert, F.: R. (O '13)
Chafing-dish. James, A. L. (Ap '13)
Chain of prayer across the ages. Fox, S. F., comp. (D '13)
Chains. Baker, E. (Jl '13)
Challenge of the country. Fiske, G.: W. (Jl '13)
Change in the village. Bourne, G.: pseud. (F '13)
Change signals. Barbour, R. H.: (Mr '13)
Changed man. Hardy, T.: (D '13)
Changing Russia. Graham, S. (Jl '13)
Chansons de geste
 Farnsworth, W.: O. Uncle and nephew in the Old French chansons de geste. (O '13)
Charcoals of new and old New York. Smith, F. H. (F '13)
Charity
 Allen, W.: H. Modern philanthropy. (F '13)
 Devine, E.: T. Family and social work. (Mr '13)
Charles V, emperor of Germany, 1500-1558
 Gómara, F. L. de. Annals of the Emperor Charles V. (Ag '13)
Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy, 1433-1477
 Haggard, A. C.: P. Louis XI and Charles the Bold. (D '13)
Charm of Edinburgh. Hyatt, A. H., comp. (D '13)
Charm of Paris. Hyatt, A. H., comp. (D '13)
Charming of Estercel. Rhys, G. (O '13)
Charrington, Frederick N.
 Gull, C. A. E.: R. Great acceptance. (My '13)
Chats with children of the church. Farrar, J. M. (F '13)
Chaucer, Geoffrey, 1340?-1400
 Legouis, E. H. Geoffrey Chaucer. (Mr '13)
Chemistry, Physical and theoretical
 Bigelow, S.: L. Theoretical and physical chemistry. (Ja '13)
 Jones, H. C. Freezing-point, boiling-point and conductivity methods. (Ap '13)
 Partington, J. R. Higher mathematics for chemical students. (F '13)
Chemistry, Technical
 Rogers, A., and others, eds. Industrial chemistry. (Je '13)
 Thorpe, T.: E., and others. Dictionary of applied chemistry. (N '13)
Chequer-board. Grant, S. (Ap '13)
Chief constable. Brown, V. (F '13)
Child. Sill, E. M. (Jl '13)
Child labor
 Dawley, T.: R., jr. Child that toileth not. (Ap '13)
Child life
 Bradley, R. M. Children at play and other sketches. (Ja '13)
Child of storm. Haggard, H.: R. (Ap '13)
Child of the Amazons. Eastman, M. (Ag '13)
Child study
 Dinsmore, J.: W. Training of children. (Mr '13)
 Montessori, M. Pedagogical anthropology. (O '13)
Child that toileth not. Dawley, T.: R., jr. (Ap '13)
Childhood of animals. Mitchell, P.: C. (O '13)
Childhood of art. Spearing, H. G. (Ap '13)
Children
 McCracken, E. American child. (My '13)
 Care and hygiene
 Barnesby, N. Mother and the child. (D '13)
 Sill, E. M. The child. (Jl '13)
 Charities, protection, etc.
 Engel, S. Elements of child-protection. (Jl '13)
 Management
 Gruenberg, S. M. Your child today and tomorrow. (D '13)
Children at play. Bradley, R. M. (Ja '13)
Children in art
 Bryant, L. Famous pictures of real boys and girls. (Ja '13)
Children in London
 Slade, D. Gutter-babies. (My '13)
Children in the shadow. Coulter, E. K. (My '13)
Children of light. Converse, F. (Ja '13)
Children of the wild. Roberts, C.: G. D. (D '13)
Children's book of Christmas stories. Dickinson, A. D., and Skinner, A. M., eds. (N '13)
Children's books for Sunday school libraries.
 Herbert, C. W., comp. (Ap '13)
Children's literature
 Olcott, F. J. Children's reading. (Ja '13)
 Bibliography
 Herbert, C. W., comp. Children's books for Sunday school libraries. (Ap '13)
Children's play and its place in education.
 Wood, W. (D '13)
Children's poetry
 Shepard, M. Prayers for little men and women. (F '13)
Children's reading. Olcott, F. J. (Ja '13)
Child's book of American history. Blaisdell, A. F., and Ball, F. K. (O '13)
Child's book of warriors. Canton, W.: (Ag '13)
Chimay, Jeanne Marie Ignace Thérèse de Cabarus, princess de (Madame Tallien), 1773-1835
 Gastine, L.: J. Madame Tallien. (D '13)
Chimneys
 Shuffrey, L. A. English fireplace. (Mr '13)

China

Conger, S. Old China and young America. (O '13)

Biography

Burton, M. E. Notable women of modern China. (F '13)

Li Hung Chang. Memoirs. (D '13)

Description and travel

Kendall, E. K. Wayfarer in China. (Ap '13)

History

Bland, J. O. P. Recent events and present policies in China. (F '13)

Giles, H. A. China and the Manchus. (F '13)

Gowen, H. H. Outline history of China. (My '13)

Kent, P. H. B. Passing of the Manchus. (F '13)

McCormick, F. Flowery republic. (Ag '13)

Politics and government

Koo, V. K. W. Status of aliens in China. (My '13)

Religion

Groot, J. J. M. de. Religion in China. (My '13)

Social life and customs

Goodrich, J. K. Our neighbors: the Chinese. (D '13)

MacGowan, J. Men and manners of modern China. (F '13)

China and the Manchus. Giles, H. A. (F '13)

Chivalry in English literature. Schofield, W. H. (Ap '13)

Chloride of lime in sanitation. Hooker, A. H. (N '13)

Chocolate

Whympers, R. Cocoa and chocolate. (F '13)

Christian faith for men of today. Cook, E. A. (O '13)

Christian life

Grenfell, W. T. Attractive way. (D '13)

Miller, J. R. Book of comfort. (Mr '13)

Voluntas Del. (Mr '13)

Christian reconstruction of modern life. Dickinson, C. H. (N '13)

Christian view of the Old Testament. Elselen, F. C. (Mr '13)

Christianity

Barton, G. A. Heart of the Christian message. (Ap '13)

Clemen, C. C. Primitive Christianity and its non-Jewish sources. (My '13)

Cook, E. A. Christian faith for men of today. (O '13)

Faunce, W. H. P. What does Christianity mean? (Mr '13)

Figgis, J. N. Civilization at the cross roads. (Ja '13)

Hall, T. C. Historical setting of the early gospel. (Ap '13)

Royce, J. Problem of Christianity. (Ag '13)

Slattery, C. L. Authority of religious experience. (F '13)

Smith, W. B. Ecce Deus. (My '13)

Spencer, F. A. M. Meaning of Christianity. (S '13)

Underhill, E. Mystic way. (O '13)

Evidences

Rainsford, W. S. Reasonableness of the religion of Jesus. (Jl '13)

Christianity and commerce. Paradise, F. I. (Ag '13)

Christianizing the social order. Rauschenbusch, W. (F '13)

Christmas garland. Beerbohm, M. (Ja '13)

Christmas tales and Christmas verse. Field, E. (Ja '13)

Christmas Tree house. Leonard, M. F. (N '13)

Chronicle of the popes. McKilliam, A. E. (My '13)

Chronology

Hart, R. J. Chronos. (F '13)

Chronos. Hart, R. J. (F '13)

Church

Parkhurst, C. H. Pulpit and the pew. (N '13)

Simms, P. M. What must the church do to be saved? (D '13)

Church and religious unity. Kelly, H. H. (Je '13)

Church and the labor conflict. Womer, P. P. (S '13)

Church architecture

Moore, C. H. Mediæval church architecture of England. (Ap '13)

Church attendance

Beattys, H. H. Smith and the church. (N '13)

Church history

Canfield, L. H. Early persecutions of the Christians. (D '13)

Duchesne, L. M. O. Early history of the Christian church. (Ja '13)

Faulkner, J. A. Crises in the early church. (Mr '13)

Johnston, R. M. Holy Christian church from its remote origins to the present day. (Ap '13)

Church of England

Worsley, F. W. Theology of the Church of England. (My '13)

Church unity

Kelly, H. H. Church and religious unity. (Je '13)

Cities and towns

McVey, F. L. Making of a town. (Jl '13)

Cities of Lombardy. Hutton, E. (Ja '13)

Citizenship

Baldwin, S. E. Relations of education to citizenship. (Ja '13)

Guiteau, W. B. Preparing for citizenship. (N '13)

City church and its social mission. Trawick, A. M. (N '13)

City school girl. Baldwin, M. (F '13)

Civic theatre. Mackaye, P. (My '13)

Civics in simple lessons for foreigners. Plass, A. A. (My '13)

Civil engineering

American civil engineers' pocket book. (Mr '13)

Civil war. Barstow, C. L., ed. (Ja '13)

Civil war and reconstruction in Florida. Davis, W. W. (N '13)

Civilization

Hubbard, A. J. Fate of empires. (Ag '13)

Civilization at the cross roads. Figgis, J. N. (Ja '13)

Classbook of Old Testament history. Hodges, G. (D '13)

Clay

Eckel, E. C. Building stones and clays. (F '13)

Ries, H. Building stones and clay-products. (F '13)

Cleek, Hanshew, T. W. (Ap '13)

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud.) 1835-1910

Wallace, E. Mark Twain and the Happy island. (Je '13)

Cligés. Chrestien de Troyes. (Ap '13)

Coal

Somermeler, E. E. Coal. (Ap '13)

Coal mines and mining

Ketchum, M. S. Design of mine structures. (F '13)

Cobbett, William, 1762-1835

Benjamin, L. S. Life and letters of William Cobbett in England and America. (My '13)

Cobweb cloak. Mackay, H. G. (Ap '13)

Cocoa and chocolate. Whympers, R. (F '13)

Collectors and collecting

Mather, F. J., jr. Collectors. (Ja '13)

Robie, V. By-paths in collecting. (Ja '13)

College zoology. Hegner, R. W. (Ap '13)

Colleges and universities

Cattell, J. M. University control. (O '13)

Colombia

Eder, P. J. Colombia. (O '13)

Colonel's experiment. Delano, E. B. (D '13)

Colonial furniture in America. Lockwood, L. V. (D '13)

Colonial governor in Maryland. Edgar, M. (Mr '13)

- Colonial homes of Philadelphia and its neighborhood. Eberlein, H. D., and Lippincott, H. M. (Ja '13)
- Colony in the making. Cranworth, B. F. G. (S '13)
- Color prints
Gookin, F. W: Japanese colour-prints and their designers. (D '13)
- Combined maze. Sinclair, M. (Ap '13)
- Come rack! come rope! Benson, R. H. (Mr '13)
- Coming Canada. Goodrich, J. K. (D '13)
- Coming Mexico. Goodrich, J. K. (Ap '13)
- Commedia dell' arte. Smith, W. (F '13)
- Commerce
Whelpley, J. D. Trade of the world. (D '13)
- Commercial law
Long, J. D., and others. American business encyclopædia and legal adviser. (N '13)
- Commercialized prostitution in New York city. Kneeland, G. J. (O '13)
- Commission plan of municipal government. Selected articles on. Robbins, E. C., comp. (Ja '13)
- Common diseases. Hutchinson, W. (My '13)
- Common land and inclosure. Gonner, E. C. K. (F '13)
- Common sense in foreign policy. Johnston, H. H. (Je '13)
- Companion to Roman history. Jones, H: S. (My '13)
- Comparative legal philosophy applied to legal institutions. Miraglia, L. (Ap '13)
- Comparative religion. Carpenter, J. E. (Je '13)
- Comparative religion. Jevons, F. B. (Ag '13)
- Competition
Eddy, A. J. New competition. (Mr '13)
- Complete wildfowler. Duncan, S., and Gull, C. A. E. R. (F '13)
- Composition (art)
Van Pelt, J. V. Essentials of composition as applied to art. (N '13)
- Compressed air
Thorkelson, H. J. B. Air compression and transmission. (S '13)
- Compulsory insurance. Selected articles on. Bullock, E. D., comp. (Ja '13)
- Comrade Yetta. Bullard, A. (Ap '13)
- Concentrating ores by flotation. Hoover, T. J. (My '13)
- Concept of sin. Tennant, F. R. (O '13)
- Conception of art. Poore, H: R. (S '13)
- Concert pitch. Frankau, J. (Ap '13)
- Concrete house and its construction. Sloan, M. M. (Jl '13)
- Conduct of life
Miller, J. R. Glory of the commonplace. (N '13)
- Miller, J. R. Things that endure. (N '13)
- Scott, T. Use of leisure. (D '13)
- Confectionery
Hall, M. E. Candy-making revolutionized. (Mr '13)
- Confederate girl's diary. Dawson, S. (D '13)
- Confederate states of America
McKim, R. H. Numerical strength of the Confederate army. (My '13)
- Confessions of a convert. Benson, R. H. (Je '13)
- Confessions of a tenderfoot. Stock, R. (Jl '13)
- Confessions of Arsène Lupin. Leblanc, M. (N '13)
- Conquerors of Peru. Gilbert, H: (N '13)
- Conquest of New Granada. Markham, C. R. (Ap '13)
- Conservation of natural resources. Selected articles on. Fanning, C. E., comp. (Ap '13)
- Conservation of water. McCulloh, W. (D '13)
- Constantinople
Van Millingen, A., and Traquair, R. Byzantine churches in Constantinople. (Je '13)
- Constructive rural sociology. Gillette, J: M. (Je '13)
- Consumers and wage-earners. Ross, J: E. (Ap '13)
- Contemporary Russian novelists. Persky, S. (D '13)
- Contribution to a bibliography of Henri Bergson. Columbia univ. Library. (My '13)
- Conversation
Bligh, S. M. Ability to converse. (Mr '13)
- Conklin, M. G. Conversation. (Ja '13)
- Conversion
Begbie, H. Ordinary man and the extraordinary thing. (Mr '13)
- Cookery
Barroll, M. L. H. Around-the-world cook book. (N '13)
- Baxter, L. A. Housekeeper's handy book. (O '13)
- Burrell, C. B. Easy meals. (D '13)
- Crales, E., comp. Recipes from East and West. (F '13)
- Farmer, F. M. New book of cookery. (F '13)
- Fryer, J. Mary Frances cook book. (F '13)
- Harland, M., and Herrick, C. Helping hand cook book. (F '13)
- James, A. L. Chafing-dish. (Ap '13)
- Larned, L. New hostess of to-day. (Ap '13)
- Smith, F. L. Recipes and menus for fifty. (D '13)
- Soyer, N. Soyer's standard cookery. (F '13)
- Williams, A. L. Sunday suppers. (F '13)
- Yates, L. H. Gardener and the cook. (Jl '13)
- Cooncan
Foster, R. F: Cooncan. (My '13)
- Cooper, James Fenimore, 1789-1851
Phillips, M. E. James Fenimore Cooper. (Ap '13)
- Cooperation
Ford, J. Co-operation in New England, urban and rural. (My '13)
- Co-operation and nationality. Russell, G: W. (O '13)
- Coöperation in agriculture. Powell, G: H. (Je '13)
- Copper
Greenawalt, W: E. Hydrometallurgy of copper. (Ap '13)
- Levy, D. M. Modern copper smelting. (Ap '13)
- Corporal Cameron of the North West mounted police. Connor, R. (Ja '13)
- Corporations
Haney, L: H. Business organization and combination. (D '13)
- Lyon, W. H. Capitalization. (D '13)
- Wyer, S: S. Regulation, valuation and depreciation of public utilities. (S '13)
- Correct business and legal forms. Banks, E. (Jl '13)
- Coryston family. Ward, M. A. (N '13)
- Cosmology
Bixby, J. T. Open secret. (Mr '13)
- Cost accounting
Franklin, B: A. Cost reports for executives as a means of plant control. (Je '13)
- Costa Rica
Fernandez Guardia, R. History of the discovery and conquest of Costa Rica. (N '13)
- Cottages and the village life of rural England. Ditchfield, P: H. (F '13)
- Cotton
Copeland, M. T: Cotton manufacturing industry of the United States. (S '13)
- Country churches
Gill, C: O., and Pinchot, G. Country church. (Ag '13)
- Israel, H:, ed. Country church and community coöperation. (N '13)
- Country life
Albee, H. Kingdom of two. (D '13)
- Bricker, G. A. Solving the country church problem. (D '13)
- Carleton, W:, pseud. New lives for old. (My '13)
- De Weese, T. A. Bend in the road. (Je '13)
- Fiske, G: W. Challenge of the country. (Jl '13)
- Gillette, J: M. Constructive rural sociology. (Je '13)
- Hart, J. K., ed. Educational resources of village and rural communities. (D '13)
- Stevenson, J. Boy in the country. (Ap '13)
- Wilson, W. H. Evolution of the country community. (Je '13)
- Country of Sir Walter Scott. Olcott, C: S. (D '13)

- Court masques of James I. Sullivan, M. (Je '13)
- Courtin' Christina. Bell, J: J. (S '13)
- Courts
Judson, F: N. Judiciary and the people. (O '13)
- McLaughlin, A. C. Courts, the constitution and parties. (D '13)
- Courts and courtiers
Hall, T. Love affairs of the courts of Europe. (Ap '13)
- Paget, W. E. H. Scenes and memories. (My '13)
- Coverlets
Obenchain, E. C. Book of hand-woven coverlets. (Ja '13)
- Cowboy lyrics. Carr, R. V. (Ja '13)
- Cracow
Lepszy, L. Cracow. (F '13)
- Credit
Taylor, W: G: L. Credit system. (D '13)
- Creditors; Pariah. Strindberg, A. (Ja '13)
- Creeping tides. Vermilye, K. J. (Je '13)
- Crescent moon. Tagore, R. (D '13)
- Crime and criminals
Aschaffenburg, G. Crime and its repression. (O '13)
- Tarde, G. Penal philosophy. (Ap '13)
- Crime and its repression. Aschaffenburg, G. (O '13)
- Crises in the early church. Faulkner, J: A. (Mr '13)
- Critic in the Occident. Fitch, G: H. (D '13)
- Critic in the Orient. Fitch, G: H. (S '13)
- Critical and exegetical commentary on Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, and Jonah. Mitchell, H. G., and others. (F '13)
- Critical and exegetical commentary on the books of Ezra and Nehemiah. Batten, L. W. (N '13)
- Critical and exegetical commentary on the Epistles of St. Paul to the Thessalonians. Frame, J. E. (Ja '13)
- Critical and exegetical commentary on the Johannine epistles. Brooke, A. E. (F '13)
- Critical introduction to the Old Testament. Gray, G: B. (S '13)
- Crock of gold. Stephens, J. (F '13)
- Crops and methods for soil improvement. Agee, A. (F '13)
- Cross views. Jackson, W. S. (Ap '13)
- Crossriggs. Findlater, M. and J. H. (Jl '13)
- Crowds. Lee, G. S. (S '13)
- Crystal stopper. Leblanc, M. (My '13)
- Cub reporter. Woolley, E: M. (N '13)
- Culture
Yocum, A. D. Culture, discipline and democracy. (D '13)
- Culture of personality. Randall, J: H. (F '13)
- Custine, Delphine de Sabran, marquise de, 1750-1827
Maugras, G., and Croze, P. de. Memoirs of Delphine de Sabran, marquise de Custine. (Ap '13)
- Custom of the country. Wharton, E. N. (N '13)
- Cyclopedia of education. Monroe, P., ed. (Mr '13)
- Cynthia. Merrick, L. (Ap '13)
- Daffodil fields. Masefield, J: (My '13)
- Dairying
Wing, H: H. Milk and its products. (My '13)
- Dan Russel the Fox. Somerville, E. A. O., and Martin, V. (F '13)
- Dancers and dancing
Caffin, C. and C: H: Dancing and dancers of today. (Ja '13)
- Fitch, J: E. C. Modern dancing and dancers. (Ja '13)
- Fuller, L. Fifteen years of a dancer's life. (D '13)
- Dandles and men of letters. Vincent, L. H: (D '13)
- Dante, Alighieri, 1265-1321
Gardner, E. G. Dante and the mystics. (My '13)
- Wicksteed, P. H: Dante and Aquinas. (S '13)
- Dark flower. Galsworthy, J: (D '13)
- Daughter of Brahma. Wylie, I. A. R. (Ap '13)
- Daughters of dawn. Carman, B., and King, M. P. (Je '13)
- Dave's daughter. Cole, P. (N '13)
- David Malcolm. Lloyd, N. M. (O '13)
- Dawn in darkest Africa. Harris, J: H. (Mr '13)
- Dawson '11—fortune hunter. McCutcheon, J: T. (F '13)
- Day of days. Vance, L: J. (Ap '13)
- De orbe novo. Anghiera, P. M. d'. (My '13)
- Dean, Forest of, England
Cooke, A. O. Forest of Dean. (D '13)
- Deane, Silas, 1737-1789
Clark, G: L. Silas Deane. (Ag '13)
- Debating
Shurter, E. D., and Taylor, C. C. Both sides of 100 public questions briefly debated. (Je '13)
- Debit account. Onions, O. (Jl '13)
- Deborah. Abercrombie, L. (Jl '13)
- Debt. Westrup, W: (O '13)
- Declension of Henry D'Albiac. Taubman-Goldie, V. F. (Ag '13)
- Deering of Deal. Griswold, L. (F '13)
- Dezarmo's wife. Phillips, D: G. (N '13)
- Della Robbias in America. Marquand, A. (Mr '13)
- Democracy
Mann, J. E. F., and others. Real democracy. (O '13)
- Orth, S: P. Socialism and democracy in Europe. (Mr '13)
- Smith, S: G. Democracy and the church. (F '13)
- Denys of Auxerre. Barton, J. (F '13)
- Desert gold. Grey, Z. (Je '13)
- Design, Decorative
Kelley, C: F., and Mowll, W: L. Text-book of design. (Mr '13)
- Rhead, G: W. Modern practical design. (F '13)
- Design of alternating current machinery. Barr, J. R., and Archibald, R. D. (Ag '13)
- Design of mine structures. Ketchum, M. S. (F '13)
- Design of polyphase generators and motors. Hobart, H: M. (Je '13)
- Desire of the moth. Gray, M., pseud. (N '13)
- Desired woman. Harben, W: N. (N '13)
- Destroyer. Stevenson, B. E. (D '13)
- Detectives
Barton, G: Great cases of famous detectives. (O '13)
- Development and purpose. Hobhouse, L. T. (S '13)
- Development of American nationality. Fish, C. R. (N '13)
- Devil's admiral. Moore, F: F. (My '13)
- Dew and mildew. Wren, P. C. (Mr '13)
- Diamond cut diamond. Bunker, J. (N '13)
- Diary of a free kindergarten. Hardy, L. (Mr '13)
- Dickens, Charles, 1812-1870
Fyfe, T: A., comp. Who's who in Dickens. (Ja '13)
- Nicoll, W: R. Problems of Edwin Drood. (Ja '13)
- Pugh, E. W: Charles Dickens originals. (F '13)
- Smith, J. W., il. Dickens's children. (F '13)
- Whipple, E. P. Charles Dickens: the man and his work. (F '13)
- Dictionary of applied chemistry. Thorpe, T: E., and others. (N '13)
- Dictionary of titles. Irvine, L. H. (Ap '13)
- Diderot, Denis, 1713-1784
Cru, R. L. Diderot as a disciple of English thought. (N '13)
- Diet
Bryce, A. Modern theories of diet. (Ja '13)
- Different west. Bostwick, A. E. (Ap '13)
- Dirge of the sea-children. Rand, K. (S '13)

Discoveries (in geography)

- Synge, M. B. Book of discovery. (F '13)
 Discovering "Evelina." Moore, F. F. (O '13)
 Discovery of the future. Wells, H. G. (Je '13)

Diseases

- Hutchinson, W. Common diseases. (My '13)
 Distribution of incomes in the United States.
 Streightoff, F. H. (Jl '13)
 Divided. Bancroft, F. (D '13)

Divination

- Halliday, W.: R. Greek divination. (D '13)
 Divorcing Lady Nicotine. Needham, H.: B. (Ag '13)

- Doctor's table talk. Mumford, J. G. (Mr '13)
 Doctrine of the person of Jesus Christ. Mackintosh, H. R. (F '13)

- Dolls of many lands. Wade, M. H. (N '13)

Domestic science

- Baxter, L. A. Housekeeper's handy book. (O '13)
 Bruère, M. B. and R. W. Increasing home efficiency. (Mr '13)
 Foster, O. H. Housekeeping for little girls. (Mr '13)
 Trowbridge, A. W. Home school. (D '13)
 Williams, M. M. Harper's household handbook. (My '13)

- Domine of Harlem. Mulder, A. (N '13)

- Donald Kirk, the morning Record copy-boy.
 Woolley, E.: M. (Ap '13)

- Donald Kirk, the morning Record correspondent.
 Woolley, E.: M. (D '13)

- Door that has no key. Hamilton, C. (D '13)
 Double life of Mr. Alfred Burton. Oppenheim, E.: P. (O '13)

- Down among men. Comfort, W. L. (D '13)

- Down the Mackenzie and up the Yukon in 1906. Stewart, E. (My '13)

- Downland corner. Whitechurch, V.: L. (My '13)
 Dragoman. Stiles, G.: K. (F '13)

Drainage

- Elliott, C.: G. Engineering for land drainage. (Ja '13)
 Taylor, F. N. Main drainage of towns. (Mr '13)

Drainage, House

- Thomson, G. Modern sanitary engineering. (My '13)

Drama

- Burton, R.: E. New American drama. (O '13)
 Carter, H. New spirit in drama and art. (O '13)
 Helmrich, E. W. History of the chorus in the German drama. (Ap '13)
 Hunt, E. R. Play of today. (My '13)
 Jones, H.: A. Foundations of a national drama. (My '13)
 McLeod, A. Plays and players in modern Italy. (O '13)
 Smith, W. Commedia dell' arte. (F '13)
 Sullivan, M. Court masques of James I. (Je '13)
 Wagner, R. Opera & drama. (D '13)

Dramas

- Abercrombie, L. Deborah. (Jl '13)
 Alphonsus, emperor of Germany. (Je '13)
 Baker, E. Chains. (Jl '13)
 Barton, J. Denys of Auxerre. (F '13)
 Bates, W.: O. Jacob Leisler. (N '13)
 Björnson, B. Plays. (My '13)
 Congreve, W.: William Congreve. (Ja '13)
 Cunliffe, J.: W., ed. Early English classical tragedies. (Je '13)
 Dargan, O. T. Mortal gods and other plays. (Mr '13)
 Galsworthy, J.: Plays. (Je '13)
 Gates, M. C., and Sakurai, J., trs. Plays of old Japan: the "Nô." (O '13)
 Gregory, I. A. New comedies. (Ap '13)
 Hamilton, C. Blindness of virtue. (Ag '13)
 Hankin, St. J.: E. C. Dramatic works. (My '13)
 Hauptmann, G. J. R. Dramatic works. (Ap '13)
 Houghton, S. Hindle wakes. (Je '13)
 Kemp, H. Judas. (Ag '13)
 Kennedy, C.: R. Necessary evil. (Ap '13)
 Mayne, R. The drone. (My '13)
 Middleton, G.: Tradition. (My '13)
 Monkhouse, A. Mary Broome. (Je '13)

- Moody, W.: V. Poems and plays. (F '13)

- Phillips, S. Lyrics and dramas. (D '13)

- Robinson, L. Patriots. (My '13)

- Schoonmaker, E. D. The Americans. (S '13)

- Strindberg, A. Plays. (Je '13)

- Strindberg, A. Plays: Third series. (D '13)

- Sutro, A. Five little plays. (Ap '13)

- Trask, K. In the vanguard. (My '13)

- Vachell, H. A. Jelf's. (F '13)

- Dramatic version of: Greek myths and hero tales. Comstock, F. A. (F '13)

Drawing

- Koch, G.: W. Pencil-sketching. (D '13)

- Ross, D. W. On drawing and painting. (Ap '13)

- Speed, H. Practice and science of drawing. (N '13)

- Dream girl. Hart, E. G. (Je '13)

- Dream of blue roses. Barclay, E. N. (My '13)

Dreams

- Freud, S. Interpretation of dreams. (Ag '13)

- Drift of romanticism. More, P. E. (Je '13)

- Drone. Mayne, R. (My '13)

- Drummer of the dawn. Paton, R. (D '13)

- Dry-fly man's handbook. Halford, F.: M. (Ag '13)

- Du Maurier, George Louis Palmella Busson, 1834-1896

- Wood, T. M. George du Maurier. (D '13)

- Dust of the road. Patterson, M. (O '13)

- Dusty air and ill health. Hessler, R. (Ap '13)

- Dutch colonial house. Embury, A. (Ag '13)

- Dyes and dyeing. Fellow, C.: E. (Ap '13)

- Dying fires. Monkhouse, A. (O '13)

- Dynamic foundation of knowledge. Philip, A. (O '13)

Dynamos

- Arnold, J. L. Motor and the dynamo. (O '13)

Eagle's talon.

- Ohnet, G. (N '13)

- Early chapters in the development of the Patomac route to the West. Bacon-Foster, C. (Ag '13)

- Early English classical tragedies. Cunliffe, J.: W., ed. (Je '13)

- Early English water colour. Hughes, C. E. (D '13)

- Early history of the Christian church. Duchesne, L.: M. O. (Ja '13)

- Early history of the house of Savoy. Previtè Orton, C.: W. (S '13)

- Early persecutions of the Christians. Canfield, L. H. (D '13)

- Earth

- Holmes, A. Age of the earth. (S '13)

- Poynting, J.: H. The earth. (N '13)

- Easy meals. Burrell, C. B. (D '13)

- Ecce Deus. Smith, W.: B. (My '13)

- Echoes from Vagabondia. Carman, B. (Ja '13)

- Economic beginnings of the far West. Coman, K. (D '13)

Economic conditions

- Sombart, W. Jews and modern capitalism. (D '13)

- Economic interpretation of the Constitution of the United States. Beard, C.: A. (Ag '13)

- Economic utilization of history. Farnam, H.: W. (Ag '13)

- Economics

- Farnam, H.: W. Economic utilization of history. (Ag '13)

- Fetter F. A., ed. Source book in economics. (Ap '13)

- Fisher, I. Elementary principles of economics. (My '13)

- Pigou, A. C. Wealth and welfare. (Mr '13)

- Seager, H.: R. Principles of economics. (N '13)

- Economics of business. Brisco, N. A. (Ag '13)

- Economics of railroad construction. Webb, W. L. (My '13)

Edinburgh

- Chambers, R. Traditions of Edinburgh. (Ap '13)

- Hyatt, A. H., comp. Charm of Edinburgh. (D '13)

- Watt, F. Edinburgh and the Lothians. (Ja '13)

Education

- Brereton, C. S. H: Studies in foreign education. (D '13)
 Ferrer Guardia, F. Origin and ideals of the Modern school. (S '13)
 Fisher, M. Valiant woman. (Mr '13)
 King, I. Education for social efficiency. (S '13)
 Klapper, P. Principles of educational practice. (Ap '13)
 Monroe, P., ed. Cyclopedia of education. (Mr '13)
 Owen, W: B. Humanities in the education of the future. (Mr '13)
 Snedden, D: S. Problems of educational readjustment. (D '13)
 Sutton, W: S. Problems in modern education. (Jl '13)
 Weeks, A. D. Education of to-morrow. (S '13)
 Yocum, A. D. Culture, discipline and democracy. (D '13)

United States

- Maxwell, W: H. Quarter century of public school development. (F '13)

Education, Elementary

- Gilbert, C: B. What children study and why. (O '13)
 McMurry, F. M. Elementary school standards. (S '13)
 Parker, S: C. Textbook in the history of modern elementary education. (My '13)
 Education and ethics. Boutroux, E. (D '13)
 Education for social efficiency. King, I. (S '13)

Education of children

- Fisher, D. F. Montessori mother. (D '13)
 Stevens, E. Y. Guide to the Montessori method. (My '13)
 Wood, W. Children's play and its place in education. (D '13)
 Education of the women of India. Cowan, M. G. (My '13)
 Education of to-morrow. Weeks, A. D. (S '13)
 Educational administration. Strayer, G: D., and Thorndike, E: L. (Ag '13)
 Educational resources of village and rural communities. Hart, J. K., ed. (D '13)

Edward VII, King of England, 1841-1910

- Legge, E: King Edward in his true colours. (Ap '13)
 Stamper, C. W. King Edward as I knew him. (D '13)

Efficiency, Industrial

- Münsterberg, H. Psychology and industrial efficiency. (My '13)
 Efficiency in the Sunday school. Cope, H: F. (Jl '13)

Egypt

- Maspero, G. C. C: Art in Egypt. (Mr '13)
 Tyndale, W. Artist in Egypt. (Mr '13)

Antiquities

- Moret, A. Kings and gods of Egypt. (F '13)
 Egyptian art. Maspero, G. C. C: (D '13)
 Eldest son. Galsworthy, J: (F '13)
 Eldorado. Orczy, E. (O '13)
 Elected mother. Daviess, M. T. (Mr '13)
 Election of United States senators. Selected articles on. Fanning, C. E., comp. (Ja '13)

Electric batteries

- Wadsworth, C., jr. Primary battery ignition. (My '13)

Electric circuit. Karapetoff, V. (F '13)Electric currents

- Karapetoff, V. Electric circuit. (F '13)

Electric engineering

- Lundquist, R. A. Transmission line construction, methods and costs. (Mr '13)

Electric lighting

- Barrows, W: E., jr. Light, photometry and illumination. (Ap '13)
 Clewell, C. E: Factory lighting. (D '13)
 Franklin, W: S. Electric lighting and miscellaneous applications of electricity. (Ap '13)
 Poppe, T: W. House wiring. (Mr '13)

Electric machinery

- Barr, J. R., and Archibald, R. D. Design of alternating current machinery. (Ag '13)
 Esty, W: Alternating-current machinery. (My '13)
 Gray, A. Electrical machine design. (My '13)
 Hobart, H: M. Design of polyphase generators and motors. (Je '13)

Electric motors

- Blondel, A. E. Synchronous motors and converters. (Jl '13)

Electric resistance

- Northrup, E. F. Methods of measuring electrical resistance. (My '13)

Electrical injuries. Lauffer, C: A. (Je '13)Electrical machine design. Gray, A. (My '13)Electricity

- Durgin, W: A. Electricity. (Mr '13)
 Hough, R. H., and Boehm, W. M. Elementary principles of electricity and magnetism. (My '13)
 Koester, F. Electricity for the farm and home. (S '13)
 Timble, W: H. Essentials of electricity. (Ag '13)

Electricity, injuries from

- Lauffer, C: A. Electrical injuries. (Je '13)

Electrons

- Ramsay, W: Elements and electrons. (F '13)
 Elementary entomology. Sanderson, E. D., and Jackson, C. F. (F '13)

Elementary Jane. Pryce, R: (Ap '13)Elementary machine drawing and design. Marshall, W: C. (My '13)Elementary principles of economics. Fisher, I. (My '13)Elementary principles of electricity and magnetism. Hough, R. H., and Boehm, W. M. (My '13)Elementary school standards. McMurry, F. M. (S '13)Elements and electrons. Ramsay, W: (F '13)Elements of accounting. Klein, J. J. (D '13)Elements of child-protection. Engel, S. (Jl '13)Elements of drawing. Blessing, G: F., and Darling, L: A. (Ap '13)Elements of geography. Salisbury, R. D., and others. (My '13)Elements of heat-power engineering. Hirshfeld, C. F., and Barnard, W: N. (Ag '13)Elements of heating and ventilation. Greene, A. M. (Je '13)Elephants

- Eardley-Wilmot, S. Life of an elephant. (Ja '13)

Elliot, George, pseud. (Mrs. Mary Ann Evans [Lewes] Cross) 1819-1880

- Deakin, M. H. Early life of George Elliot. (S '13)

Elizabeth, queen of Rumania, 1843-

- Loti, P. Carmen Sylva and sketches from the orient. (Ja '13)

Elizabethan playhouse. Lawrence, W. J. (F '13)Elkan Lubliner, American. Glass, M. (Ja '13)Eminent English men and women in Paris. Boutet de Monvel, R. (Jl '13)Empery. White, S: A. (N '13)*Empire of India. Fuller, B. (My '13)Empires of the Far East. Lawton, L. F. (Ap '13)Enchanted burro. Lummis, C: F. (F '13)Encyclopedias

- Britannica year-book. (S '13)
 Catholic encyclopedias. (Ap '13)
 Hastings, J., ed. Encyclopaedia of religion and ethics. (Mr '13)

Encyclopedist of the dark ages. Brehaut, E. (F '13)End of her honeymoon. Lowndes, M. A. (N '13)Engineering*Bibliography

- Peddle, R. A. Engineering and metallurgical books, 1907-1911. (F '13)

Engineering for land drainage. Elliott, C: G. (Ja '13)Engineering of shops and factories. Tyrrell, H: G. (Mr '13)

Engineering thermodynamics. Lucke, C: E: (N '13)
 Engineers' handbook on patents. Macomber, W: (Ap '13)

England

Thomas, E: Icknield way. (S '13)

Biography

Dictionary of national biography. (F '13)

Description and travel

Ditchfield, P: H. Cottages and the village life of rural England. (F '13)

Huckel, O. Through England with Tennyson. (O '13)

Kimball, K. F. English cathedral journey. (Je '13)

Olcott, C: S. Country of Sir Walter Scott. (D '13)

Tearle, C. Pilgrim from Chicago. (D '13)

Social conditions

Bourne, G:, pseud. Change in the village. (F '13)

Social life and customs

Abram, A. English life and manners in the later middle ages. (Mr '13)

Bradley, R. M. English housewife in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. (Mr '13)

Ditchfield, P: H. Old English country squire. (F '13)

Graham, H. J. C. Perfect gentleman. (Ja '13)

Odd farmhouse. (Je '13)

Roscoe, E: S. English scene in the eighteenth century. (Mr '13)

England and the Orleans monarchy. Hall, J: (Mr '13)

England's industrial development. Innes, A. D. (Mr '13)

English and Welsh cathedrals. Atkinson, T: D. (Ja '13)

English ballads and songs
 Choepé, R: P., ed. Ballads weird and wonderful. (Ja '13)

English cathedral journey. Kimball, K. F. (Je '13)

English composition and style. Brewster, W: T. (Mr '13)

English epic and heroic poetry. Dixon, W: M. (Ap '13)

English fairy book. Rhys, E. (F '13)

English fairy poetry from the origins to the 17th century. Delattre, F. (F '13)

English farming, past and present. Prothero, R. E. (Je '13)

English fiction
 Saintsbury, G: E: B. English novel. (O '13)

English fireplace. Shuffrey, L. A. (Mr '13)

English homes of the early renaissance. Tipping, H. A., ed. (My '13)

English housewife in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Bradley, R. M. (Mr '13)

English language
 Composition

Brewster, W: T. English composition and style. (Mr '13)

Brewster, W: T. Writing English prose. (Je '13)

Orcutt, W: D. Writer's desk book. (F '13)

Sypherd, W. O. Handbook of English for engineers. (Ap '13)

Dictionaries

Funk and Wagnalls new Standard dictionary. (D '13)

English life and manners in the later middle ages. Abram, A. (Mr '13)

English literature
 Cambridge history of English literature. (Mr '13)

Chesterston, G. K. Victorian age in literature. (My '13)

Dobson, A. At Prior Park, and other papers. (F '13)

Elton, O. Survey of English literature, 1780-1830. (F '13)

Gordon, G: S., comp. English literature and the classics. (O '13)

Gosse, E. W: Portraits and sketches. (F '13)

Kennedy, J. M. English literature, 1880-1905. (Mr '13)

Schofield, W: H: Chivalry in English literature. (Ap '13)

Collections

Leonard, R. M., comp. Pageant of English prose. (My '13)

English lyric. Schelling, F. E. (Je '13)

English novel. Saintsbury, G: E: B. (O '13)

English poetry
 Delattre, F. English fairy poetry from the origins to the 17th century. (F '13)

Dixon, W: M. English epic and heroic poetry. (Ap '13)

Rawnsley, W. F. Introduction to the poets. (F '13)

Schelling, F. E. English lyric. (Je '13)

English rule in Gascony. Marsh, F. B. (Ag '13)

English scene in the eighteenth century. Roscoe, E. S. (Mr '13)

Engravings
 Carrington, F., ed. Prints and their makers. (F '13)

Enjoyment of poetry. Eastman, M. (Je '13)

Entertaining
 Glover, E. H. Art of entertaining. (O '13)

Enthusiasts of Port-Royal. Rea, L. (F '13)

Environment
 Henderson, L. J. Fitness of the environment. (My '13)

Epic poetry
 Chadwick, H. M. Heroic age. (My '13)

Episodes of Vathek. Beckford, W: (Ja '13)

Eskimos
 Stefánsson, V. My life with the Eskimo. (D '13)

Essays in taxation. Seligman, E. R. A. (O '13)

Essentials in early European history. Howe, S: B. (O '13)

Essentials of composition as applied to art. Van Pelt, J: V. (N '13)

Essentials of electricity. Timble, W: H: (Ag '13)

Essentials of international public law. Hershey, A. S. (Ap '13)

Esthetics
 Rowland, E. H. Significance of art. (D '13)

Etchings
 Carrington, F., ed. Prints and their makers. (F '13)

Holme, C:, ed. Modern etchings, mezzotints, and dry-points. (Ap '13)

Eternal life. Hügel, F. (Ag '13)

Eternal maiden. Harré, T. E. (Je '13)

Eternal masculine. Andrews, M. R. S. (D '13)

Ethics
 Bouteux, E. Education and ethics. (D '13)

Hastings, J., ed. Encyclopaedia of religion and ethics. (Mr '13)

Witherspoon, J: Lectures on moral philosophy. (F '13)

History

Myers, P. V. History as past ethics. (Jl '13)

Ethics, Christian
 Smith, G. B. Social idealism and the changing theology. (Jl '13)

Ethics of the Old Testament. Mitchell, H. G. (F '13)

Etiquet
 Ordway, E. B. Etiquette of to-day. (D '13)

Etiquette of to-day. Ordway, E. B. (D '13)

Etymology
 Skeat, W. W: Science of etymology. (My '13)

Eucken, Rudolf Christof, 1846-
 Hermann, E. Eucken and Bergson. (Ap '13)

Jones, W: T. Interpretation of Rudolf Eucken's philosophy. (Ap '13)

Eugenics
 Baker, L. H. M. Race improvement. (Mr '13)

Dawson, G: E. Right of the child to be well born. (Mr '13)

Whetham, W: C. D. and C. D. Introduction to eugenics. (Ap '13)

Eugénie, empress consort of Napoléon III, 1826-
 Barthez, E. Empress Eugénie and her circle. (Jl '13)

EuropeDescription and travel

- Dreiser, T. Traveler at forty. (D '13)
 Fauley, W. F. Seeing Europe on sixty dollars. (Ja '13)
 Fitch, G. H. Critic in the Occident. (D '13)
 Hichens, R. S. Near east. (D '13)
 Holbach, M. M. In the footsteps of Richard Coeur de Lion. (F '13)
 Osborne, A. B. Finding the worth-while in Europe. (S '13)
 Osborne, A. B. Picture towns of Europe. (Ja '13)
 Singh, B. Travel pictures. (Mr '13)
 Webber, G. D. Best motor routes through Europe. (My '13)
 Zeyneb, hanum. Turkish woman's European impressions. (Je '13)

History

- Birkhead, A. Heroes of modern Europe. (N '13)
 Gordy, W. F. American beginnings in Europe. (Mr '13)
 Hawkesworth, C. E. M. Last century in Europe. (N '13)
 Howe, S. B. Essentials in early European history. (O '13)

Politics

- Ogg, F. A. Governments of Europe. (Ap '13)
 Usher, R. G. Pan-Germanism. (My '13)

Social life and customs

- Bennett, E. A. Paris nights. (D '13)
 European cities at work. Howe, F. C. (Je '13)
 Eve of Catholic emancipation. Ward, B. (F '13)
 Ever after. Tompkins, J. W. (Jl '13)
 Everbreeze. Greene, S. P. (Mr '13)
 Every boy's book of hobbies. Bullivant, C. H. (Ja '13)
 Everybody's St. Francis. Egan, M. F. (Ja '13)
 Everywoman's road. Hammond, J. (O '13)

Evolution

- Herbert, S. First principles of evolution. (D '13)
 Hobhouse, L. T. Development and purpose. (S '13)
 Kimball, J. C. Romance of evolution and its relation to religion. (N '13)
 Lloyd, R. E. Growth of groups in the animal kingdom. (Ap '13)
 Schmucker, S. C. Meaning of evolution. (O '13)
 Evolution of states. Robertson, J. M. (Ag '13)
 Evolution of the country community. Wilson, W. H. (Je '13)
 Experimental psychology and pedagogy. Schulze, R. (S '13)
 Experimental studies of mental defectives. Wallin, J. E. W. (Ag '13)
 Experimental wireless stations. Edelman, P. E. (My '13)
 Experiments in government and the essentials of the Constitution. Root, E. (Ag '13)
 Experiments in industrial organization. Cadbury, E. (My '13)

Explorations

- Hedin, S. A. From pole to pole. (Jl '13)
 Explorers and settlers. Barstow, C. L., ed. (Ja '13)

Explosives

- Brunswig, H. Explosives. (O '13)

Eyck family

- Weale, W. H. J., and Brockwell, M. W. Van Eycks and their art. (Ap '13)

Fabre, Jean Henri Casimir, 1823-

- Legros, C. V. Fabre, poet of science. (O '13)

Factories

- Tyrrell, H. G. Engineering of shops and factories. (Mr '13)
 Factory lighting. Clewell, C. E. (D '13)
 Factory management
 Lodge, W. Rules of management. (D '13)
 Fall of the Dutch republic. Loon, H. W. v. (Ag '13)

- Familiar Spanish travels. Howells, W. D. (D '13)

Family

- Devine, E. T. Family and social work. (Mr '13)
 Thwing, C. F. and C. F. Family. (My '13)
 Famous modern battles. Atteridge, A. H. (D '13)
 Famous pictures of real boys and girls. Bryant, L. (Ja '13)
 Famous speeches. Paul, H. W., ed. (Ap '13)
 Fanny of the forty frocks. Mathews, F. A. (N '13)

Far East

- Fitch, G. H. Critic in the Orient. (S '13)
 Lawton, L. F. Empires of the Far East. (Ap '13)

Far Eastern question

- Fox, F. Problems of the Pacific. (My '13)

Farm buildings

- Hopkins, A. Modern farm buildings. (Ag '13)
 Farm in creamland. Garvice, C. (Ag '13)

Farm life

- Garvice, C. Farm in creamland. (Ag '13)

Farm management

- Bowsfield, C. C. Making the farm pay. (Jl '13)

- Warren, G. F. Farm management. (Jl '13)
 Farm poultry. Watson, G. C. (F '13)
 Farmer of to-morrow. Anderson, F. I. (Jl '13)
 Faro Nell and her friends. Lewis, A. H. (Je '13)

- Fate of empires. Hubbard, A. J. (Ag '13)

- Fatima. Thomas, R. (N '13)

- Faustula. Ayscough, J. (Ja '13)

- Fear of living. Bordeaux, H. (Je '13)

- Feet of the furtive. Roberts, C. G. D. (Ap '13)

- Ferdinand, prince of Bulgaria, 1861-

- Macdonald, J. Czar Ferdinand and his people. (S '13)

- Fergusson's percentage unit of angular measurement, with logarithms. Fergusson, J. C. (F '13)

Fertilizers and manures

- Agee, A. Crops and methods for soil improvement. (F '13)
 Wheeler, H. J. Manures and fertilizers. (O '13)

- Fetish folk of West Africa. Milligan, R. H. (Ap '13)

- Fetters of freedom. Brady, C. T. (Jl '13)

- Ffoliots of Redmarley. Harker, L. A. (Ag '13)

FictionBibliography

- Baker, E. A. Guide to the best fiction in English. (S '13)

- Field-days in California. Torrey, B. (Ap '13)

- Fifteen years of a dancer's life. Fuller, L. (D '13)

- Fifth trumpet. Bertram, P. (Mr '13)

- Fighting spirit of Japan. Harrison, E. J. (Mr '13)

Fiji Islands

- La Farge, J. Reminiscences of the South seas. (Ap '13)

FinanceBibliography

- Business book bureau, N. Y. What to read on business. (My '13)

- Finances of Ireland before the union and after. Dunraven and Mount-Earl, W. T. W.-Q. (F '13)

- Finding his soul. Duncan, N. (D '13)

- Finding the worth-while in Europe. Osborne, A. B. (S '13)

- Fine books. Pollard, A. W. (F '13)

- Finery of the sand-house. Stewart, C. D. (Mr '13)

- Finger of Mr. Blee. Blundell, P. (Ap '13)

- Fire and frost. Cruttwell, M. (N '13)

- Fire prevention. Croker, E. F. (D '13)

- Fire protection. Croker, E. F. Fire prevention. (D '13)

- Fire within. Wentworth, P. (N '13)

Fireplaces

- Saylor, H. H. Making a fireplace. (O '13)
 Shuffrey, L. A. English fireplace. (Mr '13)

Fires

- Kenlon, J. Fires and fire-fighters. (N '13)

- First aid in illness and injury
 Lauffer, C: A. Resuscitation from electric shock, traumatic shock, drowning, asphyxiation from any cause. (O '13)
 Lippert, F. E., and Holmes, A. When to send for the doctor. (D '13)
First course in philosophy. Russell, J: E: (S '13)
First explorations of the trans-Allegheny region by the Virginians, 1650-1674. Alvord, C. W., and Bidgood, L. (F '13)
First Hague conference. White, A. D. (N '13)
First principles of evolution. Herbert, S. (D '13)
First twelve centuries of British story. Jeudwine, J: W. (O '13)
Fishing
 Camp, S: G. Fishing with floating flies. (D '13)
 Halford, F: M. Dry-flyman's handbook. (Ag '13)
Fitness of the environment. Henderson, L. J. (My '13)
Five little plays. Sutro, A. (Ap '13)
Flies
 Fabre, J. H. C. Life of the fly. (D '13)
 Ross, E: H. Reduction of domestic flies. (O '13)
Flirt. Tarkington, B. (Ap '13)
Floods
 Pittsburgh. Flood commission. Report, 1911. (My '13)
Floor games. Wells, H. G: (Ja '13)
Floral symbolism of the great masters. Haig, E. (D '13)
Floriculture
 Saylor, H: H. Book of annuals. (N '13)
Florida
 Davis, W: W. Civil war and reconstruction in Florida. (N '13)
Flower fields of Alpine Switzerland. Flemwell, G. (Ja '13)
Flower gardening. Adams, H: S. (Jl '13)
Flowery republic. McCormick, F: (Ag '13)
Flowering road. Whitney, C. (Ja '13)
Folk-lore
 Egypt
 Murray, M. A. Ancient Egyptian legends. (Je '13)
 India
 Day, L. B. Folk-tales of Bengal. (Mr '13)
 Indian
 Grinnell, G: B. Blackfeet Indian stories. (O '13)
Folk-tales of Bengal. Day, L. B. (Mr '13)
Food
 Finck, H: T. Food and flavor. (Je '13)
 McCann, A. W. Starving America. (Je '13)
 Fool and his money. McCutcheon, G: B. (N '13)
Fools of Shakespeare. Warde, F: (D '13)
Footloose and free. Chalmers, S. (Ja '13)
For Uncle Sam, boss. Fitzhugh, P. K. (D '13)
Forecasts
 Wells, H. G: Discovery of the future. (Je '13)
Foreign exchange
 Withers, H. Money-changing. (O '13)
Forest. Noye, E. (F '13)
Forest farm. Rosegger, P. K. (F '13)
Forest of Dean. Cooke, A. O. (D '13)
Forging
 Ilgen, W: L. Forge work. (Ap '13)
Forms (in law)
 Banks, E. Correct business and legal forms. (Jl '13)
Forster, John, 1812-1876
 Renton, R: John Forster and his friendships. (Mr '13)
Fortitude. Walpole, H. (Jl '13)
Fortunes of Phœbe. Deland, E. D. (F '13)
Fortunes of the Landrays. Kester, V. (Ja '13)
Foundation stones to happiness and success. Allen, J. (N '13)
Foundations of a national drama. Jones, H: A. (My '13)
Fountains in the sand. Douglas, N. (F '13)
Four gardens. Buchanan, E. H. (Ja '13)
Four men. Belloc, H. (Mr '13)
Four mothers at Chautauqua. Alden, I. (S '13)
Four seasons. Ewald, C. (D '13)
Four stages of Greek religion. Murray, G. (Ap '13)
Fourteenth amendment. Collins, C: W. (O '13)
Fourth down. Quirk, L. W. (Mr '13)
Framing of the constitution of the United States. Farrand, M. (Je '13)
France
 Guérard, A. L. French prophets of yesterday. (Je '13)
 Biography
 Judith, J. B. My autobiography. (Ap '13)
 Court and courtiers
 Barthez, E. Empress Eugénie and her circle. (Jl '13)
 Lombardini, S. H. Rival French courts. (N '13)
 Description and travel
 Barker, E: H. Wayfaring in France from Auvergne to the Bay of Biscay. (S '13)
 Bumpus, T: F. Cathedrals of southern France. (D '13)
 Goldring, D. Along France's river of romance, the Loire. (D '13)
 Higinbotham, J: U. Three weeks in France. (Je '13)
 Riggs, A. S. France from sea to sea. (Jl '13)
 Thorpe, T: E. Seine from Havre to Paris. (D '13)
 History
 Damas, R. de. Memoirs, 1787-1806. (D '13)
 Fouché, J. Memoirs relating to Fouché. (My '13)
 Hall, J: England and the Orleans monarchy. (Mr '13)
 Headlam, C. France. (O '13)
 Marshall, H. E. History of France. (F '13)
 Vizetelly, E. A. Republican France: 1870-1912. (Ap '13)
 Revolution, 1789-1799
 Birkhead, A. Story of the French revolution. (O '13)
 Clapham, J: H. Abbé Sieyès. (Mr '13)
 Fling, F. M. and H. Source problems on the French revolution. (N '13)
 Henderson, E. F. Symbol and satire in the French revolution. (Mr '13)
 Maugras, G., and Croze, P. de. Memoirs of Delphine de Sabran, marquise de Custine. (Ap '13)
 Intellectual life
 Bodley, J: E. C. Cardinal Manning. (Ap '13)
 Jerrold, L. French and the English. (D '13)
 Social life and customs
 Pratz, C. de. France from within. (My '13)
 France from sea to sea. Riggs, A. S. (Jl '13)
 Francis of Assisi, St. (Giovanni Francisco Bernardone Assisi) 1182-1226
 Cuthbert, Father. Life of St. Francis of Assisi. (F '13)
 Egan, M. F. Everybody's St. Francis. (Ja '13)
 Franco-German war, 1870-1871
 Ollivier, E. Franco-Prussian war and its hidden causes. (Mr '13)
 Franco-Prussian war and its hidden causes. Ollivier, E. (Mr '13)
 Free lance. Marvin, F: R. (F '13)
 Free trade and protection
 Morgan, J. E., comp. Selected articles on free trade and protection. (Ap '13)
 Free trade
 Eaton, A. M. Free trade vs. protection. (Ag '13)
 Freethought
 Bury, J: B. History of freedom of thought. (D '13)
 Freezing-point, boiling-point and conductivity methods. Jones, H. C. (Ap '13)
 French and the English. Jerrold, L. (D '13)
 French prophets of yesterday. Guérard, A. L. (Je '13)
 Friendly enemy. Wilson, T. P. C. (N '13)
 Friendly Germany. Phillips, Lady. (Ag '13)

- Friendly road. Grayson, D: (D '13)
- Friends, Society of
Holder, C: F: Quakers in Great Britain and America. (D '13)
- Fringe of the desert. Macnamara, R. S. (Je '13)
- Fringe of the East. Lukach, H. C: (S '13)
- From Jefferson to Lincoln. MacDonald, W: (O '13)
- From Mendelssohn to Wagner. Davison, J. W: (F '13)
- From my hunting day book. William Frederick Victor August Ernst. (Ja '13)
- From pole to pole. Hedin, S. A. (Jl '13)
- From studio to stage. Grossmith, W. (Ap '13)
- From wheel and lookout. Bullen, F. T: (N '13)
- Frontier and pioneer life
Grinnell, G: B. Beyond the old frontier. (N '13)
- Frontiers of the heart. Margueritte, V: (Ap '13)
- Fuel
Brislee, F. J. Introduction to the study of fuel. (Ap '13)
- Fulton, Robert, 1765-1815
Dickinson, H. W. Robert Fulton, engineer and artist. (N '13)
- Fundamental Christian faith. Briggs, C: A: (Jl '13)
- Furnishing the home of good taste. Throop, L. A. (My '13)
- Furniture
Crawshaw, F. D. Problems in furniture making. (Ap '13)
Lockwood, L. V. Colonial furniture in America. (D '13)
- Future life
Hugel, F. Eternal life. (Ag '13)
- Future of the working classes. Babson, R. W. (D '13)
- Gabrielle. Bianchi, M. G. (N '13)
- Game protection
Hornaday, W: T. Our vanishing wild life. (Mr '13)
- Games
Wells, H. G: Floor games. (Ja '13)
Wells, H. G: Little wars. (D '13)
- Garages
Ellis, A. R. Making a garage. (O '13)
- Garden of dreams. McCauley, C. V. (F '13)
- Garden without walls. Dawson, C. (N '13)
- Gardener. Tagore, R. (D '13)
- Gardener and the cook. Yates, L. H. (Jl '13)
- Gardening
Adams, H: S. Flower gardening. (Jl '13)
Meier, W: H. D. School and home gardens. (Jl '13)
Miller, C. H. Making a garden with hotbed and coldframe. (Ap '13)
Rockwell, F: F. Gardening indoors and under glass. (F '13)
Tabor, G. Making a bulb garden. (F '13)
Tabor, G. Making a garden to bloom this year. (F '13)
Wright, W. P. New gardening. (My '13)
- Gardens
Biklé, L. L. C., comp. Voice of the garden. (Mr '13)
Buchanan, E. H. Four gardens. (Ja '13)
Jekyll, G., and Weaver, L. Gardens for small country houses. (My '13)
Mawson, T: H. Art and craft of garden making. (Ap '13)
Tabor, G. Old-fashioned gardening. (Ap '13)
Tabor, G. Suburban gardens. (Jl '13)
Ward, C. Royal gardens. (F '13)
- Garrison, William Lloyd, 1805?-1879
Chapman, J: J. William Lloyd Garrison. (Jl '13)
- Gas turbines
Holzwarth, H. Gas turbine. (Je '13)
- Gascony
Marsh, F. B. English rule in Gascony, 1199-1259. (Ag '13)
- Gates of the Dolomites. Davidson, L. M. (Ja '13)
- Gateway of Scotland. Bradley, A. G. (Ja '13)
- Gay rebellion. Chambers, R. W: (Ap '13)
- Gem-stones and their distinctive characters. Smith, G: F: H. (My '13)
- General John Regan. Hannay, J. O. (D '13)
- General Mallock's shadow. Maxwell, W: B. (Mr '13)
- Genetics. Walter, H. E. (Mr '13)
- Gentlemen rovers. Powell, E. A. (N '13)
- Geography
Heawood, E: History of geographical discovery in the 17th and 18th centuries. (Ag '13)
Salisbury, R. D., and others. Elements of geography. (My '13)
- Geography, Commercial
Smith, J. R. Industrial and commercial geography. (N '13)
- Geology
Leith, C: K. Structural geology. (N '13)
George Helm. Phillips, D: G. (F '13)
- German emperor and the peace of the world. Fried, A. H. (Ja '13)
- German literature
Robertson, J: G. Literature of Germany. (My '13)
- Germany
Bernhardi, F. v. Germany and the next war. (Mr '13)
Collier, P. Germany and the Germans from an American point of view. (Jl '13)
Lichtenberger, H: Germany and its evolution in modern times. (My '13)
Perris, G: H. Germany and the German emperor. (F '13)
Tower, C: Germany of to-day. (D '13)
- Biography
Wile, F: W: Men around the Kaiser. (S '13)
- Description and travel
Dickie, J. F. Germany. (F '13)
Tower, C: Along Germany's river of romance, the Moselle. (D '13)
- Economic conditions
Roberts, E. Monarchical socialism in Germany. (My '13)
- Foreign relations
Bernhardi, F. v. Germany and the next war. (Mr '13)
Phillips, Lady. Friendly Germany: why not? (Ag '13)
- Navy
Hurd, A. S., and Castle, H: German sea-power. (S '13)
- Politics and government
James, H. G. Principles of Prussian administration. (Je '13)
Germany and the Germans. Collier, P. (Jl '13)
Gertrude. Hungerford, E: (Jl '13)
Getting together. Whiton, J. M., ed. (O '13)
- Gettysburg
Singmaster, E. Gettysburg. (Jl '13)
- Gettysburg, Battle of Young, J. B. Battle of Gettysburg. (Ag '13)
- Ghost girl. Webster, H: K. (Mr '13)
- Ghost ship. Middleton, R: (Ap '13)
- Girls
Foxcroft, L. R. While you are a girl. (N '13)
- Girls' make-at-home things. Bailey, C. S. (Ap '13)
- Gissing, George Robert, 1857-1903
Swinerton, F. A. George Gissing. (F '13)
- Gitanjali. Tagore, R. (D '13)
- Gleams. Björkman, E. (Ja '13)
- Glory of the commonplace. Miller, J. R. (N '13)
- Gloved hand. Stevenson, B. E. (My '13)
- Godoy, Manuel, 1767-1851
D'Auvergne, E. B. Godoy. (O '13)
Gods are thirsty. France, A. (Ja '13)
- Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von, 1749-1832
Brown, P: H. Youth of Goethe. (N '13)
- Gold. White, S. E: (D '13)
- Gold, prices and wages. Hobson, J: A. (O '13)
- Golden barrier. Castle, A. and E. (D '13)

Golden road. Montgomery, L. M. (D '13)
 Golden rule Dollivers. Cameron, M. (N '13)
 Goldfish. Street, J. L. (F '13)

Golf

Hilton, H. H. Modern golf. (D '13)
 Taylor, J. Art of golf. (Je '13)
 Travers, J. D. Travers' golf book. (S '13)
 Vardon, H. How to play golf. (Jl '13)

Gonzaga, Giulia, 1513-1566

Hare, C. Princess of the Italian reformation. (F '13)

Gordon Craig, soldier of fortune. Parrish, R. (F '13)

Gospel of gladness and its meaning for us. Clifford, J. (My '13)

Gospel origins. Holdsworth, W. W. (O '13)

Gospel story in art. La Farge, J. (D '13)

Government of American cities. Munro, W. B. (F '13)

Government of England. Lowell, A. L. (My '13)

Government of the Ottoman empire in the time of Suleiman the Magnificent. Lybyer, A. H. (O '13)

Government ownership of railroads. Selected articles on. Phelps, E. M., comp. (Ja '13)

Governments of Europe. Ogg, F. A. (Ap '13)

Governor. Michaëlis, K. (Jl '13)

Gracechurch. Ayscough, J. (D '13)

Grand opera singers of to-day. Lahee, H. C. (F '13)

Grandeur that was Rome. Stobart, J. C. (Je '13)

Great acceptance. Gull, C. A. E. R. (My '13)

Great Britain

Biography

Gribble, F. H. Romance of the men of Devon. (My '13)

Hoffman, A. S. Heroes and heroines of English history. (Ja '13)

Lucy, H. W. Sixty years in the wilderness. (My '13)

Walford, L. B. Memories of Victorian London. (F '13)

Windham, W. Windham papers. (My '13)

Colonies

Beer, G. L. Old colonial system, 1660-1754. (Mr '13)

Court and courtiers

Aulnoy, M. C. J. de B. Memoirs of the court of England in 1675. (D '13)

Lytelton, S. Correspondence of Sarah Spencer, Lady Lytelton, 1787-1870. (Mr '13)

Description and travel

Evans, H. A. Castles of England and Wales. (Ja '13)

Economic conditions

Slater, G. Making of modern England. (O '13)

Foreign relations

Hall, J. England and the Orleans monarchy. (Mr '13)

Johnston, H. H. Common sense in foreign policy. (Je '13)

Lodge, H. C. One hundred years of peace. (O '13)

Phillips, Lady. Friendly Germany: why not? (Ag '13)

History

Gretton, R. H. Modern history of the English people. (My '13)

Innes, A. D. History of England from the earliest times to the present day. (N '13)

Jeudivine, J. W. First twelve centuries of British story. (O '13)

Oman, C. W. C. Wellington's army, 1809-1814. (Ap '13)

Perris, H. S. Pax britannica. (Ag '13)

Shelley, H. C. Royal castles of England. (D '13)

Wingfield-Stratford, E. C. History of English patriotism. (D '13)

Winstanley, D. A. Lord Chatham and the Whig opposition. (N '13)

History, Naval

Mahan, A. T. Major operations of the navies in the war of American independence. (N '13)

Industries and resources

Innes, A. D. England's industrial development. (Mr '13)

Intellectual life

Coleridge, S. Memories. (Jl '13)

Jerrold, L. French and the English. (D '13)

McCarthy, J. Our book of memories. (Mr '13)

Tweedie, E. B. Thirteen years of a busy woman's life. (Ja '13)

Wedmore, F. Memories. (Ja '13)

Kings and rulers

Bagshawe, F. G. History of the royal family of England. (Ja '13)

Politics and government

Bussell, F. W. New government for the British empire. (D '13)

Hall, W. P. British radicalism, 1791-1797. (Ap '13)

Hayes, C. H., comp. British social politics. (My '13)

Lowell, A. L. Government of England. (My '13)

Milner, Lord. Nation and the empire. (O '13)

Paul, H. W., ed. Famous speeches. (Ap '13)

Temple, R. Letters and character sketches from the House of Commons. (S '13)

Victoria. Girlhood of Queen Victoria. (Ja '13)

Great cases of famous detectives. Barton, G. (O '13)

Great opera stories. Bender, M. S., tr. (Mr '13)

Greater love hath no man. Packard, F. L. (D '13)

Greece

Cotterill, H. B. Ancient Greece. (D '13)

Demetrius, G. When I was a boy in Greece. (Je '13)

Ferguson, W. S. Greek imperialism. (D '13)

Murray, G. Four stages of Greek religion. (Ap '13)

Greek divination. Halliday, W. R. (D '13)

Greek imperialism. Ferguson, W. S. (D '13)

Greek poetry

White, J. W. Verse of Greek comedy. (Mr '13)

Greek refinements. Goodyear, W. H. (Ap '13)

Greek thinkers. Gomperz, T. (Mr '13)

Greeks in America. Burgess, T. (D '13)

Greeks in the United States

Burgess, T. Greeks in America. (D '13)

Green bough. Austin, M. (Je '13)

Green C. Meyer, J. A. (F '13)

Green devil. Metcalf, A. (Ja '13)

Grinding and polishing

Colvin, F. H., and Stanley, F. A. American machinist grinding book. (Ap '13)

Gringos. Bower, B. M., pseud. (D '13)

Growing pains. Low, I. (Ag '13)

Growth and development of the Catholic school system in the United States. Burns, J. A. (Ja '13)

Growth of groups in the animal kingdom. Lloyd, R. E. (Ap '13)

Guerilla leaders of the world. Standing, P. C. (S '13)

Guide to books on Ireland. Brown, S. J., ed. (F '13)

Guide to the best fiction in English. Baker, E. A. (S '13)

Guide to the manuscript materials relating to American history in the German state archives. Learned, M. D. (F '13)

Guide to the materials for American history, to 1783. Andrews, C. M. (Je '13)

Guide to the Montessori system. Stevens, E. Y. (My '13)

Guinea gold. Grimshaw, B. E. (My '13)

Guinevere's lover. Glyn, E. (Jl '13)

Gutter-babies. Slade, D. (My '13)

Gwyn, Nell, 1650-1687

Chesterton, C. Story of Nell Gwyn. (Ap '13)

Gymnastics

Masters, P. G. Rational system of home exercise. (Ap '13)

- Hagar, Johnston, M. (D '13)
Hagar Revelly, Goodman, D. C. (Ag '13)
- Hague conferences
Choate, J. H. Two Hague conferences. (Je '13)
White, A. D. First Hague conference. (N '13)
Half-lengths. Russell, G. W. E. (S '13)
Half-miler. Dudley, A. T. (O '13)
Half-tone and photomechanical processes. Horgan, S. H. (Ag '13)
Hallowell partnership. Brown, K. H. (Mr '13)
- Hamilton, Emma, lady, 1761?-1815
Moorhouse, E. H. Story of Lady Hamilton. (Ap '13)
Hand of the mighty. Kester, V. (O '13)
Handbook of English for engineers. Sypherd, W. O. (Ap '13)
Handbook of modern French sculpture. Eaton, D. C. (D '13)
Handbook of modern Japan. Clement, E. W. (Jl '13)
Handbook of municipal accounting. Bureau of municipal research, N. Y. (Jl '13)
Handbook of Norse mythology. Mortensen, K. A. (My '13)
Handbook of railroad expenses. Eaton, J. H. (N '13)
Handbook of the people's health. Coleman, W. M. (O '13)
- Handicraft
Bailey, C. S. Girls' make-at-home things. (Ap '13)
Bailey, C. S. and M. E. Boys' make-at-home things. (Ap '13)
Bullivant, C. H. Every boy's book of hobbies. (Ja '13)
Hall, A. N. Handy boy. (O '13)
Handy book of curious information. Walsh, W. S. (D '13)
Handy boy. Hall, A. N. (O '13)
- Happiness
Marden, O. S. Joys of living. (Ag '13)
Happy Acres. Turpin, E. H. L. (N '13)
Happy family. Swinnerton, F. A. (Je '13)
Happy-go-lucky. Beith, I. H. (O '13)
Happy warrior. Hutchinson, A. S.-M. (Mr '13)
Harbor master. Roberts, T. G. (My '13)
- Hardy, Thomas, 1840-
Abercrombie, L. Thomas Hardy: a critical study. (Ja '13)
Harlette. Angellotti, M. P. (S '13)
Harper's aircraft book. Verrill, A. H. (D '13)
Harper's book for young naturalists. Verrill, A. H. (Jl '13)
Harper's household handbook. Williams, M. M. (My '13)
- Harvard university
Pier, A. S. Story of Harvard. (N '13)
Harvest home. Lucas, E. V. (D '13)
- Hawaiian islands
Castle, W. R., jr. Hawaii, past and present. (Je '13)
- Headquarter recruit. Graves, C. I. M. (N '13)
- Health and the school. Burks, F. W. and J. D. (D '13)
- Health in home and town. Brown, B. M. (F. '13)
- Health master. Adams, S. H. (D '13)
Heart of Gaspé. Clarke, J. M. (N '13)
Heart of Sally Temple. Holland, R. S. (D '13)
Heart of the Christian message. Barton, G. A. (Ap '13)
Heart of the desert. Willsie, H. M. (N '13)
Heart of the hills. Fox, J., jr. (Ap '13)
Heart of the Night Wind. Roe, V. E. (S '13)
Hearts of grace. Mighels, P. V. (O '13)
- Heat
Randall, J. A. Heat. (D '13)
Conduction
Ingersoll, L. R., and Zobel, O. J. Introduction to the mathematical theory of heat conduction. (Ag '13)
- Heat engines
Hirshfeld, C. F., and Barnard, W. N. Elements of heat-power engineering. (Ag '13)
- Heating
Greene, A. M. Elements of heating and ventilation. (Je '13)
- Hebbel, Friedrich, 1813-1863
Gubelmann, A. E. Studies in the lyric poems of Friedrich Hebbel. (O '13)
Hebrew anthology. Kohut, G. A., ed. (S '13)
- Hebrew poetry
Abbott, E. A. Light on the gospel from an ancient poet. (S '13)
Helen Ormesby. Moses, B. (Mr '13)
Helen redeemed. Hewlett, M. H. (Jl '13)
Helena Brett's career. Coke, D. (O '13)
Hell's playground. Simonton, I. V. (Mr '13)
Helping hand cook book. Harland, M., and Herrick, C. (F '13)
- Henley, William Ernest, 1849-1903
Cornford, L. C. William Ernest Henley. (N '13)
Henley on the battle line. Channon, F. E. (N '13)
Henley's American captain. Channon, F. E. (Ja '13)
- Henrietta Maria, queen of England, 1609-1669.
Haynes, H. Henrietta Maria. (Ja '13)
- Henry VIII, king of England, 1491-1547
Mumby, F. A. Youth of Henry VIII. (S '13)
- Her soul and her body. Hale, L. (Ja '13)
- Heraldry
Hope, W. H. St. J. Heraldry for craftsmen and designers. (O '13)
Herbals. Arber, A. (S '13)
Here are ladies. Stephens, J. (D '13)
- Heredity
Walter, H. E. Genetics. (Mr '13)
Heritage of honor. Hudson, A. (S '13)
Hero of Herat. Diver, K. H. M. (Ap '13)
Heroes and heroines of English history. Hoffman, A. S. (Ja '13)
Heroes of modern Europe. Birkhead, A. (N '13)
Heroes of science. Gibson, C. R. (Ja '13)
Heroic age. Chadwick, H. M. (My '13)
Heroines of modern progress. Adams, E. C., and Foster, W. D. (Ap '13)
Higher mathematics for chemical students. Partington, J. R. (F '13)
Highway to happiness. Le Gallienne, R. (O '13)
Highways and byways from the St. Lawrence to Virginia. Johnson, C. (D '13)
Highways and byways in Somerset. Hutton, E. (Ap '13)
Hill of Venus. Gallizier, N. (Ag '13)
Hindle wakes. Houghton, S. (Je '13)
Hippodrome. Hayward, R. (S '13)
His father's wife. Patterson, J. E. (D '13)
His great adventure. Herrick, R. (N '13)
His love story. Van Vorst, M. (Je '13)
- Historians
Gooch, G. P. History and historians in the nineteenth century. (O '13)
Historic adventures. Holland, R. S. (D '13)
Historic Jesus. Lester, C. S. (Ap '13)
Historic New York during two centuries. Goodwin, M. W., and others, eds. (F '13)
Historical setting of the early gospel. Hall, T. C. (Ap '13)
- History
Gooch, G. P. History and historians in the nineteenth century. (O '13)
Bibliography
Moore, M. F., comp. Two select bibliographies of mediaeval historical study. (My '13)
Philosophy
Woods, F. A. Influence of monarchs. (Ag '13)
- History, Ancient
Botsford, G. W. and L. S. Source-book of ancient history. (My '13)
Hall, H. R. H. Ancient history of the near East. (D '13)
Webster, H. Ancient history. (D '13)
Westermann, W. L. Story of the ancient nations. (S '13)
- History, Modern
Harding, S. B. New medieval and modern history. (N '13)
History and historians in the nineteenth century. Gooch, G. P. (O '13)
History as literature. Roosevelt, T. (O '13)
History as past ethics. Myers, P. V. (Jl '13)

- History of ancient philosophy. Benn, A. W: (Ja '13)
 History of England. Innes, A. D. (N '13)
 History of English patriotism. Wingfield-Stratford, E. C. (D '13)
 History of freedom of thought. Bury, J: B. (D '13)
 History of geographical discovery in the 17th and 18th centuries. Heawood, E: (Ag '13)
 History of modern philosophy. Benn, A. W: (Ap '13)
 History of Ohio. Randall, E. O., and Ryan, D. J. (Ag '13)
 History of old Sheffield plate. Bradbury, F: (Ap '13)
 History of Plymouth plantation. Bradford, W: (Je '13)
 History of Roman law. Stephenson, A. (F '13)
 History of Russia. Kluchevsky, V. O. (N '13)
 History of South America, 1854-1904. Akers, C: E. (Mr '13)
 History of the chorus in the German drama. Helmrich, E. W. (Ap '13)
 History of the discovery and conquest of Costa Rica. Fernández Guardia, R. (N '13)
 History of the Jews in America. Wiernik, P: (F '13)
 History of the Metropolitan museum of art. Howe, W. E. (S '13)
 History of the people of Israel in pre-Christian times. Sarson, M., and Phillips, M. A. (My '13)
 History of the people of the United States. McMaster, J: B. (S '13)
 History of the presidency from 1897 to 1909. Stanwood, E: (F '13)
 History of the royal family of England. Bagshawe, F: G. (Ja '13)
 History of the Supreme court of the United States. Myers, G. (N '13)
 History of the United States. Channing, E: (Ja '13)
 Hoffman's chance. Caine, W: (Ja '13)
 Holland of the Dutch. Boulger, D. C. de K. (O '13)
 Holy Christian church from its remote origins to the present day. Johnston, R. M. (Ap '13)
 Holy war in Tripoli. Abbott, G: F. (F '13)
 Home life in Russia. Rappoport, A. S. (Ag '13)
 Home place. Ogden, G: W. (F '13)
 Home poultry book. Farrington, E: I. (Jl '13)
 Home rule
 Balfour, A. J. Aspects of home rule. (F '13)
 Brooks, S. Aspects of the Irish question. (Ja '13)
 Wicks, P. Truth about home rule. (S '13)
 Home school. Trowbridge, A. W. (D '13)
 Homes and haunts of John Ruskin. Cook, E: T. (Mr '13)
 Honourable Mr. Tawnish. Farnol, J. (D '13)
 Honourable Mrs. Garry. De la Pasture, E. (F '13)
 Honorable Senator Sage-Brush. Lynde, F. (N '13)
 Horizon songs. Goodwin, G. D. (Ap '13)
 Horsemanship
 Beach, B. Riding and driving for women. (Ja '13)
 House decoration
 De Wolfe, E. House in good taste. (D '13)
 Throop, L. A. Furnishing the home of good taste. (My '13)
 House in good taste. De Wolfe, E. (D '13)
 House of happiness. Boshier, K. L. (D '13)
 House of spies. Deeping, W. (Je '13)
 House of Thane. Dejeans, E. (Ag '13)
 House plants
 Rockwell, F: F. Gardening indoors and under glass. (F '13)
 House sanitation. Talbot, M. (F '13)
 House wiring. Poppe, T: W. (Mr '13)
 Household bacteriology. Buchanan, E. D. and R. E. (Je '13)
 Household textiles. Gibbs, C. M. (Mr '13)
 Housekeeper's handy book. Baxter, L. A. (O '13)
 Housekeeping for little girls. Foster, O. H. (Mr '13)
 Housing problem
 Academy of political science. N. Y. National housing association. (Ja '13)
 How New York city administers its schools. Moore, E. C. (O '13)
 How to become a citizen of the United States of America. Kallmeyer, C: (O '13)
 How to invest when prices are rising. Fisher, I., and others. (My '13)
 How to make things. Williams, A. (D '13)
 How to master the spoken word. Lawrence, E. G. (S '13)
 How to obtain citizenship. Fowler, N. C., jr. (Jl '13)
 How to play golf. Vardon, H. (Jl '13)
 How to train the speaking voice. Tait, T: (S '13)
 How 'twas. Reynolds, S. (F '13)
 Hudson bay
 Leith, C: K. and A. T. Summer and winter on Hudson bay. (Ag '13)
 Human behavior. Colvin, S. S., and Bagley, W: C. (S '13)
 Human physiology. Luciani, L. (S '13)
 Human quintessence. Ibsen, S. (Mr '13)
 Human slaughter-house. Lamszus, W. (Jl '13)
 Humanism. Schiller, F. C. S. (My '13)
 Humanities in the education of the future and other addresses and papers. Owen, W: B. (Mr '13)
 Humanly speaking. Crothers, S: M. (Ja '13)
 Hungary
 Clark, F. E: Old homes of new Americans. (Ap '13)
 Hunting
 Duncan, S., and Gull, C. A. E: R. Complete wildfowler. (F '13)
 Martindale, T: Hunting in the upper Yukon. (D '13)
 Studley, J. T. Journal of a sporting nomad. (F '13)
 Sutherland, J. Adventures of an elephant hunter. (F '13)
 Wallace, H. F. Big game of central and western China. (N '13)
 William Frederick Victor August Ernst. From my hunting day-book. (Ja '13)
 Africa
 Nassau, R. H. In an elephant corral. (My '13)
 Stigand, C. H. Hunting the elephant in Africa. (D '13)
 White, S. E: Land of footprints. (Ja '13)
 Hunting extinct animals in the Patagonian pampas. Loomis, F: B. (Ag '13)
 Hurrying fate and Geraldine. Kingsley, F. (D '13)
 Hydraulic machinery
 Butler, E: Modern pumping and hydraulic machinery. (D '13)
 Hydrometallurgy of copper. Greenawalt, W: E. (Ap '13)
 Hygiene
 Adams, S: H. Health master. (D '13)
 Hessler, R. Dusty air and ill health. (Ap '13)
 Tolman, W: H., and Guthrie, A. W. Hygiene for the worker. (F '13)
 Woodworth, R. S. Care of the body. (Jl '13)
 Ibsen, Henrik, 1828-1906
 Rose, H: Henrik Ibsen, poet, mystic and moralist. (D '13)
 Icelandic sagas. Craigie, W: A. (S '13)
 Icknield way. Thomas, E: (S '13)
 Idea of the industrial school. Kerschensteiner, G. M. A. (S '13)
 Ideal adult class in the Sunday-school. Wells, A. R. (Mr '13)
 Idiot. Dostoevski, F. M. (D '13)
 If you touch them they vanish. Morris, G. (N '13)
 Illusions of Mr. and Mrs. Bressingham. Bendall, G. (Mr '13)
 Illustrated flora of the northern United States, Canada and the British possessions. Britton, N. L., and Brown, A. (D '13)
 Immigrant invasion. Warne, F. J. (My '13)

Immigrants

- Haskin, F.: J. Immigrant. (O '13)
 Immigration. Fairchild, H.: P. (Jl '13)
 Immigration and labor. Hourwich, I.: A. (Mr '13)

Immortality

- Duncan, W. B. Immortality and modern thought. (My '13)
 Fosdick, H. E. Assurance of immortality. (D '13)
 Frazer, J. G.: Belief in immortality and the worship of the dead. (O '13)
 Impeachment of President Israel. Copley, F. B. (My '13)
 Impossible boy. Putnam, N. W. (My '13)

Impressionism

- Poore, H.: R. New tendency in art. (Ag '13)
 Van Gogh, V. Letters of a post-impressionist. (Ap '13)
 In accordance with the evidence. Onions, O. (Jl '13)
 In an elephant corral. Nassau, R. H. (My '13)

In another moment. Davis, C. B. (Je '13)

- In beaver world. Mills, E. A. (My '13)
 In byways of Scottish history. Barbé, L.: A. (S '13)

In French-Africa. Edwards, M. B. Betham-. (Ap '13)

- In midsummer days. Strindberg, A. (D '13)
 In music land. Upton, G.: P. (D '13)
 In other words. Adams, F. P. (Ja '13)
 In search of a husband. Harris, C. M. (D '13)
 In Thackeray's London. Smith, F. H. (D '13)
 In the days of Lionheart. Gandy, W. (N '13)
 In the footsteps of Richard Coeur de Lion. Holbach, M. M. (F '13)
 In the heart of old Canada. Wood, W.: (D '13)
 In the 'once upon a time.' Gask, L. (N '13)
 In the shadow of the bush. Talbot, P. A. (My '13)
 In the vanguard. Trask, K. (My '13)

Inclosures

- Gonner, E.: C. K. Common land and inclosure. (F '13)
 Increasing home efficiency. Bruère, M. B. and R. W. (Mr '13)

India

- Fuller, B. Empire of India. (My '13)
 Palmer, R. Little tour in India. (Jl '13)
 Shoemaker, M. M. Indian pages and pictures. (Ap '13)

Indian fairy tales. Browne, A. L.: (Ja '13)Indian pages and pictures. Shoemaker, M. M. (Ap '13)Indians of North America*Biography

- Sweetser, K. D. Book of Indian braves. (N '13)

Individuality

- Bosanquet, B. Value and destiny of the individual. (S '13)
 Huxley, J. S. Individual in the animal kingdom. (F '13)

Industrial and commercial geography. Smith, J. R. (N '13)Industrial arts

- Williams, A. How to make things. (D '13)

Industrial betterment

- Cadbury, E.: Experiments in industrial organization. (My '13)

Industrial chemistry. Rogers, A., and others, eds. (Je '13)Industrial combinations and trusts. Stevens, W.: S., ed. (Mr '13)Industrial development of nations. Curtiss, G.: B. (Jl '13)Industrial education

- City club of Chicago. Report on vocational training in Chicago and in other cities. (Ja '13)

Welpton, W. P. Primary artisan education. (D '13)Industrial history of the American people. Moore, J. R. H. (Je '13)Industrial warfare. Watney, C., and Little, J. A. (D '13)Infancy of animals. Pycraft, W. P. (Mr '13)

- Inferno. Strindberg, A. (S '13)
 Influence of Baudelaire in France and England. Turquet-Milnes, G. (My '13)
 Influence of monarchs. Woods, F.: A. (Ag '13)
 Inhumanity of socialism. Adams, E.: F. (N '13)
 Injurious insects. O'Kane, W. C. (F '13)
 Inner life and the Tao-teh-king. Bjerregaard, C. H. A. (Je '13)

InsaneCare and treatment

- Williams, E.: H. Walled city (N '13)

Insanity

- Hart, B. Psychology of insanity. (Mr '13)

Insects

- Sanderson, E. D., and Jackson, C. F. Elementary entomology. (F '13)

Insects, Injurious and beneficial

- O'Kane, W. C. Injurious insects. (F '13)
 Inside of the cup. Churchill, W. (Jl '13)
 Inside the ropes. Van Loan, C.: E. (Je '13)
 Insidious Dr. Fu-Manchu. Rohmer, S. (D '13)

Insurance

- Dunham, H. P., ed. Business of insurance. (My '13)

Insurance, Health

- Gibbon, I. G. Medical benefit. (My '13)

Insurance, Life

- Jack, A. F. Introduction to the history of life assurance. (Je '13)

Insurance, State and compulsory

- Bullock, E. D., comp. Selected articles on compulsory insurance. (Ja '13)

- Gephart, W.: F. Insurance and the state. (D '13)

- Insurance and the state. Gephart, W.: F. (D '13)
 International Bible dictionary. Peloubet, F. N., and Adams, A. D., eds. (F '13)

International law and relations

- Fullerton, W.: M. Problems of power. (Ag '13)
 Hershey, A. S. Essentials of international public law. (Ap '13)

- International mind. Butler, N.: M. (Ja '13)
 Interpretation of dreams. Freud, S. (Ag '13)

- Interpretation of piano music. Venable, M. (Je '13)

- Interpretation of religious experience. Watson, J.: (My '13)

- Interpretation of Rudolf Eucken's philosophy. Jones, W.: T. (Ap '13)

- Intimations. Barry, J.: D. (O '13)
 Intimations of immortality in the sonnets of Shakspere. Palmer, G.: H. (Ja '13)

- Introduction to analytical mechanics. Ziwet, A., and Field, P.: (F '13)

- Introduction to eugenics. Whetham, W.: C. D. and C. D. (Ap '13)

- Introduction to metaphysics. Bergson, H.: L.: (Ja '13)

- Introduction to philosophy. Fletcher, O. O. (S '13)

- Introduction to political parties and practical politics. Ray, P. O. (O '13)

- Introduction to psychology. Wundt, W. (Je '13)

- Introduction to the history of life assurance. Jack, A. F. (Je '13)

- Introduction to the mathematical theory of heat conduction. Ingersoll, L. R., and Zobel, O.: J. (Ag '13)

- Introduction to the poets. Rawnsley, W. F. (F '13)

- Introduction to the study of adolescent education. Andrews, C. B. (Ja '13)

- Introduction to the study of fuel. Brislee, F. J. (Ap '13)

- Introduction to the study of the protozoa. Minchin, E. A. (Je '13)

- Introductory American history. Bourne, H.: E., and Benton, E. J. (Mr '13)

- Invaders. Allen, F. N. S. (My '13)

Inventions

- Clarke, C.: J. L. Boys' book of modern marvels. (Ja '13)

- Maule, H. E.: Boy's book of new inventions. (F '13)

Inventors, American

- Iles, G.: Leading American inventors. (Ja '13)

Investments

Fisher, L. and others. How to invest when prices are rising. (My '13)

Invincible alliance. Grierson, F. (Je '13)

Ireland

Dunraven and Mount-Earl, W. T. W.-Q. Finances of Ireland before the union and after. (F '13)

Russell, G. W. Co-operation and nationality. (O '13)

Wilson, P. Beginnings of modern Ireland. (O '13)

Bibliography

Brown, S. J., ed. Guide to books on Ireland. (F '13)

Irish drama

Weygandt, C. Irish plays and playwrights. (Ap '13)

Irish plays and playwrights: Weygandt, C. (Ap '13)

Irish twins. Perkins, L. (D '13)

Irishmen all. Hannay, J. O. (D '13)

Iron trail. Beach, R. E. (O '13)

Irrigation

Newell, F. H., and Murphy, D. W. Principles of irrigation engineering. (D '13)

Is it enough? Campbell, H. R. (Ag '13)

Isidore of Seville (Isidorus Hispalensis) c. 560?-636

Brehaut, E. Encyclopedist of the dark ages. (F '13)

Isle of life. Whitman, S. F. (Ap '13)

Isles in summer seas. Redman, J. L. (Ag '13)

Isobel. Curwood, J. O. (Je '13)

Italian lanes and highroads. Leary, R. W. (Ap '13)

Italians of to-day. Bagot, R. (My '13)

Italy

Sedgwick, H. D., jr. Italy in the thirteenth century. (F '13)

Underwood, F. M. United Italy. (F '13)

Description and travel

Ayscough, J. Saints and places. (Mr '13)

Harris, C. F. Motor rambles in Italy. (Ap '13)

Leary, R. W. Italian lanes and highroads. (Ap '13)

Le Blond, E. A. F. Old gardens of Italy. (Ap '13)

McCrackan, W. D. Spell of the Italian lakes. (Jl '13)

Maurel, A. Little cities of Italy. (Ap '13)

Sherrill, C. H. Stained glass tour in Italy. (D '13)

Tyndale, W. Artist in Italy. (D '13)

History

Sedgwick, H. D., jr. Italy in the thirteenth century. (F '13)

Troutbeck, G. E. Stories from Italian history retold for children. (F '13)

Religion

Luzzi, G. Struggle for Christian truth in Italy. (Ag '13)

Social life and customs

Bagot, R. Italians of to-day. (My '13)

Italy's war for a desert. McCullagh, F. (Je '13)

Jack Chanty. Footner, H. (N '13)

Jack-knife man. Butler, E. P. (N '13)

Jacob Leisler. Bates, W. O. (N '13)

Jade. Laufer, B. (F '13)

James Hurd. Prowse, R. O. (S '13)

Japan

Blakeslee, G. H., ed. Japan and Japanese-American relations. (Jl '13)

Clement, E. W. Handbook of modern Japan. (Jl '13)

Goodrich, J. K. Our neighbors. (Jl '13)

Harrison, E. J. Fighting spirit of Japan. (Mr '13)

Japanese colour-prints and their designers. Gookin, F. W. (D '13)

Japanese twins. Perkins, L. F. (Ja '13)

Java

Scheltema, J. F. Monumental Java. (S '13)

Jean-Christophe: journey's end. Rolland, R. (Ap '13)

Jefferson, Thomas, 1743-1826

Williams, J. S. Thomas Jefferson. (S '13)

Jelf's. Vachell, H. A. (F '13)

Jena to Eylau. Goltz, C. (D '13)

Jesuits

McCabe, J. Candid history of the Jesuits. (D '13)

Jesus Christ

Gilbert, G. H. Jesus. (D '13)

Kent, C. F. Life and teachings of Jesus. (Je '13)

Loofs, F. What is the truth about Jesus Christ? (Ag '13)

Mackintosh, H. R. Doctrine of the person of Jesus Christ (F '13)

Thorburn, T. J. Jesus the Christ. (Ap '13)

Art

La Farge, J. Gospel story in art. (D '13)

Jewel of the seas. Kaufman, J. (F '13)

Jews

Ruppin, A. Jews of to-day. (Ag '13)

Sombart, W. Jews and modern capitalism. (D '13)

History

Sarson, M., and Phillips, M. A. History of the people of Israel in pre-Christian times. (My '13)

Jews in the United States

Wiernik, P. History of the Jews in America. (F '13)

Jezebel. Pryce, R. (Ap '13)

Jim Davis. Masefield, J. (F '13)

Joan Thursday. Vance, L. J. (N '13)

Jocasta and The famished cat. France, A. (Ap '13)

Joe, the book farmer. Harris, G. (D '13)

John of Austria, 1547-1578

Coloma, L. Story of Don John of Austria. (Je '13)

John and Betty's Scotch history visit. Williamson, M. (F '13)

John Barleycorn. London, J. (S '13)

John Cave. Trites, W. B. (Je '13)

John Jonathan and company. Milne, J. (F '13)

Johnson, Samuel, 1709-1784

Bailey, J. C. Dr. Johnson and his circle. (My '13)

Jones, John Paul, 1747-1792

Crawford, M. M. Sailor whom England feared. (N '13)

De Koven, A. Life and letters of John Paul Jones. (Je '13)

Journal of a sporting nomad. Studley, J. T. (F '13)

Journalism

Dilnot, F. Adventures of a newspaper man. (D '13)

Journey to Ohio in 1810. Bell, M. V. (Ja '13)

Joy bringer. Cooke, G. M. (Je '13)

Joy of youth. Phillpotts, E. (N '13)

Joyful Heatherby. Erskine, P. (F '13)

Jovous gard. Benson, A. C. (O '13)

Joys of living. Marden, O. S. (Ag '13)

Judas. Kemp, H. (Ag '13)

Judgment house. Parker, G. (Ap '13)

Judiciary and the people. Judson, F. N. (O '13)

Jumping-off place. Shackelford, E. (D '13)

Just boy. West, P. C. (F '13)

Justice and the modern law. Abbot, E. V. (O '13)

Juvenile courts

Coulter, E. K. Children in the shadow. (My '13)

Karakoram

Filippi, F. de. Karakoram and the western Himalaya, 1909. (F '13)

Keren of Lowbole. Silberrad, U. L. (O '13)

Key, Ellen Karolina Sofia, 1849--

Nyström-Hamilton, L. Ellen Key. (Ag '13)

Kindergarten

Blow, S. E., and others. The kindergarten. (N '13)

Hardy, L. Diary of a free kindergarten. (Mr '13)

King John of Jingalo. Housman, L. (Mr '13)

- Kingdom. Goad, H. E. (S '13)
Kingdom of God and American life. Brewster, C. B. (Mr '13)
 Kingdom of two. Albee, H. (D '13)
 Kings and gods of Egypt. Moret, A. (F '13)
Kings and rulers
 Harden, M. Monarchs and men. (Ag '13)
King's cutters and smugglers. Chatterton, E. K. (Ja '13)
King's story book. Gomme, G. L., ed. (Mr '13)
 Kiss. Tchekhov, A. P. (Ja '13)
 Knave of diamonds. Dell, E. M. (Jl '13)
Knowledge, Theory of Phillip, A. Dynamic foundation of knowledge. (O '13)
Knowledge and life. Arkwright, W. (O '13)
Kongo
 Weeks, J. H. Among Congo cannibals. (F '13)
Labor and laboring classes
 Babson, R. W. Future of the working classes. (D '13)
 Haynes, G. E. Negro at work in New York city. (Mr '13)
 Ross, J. E. Consumers and wage-earners. (Ap '13)
 Ware, F. A. G. Worker and his country. (D '13)
 Womer, P. P. Church and the labor conflicts. (S '13)
Great Britain
 Watney, C., and Little, J. A. Industrial warfare. (D '13)
London
 Hill, O. Life of Octavia Hill as told in her letters. (O '13)
Labouchere, Henry Du Pre, 1831-1912
 Thorold, A. L. Life of Henry Labouchere. (D '13)
Ladder of Christ. Campbell, R. J. (Ap '13)
 Laddie. Porter, G. (S '13)
 Laddie, the master of the house. Wesselhoeft, L. (D '13)
 Lady and the pirate. Hough, E. (S '13)
 Lady Laughter. Barbour, R. H. (D '13)
 Lady of the snows. Harrison, E. O. (F '13)
Lakes-to-the-Gulf deep waterway. Shelton, W. A. (Ap '13)
Lanchester of Brazenose. McDonald, R. (Ap '13)
 Land of content. Delano, E. B. (Je '13)
 Land of footprints. White, S. E. (Ja '13)
 Land of the New Guinea pygmies. Rawling, C. G. (My '13)
 Land of the spirit. Page, T. N. (Je '13)
 Land that is desolate. Treves, F. (My '13)
 Landsman's log. Neeser, R. W. (My '13)
Languedoc
 Headlam, C. Provence and Languedoc. (Mr '13)
Larger aspects of socialism. Walling, W. E. (Jl '13)
Last century in Europe (1814-1910). Hawkesworth, C. E. M. (N '13)
Last frontier. Powell, E. A. (Ja '13)
Last leaf. Hosmer, J. K. (F '13)
Latin America. Garcia Calderon, F. (Ap '13)
Laughter
 Sidis, B. Psychology of laughter. (S '13)
Law
 Berolzheimer, F. World's legal philosophies. (My '13)
 Miraglia, L. Comparative legal philosophy applied to legal institutions. (Ap '13)
United States
 Couderet, F. R. Certainty and justice. (O '13)
 Law-bringers. Lancaster, G. B. (D '13)
Law reform
 Abbot, E. V. Justice and the modern law. (O '13)
Lawrence, Sir Thomas, 1769-1830
 Armstrong, W. Lawrence. (S '13)
Lawyers
 Harris, A. M. Letters to a young lawyer. (Ap '13)
 Leading American inventors. Iles, G. (Ja '13)
 Learned societies and English literary scholarship in Great Britain and the United States. Steeves, H. R. (O '13)
 Leaves from the city beautiful. Starkweather, A. M. (My '13)
 Lectures on moral philosophy. Witherspoon, J. (F '13)
 Lectures on the American civil war. Rhodes, J. F. (Mr '13)
 Lee shore. Macaulay, R. (Mr '13)
 Legal position of trade unions. Schloesser, H. H., and Clark, W. S. (F '13)
 Legend of Jerry Ladd. Gilson, R. R. (Je '13)
Legislation
 Brown, W. J. Underlying principles of modern legislation. (Ja '13)
 Less than the dust. Hamilton, M. A. (Mr '13)
 Lessons from nature's workshop. Claxton, W. J. (N '13)
L'Estrange, Sir Roger, 1616-1704
 Kitchin, G. Sir Roger L'Estrange. (Je '13)
 Letter bag of Lady Elizabeth Spencer-Stanhope. Stirling, A. M. D. W., comp. (F '13)
Letter-writing
 Irvine, L. H. Irvine's dictionary of titles. (Ap '13)
 Letters and character sketches from the House of Commons. Temple, R. (S '13)
Letters of a post-impressionist. Van Gogh, V. (Ap '13)
Letters to a young lawyer. Harris, A. M. (Ap '13)
 Letters to unknown friends. Abbott, L. (Je '13)
Liberty
 Sprading, C. T. Liberty and the great libertarians. (O '13)
Libraries
 Green, S. S. Public library movement in the United States, 1853-1893. (O '13)
Libyan desert
 Falls, J. C. E. Three years in the Libyan desert. (S '13)
Life
 Ibsen, S. Human quintessence. (Mr '13)
 King, H. C. Religion as life. (Ag '13)
 Moore, B. Origin and nature of life. (My '13)
 Life and teachings of Jesus. Kent, C. F. (Je '13)
 Life of an elephant. Eardley-Wilmot, S. (Ja '13)
 Life of Mansie Wauch. Moir, D. M. (F '13)
 Life of the bee. Maeterlinck, M. (F '13)
 Life of the fly. Fabre, J. H. C. (D '13)
 Life of the plant. Timirjazev, K. A. (F '13)
 Life of the spider. Fabre, J. H. C. (Mr '13)
Light
 Barrows, W. E., jr. Light, photometry and illumination. (Ap '13)
 Houston, R. A. Studies in light production. (Je '13)
Light on life's difficulties. Allen, J. (Mr '13)
 Light on the gospel from an ancient poet [Odes of Solomon]. Abbott, E. A. (S '13)
Liguria
 Lees, F. Wanderings on the Italian Riviera. (D '13)
Lilies
 Adams, H. S. Lilies. (Ap '13)
Lime, Chloride of Hooker, A. H. Chloride of lime in sanitation. (N '13)
Liquid fuel
 Booth, W. H. Liquid fuel and its apparatus. (Ap '13)
Liquor problem
 Eaton, E. L. Winning the fight against drink. (Ja '13)
Lister, Joseph Lister, 1st baron, 1827-1912
 Wrench, G. T. Lord Lister. (D '13)
 Literary brevities. Wight, J. G., comp. and ed. (D '13)
 Literary hearthstones of Dixie. Pickett, L. C. (F '13)
 Literary influences in colonial newspapers, 1704-1750. Cook, E. C. (Mr '13)

Literature

- Bjorkman, E. Voices of to-morrow. (S '13)
 Buck, P. M., jr. Social forces in modern literature. (Jl '13)
 Jackson, H. All manner of folk. (Ja '13)
 Smith, C: A. What can literature do for me? (S '13)
 Wilson, W. Mere literature. (Je '13)
History and criticism
 Kuhns, O. One-sided autobiography. (N '13)
Literature, Comparative
 Gordon, G. S., comp. English literature and the classics. (O '13)
Literature of Germany. Robertson, J: G. (My '13)
Literature of the Old Testament. Moore, G: F. (Jl '13)
 Little book of Brittany. McBride, R. M. (Jl '13)
 Little cardinal. Parr, O. K. (F '13)
 Little cities of Italy. Maurel, A. (Ap '13)
 Little gray shoe. Brebner, P. J. (Mr '13)
 Little green world. Buckrose, Mrs. J. E. (N '13)
Little-known sisters of well-known men. Pomeroy, S. G. (F '13)
 Little Thank You. O'Connor, E. (Je '13)
 Little tour in India. Palmer, R. (Jl '13)
 Little wars. Wells, H. G. (D '13)
 Lives of the most eminent painters, sculptors and architects. Vasari, G. (F '13)
 Living legacy. Underwood, R. (F '13)
 Living plant. Ganong, W: F. (Jl '13)
Livingstone, David, 1813-1873
 Horne, C. S. David Livingstone. (Mr. '13)
 Lotterer's harvest. Lucas, E: V. (D '13)
Lombardy
 Hutton, E: Cities of Lombardy. (Ja '13)
London
 Boynton, P. H. London in English literature. (O '13)
 Chancellor, E. B. Annals of Fleet street. (Ja '13)
 Chancellor, E. B. Annals of the Strand. (Ja '13)
 Smith, F. H. In Thackeray's London. (D '13)
 Long engagement. Stevens, E. S. (Je '13)
 Long patrol. Cody, H. A. (F '13)
 Long way. Taylor, M. I. (Jl '13)
 Lore of Proserpine. Hewlett, M. H. (Jl '13)
 Lost despatch. Lincoln, N. S. (My '13)
 Lost in the Arctic. Mikkelsen, E. (Ap '13)
 Lost million. Alden, W. (Mr '13)
 Lost road. Davis, R: H. (D '13)
Louis XI, king of France, 1423-1483
 Haggard, A. C: P. Louis XI and Charles the Bold. (D '13)
Louis Napoléon, prince imperial of the French, 1856-1879
 Filon, P. M. A. Memoirs of the Prince imperial (1856-1879). (N '13)
Louvre
 Richards, E. E. The Louvre. (My '13)
Love
 Salmon, A. L. Man and the woman. (Ag '13)
Love affairs of the courts of Europe. Hall, T. (Ap '13)
Love dream. Vane, G: (Ap '13)
 Love in a hurry. Burgess, G. (O '13)
 Love of nature among the Romans. Gelkie, A. (F '13)
 Lovely lady. Austin, M. (D '13)
 Lovers of Skye. Allen, F. W. (Ap '13)
 Love's soldier. Mackirdy, O. C. (Je '13)
Lowe, Sir Hudson, 1769-
 Pillans, T. D. Real martyr of St. Helena. (D '13)
 Lu of the ranges. Mordaunt, E. (D '13)
Lucca
 Ross, J. A., and Erichsen, N. Story of Lucca. (N '13)
 Luck o' Lady Joan. Bacon, J. D. (O '13)
 Lucky Pehr. Strindberg, A. (F '13)
 Lucky seventh. Van Loan, C: E. (Je '13)
Lumbering
 Bassett, S. W. Story of lumber. (Ja '13)
 Lure of the iron trail. Adair, W. W: (My '13)

- Lyric diction for singers, actors and public speakers. Jones, D. D. (Ap '13)
 Lyric poetry. Rhys, E. (D '13)
 Lyric year. Earle, F., ed. (Ja '13)
 Lyrics and dramas. Phillips, S. (D '13)
 Lyrics and poems. Ibsen, H. (N '13)
Lytton, Edward George Earle Lytton Bulwer-Lytton, 1st baron, 1803-1873
 Lytton, V: A. G: R. L. Life of Edward Bulwer, first Lord Lytton. (D '13)

Machinery

- Marshall, W: C. Elementary machine drawing and design. (My '13)
 Madeleine at her mirror. Tinayre, M. (D '13)
 Madonna of sacrifice. Orcutt, W: D. (Ap '13)
 Madrigal. Daly, T: A. (Ja '13)
Maeterlinck, Maurice, 1862-
 Bithell, J. Life and writings of Maurice Maeterlinck. (D '13)
Magnetic Paris. Mack, A. (Jl '13)
Magnetism
 Hough, R. H., and Boehm, W. M. Elementary principles of electricity and magnetism. (My '13)
 Magneto and electric ignition. Hibbert, W. (My '13)
Mahler, Gustav, 1860-1911
 Stefan-Gruenfeldt, P. Gustav Mahler. (D '13)
 Malden manifest. MacLeod, D. C. (My '13)
Malds in a market garden. Graves, C. I. M. (Mr '13)
Main drainage of towns. Taylor, F. N. (Mr '13)
 Main road. Warren, M. L. (N '13)
 Mainsall haul. Masefield, J: (D '13)
 Major operations of the navies in the war of American independence. Mahan, A. T. (N '13)
 Make-shift marriage. Reynolds, G. M. (Je '13)
 Makers of British botany. Oliver, F. W., ed. (D '13)
 Making a bulb garden. Tabor, G. (F '13)
 Making a fireplace. Saylor, H: H. (O '13)
 Making a garage. Ellis, A. R. (O '13)
 Making a garden to bloom this year. Tabor, G. (F '13)
 Making a garden with hotbed and coldframe. Miller, C. H. (Ap '13)
 Making a water garden. Tricker, W: (O '13)
 Making and furnishing outdoor rooms and porches. Eberlein, H. D. (O '13)
 Making of a newspaper man. Blythe, S: G. (Mr '13)
 Making of a town. McVey, F. L. (Jl '13)
 Making of modern England. Slater, G. (O '13)
 Making of the Australian commonwealth. Wise, B. R. (D '13)
 Making of Thomas Barton. Nicholas, A. (Je '13)
 Making of to-morrow. Mathews, S. (S '13)
 Making over Martha. Lippmann, J. M. (D '13)
 Making religion efficient. Barbour, C. A., ed. (Mr '13)
 Making the farm pay. Bowsfield, C. C. (Jl '13)
 Making the grounds attractive with shrubbery. Tabor, G. (F '13)
Malarial fever
 Herms, W: B. Malaria. (S '13)
 Malayan monochromes. Clifford, H. (D '13)
Malingering
 Collie, J: Malingering and feigned sickness. (D '13)
 Mamselle of the wilderness. Seaman, A. H. (S '13)
Man
 Wright, G: F. Origin and antiquity of man. (My '13)
 Man a machine. La Mettrie, J. O. de. (Ag '13)
 Man and the woman. Salmon, A. L. (Ag '13)
 Man between. Frost, W. A. (D '13)
 Man who one day a year would go "eeeln." Mapes, C: H. (O '13)
 Man who saw wrong. Fisher, J., pseud. (D '13)
 Man who was good. Merrick, L. (Ap '13)
 Man who would not be king. Dark, S. (My '13)

- Manning, Henry Edward, cardinal, 1808?-1892
 Bodley, J. E: C. Cardinal Manning. (Ap '13)
 Man's religion. Smith, F. B. (O '13)
 Manual for writers. Manly, J. M., and Powell, J. A. (D '13)
- Manual training
 Kerschesteiner, G. M. A. Idea of the industrial school. (S '13)
 Moore, H. W. Manual training toys for the boys' workshop. (Ap '13)
 Manures and fertilizers. Wheeler, H. J. (O '13)
 Marama. Stock, R. (N '13)
 Margery Fytton. Ridley, A. (N '13)
- Marie Antoinette, queen consort of Louis XVI, king of France, 1755-1793
 Bickley, F. L. Story of Marie Antoinette. (Ap '13)
 Younghusband, H. A. Marie Antoinette. (Mr '13)
- Mark. Noyes, F. N. (My '13)
- Marken
 Edwards, G. W. Marken and its people. (Ja '13)
- Marriage
 Foerster, F. W. Marriage and the sex problem. (Jl '13)
 Martin, E. S. Reflections of a beginning husband. (Jl '13)
 Salmon, A. L. Man and the woman. (Ag '13)
 Marriage of Mademoiselle Gimel. Bazin, R. (N '13)
 Married. Strindberg, A. (Ag '13)
 Married life of Anne of Austria. Freer, M. W. (Ag '13)
 Married life of Queen Victoria. Jerrold, C. (D '13)
 Marsh lights. Huntington, H. (O '13)
- Martin, Homer Dodge, 1836-1897
 Mather, F. J., jr. Homer Martin. (F '13)
- Marx, Karl, 1818-1883
 Simkhovitch, V. G. Marxism versus socialism. (S '13)
 Marxism versus socialism. Simkhovitch, V. G. (S '13)
- Mary II, queen of Great Britain, 1662-1694
 Sanders, M. F. Princess and queen of England. (Jl '13)
- Mary Stuart, queen of the Scots, 1542-1587
 Shelley, H. C. Tragedy of Mary Stuart. (N '13)
- Mary Broome. Monkhouse, A. (Je '13)
Mary Frances cook book. Fryer, J. (F '13)
- Maryland
 History
 Edgar, M. Colonial governor in Maryland: Horatio Sharpe and his times, 1753-1773. (Mr '13)
 Mascarose. Smith, G. A. (D '13)
 Masked war. Burns, W. J. (Ag '13)
- Massachusetts
 Barrington, W. W. B. Barrington-Bernard correspondence and illustrative matter, 1760-1770. (D '13)
 Bradford, W. History of Plymouth plantation 1620-1647. (Je '13)
 Master of "The Oaks." Stanley, C. (F '13)
 Master painters. Dick, S. (F '13)
 Masterpieces of the sea. Morris, H. S. (F '13)
 Masterpieces of the southern poets. Neale, W., comp. (My '13)
 Masters of modern French criticism. Babbitt, I. (F '13)
- Mathematics
 Palmer, C. I. Practical mathematics. (F '13)
 Partington, J. R. Higher mathematics for chemical students. (F '13)
 Mating of Lydia. Ward, M. A. (My '13)
- Maurice, Frederick, 1841-1912
 Maurice, F. B. Sir Frederick Maurice. (Ag '13)
- Maxwell mystery. Wells, C. (My '13)
Meadowsweet. Orczy, E. (F '13)
 Meaning of Christianity. Spencer, F. A. M. (S '13)
 Meaning of evolution. Schmucker, S. C. (O '13)
- Mechanical drawing
 Adler, A. A. Principles of parallel projecting-line drawing. (Ja '13)
- Adler, A. A. Theory of engineering drawing. (Ap '13)
 Blessing, G. F., and Darling, L. A. Elements of drawing. (Ap '13)
 Marshall, W. C. Elementary machine drawing and design. (My '13)
- Mechanics
 Waldram, P. J. Principles of structural mechanics. (Ap '13)
- Mechanics, Analytic
 Ziwet, A., and Field, P. Introduction to analytical mechanics. (F '13)
- Mechanics, Applied
 Woodward, C. M. Rational and applied mechanics. (Jl '13)
- Medals
 Hill, G. F. Portrait medals of Italian artists of the renaissance. (Ja '13)
- Mediæval church architecture of England.
 Moore, C. H. (Ap '13)
- Medical benefit. Gibbon, I. G. (My '13)
- Medicine
 Robinson, V. Pathfinders in medicine. (My '13)
- Memoirs of an American prima donna. Kellogg, C. L. (D '13)
 Memoirs of the court of England in 1675. Aulnoy, M. C. J. de B. (D '13)
 Memoirs of the prince imperial. Filon, P. M. A. (N '13)
- Memoirs relating to Fouché. Fouché, J. (My '13)
 Memorials of the cathedral and priory of Christ in Canterbury. Woodruff, C. E., and Danks, W. (F '13)
 Memories. Coleridge, S. (Jl '13)
 Memories of Victorian London. Walford, L. B. (F '13)
- Memory and the executive mind. Robinson, A. R. (Ap '13)
- Men and manners of modern China. MacGowan, J. (F '13)
- Men and religion forward movement
 Barbour, C. A., ed. Making religion efficient. (Mr '13)
- Men around the Kaiser. Wile, F. W. (S '13)
Men, women and minxes. Lang, L. B. (F '13)
- Mental diseases
 Dubois, P. Psychological origin of mental disorders. (Je '13)
- Mental healing
 Weaver, E. E. Mind and health. (Ag '13)
- Menus
 Smith, F. L. Recipes and menus for fifty. (D '13)
- Mere literature. Wilson, W. (Je '13)
Mere woman. Nikto, V. (Jl '13)
- Meredith, George, 1828-1909
 Photiadès, C. George Meredith. (N '13)
 Merrill Dawes. Spearman, F. H. (O '13)
- Mesh. Haslette, J. (Ap '13)
 Message of Greek art. Powers, H. H. (O '13)
- Metallurgy
 Hoover, T. J. Concentrating ores by flotation. (My '13)
 Stokes, R. S. G., and others. Textbook of Rand metallurgical practice. (F '13)
- Bibliography
 Peddie, R. A. Engineering and metallurgical books, 1907-1911. (F '13)
- Metaphysics
 Bergson, H. L. Introduction to metaphysics. (Ja '13)
- Methods of measuring electrical resistance.
 Northrup, E. F. (My '13)
- Metric system
 Bayer, H. G. Metric system in all its details. (Je '13)
- Mexico
 Baerlein, H. F. Mexico. (S '13)
 Goodrich, J. K. Coming Mexico. (Ap '13)
 Pollard, H. B. C. Busy time in Mexico. (Ag '13)
 Rives, G. L. United States and Mexico, 1821-1848. (N '13)
 Spence, L. Myths of Mexico and Peru. (O '13)
 Winton, G. B. Mexico today. (D '13)

Mezzotints

Holme, C., ed. Modern etchings, mezzotints, and dry-points. (Ap '13)

Michael. De La Pasture, E. (Jl '13)

Michelangelo. Buonarroti, 1475?-1564?

Rolland, R. Life of Michel Angelo. (Ja '13)

Middle ages

Cambridge medieval history. (N '13)

Duncalf, F., and Krey, A. C. Parallel source problems in medieval history. (F '13)

Harding, S. B. New medieval and modern history. (N '13)

Midsummer wooing. Bassett, M. E. (S '13)

Mighty friend. Loutil, E. (My '13)

Military biography

Bevan, W. L. World's leading conquerors. (Je '13)

Milk

Rosenau, M. J. Milk question. (Mr '13)

Wing, H. H. Milk and its products. (My '13)

Mind and health. Weaver, E. E. (Ag '13)

Mind-reader. Rittenberg, M. (O '13)

Mineralogy

Gratacap, L. P. Popular guide to minerals. (My '13)

Phillips, A. H. Mineralogy. (F '13)

Mines and mineral resources

Mannix, J. B. Mines and their story. (My '13)

Minimum wage and syndicalism. Boyle, J. (S '13)

Mining industry and science

Hoskin, A. J. Business of mining. (F '13)

Ministers of the gospel

Jowett, J. H. The preacher; his life and work. (Ap '13)

Minnesota

Thompson, C. W., and Warber, G. P. Social and economic survey of a rural township in southern Minnesota. (D '13)

Minority of Henry the Third. Norgate, K. (F '13)

Mirabeau, Honoré Gabriel Riquetti, comte de, 1749-1791

Tallentyre, S. G. Life of Mirabeau. (F '13)

Miriam Lucas. Sheehan, P. A. (F '13)

Miscellany of men. Chesterton, G. K. (Ja '13)

Mischief-maker. Oppenheim, E. F. (Ap '13)

Miss Jimmy. Richards, L. E. (My '13)

Miss Mystery. Baker, E. A. (My '13)

Miss Santa Claus of the Pullman. Johnston, A. (D '13)

Missionary explorers among the American Indians. Humphreys, M. G., ed. (Jl '13)

Missions

Dennis, J. S. Modern call of missions. (Ag '13)

Paradise, F. I. Christianity and commerce. (Ag '13)

Mississippi valleyCivilization

Bostwick, A. E. Different west. (Ap '13)

"Mr. Hobby." Kellock, H. (My '13)

Mr. Pratt's patients. Lincoln, J. C. (Jl '13)

Mrs. Budlong's Christmas presents. Hughes, R. (F '13)

Mrs. Red Pepper. Richmond, G. L. (Jl '13)

Mixed grill. Ridge, W. P. (S '13)

Modern call of missions. Dennis, J. S. (Ag '13)

Modern cities. Pollock, H. M., and Morgan, W. S. (D '13)

Modern copper smelting. Levy, D. M. (Ap '13)

Modern cottage architecture. Adams, M. E., ed. (Ja '13)

Modern dancing and dancers. Flitch, J. E. C. (Ja '13)

Modern etchings, mezzotints, and dry-points. Holme, C., ed. (Ap '13)

Modern Eve. Edginton, M. (D '13)

Modern farm buildings. Hopkins, A. (Ag '13)

Modern gasoline automobile. Page, V. W. (Mr '13)

Modern geography for high schools. Salisbury, R. D., and others. (O '13)

Modern golf. Hilton, H. H. (D '13)

Modern Héloïse. Buchanan, A. (Mr '13)

Modern history of the English people. Gretton, R. H. (My '13)

Modern organization. Hine, C. D. (D '13)

Modern philanthropy. Allen, W. H. (F '13)

Modern pilgrim in Mecca. Wavell, A. J. B. (Je '13)

Modern practical design. Rhead, G. W. (F '13)

Modern problems. Lodge, O. J. (Ap '13)

Modern progress and history. Walsh, J. J. (S '13)

Modern pumping and hydraulic machinery. Butler, E. (D '13)

Modern sanitary engineering. Thomson, G. (My '13)

Modern strawberry growing. Wilkinson, A. E. (Ap '13)

Modern theories of diet. Bryce, A. (Ja '13)

Modern warship. Attwood, E. L. (Jl '13)

Modoc Indians

Curtin, J. Myths of the Modocs. (Ap '13)

Mohammedanism

Arnold, T. W. Preaching of Islam. (D '13)

Monaco

Smith, A. Monaco and Monte Carlo. (F '13)

Monarchical socialism in Germany. Roberts, E. (My '13)

Monarchs and men. Harden, M. (Ag '13)

Money-changing. Withers, H. (O '13)

Mongolia

Kendall, E. K. Wayfarer in China. (Ap '13)

Monroe doctrine

Bingham, H. Monroe doctrine. (D '13)

Monte Carlo

Smith, A. Monaco and Monte Carlo. (F '13)

Montessori mother. Fisher, D. F. (D '13)

Monumental Java. Scheltema, J. F. (S '13)

Monuments

Peet, T. E. Rough stone monuments and their builders. (F '13)

Moral education

Sneath, E. H., and Hodges, G. Moral training in the school and home. (Jl '13)

Moral training in the school and home. Sneath, E. H., and Hodges, G. (Jl '13)

More little beasts of field and wood. Cram, W. E. (Jl '13)

Morning's war. Montague, C. E. (O '13)

Morris, William, 1834-1896

Compton-Rickett, A. William Morris. (N '13)

Drinkwater, J. William Morris. (Ja '13)

Mortal gods and other plays. Dargan, O. T. (Mr '13)

Moscow

Grove, H. M. Moscow. (Mr '13)

Moseley, Edward Augustus, 1846-1911

Morgan, J. Life work of Edward A. Moseley in the service of humanity. (N '13)

Moselle river

Tower, C. Along Germany's river of romance, the Moselle. (D '13)

Mosquitoes

Doty, A. H. The mosquito. (F '13)

Most beautiful book ever written. Hayes, D. A. (D '13)

Mother and the child. Barnesby, N. (D '13)

Mother West Wind's neighbors. Burgess, T. W. (O '13)

Mothering on Perilous. Furman, L. (N '13)

Mother's son. Dix, B. M. (D '13)

Motor and the dynamo. Arnold, J. L. (O '13)

Motor boating for boys. Davis, C. G. (Ap '13)

Motor-boats

Davis, C. G. Motor boating for boys. (Ap '13)

Motor rambles in Italy. Harris, C. F. (Ap '13)

Motto of Mrs. McLane. Carson, S. (Mr '13)

Mouth

Marshall, J. S. Mouth hygiene and mouth sepsis. (F '13)

Mozart's operas. Dent, E. J. (D '13)

Mulberry tree. James, W. L. (D '13)

Municipal finance

Bureau of municipal research, New York. Handbook of municipal accounting. (Jl '13)

Municipal government

Howe, F. C. European cities at work. (Je '13)

Pollock, H. M., and Morgan, W. S. Modern cities. (D '13)

- Financial system of the United Kingdom. Higgs, H. (D '14)
- Financing the wage-earner's family. Nearing, S. (F '14)
- Floids
Gregory, J. W. Nature and origin of floids. (Jl '14)
- First cousin to a dream. Harcourt, C. (Ja '15)
- First step. White, E. O. (Ap '14)
- First steps in collecting. Vallois, G. M. (Mr '14)
- Fish culture in ponds and other inland waters. Meehan, W. E. (Ap '14)
- Fishing
Bradley, A. G. Clear waters. (Ja '15)
Crandall, L. A. Days in the open. (N '14)
Holder, C. F. Game fishes of the world. (Ap '14)
La Branche, G. M. L. Dry fly and fast water. (Je '14)
Southard, C. Z. Trout fly-fishing in America. (Ag '14)
- Five plays. Dunsany, E. J. M. D. P. (Jl '14)
- Five years to find out. Wylie, I. A. R. (Ap '14)
- Flags
Harrison, P. D. Stars and stripes and other American flags. (N '14)
- Flame of frost. Jones, A. (N '14)
- Flaming sword. Gibbs, G. F. (D '14)
- Flaubert, Gustave, 1821-1880
Faguet, É. Flaubert. (Ja '15)
- Fleas
Russell, H. J. H. Flea. (O '14)
- Fleets at war. Hurd, A. S. (D '14)
- Flight
Hankin, E. H. Animal flight. (D '14)
- Flight, and other poems. Woodbury, G. E. (Ap '14)
- Flight without formulæ. Duchêne, E. A. (Ja '15)
- Floral decoration
Averill, M. Japanese flower arrangement. (Ja '14)
- Florence on a certain night. Dawson, C. (S '14)
- Florian Mayr. Wolzogen, E. L. (Ag '14)
- Flowering plants of the Riviera. Thompson, H. S. (S '14)
- Flowers
Clements, F. E. and E. S. Rocky Mountain flowers. (My, Jl '14)
Walton, G. L. Flower-finder. (Je '14)
- Flute
Flazgibbon, H. M. Story of the flute. (Ag '14)
- Flying. Hame, G. and Turner, C. C. (O '14)
- Flying inn. Chesterton, G. K. (F '14)
- Folk-ballads of southern Europe. Jewett, S. (Mr '14)
- Folk-lore
Haughton, H. L. Sport and folk-lore in the Himalaya. (Mr '14)
Im Bang, and Yi Ryuk. Korean folk tales. (Ap '14)
Judson, K. B., ed. Myths and legends of the great plains. (Mr '14)
Judson, K. B., comp. and ed. Myths and legends of the Mississippi valley and the Great Lakes. (Ja '15)
Kunos, I., comp. and tr. Forty-four Turkish fairy tales. (Ja '15)
Littlewood, S. R. Fairies—here and now. (S '14)
Pogany, N., comp. Hungarian fairy book. (Mr '14)
Quiller-Couch, A. T. East of the sun and west of the moon. (F '15)
- Folk of Furry farm. Purdon, K. F. (Jl '14)
- Folk of the woods. Pardee, L. C. (Mr '14)
- Folk songs
Krehbiel, H. E. Afro-American folksongs. (F '14)
- Food
Condit, E., and Long, J. A. How to cook and why. (N '14)
Kinne, H., and Cooley, A. M. Foods and household management. (Mr '14)
Savage, W. G. Bacteriological examination of food and water. (F '15)
Sherman, H. C. Food products. (F '15)
- Wardall, R. A., and White, E. N. Study of foods. (N '14)
- Food adulteration and inspection
Wiley, H. W. 1001 tests of foods, beverages and toilet accessories. (O '14)
- Foods and household management. Kinne, H., and Cooley, A. M. (Mr '14)
- Fool of April. McCarthy, J. H. (My '14)
- Foot of the rainbow. Roberts, M. G. (F '15)
- Football
Reed, H. Football for public and player. (Ja '14)
- Foothills of Parnassus. Bangs, J. K. (My '14)
- Footnotes to life. Crane, F. (F '15)
- For childhood and youth. Mark, H. T. (Mr '14)
- For girls and the mothers of girls. Hood, M. G. (Jl '14)
- For the Allinson honor. Bindloss, H. (N '14)
- For the comfort of the family. Story, J. (F '15)
- Forage plants
Piper, C. V. Forage plants and their culture. (F '15)
- Forces mining and undermining China. Gibson, R. R. (Jl '14)
- Foreign-born neighbors. Tupper, G. W. (F '15)
- Foreigners in Turkey. Brown, F. M. (N '14)
- Forest of Arden. Edwards, G. W. (Ja '15)
- Forester's daughter. Garland, H. (F '14)
- Forests and forestry
Cheyney, E. G., and Wentling, J. P. Farm woodlot. (Jl '14)
Pinchot, G. Training of a forester. (Ag '14)
- Formosa
Terry, T. P. Terry's Japanese empire, including Korea and Formosa. (Ap '14)
- Fortunate youth. Locke, W. J. (Ap '14)
- Forty-four Turkish fairy tales. Kunos, I., comp. and tr. (Ja '15)
- Forty years of it. Whitlock, B. (Mr '14)
- Forum stories. Vale, C., comp. (Jl '14)
- Foundations
Howe, M. A. Foundations. (F '15)
Jacoby, H. S., and Davis, R. P. Foundations of bridges and buildings. (S '14)
Foundations of character. Shand, A. F. (S '14)
Foundations of science. Poincaré, H. (Mr '14)
Fountain of youth. Jackson, C. T. (Ja '15)
Four plays of the Free theater. Clark, E. H., tr. (F '15)
- Fragments from old letters, E. D. to E. D. W. Dowden, E. (Ag '14)
- France
Bashford, H. H. Vagabonds in Périgord. (N '14)
Colin, J. France and the next war. (Ja '15)
Guérard, A. L. French civilization in the nineteenth century. (My '14)
Hale, W. Ideal motor tour in France. (Jl '14)
Rose, E. W. Cathedrals and cloisters in northern France. (D '14)
Sabatier, P. France to-day. (Ja '14)
Vizetelly, E. A. My adventures in the Commune. (F '15)
Vizetelly, E. A. My days of adventure. (Je '14)
- Army
French army from within. (D '14)
- Court and courtiers
Batiffol, L. Duchesse de Chevreuse. (O '14)
- Foreign relations
Barclay, Sir T. Thirty years: Anglo-French reminiscences (1876-1906). (O '14)
- History
Adams, H. P. French revolution. (Ja '15)
Dimnet, E. France herself again. (D '14)
Wheeler, H. F. B. French revolution. (D '14)
- Politics and government
Poincaré, R. How France is governed. (F '14)
Vassili, P. France from behind the veil. (N '14)
- Social life and customs
Hartt, R. L. Understanding the French. (N '14)
Waddington, M. A. My first years as a Frenchwoman, 1876-1879. (Je '14)
- Francis Joseph I, emperor of Austria, 1830-1916
Gribble, F. H. Life of the Emperor Francis Joseph. (My '14)

- New medieval and modern history. Harding, S. B. (N '13)
- New morality. Isaacson, E. (Ag '13)
- New nation. Barstow, C. L., ed. (Ja '13)
- New Orleans, Louisiana
Ripley, E. M. M. Social life in old New Orleans. (Ja '13)
- New peace movement. Hull, W. I. (Je '13)
- New philosophy of Henri Bergson. Le Roy, E. L. E. J. (Jl '13)
- New rivers of the north. Footner, H. (Ja '13)
- New spirit in drama and art. Carter, H. (O '13)
- New Standard dictionary. Funk and Wagnalls. (D '13)
- New tendency in art. Poore, H. R. (Ag '13)
- New Testament documents. Milligan, G. (D '13)
- New thought
Allen, J. Light on life's difficulties. (Mr '13)
- Patterson, C. B. What is new thought? (Je '13)
- New unionism. Tridon, A. (Ag '13)
- New York (city)
Goodwin, M. W., and others, eds. Historic New York during two centuries. (F '13)
- Street, J. L. Welcome to our city. (O '13)
- Description
Smith, F. H. Charcoals of new and old New York. (F '13)
- New York (city). Metropolitan museum of art
Howe, W. E. History of the Metropolitan museum of art. (S '13)
- New York stock exchange
Van Antwerp, W. C. Stock exchange from within. (Ap '13)
- New Zealand
Lusk, H. H. Social welfare in New Zealand. (Ap '13)
- Newfoundland
Thomas, W. S. Trails and tramps in Alaska and Newfoundland. (Jl '13)
- Newspapers
Blythe, S. G. Making of a newspaper man. (Mr '13)
- Cook, E. C. Literary influences in colonial newspapers, 1704-1750. (Mr '13)
- Dibblee, G. B. Newspaper. (My '13)
- Ney, Michel, duke of Eichengen and prince of the Moskva, 1769-1815
Atteridge, A. H. Bravest of the brave. (F '13)
- Nicene creed
Briggs, C. A. Fundamental Christian faith. (Jl '13)
- Nicias, d. 414 B. C.
Plutarch. Nicias and Alcibiades. (F '13)
- Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm, 1844-1900
Chatterton-Hill, G. Philosophy of Nietzsche. (D '13)
- Nigeria
Talbot, P. A. In the shadow of the bush. (My '13)
- Night-born. London, J. (Ap '13)
- Night in the Luxembourg. Gourmont, R. de. (Ja '13)
- Night nurse. Abraham, J. J. (D '13)
- Night-riders. Cullum, R. (Ap '13)
- Nine great preachers. Currier, A. H. (Mr '13)
- Nogi, Kiten, count, 1849-1912
Washburn, S. Nogi. (Ap '13)
- North Carolina
Morley, M. W. Carolina mountains. (D '13)
- Northern iron. Hannay, J. O. (O '13)
- Northmen in Britain. Hull, E. (O '13)
- Norway
Simpson, H. Rambles in Norway. (F '13)
- Notable women in history. Abbot, W. J. (Jl '13)
- Notable women of modern China. Burton, M. E. (F '13)
- Noted speeches of Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun. Briggs, L. M., ed. (Mr '13)
- November Joe. Prichard, H. V. H. (N '13)
- Numerical strength of the Confederate army.
McKim, R. H. (My '13)
- O pioneers! Cather, W. S. (S '13)
- Occupations
Diseases and hygiene
Terman, L. M. Teacher's health. (Jl '13)
- Tolman, W. H., and Guthrie, A. W. Hygiene for the worker. (F '13)
- Occupations, Choice of Diggs, A. L. Bedrock. (Je '13)
- Laselle, M. A., and Wiley, K. E. Vocations for girls. (Je '13)
- Odyssey. Homer. (F '13)
- Odyssey of the Philippine commission. Williams, D. R. (N '13)
- Of six mediaeval women. Welch, A. Kemp-. (Ag '13)
- Ohio
Randall, E. O., and Ryan, D. J. History of Ohio. (Ag '13)
- Ohio valley
Alvord, C. W., and Bidgood, L. First explorations of the trans-Allegheny region by the Virginians, 1650-1674. (F '13)
- Old Adam. Bennett, E. A. (Ag '13)
- Old China and young America. Conger, S. (O '13)
- Old colleges of Oxford. Vallance, A. (Je '13)
- Old colonial system, 1660-1754. Beer, G. L. (Mr '13)
- Old English country squire. Ditchfield, P. H. (F '13)
- Old-fashioned gardening. Tabor, G. (Ap '13)
- Old-fashioned woman. Parsons, E. W. C. (Jl '13)
- Old gardens of Italy. Le Blond, E. A. F. (Ap '13)
- Old homes of new Americans. Clark, F. E. (Ap '13)
- Old law and the new order. Alger, G. W. (Ag '13)
- Old time belles and cavaliers. Sale, E. T. (Ja '13)
- On board the Beatic. Ray, A. C. (Ap '13)
- On board the good ship Earth. Quick, H.
- On drawing and painting. Ross, D. W. (Ap '13)
- On hazardous service. Beymer, W. G. (Ja '13)
- On the court and off. Wilding, A. F. (S '13)
- On the plains with Custer. Sabin, E. L. (D '13)
- On the Tibur road. Whicher, G. M. and G. F. (F '13)
- One hundred years of peace. Lodge, H. C. (O '13)
- One man's view. Merrick, L. (F '13)
- One of Jackson's foot cavalry. Worsham, J. H. (Ap '13)
- One-sided autobiography. Kuhns, O. (N '13)
- One woman's life. Herrick, R. (Ap '13)
- Open secret. Bixby, J. T. (Mr '13)
- Open versus closed shop. Selected articles on. Robbins, E. C., comp. (Ap '13)
- Open window. Thurston, E. T. (O '13)
- Opening door. Forman, J. M. (Je '13)
- Opera
Aronson, R. Theatrical and musical memoirs. (Ag '13)
- Bender, M. S., tr. Great opera stories. (Mr '13)
- Dent, E. J. Mozart's operas. (D '13)
- Wagner, R. Opera & drama. (D '13)
- Orations
Fulton, R. I., and Trueblood, T. C. British and American eloquence. (My '13)
- Oratory
Lawrence, E. G. How to master the spoken word. (S '13)
- Winter, I. L. Public speaking. (Mr '13)
- Orchestras
Lyon, J. Practical guide to the modern orchestra. (My '13)
- Ordeal. Craddock, C. E. (Ja '13)
- Ordinary man and the extraordinary thing. Begbie, H. (Mr '13)
- Organized labor. Portenar, A. J. (F '13)
- Origin and antiquity of man. Wright, G. F. (My '13)
- Origin and ideals of the Modern school. Ferrer Guardia, F. (S '13)
- Origin and nature of life. Moore, B. (My '13)
- Otherwise Phyllis. Nicholson, M. (O '13)
- Ottoman empire. Miller, W. (D '13)
- Our book of memories. McCarthy, J. (Mr '13)

- Our boy. Bartow, H. E. (N '13)
 Our house and London out of our windows. Pennell, E. (Ja '13)
 Our island saints. Steedman, A. (F '13)
 Our neighbors: the Chinese. Goodrich, J. K. (D '13)
 Our neighbors: the Japanese. Goodrich, J. K. (Jl '13)
 Our own religion in ancient Persia. Mills, L. H. (S '13)
 Our own weather. Martin, E. C. (Jl '13)
 Our southern highlanders. Kephart, H. (D '13)
 Our vanishing wild life. Hornaday, W.: T. (Mr '13)
 Our world. Strong, J. (S '13)
 Out of the depths. Bennet, R. A. (Je '13)
 Out with the birds. Laing, H. M. (Jl '13)
- Outdoor life
 Gibson, W.: H. Secrets out of doors. (D '13)
 Seton, E. T. Book of woodcraft and Indian lore. (F '13)
- Outline history of China. Gowen, H. H.: (My '13)
- Outlines of the history of psychology. Dessoir, M. (F '13)
 Outside the ark. Holt, A. (Ag '13)
 Oxford book of Victorian verse. Quiller-Couch, A. T., comp. (Ap '13)
 Oxford poems. Garrod, H. W.: (F '13)
 Oxford studies in social and legal history. Vinogradov, P. G., ed. (D '13)
- Oxford university
 Parkin, G.: R. Rhodes scholarships. (F '13)
 Vallance, A. Old colleges of Oxford. (Je '13)
- Pacific shores from Panama. Peixotto, E. C. (N '13)
- Pageant of English prose. Leonard, R. M., comp. (My '13)
- Paget, Rt. Rev. Francis, 1851-1911
 Paget, S., and Crum, J. M. C. Francis Paget, bishop of Oxford. (F '13)
- Painters
 Dick, S. Master painters. (F '13)
 Wedmore, F.: Painters and painting. (Ap '13)
- Painting
 Haig, E. Floral symbolism of the great masters. (D '13)
 Moreau-Vauthier, C.: Technique of painting. (Ap '13)
 Ross, D. W. On drawing and painting. (Ap '13)
 Wedmore, F.: Painters and painting. (Ap '13)
- Painting, British
 Lucas, E.: V. British pictures and their painters. (My '13)
- Paintings
 Bailey, H.: T. Twelve great paintings. (D '13)
- Paleolithic man and terramara settlements in Europe. Munro, R. (F '13)
- Palestine
 Graham, S. With the Russian pilgrims to Jerusalem. (D '13)
 Treves, F.: Land that is desolate. (My '13)
- Palmistry
 Cheiro, pseud. Cheiro's memoirs. (F '13)
- Panama
 Bishop, F. Panama, past and present. (My '13)
 Bishop, J. B. Panama gateway. (O '13)
 Gause, F. A., and Carr, C.: C. Story of Panama. (Ap '13)
- Panama canal
 Barrett, J.: Panama canal. (O '13)
 Bishop, J. B. Panama gateway. (O '13)
 Bunau-Varilla, P. Panama. (S '13)
 Fraser, J.: F. Panama, and what it means. (Je '13)
 Oppenheim, L. F. L. Panama canal conflict between Great Britain and the United States. (Je '13)
 Scott, W.: R. Americans in Panama. (F '13)
- Pan-Germanism. Usher, R. G. (My '13)
- Papua or British New Guinea. Murray, J.: H. P. (Ap '13)
- Parallel source problems in medieval history. Duncaif, F., and Krey, A. C.: (F '13)
- Parasite. Martin, H. R. (Ap '13)
- Parcels post
 Phelps, E. M., comp. Selected articles on the parcels post. (Je '13)
- Paris, France
 Annesley, M. My Parisian year. (Ja '13)
 Bennett, E. A. Paris nights. (D '13)
 Bicknell, E. E. Paris and her treasures. (My '13)
 Hyatt, A. H., comp. Charm of Paris. (D '13)
 Mack, A. Magnetic Paris. (Jl '13)
 Smith, M. S. Twenty centuries of Paris. (N '13)
 Sommerville, F. Spirit of Paris. (Ag '13)
 Strong, R. Sensations of Paris. (Mr '13)
- Parish of the pines. Whittles, T.: D. (F '13)
- Parrot & co. MacGrath, H. (Jl '13)
- Partners. Deland, M. W. (D '13)
- Passing of the Manchus. Kent, P. H. B. (F '13)
- Passing of the Turkish empire in Europe. Baker, B. G. (Ag '13)
- Passionate friends. Wells, H. G.: (D '13)
- Patchwork comedy. Jordan, H. R. (Je '13)
- Patent laws
 Macomber, W.: Engineers' handbook on patents. (Ap '13)
- Path of the conquistadores. Bates, L. W., jr. (Ja '13)
- Pathfinders in medicine. Robinson, V.: (My '13)
- Pathology
 Ramaley, F., and Giffin, C. E. Prevention and control of disease. (Jl '13)
- Pathos of distance. Hunecker, J. G. (Jl '13)
- Patomac canal
 Bacon-Foster, C. Early chapters in the development of the Patomac route to the West. (Ag '13)
- Patriotism
 Wingfield-Stratford, E. C. History of English patriotism. (D '13)
- Patriots. Robinson, L. (My '13)
- Patsy. Crockett, S.: R. (Ap '13)
- Paul I, Petrovitch, emperor of Russia, 1754-1801
 Waliszewski, K. Paul I of Russia. (Jl '13)
- Pavements
 Richardson, C. Asphalt construction for pavements and highways. (Ag '13)
 Tillson, G.: W. Street pavements and paving materials. (My '13)
- Pax britannica. Perris, H. S. (Ag '13)
- Peace
 Fried, A. H. German emperor and the peace of the world. (Ja '13)
 Hull, W.: I. New peace movement. (Je '13)
 Mead, L. T. Swords and ploughshares. (Je '13)
 Moritzen, J. Peace movement of America. (Ap '13)
- Pedagogical anthropology. Montessori, M. (O '13)
- Penal philosophy. Tarde, G. (Ap '13)
- Penalty. Morris, G. (Ap '13)
- Pencil-sketching. Koch, G.: W. (D '13)
- Penelope intrudes. Newlin, K. (Mr '13)
- Penny Monypenny. Findlater, M. and J. H. (Mr '13)
- People's school. Weeks, R. M. (My '13)
- Perfect gentleman. Graham, H. J. C. (Ja '13)
- Persia
 Mills, L. H. Our own religion in ancient Persia. (S '13)
- Personal recollections of the war of the rebellion. Blakeman, A. N., ed. (Mr '13)
- Personality
 Jevons, F. B. Personality. (S '13)
 Randall, J.: H. Culture of personality. (F '13)
- Personality of Napoleon. Rose, J.: H. (Ap '13)
- Peru
 Gilbert, H.: Conquerors of Peru. (N '13)
 Spence, L.: Myths of Mexico and Peru. (O '13)
- Pete Crowther: salesman. Ferris, E. E. (My '13)
- Petrarch, Francesco, 1304-1374
 Cosenza, M. E. Francesco Petrarca and the revolution of Cola di Rienzo. (Ag '13)

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Eberlein, H. D., and Lippincott, H. M. Colonial homes of Philadelphia and its neighbourhood. (Ja '13)

Philippine Islands

Blount, J. H. American occupation of the Philippines, 1898-1912. (Ja '13)
 Briggs, C. W. Progressing Philippines. (N '13)
 Chamberlin, F. C. Philippine problem, 1898-1913. (Je '13)
 Fiske, B. A. War time in Manila. (O '13)
 Williams, D. R. Odyssey of the Philippine commission. (N '13)

Philosophy

Benn, A. W. History of modern philosophy. (Ap '13)
 Fletcher, O. O. Introduction to philosophy. (S '13)
 Hadley, A. T. Some influences in modern philosophic thought. (Ag '13)
 Hall, H. F. P. World soul. (Ag '13)
 Partridge, G. E. Reading book in modern philosophy. (N '13)
 Russell, J. E. First course in philosophy. (S '13)
 Schiller, F. C. S. Humanism. (My '13)
 Tagore, R. Sadhana, the realisation of life. (D '13)

Philosophy, Ancient

Benn, A. W. History of ancient philosophy. (Ja '13)
 Gomperz, T. Greek thinkers. (Mr '13)

Philosophy, German

Külpe, O. Philosophy of the present in Germany. (O '13)
 Philosophy of Nietzsche. Chatterton-Hill, G. (D '13)
 Philosophy of the present in Germany. Külpe, O. (O '13)

Photography

Jones, H. C. Photography of to-day. (Ap '13)

Photomechanical processes

Horgan, S. H. Horgan's half-tone and photomechanical processes. (Ag '13)

Physical education

Bancroft, J. H. Posture of school children. (Jl '13)

Physical geography

Salisbury, R. D., and others. Modern geography for high schools. (O '13)

Physical work. Fisher, G. J., and Foss, M. I., eds. (O '13)

Physicians

Mumford, J. G. Doctor's table talk. (Mr '13)

Physiology

La Mettrie, J. O. de. Man a machine. (Ag '13)
 Luciani, L. Human physiology. (S '13)

Pianoforte music

Venable, M. Interpretation of piano music. (Je '13)

Pickett, George Edward, 1825-1875

Pickett, L. C. Pickett and his men. (Ag '13)

Picture towns of Europe. Osborne, A. B. (Ja '13)

Pilgrim from Chicago. Tearle, C. (D '13)

Pilgrims of the plains. Aplington, K. A. (Ap '13)

Pioneer mothers of America. Green, H. C. and M. W. (F '13)

Pippin, Van Buren, E. (Ap '13)

Pitt, William, 1st earl of Chatham, 1708-1778
 Winstanley, D. A. Lord Chatham and the Whig opposition. (N '13)

Pity the poor blind. Bashford, H. H. (Ag '13)

Plain man and his wife. Bennett, E. A. (D '13)

Planets

Martin, M. E. Ways of the planets. (Mr '13)
 Maunder, E. W. Are the planets inhabited? (Je '13)

Plant and animal children. Torelle, E. (Je '13)

Plants and their uses. Sargent, F. L. (S '13)

Play

Wood, W. Children's play and its place in education. (D '13)

Play of today. Hunt, E. R. (My '13)

Plays and players in modern Italy. McLeod, A. (O '13)

Plays of old Japan: the Nô. Gates, M. C., and Sakurai, J., trs. (O '13)

Poem-book of the Gael. Hull, E., ed. (D '13)

Poems, Books of

Adams, F. P. In other words. (Ja '13)
 Blanchi, M. G. Gabrielle, and other poems. (N '13)
 Bridges, R. S. Poetical works. (D '13)
 Burr, A. J. Roadside fire. (F '13)
 Byron, M. Wind on the heath. (F '13)
 Carman, B. Echoes from Vagabondia. (Ja '13)
 Carman, B., and King, M. P. Daughters of dawn. (Je '13)
 Carr, R. V. Cowboy lyrics. (Ja '13)
 Cawein, M. J. Poet, the fool and the faeries. (Ja '13)
 Cawein, M. J. Republic. (S '13)
 Crowninshield, F. Villa Miraflore. (Jl '13)
 Daly, T. A. Madrigali. (Ja '13)
 Davis, F. S. Myself and I. (S '13)
 Dorr, J. C. R. Last poems. (N '13)
 Earle, F., ed. Lyric year. (Ja '13)
 Earls, M. Road beyond the town. (Mr '13)
 Eastman, M. Child of the Amazons. (Ag '13)
 Foley, J. W. Boys and girls. (D '13)
 Garrod, H. W. Oxford poems. (F '13)
 Gladden, W. Ultima veritas. (Ap '13)
 Goodwin, G. D. Horizon songs. (Ap '13)
 Hagedorn, H., jr. Poems and ballads. (Mr '13)
 Hewlett, M. H. Helen redeemed. (Jl '13)
 How, L. Youth replies. (Ap '13)
 Hull, E., ed. Poem-book of the Gael. (D '13)
 Ibsen, H. Lyrics and poems. (N '13)
 Kaufman, H. Poems. (O '13)
 Kohut, G. A., ed. Hebrew anthology. (S '13)
 Leonard, W. E. C. Vaunt of man. (Mr '13)
 MacKaye, P. Uriel and other poems. (F '13)
 Masefield, J. Daffodil fields. (My '13)
 Masefield, J. Salt-water ballads. (D '13)
 Masefield, J. Story of a round-house. (Mr '13)
 Meynell, A. C. Poems. (Ag '13)
 Middleton, R. Poems and songs. (Ap '13)
 Moody, W. V. Poems and plays. (F '13)
 Neale, W., comp. Masterpieces of the southern poets. (My '13)
 Noye, E. Forest. (F '13)
 Noyes, A. Tales of the Mermaid tavern. (Je '13)
 Olcott, F. J., comp. Story-telling poems. (D '13)
 Phillips, S. Lyrics and dramas. (D '13)
 Quiller-Couch, A. T., comp. Oxford book of Victorian verse. (Ap '13)
 Rand, K. Dirge of the sea-children. (S '13)
 Seitz, D. C. Buccaneers. (F '13)
 Service, R. W. Rhymes of a rolling stone. (Ap '13)
 Starkweather, A. M. Leaves from the city beautiful. (My '13)
 Stevenson, B. E., comp. Home book of verse. (D '13)
 Tagore, R. Crescent moon. (D '13)
 Tagore, R. The gardener. (D '13)
 Tagore, R. Gitanjali. (D '13)
 Thompson, F. Works. (S '13)
 Watson, W. Muse in exile. (Jl '13)
 Weston, J. L. Romance, vision and satire. (F '13)
 Wheelock, J. H. Belovéd adventure. (F '13)
 Whicher, G. M. and G. F. On the Tibur road. (F '13)
 Poet, the fool and the faeries. Cawein M. J. (Ja '13)

Poetry

Eastman, M. Enjoyment of poetry. (Je '13)
 Rhys, E. Lyric poetry. (D '13)
 Point of view. Glyn, E. (N '13)
 Poison belt. Doyle, A. C. (D '13)

Poland

Winter, N. O. Poland of to-day and yesterday. (D '13)

Political activities of the Baptists and Fifth monarchy men in England during the interregnum. Brown, L. F. (Ag '13)

Political philosophy of Burke. MacCunn, J. (N '13)

Political primer for the new voter. Beatty, B. (Je '13)

Political science

History

Robertson, J: M. Evolution of states. (Ag '13)

Politics

Lippmann, W. Preface to politics. (Jl '13)
 Polly of Lady Gay cottage. Dowd, E. C. (S '13)
 Pollyanna. Porter, E. (My '13)
 Poor, dear Margaret Kirby. Norris, K. (Mr '13)

Poor laws

Vinogradov, P. G., ed. Oxford studies in social and legal history. (D '13)

Poor little rich girl. Gates, E. (Ja '13)

Popes

McKilloth, A. E. Chronicle of the popes. (My '13)

Popular botany. Knight, A. E., and Step, E: (S '13)

Popular guide to minerals. Gratacap, L. P. (My '13)

Porches

Eberlein, H. D. Making and furnishing outdoor rooms and porches. (O '13)

Port of adventure. Williamson, C: N., and A. M. (Je '13)

Port of dreams. Alexander, M. (Mr '13)

Port Royal

Rea, L. Enthusiasts of Port-Royal. (F '13)

Portrait medals of Italian artists of the renaissance. Hill, G: F. (Ja '13)

Portraits and sketches. Gosse, E. W: (F '13)

Portugal

Baker, B. G. Winter holiday in Portugal. (F '13)

Positive evolution of religion. Harrison, F: (Ap '13)

Postal service

United States

Bradley, G. D. Story of the pony express. (D '13)

Posture of school children. Bancroft, J. H. (Jl '13)

Poultry

Farrington, E: I. Home poultry book. (Jl '13)

Valentine, C. S. Beginner in poultry. (F '13)

Watson, G: C. Farm poultry. (F '13)

Power, Tyrone, 1869-

Winter, W: Tyrone Power. (O '13)

Practical aeronautics. Hayward, C: B. (Ja '13)

Practical guide to modern orchestra. Lyon, J. (My '13)

Practical mathematics. Palmer, C. I. (F '13)

Practical railway spiral. Jordan, L. C. (D '13)

Practical tree repair. Peets, E. (D '13)

Practice and science of drawing. Speed, H. (N '13)

Pragmatism

Lee, V. Vital lies. (F '13)

Prayers

Fox, S. F., comp. Chain of prayer across the ages. (D '13)

Shepard, M. Prayers for little men and women. (F '13)

Preacher. Jowett, J: H. (Ap '13)

Preaching of Islam. Arnold, T: W. (D '13)

Precious stones

Smith, G: F. H. Gem-stones and their distinctive characters. (My '13)

Precious waters. Chisholm, A. M. (Ap '13)

Preface to politics. Lippmann, W. (Jl '13)

Preparing for citizenship. Guitteau, W: B. (N '13)

Prescott of Saskatchewan. Bindloss, H. (N '13)

Presidents

United States

Stanwood, E: History of the presidency from 1897 to 1909. (F '13)

Prevention and control of disease. Ramaley, F., and Giffin, C. E. (Jl '13)

Price of inefficiency. Koester, F. (Je '13)

Prices

Hobson, J: A. Gold, prices and wages. (O '13)

Primary artisan education. Welpton, W. P. (D '13)

Primary battery ignition. Wadsworth, C., jr. (My '13)

Primitive Christianity and its non-Jewish sources. Clemen, C. C. (My '13)

Princess and queen of England. Sandars, M. F. (Jl '13)

Princess Athura. Odell, S: W. (N '13)

Princess of the Italian reformation. Hare, C. (F '13)

Principles and methods of municipal trading. Knoop, D. (Mr '13)

Principles of advertising arrangement. Parsons, F. A. (Ag '13)

Principles of agriculture. Stebbins, C. A. (O '13)

Principles of economics. Seager, H: R. (N '13)

Principles of educational practice. Klapper, P. (Ap '13)

Principles of irrigation engineering. Newell, F: H., and Murphy, D. W: (D '13)

Principles of parallel projecting-line drawing. Adler, A. A. (Ja '13)

Principles of Prussian administration. James, H. G. (Je '13)

Principles of structural mechanics. Waldram, P. J. (Ap '13)

Printing

History

Pollard, A. W: Fine books. (F '13)

Prints and their makers. Carrington, F., ed. (F '13)

Prison memoirs of an anarchist. Berkman, A. (Ja '13)

Prisoner in fairyland. Blackwood, A. (Ag '13)

Prisoners' years. Clarke, I. (Ja '13)

Prisons

Berkman, A. Prison memoirs of an anarchist. (Ja '13)

Great Britain

Hopkins, T. Wards of the state. (D '13)

Private life of Henry Maitland. Roberts, M. (Mr '13)

Problem of Christianity. Royce, J. (Ag '13)

Problem of Edwin Drood. Nicoll, W: R. (Ja '13)

Problem of religion. Wilm, E. C. (F '13)

Problems in furniture making. Crawshaw, F. D. (Ap '13)

Problems in modern education. Sutton, W: S. (Jl '13)

Problems of boy life. Whitehouse, J: H., ed. (F '13)

Problems of educational readjustment. Snedden, D: S. (D '13)

Problems of life and reproduction. Hartog, M. M. (Ap '13)

Problems of men, mind, and morals. Bax, E. B. (F '13)

Problems of power. Fullerton, W: M. (Ag '13)

Problems of sex. Thomson, J: A., and Geddes, P. (F '13)

Problems of the Pacific. Fox, F. (My '13)

Problems of the sexes. Finot, J. (Jl '13)

Progress

Walsh, J. J. Modern progress and history. (S '13)

Progress of a united people. Barstow, C: L., ed. (Ja '13)

Progressing Philippines. Briggs, C: W. (N '13)

Progressive business man. Marden, O. S. (N '13)

Prostitution

Kneeland, G: J. Commercialized prostitution in New York city. (O '13)

Protestantism

Troeltsch, E. Protestantism and progress. (Je '13)

Protozoa

Minchin, E. A. Introduction to the study of the protozoa. (Je '13)

Provence

Headlam, C. Provence and Languedoc. (Mr '13)

Providence, Rhode Island

Kimball, G. S. Providence in colonial times. (F '13)

Provincial and local taxation in Canada. Vineberg, S. (My '13)

Psychological origin of mental disorders. Dubois, P. (Je '13)

Psychological study of religion. Leuba, J. H. (D '13)

Psychology

- Dessoir, M. Outlines of the history of psychology. (F '13)
 Wundt, W. Introduction to psychology. (Je '13)

Psychology, Educational

- Colvin, S. S., and Bagley, W. C. Human behavior. (S '13)
 Schulze, R. Experimental psychology and pedagogy for teachers, normal colleges and universities. (S '13)

Psychology, Pathological

- Wallin, J. E. W. Experimental studies of mental defectives. (Ag '13)

Psychology, Physiological

- Parmelee, M. F. Science of human behaviour. (Ap '13)

- Psychology and industrial efficiency. Münsterberg, H. (My '13)

- Psychology of insanity. Hart, B. (Mr '13)

- Psychology of laughter. Sidis, B. (S '13)

- Psychology of revolution. Le Bon, G. (Jl '13)

- Psychology of salesmanship. Atkinson, W. W. (My '13)

Public health

- Coleman, W. M. Handbook of the people's health. (O '13)

- Public library movement in the United States, 1853-1893. Green, S. S. (O '13)

Public schools

- Coler, B. S. Two and two make four. (Ap '13)
 Moore, E. C. How New York city administers its schools. (O '13)

- Public speaking. Winter, I. L. (Mr '13)

- Publisher. Yard, R. S. (O '13)

- Pulpit and the pew. Parkhurst, C. H. (N '13)

Pumping machinery

- Butler, E. Modern pumping and hydraulic machinery. (D '13)

Puritans

- Addison, A. C. Romantic story of the Puritan fathers. (Mr '13)

- Pygmies and Papuans. Wollaston, A. F. R. (Ja '13)

- Quakers in Great Britain and America. Holder, C. F. (D '13)

- Quarry. Moroso, J. A. (My '13)

- Quarter century of public school development. Maxwell, W. H. (F '13)

Quebec (province)

- Willson, B. Quebec: the Laurentian province. (D '13)

Queens

- Mann, M. Ridpath-. Royal women. (Je '13)

- Quest of glory. Bowen, M. (Mr '13)

- Quest of the best. Hyde, W. D. (D '13)

- Quest of the dream. Wallace, E. K. (D '13)

- Quest of the fish-dog skin. Schultz, J. W. (N '13)

Quotations, English

- Wight, J. G., comp. and ed. Literary brevitates. (D '13)

- Race improvement. Baker, L. H. M. (Mr '13)

- Radioactive substances and their radiations. Rutherford, E. (Ap '13)

Radioactivity

- Bragg, W. H. Studies in radioactivity. (Ap '13)

- Rutherford, E. Radioactive substances and their radiations. (Ap '13)

Railroads

- Thompson, S., ed. Railway library, 1911. (F '13)

Construction

- Webb, W. L. Economics of railroad construction. (My '13)

Curves and turnouts

- Jordan, L. C. Practical railway spiral. (D '13)

Finance

- Eaton, J. S. Handbook of railroad expenses. (N '13)

Management

- Hine, C. D. Modern organization. (D '13)

Rates

- Ripley, W. Z. Railroads. (Ap '13)

United States

- Elliott, H. Truth about the railroads. (D '13)
 Fagan, J. O. Autobiography of an individualist. (Ja '13)

- Old colony trust co., Boston. Analyses of the railroad corporations whose bonds are a legal investment for Massachusetts savings banks. (O '13)

- Sakolski, A. M. American railroad economics. (D '13)

Railroads and state

- Phelps, E. M., comp. Selected articles on government ownership of railroads. (Ja '13)

- Railway library, 1911. Thompson, S., ed. (F '13)

Rain and rainfall

- Bonney, T. G. Work of rain and rivers. (Ja '13)

- Rainy day railroad war. Day, H. F. (N '13)

- Rambles in Norway. Simpson, H. (F '13)

- Ranching for Sylvia. Bindloss, H. (Mr '13)

- Raphael book. Fraprie, F. R. (Mr '13)

- Rational and applied mechanics. Woodward, C. M. (Jl '13)

- Rational system of home exercise. Masters, P. G. (Ap '13)

Ravenna, Italy

- Hutton, E. Ravenna. (Ag '13)

- Reading book in modern philosophy. Partridge, G. E. (N '13)

- Readings in American constitutional history, 1776-1876. Johnson, A., ed. (D '13)

- Real democracy. Mann, J. E. F., and others. (O '13)

- Real martyr of St. Helena. Pillans, T. D. (D '13)

- Reasonableness of the religion of Jesus. Rainsford, W. S. (Jl '13)

- Recall, Selected articles on the. Phelps, E. M., comp. (N '13)

- Recent events and present policies in China. Bland, J. O. P. (F '13)

- Recipes and menus for fifty. Smith, F. L. (D '13)

- Recipes from East and West. Craies, E., comp. (F '13)

Reciprocity

- Robbins, E. C., comp. Selected articles on reciprocity. (Ap '13)

- Reclaiming the old house. Hooper, C. E. (Ag '13)

- Recollections of the civil war. Tyler, M. W. (Ap '13)

- Record of a silent life. Preston, A. (My '13)

- Red Colonel. Edgar, G. (D '13)

- Red hand of Ulster. Hannay, J. O. (Mr '13)

- Red-house children at Grafton. Douglas, A. M. (N '13)

- Red room. Strindberg, A. (D '13)

- Reduction of domestic flies. Ross, E. H. (O '13)

Reference books

- Walsh, W. S. Handy book of curious information. (D '13)

- Reflections of a beginning husband. Martin, E. S. (Jl '13)

- Refractory husbands. Cutting, M. S. (D '13)

- Regulation, valuation and depreciation of public utilities. Wyer, S. S. (S '13)

- Reign of greed. Rizal y Mercado, J. (Ap '13)

- Relations of education to citizenship. Baldwin, S. E. (Ja '13)

Religion

- Carpenter, J. E. Comparative religion. (Je '13)

- Harrison, F. Positive evolution of religion. (Ap '13)

- Hastings, J., ed. Encyclopaedia of religion and ethics. (Mr '13)

- Jevons, F. B. Comparative religion. (Ag '13)

- Knox, M. V. Religious life of the Anglo-Saxon race. (O '13)

- Smith, F. B. Man's religion. (O '13)

- Watson, J. Interpretation of religious experience. (My '13)

- Wilm, E. C. Problem of religion. (F '13)

Psychology

- Leuba, J. H: Psychology study of religion. (D '13)
- Religion as life. King, H: C. (Ag '13)
- Religion in China. Groot, J. J. M. de. (My '13)
- Religions
- Reichardt, E. N. Significance of ancient religions in relation to human evolution and brain development. (Jl '13)
- Studies in the history of religions. (F '13)
- Religious forces of the United States. Carroll, H: K. (Ap '13)
- Religious liberty
- Ruffini, F. Religious liberty. (F '13)
- Religious life of the Anglo-Saxon race. Knox, M. V. B. (O '13)
- Reluctant lover. McKenna, S. (Ap '13)
- Remarkable adventures of Christopher Poe. Brown, R. C. (N '13)
- Reminiscences of a diplomatist's wife. Fraser, M. (F '13)
- Reminiscences of a soldier's wife. Logan, M. S. (D '13)
- Reminiscences of the South seas. La Farge, J: (Ap '13)
- Renaissance
- Hudson, W: H: Story of the renaissance. (My '13)
- Report on the affairs of British North America. Durham, J: G: L. (My '13)
- Report on vocational training in Chicago and in other cities. City club of Chicago. (Ja '13)
- Representative essays in modern thought. Steeves, H. R., and Ristine, F. H. (S '13)
- Republic. Cawein, M. J. (S '13)
- Republican France. Vizetelly, E. A. (Ap '13)
- Republics of Central and South America. Enock, C. R. (D '13)
- Resuscitation. Lauffer, C: A. (O '13)
- Retrospection, political and personal. Bancroft, H. H. (Ja '13)
- Retrospections of an active life. Bigelow, J: (Jl '13)
- Revelation and its record. Guth, W: W. (Mr. '13)
- Revolutions
- Le Bon, G. Psychology of revolution. (Jl '13)
- Rhodes scholarships. Parkin, G: R. (F '13)
- Rhymes of a rolling stone. Service, R. W: (Ap '13)
- Rice and rice culture
- Pringle, E. W. Woman rice planter. (D '13)
- Richard I, king of England, 1157-1199
- Holbach, M. M. In the footsteps of Richard Coeur de Lion. (F '13)
- Richard Furlong. Thurston, E. T. (D '13)
- Richards, William Trost, 1833-1905
- Morris, H. S. Masterpieces of the sea. (F '13)
- Riding and driving for women. Beach, B. (Ja '13)
- Right honourable gentleman. Norris, W: E: (D '13)
- Right of the child to be well born. Dawson, G: E. (Mr '13)
- Right of the strongest. Greene, F. N. (Je '13)
- Ring for Nancy. Hueffer, F. M. (D '13)
- Ripple. Alexander, M. (N '13)
- Rising dawn. Begbie, H. (D '13)
- Rival French courts. Lombardini, S. H. (N '13)
- Rivers
- Bonney, T: G: Work of rain and rivers. (Ja '13)
- Hunter, W. H: Rivers and estuaries. (Ag '13)
- Canada
- Footner, H. New rivers of the north. (Ja '13)
- Rivers and estuaries. Hunter, W. H: (Ag '13)
- Rizal y Mercado, José, 1861-1896
- Craig, A. Lineage, life and labors of José Rizal, Philippine patriot. (O '13)
- Road beyond the town. Earls, M. (Mr '13)
- Road of living men. Comfort, W. L. (My '13)
- Roads
- Page, L. W. Roads, paths, and bridges. (F '13)
- Roads from Rome. Allinson, A. C. (D '13)
- Roadside fire. Burr, A. J. (F '13)
- Roast beef, medium. Ferber, E. (My '13)

Robbia, Luca della, 1400?-1482

- Marquand, A. Della Robbias in America. (Mr '13)
- Robert I, king of Scotland, 1274-1329
- Mackie, R. L. Story of King Robert the Bruce. (O '13)
- Robin Hood's barn. Brown, A. (D '13)
- Rodin, Auguste, 1840-
- Cielkowska, M. Rodin. (Ja '13)
- Rolling mill industry. Kindl, F. H. (D '13)
- Rolling stones. Henry, O. (F '13)
- Roman Catholic church
- Doctrinal and controversial
- Benson, R. H. Confessions of a convert. (Je '13)
- Education
- Burns, J. A. Growth and development of the Catholic school system in the United States. (Ja '13)
- Government
- Martin, M. Roman curia as it now exists. (Je '13)
- Roman Catholic church in England
- Ward, B. Eve of Catholic emancipation. (F '13)
- Roman curia as it now exists. Martin, M. (Je '13)
- Roman farm management. Cato, M. P. (S '13)
- Roman law
- Stephenson, A. History of Roman law. (F '13)
- Roman life and manners under the early empire. Friedländer, L. (D '13)
- Romance of a favourite. Loliée, F. A. (F '13)
- Romance of Ali. Childs, E. S. (O '13)
- Romance of evolution and its relation to religion. Kimball, J: C. (N '13)
- Romance of submarine engineering. Corbin, T: W. (Ja '13)
- Romance of the American theatre. Crawford, M. C. (N '13)
- Romance of the men of Devon. Gribble, F. H: (My '13)
- Romance of the Rothschilds. Balla, I. (Ap '13)
- Romance, vision and satire. Weston, J. L. (F '13)
- Romantic America. Schaufler, R. H. (D '13)
- Romantic days in the early republic. Crawford, M. C. (Ja '13)
- Romantic story of the Puritan fathers. Addison, A. C. (Mr '13)
- Romantic trials of three centuries. Childers, H. (Ja '13)
- Romanticism
- More, P. E. Drift of romanticism. (Je '13)
- Rome
- Allinson, A. C. Roads from Rome. (D '13)
- Friedländer, L. Roman life and manners under the early empire. (D '13)
- Jones, H: S. Companion to Roman history. (My '13)
- Stobart, J: C. Grandeur that was Rome. (Je '13)
- Roofs
- Bishop, C. T: Structural details of hip and valley rafters. (Mr '13)
- Ricker, N. C. Treatise on design and construction of roofs. (My '13)
- Rose of the garden. Hinkson, K. (D '13)
- Rothschild family
- Baila, I. Romance of the Rothschilds. (Ap '13)
- Rough stone monuments and their builders. Peet, T. E. (F '13)
- Round the corner. Cannan, G. (O '13)
- Rousseau, Jean Jacques, 1712-1778.
- Gran, G. Jean Jacques Rousseau. (Ja '13)
- Royal auction bridge. Foster, R. F: (Ja '13)
- Royal castles of England. Shelley, H: C: (D '13)
- Royal gardens. Ward, C. (F '13)
- Royal women. Mann, M. Ridpath-. (Je '13)
- Rules of management. Lodge, W: (D '13)
- Runaway ring. Dudeney, Mrs. H: E. (N '13)
- Running sands. Kauffman, R. W. (My '13)
- Rural schools
- Betts, G: H. New ideals in rural schools. (D '13)

Ruskin, John, 1819-1900

Cook, E. T. Homes and haunts of John Ruskin. (Mr '13)

Russia

Graham, S. Changing Russia. (Jl '13)

Graham, S. Tramp's sketches. (Mr '13)

Graham, S. With the Russian pilgrims to Jerusalem. (D '13)

Kluchevsky, V. O. History of Russia. (N '13)

Rappoport, A. S. Home life in Russia. (Ag '13)

Reynolds, R. My Russian year. (Je '13)

Winter, N. O. Russian empire of to-day and yesterday. (N '13)

Russian empire of to-day and yesterday. Winter, N. O. (N '13)

Russian literature

Persky, S. Contemporary Russian novelists. (D '13)

Sadhana, the realisation of life. Tagore, R. (D '13)

Safety devices

Tolman, W. H., and Kendall, L. B. Safety. (S '13)

Sagas

Craigie, W. A. Icelandic sagas. (S '13)

Sailor whom England feared. Crawford, M. M. (N '13)

Sallors

Hannay, D. Sea trader. (Mr '13)

Saint Anne of the Mountains. Bignell, E. (F '13)

Saints

Ayscough, J. Saints and places. (Mr '13)

Steedman, A. Our island saints. (F '13)

Salesmen and salesmanship

Atkinson, W. W. Psychology of salesmanship. (My '13)

Hoyt, C. W. Scientific sales management. (N '13)

Taylor, H. C. What a salesman should know. (N '13)

Salisbury, England

Noyes, E. Salisbury Plain. (O '13)

Sally Castleton, southerner. Marriott, C. (My '13)

Salt-water ballads. Masefield, J. (D '13)

Samoa

La Farge, J. Reminiscences of the South seas. (Ap '13)

Sand dunes and salt marshes. Townsend, C. W. (N '13)

Sandwiches

James, A. L. Chafing-dish, together with directions for the preparation of sandwiches. (Ap '13)

San Francisco, California

Eldredge, Z. S. Beginnings of San Francisco. (My '13)

Purdy, H. T. San Francisco as it was, as it is, and how to see it. (F '13)

Sanitation, Household

Brown, B. M. Health in home and town. (F '13)

Talbot, M. House sanitation. (F '13)

Sappho

Patrick, M. M. Sappho and the island of Lesbos. (Je '13)

Sardou, Victorien, 1831-1908

Hart, J. A. Sardou and the Sardou plays. (Ap '13)

Savoy, House of

Previté Orton, C. W. Early history of the house of Savoy. (S '13)

Scarlet rider. Runkle, B. B. (Jl '13)

Scenes and memories. Paget, W. E. H. (My '13)

Schiller, Johann Christoph Friedrich von, 1759-1805

Kühnemann, E. Schiller. (S '13)

Schleiermacher, Friedrich Ernst Daniel, 1768-1834

Selbie, W. B. Schleiermacher. (S '13)

School administration and supervision

Strayer, G. D., and Thorndike, E. L. Educational administration. (Ag '13)

School and home gardens. Meier, W. H. D. (Jl '13)

School children, Free food and clothing for

Bryant, L. S. School feeding. (Ag '13)

School feeding. Bryant, L. S. (Ag '13)

School hygiene

Bancroft, J. H. Posture of school children. (Jl '13)

Burks, F. W. and J. D. Health and the school. (D '13)

Dresslar, F. B. School hygiene. (S '13)

School management

Holmes, W. H. School organization and the individual child. (My '13)

Weimer, H. Way to the heart of the pupil. (S '13)

School organization and the individual child. Holmes, W. H. (My '13)

Schumann, Clara

Litzmann, B. Clara Schumann. (Je '13)

Science

Whetham, W. C. D. and C. D. Science and the human mind. (My '13)

Juvenile and popular literature

Claudy, C. H. "Tell me why" stories. (Ja '13)

Science from an easy chair. Lankester, R. (Ap '13)

Science of etymology. Skeat, W. W. (My '13)

Science of human behavior. Parmelee, M. F. (Ap '13)

Science of spiritual life. Talling, M. P. (My '13)

Scientific management in education. Rice, J. M. (Ag '13)

Scientific recreation

Pepper, J. H. Boy's playbook of science. (F '13)

Scientific sales management. Hoyt, C. W. (N '13)

Scientific Sprague. Lynde, F. (Ja '13)

Scientists

Gibson, C. R. Heroes of science. (Ja '13)

Scotland

Barbé, L. A. In byways of Scottish history. (S '13)

Bradley, A. G. Gateway of Scotland. (Ja '13)

Olcott, C. S. Country of Sir Walter Scott. (D '13)

Williamson, M. John and Betty's Scotch history visit. (F '13)

Scott, Sir Walter, bart., 1771-1832

Crockett, W. S. Scott originals. (F '13)

Olcott, C. S. Country of Sir Walter Scott. (D '13)

Scout master of Troop 5. Thurston, I. T. (Mr '13)

Scout of to-day. Hornibrook, I. (N '13)

Sculpture

Eaton, D. C. Handbook of modern French sculpture. (D '13)

Sea and the jungle. Tomlinson, H. M. (My '13)

Sea stories

Barry, J. A. Sea yarns. (Ja '13)

Sea trader. Hannay, D. (Mr '13)

Sea yarns. Barry, J. A. (Ja '13)

Seashore

Duncan, F. M. Seashore. (My '13)

Smith, E. B. Seashore book. (Ja '13)

Secret service

Beymer, W. G. On hazardous service. (Ja '13)

Secrets out of doors. Gibson, W. H. (D '13)

Seeing Europe on sixty dollars. Fauley, W. F. (Ja '13)

Seeing nature first. Weed, C. M. (Jl '13)

Seer. Sheehan, P. P. (F '13)

Seine river

Thorpe, T. E. Seine from Havre to Paris. (D '13)

Selected articles on capital punishment. Fanning, C. E., comp. (O '13)

Selected articles on compulsory insurance. Bullock, E. D., comp. (Ja '13)

Selected articles on free trade and protection. Morgan, J. E., comp. (Ap '13)

Selected articles on government ownership of railroads. Phelps, E. M., comp. (Ja '13)

Selected articles on reciprocity. Robbins, E. C. comp. (Ap '13)

- Selected articles on the commission plan of municipal government. Robbins, E. C., comp. (Ja '13)
- Selected articles on the conservation of natural resources. Fanning, C. E., comp. (Ap '13)
- Selected articles on the election of United States senators. Fanning, C. E., comp. (Ja '13)
- Selected articles on the open versus closed shop. Robbins, E. C., comp. (Ap '13)
- Selected articles on the parcels post. Phelps, E. M., comp. (Je '13)
- Selected articles on the recall. Phelps, E. M., comp. (N '13)
- Selected articles on trade unions. Bullock, E. D., comp. (Ap '13)
- Selected articles on woman suffrage. Phelps, E. M., comp. (Ja '13)
- Sensations of Paris. Strong, R. (Mr '13)
- Sermon notes, 1849-1878. Newman, J. H. (O '13)
- Sermons and addresses. Bascom, J. (D '13)
- Serpent's tooth. Croker, B. M. (Jl '13)
- Seven keys to Baldpate. Biggers, E. D. (Ap '13)
- Seven Scots stories. Findlater, J. H. (Mr '13)
- Sex
- Finot, J. Problems of the sexes. (Jl '13)
- Heape, W. Sex antagonism. (D '13)
- Moll, A. Sexual life of the child. (F '13)
- Smith, N. M. Three gifts of life. (Je '13)
- Thomson, J. A., and Geddes, P. Problems of sex. (F '13)
- Sex antagonism. Heape, W. (D '13)
- Sex education
- Wile, I. S. Sex education. (Mr '13)
- Sexual ethics
- Foerster, F. W. Marriage and the sex problem. (Jl '13)
- Hall, W. S. and J. W. Sexual knowledge. (O '13)
- Sexual knowledge. Hall, W. S. and J. W. (O '13)
- Sexual life of the child. Moll, A. (F '13)
- Shadow. Stringer, A. J. A. (F '13)
- Shadow-show. Curle, J. H. (Ag '13)
- Shakespeare, William, 1564-1616
- Brooke, S. A. Ten more plays of Shakespeare. (O '13)
- Harris, F. Women of Shakespeare. (Ja '13)
- Matthews, B. Shakspeare as a playwright. (N '13)
- Palmer, G. H. Intimations of immortality in the sonnets of Shakespeare. (Ja '13)
- Warde, F. Fools of Shakespeare. (D '13)
- Shakespeare-Bacon controversy
- Lang, A. Shakespeare, Bacon and the great unknown. (F '13)
- Robertson, J. M. Baconian heresy. (Jl '13)
- Shallows, Watson, F. (D '13)
- Sheep
- Craig, J. A. Sheep-farming in North America. (Je '13)
- Lydekker, R. Sheep and its cousins. (O '13)
- Sheffield plate
- Bradbury, F. History of old Sheffield plate. (Ap '13)
- Shipping
- Dorling, T. All about ships. (Ja '13)
- Short critical history of architecture. Statham, H. H. (F '13)
- Short history of art. De Forest, J. B. (D '13)
- Short history of English music. Ford, E. A. C. (Ja '13)
- Short history of the American negro. Brawley, B. G. (Je '13)
- Short history of the United States. Bassett, J. S. (N '13)
- Short stories
- Canby, H. S. Study of the short story. (Je '13)
- Short-story masterpieces. Esenwein, J. B. (F '13)
- Shrubs
- Taber, G. Making the grounds attractive with shrubbery. (F '13)
- Siberia
- Price, M. P. Siberia. (F '13)
- Wright, R. L., and Digby, G. B. Through Siberia. (Je '13)
- Sicily
- Ayscough, J. Saints and places. (Mr '13)
- Riggs, A. S. Vistas in Sicily. (Ap '13)
- Sick, The
- Cole, J. L. Wheel-chair philosophy. (D '13)
- Sidelights. Blennerhassett, C. J. (D '13)
- Sleyès, Joseph Emmanuel, count, 1748-1836
- Clapham, J. H. Abbé Sleyès. (Mr '13)
- Significance of ancient religions in relation to human evolution and brain development. Reichardt, E. N. (Jl '13)
- Significance of art. Rowland, E. H. (D '13)
- Silence of men. Battersby, H. F. P. (Jl '13)
- Silver dress. Blount, M. M. (My '13)
- Simon Brandin. Neuman, B. P. (My '13)
- Simpson. Mordaunt, E. (D '13)
- Sin
- Tennant, F. R. Concept of sin. (O '13)
- Singers
- Lahee, H. C. Grand opera singers of to-day. (F '13)
- Singing and voice culture
- Jones, D. D. Lyric diction for singers, actors, and public speakers. (Ap '13)
- Sinopah, the Indian boy. Schultz, J. W. (Je '13)
- Sister-in-chief. Terrell, D. & B. (F '13)
- Six girls grown up. Taggart, M. A. (F '13)
- Sixty-first second. Johnson, O. M. (My '13)
- Sixty years in the wilderness. Lucy, H. W. (My '13)
- Sky island. Baum, L. F. (Ja '13)
- Slice of life. Halifax, R. (Mr '13)
- Small boy and others. James, H. (My '13)
- Small water supplies. Taylor, F. N. (F '13)
- Smith and the church. Beattys, H. H. (N '13)
- Smoking
- Needham, H. B. Divorcing Lady Nicotine. (Ag '13)
- Smuggling
- Chatterton, E. K. King's cutters and smugglers. (Ja '13)
- Social and economic forces in American history. Hart, A. B., ed. (D '13)
- Social and economic survey of a rural township in southern Minnesota. Thompson, C. W., and Warber, G. P. (D '13)
- Social cancer. Rizal y Mercado, J. (Ap '13)
- Social centers
- Ward, E. J., ed. Social center. (Je '13)
- Social environment and moral progress. Wallace, A. R. (Je '13)
- Social ethics
- Wallace, A. R. Social environment and moral progress. (Je '13)
- Social forces in modern literature. Buck, P. M., Jr. (Jl '13)
- Social idealism and the changing theology. Smith, G. B. (Jl '13)
- Social life in old New Orleans. Ripley, E. M. M. (Ja '13)
- Social policy of Bismarck. Ashley, A. (Je '13)
- Social problems
- Bax, E. B. Problems of men, mind, and morals. (F '13)
- Henderson, C. R. Social programmes in the West. (S '13)
- Howerth, I. W. Work and life. (S '13)
- Lee, G. S. Crowds. (S '13)
- Mathews, S. Making of to-morrow. (S '13)
- Nearing, S. Social religion. (My '13)
- Quick, H. On board the good ship Earth. (D '13)
- Stelzle, C. American social and religious conditions. (F '13)
- Strong, J. Our world. (S '13)
- Social programmes in the West. Henderson, C. R. (S '13)
- Social psychology
- Ellwood, C. A. Sociology in its psychological aspects. (Ja '13)
- Social religion. Nearing, S. (My '13)
- Social sciences
- Lodge, O. J. Modern problems. (Ap '13)
- Social welfare in New Zealand. Lusk, H. H. (Ap '13)

Socialism

- Adams, E. F. Inhumanity of socialism. (N '13)
 Benson, A. L. Truth about socialism. (Je '13)
 Brooks, J. G. American syndicalism. (Jl '13)
 Hillquit, M. Socialism summed up. (Ag '13)
 Johns, A. R. Socialism. (D '13)
 Orth, S. P. Socialism and democracy in Europe. (Mr '13)
 Simkhovitch, V. G. Marxism versus socialism. (S '13)
 Spargo, J. Applied socialism. (Jl '13)
 Spargo, J. Syndicalism, industrial unionism and socialism. (Jl '13)
 Vaughan, B. Socialism from the Christian standpoint. (F '13)
 Walling, W. E. Larger aspects of socialism. (Jl '13)

Sociology

- Dickinson, C. H. Christian reconstruction of modern life. (N '13)
 Ellwood, C. A. Sociology in its psychological aspects. (Ja '13)
 Isaacson, E. New morality. (Ag '13)

Sociology, Christian

- Brewster, C. B. Kingdom of God and American life. (Mr '13)
 Rauschenbusch, W. Christianizing the social order. (F '13)
 Smith, S. G. Democracy and the church. (F '13)
 Trawick, A. M. City church and its social mission. (N '13)
 Womer, P. P. Church and the labor conflict. (S '13)

Soft soldering, hard soldering and brazing. Hobart, J. F. (My '13)

Sojourner, Elder, R. D. (Je '13)

Solder and soldering

- Hobart, J. F. Soft soldering, hard soldering and brazing. (My '13)
 Soldier from Virginia. Bowen, M. (Mr '13)
 Solitude letters. Blauvelt, M. T. (My '13)
 Solving the country church problem. Bricker, G. A. (D '13)

Some English story tellers. Cooper, F. T. (Ja '13)

Some influences in modern philosophic thought. Hadley, A. T. (Ag '13)

Somerset, England

Hutton, E. Highways and byways in Somerset. (Ap '13)

Son of a servant. Strindberg, A. (Jl '13)

Son of his mother. Viebig, C. Cohn-. (Je '13)

Sónnica, Blasco Ibáñez, V. (Ja '13)

Sonnie-Boy's people. Connolly, J. B. (N '13)

Sons and lovers. Lawrence, D. H. (D '13)

Source book in economics. Fetter, F. A. (Ap '13)

Source-book of ancient history. Botsford, G. W., and L. S. (My '13)

Source problems on the French revolution. Fling, F. M. and H. (N '13)

South

Kephart, H. Our southern highlanders. (D '13)

Pringle, E. W. Woman rice planter. (D '13)

South Africa

Worsfold, W. B. Union of South Africa. (F '13)

South America

Akers, C. E. History of South America, 1854-1904. (Mr '13)

Landor, A. H. S. Across unknown South America. (D '13)

Description and travel

Bates, L. W., jr. Paths of the conquistadores. (Ja '13)

Bryce, J. South America. (Mr '13)

Forrest, A. S. Tour through South America. (D '13)

Koebel, W. H. South America. (Ja '13)

Post, C. J. Across the Andes. (My '13)

Sears, A. W. Two on a tour in South America. (D '13)

Tomlinson, H. M. Sea and the jungle. (My '13)

Van Dyke, H. W. Through South America. (Mr '13)

Whitney, C. Flowing road. (Ja '13)

South pole

Amundsen, R. E. G. South pole. (F '13)

Southerner, Dixon, T. (S '13)

Southland of North America. Putnam, G. P. (Jl '13)

Southwest, New

Laut, A. C. Through our unknown Southwest. (Ag '13)

Biography

Bradley, G. D. Winning the Southwest. (Mr '13)

Soyer's standard cookery. Soyer, N. (F '13)

SpainDescription and travel

Howells, W. D. Familiar Spanish travels. (D '13)

Slater, E. Along Spain's river of romance. (Ja '13)

History

Dozy, R. P. A. Spanish Islam. (N '13)

Spanish America

García Calderón, F. Latin America. (Ap '13)

Enock, C. R. Republics of Central and South America. (D '13)

Spanish Islam. Dozy, R. P. A. (N '13)

Speculation

Brace, H. H. Value of organized speculation. (Je '13)

Spell of the Italian lakes. McCrackan, W. D. (Jl '13)

Spenser, Edmund, 1552?-1599

Higginson, J. J. Spenser's Shepherd's calendar in relation to contemporary affairs. (F '13)

Spider book. Comstock, J. H. (Ja '13)

Spiderland. Ellis, R. A. (Mr '13)

Spiders

Comstock, J. H. Spider book. (Ja '13)

Ellis, R. A. Spiderland. (Mr '13)

Fabre, J. H. C. Life of the spider. (Mr '13)

Spirit of American literature. Macy, J. A. (Ap '13)

Spirit of Paris. Sommerville, F. (Ag '13)

Spiritual life

Abbott, L. Letters to unknown friends. (Je '13)

Talling, M. P. Science of spiritual life. (My '13)

Spiritual surgery. Huckel, O. (Mr '13)

Splendid quest. Mathews, B. (D '13)

Spotted Panther. Dwyer, J. F. (N '13)

Stain. Halsey, F. (Ag '13)

Stained glass

Eden, F. S. Ancient stained and painted glass. (O '13)

Sherrill, C. H. Stained glass tour in Italy. (D '13)

Standard dictionary, New. Funk and Wagnalls. (D '13)

Stanhope, Elizabeth Spencer, lady

Stirling, A. M. D. W., comp. Letter bag of Lady Elizabeth Spencer-Stanhope. (F '13)

Stars

Griffith, A. M. M., comp. Stars and their stories. (Jl '13)

Starving America. McCann, A. W. (Je '13)

State rights

Collins, C. W. Fourteenth amendment and the states. (O '13)

Corwin, E. S. National supremacy. (O '13)

Status of aliens in China. Koo, V. K. W. (My '13)

Steam-shovel man. Paine, R. D. (O '13)

Steamboats

Talbot, C. A. Steamship conquest of the world. (Mr '13)

Steamship conquest of the world. Talbot, F. A. (Mr '13)

Stella Maris. Locke, W. J. (My '13)

Step on the stair. Thanet, O., pseud. (Ag '13)

Stephen March's way. Knibbs, H. H. (My '13)

Stevens, Thaddeus, 1792-1868

Woodburn, J. A. Life of Thaddeus Stevens. (Ag '13)

Stevenson, Robert Louis Balfour, 1850-1894

Simpson, E. B. Robert Louis Stevenson originals. (F '13)

- Stock and stock breeding
Harper, M. W. Animal husbandry for schools. (O '13)
- Stock exchange from within. Van Antwerp, W: C. (Ap '13)
- Stolen waters. Healy, T. M. (Ag '13)
- Stories from Dutch history. Dawson, A. H. (N '13)
- Stories from Italian history retold for children. Troutbeck, G. E. (F '13)
- Stories from old English romance. Pollard, J. (F '13)
- Stories of old Greece and Rome. Baker, E. K. (N '13)
- Stories of Shakespeare's English history plays. Shakespeare, W: (My '13)
- Stories of the Pilgrims. Pumphrey, M. B. (Ap '13)
- Story-lives of our great artists. Rowbotham, F. J. (F '13)
- Story of a loaf of bread. Wood, T: B. (N '13)
- Story of a page. Heaton, J: L. (N '13)
- Story of a round-house and other poems. Masefield, J: (Mr '13)
- Story of Bayreuth. Wagner, R: (Ja '13)
- Story of California. Norton, H: K. (S '13)
- Story of Canterbury. Taylor, G. R. S. (F '13)
- Story of Don John of Austria. Coloma, L. (Je '13)
- Story of Harvard. Pier, A. S. (N '13)
- Story of Lucca. Ross, J. A., and Erichsen, N. (N '13)
- Story of lumber. Bassett, S. W. (Ja '13)
- Story of my boyhood and youth. Muir, J: (My '13)
- Story of Panama. Gause, F. A., and Carr, C: C. (Ap '13)
- Story of Stephen Compton. Patterson, J: E. (My '13)
- Story of textiles. Walton, P. (Ap '13)
- Story of the ancient nations. Westermann, W: L. (S '13)
- Story of the Borgias. Fyvie, J: (Ap '13)
- Story of the Bronx. Jenkins, S. (Ja '13)
- Story of the civil war. Livermore, W: R. (Ag '13)
- Story of the French revolution. Birkhead, A. (O '13)
- Story of the pony express. Bradley, G. D. (D '13)
- Story of the renaissance. Hudson, W: H. (My '13)
- Story teller's book. O'Grady, A., and Throop, F. (F '13)
- Story telling
O'Grady, A., and Throop, F. Story teller's book. (F '13)
- Partridge, E. N. and G: E. Story-telling in school and home. (D '13)
- Story-telling poems. Olcott, F. J., comp. (D '13)
- Stowe notes, letters and verses. Taber, E: M. (Ag '13)
- Strange cases of Dr. Stanchon. Bacon, J. D. (My '13)
- Strange stories from the lodge of leisures. P'u Sung-ling. (N '13)
- Strange story book. Lang, L. B. (D '13)
- Stranger at the gate. Wright, M. (D '13)
- Strawberries
Wilkinson, A. E. Modern strawberry growing. (Ap '13)
- Street of the flute-player. Stacpoole, H: D. (Mr '13)
- Street of the Two Friends. Smith, F. B. (F '13)
- Street pavements and paving materials. Tillson, G: W. (My '13)
- Strindberg, August, 1849-1912
Lind-af-Hageby, L. August Strindberg. (D '13)
- Strong hand. Deeping, W. (Ja '13)
- Structural details of hip and valley rafters. Bishop, C. T: (Mr '13)
- Structural geology. Leith, C: K. (N '13)
- Struggle for Christian truth in Italy. Luzzi, G. (Ag '13)
- Stuart, Arbella, 1575-1615
Hardy, B. C. Arbella Stuart. (D '13)
- Studies in foreign education. Brereton, C. S. H: (D '13)
- Studies in light production. Houstoun, R. A. (Je '13)
- Studies in love and terror. Lowndes, M. A. (Jl '13)
- Studies in radioactivity. Bragg, W: H: (Ap '13)
- Studies in the lyric poems of Friedrich Hebbel. Gubelmann, A. E: (O '13)
- Studies in the psychology of intemperance. Partidge, G. E. (F '13)
- Study of the short story. Canby, H: S. (Je '13)
- Sub-alpine plants. Thompson, H. S. (F '13)
- Submarine boats
Corbin, T: W. Romance of submarine engineering. (Ja '13)
- Submarine engineering. Romance of. Corbin, T: W. (Ja '13)
- Submarine engineering of to-day. Domville-Fife, C: W. (D '13)
- Suburban gardens. Tabor, G. (Jl '13)
- Success
Allen, J. Foundation stones to happiness and success. (N '13)
- Marden, O. S. Training for efficiency. (O '13)
- Robinson, A. R. Memory and the executive mind. (Ap '13)
- Rose, W: G. Success in business. (My '13)
- Success. Silberrad, U. L. (Ap '13)
- Successful houses and how to build them. White, C. E. (F '13)
- Succession. Sidgwick, E. (O '13)
- Sudan
Stevens, E. S. My Sudan year. (Ap '13)
- Summer and winter on Hudson bay. Leith, C: K. and A. T. (Ag '13)
- Sunday schools
Alexander, J: L., ed. Sunday school and the teens. (O '13)
- Cope, H: F. Efficiency in the Sunday school. (Jl '13)
- Sunday suppers. Williams, A. L. (F '13)
- Sunla, Diver, K. H. M. (N '13)
- Sunny life. Barrows, I. C. (Jl '13)
- Superman in being. Woods, L. (Je '13)
- Supreme court and unconstitutional legislation. Moore, B. F. (O '13)
- Surakarta. MacHarg, W:, and Balmer, E. (N '13)
- Survey of English literature, 1780-1830. Elton, O. (F '13)
- Surveying
Fergusson, J: C. Fergusson's percentage unit of angular measurement, with logarithms. (F '13)
- Mulford, A. C. Boundaries and landmarks. (F '13)
- Swedenborg, Emanuel, 1688-1772
Bigelow, J: Bible that was lost and is found. (Mr '13)
- Swinburne, Algernon Charles, 1837-1909
Drinkwater, J: Swinburne, an estimate. (N '13)
- Thomas, E. Algernon Charles Swinburne. (F '13)
- Swirling waters. Rittenberg, M. (O '13)
- Swords and ploughshares. Mead, L. T. (Je '13)
- Sylvia. Sinclair, U. B., jr. (Je '13)
- Symbol and satire in the French revolution. Henderson, E. F. (Mr '13)
- Synchronous motors and converters. Blondel, A. E. (Jl '13)
- Syndicalism
Boyle, J. Minimum wage and syndicalism. (S '13)
- Lewis, A. D. Syndicalism and the general strike. (My '13)
- Macdonald, J. R. Syndicalism. (Je '13)
- Spargo, J: Syndicalism, industrial unionism and socialism. (Jl '13)
- Tridon, A. New unionism. (Ag '13)
- Synonyms
Flemming, L: A., comp. Synonyms, antonyms, and associated words. (S '13)
- T. Tembarom. Burnett, F. (D '13)
- Tackling matrimony. Burton, G: L. (My '13)
- Tad Sheldon, boy scout. Wilson, J: F. (O '13)
- Tales of the Mermaid tavern. Noyes, A. (Je '13)

- Tao-teh-king
Bjerregaard, C. H. A. Inner life and the Tao-teh-king. (Je '13)
- Tapestry
Candee, H. C. Tapestry book. (F '13)
Hunter, G. L. Tapestries. (Ja '13)
- Tariff
Curtiss, G. B. Industrial development of nations. (Jl '13)
Morgan, J. E., comp. Selected articles on free trade and protection. (Ap '13)
Taste of apples. Lee, J. B. (D '13)
- Taxation
Seligman, E. R. A. Essays in taxation. (O '13)
Vineberg, S. Provincial and local taxation in Canada. (My '13)
- Teachers
Terman, L. M. Teacher's health. (Jl '13)
- Teaching
Phelps, W. L. Teaching in school and college. (F '13)
Rice, J. M. Scientific management in education. (Ag '13)
- Technique of painting. Moreau-Vauthier, C. (Ap '13)
- Telegraph
McNicol, D. American telegraph practice. (D '13)
- "Tell me why" stories. Claudy, C. H. (Ja '13)
- Temper of the American people. Smart, G. T. (F '13)
- Temperance
Patterson, R. J. Catch-my-pal. (Je '13)
- Ten girls from history. Sweetser, K. D. (F '13)
- Ten more plays of Shakespeare. Brooke, S. A. (O '13)
- Ten thousand miles through Canada. Adams, J. (Ja '13)
- Tennis
Wilding, A. F. On the court and off. (S '13)
- Tennyson, Alfred Tennyson, 1st baron, 1809-1892
Huckel, O. Through England with Tennyson. (O '13)
- Terrible twins. Jepson, E. (N '13)
- Texan scouts. Altschuler, J. A. (S '13)
- Text and canon of the New Testament. Souter, A. (My '13)
- Textbook in the history of modern elementary education. Parker, S. C. (My '13)
- Text-book of design. Kelley, C. F., and Mowll, W. L. (Mr '13)
- Textbook of Rand metallurgical practice. Stokes, R. S. G., and others. (F '13)
- Text-book on trade waste waters. Wilson, H. M., and Calvert, H. T. (D '13)
- Textile industry and fabrics
Gibbs, C. M. Household textiles. (Mr '13)
Walton, P. Story of textiles. (Ap '13)
- Thackeray, William Makepeace, 1811-1863
Smith, F. H. In Thackeray's London. (D '13)
- That boy of yours. Kirtley, J. S. (My '13)
- Theater
Craig, E. G. Towards a new theatre. (Jl '13)
Crawford, M. C. Romance of the American theatre. (N '13)
Grossmith, W. From studio to stage. (Ap '13)
Lawrence, W. J. Elizabethan playhouse. (F '13)
Mackaye, P. Civic theatre in relation to the redemption of leisure. (My '13)
Winter, W. Wallet of time. (D '13)
- Theatrical and musical memoirs. Aronson, R. (Ag '13)
- Their choice. Skinner, H. C. D. (My '13)
- Their Christmas golden wedding. Stanley, C. (D '13)
- Their yesterdays. Wright, H. B. (Ja '13)
- Theology
Dinsmore, C. A. New light on the old truth. (Mr '13)
Foundations. (Je '13)
Princeton theological seminary. Biblical and theological studies. (F '13)
Smith, G. B. Social idealism and the changing theology. (Jl '13)
Whiton, J. M., ed. Getting together. (O '13)
- Theology of the Church of England. Worsley, F. W. (My '13)
- Theology of the gospels. Moffatt, J. (Ap '13)
- Theoretical and physical chemistry. Bigelow, S. L. (Ja '13)
- Theory and practice of teaching art. Dow, A. W. (Je '13)
- Theory of engineering drawing. Adler, A. A. (Ap '13)
- Theory of social revolutions. Adams, B. (O '13)
- Thermodynamics
Lucke, C. E. Engineering thermodynamics. (N '13)
- Things that endure. Miller, J. R. (N '13)
- Thirteen years of a busy woman's life. Tweedie, E. B. (Ja '13)
- Thirteenth juror. Hill, F. T. (D '13)
- Thomas Aquinas, St., 1225-1274
Wicksteed, P. H. Dante and Aquinas. (S '13)
- Thorley Weir. Benson, E. F. (D '13)
- Thorney. Black, A. (My '13)
- Thoughts and after-thoughts. Tree, H. B. (S '13)
- Thousandth woman. Hornung, E. W. (D '13)
- Threads of grey and gold. Reed, M. (O '13)
- Three farms. Mätter, J. (My '13)
- Three gifts of life. Smith, N. M. (Je '13)
- Three weeks in France. Higinbotham, J. U. (Je '13)
- Three years in the Libyan desert. Falls, J. C. E. (S '13)
- Through England with Tennyson. Huckel, O. (O '13)
- Through our unknown Southwest. Laut, A. C. (Ag '13)
- Through Siberia. Wright, R. L., and Digby, G. B. (Je '13)
- Through South America. Van Dyke, H. W. (Mr '13)
- Through the heart of Africa. Melland, F. H., and Cholmeley, E. H. (F '13)
- Thunderhead lady. Fuller, A., and Read, B. (D '13)
- Thy rod and Thy staff. Benson, A. C. (Ja '13)
- Tibet
Hedin, S. A. Trans-Himalaya. (Ag '13)
- Tide marks. Westrup, M. (D '13)
- Time and the woman. Pryce, R. (My '13)
- Tinder-box. Daviess, M. T. (D '13)
- 'Tis sixty years since. Adams, C. F. (My '13)
- Titanic (steamship)
Gracie, A. Truth about the Titanic. (Je '13)
- Titles of honor and nobility
Irvine, L. H. Irvine's dictionary of titles. (Ap '13)
- To Mesopotamia and Kurdistan in disguise. Soane, E. B. (My '13)
- Tommy Tregennis. Phillips, M. E. (My '13)
- Topham's folly. Stevenson, G. (Ap '13)
- Tour through South America. Forrest, A. S. (D '13)
- Towards a new theatre. Craig, E. G. (Jl '13)
- Townsend twins, camp directors. Eldred, W. L. (N '13)
- Toya the unlike. Kelly, E. M. (D '13)
- Toys
Moore, H. W. Manual training toys for the boys' workshop. (Ap '13)
- Trade of the world. Whelpley, J. D. (D '13)
- Trade-unions
Great Britain
Schloesser, H. H., and Clark, W. S. Legal position of trade unions. (F '13)
United States
Bullock, E. D., comp. Selected articles on trade unions. (Ap '13)
Portenar, A. J. Organized labor. (F '13)
Robbins, E. C., comp. Selected articles on the open versus closed shop. (Ap '13)
Tradition. Middleton, G. (My '13)
Traditions of Edinburgh. Chambers, R. (Ap '13)
Tragedy of Mary Stuart. Shelley, H. C. (N '13)
Trail to yesterday. Seltzer, C. A. (D '13)
Trails and tramps in Alaska and Newfoundland. Thomas, W. S. (Jl '13)
Training for efficiency. Marden, O. S. (O '13)
Training of children. Dinsmore, J. W. (Mr '13)
Training the boy. McKeever, W. A. (My '13)
Tramp's sketches. Graham, S. (Mr '13)
Trans-Himalaya. Hedin, S. A. (Ag '13)

- Transmission line construction. Lundquist, R. A. (Mr '13)
- Transmutation of Ling. Bramah, E. (F '13)
- Travel letters from New Zealand, Australia and Africa. Howe, E. W. (N '13)
- Travel pictures. Singh, B. (Mr '13)
- Traveler at forty. Dreiser, T. (D '13)
- Travels
- Howe, E. W. Travel letters from New Zealand, Australia and Africa. (N '13)
- Mätter, J: Three farms. (My '13)
- Treasure mountain. Sabin, E. L. (D '13)
- Treatise on cement specifications. Cochran, J. (My '13)
- Treatise on design and construction of roofs. Ricker, N. C. (My '13)
- Trees
- Blakeslee, A. F., and Jarvis, C. D. Trees in winter. (Mr '13)
- Nuttall, Mrs. G. C. Trees and how they grow. (Je '13)
- Peets, E. Practical tree repair. (D '13)
- Trials
- Great Britain
- Childers, H. Romantic trials of three centuries. (Ja '13)
- Trollope, Anthony, 1815-1882
- Escott, T: H. S. Anthony Trollope. (D '13)
- Trout fishing
- Camp, S: G. Fishing with floating flies. (D '13)
- Troy
- Leaf, W. Troy. (F '13)
- True tales of Arctic heroism in the new world. Greeley, A. W. (Ja '13)
- Trumbull, Lyman, 1813-1896
- White, H. Life of Lyman Trumbull. (D '13)
- Trusts, industrial
- Stevens, W: S., ed. Industrial combinations and trusts. (Mr '13)
- Truth about Camilla. Hall, G. (D '13)
- Truth about home rule. Wicks, P. (S '13)
- Truth about socialism. Benson, A. L: (Je '13)
- Truth about the railroads. Elliott, H. (D '13)
- Truth about the Titanic. Gracie, A. (Je '13)
- Truth about woman. Gallichan, C. G. (D '13)
- Tschudi, the harpsichord maker. Dale, W: (D '13)
- Turco-Italian war, 1911-1912
- Abbott, G: F: Holy war in Tripoli. (F '13)
- McCullagh, F. Italy's war for a desert. (Je '13)
- Turgenev, Ivan Sergileevich, 1818-1883
- Moxom, P. S. Two masters, Browning and Turgenev. (F '13)
- Turkey
- Baker, B. G. Passing of the Turkish empire in Europe. (Ag '13)
- Lukach, H. C: Fringe of the East. (S '13)
- Soane, E. B. To Mesopotamia and Kurdistan in disguise. (My '13)
- History
- Miller, W: Ottoman empire. (D '13)
- Politics and government
- Lybyer, A. H. Government of the Ottoman empire in the time of Suleiman the Magnificent. (O '13)
- Turkish woman's European impressions. Zeyneb, hanum. (Je '13)
- Turning of Griggsby. Bacheller, I. A. (Je '13)
- Twelve great paintings. Bailey, H: T. (D '13)
- Twenty centuries of Paris. Smith, M. S. (N '13)
- Twice around the world. Forbes, E. A. (Ja '13)
- 'Twixt land and sea. Conrad, J. (Mr '13)
- Two and two make four. Coler, B. S. (Ap '13)
- Two Hague conferences. Choate, J. H. (Je '13)
- Two masters, Browning and Turgenev. Moxom, P. S. (F '13)
- Two men of Taunton. Davol, R. (F '13)
- Two on a tour in South America. Sears, A. W. (D '13)
- Two select bibliographies of mediaeval historical study. Moore, M. F., comp. (My '13)
- Two shall be born. Roberts, T. G. (S '13)
- Two thousand points for financial advertising. MacGregor, T. D. (Mr '13)
- Ultima veritas. Gladden, W. (Ap '13)
- Uncharted seas. Bowen, R. A. (Je '13)
- Uncle and nephew in the Old French chansons de geste. Farnsworth, W: O. (O '13)
- Uncle David's boys. Brown, E. A. (D '13)
- Uncle Sam, wonder worker. Du Puy, W: A. (D '13)
- Uncle's advice. Hewlett, W: (D '13)
- Under Greek skies. Dragomiris, J. D. (D '13)
- Under the Christmas stars. Richmond, G. L. (D '13)
- Under the sky in California. Saunders, C: F. (Ag '13)
- Underlying principles of modern legislation. Brown, W. J. (Ja '13)
- Unexpected affinities. Taber, S. (Je '13)
- Unforgiving offender. Scott, J: R. (O '13)
- Union of South Africa. Worsfold, W. B. (F '13)
- United Italy. Underwood, F. M. (F '13)
- United States. Constitution
- Collins, C: W. Fourteenth amendment and the states. (O '13)
- Farrand, M. Framing of the constitution of the United States. (Je '13)
- United States. Supreme court
- Moore, E. F. Supreme court and unconstitutional legislation. (O '13)
- Myers, G. History of the Supreme court of the United States. (N '13)
- United States
- Rives, G: L. United States and Mexico, 1821-1848. (N '13)
- Straus, O. S. American spirit. (Je '13)
- Biography
- Bigelow, J: Retrospections of an active life. (Jl '13)
- Powell, E. A. Gentlemen rovers. (N '13)
- Civilization
- Mable, H. W. American ideals, character and life. (D '13)
- Constitutional history
- Beard, C: A. Economic interpretation of the Constitution of the United States. (Ag '13)
- Johnson, A., ed. Readings in American constitutional history, 1776-1876. (D '13)
- McLaughlin, A. C. Courts, constitution and parties. (D '13)
- Constitutional law
- Moore, B. F. Supreme court and unconstitutional legislation. (O '13)
- Description and travel
- Johnson, C. Highways and byways from the St. Lawrence to Virginia. (D '13)
- Schauffier, R. H. Romantic America. (D '13)
- Tweedie, E. B. America as I saw it. (D '13)
- Economic conditions
- Alger, G: W. Old law and the new order. (Ag '13)
- Hourwich, I: A. Immigration and labor. (Mr '13)
- Streightoff, F. H. Distribution of incomes in the United States. (Jl '13)
- Emigration and immigration
- Fairchild, H: P. Immigration. (Jl '13)
- Haskin, F: J. The immigrant. (O '13)
- Foreign population
- Warne, F. J. Immigrant invasion. (My '13)
- Foreign relations
- Corwin, E: S. National supremacy. (O '13)
- Lodge, H: C. One hundred years of peace. (O '13)
- Rives, G: L. United States and Mexico, 1821-1848. (N '13)
- History
- Addison, A. C. Romantic story of the Puritan fathers. (Mr '13)
- Barstow, C: L., ed. Explorers and settlers. (Ja '13)
- Barstow, C: L., ed. New nation. (Ja '13)
- Barstow, C: L., ed. Progress of a united people. (Ja '13)
- Bassett, J: S. Short history of the United States. (N '13)
- Blaisdell, A. F., and Ball, F. K. Child's book of American history. (O '13)

- Bourne, H. E., and Benton, E. J. Introductory American history. (Mr '13)
 Briggs, L. M., ed. Noted speeches of Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun. (Mr '13)
 Dewey, G. Autobiography of George Dewey. (O '13)
 Fish, C. R. Development of American nationality. (N '13)
 Gordy, W. F. American beginnings in Europe. (Mr '13)
 Hart, A. B., ed. Social and economic forces in American history. (D '13)
 Hollard, R. S. Historic adventures. (D '13)
 Hosmer, J. K. Last leaf. (F '13)
 McMaster, J. B. History of the people of the United States. (S '13)

Sources

- Learned, M. D. Guide to the manuscript materials relating to American history in the German state archives. (F '13)

Colonial period

- Pumphrey, M. B. Stories of the Pilgrims. (Ap '13)

Colonial period—Sources

- Danckaerts, J. Journal, 1679-80. (N '13)

Revolution

- Allen, G. W. Naval history of the American revolution. (Je '13)
 Channing, E. History of the United States. (Ja '13)
 Duncan, R. B. Brave deeds of revolutionary soldiers. (D '13)
 Mahan, A. T. Major operations of the navies in the war of American independence. (N '13)

Revolution—Sources

- Andrews, C. M. Guide to the materials for American history, to 1783. (Je '13)

War of 1812

- Marine, W. M. British invasion of Maryland, 1812-1815. (O '13)

1815-1861

- MacDonald, W. From Jefferson to Lincoln. (O '13)

Civil war

- Barstow, C. L., ed. Civil war. (Ja '13)
 Livermore, W. R. Story of the civil war. (Ag '13)
 Meade, G. G. Life and letters of George Gordon Meade. (Ag '13)
 Pickett, L. C. Pickett and his men. (Ag '13)
 Rhodes, J. F. Lectures on the American civil war. (Mr '13)

Civil war—Personal narratives

- Blakeman, A. N., ed. Personal recollections of the war of the rebellion. (Mr '13)
 Dawson, S. Confederate girl's diary. (D '13)
 Early, J. A. Lieutenant General Jubal Anderson Early. (Mr '13)
 Logan, M. S. Reminiscences of a soldier's wife. (D '13)
 Tyler, M. W. Recollections of the civil war. (Ap '13)
 Worsham, J. H. One of Jackson's foot cavalry. (Ap '13)

Industries and resources

- Moore, J. R. H. Industrial history of the American people. (Je '13)

Navy

- Neeser, R. W. Landsman's log. (My '13)

Politics and government

- Adams, B. Theory of social revolutions. (O '13)
 Adams, C. F. "'Tis sixty years since." (My '13)
 Adams, J. Q. Writings. (Ap, D '13)
 Bancroft, H. H. Retrospection, political and personal. (Ja '13)
 Beatty, B. Political primer for the new voter. (Je '13)
 Du Puy, W. A. Uncle Sam, wonder worker. (D '13)
 La Follette, R. M. Autobiography. (Ag '13)

- McLaughlin, A. C. Courts, constitution and parties. (D '13)
 Plass, A. A. Civics in simple lessons for foreigners. (My '13)
 Ray, P. O. Introduction to political parties and practical politics. (O '13)
 Root, E. Experiments in government and the essentials of the constitution. (Ag '13)
 Schurz, C. Speeches, correspondence and political papers of Carl Schurz. (Ag '13)
 Wilson, W. New freedom. (Je '13)

Religion

- Carroll, H. K. Religious forces of the United States enumerated, classified, and described. (Ap '13)

Social life and customs

- Bennett, E. A. Your United States. (Mr '13)
 Crawford, M. C. Romantic days in the early republic. (Ja '13)
 Sale, E. T. Old time belles and cavaliers. (Ja '13)
 United States beet-sugar industry and the tariff. Blakey, R. G. (Ja '13)
 University and historical addresses. Bryce, J. (Jl '13)
 University control. Cattell, J. M. (O '13)
 Unknown lover. Valzey, J. (Jl '13)
 Unorthodox conception of being. Hermance, W. E. (Je '13)
 Unpath'd waters. Harris, F. (Ag '13)
 Unrest of women. Martin, E. S. (S '13)
 Until the day break. George, W. L. (My '13)
 Up in Ardmuirland. Barrett, M. (F '13)
 Upas tree. Barclay, F. L. (Ja '13)
 Uphill climb. Bower, B. M. (My '13)
 Upper crust. Sherman, G. (Je '13)
 Uriel. MacKaye, P. (F '13)
 Use of leisure. Scott, T. (D '13)

- V. V.'s eyes. Harrison, H. S. (Je '13)
 Vacation camping for girls. Marks, J. A. (O '13)
 Vagabond in New York. Hueffer, O. M. (D '13)
 Valentine. Richards, G. (D '13)
 Valiant woman. Fisher, M. (Mr '13)
 Valley of the moon. London, J. (D '13)
 Value and destiny of the individual. Bosanquet, B. (S '13)
 Value of organized speculation. Brace, H. H. (Je '13)
 Van Cleve. Watts, M. S. (D '13)
 Van Eycks and their art. Weale, W. H. J., and Brockwell, M. W. (Ap '13)

- Vane, Sir Henry (Harry) 1613-1662

- Willcock, J. Life of Sir Henry Vane the Younger. (N '13)

- Vanishing points. Brown, A. (Ap '13)

- Varnhagen von Ense, Rahel Antonie Friederike Levin, 1771-1833

- Key, E. K. S. Rahel Varnhagen. (My '13)

- Vaunt of man. Leonard, W. E. C. (Mr '13)

- Vegetable gardening

- Yates, L. H. Gardener and the cook. (Jl '13)

- Veiled women. Pickthall, M. W. (My '13)

- Venezuela

- Dalton, L. V. Venezuela. (Ja '13)

- Ventilation

- Greene, A. M. Elements of heating and ventilation. (Je '13)

- Venus of Melos

- Rodin, A. Venus. (Ja '13)

- Veronica. Kingsley, F. (Jl '13)

- Verse of Greek comedy. White, J. W. (Mr '13)

- Victoria, queen of Great Britain, 1819-1901

- Jerrold, C. Married life of Queen Victoria. (D '13)

- Victorian age in literature. Chesterton, G. K. (My '13)

- Vikings

- Mawer, A. The vikings. (S '13)

- Villa Miraflore. Crowninshield, F. (Jl '13)

- Violet book. Allen-Brown, A. and D. (Jl '13)

- Virginia. Glasgow, E. A. (Je '13)

- Vistas in Sicily. Riggs, A. S. (Ap '13)

- Vital lies. Lee, V. (F '13)

- Vocational training
Weeks, R. M. People's school. (My '13)
Vocations for girls. Laselle, M. A., and Wiley, K. E. (Je '13)
- Voice
Tait, T. How to train the speaking voice. (S '13)
Voice of the garden. Biklé, L. L. C., comp. (Mr '13)
Voices of to-morrow. Björkman, E. (S '13)
Voyage of the Hoppergrass. Pearson, E. L. (D '13)
- Voyages and travel
Forbes, E. A. Twice around the world. (Ja '13)
Stock, R. Confessions of a tenderfoot. (Jl '13)
- W. A. G.'s tale. Turnbull, M., ed. (Ap '13)
- Wadsworth, James Samuel, 1807-1864
Pearson, H. G. James S. Wadsworth. (Ag '13)
- Wages
Hobson, J. A. Gold, prices and wages. (O '13)
Waitstill Baxter. Wiggin, K. D. (N '13)
Walking essays. Sidgwick, A. H. (Mr '13)
Wall of men. McCarter, M. H. (F '13)
- Wallace collection, London
Shelley, H. C. Art of the Wallace collection. (S '13)
Walled city. Williams, E. H. (N '13)
Wallet of time. Winter, W. (D '13)
Wallingford and Blackie Daw. Chester, G. R. (D '13)
Wallingford in his prime. Chester, G. R. (Je '13)
- Walpole, Horace, 4th earl of Orford, 1717-1797
Greenwood, A. D. Horace Walpole's world. (S '13)
- Wanderings on the Italian Riviera. Lees, F. (D '13)
- War
Jordan, D. S. War and waste. (D '13)
War. Long, J. L. (Je '13)
War correspondence
Prior, M. Campaigns of a war correspondent. (F '13)
War drama of the eagles. Fraser, E. (Mr '13)
War time in Manila. Fiske, B. A. (O '13)
Wards of the state. Hopkins, T. (D '13)
- Warships
Attwood, E. L. Modern warship. (Jl '13)
Wood, W. Battleship. (Ja '13)
- Waste
Koester, F. Price of inefficiency. (Je '13)
- Waste waters
Wilson, H. M., and Calvert, H. T. Text-book on trade waste waters. (D '13)
- Water-color painting
Hughes, C. E. Early English water colour. (D '13)
- Water gardens
Tricker, W. Making a water garden. (O '13)
- Water-supply
McCulloh, W. Conservation of water. (D '13)
Taylor, F. N. Small water supplies. (F '13)
Watersprings. Benson, A. C. (N '13)
- Waterways
Shelton, W. A. Lakes-to-the-Gulf deep waterway. (Ap '13)
- Watts, George Frederic, 1817-1904
Watts, M. S. George Frederic Watts. (F '13)
Way home. King, B. (N '13)
Way of ambition. Hichens, R. S. (O '13)
Way stations. Robins, E. (My '13)
Way to the heart of the pupil. Welmer, H. (S '13)
- Wayfarer in China. Kendall, E. K. (Ap '13)
Wayfaring in France from Auvergne to the Bay of Biscay. Barker, E. H. (S '13)
- Ways of the planets. Martin, M. E. (Mr '13)
Weaker vessel. Benson, E. F. (My '13)
Wealth and welfare. Pigou, A. C. (Mr '13)
- Weather
Martin, E. C. Our own weather. (Jl '13)
Wedding bells of Glendalough. Earls, M. (Ag '13)
Welcome to our city. Street, J. L. (O '13)
Wellington's army, 1809-1814. Oman, C. W. C. (Ap '13)
- West, The
Barstow, C. L., ed. Westward movement. (Ja '13)
Coman, K. Economic beginnings of the far West. (D '13)
- West Indies
James, W. Mulberry tree. (D '13)
- Westminster abbey
Loftie, W. J. Westminster abbey. (D '13)
Westward movement. Barstow, C. L., ed. (Ja '13)
Westways. Mitchell, S. W. (O '13)
- Whaling
Burns, W. N. Year with a whaler. (D '13)
- Wharton, Philip, duke of Wharton, 1698-1731
Benjamin, L. S. Life and writings of Philip, Duke of Wharton. (D '13)
- What a salesman should know. Taylor, H. C. (N '13)
What can literature do for me? Smith, C. A. (S '13)
What children study and why. Gilbert, C. B. (O '13)
What does Christianity mean? Faunce, W. H. P. (Mr '13)
What happened in the night. Hopper, J. M. (D '13)
What is new thought? Patterson, C. B. (Je '13)
What is the truth about Jesus Christ? Loofs, F. (Ag '13)
What must the church do to be saved? Simms, P. M. (D '13)
What-shall-I-do girl. Waitt, I. W. (My '13)
What to read on business. Business book bureau, N. Y. (Mr '13)
- Wheel-chair philosophy. Cole, J. L. (D '13)
When dreams come true. Brown, R. (Ja '13)
When fools rush in. Hereford, W. R. (N '13)
When I was a boy in Greece. Demetrios, G. (Je '13)
When I was a little girl. Gale, Z. (D '13)
When to send for the doctor. Lippert, F. E., and Holmes, A. (D '13)
- Which one? Bennet, R. A. (Ja '13)
While you are a girl. Foxcroft, L. R. (N '13)
Whistling man. Foster, M. (D '13)
White hound. Harrod, F. (Jl '13)
White king in East Africa. Boyes, J. E. (Ja '13)
- White linen nurse. Abbott, E. H. (N '13)
White shrine. Villiers-Stuart, G. (Je '13)
White thread. Halfax, R. (N '13)
Who laughs last. Hilliers, A. (Mr '13)
Who's who in Dickens. Fyfe, T. A., comp. (Ja '13)
- Widcombe fair. Phillpotts, E. (My '13)
Wild grapes. Van Saanen, M. L. (N '13)
Wild life and the camera. Dugmore, A. R. (Ja '13)
- Wilderness castaways. Wallace, D. (O '13)
Will to live. Willcocks, M. P. (N '13)
- Willard, Frances Elizabeth, 1839-1898
Gordon, A. A. Life of Frances E. Willard. (F '13)
Strachey, R. Frances Willard: her life and work. (Je '13)
- William II, emperor of Germany, 1859-1918
Fried, A. H. German emperor and the peace of the world. (Ja '13)
Shaw, S. William of Germany. (N '13)
Wilsam. Netherlands. S. C. (Je '13)
Wind on the heath. Byron, M. (F '13)
Winds of doctrine. Santayana, G. (Je '13)
Wind's will. Britt, A. (Ja '13)
Windyridge. Riley, W. (My '13)
Wings of pride. Mable, L. K. (My '13)
Winning the fight against drink. Eaton, E. L. (Ja '13)
Winning the Southwest. Bradley, G. D. (Mr '13)
- Winter holiday in Portugal. Baker, B. G. (F '13)

Winter sports

Dier, J. C., ed. Book of winter sports. (Ja '13)

Wireless telegraph

Edelman, P. E. Experimental wireless stations. (My '13)

Morgan, A. P. Wireless telegraphy and telephony simply explained. (Ag '13)

Wireless telegraphy and telephony simply explained. Morgan, A. P. (Ag '13)

Wireless telephone

Morgan, A. P. Wireless telegraphy and telephony simply explained. (Ag '13)

Wisconsin

Muir, J. Story of my boyhood and youth. (My '13)

Witching Hill. Hornung, E. W. (Ap '13)

With the Bulgarian staff. Buxton, N. E. (Je '13)

With the conquered Turk. James, L. (Ap '13)

With the Russian pilgrims to Jerusalem. Graham, S. (D '13)

With the Turks in Thrace. Ashmead-Bartlett, E. and S. (Ap '13)

With the victorious Bulgarians. Wagner, H. (Ap '13)

Within. Younghusband, F. E. (O '13)

Wo2. Drake, M. (N '13)

Woman

Chesser, E. S. Woman, marriage and motherhood. (D '13)

Christie, J. J. Advance of woman. (F '13)

Gallichan, C. G. Truth about woman. (D '13)

Spencer, A. G. Woman's share in social culture. (Ap '13)

Taylor, J. L. Nature of woman. (My '13)

Biography

Abbott, W. J. Notable women in history. (Jl '13)

Adams, E. C., and Foster, W. D. Heroines of modern progress. (Ap '13)

Dell, F. Women as world builders. (O '13)

Green, H. C. and M. W. Pioneer mothers of America. (F '13)

Mozans, H. J., pseud. Woman in science. (N '13)

Pomeroy, S. G. Little-known sisters of well-known men. (F '13)

Sweetser, K. D. Ten girls from history. (F '13)

Employment

Popp, A. Autobiography of a working woman. (Ag '13)

Van Kleeck, M. Artificial flower makers. (S '13)

Van Kleeck, M. Women in the bookbinding trade. (Ap '13)

Waitt, I. W. What-shall-I-do girl. (My '13)

History and conditions

Parsons, E. W. Old-fashioned woman. (Jl '13)

Welch, A. Kemp-. Of six mediaeval women. (Ag '13)

Social and moral questions

Key, E. K. S. Woman movement. (Mr '13)

Martin, E. S. Unrest of women. (S '13)

Tarbell, I. M. Business of being a woman. (Mr '13)

Woman in black. Bentley, E. C. (My '13)

Woman, marriage and motherhood. Chesser, E. S. (D '13)

Woman movement. Key, E. K. S. (Mr '13)

Woman of the twilight. Ryan, M. E. (Jl '13)

Woman rice planter. Pringle, E. W. (D '13)

Woman suffrage

Carter, M. H. Woman with empty hands. (My '13)

PHELPS, E. M., comp. Selected articles on woman suffrage. (Ja '13)

Robins, E. Way stations. (My '13)

Bibliography

Franklin, M. L. Case for woman suffrage. (Jl '13)

Woman thou gavest me. Caine, H. (O '13)

Woman with empty hands. Carter, M. H. (My '13)

Woman's share in social culture. Spencer, A. G. (Ap '13)

Women as world builders. Dell, F. (O '13)

Women in India

Cowan, M. G. Education of the women of India. (My '13)

Women in science. Mozans, H. J., pseud. (N '13)

Women in the bookbinding trade. Van Kleeck, M. (Ap '13)

Women of Shakespeare. Harris, F. (Ja '13)

Wonder tales from old Japan. Whitehorn, A. L. (F '13)

Wonderful escapes of Americans. Booth, W. S., ed. (D '13)

Wondrous wife. Marriott, C. (N '13)

Wooing of Margaret Trevenna. Meldrum, R. (Ap '13)

Woollen dress. Bordeaux, H. (F '13)

Work and life. Howerth, I. W. (S '13)

Work of rain and rivers Bonney, T. G. (Ja '13)

Work of the bond house. Chamberlain, L. (My '13)

Worker and his country. Ware, F. A. G. (D '13)

World, New York (newspaper)

Heaton, J. L. Story of a page. (N '13)

World of women. Beresford, J. D. (O '13)

World soul. Hall, H. F. P. (Ag '13)

World's leading conquerors. Bevan, W. L. (Je '13)

World's legal philosophies. Berolzheimer, F. (My '13)

Wrath of man. Hocking, S. K. (S '13)

Writer's desk book. Orcutt, W. D. (F '13)

Writing English prose. Brewster, W. T. (Je '13)

Written in the sand. Duval, G. R. (My '13)

Year with a whaler. Burns, W. N. (D '13)

Yoke of pity. Benda, J. (S '13)

Yonder. Young, E. H. (Mr '13)

Young Alaskans in the Rockies. Hough, E. (D '13)

Young farmer. Hunt, T. F. (Ap '13)

Young fishermen. Pendexter, H. (F '13)

Young men's Christian association

Fisher, G. J., and Foss, M. I., eds. Physical work. (O '13)

Your child today and tomorrow. Gruenberg, S. M. (D '13)

Your United States. Bennett, E. A. (Mr '13)

Youth and life. Bourne, R. S. (My '13)

Youth of Goethe. Brown, P. H. (N '13)

Youth replies. How, L. (Ap '13)

Youth will be served. Wyllarde, D. (D '13)

Youth's encounter. Mackenzie, C. (D '13)

Zone policeman 88. Franck, H. A. (My '13)

Zones of the spirit. Strindberg, A., (Jl '13)

Zoology

Hegner, R. W. College zoology. (Ap '13)

Juvenile and popular literature

Torelle, E. Plant and animal children. (Je '13)

R

2-28-61

51357

Z

1219

C95

1913

GTU LIBRARY

3 2400 00643 0601

Reference Room

San Francisco Theological Seminary

MUST NOT BE REMOVED

NEW

